Badgers Outlast Beavers Succumb to Hawkeyes Attack

by Jim Mott
UW Sports News Service

*Wisconsin 23, Oregon State 20
October 14*

THERE WAS no "Sky Shield" for Oregon State this sunny October afternoon and Wisconsin's aerial attack, triggered by the "Golden Arm" of Ron Miller blazed forth as never before this season to give the Badgers a comfortable 23-0 halftime lead.

A crowd of 45,274 attending the 3rd annual high school band day sat back in comfort, enjoyed the color, pageantry, and music of 63 massed bands during the halftime program, and awaited the second half of play with anticipation of more to come.

Hadn't the Badgers dominated play in the first half with their passing attack—216 yards on 14 completions in 24 attempts? Hadn't Pat Richter been sensational with his 7 receptions for 136 of those 216 yards? And the total yardage statistics for the first 30 minutes showed Wisconsin outgaining the Beavers by 264 yards to 105.

Wisconsin domination of the first half was as complete as Oregon State's second half comeback which narrowed the Badgers' margin of victory to 23-20. The Beavers managed to unlock the chains that had bound their running and passing attack in the final 30 minutes and much of their success revolved around the fine play of junior quarterback Terry Baker, probably as fine a back as Wisconsin fans have had the opportunity to watch in many a season. He ran, he passed, he punted, he played defense. He provided the spark that caused Badger fans to stir uncomfortably through much of the second half.

The first 30 minutes, though, were a thing of beauty for the home fans, and the Badgers responded with a dazzling attack that almost swept the Beavers out of Camp Randall.

The passes of Miller to his favorite targets for the day—Richter, Staley, Bichler, Holland, and Fleming—set up all three of Wisconsin's scores, though an eight yard flip to Staley was the only scoring pass for the winners.

Oregon State moved downfield to Wisconsin's 35 yard line the first time it had possession of the football, before the Badgers braced and forced a fourth down punt into the end zone by Terry Baker. The lone interception of the day gave the Beavers another early opportunity three plays later, but a nine yard loss on a fumbled pass from center, and a pass play that backfired for another five yard loss stopped the threat, and forced Baker to again punt, this time the ball rolling dead on the Wisconsin 15.

The Badgers covered the 85 yards in 12 plays, with passes to Richter for 18, Staley for 13, and Richter again, for 36, setting up first downs on the Badgers' 37, midfield, and the Beavers' 14. A third down pass from the Oregon State 17 was ruled good on an interference call by the officials, and the Badgers were three yards away from a score.

It took three plays—Lou Holland was dropped for a two yard loss on first down—but after Merritt Norvell had banged to the two yard line, Miller carried the ball over on a sneak for the first Wisconsin touchdown since the second period of the Utah game. A mere 37 seconds remained to be played in the first period. Jim Bakken kicked the extra point to give the Badgers a 7-0 lead.

Oregon State moved smartly downfield following the kickoff, reaching a first down on the Badgers' 31. But a penalty, two incomplete passes, and a screen pass that Pat Richter diagnosed and spilled the receiver for a five yard loss brought up another fourth down punt situation; and Baker booted the ball

The Badgers went 80 yards in just three plays, though two other plays were cancelled by penalties. Jim Nettles, the leading Wisconsin ground gainer for the day, sped around Oregon State's left end for 33 yards to the 47. Penal-

Badger end Ron Staley fights his way into the end zone to complete an eight yard pass play from Ron Miller. This was the Badgers' third and last touchdown of the day as a dead game Oregon State team came roaring back with 20 points in the second half.

ties for illegal procedure on successive plays moved the ball back ten yards, then Miller hit Richter on the Beavers' 25 with a "bomb", and big Pat moved down to the four yard line before being downed.

On first down, Nettles cut off the Beavers' left tackle to score, with 11:13 left to play in the period. Again, Bakken placekicked the extra point.

The Badgers moved downfield the next time they had the ball, with Miller hitting Bichler and Staley on passes good for 12 and 13 yards, respectively, to put the ball on the State 20 yard line; but penalties, especially one for intentional grounding of the ball, brought up a long yardage situation, and Bakken punted out of bounds on the Beavers' three yard line.

