THE L. C. BURKES, 17 South Harrison street, are noted for giving original and clever parties . . . but they out-did even themselves Saturday night.

The Burkes collected discarded but still-good Christmas trees all over town, moved their living room furniture out and the trees in, and when their guests arrived they found it transformed into a perfect picnic-grounds.

The room was lined with evergreens, the floor had a thick coating of evergreen needles on it, there were rough picnic tables here and there, and in the fireplace was a roaring big wood fire. A steak supper was cooked over the fire just as it would be outdoors, and, later, as one of the stunts, the Burkes presented their guests with a series of dried-up branches, twigs, flowers, buds, and what-have-you and let them try to identify what they HAD been last summer.
