This month's cover:

LAST minute instructions and farewells are in order as the first WAVES arrive to take over duties previously performed by sailors and the bluejackets depart for active service on the fighting ships of our United States Navy. Everyone seems to be happy about the whole thing, the sailors are anxious to take a crack at a Jap or a German, and the WAVES are anxious to start the work that will release more men to fighting stations.

FEBRUARY 5, 1943, is the 94th birthday of the University of Wisconsin. From humble beginnings with 20 students meeting in a little one room red brick building for their first class, the university has grown in size and breadth and scope and now its graduates, numbering 108,000, have made the teachings and influence of the university felt around the world.

Conceived at a time when the hard-fisted frontiersmen of Wisconsin were sorely-pressed for money and were busily engaged in wresting a somewhat meagre livelihood from the land and the forests, the newly founded university was born into pioneerhood and early cast its lot with those of the fathers of the state in a fierce and sometimes bitter struggle for survival.

Toughened by adversity and strengthened by struggle and aided by a group of brave and hopeful men the university fought its battle for freedom and today is recognized as one of the leading institutions of higher learning in the country.

We cannot here take time nor space to mention its graduates who have brought glory to the university by their contributions to the arts, sciences, the humanities, thereby helping to build a better people. But their number is many, and many also are there whose names have not come down to us but who have quietly and solidly built the foundations for better citizenship upon which our civilization now stands.

Throughout the years the university has sought to remain true to the ideals for which it was founded, and often beset with pettiness and politics, it has kept its standards high and has always triumphed in bringing out the best that's in education.

Thus have we kept faith with those men who in spite of opposition from all sides and sadly hampered by the lack of funds built firm the foundations of the university for all times.

And so her record stands, a proud and lofty one. We do not know what the future has in store for the university but we know that under the "Numen Lumen" seal and colors cardinal and white the university will continue to advance, to seek a better life for its fellow man, and to reflect ever still more credit on the name of Wisconsin.

Long may her colors wave and long may the people of the state continue to point with pride to their great University of Wisconsin!

The Editor.

MIDWAY between Lake Michigan and the muddy waters of the Mississippi in southern Wisconsin . . . almost in the shadow of the Badger state capitol . . . there stands a group of mighty buildings dedicated to a glorious service. It is the University of Wisconsin.

On February 5, 1849, the university of which we speak was born. It was founded by a group of humble men who could see far into the future, whose vision was of a great state university honored by all men which would call to her portals from far and near seekers for the truth, lovers of humanity, supporters of freedom.

Today the vision which these men cherished has become a reality. Thousands upon thousands of young men and women have had their thirst for knowledge answered at her fountain of education and have gone forth into a world made better by the precepts of honesty, justice, strength and integrity taught there.

Now we find ourselves engulfed in a bitter battle for freedom. The basic principles of our government, conceived in the minds of the men who offered their lives at Bunker Hill and Valley Forge and to which the university stands pledged to ever strengthen and uphold must meet a challenge which has been ruthlessly forced upon it.

But the American way of living will ever stand bright and free—and it is to that end that we at home during this emergency within and out of our country do solemnly pledge to the men of the uniform that it shall be preserved to them who are away and are soon to return and to those who are yet to come.

The roar of cannon and the cry of the wounded and dying though from afar make us in America citizen conscious, make us in America renew our pledge of allegiance to our great and glorious form of government, and make us in America dedicate ourselves anew to the doctrine of the brotherhood and equality of man.

So I say to my fellow alumni on Founders' Day, we have a task to perform that requires work and effort on our part. Our university is doing a great job in this great cause; we must help her. Our boys and girls must continue to be properly educated in the fundamental science of our form of government. Truth is eternal and wisdom is not the subject of economic changes; the definition of liberty and freedom will ever be the same.

In closing, on our Founders' Day I appeal to all loyal alumni and friends of our beloved university to renew their loyalty to this great institution and to the service that it so valiantly renders, with the idea of keeping our university upon its same course, guided only by the compass of fine education and good citizenship, so that when our boys return they will find her as they left her.

Our United States Supreme Court, speaking through Justice Sutherland, puts it this way: "Do the people of this land—in the providence of God, favored, as they sometimes boast, above all others in the plentitude of their liberties—desire to preserve those so carefully protected by the First Amendment: liberty of religious worship, freedom of speech and of the press, and the right as free men peaceably to assemble and petition their government for a redress of grievance. If so, let them withstand all beginnings of encroachment. For the saddest epitaph which can be carved in memory of a vanished liberty is that it was lost because its possessors failed to stretch forth a saving hand while yet there was time."

Yours for Victory, abroad and at home,

C. F. Van Pelt

A colorful and picturesque note in the university's early history was furnished by the Boarding Clubs of the 80's. This one is typical . . .

The Boss Club

by

Oscar Hallam, '87

THE period of the 80's was, as a matter of anthropological history, the Boarding Club Age. The clubs of that time were epochal and their history should be known. In fact college education at the University of Wisconsin in the 80's cannot be understood without taking into account the boarding clubs as they then prevailed. College education is largely a matter of social education and boarding clubs of that time were as essentially part of the social life as the old dormitories had been in the decades before.

I take the Boss Club as a type, partly because it was fairly typical, partly because I lived there and knew the Boss Club from the inside.

Do not be misled by the word "club"; there was no clubby glamour hanging around the place. It was just a place to eat fast and cheap. Its organization consisted of a steward to buy and a cook to cook and serve.

The personnel of the Boss Club was interesting. I remember most of its members. Far east went Tawney of Winona; after practicing law a while in Winona he became state senator, then a congressman. He served with great distinction in congress. Before one election President Taft came to Winona to make a speech in Tawney's behalf. For the first time in his career Tawney was not elected.

Then there was Tom Walsh of Two Rivers. He went west and practiced law unobtrusively in Dakota Territory; then he went to Helena, Montana, was appointed to the office of attorney general of the United States but died before taking that office.

Bainbridge went farthest; he joined the diplomatic service and spent the period of the Boxer rebellion with the American Legation in Peking.

Some remained nearer by. There was John Toohey of Milwaukee, who prospered at the bar and became district attorney.

Then there was John Barnes, a rugged personality. He became justice of the supreme court and later general counsel for the N. W. Mutual Life Insurance Co. I remember Horace Bancroft, who went back to Richland Center whence he came, but later came back to Madison as attorney general of the state.

I remember Nethercutt, who went to Milwaukee in a legal position with the N. W. Mutual Life Ins. Co.; Arthur Goss, who became a judge in Oshkosh; Buck, who went back to Winona and became a judge; Oldenburg, who went to Minnesota and became a prosperous lawyer for prosperous clients; Thygeson became a big man at the St. Paul bar; Curtis went to an Iowa small town and became prosperous enough to retire.

Julian Bennett went to South Dakota and there became a judge; McGrady went to North Dakota and became a lawyer; Matts went to Montana, became an influential democrat, a state senator and head of Marcus Daly's campaign for the U. S. senate in the somewhat famous Clark-Daly melee; Bradley became an outstanding lawyer in Salt Lake City; the two Witters went to San Francisco where one became U. S. district attorney; Joe Hallam went to Soo City, Chicago, and closed his career in Los Angeles; Will went to Minneapolis and then to Portland, Oregon.

I remember Isaacs, who beat up a freshman in self-defense, and after the verdict of not-guilty gave a memorial dinner to his rooters at the Boss Club. I was present.

I do not know what became of Charlie John, some of the things he did impressed me. Charlie was a hunter. I remember this item in the college annual. "Charles John cleaned his gun in his room. The occupant of the adjoining room after clearing away the debris, plugged up the hole with a pillow."

On another occasion near Christmas Charlie gustily announced: "I've been in town three months and I didn't see Rusk (the governor) till today." "Perhaps he did not know you were here," quickly riposted Cutler. I have lost track of my intimate old friend, Cutler.

Then there was Wickham, I remember him as a football player. At our club the grid-iron was the public street. Once when Wickham kicked, or "punted," the ball from near his goal, alas! the ball rose and catapulted back over his head and through his own goal. I was on his side.

Any history of the Boss Club would be incomplete without some further analysis of the game as it was there played. Football as played in the Boss Club was pure football. Rugby rules never meant anything to us. No player was permitted to grab the ball in his hands and run with it in his arms. The player might catch the ball with his hands and in such event he had a "free kick," an unmo-lested kick, but he must kick with his foot because it was "foot" ball he was playing. And he had no one to kneel attendance and hold the ball for him, he had to drop the ball and kick it before gravity carried it to the ground.

Old Jim was taking a post graduate course at the business college after finishing his course at the Platteville Normal School. Once he said, "I don't see how a man can go through the university and yet use bad grammar." Another business college chap once learnedly revealed to Thygeson that the Norwegians had a grammar.

Now, a word as to the system: I do not know when the Boss Club began. It was a going concern when I first knew of it. It took its name from the fact that Mrs. Boss and her two spinster daughters were the most essential part of it. Mrs. Boss owned or at least occupied an old frame house on Francis Street. At some time or other someone had negotiated with her as follows:

Mrs. Boss was to give the use of two rooms for dining rooms, to furnish tables, chairs, dishes with risk of breakage, linen, silver or other metallic equipment, likewise light and heat, likewise cook and serve all food for three meals a day, all for 50c a week for each member. As my memory serves me, there were 30 members, so Mrs. Boss and daughters received for their return on investment, breakage, labor, skill, genius, approximately, or exactly $15.00 per week.

The steward was elected by referendum vote of the club. He was the purchasing agent and general manager; his meals were his reward.

The cost per week per member ranged from $1.87 to $2.13 including the Boss stipend and the steward's cost, so that the cost of food was a bit less than $1.37 to $1.63.

We thought we lived well. Breakfast always closed with oatmeal; dinner (midday) always included pie, and supper always included cake. There was coffee for breakfast, artesian water for dinner and tea for supper.

We had some extravagances. With some uniformity we ate molasses on pie, particularly mince and apple. I expect this was a local custom, I never knew of it elsewhere.

The Boss Club was a market overt. There were certain definitely understood trade rules. You could have all the oatmeal you wanted, all the bread and butter you wanted, all the potatoes and gravy you wanted, one reasonable ration of meat, never a second piece of pie. You could deal with your one piece of pie a day as you saw fit; you could gamble with any specified kind of pie or pie for any day as the stakes. After a baseball game or a "joint debate" you might fare well or badly.

The real market in pie was an exchange and helped make our university center it now is.

The Treleases Are Like That

by Marion Lea Stearns, '39

"WHEN I think of the days I spent on the Wisconsin campus, I recall good times with Jennie Bascom, Sue Sterling, and Carrie Howe (Porter)" Mrs. William B. Trelease, the former Julia Johnson, class of 1881, greeted me when I called on her a few days ago in her home in Urbana, Illinois. Mrs. Trelease is 83 years old, "84 next August 9" she told me.

"Madison is a beautiful city, and if I were to go back anywhere to live it would be Madison—set as it is between the two beautiful lakes. And what fun we used to have boating on Lake Mendota! My father, Hiram Johnson, manufactured farmer's implements and he had a boathouse directly behind his office on the lake shore. We used to bring our lunch and he would get his boat out for us to row over to Picnic Point on many a sunny day—Jennie, and Sue, and Carrie and I . . ."

Talking to Mrs. Trelease and her husband, Professor Emeritus William Trelease of the University of Illinois botany faculty, is like a very intimate glimpse of old Wisconsin. They were in Madison in the early 1880's, leaving it for St. Louis, Mo., in 1885, three years after they were married. They resided in St. Louis until 1912. The next year they lived in Europe and came the following fall to Champaign-Urbana.

"Mother and father came to Madison from the east when I was very small," Mrs. Trelease continued as she recalled days in Madison. "We lived at first in Ladies Hall (now Chadbourne) and our family had meals at a separate table in the dining room. University officials wanted mother to stay on as chaperon and sort of manager of the hall, but instead we moved to our house on State street and then to one father built on Langdon street about a block from the campus.

"I spent lots of time at Jennie Bascom's home. That was while her father was president of the university. And Susan Sterling and Carrie Howe lived next door to each other at the head of State street. Sue's father, John Sterling, was vice-president of the university and professor of mathematics."

Seated comfortably in her favorite spot, an old fashioned chair in the living room of the Trelease home at 804 South Lincoln avenue in Urbana—where she can look down two streets and watch the activity of a busy university town—Mrs. Trelease's blue eyes twinkled as she told about meeting her future husband-to-be in Madison.

Chadbourne Hall, Mrs. Trelease's home as a little girl

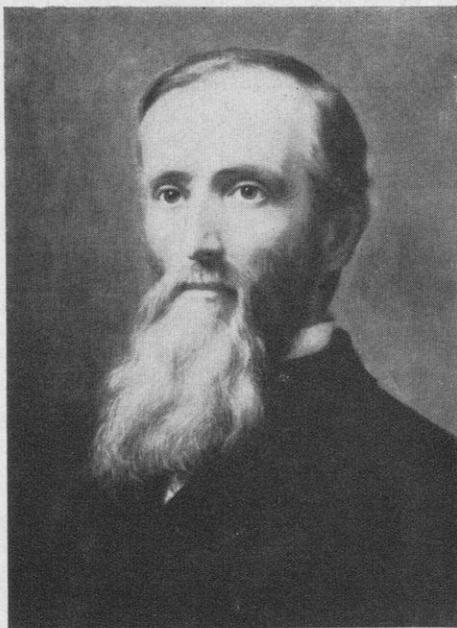

"It was during my senior year that he first called on me," she said, "and he kept calling! He was on the rostrum with the faculty when I gave my graduation address. We were married a year after I finished my course. He is a botanist, you know, and was head of the botany department at Wisconsin."

It was during those years at Wisconsin that Professor Trelease and Dr. Edward A. Birge became acquainted. Wisconsin's president emeritus and distinguished limnologist was at that time teaching zoology, and of course was associated with Prof. Trelease, the botanist. That friendship has been kept warm throughout the intervening years through correspondence and visits. A good many years ago when Dr. Birge visited in Urbana, the Treleases entertained all Wisconsin grads in the area of Champaign-Urbana in his honor.

Thinking that perhaps Mrs. Trelease had a special field of study, too, I asked her what course she took in the university, and her answer was typical of her unassuming manner. "I just studied what they laid out as a course," she chuckled. "Nothing interested me particularly. I was having a good time, and after I met Mr. Trelease, it was more a case of finishing the course. We were married in 1882 in the Congregational church in Madison. Rev. Charles Richards was the minister, Jennie Bascom and Sue Sterling were two of the bridesmaids."

Wisconsin recognized Professor Trelease's outstanding scientific work in the St. Louis botanical garden by honoring him with an L. L. D. degree in 1902. He is a Cornellian, class of 1880, and earned his Ph. D. degree in Botany at Harvard University.

Retirement from faculty work has not meant retirement from botanical work for Professor Trelease. Every morning and every afternoon he goes to his office and laboratory on the campus and does botanical research. His alertness and activity suggest that of his friend, Dr. Birge, in Madison.

These days are more quiet for Mrs. Trelease.

"I don't get about as I used to," she said, "but I enjoy my home and my husband. From my chair here I have a lot to watch and I like to read and keep up with the times. Our life is quieter now but we have been very happy. Often in the evening I read to Mr. Trelease if he is tired. Finally I had to resign membership in the Score club, and I am sorry not to see those friends regularly any more, but I want to save my strength for my husband and for making his home."

The warm cordiality of the Treleases, and their genuine, active interest in things of today were a treat to experience. I went away with a feeling of pride that we could claim them both as a part of Wisconsin.

market. You could trade your pie for today for pie tomorrow, and tomorrow accordingly have two pieces. All pies had not the same exchange value; one had to deal shrewdly.

The Boss Club had no club rooms, no lounge, no carpets, no cushioned furniture, only dining tables and chairs, a meagre stoop on which to stand and wait, but somehow its memory is one of the most entrancing of my college course. I was later in the Beal Club at $2.40 a week, the McKinnon Club at $2.25, and later at Gallagher's fashionable boarding house at $3.00 a week, the most expensive place in town.

I had close friends in all these clubs, but somehow there wasn't the same "fascination frantic." I cannot prize memories of any as I do the memories of the Boss Club with all its kaleidoscopic and individualistic characters that gathered there, and its cheap but wholesome, well-cooked and abundant food. There was peace and plenty. These seemed to me to be the "Abundant life."

One of the Americans allowed to circulate by the Japs, Carl Neprud, '12 tells of . . . .

Hongkong: December 1941

ON HIS way back to America (intending to go by clipper) Carl Neprud, '12, arrived in Hongkong December 29, 1941, and as you can well imagine that's where he stayed until July when he was repatriated and returned to the United States via the exchange liner Gripsholm.

A member of the class of 1912, a popular basketball athlete and president pro tem of the student conference under President Van Hise, Carl was taken into the Chinese Maritime Customs in 1913 with which service he has been connected ever since.

