UW SPORTS NEWS SERVICE

THE BIG TEN championship and Rose Bowl trip for the 1958 season have been won by Iowa, and the final two weeks of the season will be but an anticlimax. Wisconsin's Badgers were eliminated from the race despite winning a 9-7 decision from Michigan State on November 1, and triumphing 17-13 at Madison on November 8. Both games were homecoming affairs, and the Badgers played rugged defensive football in both games, truly deserving to win each game.

The Badgers currently hold second place in the Big Ten standings with a 3 won, 1 lost, 1 tie record (it was the tie game with Ohio State that ended any hopes of a championship following the loss to Iowa), and will be trying to secure their hold in coming games with Illinois and Minnesota.

Wins in those two games would give Wisconsin their best record since the 1951 'Hard Rocks', compiled a 7 won, 1 lost, 1 tie mark for the season and a 5 won, 1 lost, 1 tie record in the Big Ten. The current Badgers can duplicate both records.

WISCONSIN'S football team made its first national television appearance since early 1954 on this sunny November day, and you'd almost think the script was written by the same producer. Wisconsin edged past Michigan State 9-7, in Spartan Stadium, in as tense a game as they have played in the current campaign, and highly reminiscent of the 1954 game with Rice at Camp Randall Stadium when the Badgers scored with fifty seconds to play to satisfy another national TV audience by 13-7.

A Homecoming gathering of 71,040, third largest crowd in Spartan Stadium history, witnessed this hard tackling, hard blocking football game, and watched with fluttering hearts as Wisconsin's defense prevailed in a triumphant cause. Actually, the Badgers' defense did not account for either of the two Wisconsin scores, but it did stop the Spartans cold in the final period, utilizing an intercepted pass and a blocked punt by Jim Fraser to stymie the Spartans.

The win was most gratifying for Coach Milt Bruhn's team, ending a string of three straight losses to Michigan State since Wisconsin's 1954 win by 6-0, also at East Lansing, and preserving their slight chance of achieving a share of the Big Ten championship and a sniff of Pasadena's roses on New Year's day.

The Badgers appeared very business-like in the first half, and appeared ready to salt the game away early—remember, they appeared ready to do the same thing in the Iowa and Ohio State games—but, the story of the game again must revolve around missed opportunities that would have made the task so much easier.

Wisconsin won the toss, chose to receive, and promptly embarked on a fifteen play, fifty yard march that stalled on the Spartan 13 yard line, where on fourth down reliable "Nervous Paul" Shwaiko missed a field goal attempt. The Badgers put together four first downs on the march, two by grinding them out on the ground, one by a Hackbart to Hill completion, and the fourth on a pass interference ruling.

Michigan State, aided by a fourth down roughing the kicker penalty, promptly marched from their 20 yard line to Wisconsin's ten yard line, where the stout-hearted Badgers refused to give any more ground, and a Spartan field goal attempt by end Dan Follis was wide to the right. Key play in the march, not including the fifteen yard penalty, was quarterback Greg Montgomery's completed pass to end Sam Williams. He caught the ball at mid-field, then fumbled, and Spartan center Don Wright grabbed the ball away from Badger co-captain Dave Kocourek. Left halfback Dean Look, and Montgomery kept the march alive with nine yard and 13 yard excursions going wide that netted first downs.

Following the missed field goal, the Badgers, with Sidney Williams at the helm, moved downfield eighty yards in ten plays for the game's first score. Williams handed off to Billy Hobbs for three yards, ran himself for four yards, than tossed his first of four straight pass completions to left halfback Ron Steiner for eight yards and a first down.

Steiner smashed off right tackle for four, Williams tried a sneak for a yard, then tossed a well-executed screen pass to left end Jim Holmes for 19 yards and a first down on State's 41 yard line, as the quarter ended.

Here, Dale Hackbart came in and sustained the attack, using running plays by Steiner and Bill Hobbs to get to the Spartans' 37, then tossing a 36 yard completed pass to Dave Kocourek. The ball was placed two feet from the goal-line. Hackbart scored on a dive over center, with just one minute, four seconds of the second period played. Paul Shwaiko's second extra point attempt was wide, coming after he had his first kick nullified by a Wisconsin offside.

