Many Dancers Will Make Last Appearance With H'Doubler Group at Summer Play

Six of the H'Doubler dancing group who have been appearing in public performance the last four years will make their last appearance in Madison at the Evening of Dance and Drama Friday, July 29, at the Open Air theater. Several are leaving for the east directly after the performance and the others are scattering to various parts of the country.

The 1920-21 dancing team has made a great name for itself in college and professional circles. During the past year 46 requests for engagements were sent to the university. The group has appeared in Chicago, New York, Ann Arbor, Minneapolis and several other large cities.

Dancers who have completed their work at the university and who are planning to leave the city are Edith Bond, Helen Gath, Julia Hanks, Bertha Ochsner, Eleanor Riley, Greta Schultz, and Agnes Samuels. The other members of the group are Mary Aid, Renet Douglas, Lillian Stupp, Charlotte MacEwan, and Elizabeth Waterman.

Miss H'Doubler is anxious to present The Whirl Wind, a fanciful creation, involving an unusual degree of ability and requiring a special musical accompaniment of great difficulty. Miss Ochsner's original number, The Dream Gate, will also be included.

Rehearsals for The Sanctuary, the play by Percy Mackaye, which will be the second part of the program, have been under way for two weeks. Secret rehearsals are being held and an attempt is being made to keep the names of the members of the cast a secret. It is understood however that the actors are advanced students of drama, many of whom have had professional experience.

WOMAN DISCOVERED STEALING CLOTHES DISMISSED AT ONCE

With the apprehension of a young woman found taking clothing from the dressing rooms of Lathrop hall gymnasium, the Dean's office hopes for a stop of similar petty larceny.

GAZERS

Lure of Stars Draws Many Into Long Line That Waits to Peep Through Big Glass

Payday in the army and its long line that seemed to the private named Zahl to never end, paled beside the column that waited to see through the observatory telescope Wednesday night.

Silently, one by one, the little stars peeped out as if they feared the scrutiny. Of the all-critical summer student. Several couples lost interest in the line and strolled over to the top of the terrace to gaze upon the moon with naked eyes. But most of the crowd hung on—even if they did average two hours in the line.

At last the weary waiter approached the door and once through that magic portal soon found himself in the seat ready to take a squint at Arcturus. Prof. Comstock was on hand to direct the star gazers and it was a head evening for him.

Arcturus dazzled the observer. Many a maiden opened her rosy lips and forgot to even fix her hair. Some of the watchers had to be dragged away from the glass. Others slid by as quickly as possible.

It is estimated that a thousand students went up the hill all intent on getting a view of the heavens. Two weeks ago it rained and this was the first chance to see one of the celestial bodies magnified.

And today the great stellar race continues, although it is rumored in the vicinity of the Milky Way that Arcturus is lording it over the other stars because of his long appearance in the limelight.

JASTROW ADDRESSES MINNESOTA STUDENTS

At a recent convocation at the Minnesota summer session the speaker was Joseph Jastrow, professor of psychology here.

The subject of the convocation lecture was the general one of the "Revival of Belief in Spirits," or as he styles it, "The Cult of the Occult."

Professor Jastrow also gave an illustrated lecture on "Spirit Belief in Scientific Garb." This was an interesting exposition of the workings of the so-called occult, as viewed by a scientist. The lecture was well illustrated by numerous stereoptican views, which Professor Jastrow has taken in his investigations of the "performances" of various mediums.

BIG PAGEANT IN OPEN AIR THIS EVENING

Pageantry Classes Stage Huge Festival of Song and Light

The pageant, on which various classes have been working most of the summer session will be presented this evening at the Open Air theater. The classes in Community Music under Prof. E. B. Gordon and the pageantry classes under Prof. P. W. Dykema are staging this festival as a big part of their summer's work.

The pageant will differ from the ordinary variety in that many novel lighting effects will be used in addition to, and in conjunction with the song features. A somewhat similar festival of song and light was presented by the students in pageantry last summer and met with unanimous praise. That of tonight promises to eclipse last year's in many ways. The more interesting lighting features will be repeated.

Francis P. Frazier, Sioux Indian in attendance at the summer session will give the prologue and epilogue of the pageant. Garbed as an Indian seer, in full Sioux regalia, he will interpret for the audience the four episodes of the festival. These, the essentials of life, are: Work, Play, Love and Worship.

In the presentation of the four episodes, tableaux, pantomime and processional will be brought into play.

In order to defray the expenses of staging the display, an admission of 25 cents is being charged. Tag tickets have been on sale on the Campus since this morning and will be procurable at the theater.

The students who have been working on the pageant are: On the Work episode committee: Reba Hayden, chairman, Iris Kinsley, Ruby Britts, Gladys Zimmermann, Hazel Dixon, Vescey Jencks, Charlotte Hermes, Naomi Parks, Beryle Williams, Muriel Edwards, and Anna Wilkins.

Preparations for the Play episode has been in charge of Ruth Hutton, chairman, Jean Cain, Alpha Erlandson, Isable Weller, and Grace Leads. Those on the committee for the Love episode: Misses Hudson, Baker, Sinaiko, Stokes, Chisholm, Hennes, Leffel, and Reed, and Mr. J. A. Jordan. The Worship episode was supervised by the entire class in pageantry.

LARGE JOURNALISM ENROLLMENT HERE

Exactly 199 students are enrolled in the seven classes conducted by the Course in Journalism this summer as compared with 163 who took similar work in the 1920 summer session.

More than one-quarter of the total enrollment is registered in the principles of advertising course which is being offered for the first time this summer session. The class has 51 members.

