Gentlemen:

The Babcock article in the Oct. 15 issue is the sort of thing that reminds one that Wisconsin gives more than a mere academic course to those who met and appreciated the Babcock's, Kahlenbergs, Meads, Snows, etc.

"Visits" Cities East of the Channel

From: A Belligerent Badger
For: Cardinal Communique
Re: Things and Stuff and Badgers

Got to the ETO about six months ago and ever since have been visiting various tourist resorts in occupied Europe in "Speedball," an old and battered B17. Now have 12 such visits under my belt and am awaiting 12b. (Superstition and air supremacy are inseparable roommates.)

Came to the Ball Squadron as a replacement and was pleasantly surprised to find some old faces—Gene Welch, Robert Spiika, Dee Dee Nauman, and Newman Van Tassel. All likewise making an extensive tour of famous cities east of the Channel. Was even more surprised at running into Roger Le Grand one day sporting the blue and gold of an ensign in the U. S. navy.

So far I've accumulated the Air Medal, one cluster, and a hearty dislike for war. Danny Nauman had some bad luck at Frankfurt and is now reported "Missing in Action." We're all hoping to hear from him as a prisoner of war. And I'm hoping I'll continue hearing from the Cardinal Communique!

WHAT is the main issue of this war? Germany and Japan seek to dominate the world. Where they have succeeded so far, whole nations have been subjected to all degrees of destruction ranging from enslavement to wholesale extermination. The United Nations, on the other hand, fight for national survival and freedom. German conduct in Continental Europe and Japanese behavior in Asia give us an excellent idea of what fate would have befallen us if our country had been successfully invaded by the forces of the Japanazi alliance.

The free nations are now paying the price for the treacherous assaults against freedom which were openly and brazenly perpetrated by native pro-Nazis in the last ten years. In our own country the avowed Nazis like the Bundists had very little influence because they were clearly marked as the agents of a foreign and hostile country. Our clever Nazis or pro-Nazis never joined the Bund. They knew that in order to be effective in this country they had to proclaim loyalty to democracy—and then do all the things that a Nazi would do, such as attacking specific democracies like England and France, building up the bogey of a Communist danger, picturing Nazi militarism as invincible. Finally, a reading of some of our most widely read newspapers in the last ten years—including the years since Pearl Harbor—would suggest that the most dangerous enemy of the American people is President Roosevelt rather than Hitler or Tojo.

Nazism is not only a cause but a symptom of the moral and intellectual crisis of our age. To the extent that democratic nations practiced irresponsibility, aloofness, and indifference to the sufferings of others they destroyed those fountain springs of democratic faith which alone would have defended peace and freedom. By abandoning the attributes of freedom—generosity, responsibility, solidarity—many a nation lost the substance of freedom itself. "America First" approached more closely the essence of Nazi-Fascist blindness perverted by greed than any previous political movement in American history. People who called themselves Americans advised us to accept Nazism as "the wave of the future" which was not only inescapable but also the harbinger or a better future.

America Firsters, Coughlinites, and all the miniature American Pétains and Laval's would never have succeeded as much as they did if apathy and indifference of the men and women of good will would not have aided them. As long as decent and capable people continue to look upon politics as a dirty business fit only for politicians, grafters and self-seeking promoters, politics will be just that. The Founding Fathers thought of public affairs as a great enterprise designed to create and protect the liberty and welfare of the people. The most beloved American is Abraham Lincoln—certainly not a man who tried to stay out of politics. Everybody knows his ringing words of the Gettysburg Address, perhaps the most stirring statement of democracy ever made. What makes this message so lasting is its translation of the ideas of equality and liberty into the human qualities of humility, courage, devotion and sacrifice.

