The Greatest Mother

Fashion Service

APPLETON REVIEW has arranged for a splendid new fashion service for women—Authentic, Indicating and Forecasting, as well as reporting Fashion Notes.

Madame E. H. Duval, in charge of the Paris Fashion Bureau of a large association of American manufacturers, will send a weekly letter direct from Paris. June Hamilton Rhodes, prominent New York fashion editor who has been in Appleton, will tell us what is new and fashionable in our own metropolis.

All the best of this we shall print for our feminine Reviewers.

After that it is up to the shops to supply what you want.

Local Order of Elks Initiate Large Class

One of the largest classes in the history of Appleton Elksdom was initiated into that order on Wednesday night of this week. The program formally opened with a dinner at 6:30 o'clock for the members and candidates. During the dinner the Elks band played a concert and was assisted by the new soloist, Miss Eileen Hanson of Seymour. Miss Hanson sang for her first number "My Hero," from the Chocolate Soldier. In this number she had ample opportunity to show off her wonderful range and power. She responded with an encore by singing "Little Mother." This was the number that scored so heavily for her at her first appearance as soloist of the 120th Field Artillery band. Miss Hanson is becoming more popular with each appearance and will again be heard at Lawrence Memorial chapel on November 25 at the regular free concert by the 120th Field Artillery band. At 7:15 the band was seated for dinner and Gene Konzelman presented his ladies' orchestra from Terrace Garden, in a half hour program. Needless to say the girls made a hit and it is the hope of all present that Brother Gene will again give the lodge a treat by presenting the girls at a future date. At 8 o'clock the lodge room was ready for the initiation of the candidates. All of the officers were in full regalia and to the music of the band the work was started.

After the candidates had been duly accepted into the order the exalted ruler's chair was turned over to Past Exalted Ruler J. P. Frank who, in behalf of the lodge, presented Major Chas. A. Green with a Gold Life Membership card as a token of appreciation for the many meritorious services rendered to the Appleton Elks lodge. Mr. Frank, in his eloquent address, pointed out the untiring efforts of Major Green as chairman of the house committee for the past six years and his very active participation in the affairs of the lodge.

After the ceremony Mr. C. E. Broughton of Sheboygan, past state president of the Wisconsin State Elks association, was presented to the lodge as district deputy. In a glowing tribute to A. A. Gritzmacher, exalted ruler, and his officers he spoke of the splendid way in which the initiation was conducted. Mr. Broughton congratulated the Appleton Elks as well as the city itself on the splendid musical organization sponsored here in Appleton and told of how he as president of the State Elks association had the privilege of announcing this organization over eleven of the largest radio stations on the western coast on their trip to the national Elks convention at Los Angeles. Mr. Broughton personally spent fifteen hundred dollars to make this trip possible for the Appleton band and said it was worth many times the amount in the way the band captured first prize against the many large cities represented at this convention.

On Thursday, November 20, a Thanksgiving party will be held at the club house and will be open to all Elks and their friends. Edward Mumm will be in charge of entertainment and a good time is assured for all who attend.

Red Cross Worker Visits Appleton

Mr. A. T. McCue of St. Louis, first aid and life saving representative of the American Red Cross, spent Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday of this week in our city demonstrating and instructing in his field. He gave short talks to the three local service clubs, the Rotary, the Lions, and the Kiwanis, spoke at the three junior high schools and at the senior high school, gave life saving demonstrations at the Y. M. C. A. and at Lawrence college gym, as well as giving the boy scouts a first aid demonstration. In between, he managed to find time for a trip to Seymour, where he put in several hours giving similar talks and demonstrations.

As a result of his visit it is planned to revive the Junior Red Cross in our city as a school project at the three junior high schools, where the work will be in charge of Miss Marguerite Roome of Roosevelt Junior high.

Sewer Connections for Grand Chute

Three sewers connecting property in the town of Grand Chute with the Appleton system were re-connected by the street department when records were found to show that the property owners had been given permission to hook up with the city sewer system and that the service had been paid for. The Grand Chute sewer problem had been discussed at several council meetings, but the connection was ordered severed when no record could be found in the official minutes of the council. However, in 1914 Adam Remley, then city engineer, granted permission for connection to two Grand Chute property owners, and a third Grand Chute resident paid $110 in April, 1922, for the privilege of connecting with the city sewer.

The first 2,270 mile nonstop flight from New York to France Field Canal Zone, was completed in 24 hours and 34 minutes, by Capt. Roy W. Ammel, Chicago airman.

County Board Considers Proposed Vigilante System Board Members Show Lack of Enthusiasm for Subject

Appleton's Share of Outagamie County Taxes Will Be 44 Per Cent for 1931

The first problem considered by the Outagamie County Board which went into session at the court house Tuesday afternoon was the proposed vigilante system, the matter having been pending for more than a year. An invitation had been extended to the members of the county board to attend a dinner sponsored by the Outagamie County Bankers association, at which time the project of establishing a vigilante system in the county was to be informally discussed. Roll call revealed that only six or eight members would be able to attend the dinner, and the county board, as a whole, was not satisfied that this important matter should be discussed outside of the board meeting. Supervisor A. W. Laabs of the town of Grand Chute, was emphatic in his assertion that the place for discussion of county business is before the county board, and he suggested that the bankers be asked to present their proposition before a meeting of the board. Other supervisors concurred in this opinion, and action on a proposed vigilante committee was laid aside until such time as the complete discussion is presented to the board. Both approval and opposition to the proposed system were voiced. The plan proposes a county appropriation of $1500 for protective equipment.

The highway commission submitted its report on the estimated funds available for county highway work during 1931. Of the total amount of $281,647.95, $45,234.53 is for the improvement of the county trunk system; $58,999.34 as federal aid in improvement of state trunk highways, the location to be determined by the highway committee; $119,500 as state aid, location to be determined by the highway committee; $57,914.08 for maintenance of the trunk highway system. These amounts are tentative, the exact amount not being available until the end of the fiscal year, June 30, 1931.

Chairman Mike Mack of the county board was instructed to attend the meeting called by Governor Kohler for mayors, county boards, and industrial leaders at Madison today for consideration of the state's unemployment problem. This was declared, in the argument that followed presentation of the resolution authorizing the chairman to attend, to be a state problem in which the county was vitally interested.

The assessed valuation of the county for taxation purposes is $124,424,244, according to the report of the board of equalization. The assessed valuation for 1929 was $125,392,366. Of this amount the city of Appleton represents a valuation of $55,272,960, a higher figure than a year ago when the valuation was placed at $54,900,210. In other words Appleton's share of the total county taxes will be 44.423 per cent. Towns will pay $40,730,268 or 32.735 per cent; villages, $15,020,804, or 12.072 per cent and cities $68,673,172 or 55.193 per cent.

