THE GLEE CLUB REUNION

By S. E. WASHBURN, '03

WE had the time of our lives. For three years we have been returning to our Alma Mater to sing the songs that helped lighten the duties of undergraduate days, and to meet the old time warblers who built up the famous Wisconsin Glee Club of which we are all so proud.

We met in Old Library Hall at 9 o'clock, Alumni Day, and our rehearsal under the direction of Elias Bredin was a success beyond all expectation. Our star singers from 40 years back were there,—and how they did sing! There was J. A. Bruce from the alligator swamps of Louisiana, Charles Maxon from the unruly banks of the Un-Roosevelted Mississippi, Clifford Ireland who stopped holding Taft delegates in line to come and sing "Bible Stories"; J. B. Simpson, full of apology and regret at not having answered the many calls of The Music of Old U. W.; Will Watrous, the man who did his duty and brought back "Our Charming Mascot" as Mrs. Watrous; Bert Hand from the Case-hardened shores of Lake Michigan; Tom Polleys, the original grand-dad of the class of '87; Beebe sans bull-pup and cow; and Ecke, whose enthusiastic wife promised to return next year with "Eck" himself. Then there was Sunny Pyre, Jack Pierce, Toreador Baas, Doc Dodson, "Bugs" Bowman, Steen, Taylor, Hoefler, Sullivan, Barnes, Stotzer and a dozen others equally renowned for their singing prowess.

We sang the "Varsity Toast," "Clear the Way for Old Wisconsin," "Ching-a-ling," "The Bull Dog," "The Mendota Crew Song," "We Meet Again Tonight, Boys," and other old songs of years gone by.

We took lunch with our wives and sweethearts at the Devine cottage facing the lake, and while we were not eating we were singing or telling school-day tales that made us forget the present and return to what Watrous calls the "halcyon" days. To have seen Tom Polleys enjoy himself no one would ever guess that he was a grandfather. It is strange but nevertheless true that singing on a Wisconsin Glee Club keeps one forever young in spite of passing years and good natured in spite of any business worries and troubles one may have.

We all missed NeCollins and his wife, who he promised faithfully last year would come to this reunion. Then there were several others whose failure to show up needs them. We know why Hobbins did not show up. He was busy training a week-old Glee Club prospect, while Julius Olson failed to come because he was busy lining up his cohorts for the grand parade to the banquet table. Every one who was at the reunion this year has explanation. Everybody was asking for Mehl, Conger, Luse, Pray, Frost, Watson, Rosenheimer, Hamilton, Moseley, and if these men wish to show their Wisconsin spirit and a little consideration for the editors of The Music of Old U. W. they will write in at once telling why they were not on hand and promise to come next year and bring their entire families with promised to return next year and to see that the others in his club are there also. They have also promised to bring their families. This reunion will be the largest and grandest ever held. The Music of Old U. W. has already material enough for a couple of extra editions. So mark your calendar now and plan to be one of the elect next year.

THE ALUMNI CAMPUS DAY

By LEVERETT C. WHEELER, '91

MINUTES of Alumni Frolic, Tuesday afternoon, June 18, 1912.

Meeting called to disorder at 2 P. M. Nobody in a chair.

Roll call—everybody not present reported absent, and those present, about 500 in number, more or less, were seen.

Under heading of unfinished business, a ball game was started at the feet of the statue of Lincoln. Lincoln was observed to turn his face away as the old boys slid around upon the grass.

After several umpires had been tried and found wanting, George Buckstaff attempted to officiate. Apparently, he had never seen a game before, and after a few efforts to render a decision he was mobbed and then arrested by Sheriff O'Hara.

A frontier court was convened, Judge E. Ray Stevens of Madison presiding (subject to recall). Chas. B. Rogers of Fort Atkinson appeared for the prosecution and C. B. Bird of Wausau for the defense.

The witnesses for the prosecution were Robert M. La Follette, Theodore Roosevelt and William Jennings Bryan; on the part of the defense, William Howard Taft, Alton B. Parker and Judson Harmon were called. Each of the witnesses flatly contradicted all the others except on one point, which was that none of them had taken a bath since the last presidential election. On this evidence, a verdict of guilty was rendered, but as the judge could not tell what the prisoner was guilty of, sentence was suspended.*

The next order of business was a vaudeville stunt by Mr. Glen Wray, chief engineer of the Bell Telephone lines, who gave a fine demonstration in wire pulling. He also pulled the wool over the eyes of several distinguished gentlemen carefully selected from the audience.

A motion was then made by the crowd to carry chairs to the upper portion of the campus, and many chairs were declared carried.

An audience of from five to ten thousand alumni, more or less, gathered about a maypole and listened to music by the Glee Club, while myriads of beautiful maidens clad in butterflies, etc., went through stately dances on the greensward. No one doubted the existence of fairies and fairyland as the mystic ribbons twined and untwined about the central pillar, carried by the dancing sprites of spring-time. Lincoln was seen to clasp his hands with delight.

But the deep tones of the tower clock in old Library Hall tolled forth the hour of six, and with many sighs the great audience dispersed, filled with memories of a restored youth and a most happy frolic.

* Reporter Wheeler is slightly off on this point. If he had not been in such a hurry to catch the evening train for Milwaukee, he would have seen the myriads of alumni munching popcorn or chocolates or ice cream, purchased with the $10.00 fine which Mr. Buckstaff was obliged to pay. Mr. Wheeler's early departure, we may note in passing, was due to his modesty. It was Mr. Wheeler who suggested the "bawl" game and the mock trial, and the splendid success of both made him blush and hike for home.—Ed.

THE ANNUAL ALUMNI DINNER

By GEORGE B. HILL, '08

HERE was a sound of revelry Tuesday night, the occasion being the Alumni Dinner.

Attendance? Capacity! The grads lined up by classes at the reception tent on the lower campus, two and two, like the animals going into the ark, and there were so many of them (grads, we mean, not animals) that the procession, with a band ahead, had strung out along the Library side of Langdon clear to Park street and back on Prexy's side to the gym, by the time the tail of the line was uncurled from the tent. It was a satisfying peerade to the old guard who could remember all-alumni reunions, not so many years back, when a small parlor and a plate of sandwiches would have amply accommodated everybody present. In crude figures this year's attendance was six hundred. A lot more wanted to get in but couldn't, the seating space being sold out before noon Tuesday.

The universally useful Athletic Annex was eminently successful in its new role of banquet hall. The shavings that carpeted the floor were reminiscent of circuses and Pete Hammacher's and gave the whole occasion just the right basis of informality. A battery of gas stoves was lined up outside the running track, an arrangement which made possible a snappy transmission of eats to the consumer.

The eats, while admirable, were merely the excuse for the occasion, the main object of which was, of course, the attainment of that social satisfaction which psychologists will tell you is produced by the making of noises in unison. Everybody was doing it, the class of '72 being as much in evidence as the class of '12. All the old class yells were exhumed and a lot of new ones invented, until the welkin rang like a sorority 'phone bell on a Friday night. From time to time, also, some one would revive one of the old songs of the Bonnie-Lies-Over-the-Ocean model—the kind that the regular college gol-darns used to sing before the rag-time, bear-cat, and Oh-You-Beautiful-Doll stuff became endemic around here.

