BISHOP BROWN IS GUEST OF HONOR AT DINNER TODAY

Will Speak in Music Hall Tonight on "Revolution and Evolution"

Bishop Brown, who will speak on "Revolution and Evolution," at 7:30 o'clock tonight in Music hall, will be the guest of honor at a banquet to be tendered him at 6 o'clock today at the University club by the Forensic board under whose auspices the bishop comes to the university.

The bishop made following statement of faith in his heresy trial in 1924 when he was tried because of his beliefs put forward in his book, "Communism and Christianity."

Makes Statement

"I believe in God. Not, certainly, a God with arms and legs, and mind, and with that human attribute which we call Personality, but in the All-in-All, in which we live and move and have our being, and to whose Law we must conform if we are to attain the most abundant life on earth. The attainment of this life constitutes the chief end of man—all there is of true knowledge, right conduct, religion and politics, and of anything else which is for the good of the world."

"This faith of mine is no crossword puzzle. It is beyond words; for words at their best are but symbols of the Truth. You cannot imprison God within a literal creed, not mine, nor yours."

Tickets on Sale Today

The subject matter of the bishop's talk will form the material for discussion at the meeting of the Wisconsin Forum tomorrow night. Tickets for the talk are on sale today in the buildings on the campus and may be purchased tonight at the entrance to Music hall for 50 cents.

It is expected that the bishop will talk about most of the major questions of the day in his talk on "Evolution and Revolution." In recent talks he has stated his own views on religion, politics, democracy, labor and society.

The bishop is seventy-one years old. He was a bishop atheist, author, and lecturer of note, even before his trial for heresy brought him before the eyes of the country. He has written several books including, "The Church for Americans," "The Crucial Race Question," "The Level Plan for A Church Union," and the one which caused his trial, "Communism and Christianity."

INDIAN ARTICLES AT Y. W. C. A. SALE

Big Selection of Goods Received for Bazaar From Arizona Natives

Numerous crates of bright colored Indian blankets, rugs, and baskets, rags and baskets have been received by Charlotte Wollaeger '27, chairman of the Indian booth, to be sold at the Y. W. C. A. bazaar which will be held December 3 in Lathrop hall.

This Indian booth will be one of the features of the bazaar. The other members of the committee are Katherine Biggett '27, Katherine Keene '28, Esther Johnston '28, and Lucile Dugdeon '28. Each will be in her native costume of Indians while selling these Indian products at the bazaar.

Another feature of the bazaar will be the tea-room in charge of Esther Higgins '28. People visiting the bazaar may have tea in the afternoon and their choice between toasted English muffins, orange marmalade and tea, and cider with doughnuts.

According to Louise Coxon '29, in charge of the tea room decorations, the room will be decorated to represent an out-door scene. Corn stalks and colored leaves will be put around the room to give it a woody atmosphere, and a tepee next to an open fire place will complete the settings.

BUTTS IS NAMED TO SUCCEED JOHN DOLLARD AS SECRETARY OF MEMORIAL UNION PROJECT

Dollard's Statement

I congratulate the Memorial Union Committee and the University of Wisconsin on securing Porter Butts as secretary. I know of no one whose knowledge, personality, and high character better qualifies to carry on this enterprise. It is a matter of great personal satisfaction to me that I can turn the project over to hands so competent and to ability of so high an order. I wish him luck and assure him of my continued interest in his administration.

JOHN DOLLARD.

Butts Relates Aim of Union Program

The Memorial Union has always meant to me a good deal more than a building project. It has been, together with the dormitories and an all-inclusive physical education program, the embodiment of a fundamental idea about education—the idea that only full living induces full learning, and that full living comes only when and where there is the opportunity for comfortable living, cordial and frequent human give and take, complete self-expression, and a certain feeling of unity of purpose and action with one's neighbors and friends.

Wisconsin men and women, past and present, have had the vision to see that a community building such as the Memorial Union supplies the essential and tangible working instrument for student self-expression and student union. It is significant that this building is to be the gift of the whole commonwealth of the university's alumni, faculty, students, and friends—a direct and joint gift. It is further significant that it shall be first of all for the students to say how it shall be used.

"In view of this fact," said Arthur Johnson, presiding chairman of the convocation, "we want all the Freshmen to be there. These convocations are the only chances we have to get together as a whole class and we should make the most of them."

The program for this afternoon's convocation will consist of singing by the audience led by David McPherson '28; a vocal solo by Roland F. Molzham; the introduction of the speaker by Art Johnson, and Pres. Frank's address.

DR. MILLS' RECITAL PLEASSES PATRONS

Varied Program Displays Mastery and Technique of Music School Head

By L. V.