The real estate valuation of Appleton, as shown by the board's report is $47,452,100 and personal property $7,820,860. The county's total real estate valuation is $107,741,360 and personal property $16,682,884.

A resolution was presented by Supervisor A. W. Laabs, Grand Chute, memorializing the state legislature to so alter the state law making it compulsory for the income tax assessors to confer with the boards of equalization before establishing final assessment figures. The members of the board under present conditions, have no voice in the determination of assessments, but merely place approval on the figures set by the assessor. The argument was advanced by some supervisors that they do not believe the assessment is on an equal basis everywhere, some localities being assessed at 40 per cent and others at 100 per cent. Supervisor Ryan pointed out that the basis of assessment made no difference if all districts were rated on the same basis.

The county board unanimously voted

HIGH WATER, LOW WATER AND COOPERATION

The movement inaugurated at the recent meeting held in Kaukauna to have the government raise the level of Lake Winnebago in order to insure a greater supply of water for flushing the lower river in periods of drought, such as we passed through this last summer, is receiving the co-operation of officials along the lower river. But it is sure to meet with very emphatic opposition from the residents of Fond du Lac and Oshkosh and of the districts along the Fox and Wolf rivers. These districts have suffered considerable loss in past years from high water, as a result of which there is constant agitation there for a reduction instead of an increase in lake levels. In Fond du Lac, especially, the situation has, at times, been serious and an increase of only a few inches in the height of the water, as now proposed, would have caused untold additional damage.

During the past summer the Review advocated opening the sluice gates at Neenah and Menasha to flush the lower river, even though the consequent lowering of the lake level might interfere with water traffic. Nothing was done in the matter and somehow the lower valley passed through the season without suffering an epidemic. We may not be so fortunate next time and it would seem that now is the time to obtain a ruling from the war department permitting the lowering of the lake level in times like the past summer.

There can be no question but that the interests of navigation would suffer, but they are relatively unimportant when compared with the health and welfare of the thousands of people living in the territory.

During periods of high water, which occur frequently, the residents of the upper basin of the Fox and of the lower Wolf suffer and a raising of the lake levels would greatly increase this suffering and damage. Periods such as we are now passing through, occur only occasionally and at such times the interests of navigation should be subordinated to the needs of the health and welfare of the people living along the lower river.

Instead of the interests along the lower river uniting to fight the demands of the residents of the district around Lake Winnebago and the Upper Fox, why not get together and talk things over amicably? Undoubtedly a plan could be worked out which would minimize the damage from high water in the upper stretches of the river, while at the same time furnishing water for flushing the river in periods of abnormal drought.

INTERCEPTING SEWER FOR VALLEY

Review's program for a clean city includes a proper disposal of waste of all kinds—an adequate incinerator for garbage and a safer and less destructive method of sewage disposal.

Let us clean up the "dumps" and beautify the grounds. Let us clean up the river and beautify that.

Appleton and other cities of the valley dump their sewage into the Fox river. Appleton takes its water supply from the Fox river. It has been so for many years and by dint of great watchfulness and extreme and constant care we have managed to escape the possible dire consequences. Experts guard our water supply and it is "safe," but—

We have stood up and charged the manufacturers with "polluting" our streams with waste chemicals resulting from manufacturing processes and killing the fish we had a right to be taking from the stream, but we have been strangely silent about our own guilt in the matter—dumping in the sewage of our towns year after year in an ever increasing quantity.

The state board of health is suggesting that cities of the valley unite in creating a sanitary district, build an intercepting sewer which shall lead to a sewage disposal plant located perhaps at or near Kaukauna. This would serve the entire district and each town's share would be pro-rated according to some fair way agreed upon by all.

The sewer could be laid along the margin of the river and it has been suggested that a scenic drive might be built upon it. The plan would do away with a dangerous and noise-some condition and at the same time beautify a noble stream that is a valuable asset to these communities and has been favorably compared to the historic Rhine for scenic beauty.

NEW NATIONAL PARK

After much discussion Great Smoky Mountains National park is at last an accomplished fact, title to the land donated by North Carolina and Tennessee having been accepted by the federal government. The people of the United States have another new and magnificent playground.

With the industrial life of the nation shaping itself toward more leisure for the great mass of people, the national park idea is one of the finest things our government is doing.

Year after year, tourists by the thousands travel to and fro over the land to visit and refresh themselves in these stretches of unspoiled natural beauty. The more we have of them the more easily accessible will they be to everyone.

The Great Smoky region fully deserves to be included in the list with the fifteen or sixteen others set aside by the national government for the enjoyment of their beauties and benefits by the people. Because, with the exception of Acadia National park in Maine, open all the year, our national parks lie mostly west of the Mississippi, and in the "far west" at that, the Great Smoky park will be doubly welcome on account of its proximity to the great eastern centers of population which, no doubt, will contribute enormous crowds during the next few years.

THE COST OF KEEPING WELL

A great hospital in Omaha, Wise Memorial, is making an experiment in reducing its charges for hospital service, and according to the World-Herald, Omaha is "watching with hopeful eyes" the result of this experiment, feeling that the decision to reduce rates all along the line is one of the "most helpful acts of public service" that has been made recently in that community.

The high cost of keeping well has mounted so rapidly in the last decade or so that it has become quite a problem to many. Not the rich who can readily pay for expert medical and surgical attention. A suite in a hospital, a whole staff of nurses, expert care, are a matter of course to them. Not the very poor, who, when they must ask for charity, also receive good care. These are not vitally affected by rates.

There is, however, a tremendously large number between these two extremes, without money enough to afford the best, too proud to ask for help, who have denied themselves the services of doctors and the care of hospitals, because they could not pay the bills. This group would be greatly benefited by hospital reductions and many of them would find it possible to safeguard the health of themselves and their families in a way now denied them.

It is to be devoutly hoped that the splendid experiment will succeed and become a permanent practice in Omaha and that it will be copied all over the country.

At the end of a day every man knows whether or not he has done a fair day's work.