Here came the key play. Gates pounded the Badgers' middle for six yards to the nine, but Whittle, trying to go wide, could not turn the corner, and was forced back into the end zone where Lou Holland nailed him for a safety, and Wisconsin led 16-0 with 6:36 left to play.

The ensuing free kick was returned by Norvell 31 yards to the Oregon State 49, and an unnecessary roughness penalty on the losers moved the ball an additional 15 yards to the 34.

A seven yard Miller to Richter pass play brought about a fourth down and short yardage situation to keep the Badgers "alive"; and Neil Fleming found a good hole through the middle and a first down on the Beavers' 18. A third down Miller to Richter pass brought another first down on the 8, and Miller then tossed a quickie to Staley which resulted in the Badgers final score with 3:39 to play. Bakken added the extra point for a 23-0 margin.

Oregon State did march downfield to Wisconsin's 32 yard line as the clock ticked off vital minutes and seconds, and Baker, back to pass, fumbled, and Jim Jax recovered on the State 45.

The Badgers, again utilizing the pass, moved to the 34 on Miller's pass to Bichler, to the 14 on a completion to Holland, and to the 10 on a short completion to Richter, and to the 7 on Miller's flip to Fleming. A fake fourth down field goal attempt ended in a pass, almost intercepted by Whittle.

The third period was Oregon State's,

Dave Bichler makes a difficult grab of a Ron Miller pass in Oregon State territory late in the first half.

In the Oregon State game, Pat Richter set a Wisconsin pass-catching record as he hauled in a total of 8 passes for 138 yards. Here he is shown taking a Miller pass as the Badgers moved to their third touchdown against the Beavers.

and they asserted superiority almost immediately, moving from their own 20 to a score in 11 plays. An unnecessary roughness penalty on Wisconsin got the march off to a good start. The key plays were a 19 yard gallop by Jim Sinyard, and a fourth down six yard end sweep—Wisconsin's left side—that kept the drive alive. Baker's pass to end Roger Johnson for the final ten yards netted the score. A two point pass conversion play fell incomplete. Wisconsin led 23-6 with 9:52 left in the third period.

Bakken and Baker exchanged punts of 56 and 52 yards, respectively, before disaster struck the Badgers, who had moved to their own 40 on good runs by Fleming, Norvell, and Holland. A second down sweep with Holland carrying backfired, and Holland, retreating, was spilled for a 24 yard loss. Miller, on the next play, ran, and fumbled when hit, and Denny Pieters recovered for the Beavers on Wisconsin's 21.

Four plays netted the score, with Gates getting the final nine yards in three plunges, after Don Kasso went 12 yards on first down to the Badgers' 9. Sinyard, on a reverse, ran the ball across for a two point conversion, and Wisconsin led 23-14, with 3:04 yet to play in the third period.

A Wisconsin field goal attempt from long range, set up by Lou Holland's 42 yard return fell short, and State moved from their own 16 to a third TD in just eight plays. Baker proved the star in the march, racing 27 yards on a keeper, and passing on third down to end Roger Johnson for the final 36 yards. Johnson made a juggling catch and fell into the end zone for the score. A two point conversion rush, was stopped short, and Wisconsin led, 23-20, with 12:03 left to play.

The Badgers threatened to score soon after as Nettles broke off a 42 yard run—longest of the year to date for the Badgers—but Whittle caught the fleet Badger from behind on the Beavers' 23. The Badger attack moved the ball for another first down, then yielded to the Beavers' defense on State's 9.

Here, Baker moved the aroused Oregon Staters downfield to successive first downs on the Beavers' 22 and 40 yard lines, then to Wisconsin's 45. But the clock was becoming a definite factor. A gamble on State's own 16 on a fourth down situation kept the drive alive as Kasso went wide for six and a first down. Two plays after the first down on the Badgers' 45 found Oregon State with a third down and two situation, and Baker passed incomplete, then sent Whittle up the middle for a yard as sophomore center Ken Bowman and junior guard Dion Kempthorne made the stop as the clock showed 1:45 to play. The Badgers played out the remaining time, their victory hard-earned and most deserving.