Citizenship in a well-balanced society can neither mean that the state engulfs the individual entirely nor that the individual is completely disinterested in public matters and busies himself exclusively with private affairs. Next to the Gettysburg Address there is probably no better definition of how free men live than the description of Athenian institutions by Pericles in a funeral speech made exactly twenty-three hundred and seventy-four years ago: "We are lovers of beauty without extravagance, and lovers of wisdom without unmanliness. Wealth to us is not mere material for vain-glory but an opportunity for achievement; and poverty we think it no disgrace to acknowledge but a real degradation to make no effort to overcome. Our citizens attend both to public and private duties, and do not allow absorption in their own various affairs to interfere with their knowledge of the city's. We differ from other states in regarding the man who holds aloof from public life not as 'quiet' but as useless; we decide or debate, carefully and in person, all matters of policy, holding, not that words and deeds go ill together, but that acts are foredoomed to failure when undertaken undiscussed." This is only a portion of that noble utterance, but how timely it is to be reminded after over twenty-three hundred years that people who hold aloof from public affairs are not "quiet," but "useless" citizens?

"Each generation . . . faces anew the task of contributing . . ."

At the University of Wisconsin we are fortunate in possessing a tradition—unequalled, perhaps, in the United States—which sees the objective of a university education not in terms of jobs and personal advancement but of enlightened citizenship and service to the community. We have not always succeeded in living up to that high ideal, but at least it has guided us as an ideal for a long time. The University is a state university not only in the sense that it is supported by the state's taxpayers but because it has always considered itself primarily as a servant of the people of Wisconsin. Likewise, few other universities have contributed as many public servants in the federal branch of the national government as the University of Wisconsin. Pride in that tradition will not maintain it. Each generation of students and alumni faces anew the task of contributing intelligent co-operation and, if possible, leadership to group affairs. University graduates, having received special benefits from the community, have special obligations of serving the community in a way for which they are best fitted.

The question is often raised, Where does one begin? It seems natural and logical to begin on the lowest and simplest level of public affairs, local government. Many graduates return to their home communities, and it is there that their services and contribution to the pool of common judgment and experience are most urgently needed. However, I do not believe it would be wise to follow any rigid rules. If one's interest centers on state or national affairs, rather than on local ones, there is no good reason why one should not start out on that level of politics.

Likewise, international affairs may not be such a barren approach to participation in community matters as one often hears. Taking up seriously an interest in world politics one is inevitably led into problems of American foreign policy as one of the main factors of international relations. The interest in American foreign policy may quite easily bring one into closer contact with such problems as the relationship of President and Congress, the constitutional position of the Senate. This will in turn increase one's concern with the political picture in one's own state as a constituent aspect of national politics. Eventually, the pre-occupation with political problems of the state will inevitably lead to a genuine interest in local affairs as a part of the wider range of state politics.

I therefore believe that it does not make very much difference whether one begins on the lowest level of politics—local government—or on the highest level of politics—international relations: In the first case it is more than likely that any genuine interest in local politics will lead one to higher levels of public affairs until one reaches the broad problems of world affairs. In the latter case it is almost inevitable that an intelligent and informed interest in world affairs will inevitably be conducive to an interest in national politics first, and in state and local affairs later. The real issue is not so much where one starts out, but whether one starts out at all.

In a democracy we must always remember that we are the government. One often hears people refer to the government as "they". I suggest that if this habit should spread it would betray a serious weakening of civic consciousness and the sense of significance of Americans. In a dictatorship there is no identity of the rulers and the ruled. There, "they" are a well-defined group ruling in the interests of the people or against their interests, but in any case independent from popular consent.

In a democracy there can be so such distinction between "we" (the people) and "they" (the government). We are the government. If in our opinion the government does not always come up to our expectations and legitimate claims, this is primarily due to our apathy, lack of interest, and failure to express our opinion in an articulate manner.

We must learn to comprehend that if we criticize the government in a democratic society, we really criticize ourselves. If we think that our government does not provide enough leadership, one of the reasons for it may perhaps be that we do not seem to be able to face unpleasant truths, or that we prefer to follow demagogues rather than leaders. If the government seems to shrink from asking for a total effort in a total war, it is perhaps due less to its unwillingness than to the existence of too many "me first" Americans.

Finally, active citizenship does not mean only participation in governmental affairs. The strength of a democracy is determined not so much by the amount of transactions carried out in a compulsory manner on the basis of laws which prescribe them. Democracy is the art of doing things voluntarily. The miracle of our production effort in this war has been made possible by the voluntary eagerness of millions of men and women to serve the country in an hour of need. Likewise, in the normal life of a community there are a host of private organizations that depend on voluntary participation and leadership. The Boy Scouts, trade unions, chambers of commerce, charitable organizations of all sorts, to name just a few, are the real laboratories of democracy where people actually practice it—rather than only read about it.