Grand officers and their escorts, patrons and matrons from the Clintonville, New London, Sheboygan, Chilton, Menasha, Oshkosh, Green Bay, and DePere lodges, and visitors from Wausau and Manawa were in attendance. Talks were given by Mrs. Laura Baker, Beloit, grand matron, and J. B. Wagg, grand patron. Mrs. Jennie Dower, Janesville, spoke in behalf of the past grands, and Mrs. Emma Morrissey, Chilton, spoke for the appointive grands. A musical program was presented under the direction of Miss Freda Kopplin. Cards provided entertainment later in the evening, prizes being awarded to Mrs. Lee Wilcox, Janesville; Mrs. D. G. Bialkowsky, Mrs. David Smith, and Mrs. George Dambruch.

James B. Wagg, recently elected grand patron of the grand lodge, Order of Eastern Star, was host to the grand officers and their escorts at a 9:30 breakfast at the Conway hotel Thursday morning. There were 30 guests, all of whom were also guests at the party given by the Fidelity chapter at Masonic temple Wednesday evening in honor of Mr. Wagg.

Thirty-two tables were in play at the card party sponsored by Group 1 of St. Theresa church Wednesday evening. Mrs. Clarence Tibbets and Mrs. Katherine Weyenberg had charge of the party. Prizes were won by George E. Moder and Mrs. H. Eggert at bridge; John Timmers, Albert J. West, Mrs. Huhn, and Gertrude Recker at schafskopf; Juliana Laux and Mrs. John Stoffel at dice; and Mrs. Henry Kraus at plumpusk.

How To Play The New Backgammon

By Lelia Hattersley

LESSON II

Playing the Game

At the outset of the game of backgammon the men are set up on the various points in the positions indicated. It will be noted that the White men on any point have exactly the corresponding number of Black men placed opposite them. Each contestant sits on his own side of the board and plays from that position.

The object of the game is for a player to move all his men into his inner table and then throw or bear them off from the board before his adversary can accomplish the same end, all of a player's moving and bearing off being made in accordance with numbers indicated by the successive casts of his dice.

A player's line of march is from his opponent's inner table to his outer table, thence across to his own outer table, into his own inner table, and finally (when all his own men have reached his inner table) off the board. As indicated by the arrows in Diagrams I, Article I, when the men are set up with the inner tables as illustrated, the men in Black's position move clockwise, while those in White's move counter-clockwise. Thus the opposing men are continually meeting and passing each other.

A game is started by each contestant throwing one die. In case of a tie, the players throw again until one or the other throws a higher number. The player with the higher cast makes the first move for which he must adopt both the numbers thrown. For example, if White's cast is a five and Black's a two, White makes the first move, using the five and two as his numbers.

After the first play each contestant in turn throws two dice from his own cup into the portion of the board at his right and makes his moves accordingly. A player can move a man as many points as there are spots on the face of the thrown dice, counting from but not including the point on which the man starts. A different man can be moved for each die, or the whole throw can be taken with one man in two distinct moves, corresponding exactly to the number of spots on each of the dice.

A move must always be made if possible. When all possible moves are blocked, the player loses his throw. If, however, he can play one but not both of his numbers, he must play the higher.

Any number of men of the same color may be placed on one point.

A move may be made to any point unless that point is occupied or blocked by two or more of the enemy's men. For example, on White's opening play of five and two, he could not move one of his men from Black's inner table on the five throw because the point to which this move would carry him is blocked. Nor could White take the whole throw of seven with one man, because he could use the two as the first move to a free point, the second move of five with the same man would land him on another of Black's blocked points. It must be remembered not only that a man is forbidden to stop on point blocked by the opposite color, but that he can never even use it as a temporary resting place in essaying a double move. A blocked point may, however, be jumped. For example, had White's opening throw been a six and Black's a two, White using these two numbers for his first play could have moved a man from Black's inner table, jumping Black's first blockade on the six move and his second on the two.

What They Say

Suggests Jones Park for the Garbage Incinerator

Editor Review:—Has the city council ever considered Jones Park as a site for the proposed garbage incinerator?

The advantages of such a location would be obvious. It is centrally located; almost as much so as the fair grounds. Access could be had from both Appleton and Elm streets, so that there would be no congestion of traffic or delay for the delivery trucks. At very little expense the grounds could be beautified, so that they would compare very favorably with the grounds surrounding the incinerator plant at Shorewood, one of the wealthy suburbs of Milwaukee, where the plant stands in the midst of residences costing as much as $25,000. Putting the incinerator in Jones Park would also do away with the necessity of disturbing the city sheds on the fair grounds before they fall down and at the same time would prevent any inconvenience to the coal and lumber yards, the garages, the butcher shops and switching yards and other institutions in the neighborhood of the fair grounds.

In all fairness this site should be thoroughly investigated before finally deciding upon a location for the new incinerator.

The Plains of Abraham

A Masterpiece of Fiction by James Oliver Curwood

INSTALLMENT II

It was the aliveness of this fireplace which had drawn the expression of surprise and pleasure from Catherine—that and the aroma of cooking things which greeted them. Since Catherine's earliest memories, her brother had boasted of his excellence as a cook, and most assuredly he had been busy since his unexpected arrival. Half a dozen chains were dropped from their bolts in the thick oak lug-bar of the fireplace seven feet above the fire, and from the pothooks at the end of these chains were suspended as many pots and kettles, steaming and boiling and giving forth a cheerful sound of dancing pewter lids against which the bubbling water was playing an animated and pleasing melody. But to Henri, who always loved the sound of these busy pots with their lively cheer and promise of supper, a still more delectable thing was the great roast of venison which Hepsibah had hung before the fire.

Catherine took off her cape and hood and patted her hair more properly into place before a mirror hanging on the wall. Henri knew how fast her heart was tripping as he took her hands and held them for a moment and saw a mist of tears behind her lashes. It had been two years since she had seen Hepsibah, two years of yearning and praying and hoping for this irresponsible brother, the last of her close blood ties, who came and went with the inconstancy of the winds and yet had never succeeded in spoiling her dream of having him some day as a permanent member of her little family. Each time he came to them, Hepsibah was full of promise, swearing upon his soul that he had made up his mind to remain with them forever, as Catherine pleaded with him to do; and then, some day or night, he would disappear with all his belongings, and no one would see or hear him go, and it might be six months, or a year, or, as in this instance, even longer before he returned, ready to promise and swear upon his soul all over again but sure to steal away in the end as before.