October 21

IT JUST WASN'T Wisconsin's day at Iowa City this October afternoon, and Iowa's Hawkeyes did everything right. The result was a lopsided 47-15 decision over the Badgers as a record Iowa Homecoming crowd of 60,150 cheered wildly from the moment Iowa won the toss of the coin til the band finished its post game concert.

Gray morning skies cleared to reveal a warming sun as Iowans and Badger fans streamed into Iowa Stadium to witness this 39th meeting of revered football foes who first met in 1894. In that first meeting Wisconsin drubbed Iowa, 44-0, and through the ensuing years, in 37 other encounters, the best Iowa could ever do to make up for that early humiliation was 30-12 victory in 1940, also at Iowa City. Today, Iowa's revenge was complete.

The issue was settled in the first 2 minutes, 20 seconds of play following Jim Bakken's kickoff to Sammie Harris on Iowa's 8 yard line. Harris returned 20 yards, then halfback Joe Williams went over Wisconsin's left guard for six yards, and Bernie Wyatt picked up five yards and a first down on the 39. Williams then broke through the Wisconsin defense around left end for 59 yards, before Bill Smith caught him from behind on the Badgers' 2 yard line. Wyatt slashed off left tackle for the remaining two yards and the score. Matt Szykowny added the first of five extra points by placement, and Iowa's 7-0 lead was secure.

The teams exchanged punts—Wisconsin punting after reaching Iowa's 44, then stopping the Hawks near midfield to force one of two first half punt situations. The Badgers could not move the ball, and again punted. Unknowingly, the rout was on.

Szykowny rallied Iowa's forces 51 yards downfield in nine plays to register the second Hawkeye tally, with the pattern of attack thus—the halfbacks moving wide to exert pressure on Wisconsin's ends and pick up valuable short yardage; and on third down, Szykowny would pass. He was able to hit end Cloyd Webb for ten yards in the first series of plays, halfback Paul Krause for nine yards and another first down on the second series of plays.

Wisconsin 15, Iowa 47

Even a five yard motion penalty didn't stop the Iowans, as Williams swept Wisconsin's left end for 11 yards, setting up Szykowny's scoring aerial to Webb, good for the final 11 yards, with 2:31 yet to play in the first period.

In quick order the score mounted to 33-0 as the poised and ever-confident Hawkeyes, urged onward by their screeching followers, took advantage of Wisconsin mistakes—two intercepted passes, and a recovered fumble—to make a shambles of the contest.

Ron Miller's second down pass was intercepted by Mike Reilly on the second play following the kickoff after Iowa's second score; and the Hawkeyes had moved to first down on the Badgers' 12, then to the four yard line in two thrusts as the first period ended. Lon Rogers crashed for three yards, then Szykowny tallied the score on a "sneak" with just 29 seconds played in the second period.

The Badgers ran four plays in their next offensive series, with a Miller to Staley pass setting up a first down at Wisconsin's 40. On third down, Jim Bakken went wide on an option play, fumbled when hit, and Jim Helgens recovered for Iowa on the Badgers' 33. On the play previous, the Iowa defense had spilled Miller for a 12 yard loss.

It took seven plays—a fourth down pass from Szykowny to end Felton Rogers gave Iowa a first down on Wisconsin's 13, and in three short bursts the Hawkeyes scored again. Williams attacked Wisconsin's left end for four yards, then five, and on third down, Harris slithered through left guard for the tally. 9:10 was yet to play in the second period.

Again, the teams exchanged punts, with Wisconsin gaining 14 yards on the exchange—helped by a 15 yard clipping penalty on Iowa. The Badgers took to the air lanes once more.

Miller's second down pass was plucked from the air by Iowa's Sherwyn Thorson, and he lumbered back -6 yards to the Badgers' 28 to set up another Iowa scoring opportunity. The Hawks added insult to injury here. They did it in one play as Szykowny passed to Webb and the lean, 6-3 sophomore end gathered it in as he stepped into the end zone. Szykowny, who had missed the extra points on the first two TD's in this period, added the point, and it was Iowa 33, Wisconsin 0, with 4:08 still to play in the period.