He has been stationed in different parts of China and held different posts such as appraising commissioner in Shanghai, tariff secretary and more recently, (since the war) as liaison officer between occupied and unoccupied China. His work took him over the major portion of China, Burma, India, French Indo-China and Thailand, making three trips over the famous Burma Road.

He is now commissioner of customs on special duty in this country with headquarters at Hay-Adams House, Washington, D. C. On a speaking tour throughout the states he stopped and visited us in our office Jan. 9.

While in Hongkong, during and after the war, Carl worked with the Red Cross doing medical relief work, and because of that work he was one of seven Americans left free to circulate instead of living in a concentration camp as others were forced to do.

During the war he and his group supplied First Aid for civilians (and soldiers in many cases) so he got to the front lines rather frequently. Some of his trucks were hit, and some of the boys he was with were caught by the Japs and kept until the surrender of Hongkong.

Living in a strong granite building on the waterfront he was across the bay from the Japs on the mainland, and at one time counted 14 Jap "hits" on the front of his building.

After the surrender as the Jap army of occupation moved into Hongkong, Neprud and other members of his committee were allowed to operate for the relief of the civilians, as the Jap military had no machinery set up to care for civilians. The Japs honored him with a pass which allowed him to circulate freely and carry on his work unhindered.

Many people ask him why Hongkong fell, and Carl told us it was general knowledge that Hongkong would fall, that they all knew it was merely a matter of time once the seige started. They didn't know the end would come so quickly.

"The Japs were coordinated—they had had five and one-half years of experience in fighting China—they operated as one unit.

We had four units—British soldiers, Indian troops, Canadian forces and volunteers. They were inexperienced, couldn't coordinate their efforts because they were such a mixed group, and, of course, weren't as familiar with the terrain as the Japs.

Then, too, the Japs had a very effective 5th column working behind the lines which supplied lots of trouble to the defending armies".

Who Should Go to College and When?

by

John Guy Fowlkes

Director of Summer Session, University of Wisconsin

HIGH school students who will graduate next June are faced with an old, but this year in many ways a new, and perplexing question: Should I go to college, and if so, when? Parents and prospective high school graduates alike are searching for the answer to this question. The problem is serious for both young men and young women.

The basic principles that should be applied in reaching a decision on the matter of going to college are the same this year as they have been in the past, namely:

1. Do I have the ability to do college work?

2. Have I taken a program of high school studies which has prepared me for college?

In the year 1943, however, a new principle must be applied: the increasing need for competent and trained manpower.

England's experience in the war indicates that the necessary continuing stream of trained replacements can be made available only if the college education of the abler students is continued. Recent pronouncements of the military staffs in the United States indicate that they too realize the necessity for the college education of selected groups of draftees and enlisted men. The shortage of teachers, nurses, dieticians, physicians, clerical and secretarial personnel give evidence of the crying need for trained women.

It therefore seems clear that the high school graduates of next June who are planning to go to college, if at all possible, should start their freshman work in June rather than waiting until September to enter college.

In recognition of the need for accelerating the college education of young men and women, the University of Wisconsin during the summer of 1943 will offer a fifteen-weeks summer session beginning June third and ending September eighteenth, pointed especially to the needs of undergraduates. A full freshman program will be offered with a considerably larger number of senior staff members teaching in the fifteen week session than has been the case during the six week sessions held for undergraduates.

In addition to the regular freshman program there will be a rich offering in what may be termed the pre-induction fields, particularly in science and mathematics.

It will be possible during the fifteen week session to do a full semesters' work. The university proposes to continue operating on a round-the-clock or all-year basis as long as it seems necessary. Under this arrangement it will be possible for a student to do the required work for the bachelor's degree in two years and eight months as opposed to the traditional four year period.

For the high schools, the closing days of which come later than the opening of the university summer session, it seems to the best interests of all concerned to relieve high school seniors who are graduating next June of any high school activities which conflict with the opening of the university summer session. In keeping with this suggestion, Mr. John Callahan, State Superintendent of Instruction, has so advised the high school principals to that effect.

It is the intention of the previous discussion not to stimulate hysterical nor undesirable entrance into college. However, the need for accelerated college training seems clear at this time and those who are planning to enter the university in September, 1943 would do well to try to arrange their plans so that they can enter June 7 instead.

the University's next two years the regents send . .

A Message To All Alumni

by

A. J. Glover, President
Board of Regents

LIKE our state and nation, the University of Wisconsin is now going through one of the most crucial periods in its history.

Faced with dwindling enrollment of regular students and thus, also, of income on the one hand, but with a tremendous amount of war work on the other, our university has reached the proverbial crossroads. It could turn to right or left, and mark time—but it must not. Its duty is sun-clear. It lies on the road straight ahead, discharging its duties in educational training and public service for our state, and in its huge war task for our nation.

I do not believe that any college or university in America is doing more than Wisconsin to aid our nation in this war. When peace comes again and the whole story is told, I am sure that every citizen of the state will be more proud than ever of our university. Briefly let me list below some of the direct contributions the University of Wisconsin has made or is making to our nation's war efforts. This list is not complete, especially in detail, but it does reveal something of the vast war task our university has shouldered.

For Our Navy—Radio School

1. The Wisconsin campus is the home of a radio code and communications school for the United States navy, under which 1,200 sailors are continually being trained for this type of specialized work for the navy.

For Our Navy—WAVES Training

2. The University of Wisconsin is also the training center for 480 girl sailors of the navy. These WAVES are being trained as radio operators. On completion of their training these women will replace men communications operators at land bases of the navy, thus releasing men for sea duty.

For Our Army—Correspondence Courses

3. The university is the center of the Institute of Correspondence work for both the U. S. Army and Navy, which is making available to any soldier or sailor anywhere in the world, with at least four months' service, a practical means for educational training along with his military tasks.

For Our Army and Navy— Enlistment Programs

4. The University of Wisconsin served as a center for both army and navy enlistment programs, and thus cooperated to the fullest extent with the army air corps enlistment program and with the Navy's V-1, V-5, and V-7 enlistment program. The navy air corps has inducted six units of "Flying Badgers" on the campus and according to navy officials, the University of Wisconsin has given more men to naval aviation than any other school in the United States.

For Our Army—ROTC Trains Officers

5. The university's military science department has trebled its activities in the past year and is now training the largest enrollment it has ever had—about 2,600 men—to become officers in the United States army.

For Our Country—Streamlined Curriculum

6. A total of about 40 new and modified courses of study, specially designed to enable students to participate immediately in various phases of America's war program, are now being taught in the University. In addition, the University has speeded up its teaching and training processes to release its students earlier for work on farms or in industry, or to train men more rapidly for specialized work in war emergency fields. Thus, the entire university is now operating on a year-round basis, so that students may graduate in two and two-thirds years instead of four.

For Our Country—Civilian Pilot Training

7. Through its extension division, the university has made great contributions in the fields of civilian pilot training. To date more than 600 Wisconsin students have received pilot training in the Civilian Pilot Training courses at Madison operated by the Extension division.

For Our Country—ESMWT Classes

8. During the past six months under the federal Engineering, Science, and Management War Training program, the extension division has organized 500 classes, enrolling more than 10,000 students representing over 600 Wisconsin businesses and industries in 37 cities of the state. This training program is designed to develop special skills, especially for industries having war orders, where it is essential that production be speeded up to the maximum volume.

For Our Country—Scientific Research

9. The University of Wisconsin has placed its science personnel and facilities at the disposal of the federal government for the duration. More than 100 of the university's outstanding scientists are lending their special knowledge and training to the solution of scientific problems in the field of national defense. What these problems are, and who is working on what, is a military secret.

For Our Army—Machinist's Course

10. The university is operating a special training course for the United States army air forces. From 150 to 170 army air force machinists are being trained continually in the mechanical engineering department.

For Our Navy—Diesel Engine Classes

11. The university's department of mechanical engineering is giving 30 naval officers specialized training in diesel engine operation.

For Our Army—Wood Inspectors

12. The university has also cooperated with the U. S. Forest Products Laboratory in training civilians as wood inspectors for the army air forces.

For Our Navy—Cooks, Bakers School

13. The university is also operating a School for Cooks and Bakers for the United States navy, in which sailors are being trained as cooks for navy ships and land bases. The sailors are being trained in the university residence halls kitchens under the supervision of the expert cooks and dietitians there.

(All of these special courses operate on a continuing basis, that is, as soon as one group of men graduates and returns to active duty with the nation's armed forces, another group comes to the university campus to begin training. All of these courses, plus the naval radio schools, have brought more than 2,000 men and women to the campus for specialized training for Uncle Sam's armed forces.)

The Navy code school men use the field house for one of their huge classrooms. They are shown learning to type out messages given over the phone

For Our Country—War Bonds

14. University civil service and faculty employees are now enrolled in a voluntary payroll allotment plan under which they have authorized the university business office to deduct from their paychecks each month a certain amount with which to purchase war bonds.

For Our Country—Civilian Defense Set-up

15. The university administration has established a civilian defense set-up of its own to provide for the war-time protection of the campus and the university's physical plant—property which belongs to the citizens of Wisconsin.

For Our Country—3,500 Alumni in Service

16. According to the latest estimates of the alumni records office on the campus, more than 3,500 University of Wisconsin alumni are now enlisted in the armed forces of the United States.

For Our Country—Physical Training

17. The university has enlarged its physical training program for both its men and women students, beginning in the fall of 1942, to aid them in bettering their physical fitness standards for the war effort.

For Our Country—Registration of Women

18. The University of Wisconsin this fall completed an all-out registration of its women students for war work—the first complete registration of women in any college, university, or community anywhere in the United States. The Wisconsin women registered in their own Women's Emergency National Training Service, from which they derive their abbreviated name—the WENTS. A total of 2,330 women students registered for training and work in home nursing, first aid, U.S.O. hostess work, Morse code work, Red Cross work, nutrition and canteen training, service crafts, tractor driving, radio training, blueprint reading and training, and motor mechanics training.

For Our Country—Home Nursing Taught

19. The University of Wisconsin Medical School and School of Nursing are cooperating in giving the training in home nursing to the women students who are registered in the WENTS for that course. It is expected to train about 300 women in this work this year. In case of an epidemic, such as the influenza epidemic during World War I, these women students, with their nurses training, would be able to perform an invaluable service in caring for the sick.

Future officers, ROTC trained, march on Army Day

For Our Army—Med. School Helps

20. The university's Medical School is also conducting several special courses to train specialists for the armed forces of the United States. All first and second year medical students are now required to take lessons in practical first aid work. The Medical School's radiology department also offers a 6 months' course in physical therapy—a war emergency course—and its department of anesthesia is offering this year two courses for officers of the armed forces who wish to specialize in anesthesia.

For Our Country—Ag. College Contributes

21. The university's College of Agriculture is doing, as it always has done, its utmost to stimulate the most efficient production on Wisconsin farms to help fill the nation's food basket in wartime. Concrete examples of the college's efforts in this field are revealed in many ways. They have developed cheaper rations for dairy cattle, and in the field of crop disease control, the college has made definite contributions to increased production. Again, with the development of Vieland oats in the past few years, farmers of Wisconsin now have the most dependable oat variety ever grown in the state.

For Our Country—Engineering Serves

22. The university's College of Engineering has speeded up as far as possible its production of trained men for the industries of state and nation. Hampered by lack of facilities, but imbued with the spirit of public service, the college not only is taking care of an increased enrollment this year, but at the same time is serving state industries with its research, and also is carrying on the technical training of the naval officers in diesel engine work and the army air force machinists.

For Our Country—Students Help

23. Under the leadership of the Student War Council, University of Wisconsin students are contributing considerable, "on their own", to the nation's war effort. The students have organized a campus-wide continuing war stamp sales project under which students have been buying from $800 to $1,200 worth of war stamps per week. The student council has a number of war training projects of its own under way; and during November, 1942, organized a "work gangs" project among students on the campus to help solve local war labor shortage problems.

For Our Country—Scrap from Homecoming

24. In connection with university homecoming activities in the fall of 1942, University of Wisconsin students gave up one of their oldest traditions, the annual Homecoming bonfire, and substituted for it a campus community scrap drive. They gathered in more than 100 tons of scrap from every nook and corner of the university community, piled it in one huge pile on the lower campus, and then turned it all over to local scrap drive officials. The scrap pile netted almost $1,000, which was turned over in its entirety to the university's War Memorial Fund to establish a suitable War Memorial at the university when peace comes.

For Our Country—Blood Donations

25. Nearly 500 pints of blood were donated to the Red Cross by University of Wisconsin students and faculty when the Red Cross blood bank visited the campus recently. Eight hundred and fourteen students and faculty volunteered to give their blood, and those who were not able to donate it during the three day stay of the mobile unit, were placed on a reserve list to be used in the future.

For Our Marines—Flight Training

26. Twenty marine corps men arrived on the campus in December to take ground work preparing them for glider pilot positions in the marine corps. Another group as large will arrive two months later, each group remaining for two months primary, and two months of secondary ground school and flight training.

For Our Country—Inventions Stimulated

27. In the fall of 1942, Pres. C. A. Dykstra appointed a special faculty committee composed of five leading Wisconsin scientists, to be known as the University of Wisconsin Emergency Inventions Development Council. The group acts as a committee for collecting ideas of any kind which might aid the nation's war efforts. By December, 1942, the committee had already received from Wisconsin citizens in all parts of the state more than 100 ideas and suggestions to aid the war effort.

For Those in Service—Recreation in Union

28. The Wisconsin Union, built as a war memorial to men and women of the state, is now offering post recreation and dining service to army and navy units stationed on the campus and at Truax Field, Madison. All service men and women on the campus have been made members of the Union, with the same privileges as students, and men at Truax Field may obtain guest cards for the use of the building. A whole new program of entertainment, including Sunday afternoon "At Ease" hours to which over a thousand come each week, special service parties arranged by the Union staff, special shows by visiting artists given free to servicemen, instruction in games, and many other functions have been added to the Union's regular civilian recreation program.

For Our Country—Geological Surveys

29. Because the geological survey at the University of Wisconsin had in its files information about the geology, the gravel and sand deposits, and the water supply of almost all parts of Wisconsin, it was able to help save a great deal of time in construction in the state during 1942 of various large projects necessitated because of the nation's war effort.

For Those in Service—

Free Publications, Records

30. The University of Wisconsin Alumni Association, through its alumni records office, is keeping an up-to-date and accurate list of university alumni and former students in the armed services of the nation. Both the university and its alumni association send free of charge certain of their publications to these alumni and former students in the services for whom good addresses are available, to bring to them word from the home front. Many letters have been received from these men in army camps and fighting zones throughout the world, expressing their appreciation for this service.

For Our Army and Our Country— Blood Tests

31. The Psychiatric Institute at the University of Wisconsin has for some years now made examination of blood for syphilis without charge to physicians, hospitals, and other institutions in the state. Since October, 1940, the Institute has also had the duty of making these examinations of blood for selective service medical examiners in Wisconsin. This has brought an additional huge load of work on this University division. For example, of the 285,707 such blood tests made in 1941-42, a total of 88,906 were for selective service.

All of these contributions to our nation's war effort are more adequately described in detail in the biennial report of President Dykstra to the citizens of Wisconsin. This report, which also records the progress of the university during the last two years in education, public service, and science research fields, is now available for public distribution.

Effect of the War on the University Budget — Critical Years Ahead

The next two years will be critical years in the life of the university as well as in the history of the state and the nation. The regents feel confident that the legislature and the people of Wisconsin want the university to continue to fulfill its responsibility as an educational institution of teaching, research, and service for the benefit of the citizens of Wisconsin. The armed forces, industry, and agriculture already have acknowledged that the universities and colleges of the country must be kept going to prepare men and women for the emergency and to meet post war problems. The University of Wisconsin, therefore, must face these dual responsibilities and be prepared to serve both state and nation in this crisis.

The normal student population will fall off in certain areas of learning, such as law and the arts. The demand for training specialists will grow in such fields as medicine, pharmacy, engineering, the physical sciences, mathematics, agriculture, teacher training, and in special public services. There will be fewer civilian students but more men and women in uniform on the campus.

Revenues from Student Fees Decrease

In the past several years increases in operating costs have been met by increased receipts from student fees. Students who are residents of Wisconsin pay about $100 for the academic year—non-residents pay approximately $300. The anticipated decrease in regular enrollment will reduce revenues from student fees by more than $400,000 annually. The regents propose to reduce normal operating expenses accordingly.