In totalitarian countries, all of these organizations have been taken over by the all-powerful state because voluntary associations constitute by their sheer existence a threat to the principle of control and subjugation. Here in the United States we have the opportunity of serving the community in any of these organizations that depend on the voluntary leadership of free men and women. Community is organized group living and institutional group experience. Education is the process by which the community tries to pass on experience in a way which is less costly than the hard way of ignorance. The duty of those who have had the opportunity to learn at the expense of the community is the special obligation of active citizenship, be it expressed in communal leadership, civic organizations, or governmental affairs.

University Accepts $10,000 Gift For "Halpin Hall", Poultry Research Building

The first step was taken, in December, toward the construction, after the war, of a new poultry research building for the University. The building is to be called "Halpin Hall" after Prof. James G. Halpin, head of the poultry department at the University.

In President Dykstra's office in Bascom Hall, representatives of the poultry and feed industries and officials of the University met with David K. Steenbergh, executive secretary of the Central Retail Feed association, who presented the University with more than $10,000 in checks as the start of a $50,000 poultry building fund.

Steenbergh paid high tribute to the teaching and research work done by the University. Singling out for special recognition Prof. Halpin, Steenbergh declared that he had brought international fame to the institution and the state.

"Halpin's work at Wisconsin has been done with very limited facilities," said Steenbergh. "Since so much has been done with so little, much more could undoubtedly be expected if Halpin and his staff had a modern poultry research plant in which to carry on their experiments. The Central Feed Association wants Halpin to have the best poultry research facilities available anywhere, and in behalf of the entire feed industry in the country, is sponsoring the collection of a fund for such a building and equipment."

The regents of the University have agreed to keep this money in a special fund for the one purpose of erecting a poultry building, and as soon after the war as possible.

Board of Visitors "Visit" Ag School

The board of visitors of the University, which acts as the University's efficiency expert, spent two days visiting and discussing the policies and program of the College of Agriculture recently.

Forenoon classes at the College were visited by individual members of the board, and in the afternoon they visited classes en masse.

Twelve state citizens and alumni serve on the board, the term of office being four years. Three members are nominated by the governor, six by the Wisconsin Alumni Association, and three by the board of regents.

Officers of the board are Basil I. Peterson, '12, president; Miss Maude M. Monroe, vice-president, and Robert K. Coe, '02, secretary.

Rural Art Exhibit To Open This Month

The Fifth Annual Rural Art Exhibit will be shown in the Memorial Union from January 24 to February 5, John R. Barton, chairman of the Rural Art Committee, has announced. Non-professional artists on farms, or those with a rural background may send their work to this salon.

Original works in oil, water color, and pastels will be admitted as well as etchings and sculpture, according to John Steuart Curry, member of the committee and Wisconsin's artist in residence.

Mr. Barton added that this is the first time in American history that farm and rural people have contributed enough material in this field to form a noteworthy collection. Because of its original and creative nature, it should cause national as well as state-wide comment.

At present, the College of Agriculture has a permanent group of 31 pictures. Plans are made for further purchases this year.

Top Professors Lecture In New University Course

Because the "whole cloth of life is woven about a very few fundamental necessities", a new course, "Man, Biologically Considered", will be offered by the University of Wisconsin next semester. Top notch professors from the entire university staff will lecture on the rational and esthetic as well as the physical phases of human life.

The prospectus of the course declares: "The project is to study man in his physical and social setting in comparison with other living creatures and to stress the part his intelligence has played in creating a directive environment which guides him in unique values found nowhere else in the world of life".

D. K. Steenbergh presents $10,000 to Prof. James Halpin, President Dykstra
... for a new poultry research building to be named "Halpin Hall"

Farm Record Book Is State Best Seller

Current best seller in Wisconsin is a 44-page account book put out by the University's College of Agriculture.

The Wisconsin Farm Record Book, which sold 10,000 copies last month, is being rationed until a new edition comes off the press in January.