Each time that he came, he bore a huge pack on his shoulders, as if partly in penance, and the opening of this pack and the distributing of its contents had come to be the biggest event in Jeems' life, and also in his mother's in a slightly less degree. But Jeems had no trespassing thought of the never-failing bundle as he went back for his gun in the company of his beloved Uncle Hep. At the most providential of moments, his hero of all heroes was at his side, and securing this mighty personage's pledge of secrecy he lost no time in telling him about the boy he hated. Marking the grip of Jeems' hand, and catching the telltale tremble in his voice, Hepsibah sat down upon the bag of ground corn and did not leave it until by shrewd questioning and sympathetic interest he had drawn from Jeems' heart a large part of what it had withheld from his parents. At a second loud blowing of Henri's dinner horn they rose to their feet, and as Hepsibah shouldered the corn, his round red face was like a full moon of promise and cheer.

"It doesn't take size to win a fight, Jeemsy," he said, speaking in a confidential way. "Barring this Dutchman at Albany, I've never been rib-roasted by a big man yet, and I'm only tolerable sized, you observe. I've always had a reasonable preference for the big ones, come as come can, for they are slower to move and fall harder, and nine out of ten of them carry fat.

This Paul Tache, now—I know by your telling of him that you can cob and comb him until he begs for mercy. It's all what you've got your mind made up to, Jeemsy—nothing more and nothing less. And you've got your mind made up to warm him, so go and do it, I say."

Catherine came around the corner of the cabin to meet the plotters, and Hepsibah discreetly held back further words as he winked broadly at Jeems.

It was the great night of two long years in the Bulain cabin, and Catherine's three Betty lamps and her Phoebe lamp and a dozen candles as well were lighted in honor of it, so that when darkness fell thick and starless about the wilderness, with masses of rain clouds gathering overhead, the home at the edge of Forbidden valley was bright with glow and cheer. The roast was cut open, and with attendant dishes of sukqu-tahash, johnnycake, potatoes, and carrots, and hasty pudding with maple sirup, gave opportunity for such feasting that an hour was well gone before Hepsibah Adams thrust back his end of the long table bench and brought forth his fat pack from under the stairs which led up to Jeems' sleeping loft.

"Just a few little trinkets," he began, using the identical words he had employed one year after another. "A few whim-whams and baubles for the boy, a bit of trumpery for Sister, and a farthing worth of nothing in particular for you, Henri. Ah, here we have the first package with writing on it in the hand of the scholar who sold me the goods—a cap, a ruffle, a tucker, and a bolt of lace at five shillings a yard! Now who in this room can such sillies be for—unless—" and at Catherine's delighted exclamation he tossed the bundle to her. But scarce had she opened it, with her eyes intent upon her business, then Hepsibah unfurled a red silk petticoat in the candle glow, and this time Catherine sprang to her feet with an amazed intake of breath, for so well had Hepsibah arranged his surprise that, one after another, he had a white love-hood, a black love-hood, and three more petticoats on the table—one of scarlet with black lace, one of colored druggat with pointed lace, and a third of black silk with ash-gray lining; and as Catherine stood gazing upon these treasures fit for a queen he added to them two pairs of stays for an eighteen-inch waist, and then showered over them such an array of lace drowlas, gorgets, piccadillies, and other neckerchiefs that Catherine closed her eyes for a moment and then opened them wide as if there might be a chance of some clever trickery in it.

"Dear Mother in heaven!" she cried. "Are all of these ravishing things for me? They must have cost a fortune!" pausing to look at her smiling brother and at the same time holding up the scarlet petticoat with black lace. "This one, for instance—"

"Two pounds fifteen shillings," said Hepsibah, opening his pack wider and working his hands quickly. "And to go with these dresses I have here ruffles and tuckers and threads and buttons and ribbons, and four pairs of the nicest shoes that ever came up the Hudson," and placing these last-named articles on the table with a flourish of arms, Hepsibah gave a gloating chuckle and paused to fill his pipe.

Jeems' heart was near breaking with suspense, and it seemed to give an audible crack when his Uncle Hep's gnarled hands went into the pack again. He drew a bulky package from his store and passed it to Jeems' father.

"Three of the finest pipes I ever laid my eyes on," he announced. "One made in Holland, one in London, and one in America, and five pounds of Virginia tobacco to go with them, Henri, along with a hat, a coat, and a pair o' boots that may take you with honor to any swoiree or gentry merry-making this side of the sea. Now, how's that?" And he stepped back as if his pack were entirely empty and held nothing at all for Jeems.

For an eternity, it seemed to Jeems, his uncle remained in this terrifying posture. Then, with deliberate and aggravating slowness, Hepsibah Adams returned to his pack.

No one of the three who were watching him would ever have guessed that Hepsibah's act was one weighted heavily with the force of destiny, nor that with dramatic inevitableness it was to change the course of human lives, bringing the high down to earth, and the earthly to great heights, loosing passions and hatreds and loves, breeding tragedies and joys, and ending at last, in what it is the purpose of this humble chronicle of human events to narrate.

A swift-coming thought, a deft return into the pack of a small bundle which he had intended for Catherine, and Hepsibah had changed a world. On such trivial happenings do the most powerful of the fates sometimes rest. Out of the farthest corner of the collapsing pack he brought this bundle to light once more and unwrapped it as he turned toward Jeems' big-eyed, anxious face.

"Jeemsy," he said, "if I've put the notches in my memory right, you were born on the coldest January day I ever saw, and that makes you just twelve years and four months old this evening, which means that only three years and eight months lie betwixt you and the day when you can be counted a man. According to law, you are a king's subject of maturity from that day and can take life and all its belongings into your own hands, so long as you are honest about it, and can stand up in equality before the stiffest periwigged judge in the Colonies or New France. In other words, Jeemsy, I mean that in less than four short years you will be a full-fledged man!"

Having delivered himself of this introductory peroration Hepsibah finished unwrapping the package, and never had Catherine beheld such a handsome piece of velvet as that which her brother displayed in the candle glow. It was, par excellence, the finest of the treasures he had brought, a cloth of matchless beauty, a crimson glory so filled with changing humors and colors that it seemed to be alive in his hands. Surely this was another present for his mother, Jeems thought. But to his amazement and Catherine's surprise Hepsibah thrust the cloth into Jeems' hands.

"For Mademoiselle Marie Antoinette Tonteur from her devoted admirer, Daniel James Bulain," he announced. "Jeemsy, don't blush. Twelve and ten are not far from sixteen and fourteen, when you will be man and woman, and if ever a seigneur's daughter finds herself lucky it will be on the day she marries a son of the tribe of Adams. The writing on it, Jeemsy, tells where it came from and how much it cost; and along with it I have brought you some nankeen for britches and clothes, four shirts, and a three-cornered hat with a black ribbon, six handkerchiefs, and a jackknife, two pairs of serge britches, as many of new shoes, and—this," and from the now completely emptied pack he drew forth a beautiful long-barreled pistol, his eyes aglow with a fighting man's pride as he fondled it in the light of the candles and pointed out its merits to Jeems. "As long as you live, you must never part with this pistol, Jeemsy," he said. "It isn't new, you see, but its record is one of glory as long as my arm, and I'll tell you about it some day. It's a killer, lad, a killer deadly and sure, good for a hundred paces with less than an inch of drop," and he gave the weapon into Jeems' hands.