Extraordinary War Emergency Costs

There are, however, certain extraordinary war emergency costs that the regents cannot finance from present appropriations. To meet these emergency costs created by the war, the regents request an annual appropriation of $350,000 from the state. The regents suggest that this appropriation be subject to release by the State Emergency Board, and the money will not be spent unless absolutely necessary. The purposes for which the regents anticipate the need for this special war emergency appropriation are as follows:

- (1) To continue the present salaries of low-paid employees, who on July 1, 1942, were given emergency "cost-of-living" salary increases of $10 per month. These adjustments were limited to those receiving $2500 a year or less. The cost for the fiscal year 1942-43 was paid from accumulated savings. These funds will have been used up by June 30, 1943. While the increases were allowed for this fiscal year only, present economic conditions would not justify a reduction in the salaries of these low-paid employees. To continue the increases granted last July 1 will cost, annually, ----- $150,000
- (2) To permit the year-around operation of the university as requested by the armed forces of America in order that men and women may be trained in as short a time as possible for the army, navy, marines, industry and agriculture. This will require a full instructional period of about 15 weeks in the summer in addition to the regular academic year of two semesters. The estimated additional annual cost of supplying teachers and materials is -----

- $100,000
- (3) To meet other extraordinary cost arising from the present war emergency and to provide funds for the contingent liability of professors returning to their university duties from temporary war assignments, it is requested that the legislature appropriate, subject to release by the Emergency Board, an annual sum of ----- $100,000

tions for special purposes. The need for an appropriation of $350,000 for emergency war purposes increases the total appropriations requested from the state although the normal operating budget will be very much lower than in former years because of the reduction in university revenues from student fees. The requests for each year of the next biennium compared with the appropriations from the state for the current year may be summarized as follows:

Increase requested for war emergencies -----	$350,000
Net decrease requested for normal operations -----	10,100*

Net increase, after including war emergency costs ----- $339,900

*In addition to this decrease in state support the university's operating budget will be reduced by a total of more than $400,000 annually on account of the decrease in revenues from student fees.

Normal Budget Down — War Budget Up

Reductions are proposed in the annual appropriations for miscellaneous capital. Minor increases are requested in a few appropria-

Post-War Building Program

The regents respectfully urge the legislature to consider the advisability of planning now for a post-war building program, and therefore request that $1,000,000 annually be set aside for new construction, remodelling and equipment needs at the university. Among the building needs most sorely needed by the university are those of home economics, engineering, and the dairy industry department. And it should be emphasized that this proposed building program is for the post-war period. No new construction of any kind is contemplated or proposed for the duration. This proposed building program will help to provide much-needed work after the war.

Shown here are state appropriations for operation (1-A fund) and direct receipts from student fees, etc., for 1931-32 and 1941-42, for the current fiscal year 1942-43, and for the first year of the 1943-45 biennium. The column for 1943-44 is the requested state appropriation and the estimated direct receipts. The requested state appropriation is much less than in 1931-32 and exactly the same as in each year of the current biennium, while direct receipts have decreased considerably.

I want to conclude this message with a few words from President Dykstra's report to the regents and citizens of the state, because I think they contain a thought which all of us must keep in mind. These words follow:

"We Must Not Fail, Either—

"It is our firm belief that the University of Wisconsin must be kept going at full steam during the war for these reasons:

1. Because our university must continue the many war tasks which have been assigned to it by our government and our armed forces, as outlined above, and
2. Because we must keep our university intact to serve the vital post-war needs of our state and nation.

"There is one thing that we must not forget. Thousands of young men and women from our university and from homes in all parts of our great state are now serving in the armed forces of our country. Many of them have left classrooms and laboratories, where they were learning and training for work in a world of peace, to train and practice and sacrifice for war. Thousands of others are now stepping right out of high school into the training for war, although many of them were planning, only a few short months ago, on university education and training.

"We must not fail, either" . . .
Pres. Dykstra

"These thousands of young men and women will be coming back to Wisconsin some day, after they have helped to win the war, to resume their interrupted education and training for work of a world at peace. We Americans generally, and we Americans in Wisconsin particularly, have always been extremely proud of our great nation and our democratic way of life. And we have always asserted, in plain and simple faith, that education has been, is, and always will be the very foundation stone of our democracy. Our thousands of young men and women are now fighting, sweating, toiling, sacrificing their very lives if need be, to save our democracy, our nation.

"When the war is over and when peace comes again, when they return to us victoriously from the fighting fronts of the world—we must have something saved for them too. We must keep intact the very foundations of the life they are fighting for!"

Neprud early had the feeling that the American civilians would be repatriated soon, because the Japs would want their own people back. In each drive the Japs would pick a land wherein English was spoken, and their own people who had lived in America would be tremendously useful in translating documents.

Neprud spoke at the University Club in Madison Jan. 7th on "Reflections Before and After Pearl Harbor". He chose Pearl Harbor because he considers that a unique turning point in the history of this war. "The party that had the power on that day will be the loser" he predicted.

"They will be the loser because that act aroused America and created a new frame of mind among its citizens. And the strength of this country, the volume of her production, and the position of influence she enjoys in the world mark the turning point in this war."

Caroline Iverson, B. A. '39, whom you read about in our last issue, wrote the excellent article in LIFE, Jan. 18, p. 83, on "Suzy-Q, 'The Fightiest Flying Fortress'". She is the daughter of Ella Schmidt, class of 1914.

Thanks, Fighting Badgers—

for helping us to get our publications to you in all corners of the world. You have done a swell job in keeping us posted on your new addresses. Much as we would like to send you the news you want, our efforts would be pretty hopeless without your splendid co-operation.

Thanks, too, for your wonderful letters. When we started this special service for you and your fellow Badgers in the armed forces, we rather expected the correspondence to be more or less one-sided. At this end, we were all set to send you as much news as possible — but we never expected you to do such a swell job of letter writing as you have done and are still doing.

Your letters are great. They're so good that many of them have been used by all three of the local papers. All letters are carefully filed in the War Records Department of the Alumni Records Office. Even the envelopes you used in sending your letters are being saved and the most interesting ones are being mounted in scrap books. When you have knocked the block off those Axis gangsters and get back to Madison again, we hope you'll drop in and look over this war records file. We hope, too, that you'll get as big a kick out of this file as we are getting every day from your letters.

More than 3,600 Badgers are now listed in the Alumni Records Office and the number is growing daily. Obviously, the list is incomplete. There are still some Fighting Badgers who are not getting these publications for the simple reason that we do not have their military addressess. If you run into any such Badgers in your area, please tell them how easy it is to get these publications. They are free, of course, to all Badgers in the armed forces who ask for them and supply their military addresses.

If Editor Lamoreaux doesn't get the measles that her room mate now has, this Founders' Day Issue of the WISCONSIN ALUMNUS should be in the mail by the time the University celebrates its 94th birthday on February 5th. Wisconsin has much to celebrate on this anniversary, but to me the most important thing is this: Another Founders' Day means that we are one year nearer to victory.

Yours for Victory,

John Berge,
Executive Secretary,
Wisconsin Alumni Association.

It happens that we now have a short wave radio and our only source of world news is that broadcast from KGEI in San Francisco. They broadcast the football scores on Sunday night, our time, and I followed Wisconsin's football team with a great deal of interest.

"I sailed from the United States in March with an evacuation hospital unit. Upon landing I met Col. BLECKWENN, '17, and Major LUDWIG, '32, and found they had been in our same convoy, but on a different ship.

"In Australia I saw a great deal of the populated parts of the country and helped to run several small hospitals in two different parts of the country.

"This is a very rough country of mountains and jungles. They have any number of insects here, all of which have a stinging apparatus, so we all have plenty of bites to show for encounters with these pests. We also have to contend with lizards, snakes, spiders, and crocodiles. But we manage pretty well."

Capt. Frederick G. JOACHIM, '31, home in Madison on a furlough early in December, told of his year in the Arctic as a medical officer with a small detachment on a special mission for the army command. He brought back white and blue fox pelts, a native parka, and a knowledge of the Eskimo language and customs, among other mementos of his stay there.

Two important essentials to Arctic life, he found, are warm footgear and an eiderdown sleeping bag. The significant fact about the winters there, he said, are not the sub-zero temperatures, but their length.

Dr. Joachim not only served as medical officer for the men at the post, but made dog sled trips to give medical aid to Eskimos, visited their igloos, ate their fare of seal, rabbit, and caribou, and got to know their language.

Capt. Jack M. HOWARD, '40, was the pilot at the controls of a Flying Fortress that made a very successful raid deep into France Dec. 19, according to an A.P. dispatch. The Allied group shot down 40 German fighters that attempted to keep them from their goal, 80 miles south of Paris.

Encountering stern enemy resistance the bombers met the Germans just after hitting the French coast and were never free of them till they reached the Channel again. Capt. Howard's ship reached home base badly damaged, but all hands safe.

Lt. Fred E. GUTT, '41, with four Jap Zeros to his credit, can give a first hand account of what the marine flyers are accomplishing on Guadalcanal.

Lt. Gutt, home in Madison on a 30-day furlough in December, described the battles: action in the air every day between 11:30 a. m. and 1 p. m. as the regular Japanese attack, a flight of about 20 bombers and as many Zeros came over.

"We went after the bombers. If the Zeros got in range we shot them, too, but our mission was to get the bombers."

While on such a patrol Fred tangled with a Zero and came out of it with two Jap bullets in his arm and leg, but he brought his plane down safely.

Lt. Gutt's outfit, captioned as "Captain John L. Smith's Fighting 223", was featured in the Dec. 5 issue of Life magazine.

In Memoriam

To the Wisconsin alumni who have given their lives in the current war that this nation might not perish.

1940 Capt. Charles T. CERONSKY, Antigo, was killed Oct. 9 in the crash of an army bomber near Waltersboro, So. Carolina.

1940 Capt. Kenneth V. CARLSEN, Spooner, was killed in a plane crash while on submarine patrol off South America Dec. 14. Capt. Carlsen was the husband of Rose Marie Anderegg, recipient of the Wisconsin Alumni Association award given to the outstanding junior woman last year. They were married Dec. 7 at Miami, Florida.

1942 Ensign Arthur John ROBERTS, Belleville, was listed by the navy department Dec. 31 as killed in action "somewhere in the Pacific."

1942 Lt. James L. KNAPP, Milwaukee, died on January 4 after his automobile skidded off an embankment while driving from his post at Fort Benning, Ga., to his home at Columbus, Ga.

1939 Martin VAN LIERE, Jr., Delavan, a cadet in the army air corps, died Jan. 6 at the Chicago Beach army hospital following a short illness with pneumonia.

MISSING IN ACTION

1941 Lt. (j. g.) Edwin LACHMUND, Sauk City, was reported missing in action since early December. He had been on active duty since September, 1941.

1942 Lt. Warren M. LEWIS, Kenosha, is missing in action in an air raid over France, according to word received by the war department.

1938 Capt. Franklin O. ANDERS, Fargo, N. Dak., reported missing in action during the battle for Bataan.

IT was back at Jack Higgins'

Yes, it's Jack's first—a boy. And after Jack had got over the shock of being a father, he began to plan, as all of them do.

"What d'you think, Doc," he said, "suppose he'll make a doctor?"

"Could be," I said. "Though I'd wait till he got some hair and teeth before I decided for sure."

But shucks! Jack wasn't listening. By the time I left he'd had the kid governor—he's probably president by now!

President? Maybe. No telling what little Johnnie'll be when he grows up. But whatever it is, we're sure going to be needing men like him! There'll be jobs to do, designing and building things for the future. Things like television, and air conditioning, and plastics, and what'll come after them.

This war is changing lots of things. We're just beginning to realize how big a job we've got ahead. But if the war's already showed us anything, it's that we couldn't begin to win if there hadn't been men with courage and vision to build factories and organizations big enough to make the weapons and equipment our boys in the Army and Navy need.

And it's showed us that if the factories can pour out war stuff the way they're doing today, afterwards they can turn out just as much to make peacetime living better.

So it's up to us to see that Johnnie has his chance, too. The chance to use all his initiative and gumption to produce something worth while. To give to the world as much as he gets. There's some satisfaction in a job like that! And that's the kind of a future I wish for little Johnnie Higgins! General Electric Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

THE VOLUME of General Electric war production is so high and the degree of secrecy required is so great, that we can tell you little about it now. When it can be told completely, we believe that the story of industry's developments during the war years will make one of the most fascinating chapters in the history of industrial progress.

Students' Military Status Decided by Washington STUDENTS continuing their studies on the campus as before, except with the status of an army private in uniform, is the probable outcome of orders from Washington made public the middle of December. Long-awaited, the announcement clarified the plight of hundreds of draft-aged students and members of the armed reserves.

President Dykstra, addressing the 1,200 university men who are members of the reserves, predicted that only about 400 men would be taken out of their classes into active service when the present semester ends. The remaining 800 men, who are army, navy, marine or coast guard reservists not covered by existing orders, senior ROTC, or medical students, will be left on the campus to finish their present training courses.

Although the university has received no definite orders, the probable picture will show Wisconsin included in the list of colleges picked to train more than 250,000 army and navy recruits. Mathematically speaking, the university may expect to have half the men returned for training that are taken off her campus.

The university may expect a drop of enrollment to approximately 6,000 students, a number which will include mostly women, men under 18 or over 38, men physically unfit for army service, and army or navy reservists not yet called for active service.

The army will provide trainees stationed on the campus with uniforms, tuition, quarters, food, and books. The men will be subject to army discipline and will take a course of training prescribed wholly by the army.

There will be no summer vacation for the men being trained on the campuses by the army and navy as the new "third" semester will go into effect around June 1.

Feb. 6 is the date the army enlisted reserve corps expects to be called to duty.

Wisconsin Extension Sends Courses to 1,000 Servicemen WISCONSIN, the first state university to offer free correspondence study courses to its servicemen, has sent its "mail order" courses to around 1,000 men since the program went into effect in June, 1941. Cost of textbooks is the only expense the serviceman is required to bear.

There are more than 425 courses on the extension division's list of studies, including business, mechanical drawing, engineering, general science, geography, history, languages, mathematics, physics, political science, psychology, sociology, and speech.

Dean F. O. Holt of the university's extension division explained that the program which has gained such popularity and appreciation is designed to help Wisconsin citizens keep up with their preparations for living in a world of peace.

Post marks on the letters of the applicants for these courses come from all corners of the world, from Wisconsin men desiring to start or continue their education even while fighting a war.

U W Ranks Sixth Among Colleges THE American Association of Collegiate Registrars recently announced that the University of Wisconsin ranks sixth among the nation's colleges and universities in the number of degrees awarded during the 1941-2 academic year. Wisconsin's total was 2,049, while New York, ranking first, awarded a total of 2,683 degrees.

U. W. Offers Course—Group Leadership in War Agencies THE coming semester will see added to the regular course of study at the university a new course in group leadership in war agencies, placing stress upon actual work practice by accredited students.

Miss Helen Clarke, professor of sociology, and Porter Butts, professor of social education, will teach the class which will offer five hours a week of field work at the Madison USO and the Memorial Union, post recreation headquarters for military units stationed on the campus.

Activities

Miss Clarke will direct classroom work studying the development of current war recreation projects, while Prof. Butts will direct the field work assisted by Joseph Machotka, USO director, and Betty Biart, co-ordinator of the civilian defense recreation committee.

New Course Faces Current Problems

ANOTHER first at the university is a new course to be given second semester, a course which cuts across departmental and college boundaries and offers a chance to the seniors to grapple with some of the key problems which they will be called on to face.

Problems which will be studied during the semester will include: world resources and their utilization by modern science and technology; the production and distribution of economic goods; state control and economic liberty; the United States in world affairs; war-time conditions and post-war possibilities; evaluations in literature, art, philosophy, and religion, of contemporary trends.

The course will be under the direction of a committee consisting of Professors W. R. Agard, chairman of the department of classics; I. L. Baldwin, chairman of the department of agricultural bacteriology; Elizabeth Brandeis, assistant professor of economics; Merle Curti, professor of history; H. E. Guerlae, assistant professor of history of science; O. A. Haugen, professor of chemical engineering; and H. G. Skilling, assistant professor of political science.

U. Man Seeks Oil for Lamps of Allies

SEARCHING a trackless Peruvian wilderness for oil, vitally necessary for mechanized warfare, is the mission of a U. of W. faculty member, Norman D. Newell, associate professor of geology. Late in November Dr. and Mrs. Newell left the United States by airplane to take charge of a searching expedition financed by the Peruvian government.

In Peru Dr. Newell, who will be first in command, and Mrs. Newell, who will be second, will lead their party of explorers into an almost inaccessible region near the headwaters of the Amazon, traveling mostly afoot or horseback.

President Manuel Prado of Peru, in Washington to discuss economic collaboration with the United States, asked for aid in tapping Peru's undeveloped oil and mineral resources. The board of economic warfare submitted Prof. Newell's name, among others, and the Peruvian embassy later notified Dr. Newell of his appointment.

Rock formations in nearby Brazil and Colombia have led scientists to believe that in this area one of the world's most important oil regions may be found, although its potentialities have never been definitely decided. Wild rubber has also been reported in much of this territory.

