(Special to The Cardinal) LAFAYETTE, Ind., Nov. 25.— Michigan again displayed its superiority in the cross country line when it nosed Wisconsin out of the conference championship in the the conference championship in the annual meet held at Purdue yesterday morning. While the Badgers walloped Ames, the favorites before the meet, and Illinois, last year's winnners, the Wolverines proved a little too much for them.

A cold dry day favered the runners and the race was one of the fastest ever run by a conference.

ners and the race was one of the fastest ever run by a conference team. The Badger runners ran well and all finished in good condition.

Isbell of Michigan holds the same position in the estimation of cross country fans as did Finkle of Wisconsin a year ago. Scarcely known until this fall in cross country circles, Isbell has come out of obscurity and has lead the field at the finish of every race in which he has entered during the season.

he has entered during the season.

Badger Runners Bunched

It was directly due to Isbell's speed that the Wolverines copped the meet. Running the five miles in the fast time of 26 minutes, 33.1 seconds, he led the famous Rathbun of Ames at the finish by the few necessary yards to take first place. Bowen, Michigan captain, cinched the win by placing seventh. The other Wolverines straggled in some distance behind the leaders.

Wisconsin copped second place by united strength rather than by the individual speed of any one man. While three men crossed the line before a Badger runner finished, the bunching of three Wisconsin men who took fourth, sixth, and eighth places figured in placing the Badgers in second place.

Rathbun Takes Second

Wade continued the excellent work he has been doing all fall by taking fourth place, finishing close behind Scott of Illinois. Tschudy led the Michigan captain and finished sixth, while Vallely came in eighth.

Rossmeissel and Moorhead, the other two Badger runners, took fifteenth and eighteenth places respectively.

English Students Form New Literary Society

The Contemparary club, a group of students interested in writing poetry, met Friday night at the home of L. C. Zucker, instructor in English. Poems written by the members of the club were read and commented upon.

The membership of the club is increasing and it is expected that during the year much undiscovered poetical talent in the student body will be brought to light through the efforts of the organization.

Regular meetings will be held every second Friday night at Mr. Zucker's home. Plans have been made to invite noted poets throughout the country to lecture to the group at different times during the year. Public readings of some of the poetry written by members of the club will also be given.

TICKET SALE FOR SECOND AG SHOW OPENS TOMORROW

Tickets for the second presenta-tion of the annual "Punkin' Hol-ler" community program will be placed on sale, Monday, according to H. E. Schaefer '25, chairman of the tickets committee.

More than 50 short course students, numerous faculty members, and a large body of students who attended the football game were unable to attend the first program, so the entertainment will be repeated.

Unlike the tickets for the meeting last Friday, the tickets for the second program will not have seat numbers. Due to the complex seating arrangement of Agricultural auditorium, numbering of seats was not deemed advisable.

HATS OFF TO THE TEAM glorious football season has

The historic grid contest of the Mid-West yesterday brought a scoreless tie with the Badgers brilliant in their attack and holding the growling maroons at bay for four hard quarters.

Battling Wisconsin has showed again the hard mettle of the team, the good sportsmanship of its athletic officials, and the loyal support | of the students.

Games have been fought square-

The Big Ten have seen Wisconsin fight; they have seen Wisconsin welcome the Hoosiers and the Illini in true sport fashion; they have seen the Badger team go down to defeat and with new born admiration have applauded.

While a championship has not been captured, the admiration of lovers of football has been won by the strong record of battling Wis-

"The last game" ends the season, but it also is the final milepost in varsity football for eight members of the team.

To these fighters we tip our hats. A roll of honor for their sacrifice and their devotion to the school is but small homage. Their names, as follows, will long he remember. ed:

CAPT. ROLLAND WILLIAMS GUSTAV K. TEBELL EDWARD H. GIBSON WALLACE A. BARR RUDOLF L. HOHLFELD LEONARD M. SMITH THOMAS C. NICHOLS ROBERT H. SYKES

THE MEANEST STUDENT IUMAN nature may be the same the world around.

But we expect more from the college student than from the average youth of the community.

The student at the university has enjoyed the advantages of a high school education; his parents have provided good home training and financial means; he is well dressed usually and versed in better things.

And so when the college body displays the same ill traits of the community, there is something to be concerned about.

Crooks exist in the community They're usually locked inside the wown bastile if the marshal is awake. In universities the crooks are often shoved off upon the "Sore Eye Special" of Thanksgiving fame.

Frederick E. Jones, Earl E. Wheeler

But even the Thanksgiving travellors, few as they are, are surpassed by the meanest student. We have no charity for this class of individuals which exists in every student body.