Publishers explain that the jump in sales is due to the farmers' new income tax laws.

Farm and Home Week Eliminated

The Wisconsin College of Agriculture has decided to eliminate its annual Farm and Home Week program and in its place will furnish county institutes to be known as "Victory Farm Institutes" to representative counties throughout the state.

The old program, which was held on the University campus, had to be discarded because of transportation difficulties and limited hotel accommodations in Madison.

Kohler Memorial Fund Increased by $10,000

In honor of Wisconsin's former governor, Walter J. Kohler, an addition of $10,000 will be added to the Walter J. Kohler Memorial fund for students at the University of Wisconsin. This bequest will be received from the estate of the late Marie C. Kohler, his sister.

The Wisconsin Alumni Research Foundation will receive $5,000 from the estate, also.

REGENTS

Regents Re-establish Reciprocal Fee Plan

The board of regents at a recent meeting voted that the reciprocal plan for non-resident tuition fees, which was abolished by the regents at their May meeting last year, be re-established, with certain changes.

The terms for the plan include these new requirements: The student must make formal application for the reduction of the fees, and to be eligible he must have earned a minimum of two grade points per credit, on a full program for his last semester at the University. Previously the qualifying period had been two semesters.

If he is a transfer student from an accredited institution, he must have earned the equivalent of a two grade point average at his former school. Reductions will then be made the semester following his application.

The reciprocal plan provides that an out-of-state student who meets the above requirements may pay a non-resident tuition fee at this University equal to that charged out-of-state students at his own state university.

Agreement to be Reached on Commerce School Question

A definite decision is expected to be reached on Jan. 15 concerning the separation of the school of commerce from the College of Letters and Science. On Jan. 15 a report from a special faculty committee will be presented to the regents for discussion.

The 1943 legislature passed a law leaving the matter to the regents. In Oct. the regents held a public hearing on the question, and a regent-faculty conference was held last month at which time a committee was appointed to present the report to the board.

The report will answer these questions: 1. What is an appropriate type of program by which the school of commerce can best serve the industrial and commercial interests of the state?

2. Will these interests be better served by a separate school of commerce, or by continuing it in the College of Letters and Science?

The committee includes Dean Mark Ingraham of the College of Letters and Science; F. H. Elwell, director of the school of commerce; Dean C. J. Anderson of the Graduate School; and Profs. W. H. Kiekhofer, Frederick A. Ogg, Philip G. Fox and Harold M. Groves.

Regents Accept $12,250 In Gifts and Grants

At its last meeting, the regents of the University of Wisconsin accepted gifts and grants of $12,250.

The largest sum was $10,000 from Oscar Mayer & Co., Madison, for research in the College of Agriculture.

The Universal Oil Products company of Chicago, Illinois gave the university $1,200 to re-establish a research fellowship in chemical engineering for one year's duration.

Other gifts included $500 from George W. Mead, Wisconsin Rapids, for the School of Music, and $500 in grants from the Wisconsin Alumni Research Foundation to be used in research in agriculture.

An anonymous donor added $50 to the scholarship fund of the Law School.

Last year the regents accepted a total of $425,398.66 in gifts and grants from July 1, 1942, through June 30, 1943. So far this year, July 1 to Jan. 1, (1943-44) the regents have accepted $326,301.02.

President Reports to Regents on Faculty Leaves

Asked by President Hodgkins of the board of regents whether the 131 faculty members of the rank of assistant professor or higher were "doing better" financially in war jobs than they did at the University, President Dykstra reported that he didn't think they were receiving more pay.

President Dykstra revealed that of all the University staff members on leave, only one, Prof. D. D. Lescossier, is working directly for a private industry. Prof. Lescossier, of the economics department, has been working half time at Allis-Chalmers, Milwaukee, on personnel problems.

Of those on leave, 50 are in military service, 45 are in U. S. government service, one each with the Peruvian and Norwegian governments, 12 are taking leaves of absence because of extra summer school work, and 15 are unclassified. Nearly all those in governmental jobs are doing research or administrative work, the president explained.