Judge E. O. Hand, '59, of Racine, was the oldest alumnus, in years since graduation, that was present. With his daughter, Mrs. Charles R. Carpenter, '87, retiring president of the Alumni Association, Judge Hand occupied a place at the table of the president and regents. Bishop Samuel Fallows, '59, telegraphed his regrets at being unable to be present, but nevertheless put in his appearance at the very close of the evening.

The class of '60 was represented by Vice-president John B. Parkinson and Colonel George W. Bird of Madison. "The class of '60," said Colonel Bird, speaking from his place at the table, "are still here, although much battered and torn." His remarks were received with enthusiasm.

Mrs. Charles R. Carpenter opened the more formal program with a beautifully phrased address of welcome. It was also, as it were, the keynote speech of the evening, for it brought to the fore the thought of the great force that can be exerted for the advancement of students of a better organized community life, a need which can best be met by a dormitory system.

Regent G. D. Jones, '82, of Wausau, speaking for his class as well as for the regents, gave a reminiscent talk in which he contrasted the university of the early eighties with the university of today. He seconded the president's remarks on the necessity of a better student community life.

John E. McConnell, '87, of La Crosse, admitted that the univerthe university by a well-organized and active alumni body—a thought to which the other speakers recurred.

Mrs. Carpenter then introduced the toastmaster of the evening, Dr. Henry B. Favill, '80, of Chicago, who was conceded by everybody present to have been the wittiest and happiest toastmaster seen at Wisconsin in many years.

President Van Hise, after reviewing the year's progress in the university, declared that one of the greatest needs of the university today is the development among the society had its troubles, but pointed out that no great and active institution leads a perfectly quiet life. The university is bound to be misunderstood, and therefore criticised. The truth about the university is the best antidote for criticism, and the dissemination of that truth is a task for the alumni.

The program closed with the presentation by Toastmaster Favill of "W" certificates to the athletes of the reunion classes who had been found to be qualified for the honor, and with reminiscent responses by a number of former stars.

ADDRESS OF WELCOME

By MRS. IMOGENE HAND CARPENTER, '87

Y position here tonight reminds me of a story told by the late Bishop Potter of New York, who went to England on his summer vacation. During his sojourn a Roman pageant took place and as the long line of Roman soldiers, chariots and cohorts passed them by, Bishop Potter and his friend, stopping under the shade of a friendly tree, attempted to distinguish the various Roman leaders. Presently a big cockney Englishman, encased in five hundred pounds of armour, came clanking down the line and as he stopped in front of them to wipe the dripping perspiration from his brow, Bishop Potter inquired, "My good fellow, are you Appius Claudius?" "No, hI'm not 'appy as Claudius," snapped out the cockney, "hI'm as hun'appy as 'ell."

Now, I am free to confess that this brilliant company and this wonderful occasion ought to make anyone as 'appy as Claudius; but in reality, the cockney's state of mind is mine. And you will not need any clairvoyant powers to know the reason why, which is because I am so miserably conscious of my own inadequacy.

The hand of time, steady and relentless, has marked off another year on the calendar and once more we, the children of old U. W., have gathered to do her homage. We come together, at this our annual banquet, forgetting all our lesser differences. We clasp each other's hands, members of the same happy family, all of us born equal in this great fraternity. Many of us are returning after long years of absence, and as the forms and faces of those here gathered have developed and matured with advancing years, so in like manner has Alma Mater kept pace with the changes. The slender lines of old Main Hall have broadened into larger and more matronly proportions. The old "Gym," tottering unsteadily on uneven legs, met a martyr's death to give place to a new one, whose florid countenance, glowing with cordiality, bids us welcome. In my day the adornment and wardrobe of our Alma Mater were simple and modest. Old North and South Halls—plain and severely tailored—and Library Hall, small and unassuming, now retire in bashful timidity before the company of proud, pretentious structures that flank the broad reaches of the campus and scatter themselves over the neighboring hills and hollows.

Startled as we are by these changes, we do not fail to find many old familiar favorites. The dear old lakes, sung by the poet, still wash with moonlit waves the shores of Picnic Point and Tonyawatha. The paths in Lovers' Lane wind as of old along the lake among the trees, "with seats beneath the shade for talking age and whispering lovers made"; and we are told that a pilgrimage to Middleton is not without the old time reward of the savory fowl and the dance to the scraping fiddle. It scarcely seems possible that the heart of the modern maiden can beat so high with anticipation of the event, as did the heart of the lass of twenty-five or thirty or forty years ago. Ask Professor Parkinson and he will tell you, as he has often told me, that our age was the golden age, that the lives of the youngsters of today are stale and profitless, and that we alone knew how to pluck the flower of happiness while in full bloom. Be that as it may, we can testify that we made preparations to come to Madison with the same feeling of eager expectancy, we caught our first glimpse of the limpid blue of the lake with the same mingled feeling of homesickness and yearning, we heard the conductor call Madison with the same wildly throbbing heart that we experienced twenty-five years ago, when we came back after our first long vacation; and as we look back to the tranquil happy days we spent in this beautiful retreat, the thought comes sweeping o'er me like a flood, that it was here at the University of Wisconsin, at the feet of that rare and ripened scholar, John Bascom, that we learned to see visions and to try in later years to keep the glory of our youth. 'Twas here we were taught that a man with no visions, be he young or old, is a poor thing, and that the man with ideals helps, so far as in him lies, his college and his country. 'Twas here the truth was impressed that no man's character is fixed and that one of his greatest dangers is to allow the visions to fade, to permit his ideals to become shop worn. Perhaps here we may find the explanation of the fact that at the business meeting this morning the prevailing sentiment seemed to be, not what can the university do for me, but what can I do for her? And this is what has developed in us all that sense of personal proprietorship in our beloved Alma Mater; so that as concerns myself, there is nothing else on earth, outside the members of my home and family, that claims from me such vital interest or awakens in me such a fierce maternal instinct of protection.

But I am in danger of forgetting that I am but the prologue of the play. Hence, in behalf of the Alumni Association, and particularly for the classes of '62 and '87, who in celebrating their fiftieth and twenty-fifth anniversaries are passing those gold and silver milestones which warn us to turn the corner and begin to grow young again, I bid you all a hearty welcome!

To you, Mr. President, we offer our most cordial welcome, with all our hopes and prayers for your long and happy administration. Welcome, thrice welcome, members of the Board of Regents, faithful guardians of our progress! Welcome, members of the faculty, scholarly trainers of our youth! Welcome, fellow alumni, children of our common mother, ye hoary headed sons of the fifties, ye men and women of affairs of the eighties and nineties, and ye sweet girl graduates and youth of 1912. Welcome, husbands, wives and sweethearts—adopted children to be sure—but the great mother heart of Alma Mater has room for all of you!