The course in the writing of special feature articles for magazines and Sunday newspapers has an enrollment of 48; reporting, 28; editing, 17; editorial writing, 24; teaching of journalism, 10.

Editors-in-chief of school papers, instructors of journalism, and newspaper reporters are members of the classes.

LEGENDS

Sioux Indian Tells Tribal Stories to Members of International Club.

"The story of the flood and of the creation of man were common Indian legends long before the Bible came to our people," explained F. P. Frazier, an American Sioux Indian, at a recent meeting of the International club.

Mr. Frazier will sing several songs in the Sioux tongue at the "Cosmopolitan Revue" to be given by the international club July 30 in Lathrop hall.

Mother Goose rhymes and other nursery lore found among different races have a parallel in the legends of the Indians. These, Mr. Frazier explained are told by the old people in the tribe to the children to keep them out of mischief while the men are scouting and hunting and the women are picking berries.

Here is the Indian story of the flood as told by Mr. Frazier:

"A long time ago there were very many people living on the earth and in the wods. It happened that one of them had greater ability than the rest and the power to foretell what was coming. His name was Isaicage (Living Alone). He foretold that there was going to be trouble because the people didn't obey the great spirit. He knew that a flood was coming so he built a log boat and put provisions into it.

"Soon great rains came pouring down and all the people drowned in the flood. It happened, however, that there was an opposing spirit to Isaicage, a peculiar creature who always gnawed. This creature, when the water came, went to the boat and tried to get it. He couldn't do that so instead he gnawed slyly into the bottom of the boat. When the little boat sank the poor man had to swim about patiently all over the earth waiting until the flood went down."

THIRTY TEAMS OF STUDENTS AIDING IN METHODIST DRIVE

Seek Quarter Million Fund to Endow Local Wesley Foundation

The "Give a Chance Movement" has been started by the Methodist students of the university to raise the second quarter of a million dollar endowment fund for the Wesley foundation at Madison. The campaign was started during the early part of July, and thirty teams of two people each are in the field. It is planned to complete the campaign before September.

Each team works through the Methodist church in its home city. Here the students give talks to the congregations and explain to them the work of the Wesley foundation and the need of more money for expansion. Nearby towns are visited by the workers in the large cities.

The thirty teams now in the field have covered Eau Claire, Evansville, Gillette, Lake Geneva, Merrill, Milwaukee, Portage, Rittenburg, Reedsburg, Shannon, Sun Prairie, Wausau and Wopewoc.

There are 42 approved speakers now waiting to substitute if needed. It is the aim of the Wesley Foundation to have 50 talking teams at work before the end of the month. In some cities the Methodist students have organized their own teams.

The general chairman of the endowment campaign is Glenn Tre-wartha. R. P. Gerholtz is financial representative. Some of the students now addressing Methodist congregations throughout the state are: J. A. Anderson, E. M. Barnes, Mabel Bartholomew, Mildred Blakeley, L. R. Boies, H. Broods, A. Koehler, Marie McKittrick, Alice Spensley, Larry Hall and Calvin Wolfe of Madison; J. Abbott of Milton; K. Ames, S. C. Heath and R. W. Taylor of Kenosha; Josephine Bemis, Fern Constance and E. The attitude of the United States today, however, is expressed by the quotation from the New York Tribune, "We will enter the society of nations; insist on alterations, but we shall go in," Professor Potter said.

WHY NOT

INADEQUATE drinking facilities in Bascom hall has caused much caustic comment among the students. It is especially unfortunate that during such a hot summer as this one has been, better and more drinking arrangements have not been provided.

Of the 4,500 summer session students in attendance, at least 3,000 of them must spend part of each day in Bascom hall. The drinking facilities at present provided are not adequate for half of that number.

The Cardinal has investigated the matter of inadequate facilities and has appealed to the officials for the enactment of remedial measures. The facts it presented to the university officials were obvious to anyone who enters the Central entrance of Bascom hall.

Only two fountains are in operation in the building. One is on the first floor; one on the second. The pressure in both fountains is poor due to low pressure in the water main. When the fountain on the first floor is in use that on the second floor becomes automatically unserviceable. In other words, while there are two fountains for convenience and appearance, there is only one for drinking.

These facts were presented by the Cardinal to the proper university officials and after an investigation they replied that "it would not be possible to improve the drinking water facilities in Bascom hall at once, due to low pressure in the present water main." They further state that a new water main will be installed "some time during the next biennium."

It is not clear just why there should be any further delay in remedying these conditions. Unless there are cogent reasons further delay should not occur. The appropriation for the next two years has been made; finances for the repair and additions to the drinking system in Bascom hall are therefore presumably available. The period between summer session and the fall term should permit adequate time for the work to be done. The need for the improvement is admitted. Then why delay?

We hope that the new academic year will find a new drinking arrangement in Bascom hall.

BEGINNING OF THE END?

DURING the past year there have been many cases of students who have reported articles "lost, missing, or stolen." The apprehension last spring of forgers among the students seemed to promise an end to the petty larceny wave that since the war has threatened every large institution of the kind. It was felt that fewer articles would be lost in the future, for those who had been perpetrating these petty thefts would be afraid to operate.

That this hope was a fallacy was proven today when a girl student of the university was apprehended in the act of removing various articles of clothing from one of the lockers in the women's gym at Lathrop hall.

The university authorities have been especially diligent in trying to keep the cases of thievery among the students to the lowest possible number. Every case apprehended brings the university nearer to a feeling of security in this regard. Such security is necessary during the regular term when libraries and cloak-rooms are depositories for many valuable fur coats.