The cribber who steals his examination marks is a paltry figure in comparison. The borrower who hab itually "forgets" to return that book or sweater, although a piker of thirty-third degree, is paled from consideration. The co-educational fusser who spends time and money five nights a week with some demure co-ed, despite his questionable mentality, gets only fifth place before the meanest stu-

Who is more comtemptible than the student who fails to write home?

The cribber, borrower, and the fusser are outdone by that class of students who leave home, take with them their parent's affection, thoughts and money, and then neglect to pen a letter home.

The command to respect thy mother and mother is one of the most fundamental in Christian principles. It ranks among the first of the ten commandments.

And yet how often it is broken without thought or regret by students at the university.

That grey-heared mother back in your home town is thinking about you. Dad waits for a letter from his boy or daughter at school. Their thoughts center about your career and your hopes.

They have a right to be proud of you, for it's only the few who have the privilege and the ability to obtain a university education.

Don't be the meanest student! Have a heart, remember the folks back home, and write that letter

The fact that Wisconsin was democratic in spirit and that only a ew studetns were snobbish in their relations with others was unknown to the grocer's son.

But Bill didn't come to Madison. The expence of the university education seemed appalling, and the grocer's son stayed at home.

The trite story of Bill Jones is a common one after all. It represents the problem that confronts hundreds of students in Wisconsin and other states.

Opportunity does exist at the university for the grocer's son or the butcher's son to get its training.

This year here approximately onethird of the men are working parttime through school. Dad's check may be the privilege of many students, but it's not the requisite by any means.

Mexican People On Fair Way To Success - Ross

Professor Says Peon is Not Bolshevistic in Nature

BY ELIOT H. SHARP

Mexico is seen by many Americans with unsympathetic eyes. The general concensus of opinion seems to be that Mexico is a country full of red bolsheviks, lazy peons who care nothing about the lives of the American citizens, who would as soon start a revolution as eat a dinner. Too many people see little hope for the country south of our border and think that it is populated by ne'er-do-wells.

According to Prof. E. A. Ross of the department of sociology, who spent 11 weeks last summer studying conditions in Mexico, there is much reason to believe that the Mexicans will work out their own of the Spanish language, Professor Ross was able to acquire first-hand information during his stay in Mexico. He rambled about the South American countries for a number of months several years ago and thus became well acquainted with the Spanish peoples.

Spanish peoples.

"Labor is taking a cheerful attitude in Mexico," Professor Ross said. "They have some fur to look forward to, some ho to for possible success in life, for gening somewhere. They are tired of revolutions. The workingman in Mexico is becoming more independent than he has been want to be in the past. A few years ago a labor boss could treat workmen as he chose. Now, however, he must handle them with kid gloves.

Mexican Is Not Bolshevistic

Mexican Is Not Bolshevistic

"Contrary to the general opinion, Mexico was a firm to bolshe-ic in his attitude. He may be radical, but the processive were developed as early as 1913 while bolshevism was not founded until 1917.

shevism was not founded until 1917.

"Mexico was in a medieval static until the Diaz regime was introduced. Now, however, it is progressing rapidly. Governmental arbitration boards now settle strikes and other labor disputes. If a workingman is dismissed from his job without a reasonable excuse, the board requires his employers to pay him three months wages and to re-employ him."

The land is being divided more justly, according to Mr. Ross. Hitherto an enormous proportion of it has been he'd by a few landholders "Educational institutions are being built from the top down in Mex-Professor Ross said. "The administrators of education are pro-viding large school buildings but seem to be forgetting that educa-tion consists of something besides e-ecting buildings. Probably no more children are receiving instruc-tion than in the past. It will not be long, however, before the bottom of this upside down construction will be reached by the educators and re-sults will begin to be evident."

President Obregon, according to Professor Ross, is looked upon in Mexico with a great deal of respect. He is a homespun Lincoln, a cour ageous fighter and possessed of a brilliant mind. Everyone who knows him speaks nothing but good of him. Professor Ross asserted.

Although it was not with the in-tention of gathering meterial for a book that Professor Ross went to Mexico, he now plans to write one on his researches there. The Inde pendent also will publish five artcles dealing with his experiences in the country beyond the southern The

Many English Books Written

Since the Department of English is one of the largest departments in Is one of the largest departments in the University, numbering about 60 instructors, the activities of the members of the staff naturally show wide variety. On one side some instructors give considerable time to creative composition, es-pecially in verse; on the other hand pecially in verse; on the other hand some instructors are investigating scientific aspects of the English language. Between these two ex-tremes the members of the staff are treating a wide range of sub-jects in literary history and liter-ary criticism.

