Season Record: Four Wins, Five Losses

Badgers Fade, Lose to Illini and Gophers

by Jim Mott
UW Sports News Service

WISCONSIN'S BADGERS progressed on the downward trail for the second week in a row as they lost 35-14 to Illinois this warm, sunny November afternoon. The Badgers fought gamely in the first half, leaving the field with a 7-0 deficit for the intermission. But within seven minutes after the third period kickoff, the margin had ballooned to 21-0 and 48,163 Illinois partisans sat back to savor the outcome.

Conceivably, this could have been a Badger triumph. That it wasn't, must be chalked up to Wisconsin's failure to take advantage of an early first period scoring opportunity, and the Badgers' newly found role of playing "Santa Claus" which gave the Illini their quick second half start.

The margin of the Illinois win—21 points—almost matched the 22-0 defeat the 1918 Illini hung on the Badgers at Madison, and did match the 1933 Illinois win of 21-0 at Champaign. Considering that this was the 37th time these two time honored rivals had met on the gridiron, it may surprise you that Illinois had never before scored five touchdowns in one game against Wisconsin, and the Illini had scored four TD's in one game only once before—in 1946 when the Rose Bowl bound Big Ten champions rallied to edge Wisconsin 27-21.

In addition, the loss today was the first that a Wisconsin team had suffered at Champaign since the ill-fated "Hard Rocks" dropped a 14-10 thriller to Illinois back in 1951.

A strong, gusty wind out of the south determined Illinois' pre-game strategy of accepting the wind at its back when it won the toss of the coin. Such strategy had little affect on the final outcome, as the Illini asserted control of the game early in the second period, and never gave the Badgers an opportunity to make the score close.

The rugged Illinois line, averaging 226 pounds per man in the starting line-up, held the Wisconsin running attack at bay, allowing the Badgers just 43 net yards in nineteen rushes. It was little consolation to Coach Milt Bruhn and his charges that the passing game, as directed by Ron Miller, the superb sophomore, netted 194 yards against a porous Illinois secondary. Much of the yardage came too late in the game to influence the final outcome.

Illinois, by contrast, shredded Wisconsin's line with the bull-like smashes of fullback Bill Brown (78 yards in 19 carries); the off tackle slants of right halfback Ethan Blackaby (41 yards in 8 rushes); and the elusiveness of elf-like Johnny Easterbrook—5-8, 158 pounds—who ran Wisconsin's ends all afternoon for 95 yards in 16 attempts. The overall effectiveness of the Illinois ground game allowed Illinois to achieve ball control—70 rushes for a net of 247 yards—and they were active enough in the aerial game to complete five of nine attempts for 56 yards, including a 21 yard scoring pass by Mel Meyers to halfback Marshall Starks to start the day's scoring.

Wisconsin moved downfield from its own 21 yard line after receiving the opening kickoff, and Miller accounted for 42 of the yards on three consecutive completions—to Kunesh for 7, to Derleth for 14, and again to Derleth for 21 yards. Three running plays in the series netted nine yards. The attack was halted when Starks grabbed Miller's second down pass on the Illinois six, and ran it back sixteen yards to set up an Illinois first down on their own 22.

Quarterback John Easterbrook moved the Illini to a first down right away in a pattern that was to be repeated often during the course of the game—sending Bill Brown smashing up the middle for six yards, and moving the ball himself on the keeper-option play, moving outside Wisconsin's tackle, inside the Badgers defending end for seven yards.

The Badgers forced Illinois into a punting situation when the first two Illini passes were incomplete, and Easterbrook lost five yards trying to turn Wisconsin's right end, with tackle Don VanderVelden making a fine play to down the Illini signal caller from behind. Ed O'Bradovich stepped back to punt, but the snap from center never reached him—it hit one of the blockers set up in front of him for protection against the onrushing Badger linemen, and while O'Bradovich recovered the ball, Wisconsin had a first down on the Illinois 19 yard line.

A first down pass from Miller to Carlson gained nine yards to the ten yard line, and it appeared a safe bet that the Badgers would score easily. Miller's second down pass intended for Gerry Nena in the end zone was in and out of Gerry's grasp, and on third down, Wiesner was sent wide, only to be tripped up by rugged Joe Rutgens for a yard loss on the eleven yard line. Miller's fourth down pass was overthrown in the end zone, and the Badgers were not to come close again until it was too late.