That there will be less missing articles next year is only a conjecture, but with the recent cases in mind where the guilty have been discovered, will tend to make others of like failings afraid to venture.

BULLETIN BOARD

Communications

Repose confidence and human nature tries to merit! If a man thinks you're a liar and a cheat, thinks so without having proof, but does so because once in the dim past some one else betrayed his trust, there is little or no use in attempting to convince,—you may as well live up to your reputation. The individual on the other hand, who is on the alert for an honorable deal is usually not disappointed. His fellow-workers want to merit his confidence. There is no attempt to "get away" with something because there is faith,—on the contrary, so united is the group sentiment in this respect that any slacker cannot withstand the force of public feeling.

In the editorial in Friday's Cardinal there was a call for reactions on the efficiency of the proposed honor system. The mere fact that the honor system has not been adopted long before this shows the matter has not been given serious consideration.

That cheating in exams does exist is not denied, but in almost all cases this cheating has been discovered in classes where the "sentinel" was on guard and the guilty one was attempt to "get away" with something. I can quote an example of an individual, a student during the regular session, who happened to be in two classes with me. In one, the guard-duty idea was adhered to,—this person referred to notes during the entire time and was not discovered; in the other, no professor remained in the room, and not a person made any attempt to cheat, nor did this champion cribber. In discussion of the situation later, this person frankly expressed himself, "I'll never disappoint anyone. That first prof went on the supposition that we needed watching. Some did, but it takes a man with more acute eye-sight than he to watch. I would rather fail, though, than try to put anything over on Prof.—He trusts his students, and I'll deserve that trust every time."

Admittedly, this is but one instance, and it may be an extreme one, but isn't as good logic to believe there are as many honest folk in the world as cheats? The honor system is surely worth trying,—why not try it?

AT THE STRAND

Harrison Ford in "A Heart to Let" is now being played at the Strand Theatre. Probably no man on earth would ever desire a home of his own, if he could find board and room with such a lovely landlady as Justine Johnstone who takes the leading female role.

As Agatha Kent, a proud but poverty-stricken young aristocrat who has inherited a run down estate and nothing more, Miss Johnstone made an instantaneous appeal to her audience.

What complicated the plot for several reels, when it was a foregone conclusion that the handsome moomer, should marry the lovely landlady, was the fact that he was temporarily blind, and that she pretended to be an old and decrepit woman instead of the young and very beautiful one that she really was. With tapping cane and tremulous voice she managed to fool the young paying guest for some time until a sudden shock restores his sight and he is bewildered and delighted to discover that his hostess is a contemporary and a very charming one at that.

There is also being shown a "Snub" Pollard comedy "Own Your Home" a Pathe Review and Literary Digest's "Topic of the Day".

WAR RECORD OF STATE LAUDED

Hazelwood Praises Veterans at Reunion of 12th Infantry

The Twelfth Wisconsin infantry organization closes its two day reunion at the capitol today. All of its present officers were re-elected at a short business session this morning at which Hosea W. Rood, secretary, read numerous letters from absent comrades. One letter announced the death of Henry Schwitzer of Racine on June 18.

The veterans voted to hold the reunion next year at the same time. Following a bean supper at Camp Randall, yesterday, afternoon in which veterans participated in great delight, a camp fire meeting was held in Memorial hall in the capitol at which John A. Hazelwood spoke.

"Wisconsin has an enviable war history," said Mr. Hazelwood. "No state in the union ranks ahead of the Badger state in volunteers for army service in wartime. Courage, heroism, and sacrifice in the battle field have characterized their service. Wisconsin's regiments in the Civil war stand in the foreground as bodies of men noted for their heroism in battle, and for an undying devotion to flag and country."

"The regiment holding its reunion today has made a noble record, and we are all proud of the accomplishments of the regiment. No regiment ever went forth from this state or any other state with a finer, cleaner, more courageous bunch of fighting men than the regiment celebrating here today. True it is, many of you went out poorly trained in marching and the manual of arms, but on your return there was not a single member of the regiment who could not have commanded a company as a commissioned officer."

Upwards of 25 members of the regiment attended the reunion, some of them returning home last night without registering. Those registered were:

Wencel Novak, Co. D, Muscoda, Wis.; A. Moorhouse, 1st Wis. band, Glidden, Ia.; M. S. Pratt, Co. G, and wife, Kilbourne, Wis.; Harry Marston, Co. E, Kilbourne, Wis.; L. D. Clement, Co. E, and wife, Delton; C. J. Lanquist, Co. G, Rio, Wis.; F. W. Curtiss, Madison; Levi M. Bresee, Madison; H. W. Rood, Madison; A. F. Ottman, Co. A, Ellsworth, Wis.; Lewis D. Kellogg, and Ransom Kellogg, both of Co. I, Readstown, Wis.; A. J. Ballard, Co. D, Oakland, Calif.; Edward Davis, Co. B; LaFayette Kelley, Co. B; Charles Coleman, Co. E, Baraboo, Wis.

BUST OF VAN HISE MEETS ALL IN LIBE

Have you ever wondered who he was? You, the new student, and the thousand or more like you who daily climb the north stairway of the library to the reading room.

You see on the landing the bust of a man with kindly face, forehead, Roman nose, deep-set eyes, and hair brushed back from his brow. Below the figure is a wreath of black around which is tied a bow of red ribbon.