Dr. Newell is the fourth man to leave the geology department for important war work. Prof. C. K. Leith is a consultant to the industrial materials department of the advisory commission to the counsel of national defense; H. E. McKinstry, economic geologist, is with the board of economic warfare, and Dr. Stanley A. Tyler is in New York in a professional capacity working on plans for iron ore production.

Prof. Elwell Named To Accountant Group

THE American Institute of Accountants announced early in December that Prof. Fayette H. Elwell, director of the School of Commerce of the university, has been appointed a member of the committee on governmental accounting.

Carnegie Grant Includes University of Wisconsin

THE Carnegie Corp. of New York voted grants totaling $2,831,650 in the 1941-42 year "for the advancement and diffusion of knowledge" it was announced recently. The University of Wisconsin was one of five schools to share in the grant.

Prof. George Hill Works for Gov't

GEORGE W. HILL, associate professor of rural sociology, is in Washington working for the government on problems having to do with farm labor. He plans to be in Washington till next October.

The Regents

DANIEL H. GRADY, Portage attorney, was appointed by Gov. Goodland to the university board of regents to fill the vacancy created by the removal of Mrs. Barbara Vergeront. Grady has had previous experience on the board of regents, having served under Governor Blaine and Governor La Follette.

Institute of Inter-American Affairs Approved for Spring THE university board of regents at its November meeting approved the holding of an Institute of Inter-American affairs on the campus next spring.

The Institute will be one of several to be held throughout the nation in co-operation with the Office of Inter-American Affairs at Washington. The Institute will last several days, and speakers will include Latin American officials and specialists on Latin American affairs.

Personnel Changes Approved by Regents THE board of regents, along with their other business, voted to approve three appointments, three leaves of absence, and two promotions for the university.

Dr. Frederic E. Mohs, whose work in cancer research has attracted national attention, has been promoted from the rank of instructor in surgery to assistant professor in chemosurgery.

Peter A. Duehr was promoted from instructor in ophthalmology to assistant professor and chief of the ophthalmologic clinic.

Leaves of absence were granted to Joseph Pessini, assistant professor of neuro-psychiatry, for military service; Albert Whitford, assistant professor of astronomy, for defense work; and William H. Oatway, Jr., associate professor of medicine, because of the ill health of his wife.

The regents approved the appointments of Leon Persson as manager of the Pro Arte quartet, Walter H. Jaeschke, assistant professor in clinical pathology, and Gracia E. Torinus as assistant professor of English.

Regents Accept $34,600 In Gifts and Grants GIFTS and grants totaling about $34,600 were accepted for the university by the regents at their last meetings. The largest grant of $15,000 came from the Wisconsin Alumni Research Foundation for the support of research at the university during the coming school year.

Chemical engineering research will receive $10,000 of the foundation's grant, with the other $5,000 going to a symposium in chemical engineering.

The National Live Stock and Meat Board, Chicago, and the National Research Council, Washington, D. C., gave $3,200 for the renewal of an industrial fellowship in biochemistry under supervision of Prof. C. A. Elvehjem.

Other grants were to be used in the agricultural economics department, biochemistry department, agronomy and plant pathology, animal husbandry and dairy husbandry, cancer research and Law building murals.

The Campus at War

by Student Editor Margaret Schindler

WITH donations from the Homecoming scrap drive and the 1942 Panhellenic ball the Wisconsin War Memorial fund total has jumped from $875 to an estimated minimum of $1,580. The War Memorial fund was set up last year under the sponsorship of the University War Council, the student group which directs all campus war activities and this year is under the immediate chairmanship of Robert Charn, junior from Beloit, Wis.

Although no decision has been made as to the exact use of the War Memorial fund after the war, the money collected and invested in war bonds is to be used to help prevent future conflicts. Non-utilitarian memorials such as statues have been definitely ruled out. Proposals such as the setting up of a professorial chair in international relations, a scholarship requiring study in the foundations for peace, and a library in the field of world politics are under consideration.

All the proceeds from the sale of the 98,000 pounds of scrap metal collected in the Homecoming scrap drive, estimated at $340 by scrap chairman, Verdayne John, and the profits from the Panhellenic ball totalling $367 were turned over to the fund.

After the war the fund will be administered by a committee made up of a member of the faculty appointed by President Dykstra; a member appointed by the board of regents; a member at large elected by the Alumni Association; and two students appointed by the student board.

Marines Land on Shores of Mendota

TWENTY marines arrived on the campus in December to take ground work preparing them for glider pilot positions in the marine corps. Thirty navy men began the same course at that time.

The program, which is under the direction of the Civilian Pilot Training program of the university extension division, includes two months' primary training and two months' secondary ground school and flight training. Every two months, twenty new men will arrive as their buddies, having completed the course, are moved out.

The navy pilots are sent from the naval flight selection board in Chicago. The pilots-to-be will receive glider instruction at Morey airport, Middleton, and will also have classes in mathematics, physics, and airplane identification at the university.

The university is now training 120 navy and army men and marines as airplane and glider pilots.

Students Donate Blood to Red Cross Bank

ANSWERING the Red Cross-University War Council appeal, 814 students, 214 over the necessary quota, volunteered to donate a pint of blood to the Red Cross blood bank as the Red Cross mobile unit arrived on the campus late in November. Since only 644 donors could be accommodated during the three days scheduled for the transfusions, the other 170 were placed on a reserve list and will be given preference the next time the mobile unit comes to the campus.

U. W. War Reaction Praised in Fortune

THE effect of the war on the university and the university's adjustment to it were discussed in an article on "Education for War" which appeared in the December issue of Fortune magazine.

The article described the establishment of the naval radio training school, the navy diesel school, the army air forces technical school, and the arrival of the WAVES. It also included an interview with President Dykstra on the problems the university faces with a decreasing enrollment, and one with a group of Delta Gamma sorority girls, giving a clue to the students' uncertainty as well as their determination to do their part in the war effort.

War Chest Drive Goes Over Top

WITH pledges of 100 per cent support from residence halls, fraternities, and sororities, and generous contributions from the organized houses and local students, the university's War Chest drive came to a successful close early in December, having topped its $3,000 goal.

The War Chest, previously known as the Campus Community Chest, is the annual charity drive sponsored by the student board. This year, in addition to the allotments made to such charities as the Red Cross and the Salvation Army, money from the drive will also be apportioned to the USO and war relief agencies.

Climaxing the drive was an all-university "Blackout Ball" held in Great Hall of the Memorial Union, the proceeds of which were turned over to the War Chest.

Campus Social Program Keyed to War Tempo

JOE COLLEGE and Betty Coed have discovered that a lot of unnecessary frills in their social life can be done away with without depriving themselves of a good time.

In line with the trend throughout the nation to eliminate nonessentials from our everyday living, students have enthusiastically agreed to do without corsages, programs and favors, have fewer formal parties, and have more "juke box" parties instead of hiring orchestras. As a result of these measures, and the paring of "comp" lists, entertainment prices have gone down—for example, for the first time residents of the men's halls were charged no admission for their annual Christmas formal dance.

Where the social event is an all-university one, the general practice has been to turn the proceeds over to the War Memorial fund or to the USO. Individual fraternity and sorority houses are buying war bonds with the money saved on their social activities.

War Stamp Sales Reach New High UNDER the direction of Peggy Mann, sophomore from New York, weekly war stamp sales on the campus have soared to unexpected heights. All-time high was reached November 26, when students purchased $1,544.45 worth of war stamps during the preceding week. During the past month, average weekly purchases have been well over $1,000.

Miss Mann organized the war stamp committee last year and averaged about $500 a week. War stamp corsages are also sold at university dances, and a 10-cent defense stamp is the admission ticket to Saturday afternoon matinee dances.

Work Gangs Aid Labor Shortage "WORK gangs" of students in organized houses on the campus have been organized along lines similar to USO hostess groups to be instantly ready for any emergency part-time work that may arise in connection with war material production in Madison. There is a definite shortage of men to do such work as snow-shovelling, etc. So far the "work gangs" have worked on the fuel oil rationing, at the war information center in the university library, and distributed the new city phone books.

Professors, Students In Active War Duty MORE than 75 professors and several hundred instructors and assistants of the university are giving their active services to the nation's war effort. They are to be found in the armed forces and in numerous government agencies throughout the United States and the world.

According to Registrar Merriman, about 200 students also left the university during this semester to serve their country, either through the selective service or enlistment.

Here are a few examples of what some of the former faculty members are now doing: Prof. Norman D. Newell, of the geology department, is in Peru in search of oil needed by the Peruvian government; Prof. Lloyd K. Garrison, dean of the Law school, and Prof. N. P. Feinsinger are members of the General Council of the War Labor Board; Prof. William S. Middleton, dean of the Medical school, is now in England; and Prof. Frederick D. Geist, of the anatomy department, is somewhere in the Pacific.

University Coeds Do Their Part OVER 2,300 women students indicated their interest in joining wartime campus courses when they registered at the convocation called by President Dykstra at which the Women's Emergency National Training Service was formed. More than 700 women were actually enrolled in the WENTS courses last semester, and the rest are signing up for war activities now.

The emergency nursing course, the most ambitious of the WENTS courses, awarded Red Cross nurses' certificates to the 80 girls who successfully completed the program. Other activities included nutrition and canteen courses, beginning and advanced first aid, Red Cross aides, code classes, recreational leadership, Memorial Union workshop classes, and a class in blueprint reading and tracing. Mechanics and tractor driving courses are being considered for this semester.

Coffee Shortage Adds to Exam Week Worries AS IF exams alone weren't enough to worry about, the cram-for-an-exam type of student had an additional problem on his hands. With the coffee-rationing and "coke" shortage, how was he to keep awake all night before the exam so he could learn the course? Just another example of the horrors of war.

Members of the WENTS learn emergency nursing

U. W. Students Buy $1,200 Bonds in Week DURING the last week before Christmas vacation, university students purchased $1,200 worth of United States war bonds and stamps, indicating that Santa must have managed Christmas this year without much student help in the way of finances.

Agriculture

---

L. BALDWIN, assistant dean of agriculture at the university, has taken a leave of absence to work with the National Academy of Science in Washington, D. C. The academy is engaged in experimentation for the war effort.

Dean Baldwin has been connected with the College of Agriculture at the university for more than 20 years and was chairman of the agricultural bacteriology department. Dr. W. C. Frazier, professor of agricultural bacteriology, will be temporary head of the department.

Potato Growers Produce Seed for 20,000 Acres WISCONSIN potato growers produced enough certified seed this year to plant at least 20,000 acres.

Prof. H. M. Darling, plant pathologist at the university, reports that this year's crop is slightly larger than that of a year ago and is almost completely disease free. Certified growers have followed a well-planned spray program, spraying early, often, and with efficient equipment, to insure blight control.

Demand for certified seed is strong, Darling advised. The Food for Freedom production plan calls for at least 194,000 acres of potatoes in Wisconsin next spring, and already out-of-state buyers are tapping the stock of superior Wisconsin seed.

Offering evidence that the use of certified seed pays, Darling announced that "Last year the average statewide potato yield was 91 bushels to the acre. The average for the certified grower was over 200."

"Corn Meal Attachment" is Designed by Ag. Engineers Now they have a machine to mix corn meal with chopped grass and to take more of the drudgery out of grass silage making.

The wartime popularity of corn meal and other ground grains as grass silage preservatives—now that it is almost impossible to get molasses for this purpose—spurred on agricultural engineers at the university to devise a "corn meal attachment" for ensilage cutters and crop blowers.

This machine takes the drudgery and guesswork out of mixing corn meal with grass, since it applies an even, easily regulated stream of meal to the forage as it passes over the feed table. The hopper holds enough corn meal to preserve a two-and-one-half ton load of alfalfa.

Although the corn meal attachment worked quite successfully in 1942, the engineers plan to rebuild it to make it even better.

U. W. Places High in Essay-Writing Contest PLACING seven men in the first 20, the University of Wisconsin has again been awarded a national essay-writing championship in a contest sponsored annually for students of agriculture by the Saddle and Siroloin club of Chicago.

The championship carries with it a sterling silver cup, and since Wisconsin has received the honor for three successive years the trophy now becomes a permanent possession of the College of Agriculture, J. G. Fuller of the animal husbandry department announced.

Three permanent trophies have been awarded in the quarter of a century the contest has been conducted. Two are now held by the University of Wisconsin. The subject for this year's essay was "A Program For A Livestock Farm."

E. M. Searls Named Chairman of Entomology Committee E. M. SEARLS, entomologist at the University of Wisconsin, has just been named chairman of the national committee on the co-ordination of entomology with the war effort.

Searls' appointment was by the Department of Agriculture and he will work under the department's Food for Freedom committee. His group will be assigned particularly to plan a quality program for milk and milk products.

Searles has been a member of the College of Agriculture staff since 1930. He completed his graduate work at the university.

21 Win Scholarships At Farm Short Course TO HELP in answering the nation's call for increased food, feed, and fiber, 21 Wisconsin farm boys have been awarded scholarships in the university Farm Short Course. With this aid they plan to devote the winter months to intensive training to equip them in operating the home farm with the maximum of efficiency.

Thirteen scholarships were awarded by the board of regents of the university, two by a Madison packing plant, and six are Jardine scholarships. "With Wisconsin farmers facing the greatest demands ever made on them for increased production of food and fiber, the necessity for skillful, trained farm help is greater than ever, and the Farm Short Course may play an important part in bridging the gulf between production demands and available men and machines," declared John R. Barton, director of the course.

John Steuart Curry, JOHN STEUART "Artist for Victory" CURRY, artist in residence at the College of Agriculture, is winning fame and fortune from all sides.

First he received a distinguished service citation from Secretary of Treasury Henry Morgenthau for his painting "Our Good Earth—Keep It Ours." The picture will be used as a poster and on the cover of a treasury department bulletin, three million of which are to be sent to farmers.

He was commissioned by the treasury department early in December to submit a second poster which will probably also be used in the war bond sales campaign. The subject of the second poster is two stern faced soldiers, with guns in hand, marching to battle with a determined farmer, pitchfork under his arm. A tank and tractor against a Wisconsin landscape form the background.

Curry's "Wisconsin Landscape" won the largest money award in the Artists For Victory show being held at the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York City. First prize, $3,500, was awarded to him for the typical Wisconsin landscape, this particular one being painted near Belleville in Dane County. A year ago the painting was voted the best landscape at the annual exhibition of the Pennsylvania academy.

U. W. Man Figures Feed Plan for Hogs GUS BOHSTEDT of the university staff, has completed and sent to Washington, D. C., recommendations for emergency hog rations which will help the nation feed its unusually large swine herds in spite of critical shortages in basic feeds.

Bohstedt was graduated from the College of Agriculture with a B.S.A. degree in 1915. He is professor of animal and dairy husbandry.

Commerce by Director, F. H. Elwell

IN COOPERATION with the School of Education, the School of Commerce expects to offer a program for commercial teachers leading to the Masters' degree, beginning in the 1943 six-weeks Summer Session.

And Now There's a Commerce "Short Course" IN VIEW of the shortage of statisticians, cost and financial accountants, personnel assistants, etc., the School of Commerce is offering a year's program to men and women over twenty-one which will qualify them for the above positions in manufacturing industries and governmental service. The courses are open to those whose abilities and experience qualify them for such work, regardless of previous academic training. No university credit is to be given except in those cases where all necessary prerequisites have been met. These commerce specialists will begin their work on January 27th.

Commerce School Keeps Up With Old Grads THE School of Commerce wishes to acknowledge the dozens of holiday greetings received from boys in the service, literally in every part of the world.—What a reunion Commerce will hold when these fellows return!

IF YOU'D ask an average student what he knows about the Chemical Engineering Building he'd probably reply, "That old yellow brick building across from the Union Theater—the one with all the funny smells coming from it? Well, nothin', I guess."

But to the junior or senior chem engineer who spends most of his waking hours there it means much more than that. There is a great deal of activity that goes on there and the building has an interesting history.

Constructed in 1885 as a chemistry building it was here that the late Prof. Louis Kahlenburg began his work with engineering students that continued over four decades. Shortly after 1900 the present engineering building was opened to use and the newly organized department of chemical engineering and applied electrochemistry moved into its present location. At that time the medical school used the top floor for its anatomy labs, but moved them later to Science Hall.

The university's department of chemical engineering has always been on the accredited list of the American Institute of Chemical Engineers since the latter instituted its accrediting program. Under the direction of Prof.

Roland Ragatz, department chairman, it has continued to send out the type of successful graduates who have already established such an enviable reputation in the chemical and allied industries.