The ensuing Illinois attack moved the ball out to their own 41 yard line, with Easterbrook romping twice for first downs on runs of 15 and 12 yards. But again the Badgers braced and forced a punt. O'Bradovich kicked to Don Bangert, sophomore back from Green Bay East on the Wisconsin 27. Bangert was hit as he started to return the ball, and fumbled, with Tony Parilli recovering for the hosts on the Wisconsin 30.

Halfback Ethan Blackaby and fullback Bill Brown smashed for a first down on Wisconsin's 19, and then Easterbrook swung wide around the Badgers' right end for what seemed a certain touchdown, only to lose control of the football near the ten yard line, and Bangert recovered for the Badgers on the one yard line.

Two plays gained four yards to the five, and Jim Bakken, who averaged 40.8 yards punting on five kicks, punted against the wind to the Wisconsin 33. It took the Illini just six plays to score, with reserve fullback Jim Brown picking up a vital first down by plowing through the middle for six yards on a fourth and three situation.

A penalty for illegal procedure stalled Illinois for one play, but Meyers' pass to Starks netted 21 yards and the score. Place kicking specialist Gerry Wood added the first of his five extra points, and Illinois led 7-0 with 12:39 left to play in the second period.

Wisconsin moved the ball from its own 29 to the 44 on the strength of a Miller completion to end Ron Carlson good for 12 yards following the kickoff, then had to punt. Bakken kicked 52 yards to Starks on the Illinois 4, and he returned five yards, with Bill Brown recovering his fumble when he was hit hard by Badger defenders.

Illinois moved downfield 74 yards in a time consuming 22 play march that was climaxed when Wood's field goal attempt from the Badgers' 24 yard line was barely short of the cross bars. The Badgers had time for five plays before the first half ended, and Miller picked up a first down by running for 13 yards when he could find no receiver open downfield on the first play of the series.

The Illini kicked off to start the second half, and soon had two more scores, while the Badgers had the ball for just one play—and that an intercepted pass.

Tom Wiesner took the kickoff and returned fifteen yards to the 25 yard line, where he fumbled as he was hit, and end Bob Mountz pounced on the ball at that point. Seven plays, all on the ground, netted the score, with Ethan Blackaby crashing over from the one yard line with 11:39 remaining to be played in the third quarter.

Wood kicked off to Norvell on the Wisconsin 12 yard line, and Merritt fumbled the ball, though he fell on it on the Badgers' 17. Thus Miller had the task of getting the team back into the game. A first down pass, dictated by the 14-0 margin, was intercepted by defender Jim Brown, who leaped high in the air to snag it, and fell to the ground on the Wisconsin 22.

Six plays netted the score, with Easterbrook moving the ball eight yards on first down, and climaxed the drive with a five yard sweep of Wisconsin's left side of the line for the score. Wood's extra point made it 21-0 midway in the period.

Bakken's 65 yard punt rolled dead on the Illinois one yard line following the Badgers' inability to advance the ball after the kickoff. The return kick by O'Bradovich went out of bounds on the Illinois 33. The Badgers had realized a gain of 33 yards on the punt exchange.

Miller moved Wisconsin to their first score in just four plays at this point, with completed passes to Derleth for 18 yards, and to Ezerins for 14 and the touchdown following a yard effort by Norvell, and an incomplete pass to Kunesh in the end zone which was juggled and dropped. Kunesh added the extra point and it was 21-7 with 1:54 left to play in the third period.

Illinois put the game on ice by marching 76 yards in fourteen plays following Bakken's kickoff into the end zone which Glenn Glauser returned 24 yards. Only one pass was thrown in the march, that a fourteen yarder from Easterbrook to end Ernie McMillan as the Illini were content to grind out the yardage in short chunks. Wisconsin's line simply could not contain the Illini backs, who were sent charging play after play into the soft underbelly of the Badgers' defense. Bill Brown's thirteen yard off tackle smash near the end of the drive placed the ball on the Badgers' five yard line. Then, on second down, Starks slanted outside right guard for the score, with 10:08 left to play in the game.

The Wisconsin offense still didn't untrack itself at this point, and an exchange of punts gave the ball to the Badgers at their own 31 yard line. Quarterback Mel Meyers contributed to the Illinois punting situation—actually a third down quick kick by Ken Zimmerman—by being trapped into a 23 yard loss while trying to pass. A Ron Miller to Tom Wiesner pass play moved the Badgers to the Illinois 45, and the Badgers moved to a first down on the Illinois 33 before the attack stalled.