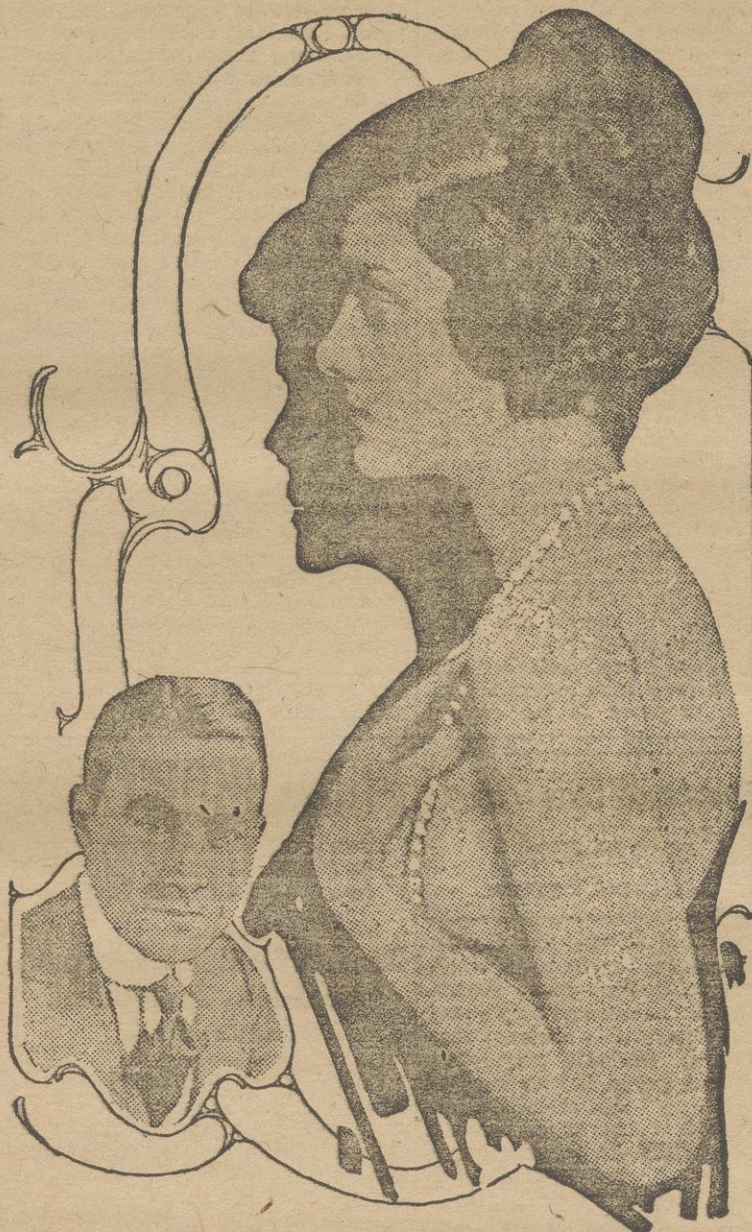

It is a bust of a man who did much for the university, Charles Richard Van Hise, former president.

Charles Van Hise entered the University of Wisconsin as a student in 1875, received a bachelor's degree in 1879, a master's degree in 1882, a doctor's degree in 1892, and was made president of the institution in 1903, the only alumnus to attain that distinction.

His administration of 15 years was marked by great progress. He doubled the landed property of the university, more than doubled the enrollment, strengthened all departments, and made Wisconsin one of the big universities of the Middle West. "Who's Who in America" claims him. He died Nov. 19, 1918.

ELOPEMENT MARKS OWEN MOORE'S NEW MARRIAGE VENTURE

Mr. and Mrs. Owen Moore.

NEW YORK — Congratulate the charming young woman with the pretty black curls and plump figure who was Kathryn Perry, the screen star.

And felicitate doubly Owen Moore, another film luminary, a good judge of peaches, Mary Pickford's former husband.

For Mr. Moore and Miss Perry were married at Greenwich, Conn., so it has just become known. It was a very quiet wedding, flavored with the romance of an elopement.

The pair motored from this city to Greenwich, Justice Mead read the civil ceremony, Miss Catherine McCarthy, who has been applauded on the screen, was bridesmaid, and Myron Selznick best man. No one else was present.

The happy event was celebrated without fuss and feathers because the attorney general of Nevada has not quite made up his stern, legal mind that the Pickford-Moore divorce was obtained in that state with strictest obedience to every form. Mr. and Mrs. Moore did not tell any one where they will pass their honeymoon.

They met several months ago, when playing in different productions at the Selznick studio, and Mr. Moore promptly asked that Miss Perry become his leading lady. They appeared together in "The Chicken in the Case" and "A Divorce of Convenience," so they have had practice in mutual billing and cooing. After leaving school Mrs. Moore, posed as a model for such artists as Penryn Stanlaws and Harrison Fisher; then she adorned the "Ziegfeld Follies" for a time.

This is Mr. Moore's second elopement and his bride's first. She gave her age as twenty-two and the bridegroom stated he was thirty-two.

MORE STUDENTS PLAN TO TEACH

With 92 students receiving the teachers' certificate this June, the number of graduates who definitely plan to enter the teaching profession has returned more nearly to the pre-war status than at any time in the last four years. Twenty-two men were numbered among the 92.

One hundred and four men and women received the certificate in 1916 and 110 in 1917. The next June showed the tendency away from teaching and into industry for there were only 89 who took the certificate. As might be expected but 6 of the 89 were men.