Not since Milt Bruhn's first season as head coach, and that takes us back to November 3, 1956, has a Wisconsin team been so outclassed in one half of a football game. The Badgers trailed Michigan State 26-0 that afternoon at halftime, and the Spartans won, 33-0.

Iowa's first half attack was overpowering—246 yards to Wisconsin's 80—with Szykowny completing all nine of the passes he threw for 107 yards. The Badgers, who live or die by the pass, (and this day, three intercepted passes helped the dying no end) could complete just six of 16 attempts for 54 yards. Ron Miller completed 3 of 11, had two intercepted, for 25 yards, while reserve John Fabry completed 3 of 5 for 29 yards in the closing moments of the period.

Fabry was still at the helm of Wisconsin's third period attack, which did move downfield to put the Badgers on the scoreboard. The teams exchanged punts, and Fabry sent the Badgers racing 62 yards in five plays for the touch-down. Louis Holland, sophomore from Union Grove, ripped off a 33 yard run to Iowa's 29, and followed immediately with a 14 yard sweep around Iowa's left end to set the ball on the 15. Bill Smith ran hard for eight yards, and the Hawks were penalized half the distance to the goal for unnecessary roughness on the play. Fabry made a yard, then Holland slammed through left tackle for his first collegiate score. Jim Bakken added the extra point with 10:36 left to play in the period.

The aroused Badgers had another chance almost immediately, as Bill Hess picked off a Szykowny aerial on the Wisconsin 46, and returned 27 yards to Iowa's 27. Two running plays moved the ball to the 21, then Fabry, on an action pass play was hit by Cloyd Webb for a 10 yard loss, and the threat was over. A fourth down pass, Fabry to Richter—the big end's first reception of the day—left the ball five yards short of a first down, with the Hawkeyes taking over, and moving smartly 78 yards in 11 plays for their sixth score.

The passing of Szykowny and the running of Sammie Harris featured this drive, with Szykowny passing to Webb for 20, to Krause for 9, to Webb for 17 more, and to Williams for the final seven yards and the touchdown that made the score 40-7 when the Iowa quarterback kicked the extra point. Harris contributed hard running, including a 16 yard burst around the Badgers' right end. Just 47 seconds remained to be played in the third period at this point as Gary Fletcher kicked off to Neil Fleming on the Wisconsin 15 yard line. He came back 20 yards.

A Wisconsin penalty for clipping on first down set Wisconsin back on its 26 following Holland's six yard scamper, and a pass from Fabry to Smith was broken up as the period ended.

The first play of the final quarter saw Fabry flip a flat pass intended for Fleming, but Iowa end Bill Whisler grabbed it, and hustled into the end zone 21 yards away for Iowa's final points. Szykowny added the extra point for a 47-7 lead with just seven seconds played in the fourth period.

A blocked punt by reserve end Elmars Ezerins with 9:06 left, gave Wisconsin its chance to score a second touchdown, and with Miller back in at quarterback, the task took only four plays. Completions to Hearn and Richter set up a first down at the Iowa 11, and Holland gained a yard on first down to the 10. Miller rolled out as if to keep, spread the defenders, tossed a short flare pass to Holland, who scooted into the end zone for the tally. A Miller to Fleming pass play netted a two point conversion and the scoreboard read 47-15 with 7:16 to play.

An Iowa attempt to further embarrass the embattled Badgers misfired in the final two seconds of play when a field goal attempt fell short after Iowa had moved to Wisconsin's 23 in the last minute of play.

Game statistics were not encouraging to the Badgers, as Iowa racked up 205 yards the second half, to Wisconsin's 149. Overall, the Hawkeyes had 451 yards —229 rushing, 222 passing — almost evenly distributed between running and passing, while Wisconsin's running attack gained 98 yards in 33 rushes, and passing picked up 131 yards on 12 completions in 31 attempts.

And to complete the account of this sad day in Iowa, let it be recorded, too, that Wisconsin's unbeaten cross country team also lost to Iowa, 27-31 over a fog shrouded four mile course the morning of the game. It set an omen that didn't change when the sun came out later.