On the first play following Jim Fraser's kickoff, Jon Hobbs—ever Jonny-on-the-spot—recovered Look's fumble as Dick Teteak made a great tackle, and Wisconsin had first down on the State 32. The Badgers moved to a first down on the State 20, with Hackbart gaining 11 yards on a neatly executed fake off the belly series, then stalled on the 12 yard line, where a fourth down fake field goal, featuring Hackbart on a sweep of State's left end, failed to gain a first down by inches on the ten yard line.

Wisconsin's defense held the Spartans here, with Earl Hill spilling halfback Herb Adderly for a six yard loss on a third down and one yard situation. Dean Look punted to Hackbart and the nation's leader in punt returns moved the ball 21 yards before being forced out of bounds on the State 35.

Steiner ripped off nine yards on a slant over right tackle, then Hackbart faked a pass, ran wide, and went ten yards to the 16, first down. Two plays moved the ball to the 11 yard line, where a backfield in motion penalty set the Badgers back five yards. The third down play netted four yards, then Fullback Jon Hobbs kicked an 18 yard field goal—his first since last season's Illinois game, and Wisconsin led 9-0 with 5:44 left to play in the quarter.

Michigan State had to punt on fourth down in the series of plays following the next kick-off, being stopped once more by the defense on a third down and short yardage situation—Jon Hobbs was the culprit who threw quarterback Ike Grimsley for a four yard loss—and the Badgers took over on their 28 with 3:48 left to play.

Three plays gained seven yards, so on fourth down, Earl Hill punted to State's Dean Look on the Spartan 20, and behind a wave of vicious blocking, he swept 80 yards—reversing his field in the process—for an apparent score; but clipping on a Spartan blocker at Wisconsin's 30 yard line nullified the score, and Look got credit only for a fifty yard return. Two minutes of action remained, but State could not muster a drive, although Montgomery did throw a 17 yard pass completion to Sam Williams on the first play following the punt return.

The Badgers braced, here, aided by a 15 yard holding penalty on Michigan State, hurrying the passer three times in a row, and on fourth down the Spartans punted. The Badgers entered the half-time rest period with a 9-0 lead.

Reminds one of the Iowa game, doesn't it? A lead of 9-0 against the Hawkeyes proved to be a bad omen, and the game was also being televised, but regionally. Here at East Lansing the game was nationally televised and the Badgers wanted no part of any second half letdown.

Dean Look, a really great runner this afternoon, ran back Jim Fraser's third quarter kickoff 52 yards to Wisconsin's 48 to start the second half, and it appeared that there was trouble ahead. But on second down Jim Heineke broke through to spill Look for an eight yard loss as he tried to pass—yes, he passes, too—and State had to punt.

The Badgers stormed back on the brilliance of Dale Hackbart, sweeping his own left end for a 48 yard gallop to the Spartans' 23 yard line. Again, the Badgers' offensive machine stalled, sputtering to a halt on the 23 yard line on a fourth down pass incompleteness.

The teams then exchanged punts, and with 5:46 to pay, the Spartans gained possession on their own 13. It appeared they were deep in a hole. Coach Duffy Daugherty inserted a 5-7 senior quarterback, Mike Panitch, at this time, and the green wave rolled on an unending march that culminated on the final play of the quarter with a seven yard scoring pass, Panitch to Williams.

The Badgers did not do much on offense in the final period, but their defense prevented State from doing much either, and therein lies the tale of the game.

It was a hard fought battle, and the script called for a close game. That it was.

Wisconsin 17, Northwestern 13

November 8

THE LARGEST HOMECOMING gathering in Wisconsin football history, 62,964, sat in Camp Randall Stadium this cold, rain-dampened afternoon and watched Wisconsin upend Northwestern's Wildcats 17-13. The win moved the Badgers into second place in the Big Ten race (Iowa won the championship this day) and halted momentarily the storybook surge of Northwestern back into the nation's gridiron elite.