And now I, the unknown, have the unusual though pleasant privilege of introducing to you an alumnus, whose name and fame are known throughout these United States, whose connection with any project spells success for the project, whose eminence in his profession sheds lustre on his university and on us, his fellow alumni. In exercising this privilege, I am reminded of the incident told by Senator Spooner, which he regarded as quite the rarest of introductions he ever received. At a political meeting over in Ozaukee County, which is known as a German community, the chairman burgomeister of the village said, "We haf mit us tonight von of de biggest men of de United States, Senator Spooner. He vil make a speech mit us. I haf grade bleasure in making introduction. Senator Spooner is here: this is Senator Spooner! I haf done it. He vil now do it." Ladies and gentlemen, I have the honor of introducing to you Henry B. Favill, medicine man, chief of many a pow-wow, who will act as your toast master. I haf done it. He vil now do it!

ANNUAL ALUMNI BUSINESS MEETING

A NNUAL meeting of the Alumni Association of the University of Wisconsin, held at Music Hall, City of Madison, June 18, 1912.

The necessary quorum for the transaction of business was present.

The meeting was called to order by President Carpenter and the minutes of the annual meeting for the year 1911 were read and approved.

The report of the treasurer was read and placed on file.

The report of Mr. Lochner was read and placed on file.

(Mr. Lochner's report showed that the cash received to date amounted to $3908.60; the cash paid to $3908.02, $460.00 of which was applied to the deficit for 1910-11; that the accounts receivable amounted to $185.00, and the accounts payable to $145.00, leaving a net balance of about $30.00.)

The report of the recording secretary was received and placed on file.

The matter of having a paid secretary was then taken up by the Association and Mr. Buckstaff, Mr. Pease, Mr. Montgomery, Mr. Merrill, Mrs. Pease and Judge Erickson spoke to the necessity of having such a secretary. Upon motion of Mr. Buckstaff it was moved that it was the sense of the Association that the Executive Committee take some step toward the securing of the necessary fund for the employment of a permanent paid secretary, which motion was duly carried.

Mr. T. R. Lloyd-Jones offered the following resolution:

Moved, that a vote of thanks be extended to Mr. Lochner, secretary of the Association, for his work on behalf of the Association, and wishing him success and God speed in his new field. The resolution was adopted.

At this point the class of '97, headed by fife and drum, appeared and paraded around the Assembly room, then taking seats in the meeting of the Association.

Mr. Gabriel of Denver, Colorado, addressed the meeting, stating that he conveyed to the Alumni Association of the University of Wisconsin the best wishes of the Honorable Levi Booth, of that city, one of the first graduates of our state university. It was moved that the greetings of the Honorable Levi Booth be received by rising vote, in which the entire Association joined.

The following resolution was then offered by Mr. Morris:

Resolved, that the secretary of the Association be requested to write to the Honorable Levi Booth and express to him the best wishes of the Association and appreciation of his words conveyed to it.

President Carpenter then made some formal announcements in reference to the day's program.

By a rising vote the thanks of the Association were conveyed to Mrs. Carpenter, its president, for her work during the year.

There being no further business before the Association, the meeting adjourned. (Signed)

CARL H. TENNEY, '96.

ANNUAL ALUMNI RECEPTION AND BALL

FOR the second time in the history of alumni activities the reception and ball were held in Lathrop Hall. The attendance at the reception and ball touched the 1,000 mark and was the largest at any such function ever held at the university. In the receiving line in the parlors stood President and Mrs. C. R. Van Hise, Chairman Julius Olson, Regent and Mrs. J. F. Trottnan, Milwaukee; Dean and Mrs. E. A. Birge, Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Carpenter, Racine; Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Brown, Madison; Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Lloyd Jones, Madison; Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Tenney, Madison; Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Brittingham, Madison; Judge L. R. Martin and daughter, Minneapolis, Minn. Bach's orchestra of Milwaukee, which occupied the space immediately inside of the main entrance, played a promenade concert during the reception from 8 to 10 o'clock.

The ball opened at 10 o'clock and was held in the gymnasium of the hall. With the orchestra on the stage the curtains were opened on both sides and dancing was possible both in the gymnasium and concert room. When the dancing started, nearly every seat in the balcony was occupied with interested spectators. Refreshments were served in the first floor cafeteria by Mrs. Taylor. About 300 couples attended the ball. Alumni, graduates and many students joined in with faculty members, regents and others in the entertainment of the evening.—Wisconsin State Journal, June 20, 1912.

THE 1912 IVY ODE

By E. ADELAIDE EVANS, '12

She stands upon the hillside, watchful still,
Serene in gracious majesty she stands,
Her eyes are grey with vision, and her hands
Ready to carry forth her potent will.
Fearless, self-poised, resourceful, she looks out
Clear-eyed across the lands where ever run
Her messengers, fleet-footed, from sun to sun,
On roads that girdle all the world about.

From all the corners of the world they come,
Her children, alien both in tongue and creed,
Eager to find in her their nearest need,
Eager to find in her their perfect sum
Of all their longings, deep desires, and dreams;
The one firm chord which binds them in their pride
And fervent love for her, and hope, wide-eyed,
Which points to where their light of conflict gleams.

To all the corners of the world they go,
Her children, bearing forth her message clear
Of strength and freedom, high resolve and cheer
Against all doubts and tauntings of the foe,
They go to take the places in the world
Which wait for them, and whether great or small,
Renowned or mean, her spirit breathed through all
Is like a banner o'er the land unfurled.

Mother of many children, she has stood
For long upon the hillside, and will stand
Till all our children of the years unspanned
Have felt the glory of her motherhood.
Age has not brought her weakness, still her youth
Has buoyant hopes and bright imaginings,
With sight that pierces to the heart of things,
And sees them in their beauty and their truth.

FIFTY-NINTH ANNUAL COMMENCEMENT

AT the fifty-ninth annual commencement of the university, 729 first and higher degrees were presented by President C. R. Van Hise to the graduating class. Of this number 461 degrees were presented to men and 268 to women. Together with 96 first and higher degrees that have been presented since commencement last year, a grand total of 825 degrees have been awarded during the year.

One of the most impressive ceremonies of the commencement exercises was the conferring of the degree of Doctor of Laws, the highest honor within the power of the university to bestow, upon Bishop James W. Bashford, of China, and an alumnus of the university, class of '73.

In conferring this degree upon Bishop Bashford, President Van Hise said: "Faithful pastor, inspiring teacher, successful college president, bishop of the Methodist Episcopal church, apostle to China, in your successful career of nearly forty years you have well illustrated the ideal of service, for which this university stands. This ideal inspired you as preacher and educator among your own people. Following this ideal when elected bishop in 1904, you asked to be sent to China, and recently you have repeated the request there to remain during the critical years which now confront that nation. With burning zeal you have encouraged the awakening of a great but slumbering race to the blessings of liberty, and have assisted in the formation of a government after the American model.

"In recognition of these distinguished services, your Alma Mater confers upon you, as a well beloved son, her highest academic honor, the degree of Doctor of Laws."

Of the degrees granted, 612 were first, and 117 were higher degrees.

