The libraries provide public access to a wide range of material, including online exhibits, digitized collections, archival finding aids, our catalog, online articles, and a growing range of materials in many media.

When possible, we provide rights information in catalog records, finding aids, and other metadata that accompanies collections or items. However, it is always the user's obligation to evaluate copyright and rights issues in light of their own use.

A Man Went to Green Bay

Long ago Oneida people were going to Green Bay and some reportedly went on foot and others drove in those days. One man was there who had gone on foot and towards evening he was looking for a ride to take him home. He met up with these two Oneidas and they reached an agreement that they would give this man a ride. He was called Thomas.

So they set off and then they stopped at one more tavern and he got tired of waiting. So he told them, he said, "I'm going now. You two stay here but remember I will fix a trap somewhere on the road." And then this Thomas left.

Then the other two of them must have left and somewhere along the road there was a blown over tree and another small limb from the trees placed near the road. So they drove by and their evener got caught and the limb dropped and struck one of them on the head. After a while he came to and said, "The devil! It must have been that Thomas."