Bakken's fourth down punt was fielded by Blackaby on the 12 yard line, he raced to the east sideline, turned the corner, was in the clear, and with the aid of a block on Jim Bakken, he eluded both Bakken and Wiesner, the final Badger defenders, as he galloped 88 yards for the final Illini score. 2:59 remained to be played.

Don Bangert returned the kickoff 22 yards to the 27, and in five plays the Badgers had a consolation score. Miller passed complete to Elmars Ezerins for 13 yards to start the march. A pass to Staley for three yards, and a seven yard run by reserve fullback Neil Fleming netted a first down at mid-field.

Miller threw long to Staley for 37 yards, then hit the Madison (East) junior just inside the end zone at the goal line flag with the scoring aerial that made the final count 35-14 with twenty-four seconds to play.

The flurry made Miller's final passing yardage for the day 194 yards on 13 completions in 27 attempts, and moved him closer to several all-time Wisconsin passing records, and to within fifteen yards of a new all-time single season total offense record. The Lyons, Ill., sophomore has gained 1,317 yards in eight games to date, while Jim Haluska set the record in 1952, with 1,332 yards in nine games.

Wisconsin 7, Minnesota 26 November 19

AN INSPIRED Wisconsin football team battled rugged Minnesota on near even terms for three quarters here this beautiful November afternoon before losing a 26-7 decision that enabled the Gophers to gain a share of the Big Ten title for the first time since a "Golden" era ended in 1941.

Minnesota started quickly, scoring the game's first touchdown with just 4:59 elapsed in the first period, then added another tally with just 2:38 remaining in the same period for a 12-0 lead. The battling Badgers fought back doggedly, tallied their lone score in the second period, threatened in the third period to tally against a tiring opponent, then failed to withstand Minnesota's game clinching surge that accounted for two last period tallies.

The win enabled Minnesota to accomplish a rare feat in Big Ten football—advance to the title after finishing last the previous season—while the Badgers did exactly the same thing in reverse—go from the championship one year to last place the next season.

Strangely, Minnesota's feat had been accomplished before only by Gopher teams in the early years of Big Ten play (1899 and 1908 teams finished last, while 1900 and 1909 teams gained title recognition) while Wisconsin's feat was most recently duplicated by Illinois which went from a co-championship in 1953 to dead last in 1954. Michigan and Ohio State also suffered similar fates—the Wolverines after sharing the title in 1933 were last in 1934, and the Buckeyes after winning the 1917 championship placed last in 1918, a year in which Indiana played no conference games. Again, a similarity in Wisconsin's 1960 season—Indiana's games this year did not count in the conference standings.

A further check of the record book reveals that this 1960 Wisconsin team is the first Big Ten team ever to place last and yet win at least two games in conference play. All other last place finishers in Big Ten history either won or tied a game, or didn't win at all.

Minnesota's championship credentials were presented convincingly the first two times they gained possession of the football this day, and you had to be among the 55,576 fans attending the game, or have witnessed the game on television (the game was regionally telecast) to appreciate the courageous comeback made by Bruhn's Badgers throughout the middle portion of the game.

Minnesota won the toss of the coin and elected to kickoff, taking advantage of a southwest wind that at times reached gusts of 25 miles per hour. Fullback and co-captain Tom Wiesner bolted over the left side of Minnesota's line for 12 yards and a first down on the first scrimmage of the game, before disaster hit the "fired-up" Badgers. On third down, Ron Miller stepped back before getting the snap from center, and the ball popped ten feet or so in the air over the Badger backfield, and Gopher end Bob Deegan plucked the ball on its downward flight to set up a first down on the Badger 31. The play was ruled a fumble by Miller, a five yard loss charged to Miller, and a fumble recovery for Deegan.

Seven plays netted the first score of the game, as Gopher quarterback Sanford Stephens, a 6-0, 200 pound junior directed Minnesota's rushing attack. Stephens utilized a third down rollout play for seven yards and a first down on the Wisconsin 21, while fullback Roger Hagberg and right halfback Bill Munsey combined with Stephens to move the ball thirteen yards in three more plays to Wisconsin's eight yard line. Stephens wasted no time here, rolling out over the Badgers' left side for the score with 10:01 left to play in the period. Jim Rogers extra point attempt was wide, and Minnesota led 6-0.

