The libraries provide public access to a wide range of material, including online exhibits, digitized collections, archival finding aids, our catalog, online articles, and a growing range of materials in many media.

When possible, we provide rights information in catalog records, finding aids, and other metadata that accompanies collections or items. However, it is always the user's obligation to evaluate copyright and rights issues in light of their own use.

This image shows a fragment of an ancient document, likely made of papyrus or parchment. The material is heavily deteriorated, with a long, narrow strip showing significant damage, including numerous holes and tears. Faint, dark, handwritten text in an ancient script is visible along the length of the strip, though much of it is obscured by the damage. The strip is laid out horizontally against a plain, light-colored background.