Choral preludes, stately and beautiful music reminding one of golden streams of light filtering through stained glass windows of a medieval cathedral, the dainty sprite's dancing of Johnson's "Elfianz," the simple love idyl, Welstenholmes' "Answer" were combined to please an appreciative audience that comfortably filled Music hall last night to hear Dr. Charles H. Mills, director of the school of Music in his initial organ recital of the year.

Dr. Mills, as usual, chose a program that displayed to excellent advantage his complete mastery of the instrument. His pedal technique and sure control of the various manuals was particularly evidenced in the twenty variations of the virile Passacaglia, by that giant of organ composers, Bach.

In the final number of the program, "The Allegro" from Widor's sixth organ symphony, Dr. Mills' tasteful registration and brilliant execution won the immediate favor of the audience whose insistent applause demanded and received an encore, "Evening Chime" by Wheelton. This simple and charming melody brought to a happy and appealing close a program of representative organ music which was shared alike by listeners in Music hall and by thousands of radio fans throughout the country.

REV. BURTON TO TALK NEXT WEEK

First Lecture Will be on Subject of "The Christian Life"

"The Christian Life, a Social Fact," will be the subject of a series of "Talks on Everyday Religion" to be given during the coming week at St. Francis' House by Reverend Father Spence Burton.

Father Burton is young, and according to a western journalist, he is "a healthy, jolly, almost boyish man." He has a genial sense of humor. In reference to his talks here, he says that undergraduates in Madison "are not different fundamentally from undergraduates elsewhere. If men can put up with me in Cambridge and New Haven, I dare say they can do so in the Middle West."

After receiving his B. A. in 1903 and his M. A. in 1904 at Harvard college, Father Burton was in the employ of Frank Munsey on one of the newspapers that he owned. Then for four years he worked for, and received his ordination as priest in the Episcopal church.

From 1908 to 1912 he spent his time in England, studying and doing missionary work. He returned after 1912 and took up work in the Society of St. John the Evangelist. While doing this work he assisted in the state penitentiary in Massachusetts and in San Quentin in California.

PORTR BUTTS CHOSEN NEW UNION SECRETARY

major problems which Butts as new secretary will consider with the executive committee and Union board will be the immediate retirement through collections of the outstanding $90,000 loan, the raising of an additional $300,000 for furnishings and equipment, the development of a decorative theme for the building, and the perfection of the Union organization which is to operate and use the building.

Allied with Dollard

Butts has had a continuous though unofficial contact with Union affairs since he was an undergraduate. He has worked closely with Dollard in recent student campaigns and has handled publicity for the project during the past two years.

He will bring to the Union work the points of view both of students and of alumni. He is at present a graduate student, and as an undergraduate he was managing editor of the Daily Cardinal and president of the Haresfoot club. He also was a member of Phi Kappa Phi, Iron Cross, Sigma Delta Chi, Pi Epsilon Delta, and Alpha Tau Omega.

Immediately after receiving his degree in 1924, he became assistant alumni recorder, organizing the university's system of alumni records and a year later becoming director of the Records department, and the university's contact office with alumni. With President Mason and Dollard, he was an initiator and organizer of the first Fathers' Day and has served on the Fathers' Day committee for three years. He is secretary of the University-Alumni committee on Commencement and of the Military Records Advisory

BUTTS RELATED AIM OF MEMORIAL UNION

Happily, the project is entering now the season of its greatest prosperity and promise. Building has started and will go on, thanks to the splendid efforts of a determined committee, a willing body of 17,000 subscribers, and to two able campaign directors, E. H. Gardner and John Dollard.

Much money must be raised, much more planning must be done, but it will be only a comparatively short time until the building is finished and ready to make its contribution to the enrichment, profit, and unity of life at Wisconsin.

I am glad to have a share, officially or unofficially, in such an enterprise.

TWO MILE TURKEY RACE TO BE HELD AT NOON TODAY

Competition Runs High in Big Race for Valuable Thanksgiving Prizes

The annual turkey day race of two miles will be held this noon at 12 o'clock starting from in front of the men's gymnasium.

The distance of the annual event will be about two miles long and will go around the stock pavilion cross country course.

Any men but letter men in cross country may enter the meet. The winner of the meet will receive a turkey, the second place man a goose, the third place man a duck, the fourth place man a rooster, the fifth place man a duck and the last man in gets an egg.

A general custom will be followed by the winners this year of giving their prizes to the cross country team in preparations for the annual cross country banquet.

Training Table

Now all those who are pleased and gratified with the way the football season came out will please stand up so the firing squad will be sure not to miss you.