During recent years these various studies have resulted in several volumes published under the immediate auspices of the University. Among these studies are the following:

Sonnets on the Self of William Shakespeare by W. E. Leonard; Locrine and Selimus by F. G. Hubbard; Shakespeare's Pathos by J. F. Pyre; The Function of the Songs in Shakespeare's Plays by J. R. Editors to Discuss Problems

"Our purpose is not to advertise"
Wisconsin," declares Prof. E. Marion Johnson of the department of Journalism, who is directing the work of the student officers.

"Wisconsin will get much advertising from it, to be sure, but we are not after that. The purposes of the Press association as stated at the time of its founding three years ago and as lived up to ever since have been guided by the interests of the high school members and their publications and editors.

"The purposes are many. The

"The purposes are many. The editors are brought together here to discuss the problems which confront them during the year. Business managers and faculty advis-ers do the same thing. The advantages derived from these discussions alone are sufficient to warrant the existence of the association.

Expert Advice Offered

"Aside from that, the publications actually compete in contests in which the best phases of every branch of development are brought into light. The association motes a higher standard of scholastic journalism and fills the young people interested in the work with a craving for only the best and cleanest types of news work.

"Besides this, we offer the expert advise and opinions of the foremost journalists and newspaper workers in the country to the mem-bers. We get at problems from the viewpoint of the people actually doing the work and from that of the outsider who knows and has played the game and who is willing to help the beginners."

Professor W. B. Cairns is carryon a comprehensive investigation of the literary relations of England and America. In his study of this subject he visited England in 1921, and will visit England again during the second semester of this year. Two sections of his investigation have been completed, and have been published in Wisconsin Studies.

During recent years Professor Arthur Beatty has been giving par-ticular attention to a philosophical interpretation of Wordsworth. This atudy has resulted in a volume, which will be published in Wisconwhich wil be published in wisconsin Studies during the next few months. Professor Beatty is also engaged in the study of The Ballad, and will preside over a special meeting in Philadelphia in December.

Professor W. E. Leonard has a national reputation as one of the most important contemporary poets. He is now seeing through the press a translation of Beawulf into modern English verse. During recent years Professor Leonard has pull-lished not only a considerable with tickets.

in America.

An article of some length can be written about the literary activities of members of the staff who are not mentioned above. Since limitations of space forbid an enumeration of all these activities, one may mention the fact that during the oppring of the present academic year numerous members of the department will contribue special studies to a new collected volume of departmental studies. In this connection it is interesting to note that during recent years the authors treated in special studies have ranged from the earliest Anglo-Saxon epic to contemporary writers in America. TO SPEAK FOR WOMEN'S RIGHTS

President of Voters' League Will Use Citiztnship as Subject

Mrs. Maud Wood Park, president of the National League of Women Voters, one of the prime factors in obtaining woman suffrage, will speak at 4:30 tomorrow afternoon in room 165 Bascom hall. "Citizenship—Our Individual Responsibility," will be her subject.

Now that women are enfranchised she is trying to aid them in ed, she is trying to aid them in voting intelligently, and in understanding their power, firmly believing that "the hand that rocks the cradle rocks the world."

"Rocking the world is quite as disastrous a preceeding as rocking the boat, and if we are looking for somebody to blame for the present unhappy wobbling of the world, perhaps we ought to hark back to the hand on the cradle and the rocking that it started," said Mrs.

Park.
"It is felt," she also stated, "that if rocking the cradle turns out citizens who rock the world; keeping the cradle on an even keel will bring us men and women who can be counted on to hold the world

Mrs. Park, who has spent two years in the Orient studying the conditions of the women in China, Japan, India, the Philippines, Turkey, and other countries of the far east, is a graduate of Radcliff. She was a member of the class of 1898, and graduated with high honors.

The Collegiate League of Women Voters, co-operating with the Madison organizations succeeded in bringing Mrs. Park to Madison.

HOW MUCH WILL WE LEARN? Editor The Cardinal:

In view of the fact that President Birge has seen fit to refuse to bring the petition of students for a holiday Friday before the fac-ulty, the question arises: "How ulty, the question arises: "How much will the majority of the stu-dent body learn in classes on that date?"

In the first place 90 per cent of the students living within a radius of 250 miles will go home for Thursday, providing that they live on railroads where good connections can be made.

This means that a large majority of this class will take the last train back to Madison. They will have no lessions prepared and will give very little or no attention to what is going on in the class rooms Fri-day. More than likely a large ma-jority will be making up lost sleep.

In the second place how much preparation will be made by the students who remain in Madison Thursday? Thanksgiving day is a legal holiday and is considered as a of recreation by most people.

Recreation means play. Most of the students will play all that day and until late that night unless they arg overly conscientious and worry about the two or three classes which they will have Friday. How much will they be able to absorb

In the third place, from the reports given out, about 43 per cent of the student body signed the petition. The percentage would unquestionably have been more than 50 if the petition had been started two days earlier.