In the College of Letters and Science the largest number of degrees were awarded. Of the 371 granted, 192 went to women and 179 to men. This was the only college where the women outnumbered the men. In the Course in Commerce, which is a part of the College of Letters and Science, 40 degrees were given. One young woman, Miss Margaret Johnson, of Madison, was graduated from this course. A total of 272 Bachelor of Arts degrees were granted in the College; 29 Bachelor of Philosophy degrees; 5 Bachelor of Science, Medical Course; 7 Bachelor of Science, Course in Chemistry; 2 Bachelor of Science, Pharmacy Course; and 12 Graduates in Pharmacy. Miss Ella D. Krueger, Westfield, Wis., was the only girl to become a graduate pharmacist.

In the College of Engineering 107 first degrees were granted.

There were 33 Bachelor of Science degrees in the Civil Engineering Course; 30 in the Mechanical Engineering Course; 21 in the Electrical Engineering Course; 7 in the Chemical Engineering Course; 1 in the Mining Engineering Course; 9 in the Advanced Civil Engineering Course; 5 in the Advanced Electrical Engineering Course; and 1 in the Advanced Mining Engineering Course.

which 10 were Doctor of Philosophy; 31 Master of Arts; 23 Master of Science; 3 Master of Philosophy; 1 Doctor of Public Health; 1 Chemical Engineer; 11 Civil Engineers; 4 Electrical Engineers; and 3 Mechanical Engineers. Of the total number of higher degrees granted 87 were awarded to men and 30 to women. Two women were among those receiving the degree of Doctor of Philosophy.

THE PIPE OF PEACE CEREMONY

In the College of Agriculture, 69 were awarded degrees or certificates, 8 degrees going to young women in the Course in Home Economics. Fifty-four degrees were awarded to graduates of the four-year course in Agriculture, while 7 graduates of the two-year course were given certificates.

The Law School graduated 27 young men; the School of Music 7 young women; and the Library School 31 young women.

In the Graduate School, 117 higher degrees were granted, of

The invocation was pronounced by Rev. E. G. Updike, pastor of the First Congregational church. Senior orations were given by:

Donald S. Holmes, Madison, law school, "Big Business and the Bench."

Rae F. Bell, Madison, and Verne C. Bonesteel, Huron, S. D., college of letters and science, "A Glimpse of Student Self-Government," and "Changing Ideals," respectively.

Edward S. Seaton, Madison, college of agriculture, "Agricultural Pests and Diseases."

Fred B. Sheriff, Helena, Mont., college of engineering, "The Panama Canal."

President Van Hise, in his annual address to the graduating classes, declared that today, as well as in the past, the spirit of the university is in irreconcilable conflict with those who believe that existing conventions, morals, political and religious faith are fixed. (The president's address has been sent in pamphlet form to every alumnus of the institution.)

Special honors for excellent work in certain subjects were awarded to Amy G. Hoyt, Augusta, English and German; Affa Hubbell, Madison, English and Romance Languages; and Merle Pierson, Milwaukee, English and History.

For presenting theses that exhibited unusual excellence, special honors were awarded to the following: Charles J. Anderson, Madison, in Education; Marie A. Anthony, Milwaukee, in German; Elisha B. Beidleman, South Milwaukee, in History; William C. Crawford, Mineral Point, in Chemistry; Robert H. Dunn, in History; Harriette M. Josten, La Crosse, in History; Joseph B. Hubbard, Madison, in History; Lynn E. Knorr, Granton, in Political Economy; Henry C. Leister, Menomonee Falls, in History; Ernest S. McLain, Madison, in History; and Raymond F. Piper, Madison, in Philosophy. Those granted honors for theses in the law school were: Kenneth F. Burgess, Oshkosh; Ralph M. Hoyt, Madison; and Donald S. Holmes, Duluth, Minn.

The medal of the Science Club of the university for the best baccalaureate thesis in science, was awarded to Martin J. Hoppert of Sheboygan.

Fourteen students, representing eight foreign countries, Turkey, China, Mexico, Cuba, Sweden, Japan, Switzerland, and Canada—were granted either first or higher degrees.

READY FOR A DAY'S WORK

FORTIETH REUNION OF '72

By FRANK G. BROWN, '72

WE were graduated in 1872 a class of thirty men and five women. Our class was the first at which at Commencement the ladies had their exercises together with the men. Previous to our commencement, the exercises for the women students preceded the general commencement, being usually held the day before.

During the forty years since our graduation the class lost eleven members, one woman and ten men. Thus there are left in the realm of the living, twenty men and four women. Present at this reunion were fourteen men, while none of the ladies were able to take part, most of them living too far away from Wisconsin. Fifteen men had originally promised to return for Commencement, but one of them was at the last moment prevented from so doing.

The reunion was the most successful we have had. On Tuesday noon the class partook of a sumptuous repast at the Golf club, at which the only professor of the faculty of 1872 living in this country (Prof. W. W. Daniells is in Europe), John B. Parkinson, '60, was a guest, as were also George B. Cross, '67, and George Raymer, '71.

On Tuesday evening the class was present at the annual alumni dinner, and attracted considerable attention by its lusty class yells.

On Wednesday noon Burr W. Jones, '70, gave a beautiful dinner to the class at the Madison Club, for which we all feel very grateful to him. Besides the members of the class, there were present at this dinner Mr. Jones as host, George B. Cross, '67, and Bishop Bashford, '73, who gave us a most delightful and entertaining talk on Modern China.

All who took part in the reunion went away very much gratified at what they found at the university, and often spoke of their pride in their Alma Mater.

The class has held eight reunions to date, but this one proved the most successful one. Ten years after our graduation we reunited for the first time, and since then every fifth year, with an extra one during the Semi-Centennial of the university. We have kept up a permanent organization ever since graduation.

The following were present at the reunion: Hon. George Merrill of Ashland, Judge J. K. Parish of Ashland, George G. Sutherland of Janesville, Hon. D. T. Newton of Bridgewater, S. D., Dr. R. H. Brown of Hartford, S. D., Louis M. Fisher of Davenport, Iowa (who was called upon for extemporaneous remarks at the alumni dinner), J. B. Slattery of Shreveport, La., Prof. Philip Eden of Sparta, Dr. William A. Franklin of Chicago, George D. Cline of whom received their "W" at the alumni dinner, viz., C. S. Montgomery of Omaha, Neb., Rev.

THIRTIETH REUNION OF 1882

By G. D. JONES, '82

THE program of the class of 1882 included, first, a luncheon at the residence of Dr. Louis Head, on Tuesday noon, June 18, followed by an automobile ride about the city. The class was strongly represented at the alumni banquet in the evening. Wednesday forenoon the reunionists had a launch ride on Lake Mendota to Mr. Baker's home at Mendota Beach, where a picnic dinner was served and the afternoon was spent most pleasantly. The return to Madison was made in the evening. We had a most enjoyable time and I am sure all were well pleased and felt amply repaid for coming.

The following were present at the class reunion: Dr. Louis Head, Madison; Joseph W. Hallam, Sioux City, Ia.; Harry H. Powers, Boston; Dr. Francis R. Salisbury, Sparta; Howard Teasdale, Sparta; Charles L. Alverson, Medford; J. A. T. Bjornson, Kulm, N. D.; Congressman John J. Esch, La Crosse; William J. Mutch, Ripon; Alvin T. Rote and wife, Monroe; N. D. Baker, Madison; Mrs. Mary C. Lamb Siegel, New Ulm, Minn.; G. D. Jones, wife and daughter Hester, Wausau.