An instant of disapproval gathered in Catherine's eyes.

Byrd Tells of Adventures Into Land of Frozen South

The Great Admiral Tells His Story with Charm and Sincerity

To hear from Admiral Byrd's own lips his story of that tremendous, unparalleled adventure into the land of the frozen South! To see and to be in the presence of this great American hero whose vision, courage and daring made possible the greatest exploring feat of our generation, an adventure as romantic as the voyage of Columbus—this is the thrill the people of Appleton and neighboring towns will have next Wednesday evening, when the great explorer will speak at Lawrence chapel and illustrate his lecture with motion pictures made under his direction.

No one will forget this great story so simply and vividly told by the man who lived it. No one will forget contact with Admiral Byrd, or willingly miss the chance to be a part for one matchless evening of that gallant band of men who rolled back the horizon of the world and planted the Stars and Stripes on the southernmost point of the globe.

The Antarctic has kept her own secrets locked in her crystal citadel at the bottom of the world for countless ages. At least two men, within our ken, have struggled afoot to reach the center of her stronghold—Amundsen, who returned to tell the tale, and Scott, who perished on his journey. Then Byrd, winged with the genius of man's invention, soaring over 1,600 miles of glittering ice-bound silence reaches the Pole, straight as an arrow unswerving in its perfectly planned, perfectly timed flight. Here is a marvel to spur on the conquerors, and stir the imagination of all.

Admiral Byrd has a delightful personality, a winning smile and a cordial friendliness that make it easy to understand his leadership of men. He is a fine speaker and tells the story of his adventure and achievement with extraordinary charm and sincerity.

Local Company Entertains Forty Chicago Printers

Forty members of the North Side Printers Guild of Chicago were in Appleton Wednesday and Thursday as guests of the Fox River Paper company. The Chicagoans arrived Wednesday afternoon in a special car and were met at the station by a delegation from the paper company, which escorted them to the Conway hotel where they were entertained during the evening. Thursday morning they inspected the plant of the Badger Printing company recognized as one of the most modern in this part of the country, and the plant of the Fox River Paper company, where they were taken through the various departments and shown the making of high grade writing and bond papers in all its stages, from the bales of rags to the finished product, ready for the printer. Luncheon was enjoyed at the North Shore Country club and in the afternoon the Telulah mill of the Fox River Paper company was inspected, after which the visitors returned to Chicago.

November

Soft white moonlight nights—misty mornings—golden noons—hazy afternoons flaming into brilliant sunsets, then fading into early blue and purple twilight—cobalt sky, thickly inlaid with glittering stars—browner leaves—grayer skies—wilder winds. Apple trees and lilacs shuddering off their clinging green in rough easterly gusts. But—tucked away in a lovely garden on Green Bay street, CROCUSES IN BLOOM.

Many a man who is called a dreamer is really only a sleeper.

Green is indicated as a color that soothes the nerves. It is—unless we are looking at a big green expanse of lawn that has to be mowed.

Young ladies at high school are learning to type to music. What if one of them gets a job as steno in a boiler factory? Well, she'll have her memories anyway.

Saw an airman overhead. Saw a bird light gently and comfortably on a barbed wire fence. Airman still has something to learn from bird, thought I.

"Why spend money to cut down sturdy, hopeful, little green trees to tie to lamp posts for a week or two and then dump?" says one who loves the growing things.

BUYING FABRICS FOR HOME USE

The woman in the home, the homemaker, is the purchasing agent for that institution—even to buying most of the things that the men in the home use. A large part of these purchases is fabrics, textiles, and Ruth O'Brien, Chief of the Textile division in the federal bureau of home economics, rises to ask what we know about them.

When we home makers go to make our purchases, how much real information do we have regarding the various qualities of the articles offered us? How many of our choices are made on the basis of some gayly colored advertisement, which after all gave us only an inspired feeling and really told us nothing? How often do we base our selection entirely on the prices asked?

In other words, how many purchases are sheer guesses? If we are honest with ourselves, we will admit that practically all of them are made in one of these ways.

This is particularly true of textile materials. Time was, when the number of different fabrics on the market was so small, and our experience with them so intimate, that we really could judge quality. But today, there are literally thousands of different kinds of materials on the dry goods counters.

Most of them have been christened fancy names, which mean very little to us. Often they are made of new fibers about which we know nothing.

However, there are some of us who believe that, if this important business of home making is to be carried on successfully, it must first of all be based on sound business principles. And no business succeeds unless its purchasing is done intelligently. This means it must be done on the basis of facts and not by guess.

For example, when the Government buys sheets for the Government hospitals, definite specifications as to thread count, tensile strength, weight and amount of finishing material, are set up, and the sheeting furnished must comply with these specifications. Wouldn't it help us, if, when deciding between three or four different brands of sheets at the dry goods counter, we could know these facts about each and thus be able to determine which one best serves our purpose?

Some people insist that women will not take the trouble to learn the meaning of terms like tensile strength, thread count and such. And, of course, if we are to discuss the qualities of various articles intelligently, we must know the words which describe them accurately.

But it is my experience that we will all learn even very technical words if we are interested in the subject. And women are certainly interested nowadays in doing more efficient purchasing.

I believe that the consumers of this country can become as well informed as any purchasing agent. Having lived through the period in which women have acquired a working knowledge of such terms as calories, vitamin, and proteins, I have faith that they can learn the significance of any descriptive terms necessary to a working knowledge of fabric specifications.

An eminently worthwhile subject for a whole series of programs for the women's clubs, this job of buying textiles.

Radio-Electrola with Home Recording

It has always been our policy to handle only the outstanding sets in the radio field. Present day buyers of new radio receivers are in the market for permanency in their investment. This factor is dependent on a product that is up-to-date in general design, that is capable of truthful reproduction of both speech and music, and that is backed by a manufacturer of long experience in making high grade equipment in the same line or closely allied lines.

For that reason we confine our lines to these leaders: the Stromberg-Carlson, Victor, and Bosch, knowing that there is nothing to compete with these sets in their respective price-class.

We have on display all the latest models and styles for every home—come in or call us for a demonstration.