All those students who signed this petition, and those who would have will be in no frame of mind to do any work Thursday or to go to classes Friday. One of the prime factors in learning is the attitude of the individual mind toward gaining knowledg. How much may we expect to learn Friday?

MUSICAL COMEDY PREVAILS AT ORPH

Musical comedy will be the chief form of entertainment offered in the new program at the Orpheum this afternoon. "The Brazillian Heiress" is a musical comedy of the miniature type with a cast of nine competent artists headed by Frank Kelcey, an uncommonly clever and talented eccentric comedienne, who romps through twenty-two minutes of the act, dispensing such a mirth provoking brand of comedy as to keep the audience in the throes of incessant laughter.

Bob Murphy is not a new name to Madison theatergoers. He is a former member of the well known team of Murphy and White, who have played at the local vaudeville house several times. Mr. Murphy has his own way of singing a popular song and decorates his numbers with numerous bits of interesting stage "business."

Cooke, Mortimer, and Harvey will introduce what is considered the most distinct novelty of the day, their act constituting a genu-ine ball game, half of which is played in the light and the other half in total darkness. This is made possible by the "Radium Ball" which shines brightly in total darksnes and is a scientific puzzle.

The act of Harvey, Henny, and Grayce can be relied upon to satisfy the most particular audience.

isfy the most particular audience with their clever musical oddity which they call "On The Course," consisting of smart comedy-talk and instrumental musical efforts.

WOMEN'S GYN

Winter Season Schedule Opens With Crowded Classes

Winter work in the women's phyical education department began Thursday with large enrollments in very course.

The long, crowded lines during the registration days indicated clearly that the capacity of every class would have to be greatly tax-ed to accommodate all of the women who were signing up.

Basketball and dancing reached their limit early and many women who were anxious to enroll were forced to elect substitute sports. Miss H'Doubler's dancing classes maintained their high popularity record. Basketball sections are being held in the evening several days a week for upperclass women who are out for places on their class

Indoor baseball and swimming have full classes also. Golf and winter baseball, which are being offered for the first time this year, attracted a great many.

The corrective department in handling a greater number than ever before, and further study of the problems and the past experience of the department will bring about even increased effectiveness.

The efficiency tests which were iven to all of the new women were ised in assigning the gym work

Today the lineal descendant of that pioneer teacher—Confucius—is a student at the University, supplementing the lore and philosophy of the orient with the science of the western world.

The student is Muller L. H. Kung who lives at 1127 Bowen court. There he was found in his room surrounded by a conclomeraroom surrounded by a conglomerafaith of his fathers and textbooks on scientific subjects.

Modest, unassuming, but carrying the quiet dignity that arises from a consciousness of high position in his native land, Kung explained how the descendant of the adventor, and philosopher came educator and philosopher came here to study.

"To my family is entrusted the care of the temple of Confucius at Chu Fu," he said. "The temple is Chu Fu," he said. "The temple is 1,500 years old am! stands on the site of the school where Confucius taught his followers. An older brother of mine is in charge of the temple during the minority of my nephew, who will succeed as director of the temple.

The Chinese do not worship Confucius as a god, but rather as the great educator who gave impetus to learning. Kung said.

The family name of Kung has been preserved since the time of Confucius, he declared.

Confucius, he declared.
"The real name of Confucius was 'Kung Chiu,'" he said. "Kung is the characteristic name of the family, and has been for more than 2,000 years. My own name in Chinese is Kung Ling Hsuan. The family name is used first and given names follow."

Kung is a post-graduate student at the university. He was awarded a diploma last June, but is continuing his course in Chemistry and classmates declare that he is one of the "sharks." He is 26 years

Chu Fu, Kung's home, is located in Central China. It is still famed as the center of Chinese learning, and scholars still gather about the shrine of the greatest of them all. Each month special rites are held which attract hundreds of admirers of Confucius.

The people of China are undergoing a rapid transformation in thought and work, according to Kung. As education cuts inroads Kung. As education cuts inroads into ignorance, the superstition which has clogged the feet of the Chinese is melting and they are beginning to take their place with other races, he said.

Kung told how he selected the "Two teachers in the school which I attended as a boy had studied at Wisconsin," he said. "It was only natural that I should pick his great center of American earning on their recommendation." His plans for the future are still vague, Kung declared.

"I have done some traveling in America and the East," he said. "But I have still to visit Europe, and it is my intention to go there before I return to my native land for good."

King, monster Chicago center, Pyott, Strohmeier, and poor old Bill Zorn, who usually has to take a back seat to John Thomas—although he showed up better than John did yesterday all helped to make Chicago a fit candidate for a Big Ten title and a worthy opponent of Wisconsin.