The following year, 1919, showed the full effect of the war upon the teaching profession for only 47 planned to enter it and of these, 42 were women. In 1920 with the largest graduating class that had been known to Wisconsin up to that time there were still only 64 women and 4 men who received the certificate. This June with a 28 per cent increase in the number of graduates over last year, the increase of those receiving teacher's certificates was about 35 per cent.

FARM RECORDS OF BADGER ARE KEPT

Some 300 pages of the farm records kept by the late Jacob Baumgartner of Fennimore, Wis., are being photostated by the bureau of farm management of the U. S. department of agriculture. The records are preserved in the library of the State Historical society here.

For more than 60 years, Mr. Baumgartner recorded the prices he received for his agricultural products, the cost of land, and the wages paid to farm laborers. The representative of the department of agriculture who recently viewed the records pronounced them practically invaluable.

Ice and Ice Cream in Staggering Quantities Is Demand of Food Seekers, Weather Varying Whims As Varsity Kitchen Feeds 3,000 Daily

"Fifty gallons of ice cream; one thousand pounds of ice." This is the daily tale of the hot weather in the central kitchen of the university, according to Miss Elizabeth Bemis, acting director of halls and commons.

"Over 3,000 meals are prepared in the kitchen by the 120 persons employed," Miss Bemis said. "The board at the halls is $6 a week and anyone can have three very satisfactory meals at Lathrop for an average of $1 a day."

The ordering is done on a large scale. One day's order includes 2 bunches of bananas, 1 case of oranges, 4 cases of cantaloupes, 10 barrels of potatoes, 1 barrel of cabbages, and 120 pounds of fish.

"The weather makes a great difference in what we sell at Lathrop," Miss Bemis continued. "During the extremely hot weather the salads, fresh fruits and ice creams are in great demand, and our meat bills are cut very materially."

"On the cooler days a reaction toward heavier food sets in; but even if the weather continues hot, people begin to get hungry and come back to more solid diet."

All the food served daily in Lathrop and the two halls except the ice cream is prepared in the central kitchen, which is the acme of cleanliness. At one end the pastries and bread are made. In the central part of the room the vegetables are prepared. And at the other end the stoves, hung round with kettles of all kinds, show where the meats and vegetables are cooked.

Electric devices of every description are used in this kitchen,—potato mashers, dish washers, egg beaters, bread cutters, cake and bread mixers. An electric lemon squeezer is now desired.

The central kitchen has its own refrigeration plant. One refrigerator holds the milk and butter; a second the fresh fruits; the third the fresh vegetables cooling for the salads; and the fourth, the meats. The meats are cut up twenty-four hours in advance so that everything is ready when needed.

The menus are posted in the kitchen two days in advance. These are made out by Miss Bemis who consults the chef. In the halls the meals are planned so that the rations are balanced; and there is enough variety in Lathrop so that would make proper selection.

"The work is so systematized," said Miss Bemis, "that every person is out of the kitchen by eight at the latest and generally by 7:30."

Observation and Comment

By Mac Carrol Pattison

Among men of the world there exists a certain group upon whom America, particularly young America, though in many cases only young in ideas, looks with a different feeling than is tendered any other group. This group is composed of the athletic coaches of the country.

AND THEN THE COACHES

It is needless to say what many of them have done for our manhood, of what inspiration they have been the source, or what they have accomplished for innumerable educational institutions. That many a youngster has achieved an ideal through them is little enough to state. To them we owe much, and with Harvey T. Woodruff who in his column "In the Wake of the News" speaks his little piece on them we add our bit.

Fielding H. Yost's acceptance of the position of director of the new department of physical education at the University of Michigan is significant. Yost, at least well-to-do, perhaps independently wealthy, gave up a more lucrative business career for the, to him, more interesting and more important work of developing young America physically.

The significance lies in the growing national recognition of the need for systematic instruction in physical exercise. To The Wake it means a passing of the old time professional coach for the intelligent and trained athletic instructor.

Stagg of Chicago, in the days when salaries were lower than now, always said he had decided to give his life to teaching college boys sportmanship as well as sport, rather than to acquiring money. Who will say that men like Yost, Stagg, Huff at Illinois, Tom Jones at Wisconsin, and numerous others are not more useful in the world than the accumulators of dollars?

To have coaches of high standing is one of our hobbies. The high school and college boy receiving athletic instruction is at a period when his ideals of life are being formed. The coach naturally is a sort of hero to him. The right sort of man makes a lasting impression on that boy. That's why we think the teaching of fair play and a square deal to your opponents is so important, and why we want the best men who can be secured for our athletic coaches.

FUND SHORTAGE HITS HIGHWAYS

Reorganization of Department May be Needed, Says Hirst

Complete reorganization of the whole highway department of the state may be necessary due to the failure of the legislature to make adequate provisions for continuing the work of the commission on its present scale, A. R. Hirst, highway engineer, says in a statement today.

Meeting of the commission will be held Aug. 2 to discuss the proposed changes, which include the withdrawal of six parties of geologists now locating gravel deposits along highway routes, and the discontinuance of research work at the university.

"Plans for reorganization are now being considered," Mr. Hirst said, following return from a trip over the highways of the state.

The highway privilege tax bill contained provisions which would have made it possible for the organization to continue its operation on the scale necessary for the proper conduct of the work as now under way, and as expected under pending federal legislation, but this bill failed passage, and the commission has no resources beyond those made available by the legislature of 1919.

Report of the commission on the present condition of their building program is that it will be fully carried out. A drastic decrease in construction made necessary will not be felt until the second year of the biennium," Mr. Hirst says.