The Badgers gained nothing in three plays following the Minnesota kickoff, and Jim Bakken, who won the Big Ten punting title for 1960 with a 41.5 average, kicked 38 yards to the Gophers' 42; from there, Stephens piloted his team 58 yards in eleven plays, assisted by two five yard offside penalties charged against the Badgers during the march.

The first penalty gave the Gophers a first down on Wisconsin's 47, sustaining the march. Munsey immediately smashed off tackle for 15 yards, and when he lateraled the ball forward to end Bob Deegan, Minnesota drew a five yard penalty. A first down pass by Stephens was incomplete, and on third down, after left halfback Dave Mulholland had hit off right tackle for two yards, the Gopher play caller tossed a strike to end Dick Larson for 21 yards and a first down on Wisconsin's 14 yard line.

A five yard penalty on the Badgers on first down moved the ball to the nine, and three running plays netted a first down three yards from the goal. Hagberg pounded the middle for two yards, and Stephens sneaked into the end zone for the score, with 2:58 remaining. Again, Rogers failed to kick the extra point.

A lesser team might have folded at this point—but not the Badgers. They braced defensively, came alive offensively, and momentarily threw a thorny scare into their rose-conscious traditional rivals. This was a fair turnabout, however—remember 1959 at Minneapolis, and the battle Minnesota's last placers put up before the Badgers clinched an 11-7 triumph and their first undisputed Big Ten title since 1912?

The Badgers defense tightened and combined with the offense, which featured a stepped up rushing attack—the Badgers gained just 58 yards against Northwestern and Illinois combined—held the Gophers to a mere 22 yards in 16 plays, one an incomplete pass, throughout the second and third periods, and nary a first down did the Gophers chalk up in this time. It was Wisconsin at its best in these fleeting moments of the 1960 season.

Perhaps the Gophers became overly cautious with a two touchdown lead, and put too much faith in their punting game, which averaged just 31.8 yards per kick on eight attempts. The Gophers decided to punt on second down on the last play of the first period to take advantage of the wind, and near the end of the second period decided to punt on third down—against the wind. Twice in the third period, Minnesota had Stephens punt on third down with the wind favoring the Gophers. It was a short punt early in the second period that set up Wisconsin's only score—in fact it was recorded as a minus four yard punt.

The Badgers moved from their own 28 yard line to Minnesota's 24 yard line at the start of the second period, with Ron Miller's passing netting 37 yards on completions to Staley for 17 and eight yards, and to Derleth for 12, and Wiesner added six yards in two running plays. An offside penalty against Minnesota set up a first down and five situation on the 24 when Miller's pass was intercepted by Gopher defensive back Dick Enga on the 15, and he ran it back eighteen yards to the Minnesota 33.

Wisconsin's defense held the Gophers to three yards in three plays, and on fourth down Stephens stepped back to punt, but the ball went straight up in the air, hit the ground about the forty yard line, and bounced crazily backwards to the Gophers' 32 where the ball was downed.

Miller took the Badgers into paydirt in five plays, with a pass to Staley for ten yards netting a first down at the eighteen yard line, and a perfect strike to co-captain Derleth netting the score. Hank fielded the ball on the five yard line, spun when hit, and smashed into the end zone. Three running plays for short yardage had diversified the attack in this march. Erv Kunesh added the extra point, and it was 12-7 with 7:34 left in the half.

The Badgers could not sustain their offense in the time remaining, with Minnesota's defense throwing Miller for a nine yard loss to stop one march near mid-field, and Stephens intercepted a Miller pass—he grabbed three all afternoon—to stop the Badgers from succeeding on a touchdown pitch from mid-field just before half-time.

The individual brilliance of Tom Wiesner sparked Wisconsin in the third period, and almost turned the tide. Tom snared a Miller pass for 16 yards to set up a first down on Wisconsin's 39 yard line three plays into the second half, but Bakken had to punt from the Badgers' 42 three plays later, setting up a Minnesota first down on their own 23.

Here, Stephens justified Coach Murray Warmath's faith in his punting, booming the day's longest punt 54 yards after three plays gained just seven yards.