GARDEN CLUBS MEET IN MADISON NEXT WEEK

Fruit growers, nurserymen and garden club members of the state will gather in joint convention at Madison next week Wednesday to Friday, according to announcement by the Wisconsin Horticultural society.

More than seventy-five years ago the county board of supervisors adopted a resolution to the effect that in their opinion "the organization of agricultural societies in this country has proved eminently beneficial to the agricultural and manufacturing interests and has a direct tendency to stimulate to increased action all departments of industry," and so they recommend that the "citizens of the several towns in this county meet at the National Hotel in the village of Appleton, on the second day of January next for the purpose of organizing a county agricultural society."

The society was duly organized and we find it commended for giving "great encouragement to agriculture, horticulture and stock raising" early in the 50's. It has persisted all these years in one form or another of the various associations for improving cattle, hogs, horses, sheep, poultry, grains, fruit, and flowers, and in all probability descendants of those early proponents of better products from our lands will sit in at the sessions next week.

An exhibit of fruit and a contest for flower arrangement and luncheon table decoration by garden club members and amateurs are to be convention features.

Certificates of honorary recognition are to be presented to outstanding horticulturists by Gov. Kohler.

County Board Considers Proposed Vigilante System

to become affiliated with the Wisconsin County Boards association and instructed the chairman to attend the meeting of that organization. A number of requests for refunds of taxes illegally collected were referred to the tax committee. Petitions for road improvement funds were referred to the highway committee. The board was asked by Supervisor Jansen of Little Chute to adopt a resolution approving raising of the lake level. A number of reports were read and filed.

The matter of creating a fund toward the establishment of a county poor home was laid over to the November, 1931, session of the board. The committee, of which F. O. Smith, Hortonville, is chairman, advised deferring action as the county is not in a position now to make an appropriation toward such a fund.

Two members of the library board, Frank Younger, and F. P. Young, appeared before the county law makers and asked that the appropriation made by the county toward the library, $500, be increased if possible. Their messages disclosed that there are now 702 county borrowers while a year ago there were 609. The per capita cost per borrower is $1.70, and while no definite amount was asked, the per capita cost was suggested as a tentative basis for determining the amount of the appropriation.

Just prior to the noon adjournment, Supervisor T. H. Ryan presented the county court house problem. It is evident, he said, that within a very short time the county will be compelled to construct a new court house, the present one now being in a deplorable condition. While economy is the keynote of this session of the board, Mr. Ryan pointed out that delay in constructing one unit of the new court house would be false economy. He reminded the board that there is already available the sum of $110,000 in the court house fund, and with an additional appropriation of about $50,000 the first unit could be constructed now, at a saving to the county. Investigation had revealed to him, he reported, that on the price of material alone the county, if it built the unit next year, could save about $25,000. On the other hand, immediate construction would take up some of the labor surplus and give men an opportunity to earn their livelihood who otherwise might become county charges. He stated that both federal and state executives had urged municipalities to engage in whatever improvement work they possibly could to relieve the unemployment. One unit could be constructed in the spring, and the other two units deferred perhaps for several years, Mr. Ryan said. The matter was presented to the board, Mr. Ryan declared, early in the session so that the individual members would have time to investigate the matter, inspect the court house and talk with contractors regarding the probable saving in cost if the work were done this next spring.

Wednesday the members of the board were guests at the annual dinner at the county asylum. Thursday morning was taken up with a discussion of the proposed vigilante system. Opinions were found to differ widely, with the majority sentiment opposed to the system as proposed. The matter was finally laid over and will again be taken up later in the session.

Presbyterian Church Celebrates Anniversary

Memorial Presbyterian church observed its sixtieth anniversary with a supper and program at the church Thursday evening. Dr. Herbert M. Moore, pastor of the church from 1907 to 1912, was toastmaster. Dr. Moore also gave an address on "Looking Back." Rev. Louis P. Peeke, Fond du Lac, who supplied the pulpit at the Presbyterian church for a while, gave an address on "Looking Around." Dr. John R. Denyes of Lawrence college gave a talk on "Looking In;" Rev. E. W. Wright, Menominee, Mich., and moderator of the synod of Michigan, "Looking Up;" Mrs. Mable O. Shannon, president of the Ladies' Aid society, "A Woman's Way of Looking at Things;" and the Rev. R. A. Garrison spoke on "Looking Forward." Music was furnished during the supper by Miss Eloise Smeltzer, violinist, accompanied by Miss Annette Heller, and by the Mandolin orchestra. Mrs. Frank W. Schneider read greetings from absent members.

The Presbyterians held services in Appleton in 1850, the year after the settlement of Appleton. The first distinctly Presbyterian organization was established in 1870, the services being held at the Edgerton house. For eight years the Presbyterians and Congregationalists worshiped as one congregation. The society of the Memorial Presbyterian church was organized in 1879, so named in memory of David Smith, who left a legacy for the erection of a new church building.

The Ladies' Aid society served the supper, the committee in charge including Mrs. Mabel Shannon, Mrs. H. T. Johnson, Mrs. F. W. Clippinger, Mrs. F. F. Martin, Mrs. G. F. Werner, Mrs. O. E. Clark, Mrs. J. A. Wood, and Mrs. Louis Fleck.

D. J. Kenny Speaker At Legion Celebration

Three hundred guests, including five veterans of the German army, members of the city council and county board, and members of the Oney Johnson Post of the American Legion attended the annual Armistice day celebration held at Rainbow Gardens Tuesday evening. The dinner was served by the auxiliary unit.

The Rev. L. D. Utts, rector of All Saints Episcopal church, gave the invocation. Music was furnished by the Rainbow Gardens orchestra.

A school bell, used to sound an alarm during the revolutionary war, was presented to the post by Mrs. Eva Gurnee. Robert Connelly told the history of the bell, and Fred Heinritz, commander of the post, accepted it. Mrs. Harold Miller, president of the auxiliary, reported that the auxiliary had gone over the top in the 1931 membership race. The post, according to a report made by Commander Heinritz, forwarded 453 memberships to Milwaukee headquarters in the Armistice day airplane drive.

Vaudeville skits, "Moonshine" by J. F. Bannister and Martin VanRooy, and "Revenge" by Mr. Bannister, Harry Oaks, and Robert Connelly were presented after community singing of war songs. The principal address of the program was given by D. J. Kenny, West Bend, a former commander, and chef de gare of the national 40 and 8. The Rev. L. D. Utts gave a tribute to the departed comrades, after which taps were sounded, and the program closed with the singing of the national anthem.