TWENTIETH REUNION OF 1892

By J. T. HOOPER, '92

ALTHOUGH arrangements were started rather late, the reunion of the class of '92 was a very pleasant affair. About fifteen of the class were present, and after a boat ride to the golf grounds, dinner was served, and those present returned across the lake in time to participate in the general jollification of the university alumni doings.

During the return trip the class was organized and officers elected, looking towards a large and enthusiastic reunion for 1917.

C. H. Maxson was elected president; Marilla Andrews, secretary;

E. P. Worden, vice-president; E. H. Ahara, treasurer.

It was also the sense of the meeting that an executive committee be appointed soon in order that arrangements might be set on foot for the twenty-fifth anniversary.

The following people were present at the reunion: E. H. Ahara, Marilla Andrews, Esther F. Butt, Wm. H. Dudley, E. B. Hand and wife, J. T. Hooper and wife, R. M. Long, Ruth Marshall, C. H. Maxson, J. F. A. Pyre, E. P. Worden and Mrs. E. P. Worden (nee Edith H. Locke).

"WE WERE THE MOST DISORDERLY CLASS PRESENT, OR AT LEAST WE CALCULATED SO TO BE."

TWENTY-FIFTH REUNION OF '87

BY JUDGE OSCAR HALLAM, '87

YEAR ago the members of the class present at the alumni dinner appointed a committee to make preparations for the celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of our graduation. The thought caused us to feel our advanced age but the movement met a hearty response and '87 turned out in good numbers at the commencement of 1912. We took in every number on the program, the alumni meeting, the ball game, the glee club concert, the Maypole dance, the alumni dinner, commencement, the reception and the alumni ball. At the alumni dinner we were the most disorderly class present, or at least we calculated so to be. At commencement we divided the honors with the mythical class of '62, marched with the faculty and sat upon the stage.

But the real event was the reunion luncheon at 1 P. M. Wednesday. Miss Allen and her mother, Mrs. Allen, very hospitably threw open their home and beautiful grounds on Langdon street for the occasion. There were showers but these did not dampen the enthusiasm. In all there were 52 present. Of these 26 were members of the class, the others wives, husbands, parents, sons, daughters, and some of the members of the faculty of our college days. We were especially honored by the presence of Judge E. O. Hand of the class of '59, Prof. Parkinson of the class of '60, and Mrs. Parkinson, Dean and Mrs. Birge, Profs. Owen and Parker and Mrs. Carson, and we stretched from these down into the classes of the years to come. The hours sped quickly with reminiscences and the tales of years ago; there was the saddening thought, too, of the ten who can never meet with us again.

At the business meeting John E. McConnell was chosen president of the class and Miss Katherine Allen secretary and treasurer, and the committee in charge of the reunion was reappointed to arrange for another in celebration of our thirtieth anniversary in 1917.

This reunion was thoroughly enjoyed and the class of '87 recommends the reunion habit to all other classes.

The following is the list of the members of the class present:

Katherine Allen, May Brown, John A. Bruce, Imogene Hand Carpenter, Katherine Coyne Frawley, O. H. Eeke, Ida Johnson Fisk, John H. Gabriel, Oscar Hallam, Mary Henney Healy, Minnie Knox Kreutzer, John E. McConnell, Charles M. Morris, Dr. P. J. Noer, Robert M. Richmond, Claud V. Seeber, Ambrose P. Winston, Frederick W. Winter, Dr. L. E. Youmans, Charles H. Schweizer, Chas. L. Hover, May Johnson Evans, Thomas A. Polleys, Theresa Rodgers Price, John R. Wise, Mrs. Harry E. Briggs.

REUNION OF THE CLASS OF '97

By R. F. SCHUCHARDT, '97

WHILE last winter's snow was still on the ground the class of '97 had an active committee at work under the direction of the class president, Mr. Llewellyn Owen, to plan for a suitable reunion in June. Letters were sent and sub-committees were appointed, and by the end of March things were in full swing.

Many enthusiastic replies were received, both from those who expected to attend and from others who almost wept because conditions were such that they could not. The final line-up showed a promised attendance of approximately forty but at the last minute several of these were unable to come.

The Madison committee, headed by Professor M. C. Beebe, arranged for class headquarters at 514 Lake street and planned interesting doings, as will appear below.

Some of the faithful arrived on Sunday and the remainder drifted in Monday morning. At headquarters they found an interesting exhibit of programs, photographs, class day speeches, bulletin board, etc., etc., reminiscent of our college days; also a map showing the present distribution of our class. The spots on this map were almost all clustered in the area within a few hundred miles of Madison, though a few were spotted in distant lands.

One of the mighty Hoxie Moxies is in far-off China, another in Vancouver, British Columbia, a third in the Philippine Islands, while a fourth "foreigner" is one of the engineers in chief helping to build Uncle Sam's big ditch at Panama—and he was at the reunion with his wife.

Arrivals at headquarters were promptly clothed in the garb which was to distinguish the class during the festivities and which consisted of a long duster bearing on the front the class numerals in large letters and on the back a golden dot, which was the invitation to their fellows for a hearty pat. "Put it there, old chap." Bang! A white outing hat with '97 on the front completed the garb.

After the greetings were over and everybody had bragged about his youngsters we strolled down to the university boat house and took a high speed power launch for a merry spin around Lake Mendota. The day was perfect, the crowd was happy and tuneful, so, of course, we had a delightful time and were almost sorry when we landed at the pier near Maple Bluff Golf Club.

While the cooks were preparing dinner we enjoyed the coolness of the wide verandas of the club house and watched the play of the golfers as they went by. We were so glad to see John Main, '98, as he came along that we just could not keep still on the tee and when John sliced his drive we fear he inwardly cursed '97.

A delightful feature following the dinner was a roll call by Prexy Owen. The letters which he had received were read in response to the names of the absent ones and those present modestly recounted their achievements during the past dense darkness back to the pier and awakened the birds and gophers with our merry singing and laughter. The homeward ride across the lake was cool but we huddled closely together, just as Deacon Jones said he used to do when he was a boy, and with merry song kept off the chill. Lower campus was reached in time to watch the "pipe of peace" ceremonies which fifteen years. Particularly interesting were the accounts of the first jobs of the engineers. The lawyers apparently fell into clover immediately upon graduation.

A most enjoyable dance followed. The whole affair seemed more like a happy house party than anything else. Then Beebe produced his non-patentable, easy blow-outable one-half candle-power search light and we wended our way through the we permitted to proceed after we had encircled the blazing bonfire and inspired the assemblage with proper awe by giving the class yell as lustily as we did in our freshman days.

On Tuesday the class serpent, prepared by the Madison committee, was taken from his lair and with proper lack of dignity was wiggled up State street and onto the lawn of upper campus preceded by a large sized band. We rudely entered the alumni meeting and disturbed the solemn proceedings by marching around the hall, band and all, including the serpent. To atone for our rude disturbance we voted just as the alumni president wanted us to, though we did not know what the question was about.