LIBRARY COURSE PROVES POPULAR WITH STUDENTS

Demand for Workers Heavy—Roll Now Open For Fall Term

With the demand for librarians exceeding the supply throughout the country, an excellent course which will make positions of this type available to those interested in library work, is being offered by the Library school of the university.

The enrollment for the Library school is fixed at 50 students, and as a result over 100 applicants from Canada and other states were turned away, for the summer session. Residents of Wisconsin and especially university students are given preference.

A college education is generally conceded to be a requisite for competent library work, but the Library school has arranged for a joint course with the College of Letters and Science providing for a student with senior standing to take the last year at the university in the Library school. The student will then receive full training in the school, and a degree of Bachelor of Arts, at the end of his four years at the university.

Juniors and those beginning their senior year this fall, who are interested in the course offered by the Library school, should call at the office on the second floor of the Madison Free Library, 206 N. Carroll street, to see Miss Mary E. Hazeltine, the Preceptor. Arrangements would be made as soon as possible because the enrollment for the year 1921-22 is nearly completed.

The central and No. 2 fire companies were called to extinguish a small blaze in a frame workshop owned by John Gallagher, S. Bedford st., last night. The fire was caused by a gasoline stove. Little damage was done.

THE DAINTY NORMA CHATS ON MOVIES, DRESS AND LIBERTY

"Thump! thump! thump!"

With a peach-bloom satin negligee draped tightly around her lithe form, Miss Norma Talmadge—queen of motion picture actresses—breezed nonchalantly into the reception room of the James H. Hansberry home, 1234 Sherman ave., where I awaited her. I had come to have a brief chat on Norma's views of the world and things. Hardly had her feet, clad in blue mules, left the stairs, before she raised a dainty hand in the air in greeting and remarked demurely: "Excuse my dress. I just came in from the most wonderful swim imaginable."

Her hair was still the least bit damp from the water. She had been bathing at the Tenney park beach and was thrilled with the sport which she had had in the water. We met in the center of the room and she extended her hand to meet mine. I could scarcely refrain from exclaiming:

"Why Norma, you are absolutely beautiful!"

And she is. I would have known her if I had seen her at a masked ball. Those deep, dark brown-eyes, thin and lovely lips and plaintive smile—one could not mistake them for another's. I walked with her to the davenport and we were seated. "And did you like the water?" I asked, more to hear her speak again than because that question would bring forth an answer of more than passing interest.

"It is a little warm I found," she said, "but I enjoyed it just the same. I am a little tired from the swim. I told the folks that I was going out for a swim and then I was coming right home and take a nap."

One could sit and listen to her for hours no matter what she talked about. Quiet and unassuming, Norma, who has at intervals thrilled and brought tears to the eyes of millions, sat beside me like a school girl, talking about ordinary things. "All my life I have wanted to meet you, Miss Talmadge, ever since—"

"And now that you have—oh, it's too bad it had to be when I have no makeup on."

Miss Talmadge will remain in Madison only a few days. She returns to New York to begin work on her latest picture, "Smiling Through," which Jane Cowl featured in successful runs at New York and in Chicago. She believes this will be her greatest success. "If there is such a thing," she does not take her position in the movie world with any degree of sophistication. To herself, she is plain Norma Talmadge, or if you please, Mrs. Joseph Schenck. She has attained fame and fortune through her love for the silent drama. She has aimed to please her admirers and she has succeeded.

"What is my greatest picture, you ask? I haven't any yet. I'm hoping that my next one will be. In almost any of your pictures, you know, you can take a scene here and there and say, 'Well, if the rest of it comes up to this, it will be all right.' I don't like anything I have done so far. Yes, I do too. I liked 'The Passion Flower,' but nobody else did. People didn't seem to get what I was trying to do, and that's the way it is—"

She talked of other pictures—'The Sign on the Door.' She rarely goes to see one of her own pictures, she said, except in the projection room. She used to see each of her productions but she became disgusted with the showing of 'The Passion Flower' in one of the Strand theaters in New York and vowed she would never go to see another.

"I went to see 'The Passion Flower' in a Strand theater in New York," she went on. "The orchestra played the Spring Song with one of the scenes and I thought I would die before it was over with. I vowed that I would never go to see another one of my pictures."

Miss Talmadge believes that music adds or detracts to an astonishing degree from a motion picture. Unlike so many of the screen stars of today, Miss Talmadge never appeared on the legitimate stage. She was barely 14 when she first became associated with moving picture work. She giggles when she refers to her first attempt.

"I saw Florence Turner and Maurice Costello playing together with the old Vitagraph company, and I said to my mother: 'That's what I'm going to do.' She said: 'Who are you, that you think you can do that?' I was painted up like an Indian in my first appearance on the screen. I ran in before the camera, flopped down over a dying man and breathed like this," she chuckled, waving her arm up and down, to imitate the emotion. "After that I just stuck around and stuck around, until here I am."

When I asked her if she did not think that most motion picture stars of today were the victim of circumstances, she replied in the negative. She believes that hard work gets most of them where they are, conceding that beauty plays its part, but refusing to admit that she is beautiful.

"If I had to depend on my good looks, how far do you suppose I would have gotten?" she replied shyly. "No, I think ability to act is the big thing."

The conversation drifted to what other stars were doing, and she discussed her sister, Natalie's marriage to Buster Keaton with eagerness.

"He is such a cute little fellow," she laughed, "and they look so cute together. We all hope they will have a child. Owen Moore is wonderful, too. Wasn't his marriage the funniest thing? You know they came over to the house the other night. I asked them to come in and they seemed a little bit bashful. I could not imagine why."