The combatants, as well as the crowd, could have utilized the services of a physician at the conclusion of the day's activities. The Wildcats suffered through the long, dark afternoon with a malady called "Fumblitis", while the Badgers bogged down again with a mild case of "goallinitis", and it was this recurring fever that netted near-heartfailure for the thousands of loyal Wisconsin followers for the third Saturday afternoon in a row.

Both the Badgers and the crowd made a slow recovery from their ailments following the game—their feelings assuaged by the victory. But the wildcats suffered a fatal attack of "fumblitis"—diagnosed in the NCAA football rules book, the official medical book for collegiate football, as "the loss of player possession other than by handing, passing or kicking the football."

The hard-hitting Badgers made the Wildcats fumble seven times during the course of the long afternoon, and four times it was a Wisconsin man that fell on the ball to give the victors possession and stymie the losers. Twice, within five period Wisconsin recovered Wildcat fumbles and turned them into a field goal, the ultimate margin of victory, and a touchdown. Added to a touchdown scored the hard way—66 yards in 19 plays earlier in that same quarter, the Badgers enjoyed a 17-0 lead at halftime, and the relaxed throng sat back and enjoyed the marching bands of both schools. No symptoms of heart failure at this point.

However, let's not get too far ahead of the story. Northwestern seemed to control play in the first period, though the teams exchanged punts following the first two times they had the ball on offense. The Wildcats, led by their flashy sophomore field general, Dick Thornton, moved 27 yards to the Wildcat 46 yard line the second time they had possession, then punted to Wisconsin's 28 yard line. The individual brilliance of the Badgers signal caller, Dale Hackbart, moved them across mid-field to the Wildcats 41, where a fourth down punt by Ron Steiner bounced out of bounds on the Northwestern 16. Hackbart reeled off a 17 yard end sweep to help the Badgers pass the fifty yard stripe before the drive halted.

The Wildcats promptly countered by marching to a first down on Wisconsin's 31 yard line before a 15 yard holding penalty halted their progress.

Perhaps, they should have punted at this point. They did not, though, and the Badgers mounted a 19 play, 66 yard march for the day's lone hard-earned score. Sixteen of the plays were rushes, with Ron Steiner's seven yard gain on a pitch-out the longest of the march, which piled up five first downs. Hackbart passed complete twice, for five yards to Ed Hart on the fifth play of the march, and to Kocourek for 16 yards to put the ball on the six yard line. Three smashes at the left side of the Wildcat line gained sophomore fullback Tom Wiesner the first touchdown of the day, with 8:36 remaining to be played in the second quarter. Paul Shwaiko added the extra point by placement.

Here, "fumblitis" set in. On first down following the kickoff, halfback Sam Johnson fumbled, and guard Jerry Stalcup recovered for the Badgers on the Northwestern 30. Hackbart, after losing four yards, ran twice for nine yards and a first down on the 16. The attack stalled—the Badgers fumbled on third down, recovered—and Jon Hobbs attempted a 27 yard field goal. It was short, but Northwestern was detected to be offside, and with the ball five yards closer, Hobbs booted a 22 yard three-pointer that made the score 10-0 with 4:46 still to be played.

On the kickoff, the Wildcats' great junior speedster Ron Burton returned to the 16, fumbled when hit hard, and Jon Hobbs recovered for Wisconsin. The attack stalled momentarily, as an illegal procedure penalty moved the ball to the 21. A flat pass, Williams to Kocourek, netted a three yard loss. Williams then passed to sophomore end Hank Derleth for 17 yards to the Northwestern 7 yard line, and Wiesner bucked for a first down on the six.

A penalty moved the ball back to the 11 yard line for Wisconsin, then came the 'freak' play of the day. Williams started to his left, decided to pitch out when hit, fumbled, (a Wildcat nearly intercepted the ball in mid-air) but the ever-alert and thinking Bob Zeman scooped up the loose ball, circled back to the 21 yard line, then behind great blocking raced into the end zone. Paul Shwaiko booted the extra point and the score stood Wisconsin 17, Northwestern 0, with 2:39 left to play.