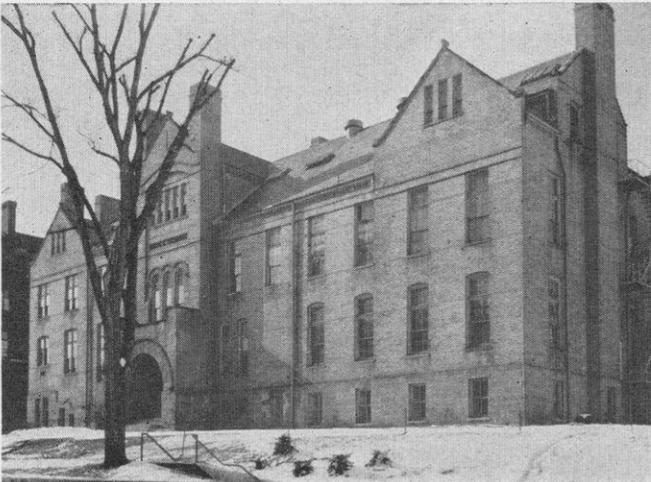

An increasing emphasis is being placed on research and graduate study in the department. The department has been fortunate in receiving a grant of $10,000 a year for ten years from the Wisconsin Alumni Research Foundation and this makes it possible to extend and intensify the department's research program. To get the program off to an effective start Professors O. A. Hougen and Kenneth M. Watson have been appointed to hold research professorships and at present they are devoting most of their time in organizing the various research projects being financed by the grant.

27 Technical Magazines Available in Library

KEEPING UP with the world is something everyone must do these days, and the engineer must always keep abreast of new developments in his profession. To do this he turns to the technical magazines and journals in his field of engineering.

The technical magazine has two purposes—to give the engineer information that will help him in his work and to give him the news of the field. Useful material may include technical studies, detailed descriptions of new methods which have been successful in other plants, and announcements of new equipment and materials which the engineer may want to try.

Some of the important technical magazines to be found on the periodic shelves of our engineering library are CHEMICAL AND METALLURGICAL ENGINEERING, INDUSTRIAL AND ENGINEERING CHEMISTRY, CANADIAN CHEMISTRY AND PROCESS INDUSTRIES, CIVIL ENGINEERING, ENGINEERING NEWS-RECORD, ELECTRICAL ENGINEERING, ELECTRONICS, MECHANICAL ENGINEERING, MACHINE DESIGN, AMERICAN MACHINIST, MACHINERY, MINING AND METALLURGY, ENGINEERING AND MINING JOURNAL, METALS AND ALLOYS, METAL PROGRESS, CANADIAN METALS AND METALLURGICAL INDUSTRIES, STEEL,

AT ARMY and naval posts in the United States and in many parts of the world the University of Wisconsin gave unabated teaching service in these war months for men and women in uniform.

Under a state subsidy, enabling any Wisconsin resident in service to obtain university correspondence courses at state expense, 197 registrations were recorded since July 1, 1942, and the total enrollment from the law's enactment in 1941 to December 18, 1942, was approximately 1,100.

(A recent aftermath of Wisconsin's subsidy is a Maryland movement for free University of Maryland courses for that state's selectees. In sponsoring this idea Gov. Herbert R. O'Connor used Wisconsin's experience as a pattern, and was joined by President H. C. Byrd of the University of Maryland.)

For army students from any state, and by more recent action navy enlistees also, the Army Institute, established at the University of Wisconsin, continued to offer a large number of correspondence courses under War department subsidy. The Institute presents courses of its own, primarily to promote military efficiency, and offers credit courses from a large number of cooperating colleges and universities, including the University of Wisconsin, for which it shares the expense with the enrollees.

The Institute has recorded 6,748 registrations up to December 18 for its own courses, and through the Institute the University of Wisconsin has received 23 army registrations for its university extension courses.

Lieut. (j. g.) Preston S. Cutler began duties as navy registrar at the Institute, and Capt. Earl C. MacInnis has reported for duty as army registrar. Capt. MacInnis received his M. A. degree from the university in 1917.

Men, Women, and Children Learn Expert Marksmanship Most of them admit that at first "they couldn't hit the broadside of a barn", but now they're rapidly gaining finesse as qualified rifle shots. "They" are neophytes in marksmanship, members of an extension class.

In the splendidly equipped and lighted range deep in the stone stadium, 80 men and women—including a young lad who counts his dad as his "classmate", are learning how to handle a gun and to shoot without missing. Under Capt. J. J. Peot and assistant, Lieut. Frank T. Cameron, of the university ROTC staff the class works out one night a week, using 22-calibre ammunition, and are given individualized instruction in small bore marksmanship, position, sighting, care, operation and nomenclature, and use of the sling.

So large is the enrollment that it is broken into half a dozen segments to allow for the personal instruction that must be given. Many applicants have been turned down to await later opportunities. The entire course is $5.

For the most proficient the course leads to qualification awards through the National Rifle association as marksman, sharpshooter, or expert rifleman.

The university is on its toes in this field of training. Not only is it offering marksmanship to the adult public, but through the ROTC is helping train the university's manpower by offering target practice to as many as 1,532 freshmen who practice shooting in a special indoor range in the old red armory. For these tyros the experience is a definite training for entrance to the armed forces.

Capt. Peot is considered one of the best marksmen in the country. He was a member of the University of Wisconsin rifle and pistol team in 1932, 1933, and 1934. He won individual championship in the Western Collegiate conference in 1934, and was an outstanding contestant in the Little World's Championship meet held in Madison recently.

Pre-Flight for Teachers, Students of High Schools CHARGED with directing all CPT activities, the Extension Division organized a Saturday class for high school instructors, offering pre-flight training to fit them better to teach flight subjects to high school students as a background for practical aviation training, and to integrate aeronautics problems with the regular high school instruction in mathematics and the sciences. The course also helps to qualify for ground instructor's ratings. This southern Wisconsin group began work in November with 32 enrolled.

In keeping with the ever expanding trends in aviation, the Extension Division also developed a correspondence course in the Science of Pre-Flight Aeronautics for high school students. The course is designed to supply a background of knowledge needed by fledgling pilots and mechanics of the future. Enrollment approaches 100.

2,425 Sailors Study Radio at Campus School SINCE April the university has received 2,425 sailors for radio training. Graduations have been held at monthly intervals. The November class numbered 198, and the December graduates were 234, bringing the total to 1,429, all of whom are serving in combat duty in every sector where the war rages. Originally given for 16 weeks, the course is now compressed into 14 weeks to meet the navy's pressing demands for radio operators.

Lieut. Dorothy Stratton, senior officer first assigned to the WAVES, has since been placed in command of the newly organized SPARS, the women's auxiliary reserve for the coast guard, at Washington.

Director of all naval schools at the University of Wisconsin now is Comdr. Leslie K. Pollard, a veteran of 25 years in the navy and one-time commander of the ill-fated submarine Squalus. He succeeds Comdr. Charles F. Greene.

Civilians by Hundreds Train for War Jobs THE university continued as the hub of the statewide program of government courses giving college-level training to civilians for technical and business posts in war industry. This program—Engineering, Science, and Management War Training—is financed by the U. S. Office of Education and directed by the University Extension Division. Tuition is free. Colleges, vocational and high schools have cooperated generously. Currently these classes (180 in all) are being held in 50 cities and have a total enrollment of 4,423.

Typical of the subjects now being taught are machine shop inspection, fluid mechanics, psychology of industrial relations, military map making, fundamentals of radio, industrial management, engineering production planning and control, advanced engineering mathematics, time and motion study, metals and their alloys, industrial chemistry, intermediate accounting, and refresher courses in mathematics.

War Literature Centered for Public Use in Library A VAST amount of war information has been opened to the public in the new war information center established in the university library. Hundreds of publications of our government, issues of exile governments, books, pamphlets, bulletins, posters, and war maps are among the innumerable materials collected.

Phases recently emphasized have been civilian defense, the U. S. armed forces, occupied countries, the Pacific area, education and the war effort, the "Four Freedoms," and post-war problems. Altogether the collections comprise an arsenal of materials useful in formulating addresses, exhibits, and community projects on the home front.

Home Nursing Course Is Aid for Homemakers WARTIME shortages of nursing and medical services gave timely importance to an extension course, by correspondence, in prevention of disease and home care of the sick. Announcement of this home-study opportunity brought more than one hundred inquiries within a week. One of the aims is to reach communities without the ad-

NUTRITION CHECK-UP CHART

It contains the information you must have to assure proper nutrition for your family...

No longer need you guess about menus to supply proper nutrition for your family. Now you can KNOW. This chart, prepared and copyrighted by the Wisconsin Alumni Research Foundation, is not only complete but is dependably, scientifically accurate. Yet it is so simple and practical that you will want to use it every day.

It tells you what foods you should eat daily to maintain good health... it lists all the important nutritional factors and tells why you need them... shows the daily requirements of these specific food factors for men, women and children... gives the nutritive values of average servings of 225 common foods... tells you why you must be doubly sure to get enough Vitamin D.

With this Nutrition Check-Up Chart you can make sure that your family will be well nourished.

vantages of Red Cross instruction, and to encourage home study by women who, restricted by home duties, are unable to attend regular classes. Extension courses in home economics, all available wherever the mails go, also include Food Problems in Homemaking, Home Furnishing and Decorating, and The School Lunch.

Curriculum Aid Serves Small High Schools REPORTING on progress in supplying small high schools with courses by correspondence to help enrich their limited curricula, the Extension Division revealed that 63 high schools are utilizing university extension courses this year to supplement their own courses and afford students a variety of academic and vocational training not always easily obtainable in the home community. Under this cooperative plan the instruction is locally directed, in that they are supervised by high school officials. Thus in every section of the state the university is supplying a practical means for extra preparation for college entrance and for military and industrial training.

New Classes—From Writing to Shooting

practical training for work in many fields were provided this fall for students of extension classes in many cities. Practical English to help students build better vocabularies; Wisconsin geography for teachers; creative writing valuable for the skilled and the unskilled; and management of instructional activities for city teachers, are examples of off-campus, nighttime courses offered. In Madison more than 80 men and women began practice in marksmanship, meeting in the old red armory as a prelude to outdoor range shooting.

Speech Work Keeps Going Under Handicaps

SPEECH activities, hindered somewhat by wartime travel difficulties, maintained their place in Wisconsin high schools with contests scheduled in the fields long listed. First of the statewide competitions—dramatics—came to state finals at Madison in December. "A" awards went to Shawano and Milwaukee

Riverside; "B" ranking to Muscoda and Tomah, and "C" to Blanchardville.

The state forensic association entered into arrangements with the Wisconsin Council of Defense to participate in the council's "Victory Reporters' Program." This involves student appearances before local organizations to present discussions or other special features bearing on the war emergency. As planned, the new setup will constitute a vital school contribution to the war effort.

High school institutes were held during the fall at Wausau, Eau Claire and Madison, with total attendance of 907 students and teachers. The university's speech department furnished leadership for all three.

Home Economics

---

THIS semester home economics alumnae visiting the beginning course in clothing would find the students making children's garments such as jackets, coats, dresses, snow suits, and sleeper suits from renovated materials. The students after completing the garments donate them to the American Red Cross, which will distribute them to needy children in Dane County. Each of the members of the class—and there are more than one hundred of them—has also signed the consumer's pledge and is following its various points.

H. E.'s Find Unusual Wartime Tasks

WITH wartime attention focused on food and nutrition as one route to healthful living, a scramble for dieticians and teachers of home economics has developed this year which is bringing to graduates of the home economics department of the University of Wisconsin challenging and often unusual jobs.

The immediate problems of the war have brought many new tasks to the attention of home economists, Miss Frances Zuill, director, points out. One graduate, for instance, is serving as a dietician at the Florence Internment Camp at Coolidge, Arizona, where Japanese are interned for the duration of the war.

Another graduate is a laboratory technician testing lend-lease products to be shipped abroad. She is busy in the Customs House in Chicago testing such foods as cheese, dried milk and dried eggs to be sure they are up to government specifications. A dietitian in the medical corps of the army has been signed up for foreign service.

It may seem a far cry from home economics to ammunition, but one of last year's graduates is serving as a chemist in the explosives department at a Wisconsin ordnance plant. Her knowledge of chemistry won her the job.

Army men at Fort Lewis, Washington, should be getting good food these days, for another home economics graduate from Wisconsin is working with menus there.

Not all graduates of the Wisconsin school are working in food and nutrition programs, however. Many of them are teaching home economics in high schools. Some are in large retail stores in the country, where their knowledge of textiles is of real value in these days of changing fabrics, adjusting to wartime conditions. The extension service has claimed several as home agents in Wisconsin.

Enrollment in the home economics department this year is only slightly reduced, according to the director, as the demand for the services of home economists has greatly increased. The curriculum remains essentially the same as in peace time, with principles of nutrition and the fundamentals of other household problems receiving major attention. Yet the application of these principles, Miss Zuill shows, is geared to a world at war, not only in helping young homemakers solve problems of the present war world, but looking to the future to foresee and adjust the chaos of the post war world.

Exhibits Attract Student Attention

IN ORDER to call the attention of the students to the problems of wartime feeding, interesting exhibits are on display on the ground floor of the Home Economics Building. Recently emphasis has been placed on the Share the Meat campaign in order that the students may be able to answer the questions raised by their families and friends with reference to the meat rationing program.

Farm and Home Week To Go Out Over State

BECAUSE of the gasoline and tire situation and also because of the housing conditions in Madison, it has been decided to take the Farm and Home Week program to the local communities in the state instead of having the people from these communities come to the university for these programs. Eight two-day gatherings will be held in the following places: Antigo, Green Bay, Fond du Lac, Whitewater, Platteville, La Crosse, Wisconsin Rapids, and Rice Lake. At these meetings members of the home economics and resident staffs will bring to the homemakers of the state the latest information in regard to changes in consumer goods because of the war situation and how to solve the problems that arise because of the family economic situation. Emphasis will be placed on the care of household appliances, the need for keeping home furnishings in good repair, meal planning in war time, keeping clothing wearable, meat demonstrations, children and war, and mental health in war time.

Misses Parsons, Johnson Study Gray Hair Cure

A PRELIMINARY re-

port of research dealing with a cure for gray hair and baldness in black mice by Miss Helen Parsons and Mary Louise Johnson appears in the Wisconsin experiment station report for November. These investigators found that the symptoms referred to occurred on certain rations containing 20% of raw egg white but were cured when the egg white was autoclaved.

Because of the known fact that such heat treatment destroys the capacity of egg white to interfere with the utilization of biotin, a deficiency of this vitamin was suspected as a cause of the gray hair and baldness under the conditions of the experiment. It was found that certain molasses extracts high in biotin also cured the symptoms while pantothenic acid and para-aminobenzoic acid failed to do so, although these have been reported from other laboratories to be successful in curing gray hair occurring on other types of rations.

Hence it is not possible to regard any one vitamin as the anti-gray hair factor even for experimental animals; at present there is no dietetic means known for restoring natural dark color to human hair which has become gray.

FRRIENDS of Dr. Charles M. Purin who retired last June after having served for 15 years as director of the Milwaukee Center, will be interested to know that he is now located at Castle Heights, Lebanon, Tennessee, where he is teaching military Russian to men in the armed forces.

Journalism

by Prof. Frank Thayer

THE first issue of the "Journalism News Letter", published by Theta Sigma Phi, honorary journalism sorority and sent to journalism graduates in military service, was completed in December with Miriam B. Theiler, president of the chapter, in charge. The issue contained four pages of news of the department and recent addresses of graduates. Prof. Helen M. Patterson, faculty advisor to the sorority, initiated the project.

Sigma Delta Chi Starts Educational Fund      SIGMA DELTA CHI, professional journalism fraternity, has established an educational fund for the Wisconsin chapter, according to Prof. Frank Thayer, who together with Ray L. Hilsenhoff, student financial advisor, is trustee of the fund. An anonymous donor gave the fund its first contribution of $500. A small amount will be used this year for the benefit of members chosen by the trustees on the basis of meritorious work in the university, journalistic promise, and service to the chapter. It is the purpose of the chapter and the trustees to build up a substantial fund for journalistic awards to Wisconsin men and for other work of an educational nature.

Helen Patterson is Popular Speaker      PROF. HELEN M. PATTERSON addressed the Wisconsin Women's Press association on Newspaper and Civilian Defense Publicity Sept. 26 in Madison. Oct. 30 she spoke to a general session of high school delegates at the Double I press conference in Moline, Ill., on Future Careers in Journalism and also conducted two round tables. She also recently addressed a meeting of the AAUW at the College Club in Milwaukee and an alumnae meeting of Theta Sigma Phi in Evanston.

Grant Hyde Attends Nat'l Council Meet      PROF. GRANT M. HYDE attended a special meeting of the National Council on Professional Education for Journalism in Chicago Jan. 8 and 9, held to discuss the critical newspaper manpower situation. Thirty-three accredited schools of journalism and the American Newspaper Publishers' Association, the American Society of Newspaper Editors, the Inland Daily Press association, the Southern Newspaper Publishers' association and the National Editorial association are members of the council.