Prof. Agard Addresses Freshmen Women at WSGA Annual Scholarship Banquet

Post-war reconstruction will require more emphasis on public enterprise, more co-operation between labor and management, and an international police force, Prof. Walter Agard, of the University Greek department, declared at the annual Women's Self Government Association's scholarship dinner.

Guests at the banquet were 258 freshman women at the University who maintained high scholastic standings in preparatory schools or in scholastic aptitude tests. Miss Ann Lawton, freshman dean of women, explained the honorary purpose of the dinner.

In comparing the post-war reconstruction to a building project, Prof. Agard explained that four requirements must be met in providing a sound ground floor, including opportunities for all to have decent jobs; decent housing for everyone, particularly in rural areas; adequate food for all, especially the children; and adequate medical attention.

Hagen Wants Opera To Be Sung in English

Prof. Oskar Hagen, director of the art history department, contends that opera in this country should be sung in English. Over a recent radio broadcast Prof. Hagen explained, "We have taken it lying down. In no other country do they stand for opera in any but the native tongue. It is sung in French in Paris, in Czech in Prague, in German in Berlin."

Prof. Hagen at one time was a professor of music at the University of Goettingen, Germany, and director of the academic orchestra. While there he was responsible for reviving the operas of Handel when they had not been performed for 250 years.

Faculty Committee Studies Student Personnel Problems

At its December meeting the faculty voted to establish a standing committee on student personnel to be made up of faculty members. Until now personnel activities at the University have been handled on a voluntary basis.

The functions of the committee will be "to serve as an advisory body in the co-ordination and development of the various student personnel services; to study and report to the faculty from time to time on student personnel problems and methods of dealing with them; and to bring before the faculty recommendations for improving the University organization and policy in this field."

Prof. Mathews Photographs December Alumnus Cover

Prof. J. H. Mathews, director of the chemistry department, is the artist responsible for the cover picture of the December issue of the Wisconsin Alumnus. A typical campus winter scene, it was a picture of the Carillon tower on the north side of Bascom Hill taken during a snow storm.

Prof. Mathews, an expert photographer, is a professor of physical chemistry at the University and teaches the popular course "The Use of Scientific Methods in Identification of the Criminal." Prof. Mathews has been responsible for the development of new scientific methods used in criminal investigation and is president of the Madison Police and Fire Commission.

Loyal Durand Leaves at End of Semester

Loyal J. Durand, Jr., '24, assistant professor of geography at the University, leaves at the end of the current semester to head the departments of geography and geology at the University of Tennessee at Nashville.

Students Reflect Pioneer Courage—Dean Troxell

In a recent guest editorial in the Wisconsin State Journal of Madison, Louise Troxell, dean of women at the University, wrote: "Since I came to the University in the fall of 1931, our students have been overtaken by two major crisis, the depression and the present war, and I have seen in their reaction to each a reflection of the pioneer courage that has made Wisconsin a great state.

"... The contrast between the campus this fall and last is obvious in such externals as the overwhelming preponderance of women students. But the contrast is even greater in the intangibles, such as the spirit of these girls.

"Last year they were restless and uncertain, saying, 'We want to do our part just as much as the boys do, but we don't know what it is. We wish that someone would tell us. And when we assembled the truest picture we could get of what American college women ought to be doing, they proved their faith by their works.

"... College students suffer, as well as benefit, from being somewhat set apart in the eyes of the world, and it is a matter of wonder to me how a bystander can tell so infallibly that a carload of young people exceeding the speed limit are college people. The truth is that there is not a community of equal size, outside a cemetery, that is so law-abiding as a University.

"But the tempo is spirited and one who works with students must keep moving if for no other reason than to avoid being run over. I once asked a colleague why she refused an offer to teach at Vassar. Her reply said much, 'It's so predictable at Vassar, but here there is a fresh fight every morning.'

"It would be wrong even to imply that the job does not present hard problems, many seemingly without solution. Such problems as these are frequently connected with the parents, and I think often of the comforting words of a colleague, 'Parents, like other people, have blind spots, but their only pure blind one is their parenthood.'

"When the wise and witty Dr. Birge was president of the University, a delegation of legislators waited on him to complain of the misdoings of the university students and to accuse him of laxity of discipline.