The Wildcats, who had the ball for just five scrimmages in the second period, then tried to strike back in a hurry, but Zeman made a fine interception of Thornton's long pass intended for end Elbert Kimbrough two plays before the half ended.

The Badgers suffered their mild case of "goallinitis" early in the third period, as tackle Jim Heineke recovered Fowler's fumble on the Northwestern 43 yard line on the first down following Earl Hill's forty yard punt. On first down, Hackbart tossed long to left half-back Ron Steiner for 33 yards, and Wisconsin was ten yards away. But what hard ten yards for Wisconsin this year! Hackbart was stopped short of the goal on the two yard line, and with this event the tide of battle changed. Not quickly, mind you, but soon enough.

The Wildcats moved the ball out to their 33 yard line, then Thornton punted 49 yards to Wisconsin's 18. On first down, Jon Hobbs' fumble was recovered by Sam Johnson on the Badger 22. Thornton paced the losers to a first down on the ten yard line, then a roughness penalty on Wisconsin gave the visitors a first down on the one yard line. From there, Burton bolted over with ease, and Thornton added the extra point by placement. 17-7, said the scoreboard, with 4:04 left to play in the third period.

Neither team could mount a drive of any proportion until less than nine minutes remained to be played in the game. The Wildcats took over following a Wisconsin punt on their 11 yard line, and in eight plays scored. A first down pass, almost intercepted by Bob Zeman, was incomplete. Thornton, sensing the situation as desperate, then passed to Burton complete for 18 yards, 12 yards, and 16 yards, sandwiched in with two short gains, to move to the UW 38 yard line. Less than six minutes to play.

Thornton stepped back, fired long, and receiver and defender made great efforts, with Wisconsin's Hackbart just succeeding in slapping the ball out of Burton's grasp on the goalline. Both boys went sprawling, and as they did so, an official called Hackbart for interference.

On first down, Thornton went wide into the end zone for the score, and it was 17-13, with the clock at the south end of the field showing 5:18 left to play. A pass for the extra points failed. Even so the crowd sensed impending disaster.

The Badgers were without several key players at this juncture: Hackbart and Teteak had been ousted because of protesting the pass interference call; Stalcup and Fraser, the first team guards, were out with bruises, and left halfback Bob Altmann was out with a shoulder hurt. Sidney Williams, playing gamely on a sprained ankle, guided the Badgers downfield in twelve time consuming plays, reaching the Wildcats' seven yard line as the game ended. Ball control had sealed Northwestern's fate. Time had run out on the story book team of 1958. Wisconsin had sole possession of second place.

And the crowd had near-heartfailure on another victorious Saturday afternoon.

UW-M Splits Even In Final Games

The University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee Cardinals on Nov. 8 wound up their 1958 season with a 13-0 victory over Ferris Institute at Big Rapids, Mich., thus coming through with a three win five loss record. All five of the losses, however, came at the hands of state college conference foes (including La Crosse, which squeaked by UW-M on Nov. 1 on a 13-12 score) and this fact kept the Cardinals in the lower regions of conference standings. The one-five loop record fastened UW-M in a three-way tie for eighth place, with River Falls perched at the top of the ten-member heap with a six-nothing record.

Homecoming: 1958

Homecoming activities preceding the football game at Camp Randall ranged on campus from Showerman House (and further west) to the Chi Phi House (and further east). It wasn't an untypical Homecoming weekend; the weather was blustery and damp, but spirits were high (note Homecoming parade cheerleaders) and thousands of alumni descended upon Madison for fun and football. Reigning over the Homecoming Weekend—whose theme was "Badger Showcase"—were King Brian Kulas, the Badger basketeer, and his queen, Dona Penn. (Wisconsin State Journal Photos.)

A Mascot for UW-M

A South American cardinal named "Mr. John Gould"—after the English ornithologist—is the first mascot of the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee.

The bird reigned over Homecoming festivities recently, sharing honors with Homecoming King Ron Bekken and his queen, Nancy Ebel. Bekken played halfback on the varsity team last year, but 1958's first game saw him suffer a leg injury which took him out of the lineup for the rest of the season. (Milwaukee Journal Photo.)
