Small Arms—Children of Conflict: Photographs by Michael Kienitz
September 8 to October 28, 2007, Mayer Gallery

EDUCATIONAL PROGRAMS

Friday, September 7, 5:30 p.m., room L140

Preview lecture by Michael Kienitz, photographer
“Small Arms—Children of Conflict”

The artist will talk about his career as a photojournalist and relate stories of taking the photographs in this exhibition. He will talk about working in areas of economic and political conflict and reflect on why a photographer risks his life to tell a story with images.

6:30–8 p.m., Paige Court

Celebratory reception with music by Tony Castañeda’s Latin Jazz Sextet, refreshments, and a cash bar.

Friday, October 5, 6 p.m., room L140

Lecture by Michael Kienitz, photographer
“From Pixels to Archival Photography”

The artist will talk about how he transformed images shot with color film nearly 30 years ago into 19-x-13-inch, black-and-white digital archival prints. He will discuss equipment and software, converting color images into stunning black-and-white, and the process of creating duotones for his book Small Arms—Children of Conflict.

This lecture is part of Downtown Gallery Night. Chazen Galleries and Museum Shop open 5–8 p.m.

Saturday October 13, 6 to 8 p.m., Mayer Gallery

Arts Night Out reception

The artist will be available in Mayer Gallery for questions during this UW–Madison campus-wide event.

Sunday, October 14, 2:30 p.m., Mayer Gallery

Gallery talk by Michael Kienitz, photographer
“A Personal Look at Small Arms—Children of Conflict”

In conjunction with the Wisconsin Book Festival, the photographer will describe in detail the events surrounding each photograph and what motivated him to often risk his life to chronicle the lives of children immersed in economic and political conflict. Kienitz will sign copies of the catalogue Small Arms—Children of Conflict immediately following the gallery talk outside the Museum Shop.

Lectures and exhibitions are free and open to the public.