In the afternoon the assault on upper campus was repeated with

'97. 200 to 100 would have been just as correct so long as '97 had the long end of it. The trial of the umpire, the payment of his fine at the lemonade stand, the very delightful singing of the reunited old-timers of the Glee Club and the impressive and beautiful May-pole dance were thoroughly enjoyed before we went back to headquarters to wash up for dinner.

"ONTO THE LAWN OF UPPER CAMPUS PRECEDED BY A LARGE SIZED BAND"

the serpent and a defiant challenge was issued to all comers to meet us in mortal combat or in baseball or marbles. The doughty youngsters of '02 accepted the challenge and selected indoor baseball out doors as the weapon. What the umpire did and what was done to the umpire is general alumni history and should not be held against either of the classes. After scoring 20 or more runs on each side the very just decision was given as a final score of 2 to 1 in favor of

'97 marched into dinner in full uniform and in the merry competitive class yelling one would have thought that we were back in the days of '93 and '94 from the way we consigned the ambitious "oldsters" of '96 to the billowy waves. Of course we sang our class song, yelled ourselves hoarse and vigorously applauded everything and everybody. The "electricals" of the class, who were in the majority, sent telegrams of greeting to Professor Jackson of Boston and to Professor Fortenbaugh at Schenectady recalling particularly in the telegram to the latter some of our mischievous pranks in the Electric Railway class. The next day a return telegram was received from Mr. Fortenbaugh expressing in very happy words his appreciation of our message and particularly of the references to the historic events of the class room. We were glad to know that "Forty" is still sober and enjoying his work with the General Electric company.

After the dinner we gathered on the steps and porch of our class headquarters; "Ed" Schildhauer got out his cornet and with impressive ceremonies we burned the serpent. While the flames leaped high and until the wee small hours of the morning when the embers slowly smoldered we swapped yarns, recalled many important and unimportant events that happened during our four years at Madison, sang songs and smoked cigarettes "just like young students" until Ed's cornet sounded taps. This evening on the porch steps, with the bonfire before us and Ed's cornet leading in tuneful melody, was perhaps the most delightful feature of a reunion which was thoroughly enjoyable from beginning to end.

Wednesday was devoted to individual excursions and to farewells, though some of the members stayed for the alumni dance in the evening.

During the family "party" at the Golf Club the subject of reunions was thoroughly discussed and it was decided to organize for the next five years and to make an effort to reach every single member of the class by letter at least once a year, to maintain vigorously the ties that bind us to our Alma Mater and to our class, and to meet again at our twentieth anniversary in larger numbers and with the same old-time enthusiasm which marked our present reunion. Officers for this period, on whom will devolve the responsibilities for the carrying out of this plan, were elected, as follows:

President: R. F. Schuchardt, Commonwealth Edison Company, Chicago, Ill.

Secretary and registrar: Miss Louise P. Kellogg, Wisconsin Historical Society, Madison.

Treasurer: Fred H. Clausen, care Van Brunt Mfg. Co., Horicon.

It was decided to have annual dues of $1.00, the amount thus raised to be used to defray the necessary expenses of the secretary in having lists and circular letters printed and mailed and such other sundry expenses as may be deemed necessary in the interests of the class.

Those who registered at headquarters were the following: Llewellyn Owen, Wallace F. MacGregor and Mrs. MacGregor, Walter Alexander, George H. Jones, Fred H. Clausen and Mrs. Clausen, Edw. Schildhauer and Mrs. Schildhauer, M. C. Beebe and Mrs. Beebe, C. K. Leith and Mrs. Leith, Annie M. Pitman, Sadie E. Gallagher, Renette Jones, D. H. Wright, Jr., John S. Allen, Isabella J. McCulloch, C.

Schuchardt and Mrs. Schuchardt.

THE 'VARSITY CREW

THE TEN YEAR REUNION OF '02

By VICTOR D. CRONK, '02

SOME fifty members of 1902 visited the university during Commencement Week and took some part in the reunion. The class reunion was handicapped because of insufficient preparation. However, we secured good headquarters at 615 State street, and renewed many old acquaintances and made some new ones.

Two meetings were held at the headquarters, at which we called the roll, each member giving an account of himself, discussed the matter of a class picnic and also went into the question of alumni interest in university matters. We finally agreed on a boat ride around Lake Mendota, to be taken on Wednesday, June 19, and carried out this part of the program. With respect to university matters, many things were discussed but nothing definitely decided on. However, there was a strong feeling among the members of the class that an active interest in university matters, even if it did not always take the form of approval, would supply the bond that is now needed to bind the university to the alumni. The subject is not yet closed. We may be able to work out a plan as an organization.

We were unlucky in the absence of many of our members who have attained fame since 1902, as well as some who had attained it prior thereto. Among others may, indeed must, be mentioned Brindley, Patrick, Janes, Olbrich, Moffatt, Gibson, Huebner, Davis. Olbrich was busy putting Wisconsin on the map, but the rest furnished no adequate excuse.

The reunion owes much to Dr. W. D. Smith, of Manila, who worked hard to make it a success, and who besides furnished the stay-at-homes several things to think about. Following is a partial list of '02 people, not naming husbands or wives of those who brought their "other half":

Katherine Sanborn Blake, Agnes Merrill, Cornelia Notz, Harry Sauthoff, H. O. Winkler, Bernice Ballard Bode, V. D. Cronk, Agnes U. Davison, Florence White Ela, Edna Hooley Evans, Blanche Fulton, Sarah Seeber Ivins, B. F. Lounsbury, Nelly Molstad Olson, Clara Van Velzer Piper, William Ryan, Maude M. Stephenson, Berl D. Richardson, Frances M. Roddis, Warren D. Smith, Susan Swarthout, Genevieve S. McDill, H. E. G. Kemp, Geo. A. Polley, J. G. Hammerschlag, Sanford P. Starks, Gustave W. Ehreke, Patrick J. Kelley, Adah G. Grandy, Avis E. Hughes, Carolyn G. Holah, Samuel G. Higgins, Henry F. Helmholz.

REUNION OF THE CLASS OF '07

By LOUIS F. REINHARD, '07

THE first reunion of the class of 1907 was held at Madison, June 17, 18 and 19. It was a great success. There were about seventy-five of the old crowd back. The class had established headquarters at 515 Lake street, where a secretary was constantly in attendance during the reunion. All of the bunch registered there and made it their general hang-out.

Some of the crowd arrived in town on Saturday and Sunday but Monday, the seventeenth, was the big day for 1907. About fifty registered at headquarters that day. At five o'clock the class, headed by their band and decorated with lavender and white, marched in a body to the Madison Club, where the class dinner was served.

That was some dinner. Good eats, no formality, and a jolly crowd. Alva Cook was toastmaster and general manager. Every person at the dinner was called on to state whether he or she was married, and if not, why not. There were some awful excuses given. One young lady blamed the panic of 1907 for her not being married. An election was also held during the dinner. Albert Goedjen was elected president and Louis Reinhard secretary of the class. They were instructed by the class to immediately start work on the ten-year reunion.

After the dinner, the class attended the class-play in a body. The class of 1912 gave a very excellent production of Jack Straw and everybody enjoyed the show immensely.