After Hess returned the punt six yards to the 22, it was all Wiesner. Tom went around the right side of the Minnesota line—manned by All-American guard Tom Brown at 243 pounds, who had a big helper in 250 pound Frank Brixius—for 12 yards to the Badgers' 34. Miller rolled out for three yards, then sent Wiesner over tackle for four yards.

Here came the day's longest run, and it was a picture of Wiesner at his finest. He bolted through the middle, cut to his left, followed his blocking, faked with his body, and twisted and turned when finally hit to climax a 43 yard gallop that ended on the Minnesota 16 yard line.

The roars of Wisconsin fans filled historic Camp Randall—Minnesota rooters sat stunned. Miller called for quiet, sent Merritt Norvel over right tackle for two yards. A sideline pass intended for Elmars Ezerins was incomplete near the goal line, overthrown and out of bounds. Miller, on third down, faded to pass, faked, slipped, gained his footing, and finally was sent out of bounds by Julian Hook after a three yard gain to the eleven yard line.

A good Minnesota rush on Miller on fourth down sent the Badger quarterback reeling backwards, and when he finally did throw, it was a low pass which Staley caught on his shoetops on the nine yard line, and fell to the turf. Minnesota had stopped this Badger bid for upset, and with it, the tide of battle turned once more to Minnesota. It was a gallant effort. It deserved a better fate.

The Badgers still had one last chance. The defense held, and Stephens punted on third down to Hess on the Badgers' 44, and he returned eleven yards to the Minnesota 45. Three running plays netted a first down on the 35, and Badger hopes went soaring skyward again, but for the last time. End Tom Hall broke through to drop Miller for a ten yard loss back to the forty-five on first down, and while Norvell picked up eleven yards on third down, the threat died when Miller's fourth down pass intended for Kellogg was batted down, and the Gophers took over on their own 34.

Stephens punted 36 yards on third down—two plays lost seven—on the final play of the third period to take the wind advantage again, and Bakken punted back 39 yards following a Miller to Wiesner screen pass that lost ten yards.

On first down, Stephens pulled a surprise out of his bag of tricks, swept Wisconsin's left end for 26 yards to the Badgers' 39, and a 65 yard eight play Minnesota scoring march to "ice" the game and a share of the championship was underway. It was Minnesota's initial first down since the first quarter. A third down pass play, the only pass by the Gophers in the second half was complete to Hagberg for ten yards and a first down on the 25 yard line. Stephens gained two on a roll out.

Dave Mulholland then came to the fore, smacking off tackle for twelve yards, and after Hagberg dented the middle for seven yards, the Fargo, N. D. sophomore went twisting over right tackle for the touchdown with 10:28 left to play in the game. Rogers added the extra point for a 19-7 lead.

With John Fabry at the helm, Wisconsin picked up a first down on the 34 in three plays following the kickoff, and it was Wiesner gaining nine of them. Miller re-entered the game, and his second down pass was intercepted by Stephens on the Gophers' 47, and he returned 13 yards to Wisconsin 40 yard line. Six plays netted the score, with halfback Judge Dickson ripping off twelve yards on a reverse to the 28, and Larry Johnson, second team quarterback, rolling out to his left and around Wisconsin's defensive ends and halfbacks for eighteen yards and the final score of the game with 5:36 left to play Johnson's run came after the Badgers had extended Minnesota to a fourth and one situation on the nineteen, with Dickson plunging the necessary yard for the first down. Rogers extra point attempt was good and the final margin of 26-7 was achieved.

A final Badger threat, set up by an exchange of punts, including a 15 yard penalty on Minnesota for interfering with a fair catch of a punt, and featuring a 28 yard Miller to Wiesner pass play moved the Badgers to a first down on the winners' 20 yard line, was thwarted by Stephens' third interception of the game, and he returned the ball fifty-one yards to the Wisconsin 49 four plays before the game ended. The win was the first for Minnesota over Wisconsin at Madison since 1948 when the Gophers triumphed 16-0 in Harry Stuhldreher's final game, and it was the first win Gopher coach Murray Warmath had ever gained over a Milt Bruhn coached Badger team (they tied 13-13 in 1956). Overall, Minnesota now leads in the 70 game rivalry that started in 1890 with 39 victories, to 23 for Wisconsin and there have been eight ties.

Only the final score matters. Not the first-quarter tally, or the count at half-time. And it's the same in home heating.