School of Music

by George Hanson

FOR the third successive year the School of Music presented Bach's six Brandenburg Concertos in two concerts December 9 and 16. Participants included the members of the Pro

Arte quartet, Gunnar Johansen, Cecil Burleigh, Alfred Barthel and Hilmar Luckhardt of the faculty, and several advanced students. Prof. Bricken conducted. Traditionally, the audience also took part by singing chorales in the intervals between concertos, with Frederick Fuller at the organ. Outstanding student soloists were flautist Arthur Lytle and violist Clare Schwarztrauber.

30 Ex-Music Majors Now In Service EX-MUSIC majors in service now number 30 as far as we know, plus three staff members: Paul Jones, George Szpinalski, and Victor Gottlieb, formerly cellist of the Pro Arte quartet. The boys are in many branches and have many ratings, several taking officer's training and some already commissioned. Previous student-faculty relationships are topsy-turvy, as the three staff members are all privates (so far) while the commissions fell upon former under-dogs.

Geographically music men cover the country from Massachusetts to California and Oregon to Georgia. Fifteen play in bands—Orville Shetney directs one while most of the others have organized unofficial singing groups. Dave Machtel, though always a singer, decided band life was the thing and grabbed a horn; he fooled somebody into letting him in.

The School of Music keeps a file of news about service men, with latest known address.

Gunnar Johansen Plays For Sunday Music Hour A FEATURED number at a Sunday Music Hour was Gunnar Johansen's new composition "Fugue on an obscure theme" for 4 pianos, played by the 4 pianists on the faculty. The obscure theme sounded rather Bach-like at first, but after several strong episodes in the minor mode revealed itself in the major as "On, Wisconsin".

On the same program, Saint-Saens' "Carnival of Animals" was played by a small orchestra which contrived to rouse the usual number of laughs.

Bands Play for Soldiers Who Want "Good" Music ARMY trucks have replaced buses as the transportation for student musical organizations, since at present almost all the off-campus performances take place at Truax Field. Before the recent organization of a camp band, the university bands made frequent trips to give concerts and to play at graduation exercises (which come often with their streamlined curriculum). Various choral groups and the entire orchestra have appeared at different times.

The same audience reaction was noted at Truax Field as elsewhere when musicians play for soldier audiences; namely, that the better the music the better they like it. So-called "popular" numbers do not register, but serious music is well applauded. A recent orchestra program consisted entirely of Haydn compositions, the G major symphony and the cello concerto, with

Gunnar Johansen, featured on Sunday music hour

George Sopkin of the Pro Arte quartet as soloist. In spite of cold fingers, the performances were excellent and received more commendation than any previous programs had brought forth.

Two Collect Folk Songs of Wisconsin PROF. LELAND A. COON and Robert Draves, '41, were mentioned as valuable collaborators by the Archive of American Folk Song of the Library of Congress, in connection with the Index which appeared recently. Credit should also have gone to Helene Stratman Thomas who was active in the field trips in which were collected the recordings of Wisconsin folk songs.

Music Library Is Busy Place THE music library has served several service men and women stationed nearby, mainly alumni of other music schools. The thought of our own students in similar situations has softened our hearts somewhat as to rules and regulations, and we are happy to be of service to these men and women students in uniform.

Music School News Goes to Service Men

JUST before Christmas the staff mailed out to all ex-music students in service the first edition of the Music School News. It consisted of 6 pages of greetings, news, and articles edited by Miss Thomas, with Evelyn Pederson and "John" Bundy as linotypers and Tom Lyons for printer. If you failed to get one it is because your address is not in our new file of men in the armed forces. (Write oftener).

William Pfeiffer Joins Music School Staff

NEW addition to the staff is William Pfeiffer who replaces Paul Jones as director of the choral groups. Mr. Pfeiffer, a baritone, has had wide experience as a soloist and choral conductor. For the Sunday Music Hour of December 20 he prepared the chorus in selections from Haydn's "The Seasons", and also sang the baritone solos. Mr. Pfeiffer is connected with the production staff of WHA.

Bands Play for Navy Graduations

THE bands have taken turns playing for Navy Radio School graduations, which take place every month as the classes complete their schooling. Presumably the WAVES will soon require similar serenading, and perhaps the bands by that time will all be feminine, too.

Medical School

by Exec. Sec'y. Harold M. Coon

WORD has just been received from Dr. Wm. S. Middleton, dean of the Medical School, from some unnamed overseas location that he is busy and enjoying good health.

44th General Hospital Unit Awaits Call

MEMBERS of the 44th General Hospital are training at various centers and at the present time there is no indication as to how soon the unit will be called into active service. Major E. S. Gordon and Major Joseph Pessin, the last two officers, have now reported for duty. Major Gordon is at Fort Knox, Kentucky, and Major Pessin at Fort Riley, Kansas.

Special Courses for War Appear on Curriculum

THE department of anesthesia is offering two courses this year for officers of the armed forces. Five army officers are at present taking such a course under Dr. Ralph M. Waters and seven army officers will report for the course in March, 1943.

Dr. Frances Hellebrandt, associate professor of physical medicine in the department of radiology under Dr. E. A. Pohle, is giving a six months' course in Physical Therapy. This is a war emergency course designed to meet the needs and fulfill the requests coming from the armed forces and Public Health authorities. Wisconsin is one of sixteen universities in the United States to offer such a course.

A course in First Aid is being required of first and second year students in the Medical School under the supervision of George Steiner assisted by David Bradley.

The School of Nursing is giving a course in Home Nursing for Wisconsin women, the purpose of which is to familiarize one person in each family with the ways of caring for sick persons in the homes during an emergency. In case of an epidemic these women students would be equipped to help nurse the sick. Three hundred persons will complete the course by the end of the year.

Meetings and Lectures— Business as Usual

THE Annual Preceptors' Meeting was held on October 30 and 31, and in spite of the war-time stringencies, twenty-five Preceptors were registered and all of the preceptorships were represented.

On October 23, Dr. Joseph C. Hinsey, professor of anatomy and dean of Cornell University Medical College, lectured to the students and staff members on "Regeneration of the Visceral Nervous System."

Dr. Harry Goldblatt, professor of experimental pathology, Western Reserve University School of Medicine, gave the Second Annual A. C. Helmholtz Lecture on November 5, his subject being "Experimental Observations on Hypertension".

3rd Annual "Dearholt Day" Appropriately Observed

THE Third Annual "Dearholt Day" was observed November 17. The speakers were Dr. Florence R. Sabin, former member of the Rockefeller Institute and member of the National Academy of Science, and Dr. David T. Smith, professor of bacteriology and associate professor of medicine at Duke University School of Medicine. This program was sponsored by the Wisconsin Anti-Tuberculosis Association in collaboration with the University of Wisconsin Medical School and the Dane County Medical Society.

Naval Training School

by Gerald Bartell, Sp 1/c USNR

THE campus paths once trod by shuffling saddle shoes of the world's most care-free assortment of youth in search of higher learning and amusement are now frequented by the marching cadence of men and women in navy blue uniforms.

From historic Chadbourne and Barnard Halls come the WAVES marching to the rhythm of "hup-2-3-4, hup-2-3-4" . . . marching to a song which is at once the music of the home front and a lyric of hope . . .

"Dressed in our navy blues
Here comes the WAVES
Each heart is navy true
We're loyal all the way-ay-ay

No job's too great a task
We're here to serve
Each lass is proud to be
A member of the U.S.N. Reserve."

Up the winding driveway—past Lathrop Hall and the Biology Building—down the steep incline—"hup-2-3-4" all the way up University Avenue to the Blackhawk garage which has been converted to a code room.

Meanwhile, another navy blue column is winding. It wears bell bottom trousers and watch caps against the frosty air. They're coming from the Field House where, since 0630 (6:30 A. M.) they've been engaged in organized physical conditioning. Now it's time for morning chow. And they dig heavy black heels into the practice fields of Camp Randall where the ghosts of our country's defenders will march as long as the flag flies over Bascom Hall. To the tune of "The Beer Barrel Polka"—and echoing from the walls of the Mechanical Engineering Building to the new dormitories built into the stadium—come the men "hup-2-3-4, hup-2-3-4" . . .

"Here comes the navy,
Break out the red, white
and blue,
Here comes the navy,

Fighting and seagoing crew,
Make way for navy,
Navy with anchors aweigh,
Everybody loves the navy
Of the U.S.A."

Four-hundred seventy WAVES and an ever-changing enrollment of 1200 bluejackets are marching their way into the traditions of the university campus. They're studying radio communications. They're learning International Code, Naval Procedure, typing, Naval Indoctrination.

They're learning those vital subjects rapidly—the course is four months in length—and they're happy while they're learning.

The navy has taken over the Adams and Tripp dormitory units, the new stadium housing facilities, as well as Chadbourne and Barnard Halls. Buildings and classrooms have been taken over by the navy for teaching purposes. New equipment has been installed. LaFollette House is being used as an office building for officers and ships' company who administer the U. S. Naval Training Schools.

Yes . . . it's a strange old campus. But a strange old world, too. And we're moving back to happier college days with every "hup-2-3-4, hup-2-3-4" . . .

Third Group of Navy Officers Report for Diesel Training

THE third group of naval officers sent here since the establishment of the diesel school last July reported late in December.

The present class consists of 31, all reserve officers except one who is with the regular navy. Almost all the men hold degrees in engineering from leading American universities and have had several years of practical engineering experience. They received their indoctrination at Princeton University.

The course is 10 weeks in duration. Classes are taught by two navy instructors and four civilians on the staff of the department of mechanical engineering of the university. The work covers the operation and maintenance of diesel engines and advanced electrical theory. Laboratory equipment used was set up by previous classes.

Two of the officers are graduates of the University of Wisconsin—Ensign Stanley M. Austin, '37, and Ensign John O. Pharo, who was graduated in 1935.

"Hup-2-3-4" at historic Barnard . . .

After completing their training in the diesel school, the officers are assigned to duty as engineering officers aboard ships powered by diesel engines, which include sub-chasers, mine sweepers, and small auxiliary craft.

Navy Program Includes 5 Units THE U. S. Naval Training Schools now consist of a diesel unit for junior officer engineers, a Cooks and Bakers school which is responsible for the best fed navy in the world, as well as the WAVES and Radio School for men. Marines and naval reservists are moving into the YMCA building and will be taking pre-flight and glider training.

Navy Show, "Look Alive" Done ALA Haresfoot ON THE 12th, 13th and 14th of January, in the year of 1943, citizens of Madison and vicinity had the opportunity of enjoying an all navy personnel musical show done in the true Haresfoot manner. Except "all our ladies" weren't men, as the WAVES on the Wisconsin campus gave the publicity managers a chance to proclaim it as the first time, anywhere, in all history, there was an all-navy cast in which there were both men and women.

The best director that Haresfoot ever had, Bill Purnell, '22, directed the show which was entitled "Look Alive", a phrase which blue-jackets hear more than "Hit the deck" but means about the same thing. The talent was largely professional and the majority of the acts were made up of bluejackets and WAVES who had theatrical experience in civilian life.

Proceeds of the show, which was under the auspices of the Memorial Union, were turned over to the local Radio School's welfare fund. Originally scheduled for three performances the show had to be held over an extra night to accommodate the crowds.

The hit of the show was the boy-dressed-as-girl dance routine with an extra dividend of girl-dressed-as-boy which the audience loved.

A Romeo - Juliet scene between gawky gob Bruce Flaherty and former socialite Edith Kingdon Gould described the difficulties of love-making between the sailors and WAVES and provoked much delight and many laughs.

Musical direction was in charge of Richard Church, and Madison musicians provided a pit orchestra.

ACCORDING to information received by Miss Blanche M. Trilling, director of the department of physical education for women at the university, at least twenty-seven alumnae of the department are now engaged in active war services both in this country and abroad. In all probability there are many others, as the present report is not a complete survey of all graduates. Eight different services are represented, with the greatest number in physiotherapy. It is interesting to note that five graduates are abroad with the Red Cross at various centers.

Men's Physical Education

by Acting Director A. L. Masley

NEARLY 3,000 university men are now taking training in the University of Wisconsin's new physical fitness program designed to prepare young men physically to meet war demands that may be made upon them in the next few years.

Basic Gym. Course Popular with Frosh

LARGEST single group in this physical fitness program is enrolled in the basic freshman gymnasium conditioning course where 600 young men are training in the basic skills and conditioning exercises. Also popular are the regular freshman sports activities which include 588 men, and freshman swimming, in which 400 men who failed the required swimming test are enrolled. Training in the basic freshman track course are another 300 freshmen.

Nine hundred sophomores are enrolled in athletic activities including bowling, wrestling, boxing, badminton, basketball, rowing, volleyball, tennis, and swimming. Approximately 150 men are training in each of the boxing, wrestling, and rowing courses.

Basic Skills Taught—Required In Army

BASIC skills such as running, jumping, throwing, climbing, vaulting and swimming—much of which is training required at many of the elementary service training stations—are taught in the freshman courses. All men are required to pass the swimming test, to take a quarter of a year of boxing or wrestling, and to pass the basic proficiency tests before going on to the courses of their own choice.

A. L. Masley directs physical fitness for men

PROFESSIONAL PHY. ED.

by Prof. Robert Nohr

WE STARTED out in September with an enrollment of about 110 students in our professional physical education course, but many of our students are dropping out daily to enter some phase of service and with the recent new order that all reserves may be called at the close of the first semester, it is very likely that we will have to carry on with a small number of students next semester. We sincerely hope that these men will return to resume work toward their degree after the war since we feel that physical educators will be much in demand in the post war era.

Victory Corps Programs Developed in High Schools

VICTORY
programs are being developed in high schools in the country under government supervision, and the first demand on schools that come under this regulation is that they must promote a five-hour a week physical education program. At the present time our staff is vitally interested in assisting the state department of public instruction in developing such programs in our state schools, and it is the plan to have about 30 institutes in various parts of the state, beginning the first week in January, train teachers to conduct this national program. This should aid in accelerating physical education programs in schools in peace times.

Phy. Ed. Men Urged To Contact Dept.

WE URGE all of you physical education men who have an opportunity to read this to write us as to your whereabouts or that of your classmates so that we can send you information in regard to developments in the field of physical education and particularly news of the old school. We have made an attempt the week of Dec. 14, to send out a department news letter to all men who were graduated during the past four or five years, but we are doubtful whether some of these letters will reach the proper persons since we had to resort to old student directories for home addresses hoping the letters would be forwarded. Please help us in this effort!

The staff is eager to maintain contacts with its former students, and in this emergency we feel more than ever it is desirable to keep a close and friendly relationship.

Radio . . . WHA

by Carol Reid

---

THE contribution that WHA is making to the war effort in Wisconsin has brought noteworthy praise from the War Department. Major Harold Kent, Infantry, Radio Branch, in a recent letter to the director of the station said: "May I give voice to a few words of sincere appreciation for some of the fine things which station WHA has contributed to the war effort these past few months. . . . I bespeak the strong continuance of these programs through all the days of the emergency."

Other letters equally emphatic in approval of the initiative, showmanship and sense of responsibility shown by WHA in the present national crisis have come from the Office of Civilian Defense, Washington, D. C., from the Defense Savings Staff of the Treasury Department and from the Office of Facts and Figures.

WHA Staff Carries On, With Changes

HAROLD B. McCARTY, WHA's first and only director, went to New York City December 1 to join the overseas branch of the Office of War Information. There he has the post of senior program technician with the OWI, charged with maintaining effective use of some of the American transmitters directed to overseas audiences and scheduling programs designed for various nationality groups as part of the nation's psychological warfare.

Mr. McCarty came to Wisconsin from the University of Illinois where he had received a B. A. degree. He began announcing on WHA in 1929, received an M. A. in speech at Wisconsin in 1930 and became station director in 1931. In 1935 he was sent to England by the General Education board to study British educational broadcasting. He has served as president of the National Association of Education Broadcasters and is now a member of the Federal Radio Education committee of the Federal Communications Commission. He plans to return to WHA as soon as his services are no longer needed by the government.

Harold A. Engel, public relations director of WHA, has also been called into service. He is now a first lieutenant on active duty with the anti-aircraft division of the coast artillery at Camp Callan in southern California. Mr. Engel has been with WHA since 1931. He organized the Wisconsin School of the Air in

William Pfeiffer leads Vesper Singers in Sunday broadcast

1933. He plans to return to WHA immediately after being demobilized.

Pro Arte Quartet and Prof. Carl Bricken Continue ONE of the most unusual music courses ever offered at the university is the weekly series of lecture-concerts being given this year by Professor Carl Bricken, director of the university's School of Music and the world famous Pro Arte Quartet now in residence at the university. This course, featuring quartets by Haydn and Mozart the first semester and Mozart and Beethoven the second, is broadcast direct from Music Hall every Thursday at 3:30. It offers a remarkable opportunity for music lovers to become more intimately acquainted with the works of these famous masters and to hear them played by first rank artists. The Pro Arte Quartet includes: Antonio Brosa and Laurent Halleux, violins; Germain Prevost, viola and George Sopkin, cello.