She paused a moment and looked up at me with a twinkle in her eye. She explained:

"Oh, the little devil! That's just what they'd done. I just know they were married the night before and didn't tell me a thing about it."

She talked about everything. She said she "loves" Madison, it is so beautiful.

"I love to come here on my vacation," she said. "It is so wonderful. Everything is so beautiful and quiet. This is my fourth visit here."

I could see that she was tired and did not want to detain her long from her nap. She followed to the door and with a girlish "bye-bye" she tripped up the stairs again.

"Short Skirts? I believe in them," said Miss Talmadge. "I think they are dead if not too extreme. What would I do if the horrible fashion of long tight skirts came back and we all would go hobbling along," this with a thumping of her dainty feet. "But why must we have all these modern reformers?" It seems to me that American people are so wonderful and prove themselves ready in crises, so why don't we trust them in the smaller things?"

Miss Talmadge is a most enthusiastic advocate of personal liberty. In speaking of prohibition she compared the situation in America at the present time with that in France where there are no Volstead acts.

"I never saw anyone drunk in Paris and it seems due to the fact that they enjoy lighter beverages, serve them entirely in place of the liquors which were formerly had in America. I think if we had done away with the evils of the saloon only and would have had wines and light liquors for use in the home only the results would have been more satisfactory."

And then, returning to the clothes question, Miss Talmadge spoke of rolled socks and exclaimed:

"As long as people are reasonable, I don't see any harm after all. We are only cooling our knees. As long as people insist on being reformers I think there will always be little and big evils in the world. And I think it is invariably true that, the more people talk against such things the more we will want to do them. But I will always believe in allowing American people to use their own judgment in meeting the problems of life."

START DRIVE FOR CHURCH

Methodist Students Begin Work for Wesley Foundation Fund

The Gives a Chance movement has been started by the Methodist students of the university to raise the second quarter of a million dollar endowment fund for the Wesley Foundation here. The campaign was started during the early part of July, and 30 teams of two people each are in the field. Each team works through the Methodist church in its home city. Here the students give talks to the congregations and explain to them the work of the Wesley Foundation and the need of more money for expansion.

The 30 teams, now in the field, have covered Eau Claire, Evansville, Gillette, Lake Geneva, Merrill, Milwaukee, Portage, Rittenburg, Readsburg, Shannon, Sun Prairie, Wausau and Wauwatosa.

The purpose of the campaign is to raise the second quarter million dollars of the one million dollar endowment fund. With these funds Wesley hall at Madison can be enlarged to take care of its university students, who wish to take academic courses in religion. Dr. E. W. Blakeman, Rev. E. Tetreau, Rev. H. Hare, J. B. Moore and Professor J. G. Moore have been conducting the classes during the past year.

The general chairman of the endowment campaign is Glenn Trevartha. R. P. Gerholtz is financial representative. Some of the students now addressing Methodist congregations throughout the state are: J. A. Anderson, E. M. Barnes, Mabel Bartholomew, Mildred Blakeley, L. E. Boies, H. Broods, A. Boehler, Marie McKittrick, Alice Spensley, Larry Hall and Calvin Wolfe of Madison; J. Abbott of Milton; K. Ames, S. G. Heath and R. W. Taylor of Kenosha; Josephine Bemis, Fern Constance and E. Godfrey of Waupaca; E. D. Brown at Hudson; R. Butler of Horicon; L. J. Cappin of Milwaukee; L. P. Chase at Fond du Lac; Ora Coe of Barron; S. Clark of Plainfield; Winifred Collier of Oshkosh; W. P. Corr of Juneau; H. L. Darnstaedt and D. E. McElroy of Racine; A. W. Edwards of Eau Claire; G. Mitchell of Boyd; Ruth Enkhausen of La Crosse; Ruth Mink of Lancaster; Russell Irish of Appleton; G. M. Halverson at Green Bay; J. H. Lugg and E. S. Watson of Whitewater and Irene Arndt of Crandon. It is planned to complete the campaign before school opens next September.

Local organizations which bring carnival companies to Wisconsin cities are urged to make sure that such companies carry compensation insurance in a statement issued today by the Industrial commission. Injury to any employee of the company places the individuals responsible for bringing the show to town responsible for compensation otherwise. County fair associations are similarly warned.

NEW SONG FOR STATE IS AIM OF COMPETITION

Two Prizes Offered For Words and Music—Contest Closes in October

Through the efforts of the Wisconsin Teachers' association of which Supt. of schools, B. E. McCormick, of La Crosse is president, a prize is to be offered at the annual meeting in Milwaukee, November 3, 4, 5, for a new state song.

As a result of correspondence with Prof. P. W. Dykema, chairman of the department of Public School Music at the university, in which a request was made for his services in leading the community singing at the convention, Supt. McCormick received the suggestion that two prizes be offered to stimulate the writing of a new state song, one of $25 for the best set of words and $25 for the best music to these words.

Anyone teaching in the state of Wisconsin may submit a text which must be in the hands of the committee on text-headed by Prof. Dykema, with Pres. A. M. Royce of Platteville and Mr. S. B. Tobey of Wausau assisting, before September 20. As soon as the committee has made a selection, the words will be published and a prize of $25 offered to the person writing the best music to suit them, the same to be presented to the committee on music before the middle of October. This committee is composed of Prof. Dykema, chairman, W. O. Meissner, Milwaukee, and W. P. Colburn, Rhinelander.

The idea of this contest is not to produce a song which will supersede our grand old martial air, "On Wisconsin," but to have a song of a different type.