Yes, Michigan won. And in spite of that remark we made about Michigan's being a real champion if she beat Minnesota the second time, we still think the Wolverines are too lucky to be playing amateur football.

The Minnesota fans must have thought of everything from polite murder on down as a possible and pleasing fate for Benny Oosterbaan after he had picked up Mallie Nydahl's fumble and trundled it some 52 yards for one touchdown. And Benny Friedman might miss drop-kicks galore when they didn't mean much, but when it meant a conference championship, he was there.

The football rules committee will undoubtedly have to consider eliminating the point after touchdown when it meets this year. Fans seem to think that one point isn't sufficient margin of difference to decide a game on. Yet the rules provide a variety of ways for scoring that one point, and even a one-point victory is better than a tie. Had Minnesota been smart, she could have scored her extra point last Saturday on a line plunge or a pass, instead of trying to kick it—maybe.

Most of the 48,000 who shivered through the Wisconsin - Chicago game counted the Badgers lucky to scrape through the last half without being tied. Particularly when the Maroons were skating around on the five-yard line trying to figure out a way to get across. Every-

When the Wisconsin cross country team galloped off to their third successive conference title last Saturday at Minneapolis, the Badgers demonstrated that they have the greatest cross country team ever assembled in collegiate circles.

The first proof of this is that the team's score was 34 points, the lowest a conference team has ever scored. The second proof is that three of the runners were most certainly not up to their usual form, and thus Wisconsin would have won by a smaller score if every man was in best shape.

To substantiate the last statement, here are the arguments. Victor Chapman, the Badger star who finished fourth in the meet, had been sick for a week. He was sent to Minneapolis before the rest of the team and put to bed in an effort to have him in better condition. His showing was pleasing, but certainly if he were in the pink of condition he would most certainly have defeated Kennedy, of Ohio, and possibly Hunn and Speers of Iowa.

Next let us look at John Zola and John Petaja, who finished the meet in eleventh and seventeenth places respectively. Zola has been up in front all season and should have finished no worse than seventh or eighth, while Petaja has been Chapman's closest opponent all year and should have been near the leaders.

No alibis are offered. The Badgers won, and won easily, but the assertion that the Wisconsin cross country six is the greatest ever in intercollegiate competition needs backing up. As it was the Cards took fourth, fifth, sixth, eighth, eleventh and seventeenth in the meet. If they had run as they have all year it would probably be at the worse third, fourth, fifth, sixth, seventh, and ninth, for a total of 25 points for the five low men.

However, there is no use of supposing. This season is closed and in a blaze of glory, only three points, those by Iowa, who took the first two places here, were scored against the Badgers in meeting five conference teams this fall before the Badgers had counted their five men.

Next year Coach T. E. Jones should have another great team. Victor Chapman, John Payne, and John Petaja, of the present champions, will return. Lawrence Gumbreck and John Zola may be here—a five man veteran team already.

Besides, there are Charles Bullamore, who has run with the best this fall, and Richard Williamson, Delmar Fink and Oscar Egger of the varsity squad who will still be in school. From the freshman team a number of likely men will come up with Vaughn, Steenis, Baker, and Thompson as the leading contenders.

JOESTING HIGH IN BIG TEN SCORING

Minnesota Fullback Beats Out
Marty Karow by Two Touchdowns

Herbert Joesting, Minnesota's great smashing fullback, finished the season as the leading scorer in the Big Ten, adding one more touchdown to his total Saturday in the Michigan game, while Marty Karow of Ohio, his nearest rival, was failing to score in the Illinois game.

Joesting's total of thirteen touchdowns is the largest scored in the conference. Nydahl of Minnesota held third place, while Gustafson edged into fourth place ahead of Peplaw, of Minnesota. Benny Friedman's seventeen points after touchdown is the largest total in that field of endeavor, and his four field goals ties the total of Peters of Illinois.

DESK EDITOR—WARREN C. PRICE

We're the Doctors

I prefer work in a publishing house, provided, of course, the work is sufficiently remunerative. Perhaps my English will qualify me, although I have had no experience and do not know either shorthand or typewriting. I have a Masters in English and am a Phi Beta Kappa.

The quotation is verbatim from a letter written to a New York newspaper. Its tragedy is the kind that makes self-made business men scoff at the product of universities.

Behavior of college men and women in business is watched with intense interest. Probably no group is so closely scrutinized for professional faux pas or any slight deviation from the accepted order of things. No group is so criticized, and condemned as a whole if a part proves bad or even foolish.

We are all familiar with college students who flounder around—misfits. Numerous examples disclose as much tragedy and comedy as the above case of the young woman trustfully offering her P B K key as substitute for practical business training.