After the show, the crowd marched with their band to the lower campus to take part in the pipe of peace ceremonies. There were some doings there. Until dawn the class yell of 1907 was heard and no one in that section was allowed to forget the class that night.

As Tuesday was the general alumni day, no special stunts were arranged for 1907. Tuesday morning was spent in visiting old haunts and attending the meeting of the Alumni Association. All the members of the class viewed with pride their memorial fountain, which was made especially attractive for the occasion by being completely buried under a heap of structural steel. Tuesday afternoon, everybody joined in the alumni doings on the upper campus.

1907 had a great crowd at the alumni dinner Tuesday night. Every 1907 alumnus felt proud of the showing and noise the class made at that very successful dinner.

Taken all in all, the reunion was a great success. Everyone who attended had an excellent time and will be sure to be back for the next reunion to be held in five years. The following gives a list of those registered at headquarters during the three days:

THE MAN AND THE MAID

Reprinted, by Request, from "The Music of Old U. W."

ONCE upon a time—not long ago—in June, a man and maid journeyed northward, from Chicago to Madison. He went purposely to meet old college friends—to catch the old-time college spirit—to sing the college songs. He felt the call of Junetime in Madison. The trees, the hills, the glimmering lakes, and most of all the old-time comradeship—when hand clasps hand with its hearty grip—when college reminiscence is a delight and the spontaneous outburst of song a joy.

The maid could not appreciate the man's eager anticipation of the reunion, for she had never experienced the life of a great university. It was all novel to her and strange. She was an outsider, come to be at the graduation of friends. So the man joined his friends of the Glee Club and the maid went to the house of her friend's sorority.

Now, incidentally, the man and maid were friends. All the marvelous sights and sounds at which she wondered he undertook to interpret for her. She soon was under the mystic spell of that spirit of reunion which surges through the great mass of students and alumni and emanates from them, which creates a bond of sympathy of mutual interest, that no matter what differences, what prejudices may exist or arise through the years, all must listen to its call. And it comes most insistently in June.

Junetime is tunetime for the Glee Club Alumni. As this was of special interest to the man it soon became so to the maid. Men, gray-haired and bald, students of years past, sang the college songs with the zest of that year's students. Age, rank, dignity were leveled by the great cheer and perfect enjoyment that the singing of the old college songs gave. The men became one in spirit. Cares of the business world, for the alumni of the student's life, were forgotten and only recollections of the happiest college experiences came crowding back to be recounted with great eagerness, and to which the students and alumni listened with intense interest written on their keen, attentive faces. Then the stillness would be broken by the hearty, ringing laugh of the men. Oh, it was a delight—the carefree laugh of carefree men. The maid marveled. She joyed in their joy, was pleased with their wondrous pleasure in it all.

And the music itself was so worth while. Such melody—such harmony. It floated over the campus; came echoing back across the lake. One must pause and listen and then be held by its joyful spontaneity.

And now another Junetime comes—another tunetime for the Glee Club Alumni. The maid, who est and with a greater zest for the business encounters and struggles which he must meet after his brief respite. So she urges all maids to send the "one man," all wives, their husbands, if they are of the was the outsider, has become the wife of the man who delighted so in the Glee Club reunion. She will go with him to Madison or she will send him back with great cheer, knowing that he will come back refreshed—with keener inter-

Alumni. Go with them. Catch the spirit of their songs, listen to their college stories, be young with them, be gay. Then will come the carefree joy of living which it is worth while to catch and hold for the little time it is ours.

EDITORIAL

THE LESSONS OF COMMENCEMENT WEEK

AS we look through previous volumes of THE WISCONSIN ALUMNI MAGAZINE, we find that the leading editorial in the Commencement Number is usually one of felicitation over the splendid success of the reunions. We shall depart from this practice this year. Not that the reunions have not been as successful as in other years. On the contrary, were we to attempt to express an opinion, we fear that the executive committee of the Association, as well as the various class committees, would blush with modesty.

Let us rather ask ourselves, what are some of the lessons of the fifty-ninth annual commencement? In the first place, we believe that the all-alumni celebration on the campus has come to stay. It seemed so much like a big family picnic to have all the numerous events and "stunts" concentrated on the campus that the returning alumni felt themselves more than ever before as a group of people with a common bond—a common mother.

The use to which the Headquarters were put this year, as compared with previous years, augurs well for the future. The arrangement of "cozy corners" with rockers, rugs, and little tables was most conducive to one of the chief purposes of alumni reunions—the opportunity to chat and renew acquaintances and make new friendships.

The warm applause which greeted the Alumni Reunion Glee Club and the disappointment of the audience when the scheduled time was over shows that more prominence should be given this beautiful feature of Alumni Day. We suggest that future reunion concerts begin at 4 o'clock.

The Maypole should by all means be repeated, if the universal appreciation of the spectators is an index to the desirability of this feature. The undergraduate women who went to considerable expense to remain after their final examinations, and Miss Mayhew, the directing soul of it all, merit the warmest thanks of all who took part in the reunion.

Every commencement is becoming more attractive than the previous one. If this year we were all "'appy as Claudius," is it not safe to predict that next year we shall be "'appier than 'ell'?"*

*With apologies to a recent president.—Ed.

GEORGE ANGUS BUCKSTAFF, '86

The Alumni Association in recent years has been peculiarly fortunate in its choice of a president. Dr. Ochsner, Mr. Pease, Mrs. Carpenter—this brilliant trio is now to be succeeded by a man who will carry forward with enthusiasm and zeal the work of placing the Alumni Association in that peculiar position of influence which belongs to it.

George A. Buckstaff, '86, first came into prominence in the service of Alma Mater when as a member of the Assembly in the Wisconsin Legislature of 1895 he was given charge and secured the passage of the appropriation which made the Historical Library possible. In the Legislature of 1897 he was made speaker of the house, and as such was influential in promoting the best interests of the university. For a period of years he has served on the legislative and dormitory committees of the Alumni Association, doing effective work especially as chairman of the former during the critical legislative year of 1911.

It is interesting to note, as an indication of the versatility of the man, that Mr. Buckstaff was graduated from the university as a lawyer, is a large manufacturer by occupation, and devotes his leisure hours to scientific agriculture. He was among the first, if not the first, to join the Alumni Association as a life member.

1912 AND THE ALUMNI ASSOCIATION

The class of 1912 has set a new mark in Association membership. Approximately seventy-five members of the youngest class graduated from Alma Mater paid their dues before and during Commencement Week, and as many more have applied for membership and will remit as soon as they are able to draw their first salary in whatever calling they may follow. In other words, of the fifty-nine classes graduated, the class of 1912 claims over 8 per cent of the members now enrolled in the Association.

Of course, the class is larger than perhaps any previous one. Moreover, this year for the first time an organized effort was made by the officers of the Association to interest the outgoing class in alumni affairs during its senior year. On three separate occasions officers of the Association addressed the senior class, and twice the editor of the Daily Cardinal appealed to the class editorially, and followed up the appeal by a personal letter to his classmates. But all this does not belittle the splendid spirit of the class of 1912. The class merits the congratulations of the entire Association.

