*The Murder
at Conway's*

MURDER AT CONWAY'S

It was 11.00 o'clock Tuesday morning when Mrs. Conway discovered that Bill Yerkey had been murdered as he slept. I was busy writing in my room when Mrs. Conway came up to call Bill. He had cautioned her the night before about waking him for lunch.

The rapping on Bill's door which was next to mine, disturbed my train of thought and I arose and opened my door that I might ask Mrs. Conway a question. So I was watching, when after receiving no response, she opened Bill's door and looked in. A queer expression came over her face as she stepped into the room and then she shrieked, "He's been murdered, He's been murdered." I rushed into the room. On the bed lay Bill in a pool of blood, his mop of curly red hair like a flame in the sunshine. I had no time to note further details as I gave my attention to Mrs. Conway who was beside herself. Her shrieks could be heard from blocks.

I don't know who came in first, I saw Jean Conway's white face with staring eyes, Murdock, John Dogan, the policeman on the beat, and most of the neighbors, a motley crowd, filling the doorway and endeavoring to see the body of poor Bill Yerkes with his flaming hair and blood soaked night clothes. Other policemen soon arrived and the room was cleared of all except the policemen and me and the door closed. Jean had led her mother away and had called a doctor.

As we turned from the door our eyes were drawn as by a magnet to a knife on the floor near the window. As I leaned over I saw a hand - a woman's hand - near the knife -- and there on the floor close to the bed was the body of Marge Eaton. At first we thought we had a double murder, but she was breathing and we phoned in a call for an ambulance.

and sent her to the hospital. The doctors reported she was suffering from a possible concussion caused by a blow on the head.

Here was mystery indeed, Bill Yerkes was murdered, Marge Eaton unconscious on the floor with her hand close to a big knife-- and the bill-fold, that Bill had so proudly and foolishly displayed the night before, missing.

By noon a special detail headed by Police Chief Thomas Ryan was in charge of the house. I knew the chief very well. He was very tall, broad shouldered, with keen gray eyes and a mop of white hair. He had been a Federal Operative and had solved many crimes. I felt very sorry for him, his only son had been killed in an auto accident while in college and Mrs. Ryan had died from the shock. He talked little, but listened well. I admitted him very much. He began to cheer up on everyone in the house.

As a lawyer I was interested in the case. I had made an intensive study of crime cases. Sifting of evidence was an obsession with me. In my room I began to outline the case.

THE BACKGROUND

The boarding-house kept by Mrs. Conway on Aubert Avenue in this Colorado town.

THE CAST

No. 1-Mr. Conway who had been out of work since the mill had closed two years before. A quiet fellow of about 45. No. 2- Mrs. Conway, a really fine woman of the motherly type, hard-working and industrious and famed for her excellent food. No. 3- Jean Conway, the daughter, eighteen, a very pretty blonde. She was a graduate of Boulder and was trying hard to get money enough to go to New York and study art. No. 4- Lawrence Barnett, about 22, a fair enough sort, engaged to Jean. He wasn't very ambitious I thought. Seemed to be content to help around the boarding-house for his room and board so he could be near Jean. No.5- Jas. M. Jones, a small merchant from Iowa who was spending a months vacation at Conways! He had had some tough breaks the past year. In fact we had all heard his story so many times we couldn't even appear to be interested. He had an opportunity to get in on some deal and all his money was in a closed bank. He talked of it incessantly. No.6- Mrs. Gladys Waters, a widow I had never quite understood. I thought her eyes were shifty. She had a son some place in school to whom she was sending money. I had heard her say she was going to sell her beauty shop. I gathered it wasn't a paying proposition. She too, seemed to have a money complex. No.7- Marge Eaton nobody knew much about. She was a large blonde woman of thirty or more, a loud dresser-flashy. She paid marked attention to Lawrence. I had also seen her flash some rather knowing looks at Murdock. "I'm from St. Louis" she said. I thought she was a citizen of the world. No.8- John Harris, rather an unusual fellow, handsome and distinguished looking in a saturnine way. His wife was down with her folks in New Mexico. She had tuberculosis. He had a small tire shop. Had lived on the town since a boy and came to Conway's after his wife went South. I liked him and felt sorry for him. No.9- Tom Murdock, a nice looking young fellow thirty years old, an engineer at one of the mines. He worked from 7 P.M. 'Til three in the morning. His wife, whom he adored had run away with a traveling show a few months before. When he wasn't working or sleeping he was fishing. I didn't really know much about him. No.10- I, Patrick J. O'Brien, a lawyer, a bachelor of 40, from New York, vacationing at Conway's and writing some important briefs. No.11- Bill Yerkey. He came into the picture less than twenty-four hours before his death.

MURDER AT CONWAY'S (Con't)

I was sitting on the front porch alone Monday afternoon when a smart, expensive roadster came to a sudden violent stop at the curb and a young man sprang out and came up the walk. "Is this Mrs. Conway's ? he asked". "Yes", I answered, looking him over. He was unusual. "I wonder if she has room for me for a few days! They told me down at Greeley that she serves pretty good meals". He said this with an engaging smile.

He was a handsome chap, over six feet, a mass of bright red curly hair, flashing grey eyes and a "way" about him. I liked him. I called Mrs. Conway. She too seemed to like him.

"A young man left this morning", she said, "and I'll be glad to let you have his room. It's the second floor front."

So Bill Yerkey entered the picture. Poor Bill!

WMS BAY HAS MANY VISITORS JULY 4

The 4th of July 1936 will long be remembered by the people of Williams Bay as a record holiday, both as for perfect weather, the day being partly cloudy and cool, and the holiday crowd coming in hundreds by motor car, train and buses, filling the beaches, hotels and private homes to capacity.

The merchants also came in for their share of the amount spent by the visitors; all reporting a splendid patronage, well ahead of the past two years. All of the hotels turned away great numbers of people, being unable to accommodate them. Several of the hotels turned away more than fifty.

A PLEA

Now that our summer residents are here, the animal lovers of Wms Bay are earnestly asking our guests of the summer not to acquire puppies and kittens to enjoy them during vacation and then abandon them in the Fall when they return to their homes. Few people are cruel by intent but many are cruel thru misunderstanding and thoughtlessness. Contrary to belief their abandoned pets do not find homes. They freeze and starve to death by the dozens - as many residents of Williams Bay can testify. When rabbits, birds, and squirrels and other self providing animals freeze and starve during the Winter. Please be humane and do not bring suffering to helpless dumb animals.-AN ANIMAL LOVER.

Art Pederson reports that he closed the deal on Wednesday for the sale of the M. Karpen estate at Lake Geneva to H.C. Peterson of River Forest, Ills.

NEWS ITEMS

The Ladies Union of the Elkhorn Baptist church will meet on Thursday afternoon, July 9, with Mrs. Ralph McDonald. The meeting will be held on the lawn and a picnic supper served after the program.

CROP REDUCTION HIT BY HENRY FORD.

Crop curtailment has been denounced by Henry Ford as a violation of natural laws and the "security of plenty". "If the farmers allow land to lie idle they'll suffer. What this country needs is a program for correlation of agriculture and industry". The motor magnate said crop restriction was the brain child of the "underneath government", which he explained was a government composed of persons interested in their own profit.