Likewise, we all have many friends who are succeeding in spite of their education (as scoffing people think they humorously say it).

Here we will confine ourselves to the more interesting of our fellow students who flounder around after college. We want to discover WHY.

What does the employer say about college people in business? "They have an overweening desire to be promoted faster than the exigencies of business permit," complains one through the medium of the "Atlantic Monthly." "The mediocre as well as the good clamor, clamor for raises and promotions. Their gaze is constantly riveted on what they are to get rather than on what they give.

"Furthermore, college men are always expecting special privileges. Weddings, football games, homecomings, dances, slight illnesses, college men seem to think that business was created for them because the institution from which they have just come was made especially for them.

"College men become too easily disheartened. Many of them are abominably rude. They clique. They talk too much about their salaries. They lack vision."

Now, while admitting that employers seem to have very real grievances, we suspect that some of them are jealous of our youth and enthusiasm. We have a hunch that some of them envy our club connections, our friends scattered all over the country, and our passionate enjoyment of football and all it connotes. It wouldn't surprise us if they secretly admire our faith and persistency with these glorious new ideals of ours, even while they pigeon-hole them because of their impracticability.

Doubtless, even, they command to themselves our everlasting desire to get ahead. Would the "Atlantic" writer have our attitude to our employer, "Oh, you great big wonderful man, may I sharpen your pencils for you?"

But come, let's be serious. Many of us next year will be knocking not at business, but at the doors of business. We must realize that we are the supplicants. We hold the short end of the rope. Adjustment is possible only with us.

Apropos of the first we may mention that at about this time many seniors are thinking either, "Oh, I wish I had specialized more so that I would be better suited for a job," or "I wish I had taken more cultural subjects. I have specialized so much that I can hardly talk about even the weather any more."

We admit that we don't know what course is best to pursue. It's all very well to say that we shouldn't regard college as a means to make more money, yet the fact remains that when we are graduated we are going to have to make our own way. In self-defense we must prepare ourselves for something. The ideal course seems to be to pursue cultural subjects the first two years and to specialize the last two. If we are able to work or travel during our summer vacations, we should have a combination of equipment that would satisfy future employers as to experience, ourselves as to viewpoint, and scholars as to our background.

When we start work we are at sea in the matter of salary and promotions. Well enough to say that business always promotes the worthy, but we are willing to wager that sometimes a little prodding is needed. Our ideas as to what we should get are usually too optimistic or else pitifully inadequate, through no fault of our own. But business' grievance is not that we work for promotion, but at the way we talk about it, act mis-treated and ask for it before we deserve it.

However, our ignorance on the salary question does not excuse the actions on which employers base their other objections. We don't realize that in business there is no such thing as clinic excuses. We don't realize that we upset the routine of business when we request special privileges. Our friends can get married without us. For awhile we'll have to take our football via the Associated Press.

It's a big question, and an interesting one. It may never be solved. But whatever solution develops must certainly come from us. We're the doctors.

Pay Without Questioning

Those who have not paid their W. S. G. A. dues by December 1 will be placed on disciplinary probation by the dean of women. Such is the announcement sent forth from the office of authority, along with a more or less clear explanation of what disciplinary probation is. No word of explanation is given as to what W. S. G. A. is except the occasional use of the words Women's Self Government Association, which, after all, is not much of an explanation, particularly for freshmen and other new students.

At the time of registration each woman entering the university was given, along with numerous other cards, a white one at the top of which were the supposedly, self-explanatory words, Women's Self Government Association, and at the bottom of which were large, black-faced letters proclaiming PAY THIS AT ONCE. Between these two lines you were informed that you were to present the card at the W. S. G. A. office and pay the compulsory dues of $1. If, after all the reading of cards you did on registration day, you should have happened to turn the white card over (nothing on the front told you to do so) you would have found a clause saying all women are ipso facto members and that one dollar must be paid. Despite the white card, the black printing, and the ipso facto clause one still has very little, if any idea of just what the organization is and does.

With about 3,000 women students in the university, the W. S. G. A. office must collect about that number of dollars, no great amount to be sure, yet one that should be used wisely. Just what is done with that amount, just what duties are performed one does not hear. Seniors, who have paid the compulsory dues for four years, many seniors are still wondering what becomes of the money and just how they are helped by the association in which they are ipso facto members. They pay, usually without much squirming, and they keep comparatively quiet, but they keep on wondering and when they gather in groups they often ask questions of each other concerning W. S. G. A. which none of the others can answer.

One admits that some money is necessary to have officers to see that the compulsory dues are collected, but outside of that one does not see anything. It is for the office to supply information to the students from whom it collects money. What it does may be well worthy of praise, but few students know what it does.