INSTRUCTORS AND ASSISTANTS.

Eleven new instructors were recently appointed for the next academic year by the regents.

Miss Sara M. Conlon was appointed instructor in the School of Music. Miss Elizabeth Mathews, a graduate of Ohio State University, who last year received a master's degree from Columbia University and who this year has been teaching in the Carnegie Technical School, was made instructor in home economics. The two other instructors appointed in the department of home economics were Miss Clara Eckhardt, a graduate of the University of Illinois, and Miss Loretta Boies, for the last four years head of the department of domestic science in the University of Porto Rico.

The other new instructors appointed include: J. P. Schwada, structural engineering; Sidney D. Morris, typographical engineering; A. L. Tatum, toxicology; G. C. Cast, and W. C. Ryan, German; H. A. Langenhan, pharmacy; and Arthur E. Fish, public speaking.

WORKING FELLOWSHIPS.

The appointment of eight college graduates to working fellowships at the university in connection with the state railroad commission, the state tax commission and the insurance commissioner's office, has just been announced by the university regents. These fellowships provide that one-half the time must be spent in practical work on the commission to which the holder is appointed, and one-half in graduate study in the university.

On the railroad commission, the working fellows in transportation and public utilities are John Burton Ames, A. B., University of Michigan; and Richard Sterling Ely, A. B., Harvard University. On the same commission the two fellows in engineering are Daniel Elias Davis, C. E., Ohio State University; and August Herman Leschke, B. S., Trinity College.

The working fellows on the tax commission are John Goodwin Herndon, M. A., Washington and Lee University; and Henry Brainard Nelson, A. B., University of Washington.

The two fellows appointed in the office of the state insurance commissioner are William Warren Newsum, A. M., Columbia University; and Grady H. Hipp, A. B., Newberry College.

NO GROUND FOR CARY'S CHARGES

That the only facts which State Superintendent C. P. Cary presented to the committee of the regents appointed to consider his resolution in regard to teaching in the University of Wisconsin, were concerned with the teaching of two assistants; and that Supt. Cary's complaint in each of these cases was based upon the report made to him by one dissatisfied student, were shown in the report adopted by the board of regents of the University of Wisconsin at a special meeting held to consider Supt. Cary's resolution to abolish assistants as teachers in the university.

The committee of the regents fully investigated Supt. Cary's resolutions presented at the April meeting of the board. Mr. Cary submitted only a verbal statement to the committee in support of his resolutions and based his charges on complaints of two students who were dissatisfied with the teaching of two assistants. As he gave neither the names of the assistants nor of the students, the regents' committee was unable to ascertain the facts concerning the efficiency of the assistants' instruction.

Upon all the facts presented the committee after full discussion submitted to the board of regents the finding of the facts which were adopted by the full board and which in substance is as follows:

"The facts presented completely contradict the allegation made by the state superintendent that the instruction of sophomores and freshmen is in charge of inexperienced or mediocre teachers; nor is there any foundation for the allegation that the main interests of the assistants are in their graduate studies rather than in their instructional work. The testimony from the departments shows conclusively that in the work of the university, instruction is put first and investigation second.

"The facts presented in the reports of the deans and professors show conclusively that the instruction of the great majority of assistants is satisfactory; that those who give indifferent instruction are comparatively few; and this is the most that can be hoped for under any system.

"It appears that in every large department of the university the great elementary subjects are in charge of a man of assistant professor or higher rank."

BOOK REVIEWS

Changing America, by Edward Alsworth Ross, Ph. D., LL. D., Professor of Sociology in the University of Wisconsin. A Brilliant Presentation of Sub-surface Tendencies in Modern Society. The Century Co., New York. Price $1.20 net. 236 pp.

This interesting volume from the fertile pen of the "tall man of the faculty" is fascinating from beginning to end. Whether it be the professor's scathing arraignment of the commercialism of our day; or his daring criticism of modern tendencies in journalism; or his glowing praise of the service of the University of Wisconsin toward the state and nation; or his sympathetic treatment of the abject position of the factory girl—there is not a moment that the attention lags, not a minute but what we wonder, what next?

To be sure, the remedies proposed for various evils are at times more ideal than practical. An endowed newspaper, for instance, is by no means conceded by journalists generally to be a practical remedy against the "suppression of important news." Nor will those who are pessimistic over the great number of "dead" statutes now on our law books be enthusiastic over the suggestion of Professor Ross that to solve the problem of woman in industry "there is nothing left except the will of organized society expressing itself in law." However this may be, Professor Ross succeeds in making all of us think.

Wisconsin, An Experiment in Democracy, by Frederic C. Howe, Ph. D., formerly Lecturer in Political Science at the University of Wisconsin. New York, Charles Scribner's Sons. Price $1.25 net. xiv+202 pp.

He who would see Wisconsin as the political paradise of America will do well to look through the spectacles of Dr. Howe. His warm personal admiration for Senator La Follette, '79, to whom the book is dedicated, makes the book an intensely partisan one in its first chapters, in which the Progressive Movement in the state is reviewed.

This partisanship disappears, however, in later chapters, in which the Industrial Commission, State Insurance, and Equalizing the Tax Burdens are discussed objectively and in a strikingly illuminating manner. For general reading these chapters are extremely valuable.

Of especial interest to Wisconsin graduates are the last five chapters of the volume, which deal with the democratization of learning through the extension and agricultural divisions of the university. We strongly advise especially those who attended college before the days of the Extension Division to read these chapters. The amount of evidence of the realization of the university's ideal of service accumulated by Dr. Howe is as striking as it is interesting.

A valuable Bibliography of Important Laws and Literature on Wisconsin concludes the volume.

Concentration and Control, A Solution of the Trust Problem in the United States, by Charles R. Van Hise, '79, President of the University of Wisconsin. New York, The Macmillan Company. Price $2.00. xiii+288 pages.

We doubt whether there is a work in the field of economic literature today that assembles more facts and figures, and offers more remedies to solve the trust problem, than does this volume of Dr. Van Hise. The whole trust problem is analyzed from its very origin, beginning with an exposition of the economic advantages, the causes, the purposes of concentration, then proceeding to an elucidation of various forms of organization and concentration, and finally to a discussion of competition in its various forms. All this forms the first large section of the book, entitled, "The General Facts Regarding Concentration."

The next section deals with "Some Important Illustrations of Concentration," and marshals an amazing wealth of facts concerning such corporations as the Standard Oil Company, The American Tobacco Company, and the U. S. Steel Corporation.

Section 3 is a compilation of the laws in England, the United States and the individual states, regarding cooperation, with special emphasis on the Sherman Anti-trust Law; while section 4 takes up the situation in other countries.

The last section, which takes up fully one-fourth of the volume, is devoted to a discussion of the remedies offered by Dr. Van Hise. Briefly, the author's line of argument is this: while admitting the advantages of combination, he asserts a public interest in "businesses which restrain trade to such a degree as to control the market." President Van Hise would have such businesses regulated through a series of expert commissions which should perform the double function of encouraging reasonable concentration of industry and save the individual from oppression, greed and crime.

Throughout the book is lucid and systematic.