Noisemakers and hats were distributed to the guests, and the floor cleared for dancing.

Holiday Fruit Cake

Of course, we want fruit cake for Thanksgiving and Christmas and New Year. Thank goodness, that is one of the things we can get out of the way early and here is a rule for a most excellent quality as it is made by one of Appleton's prominent home makers.

1 scant cup butter, 1 cup brown sugar, 2 cups white sugar, 6 whole eggs beaten, ½ teaspoon cloves, 2 of cinnamon, ¼ teaspoon nutmeg; 1 lemon, juice and grated rind; 3 cups cracker crumbs (large soda crackers), 4 tablespoons grape juice or other fruit juice; 1 cup sour milk, ½ teaspoon soda in the milk; 1 cup flour, 1 cup walnut meats (coarsely chopped), 1 lb. each currants, small raisins, large raisins, mixed candied fruit; 1 pkg. dates (10 oz.), ½ lb. figs; ¾ teaspoon salt.

Cut large raisins in half, dates and figs in medium pieces; mix butter, sugar, eggs, spices, milk and salt. Add fruit; then crackers and flour.

Bake in 3 loaves for 3 hours in a slow oven. Have the burners moderate for the first five minutes, then low until finished. Do not increase heat.

What Is Pasteurized Milk?

Pasteurization is the process by which certain bacteria are destroyed and milk and other fluids are kept from deteriorating and decomposing. Certain degrees of heat over definite periods are employed, determined by research begun by Louis Pasteur, a French chemist who became famous during the eighties and nineties.

Pasteurized milk, as it comes on the market, is milk which has been heated to between 142 and 145 degrees and held at that temperature for a period of 30 minutes and then quickly cooled. It is not boiled milk, and nothing is added to or taken from the milk. The object of pasteurization is to market milk which shall be free from certain bacteria which may be carried in the milk and produce disease in the consumer.

The presence of tuberculosis in some cattle and undulant fever among farmers and people who live in small towns and cities led to the "drive" for pasteurizing milk. In many cities it is a requirement of city health ordinances.

Physicians and chemists have demonstrated that streptococci are killed by a temperature of 129 maintained for one-half minute. Diphtheria bacilli are killed by the same heat and time exposure. Typhoid bacilli are killed by a temperature of 132 for thirty minutes; tubercle bacilli by 138 for the same length of time. The bacillus of undulant fever by a temperature of 131 for one hour according to Dr. Evans, of Chicago, writing for the Chicago Tribune.

Washing Fabric Gloves

Since millions of pairs of fabric gloves are being worn, it is well to know how to give them the care which will preserve their good looks and wearing qualities.

To wash these gloves successfully use pure soap and cold water. Rinse and wring thoroughly, as any soap left in the gloves will discolor them. Pull lengthwise and lay flat between the folds of a towel until dry. Do not hang up. A little salt added to the water will prevent colored embroidery from running.

Friendly Neighbors

Freddy said to John, "I wish your Gran-ma would write a Bird Story for me!" And John said, "Let's ask her; I'm sure she will!" So this is the story she wrote for Freddy:

The Birds Who Do Not Go To Sleep at Night

It was evening in late summer; the sun had gone down and the sky was so beautiful, I thought I'd "take a walk into the setting sun." So I walked up John street and then along Lawe street, up College avenue and I walked and I walked—past the big chapel, on and on, past the lovely garden where so many trees and bushes grow, towards the beautiful stone church.

And then I heard such a racket it seemed as if all the robins and blue jays in town were talking together. So I walked up the steps to the church yard and there stands an elm tree that reaches its branches over the lawn, and it seemed to be full of robins and jays and they weren't talking very nice. You see, when you are real well acquainted with the birds you can just about understand them, and the jays were saying: "See—See—See!" and then a robin said: "Loo-looket—looket—what are you? Are you a cat? Got cat's ears! Are you a dog? Got dog's eyes! Oh ho! A dog with feathers! He-he-he."

By this time I was close up to the elm and I said: "Why, Robins, I'm surprised at you!" And the robin who was the leader said: "Oh, come on, it doesn't amount to anything anyway!" And the bluejay said: "He-he-he," and away they all flew.

Then I saw what they had been making such a commotion about, for there sat (I could hardly see it, it was so like the tree trunk in coloring) the cutest little—what do you think!

"A cat?" said Freddie.

"No."

"A little dog?"

"No, a little screech owl; and he was turning his head this way and that, for you know owls cannot turn their eyes as we can, they have to turn their whole head. And then he looked down at me and I said: "Screechy, are you looking for the Church Mouse? Why don't you stay in Lawesburg, where they're nice and fat?"

And then Screechy spread his wings and, without as much noise as a whisper, flew towards the big trees in the campus. You know owls have such thick, soft feathers that they make no sound when they fly—not the teeniest little bit! By this time it was quite dark so I turned around and walked and walked and walked back home.

Later in the evening I sat on the porch with my girl friend and we were admiring the stars and the lacy branches against the dark blue sky and there on a branch in front of us and quite near sat two cunning baby owlets and the Mamma Screechy was bringing a mouse in her talons. She lighted near them and tore off a piece with her strong beak and fed it to one, and another piece for the other, and when she flew away the Daddy came and he had a big crunchy bug, and all the time they were saying: "Who—whoo—whoo," in such a funny, shivery way that I cannot write it.

My girl friend said, "Oh! I don't like that song." And I said, "They're laughing," and I'm always glad when I hear the Screechies because I know they eat young rats and mice and big, scrunchy bugs and such things.

They like suet, too, so keep a piece on your bird table always. Maybe in winter the little owls can't find enough mice and bugs and they'll be glad and laugh when they find what you have given them.

NOTE:—The little screech owl, in the south aptly called "shivering" owl in allusion to its quavering whistle, or perhaps to the effect that call has on the listener, ranges from coast to coast and far beyond both the northern and southern boundaries of the United States. With the exception of the burrowing owl, it feeds more extensively on insects than any of the other owls. A diligent mouser; also eats crawfish, frogs, toads, etc. Should be carefully protected.—U. S. Biological Survey.

Nearly $300,00 will be available in Manitowoc county next year for state and county roads.

Vocational School One of Five Best in State

Appleton Vocational school is included among the five best schools in the state, E. E. Gunn, Jr., assistant state director of vocational education, told the Vocational school board. Other schools in the state ranking high are Milwaukee, Madison, Racine, and Kenosha institutions. The Appleton school, the board was informed, also has one of the largest and most complete programs. More federal aid is given the local school than any other school in the state, and it is probable that an even larger amount will be allowed next year, owing to the growth of the school in the past five years.