Vesper Singers Broadcast On Sunday Afternoons NEARLY 50 students, recruited from the university chorus, are included in the Vesper Singers, WHA choral group which devotes most of its program time to singing religious music. The Vesper Singers are a popular group directed by William Pfeiffer, who joined the University of Wisconsin faculty in September as director of the university chorus, and are heard regularly on Sunday afternoons at 3:15 on the state station.

Most of the members are music students who sing in Vesper Singers for the extra choral practice it offers, while bringing pleasure and relaxation to their many listeners who enjoy religious music particularly on Sunday afternoon.

War Programs Maintain Educational Viewpoint WHILE WHA has geared its entire schedule to the winning of this war, programs are designed, not as mere propaganda, but to provide the people of the state with basic knowledge, interpretative guidance and inspiration in a confusing world. By means of the Wisconsin School of the Air series children in approximately 4,000 schools have been aided in making an intelligent adjustment to our war world through specially prepared discussions of current events, South American relations and citizenship training. In the College of the Air series, interesting highlights in the current annals of our national congress are dramatized each week on the program FOLLOWING CONGRESS, specially written for WHA by Mrs. Jennie M. Turner, of the State Board of Vocational and Adult Education. When the legislature sits again in January daily broadcasts direct from the state capitol will keep citizens in touch with their proceedings. So that the general adult audience throughout the state may share with the students outstanding lectures in the social sciences and literature that bear on world events microphones have been set up in university classrooms.

This semester Professor Merle Curti's course in the SOCIAL HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES, Professor David Fellman's THE UNITED STATES AT WAR, Professor Howard Becker's INTRODUCTORY SOCIOLOGY and Professor Philo Buck's WORLD LITERATURE AND ITS SIGNIFICANCE FOR THE PRESENT have been broadcast over WHA. Next semester MODERN EUROPEAN HISTORY by Professor Chester V. Easum will be substituted for INTRODUCTORY SOCIOLOGY; and THE UNITED STATES AT WAR will be followed by a new course entitled THE WORLD WE ARE MAKING.

THE WORLD WE ARE MAKING cuts across departmental and college boundaries and grapples with some of the key problems the post-war world will have to face. Among those outlined for discussion are: Can we produce an economy of abundance? How are we going to arrange for a fair distribution of this abundance? Can political controls guarantee these blessings and peace as well? What will be the result in terms of the individual? Professor W. R. Agard heads the faculty committee which will direct the work of the course. The others are I. L. Baldwin, Elizabeth Brandeis, Merle Curti, H. E. Guerlac, O. A. Houghton and H. G. Skilling. Lectures will be given by Professors Glenn Trewartha, James G. Woodburn, W. W. Howells, Elmer Sevringhaus, Noble Clark, Leslie Van Hagan, Norris Hall, Merle Curti, Harold Groves, Elizabeth Brandeis, Harold Stoke, Charles Bunn, H. Gordon Skilling, David Fellman, Selig Perlman, Chester V. Easum, Frederic A. Ogg, H. Scudder Mekeel, Philo N. Buck, J. F. Kienitz, Max Otto, A. Campbell Garnett, Helen White and H. E. Guerlac.

Plans are also being formulated by WHA for broadcasting fifteen minute talks by a number of university professors on topics pertinent to the war and the university's part in it.

R. O. T. C.

by Cadet Captain Bob Zigman

---

WITH World War II well on into the second year, the Reserve Officers Training Corps at the university has become a very vital part of the government's program of training men for the war effort on the campus.

Recently an article in the Daily Cardinal by Neale Reinitz put forth the ideals of the corps in the following paragraph.

"For that is the spirit of Wisconsin at war—which is ingrained more deeply in the university cadet corps than it is anywhere else on the campus. As if drawn by a magnet the attention of 2,600 cadets has been directed toward their military studies at the expense of credit-laden required courses on the hill. It isn't that the military work has been assigned—more has simply been undertaken.

Although he is no active conspirator to divert students from their other work Col. Herbert H. Lewis, university commandant, is responsible more than any other individual for the ascendance of the military department in the campus constellation. Even without a total war taking place throughout the world cadet corps interest could have easily slackened off under an ROTC administration less interested in bringing the units' training closer to actual war conditions, and supply non-ROTC men students, co-eds, and even townspeople with training that will help them play their part in the winning of the war."

War Progress Watched On ROTC War Map

BECAUSE of the rapid changes of the war from day to day, the military department has instituted an up-to-the-minute war map of the entire theater of operations. A staff project, these maps have arrows and pins to indicate the development of the battles and events. The markers are changed as many as three times a day to keep up with the latest news. The project is in charge of Capt. George Hudson of the ROTC staff. The maps are open to the entire student body as an aid to keeping abreast of the war news and are of special interest to the ROTC cadets.

Senior Cadets Keep Informed on War News

THE senior class of the cadets has a part of the training program an orientation course on war development. A different committee of senior cadets is in charge each week, and a final report of the week's activities must be handed in. The work includes pictures, teletype news reports and a host of other information which aids the students in keeping up with world developments. The work of this unit is under Lt. Robert L. Rippey of the infantry staff.

Capt. Hudson points to progress on ROTC war map

Freshman Cadets Learn Handling of Firearms

IN SPITE of handicaps due to the war, the training of new cadets in the handling of firearms proceeded ahead rapidly. Over 1,572 freshman members of the corps completed an intensive six week course in rifle marksmanship. A special indoor range was constructed on the floor of the armory consisting of 30 targets. Working in relays of thirty men to a firing order as high as 240 cadets an hour were able to shoot. Over 40,000 rounds of ammunition were shot during the firing period. The instruction given was under the leadership of Capt. George L. Hudson and Lieutenants Jack Palmer, Frank T. Cameron and Lloyd Williams of the infantry section of the instructional staff. A high percentage of them qualified as expert sharpshooters, and the work of the experts will continue on the freshman rifle team which holds telegraphic and shoulder matches throughout the winter months.

Rangers Practice Ski Maneuvers as Snow Comes

AS THE cold and snow of winter approached, the cadets of the university's Ranger unit changed their methods of operation, and are now receiving intensive training in ski troop maneuvers. The ski troop was the first group of its kind organized in any university in the country last year. The Ranger group drilled through the fall months and will continue their work with the help of the ski troop. Instruction in the basic principles of skiing has been done by the Wisconsin Hoofers, an organization whose aims are to take advantage of the many fine opportunities of Wisconsin landscape for winter and summer sports. Lt. A. H. Peterson of the military department staff is in charge of the ROTC unit. The Rangers are under the direction of Capt. K. H. Newberry, '40. The officers, however, only act as advisors to the group. The entire training and plans of the organization are under the leadership of cadet officers. Cadet Captain Robert Reiser, of the senior unit, is the battallion commander of the Rangers and Cadet Captain Orville Martin is the plans and training officer.

Cadets Appear in New Olive Drab

AFTER 12 years in blue the cadet corps have been issued olive drab uniforms. The uniforms are the same as regular army issue with the exception of blue labels to distinguish them as cadets. The advanced corps uniforms have been changed with the old Sam Browne belt being discarded for new cloth belts.

Cadet Capt. Zigman Called to Active Duty

IT IS with great sorrow that the editor bids adieu to Cadet Captain Bob Zigman who so graciously handled all news of the military department for the magazine. A faithful worker and a good fellow, too, our loss is the army's gain—again! Good luck, Bob!

The Union

by Fannie T. Taylor

SEVERAL new film programs have been started this year by the Wisconsin Union film committee, according to Merk Hobson, chairman, in addition to the regular weekly "Movie Time" program in the Play Circle.

Old Rathskeller-Type Shows are Revived

A FREE Friday-night show of the "fun-and-peanuts" variety, called "Movie Time Jamboree" has been started as a monthly feature, showing horror films and others of the type that made the old Rathskeller silent films a popular campus feature.

Saturday morning showings have been inaugurated, chiefly for servicemen and others on the "swing shift" who are unable to get to entertainment during normal theater hours.

Variety of Shows On Theater Bookings

THE regular "Movie Time" bookings for the mid-winter have included the following:

"This is the Enemy," Russian; "Generals Without Buttons," French; "Elizabeth and Essex," starring Bette Davis and Errol Flynn; "Pepe Le Moko," French; "New Wine," the life of Franz Schubert; "Target for Tonight," with a cast of RAF pilots; "Smilin' Through" starring Jeannette MacDonald and Gene Raymond; "Ballerina," French, the film that opened the "Movie Time" series in March 1940; "Dispatch from Reuters;" "One Foot in Heaven;" "The Tunnel," starring Paul Robeson.

WAVES Learn to Ski As Winter Hits the Campus

ABOUT 50 WAVES stationed on the university campus took their first lessons in skiing on the "ag" campus in early December under the instruction of the Wisconsin Hoofers ski team, according to Bob Thompson, Hooper president.

Dressed in ski suits or dungarees, the WAVES found their ski legs in morning and afternoon sessions and the lessons are planned to continue throughout the winter. Inter-WAVE slalom races and trips to Blackhawk lodge, outing cabin maintained by the Wisconsin Union, are proposed for later on.

The WAVES instructors in skiing have been Ted Bradley, Franklin Wallin, Hans Hopf, Peter Elmer, Guilford Wiley, and Peter Rice.

Reuben Hill Leaves For U. of So. Dakota

DR. REUBEN HILL, assistant director of the Wisconsin

Union since 1937, resigned in November to become chairman of the department of sociology at the University of South Dakota. Dr. Hill was an assistant professor of social education and lecturer in sociology and had been in charge of teaching, research, and personnel at the Union.

Familiarly known to the campus simply as "Reuben", he and his wife Marian were two of the most popular campus figures, according to the Daily Cardinal. His "Marriage and the Family" course, one of the few in the country, and his advisorship to the Union forum committee's series of public lectures attracted wide attention in the midwest, the Cardinal added.

Workshop Committee Dresses Union in Holiday Garb

IN AN effort to create a home-like holiday season for soldiers, sailors, WAVES, and students unable to return to their homes this year the Wisconsin Union workshop committee undertook to decorate the Union building so that it would be a "home away from home" with special tree decorations and wreaths.

Barbara Lonam, Madison, chairman of the committee, was in charge of the general arrangements which started with a "work and play" party at which committee members, a service craft group of volunteers, and Union staff members strung popcorn and cranberries, cut out stars, angels and other tree trimmings, and made wreaths.

In addition to the trimming party the Workshop committee has sponsored a "Playshop" for servicemen on Sunday afternoons during the "At Ease" program in the Union, where men and women in the armed forces can make simple gifts quickly. Robert Hodgell, a committee member, is stationed in the Union reception room each Sunday to make charcoal sketches of any sailor, soldier, or WAVE who wishes to be drawn.

The workshop is also open to students for all types of craft and art work throughout the week and on certain evenings. Mrs. Anne Tressler is the instructor in charge on the Union staff.

WAVES Learn Billiards From Famous Peterson

"CHARLEY" Peterson,

famous billiard expert, and the members of the WAVES stationed on the university campus had a fine time in the billiard rooms of the Memorial Union. Peterson included special instruction to the WAVES in his annual November visit, sponsored by the Wisconsin Union games committee. The classes for the navy women were the first to be held anywhere in the country, thus adding another "first" to the long list of game projects initiated by the Union.

"Camp" Shows Delight Audiences in Theater

THE Wisconsin Union theater

has been used for a succession of "camp" shows since the middle of last summer when the first navy "Happy Hour" was scheduled there.

Another "Happy Hour" revue was given Jan. 12, 13, 14, and the soldiers stationed at Truax Field near Madison offered an all-army extravaganza at Thanksgiving time titled "On the Beam." Sell-out houses have greeted all the army and navy shows.

Yehudi Menuhin, playing on the campus on the Wisconsin Union concert series, added two free concerts to his program here—with a special afternoon concert for the men at Truax Field given at one of the field theaters, and an evening concert in the Union theater for the men and women of the navy stationed on the campus.

Paul Draper and Larry Adler, tap-dancer and harmonica virtuoso, who played at the theater in October, donated their time and entertainment gifts to an evening at the Madison USO headquarters following their performance.

Army and navy graduation exercises are held in the theater each month, a new note in campus theater use which will no doubt increase in importance with more and more students studying in uniform.

700 University Girls Serve as Hostesses At Union Parties

MORE than 700 university girls have been organized into hostess units for weekly service as hostesses at parties given both in the Memorial Union and at the USO and other service centers. The co-ed hostesses function under regular USO regulations, and are given, in addition, a special six-hour short course of instruction in hostess duties by the Union chief hostess, Miss Evelyn Hansen.

Varsity Sports

by Bob Foss,
sports ass't

IN SPITE of war and taxes, Wisconsin sports fans are still singing the praises of Coach Harry Stuhldreher's fighting Badger football squad of 1942, a grand bunch of boys, and one of the greatest gridiron outfits ever to wear the cardinal of Wisconsin.

The Badger gridders came through their 10-game schedule—one of the longest and certainly the toughest in Wisconsin football history—with eight wins, one tie, and one loss. Coach Stuhldreher's well drilled and perfectly conditioned squad was tied by Notre Dame 7-7, lost only to Iowa 6-0. They defeated Camp Grant 7-0, Marquette 35-7, Missouri 17-9, Great Lakes 13-7, Purdue 13-0, Ohio 17-7, Northwestern 20-19, and Minnesota 20-6.

With a record such as this, the fighting Badgers of 1942 completed one of their most successful gridiron campaigns in 30 years—since that conference championship eleven of 1912. In spite of the fact that they defeated the Big Ten championship winners, Ohio State, by the decisive 17-7 score, the Badgers placed second in the conference on the mathematical basis of having played only five Big Ten games, winning four, while Ohio State played six conference contests, winning five.

But for once many otherwise logical and sound-reasoning Badger sports fans refuse to accept the cold precision of mathematics! In their books, the great Wisconsin gridders of 1942 are the champions and there's just no use to argue the point! At any rate, all credit is due the boys on the squad for their grand performances on those 10 Saturday afternoons last fall. Practically all of the squad members are in the enlisted reserves of Uncle Sam's armed forces, and will soon be called to service with the army, navy, marine corps, or air corps. Of one thing we can be sure—they will be great fighters on the fighting fronts of the world, just as they have been great competitors on the football field. As long as our country has young men such as these to defend it against its enemies, democracy is in safe hands!

Great credit for the successful gridiron season also should go to Wisconsin's varsity coach staff—Head Coach Stuhldreher, and assistant coaches Guy Sundt, George Fox, and Russ Rippe. They worked hard and painstakingly with their squad, and their work brought results. They deserve a goodly share of the credit for Wisconsin's rise in the gridiron world in 1942.

Harry Stuhldreher, Coach of "The Winners"

1942 Contributions To "Football Greats"

WISCONSIN has developed its share of outstanding athletes in recent years. It is impossible to mention all of them and their records in this limited space, but we would like to say a few words about several of them.

There's Dave Schreiner and Mark Hoskins, the "Lancaster twins" who were elected honorary co-captains of the 1942 football team at the end of the season. These two young men—and no finer were ever reared—played an important part in Badger football fortunes last fall. Schreiner, the All-American right end, and Hoskins, the hard-working, never-give-up right halfback. Dave can be called one of Wisconsin's greatest All-American football players—if not the greatest—simply from the fact that he was a unanimous choice on every All-American team picked in the country.

Then there are such stalwarts as Marlin H. "Pat" Harder, Elroy Hirsch, Jack Wink, Pat Lyons, Paul Hirsbrunner, Bob Baumann, Lloyd Wasserbach, Evan "Red" Vogds, Dean Currier, and Fred Ne-gus, Len Calligaro, and Ashley Anderson—and all the rest of the boys on the squad—all did their part to give Wisconsin one of its greatest gridiron records in a generation.

John Kotz . ANOTHER Again Sets great Basketball group of Pace youngsters has taken over the sports stage on the campus for the winter months. They are the 20 members of Coach Harold E. "Bud" Foster's current basketball squad. Led by the incomparable Johnny Kotz of Rhinelander, Wis., an All-American eager if there ever was one, the Badger basket-eteers inaugurated the 1942-43 season with six wins in seven pre-conference games, and are now in the midst of the Big Ten cage race.

Up to the start of the Big Ten campaign, Wisconsin had defeated Marquette twice 45-36 and 50-38; and had downed Camp Grant 38-36; Oklahoma 48-37; Harvard 58-41; and Hamline 41-37. Lone loss was to Notre Dame in a game played in the Irish fieldhouse. The Badger cagers lost by the slim margin of two points, 61-59, only after the game had gone into an overtime period.

Wisconsin defeated Northwestern in a real over-time thriller, opening their conference schedule with a 67-65 win. Two nights later they were out-wizarded by Illinois' Whiz Kids, coming out on the low end of a 52-40 score.