THIRD DISCUSSION GROUP FOR DEANS TAKES UP DANCING

The third discussion group met yesterday in Lathrop hall for further consideration of topics of interest to deans of women and leaders of girls. These discussion groups have proved very interesting and helpful to the women who have attended, as proved by a good attendance and interest displayed in yesterday's discussion.

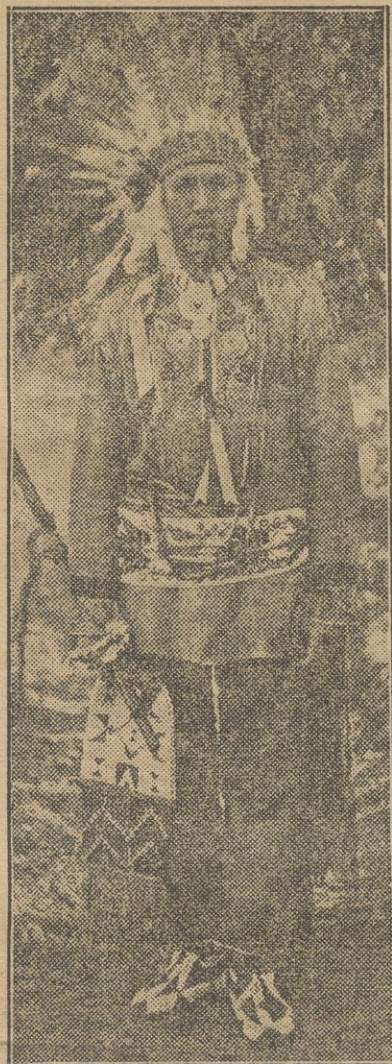

The meeting was led by Mrs. Parkhill of Oak Park, a woman who has had experience in social control by her leading position in such work in one of the large army camps during the war. Mrs. Parkhill related many of her experiences in managing dancing, plays and games. She had previously asked the attitudes of different people upon the dancing question, and she gave their views as well as her own. All reported in favor of dancing as one of the best places for young men to meet the right kind of young women. It is the general opinion of social workers that dancing if well regulated, has many less objectionable features than many other forms of social diversion such as autoing, and amusement parks.

The last 20-minutes was taken up by informal discussion and questions relating to High School dancing and its management to keep the highest possible standards. Mrs. Parkhill says it is her belief that the surest way to correct bad dancing is to appeal to the men, for their instinct of protection, in her experience, has always resulted in responses most desirable. The discussion was completed by a consideration of women's organizations in colleges, such as Women's Athletic Association, Y. W. C. A. and S. G. A.

ILLINOIS STUDENTS ENJOY STEAK FRY

About 40 Illinois students enjoyed a steak fry and picnic at Merrill springs Thursday evening. A special boat was chartered for the occasion and the picnic proved to be somewhat out of the ordinary, the picnickers declared. Following the broiling, games were played, a track meet held and by the light of the moon, the students made their return journey.

Sioux Indian Takes Leading Part in Cosmopolitan Revue

F. P. FRAZIER

The only student at the university of Wisconsin whose ancestors were in America before Columbus borrowed money from Isabella will take part in the "Cosmopolitan Revue" to be given by the International club at Open Air theater, July 30. He is F. P. Frazier a Sioux Indian from Oberlin college who will sing songs in his native language and give a number of typical Sioux war dances in the costumes of his tribe at the Revue.

"Music is the great uplifting force that must be used to bring about the social betterment of my race," declared Frazier who is specializing in music and sociology.

"At present we are in a stage of transition," he continued, "we are a queer conglomerate mentally of ancient beliefs trapped out in civilized apparel. For this reason I believe that only Indians who are educated for the work can help our people. White men who come to us as social workers so often cannot grasp the mental background against which they are trying to set up new ideals."

Music could easily be utilized, Frazier believes, as a form of community recreation because of the Indian's inherent love for it. A lack of wholesome amusement in the Indian settlements is one of the great menaces he sees in present conditions.

Entirely self-supporting since he finished the grades Frazier has worked his way through high school and college. He attended Dartmouth college one year before joining the army and then saw active service in both France and Germany and in addition was a member of a company of entertainers who visited many war camps and prisons abroad.

When he graduates from Oberlin college next June Frazier expects to go to New York for intensive training in social service work. After that he plans to make a survey of conditions in various Sioux communities as a basis for a constructive plan of social betterment to be worked out in cooperation with religious and social agencies.

STAUFFER GARNERS PRIZE IN SINGLES OF TENNIS TOURNEY

The Athletic Department announces that R. M. Stauffer of Manchester, Indiana, has won first place in the singles of the tennis tournament. Second place has been awarded to R. T. Phillips of Boston, Mass. The prizes consist of a gold medal for the winner of first place and a bronze medal for a winner of second place. Stauffer beat Phillips by a score of 6-4, 6-1. The games throughout the entire tournament were hard and fast.

The department is now ready to conduct the doubles of the tournament. The results of the drawings are posted on the bulletin board at the Gym office. The chart shows the name and telephone number of each opponent. Games are to be played by arrangement between the players. Each round in turn must be played off within two days. The winner of each round will fill in his name in the blank provided on the chart on the bulletin board. The Athletic department urges all contestants to begin work as soon as possible in order to avoid congestion at the end of the summer session. The prizes are a gold medal for the winner of first place and a bronze medal for the winner of second place. These medals will be on display at Sumner & Crampton Drug store as soon as they arrive. The Department is well pleased with the work done in the single tournament and feels sure that the doubles will also be a success.