There IS a Santa Claus, at least it isn't one's father because one's father doesn't wear red plus fours.

Readers' Say-So

ARE THERE ANY REAL MEN
HERE?

Editor, the Daily Cardinal:

In all seriousness I wish to ask a question. Are there any men in Madison worthy of the name? If there are, I have failed to meet them. The first six weeks of the semester I went out every night. (While there's life there's hope). I've sworn off now, for I'm worn out and thoroughly disgusted trying to make my escort at least try to imitate men. Why is it that men cannot keep their hands from roving all over a girl's figure? Suppose the tables were turned? I suggest that they go to the library and spend an evening on the landing with Venus.

Isn't there a male in Madison who would continue to be interested in a girl he couldn't mug to his heart's content? Are they all turned back to their most animalistic passions and haven't they reason and civilization enough to despise and control them?

To be mutually interested, or at least entertained, two people must have some one thing in common. If they cannot meet on intellectual basis, they must find a physical basis. It seems pathetic that college students have so little grey matter that they must have recourse to the latter.

I have enough ego to realize that if I disposed of my standards and self respect, I'd "go big" with the other sex. But if I can't go out without laboring to ward off a petting party, I'll stay at home 'till I take root there. (I'll probably have to.)

THE ISSUE—AN ATTITUDE
Editor, the Daily Cardinal:

The anonymous author of the protest against the "Issue" appearing in Friday's Daily Cardinal provided—in addition to the incidental fact that at times he expresses himself in a very engaging fashion—two things. First, that he seems to have an emotional complex with respect to the attitude underlying the editorial policy of the "Issue." Secondly, that his own journalist ic sophistication has led him astray and made his criticism in a certain measure unjustly sharp.

The Issue cannot be made to stand or fall in accordance with the adequacy or inadequacy with which it carries out the programs inspired by the attitude of its editors. Whether the articles are or are not written with masterly grasp of method or content, and whether their contents do or do not advance ideas which are even in a modest measure original, is merely a matter of accident, in the sense that it is dependent upon the mental acumen and depth of feeling and experience of the individuals who contribute the articles and of the editors who pass judgment on their merit.

We should like to voice the opinion that the most important thing, however, is the recognition of the mental and emotional attitude underlying the contents of the Issue as being a genuinely justifiable one. But it seems to be this very attitude which causes our earnest critic to react with such vehemence.

This attitude may be designated as one of mental restlessness and impiety. With the sort of thing which, at first, approaches with hesitating and curious blinks, the proposition that God is a kindly old gentleman with a nice white beard who will be good to us if we behave; and that virginity is the highest and noblest thing which woman possesses. You see, it is also very much of an emotional attitude, arising from the impatience and keen desire of young blood. We need not go into logic and metaphysics here, but we limit ourselves to saying that this is an attitude which is highly desirable—from the point of view of future generations, that is. From the point of view of our generation, probably not; it is, in fact, very annoying, to say the least and leads to the most impious and disconcerting speculations.

BARRON COUNTY BAND BROADCASTS

Mucks, Wisconsin Star, to Lead Program From Twin Cities Tomorrow

Headed by Arlie M. Mucks, former champion discus thrower of America and an old Wisconsin football star, the Barron County Band with the Guernsey Male quartet will come to the Twin Cities tomorrow to broadcast a program from WCCO at 9:30 o'clock.

Mucks was an athletic hero and superman of the university from 1914 to 1917. He is 6 feet 5 inches tall and weighs 265 pounds. He was born in Wisconsin and graduated from the College of Agriculture here.

After specializing in dairy science and after operating a farm of his own in South Dakota, he returned to Barron county, as county agent. He has devoted much of his time to the butter and cheese industry and is given much credit for the high production records made by Barron county in these lines.

The Barron County concert band is considered one of the best rural bands in the Northwest. With the band will be the Guernsey Male Quartet in some of their original songs. This quartet is composed of young Barron county farmers and has a national reputation. It is always in great demand at the national dairy shows and other conventions of agriculturists.

Fall Course of Ag School Opens With Enrollment of 101

The fall term of the short courses in agriculture opened Nov. 16 with an enrollment of 101 men, according to T. L. Bewick, director of the short course.

These courses cover three terms of five weeks each in practical farming problems. They are intended for the farmers who are unable to attend school during the regular terms, and accordingly a course is offered which starts after the regular farm work is completed.

Courses are given in dairying problems, feeds and feeding, animal husbandry, gas engines, and many other practical farming subjects.

Tennis may be played in winter on courts made of a cement composition recently introduced in England.