Welding equipment will be purchased and classes in welding started as soon as it arrives. This action is in response to a popular demand for such a class. The Vocational school board will attend the convention of the American Vocational association in Milwaukee in December.

Poems

Harvests
Now grief has gathered all her harvest in:
Black-headed wheat . . . and poisonous corn, and clover;
The fields are naked, and the bursting bin
Aches in its fulness, now . . . and all is over,
And one may watch his neighbor's golden wheat,
And wine-red fruit and corn where sunlight is,
Seeing how all their yield is rich and sweet,—
And so forget what harvesting was his.
And he may hear their happy feasting, then,
Across the fields when harvest moons are up,
And listening by his hedgerow, hear again

The talk of those who drain a brimming cup,—
But turn to his own house, and there abide,
Lest something burst with aching in his side.

And so Beloit had themselves a homecoming. The alumni returned, a big parade was staged, and last but not least there was a football game between the downstaters and our Vikings. Now a homecoming should be a time of joy and gladness and the walloping of a time honored rival is an essential part of the fun. Having participated in two of these festivities this year and without having benefited in the least from them the Vikings took matters into their own hands and spoiled the hilarity of the occasion at the state-line institute.

The teams had battled without a score for three periods and into the fourth when Frank Schneller and his cronies in the Blue forward wall nailed a Beloit youth back of his goal line. The score was then 2-0. According to the rules the ball must be put into play by a kick so Beloit proceeded to propel the melon far down the fairway into the waiting hands of Paul Fischl, our own "Flying Dutchman." Paul decided that he needed exercise so he immediately set out on one of his famous strolls which terminated a few seconds later on the productive side of the Beloit goal. The final tally was 9-0 in favor of Lawrence.

Co-Captain Ken Laird played in the last quarter which was the first time that he had seen action since he broke his jaw in the Wisconsin game.

The Sunset Players' production, "The Truth About Blayds," was presented before a large crowd last Friday. The play was the first of a series to be given throughout the year.

The college students and faculty had a group picture taken Wednesday morning in front of the chapel.

The latest fad seems to be the cultivation of mustaches. This of course is strictly a fad for the men and they seem to rejoice in the fact that they are doing something that the female element can't indulge in.

Hope to be able to report a victory over Carleton next week.

Tomorrow night from 7:30 to 11:00, the Student Council will hold its second dance in the school halls. Chairmen of the committees in charge are as follows: Door and finance, Carlton Kuck; publicity, David Dietrich; clean-up, Raymond Herzog.

Ellen Balliet, Ruth Harris, June Kaufman, Veronica Robedeau, and Dorothy Jane Segal have been chosen to take part in the Dame Declamatory contest which will be held in the high school auditorium on November 25.

The senior class will hold its annual class party a week from this Saturday, on November 22. This year it will be in the form of a sports party. Members of the class can wear any sports costume from beach pajamas on through tennis clothes to football suits if they like. Decorations will be of sports nature, and the committee is planning to spend no money on the decorations. Music will be furnished by Meltz's Californians.

Today the high school band played a benefit concert at Manawa.

Last Tuesday the G. A. A. initiated its new members. A formal ceremony was held, after which a very informal initiation was held in the gym. Refreshments were also served. The G. A. A. is also planning to entertain the football team at the annual banquet this year. Committees have been appointed to take care of this function which will be held November 18.

November 21, Appleton high's football team meets Menasha in their first night game at Menasha, a post-season engagement. Admission is twenty-five cents for students and fifty for adults.

McKINLEY NOTES

By Genevieve Paeth

The McKinley Junior high school enjoyed an Armistice program this week. Patriotic songs were sung, the salute to the flag was given, and Marion Rule entertained with an appropriate piano selection. Marshall Graff, past commander of the American Legion, gave a patriotic address which was very interesting. The program was closed by the singing of America. Genevieve Paeth was pupil chairman of the meeting.

The McKinley Junior high school had the pleasure of hearing Mr. McCue speak Monday, November 10. Mr. McCue being a representative of the Red Cross spoke about the American Red Cross program. He also told of places where Red Cross aid had been rendered which, of course, was interesting to the pupils.

Troop 1, Boy Scouts of the McKinley Junior high school, has fitted out a room in the basement of the school for troop meetings.

ROOSEVELT NOTES

The intra-mural basketball tournament is still in session. Games are scheduled until December 19. In the ninth grade the Michigan team, captained by Robert DeBauer, and the Indians, captained by Theron Miller, are the only undefeated teams; in the eighth grade, the Foxes, captained by Raymond VanOoyen, and the Panthers, captained by Lawrence Herzog, remain undefeated; and in the seventh grade the Steam Rollers, captained by Billy Catlin, and the Gas Housers, captained by Kenneth Buesing, have no losses charged against them.

The ninth grade girls of Roosevelt visited Hopfensperger's meat market during the past week. Different cuts of meat were exhibited and the methods of cooking each cut was learned.

The 8X section gave a dinner Wednesday evening at the school, having completed 9 weeks of food work. A delicious dinner was served.

The second number of the lyceum was given Thursday evening at the Roosevelt auditorium at 8:00, featuring Eugene Frye and company presenting a three-act magic comedy drama, "Mr. Ree." The story of the play revolves around the fortunes of an aspiring young magician. His struggles and triumphs over natural obstacles, as well as difficulties created through the efforts of other characters in the play form a fascinating story.

Rev. Utts, rector of the Episcopal church, addressed the student body in an assembly program this afternoon.

An Armistice day program was held November 11. A flag salute was led by Stanley Jury. Speakers were Clarence Baetz and Mr. McCue. Mr. Baetz is ex-commander of the American Legion and Mr. McCue is in charge of the life saving division of the Red Cross.

A father, his son, and a relative are dead as the result of a hold-up of a farm home near Boscobel Tuesday, by two men and a woman. The dead are Patrick Gorman and his son Paul, of Huron, S. D., and Cornelius Horrigan, one of the owners of the farm. Tales of buried treasure on the farm are supposed to have lured the robbers who at first posed as hunters and asked permission to shoot on the land.

To provide employment for Indians on the Bad River reservation, Chippewa

Indian Game Care association has appropriated $300 to clear a 20-acre tract for an Indian burying ground.

There are now in the United States 75 bird refuges. The first was set aside by President Roosevelt in 1903 on Pelican Island, Indian River, Florida.

The Bible is now printed in whole or in part in 886 languages. Four new translations are in preparation.