Coach Foster's quintet looked good in its games played so far. The team is built around five veterans, with Kotz, who was leading scorer in the Big Ten last year with 242 points for the season, and Bob Sullivan at the forwards; lanky Ray Patterson at center; and Fred Rehm and Walt Lautenbach at the guard posts. Fairly capable reserves are found in forwards George Affeldt and Ed Downs; centers Gil Hertz and Ed Mills; and in guards Bob Krueger and Bob Clarke, as well as the others on the squad.

These Badger cage-men have done right well in their pre-conference scoring, and if they can keep up the pace, they will be right up in there at the finish of the Big Ten title race in the spring. At least, the experts figure them to be among the first flight contenders for the mythical championship, but anything can happen along the way, especially in these times. In their first seven games, Wisconsin's basket-eteers rolled up 339 points against their opponents' 286, with Kotz, last year's conference high point man, the leading scorer with 124 points, followed by Sullivan with 75; Lautenbach with 44; Patterson with 43; and Rehm with 32.

John Kotz, in his All-American form

Grunt and Groan Sport Starts Under New Coach

JOHN ROBERTS, newly appointed wrestling coach at Wisconsin, is finding a wealth of material available as he begins his first year as head mentor of the grunt and groan sport. Twice Western conference champion and undefeated in nine bouts last winter, Roberts hails from Des Moines, Ia. He served as reserve guard on the great 1942 Badger football team. He succeeds George A. Martin, who enlisted in the navy last spring.

Tom Jones Crosses Fingers For A Good Track Season

COACH TOM JONES, now in his 30th year of coaching at the University, is optimistic about his 1943 indoor track team, which, if losses to the military services and by ineligibility are not too severe, should rate as one of the top contenders for the Big Ten crown. Jones' chief candidates for individual conference honors this winter are Bob Hodgell and Bob Beierle. In a recent qualification meet, Hodgell soared 6 feet, 5 inches in the high jump, eclipsing all marks made in the conference last year, and bettering his own effort of 6 feet, 4 inches which netted him the outdoor title last spring. Beierle, who holds the conference indoor and outdoor shot put championships, looks like a sure repeater this year, judging by a toss of 47 feet, 8 inches which he has on record already. He is 1943 squad captain.

Joe Steinauer Pleased Over Swimming Outlook

COACH JOSEPH C. STEINAUER, head swimming mentor at Wisconsin, is more optimistic about prospects for the 1943 season as a result of some fine performances turned in by his men in a December meet between varsity and freshmen candidates. The contest uncovered some promising yearling talent. The frosh surprised Steinauer by pulling to within 11 points of the upperclassmen's score, losing out by only 47 to 36. If freshmen are permitted to compete in intercollegiate athletics, and if losses of upperclassmen are not too great, Wisconsin may have one of the best teams of swimmers in the midwest.

U. W. is Host to N.C.A.A. Boxing Tournament

THE University of Wisconsin has again been chosen to be host to the National Collegiate Athletic Association's annual boxing tournament. Selection of Wisconsin as host for the national collegiate boxing tournament in 1943 was revealed by Prof.

Philip O. Badger, of New York University, following a meeting of NCAA officials in New York. The 1943 boxing tournament, ninth in the association's history, will be held in the Wisconsin fieldhouse here March 25-27. The meet was last held at Wisconsin four years ago in 1939, when all entry and attendance records were smashed. The spacious Wisconsin fieldhouse, seating 15,000 persons for boxing matches, was completely sold out for the tournament finals. Coach John Walsh's Wisconsin boxing team also had its most successful record in that year. The Badger fighters won eight straight dual victories over boxing teams from colleges and universities in all parts of the country, then went on to cop four individual championships in the NCAA meet.

Fred Baxter Leaves Us In Preference to Uncle Sam

ALAS! and alack! The army has done it again. This time they've removed our trusted (?) friend and ally (?) Fred Baxter (!) from these parts he so graciously heckled, and last we heard of him he was somewhere in the group of islands known as the Hawaiian, in search of a little grass. (In skirts.) Of course we are carrying on without his very valuable services, (?) and it does go without saying that he is among those we are missing.

Walsh's Boxers Look Powerful

IF SCHOLASTIC ineligibility does not hit the 1943 boxers, these Badgers should be a powerful aggregation. But too, several varsity men are members of the ERC and the team will be severely crippled if this branch of the service is called to active duty.

After the all-university tourney the boxers will engage in dual meets with Virginia, Washington State, and Southwestern Louisiana Institute, all at Madison. There is a possibility that a service team, probably Camp Grant, will make a fourth home match.

These four teams are the class of the nation, but Wisconsin will probably rank favorites over all of them. SLI will offer the strongest opposition, as they have lost only one dual meet in two years, and that was to the Cardinal men in 1942.

Fencing Schedule Takes Travel Cut

THIS year's fencing schedule will be cut down due to travel difficulties, Coach A. L. Masely has announced. Right now it looks like there will be only four or five matches besides the Big 10 meet.

THE ANSWER IS . . . YOUR NERVES.
By Arnold Jackson, '16, M. D., F. A. C. S.

Arnold S. Jackson's THE ANSWER IS . . . YOUR NERVES expounds the principle of conscientious relaxation, so needed in the stress of today. This concept, long known to the medical profession, has been straight-forwardly presented in order that potential neuroasthenics may diagnose and apply their own therapy without invading the doctor's office or pervading upon a physician's time, now essential for serious ailments rather than pampering the whims of the would-be-sick.

The book has been scientifically buttressed by well chosen typical case histories not only of interest to the medical student or general practitioner but to the laity as well, where much good in regard to mental hygiene may be promulgated. And quite wisely, this physician has left religion, one of the freedoms for which we are now fighting, in the hands of a capable minister of God, the Reverend Edwin O. Kennedy, who presents a common sense chapter on this divine matter which underwrites those ideas Dr. Jackson prescribes.

When this surgeon can forego the glorifications of surgery, made so prevalent in the midwest by the Mayo Clinic, and instead recognize the prime importance of diagnostics, the student of medicine becomes anxious to learn such a man's viewpoint. Dr. Jackson states: "Surgery is an art and a man with clever and well trained hands can perform near miracles with body tissue, but the dean of doctors is the man who has all his faculties, observations, touch, judgment and imagination so cultivated that his diagnosis is al-

Otto Stader, '20, Develops New Splint for Broken Bones

We read in the December Readers' Digest of an alumnus of the University of Wisconsin—DR. OTTO STADER, '20, who has developed the remarkable Stader splint which is being used with such amazing results in the Naval Hospital in Philadelphia.

Patients with broken jaw bones able to eat, smoke, and chew gum almost as soon as the splint has been applied, a young baker, with a leg broken two days before, walking, and within a week back at work standing eight hours a day before his ovens, a sailor carrying a 40-pound suitcase with an arm which had been set only 24 hours before—such are the results achieved from use of the Stader splint.

The special devise is a bone-setting mechanism and a substitute bone at the same time. It consists of a short metal bar with two stainless steel pins skewered into the bone at each end, firmly anchoring the metal bar so as to bridge the fracture. The broken ends of the bone are drawn together and accurately and painlessly adjusted by means of the screws.

This splint was developed by Dr. Stader when he was a practising veterinarian and was first applied to animals. In 1937, with two other doctors, he began the work of adapting the splint to human arms and legs.

The day after Pearl Harbor, Dr. Stader brought one of his splints to the Philadelphia Naval Hospital whose doctors are now using it with the aforementioned success. The entire output of Dr. Stader's splints is being reserved for our service men, but after the war the splint will be available for civilian use, and will mean less pain, less costly nursing and hospital care, less time lost from precious jobs, no periods of dreary rehabilitation.

John Scott, '33, Becomes Foreign News Ed. for TIME

The name of JOHN SCOTT, ex '33, isn't new to Badgers In The Limelight. Our readers by now are quite familiar with the former student of the university who wanted to find out the real truth about the Soviets. Figuring a good factory worker would be more welcome in Russia than a foreign correspondent, he went to the General Electric Institute at Schenectady, earned his certificate as a master electric welder, took out a Union card and sailed for Russia.

He spent ten years becoming acquainted with Russia and getting the inside story on the Soviets, becoming completely at home among the Russians and marrying a Russian girl. He has written two books on Russia, "Beyond the Urals" and "Duel for Europe".

Scott is now home and has become one of the Foreign News Editors of TIME. With the Red Armies so important in the war picture, TIME readers will be thankful to John Scott for giving depth and authenticity and human understanding to the stories about the Russian war effort behind the front.

Kerst, '34, May Find New Cure for Cancer

PROF. DONALD W. KERST, University of Illinois scientist and 1934 graduate of the University of Wisconsin, has announced that the world's most powerful x-ray machine, built to smash atoms, may provide medical science with a new weapon against malignant cancer.

Kerst, with the assistance of the General Electric Co., built a betatron machine that produces a beam of electrons which travel only 3-100ths of 1% less than the speed of light, which is the highest speed ever produced by man.

This beam is used to produce high voltage x-rays which Kerst believes can pass deeper into the human body than those of the most powerful x-ray equipment now in established medical use and with less destructive effect on skin and fatty tissue beneath it. "At 20,000,000 volts these electrons will penetrate as far as 4 inches into the body and no farther. Thus there is no damage beyond the area of treatment," Kerst has said.

Since there is only one machine of this power and the device is still in the laboratory testing stage, use of the instrument for general clinical purposes will be delayed until the future and probably cannot be fully developed until after the war.

M. Courtney, '42, Appears In Satevepost Ad.

Classmates of MARCIA COURTNEY, '42, probably were surprised upon turning the pages of the November 21 Saturday Evening Post to see Marcia adding a distinctly decorative touch to a full-page Elgin watch ad under the headline "She ferries planes for the U. S. Army!"

Miss Courtney, whose home is in Lock Haven, Pa., is connected with the Piper Aircraft Corporation. She is one of the few women to complete the advance course for civilian pilots—one of the very few women ever to fly planes bearing the U. S. Army insignia.

The second woman to solo, Miss Courtney was the first to receive her pilot license in the Civil Aeronautics Board training course conducted by Capt. Howard Morey at the Madison municipal airport.

Credits were not allowed for her flying time and she was unable to graduate with her '41 classmates. Later the faculty recognized the course, granted the credits, and she received her diploma.

A colorful gracenote to Miss Courtney's picturesque career, she learned to fly a plane before she could drive a car!

Jeff Burrus, '27, Puts Ceilings On the Food We Eat

JEFFERSON (JEFF) BURRUS, a Rhodes Scholar who graduated from the university in 1927, certainly has more than his share of worries these days. As chief counsel of the food and food products section of OPA in our nation's capital he has a large part in the setting of ceiling prices on the foods we eat. He is sort of a lawyer and judge for our corner grocer as he takes part in the hearings and research preliminary to the fixing of prices and then interprets the regulations and amendments. He also is the one to whom a store petitions for price adjustments in cases of hardship when the wholesale and retail prices are so close that the grocer is "squeezed".

Jeff's statement that 10,000,000 reports have to be considered in the course of fixing prices on "soup to nuts" gives an idea of the magnitude of his job.

Bob Earle, '27, Has 14,000 People Working for Him

At 37 an important figure in the aviation industry, is a well-deserved description of BOB EARLE, '27, vice-president of the Curtiss-Wright Corp., member of its board of directors and general manager of its rapidly expanding propeller division. Bob has more than 14,000 employees working under him in five plants in New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Indiana.

Interested in aviation since he was a boy in Janesville, Bob studied engineering at the university and continued his studies at the naval school at Hampton Roads, Va. In 1929 Curtiss-Wright gave Bob a job in its Washington office and he became manager of the Buffalo plant four years later. His progress has been just as steady ever since and he became vice-president of the company three years ago.

Bob sees greater advancement in aviation inevitable after the war. He predicts that high altitude planes will carry passengers across ocean and continents as simply and at lower cost than ships and trains. When peace comes cargo hauling and mail carrying by plane will become common, and there will certainly be far more private flying than ever before, Bob says. And—he should know.

Harry Bullis, '17, is Head Man for General Mills Now

Our good friend HARRY BULLIS, '17, again breaks into the news and also into our Badgers in the Limelight section. Harry has been made president of General Mills, one of the largest milling corporations in America, makers of Gold Medal Flour and Wheaties, "the breakfast of champions", among other products.

Former president of the Wisconsin Alumni Association, Harry is a good friend to all alumni. He was active in founding the Wisconsin X Club, an organization made up of past officers of the Alumni Association, and of which he is now president.

(Note: See TIME, Jan. 25, p. 75, for enlargement of our story on Mr. Bullis, and especially the war work being done by General Mills.)

Joe Farrington, '19, Represents Hawaii in U. S. Congress

JOSEPH FARRINGTON, '19, publisher of the Honolulu Daily Star-Bulletin, was elected a member of Congress to represent the Kingdom of Liliuokalani in the last election.

Farrington had already served two terms as territorial senator from Hawaii but announced early in October he would not be a candidate for reelection. After the Republican delegate, Samuel Wander King, resigned his post to rejoin the United States Navy, party representatives from the island enthusiastically approved Farrington as the party's choice, and a victory in the November election sent our alumnus on his way to the new congress.

W. B. Rutledge, '14, Named U. S. Supreme Court Judge

Louis Lochner Talks And Association Gets Benefits

Louis Lochner, whose name is as familiar to Wisconsin alumni as that of the president of the United States, talked to a full house at the Memorial Union Thursday night, January 21, on "What About Germany?" The lecture was sponsored by the Wis. Alumni Association, and benefits went to the Association's scholarship fund and also to help finance the sending of association publications, free, to alumni in the armed forces.

Lochner, who was the last newspaperman to come out of Germany, is generally acknowledged to be the American who knows more about Germany than anyone else. The audience enjoyed every minute of the lecture and many stayed afterwards to ask questions of the famed Badger foreign press correspondent.

Sigma Delta Chi, professional journalistic fraternity initiated Lochner into this chapter, with Wm. D. Hoard, Junior, president of W. D. Hoard & Sons Co., publisher of Hoard's Dairyman, Carl Anderson, creator of the Little Henry cartoons, and E. J. Erlandson, editor and publisher of the Lake Mills Leader. ## Des Moines Brothers Honor Louis Lochner At Dinner

Louis Lochner's address in Des Moines really precipitated something, Secretary Arthur Brayton writes us. The Des Moines alumni got busy and scheduled a dinner for Louis which turned out to be the first meeting of the alumni in about 20 years. There were about 18 members present, representing classes from 1908 to 1939. They now have about decided to have another meeting in about 10 years, half the time it took them to get this meeting started.

ways dependable."

Well known to the internists are those patients suffering from nothing more than meningitis and hospitalitis and well known also to the internist are the diagnostic problems and rationale of therapy involved. The author tries to clarify such situations and in order to do so takes the reader behind the scenes into the consultation room.

Here thrilling case after thrilling case is reported, each with its specific signs and symptoms in an endeavor to segregate the purely functional from the truly organic. But the chief purpose is not to settle such disturbances as reach the medical man's hands but rather is to ameliorate the many, many subclinical cases that never reach his office.

The book is not a pseudo-Freudian splurge by an amateur psychiatrist nor is it a pseudo-philosophical asininity by a successful senile. The attempt is made at prophylaxis for those who, though recently told by a competent medical practitioner that nothing is wrong with them, persist in feeling ill as manifested by insomnia, tiredness, nervousness, excessive worry or long list of complaints handed to the doctor. This text is indeed an excellent sedative for these chaotic days. Arthur Levins

THE ROBBER BRIDEGROOM. By Eudora Welty, B. A. '29.

Eudora Welty must indeed be the type of person for whom the fairies dance their magic circle by the light of the full moon and the little elf men "down where the lilies grow" must pop up and discuss their airy problems with her any old time, for her THE ROBBER BRIDEGROOM is as light and lovely a bit of charm as we've read in a long time.

Pure and unadulterated fancy taking an uncharted course into the realm of the imagination the story lightly introduces us to such at one time wise and unworldly characters as Clement Musgrove, a planter bold, who meets up with two jolly bad men who roamed the Mississippi of old—Mike Fink, a Paul Bunyan character, and rambunctious Jamie, a bandit with a mane of golden hair and dressed as a New Orleans dandy.

Jamie is Rosamond Musgrove's "Robber Bridegroom" as he fetches her off to a house in the woods in the best fairy tale manner. And they do live "happily ever after" as they settle down in a marble and cypress mansion in picturesque New Orleans, a city famed for her beauty and vice,—Mr. and Mrs. Jamie and a pair of beautiful twins.

Granted—not a story to solve any of the world's weightier problems, and agreed—not a story to heighten or deepen one's intellectual prowess by reading it, but oh! Miss Welty's magnificent prose style and the enchanting story she weaves are truly "such is the stuff that dreams are made of." The Editor.