'Gentlemen,' said Mr. Birge. 'These are your children. Their habits were formed in your homes. The University of Wisconsin is not a reformatory.'

The wisdom and fairness of this were obvious, and the delegation went home to sweep their local dooryards."

Shands' "Vicland" Oats Contribute to Victory

Dr. H. L. Shands of the University's College of Agriculture has developed a combination of oats from two varieties known as Richland, which originated in Russia, and some South American oats known as Victoria, which netted Wisconsin farmers 20,000,000 extra dollars in 1943. This new kind of oats has been named "Vicland" oats.

Coming as it did in wartime, with dairy herds large and feed scarce, the importance of the Vicland discovery can hardly be appreciated by bare statistics.

However, the essential facts that 25,000,000 extra bushels of oats were produced in Wisconsin this year, with no increase in labor, no increase in cost, and no increase in acreage, gives a good idea of the contribution the new seed stock has given to the war effort.

RESEARCH

Vitamins Are Needed For Good Strong Teeth

Animal experiments conducted by James Shaw, Paul Phillips, and C. A. Elvehjem, at the University, have proved that a good, vitamin-rich diet is needed for good sound teeth.

The three investigators found that monkeys tend to develop tooth trouble on a diet lacking in vitamins. Of 25 animals on the faulty diet, three developed tooth cavities and 18—including the three with cavities—showed dark stains on the enamel of the molars.

While another group of monkeys on the same ration but with 2 per cent liver extract in addition, had sound teeth in every case, Prof. Elvehjem warned that liver is not the only food which supplies the protective factor.

Prisoners Co-operate With Medics in Vitamin Research

A recent co-operative effort between the prisoners at the Waupun state prison and the medical staff of the University is producing research material in medical science which may help to bring the war-worn world back to normal health when the battle is won.

Prisoners at the Waupun institution have volunteered to serve as subjects for research which has established the fact that the average human adult needs three times as much vitamin C as had formerly been considered necessary.

This fact has been established after continuing the research program over a period of fifteen months. Dr. Elmer Sevringhaus, professor of medicine at the University, has been directing the research.

Feeding the people of many countries will be this nation's problem after the war, and there will not be enough food available for anyone to have more than he needs. The nutritionists and food authorities must know the minimum amounts of the various elements of the diet necessary to bring an undernourished person back to health and then to keep him that way.

Deciding that a prison would be the ideal place to carry on controlled research, providing the warden and prisoners would agree, Dr. Sevringhaus explained the problems to the prisoners and asked for volunteers.

Of the 100 who volunteered, Dr. Sevringhaus picked 80 who had the necessary requirements. Under Dr. Sevringhaus's direction the program was begun, financed at first by the Wisconsin Alumni Research Foundation. Later the Nutrition Foundation became interested in the research and has supported it lately with grants amounting to $3,000 a year.

Carefully controlling the chosen subject's consumption of vitamin C the doctors frequently checked the relative changes in the men's health. Just recently they have completed and organized results of the research and the report will be published in an early issue of the "Journal of Nutrition."

The subjects had to forego buying fruit and were fed measured amounts of pure vitamin C in tablet form. Month after month the scientists continued their measuring and checking. The dose was increased from 25 milligrams, considered a sufficient quantity by many, to 75 milligrams before the dose appeared to be at a safe minimum.

"After long and careful checking", said Dr. Sevringhaus, "we have established the fact that the real need of the adult human for vitamin C is three times what it is usually considered to be."

This daily amount of vitamin C is the amount found in five to seven ounces, or two-thirds to one cup of orange juice; or in 10 to 16 ounces, or one and one-fourth to two cups of tomato juice or stewed tomatoes. Vitamin C is found in other fruits and vegetables but is concentrated in citrus fruits and tomatoes.

With the completion of the study on vitamin C the doctor's research work at the prison has by no means been ended. They are now studying the minimum needs for vitamins A and D and the members of the B complex group.

THE CAMPUS

UP AND DOWN THE HILL WITH THE STUDENTS, ARMY, AND NAVY

Life Photographers "Shoot" Campus to Show a University Converted to War

Photographers from LIFE magazine have been on the scene snapping pictures of Wisconsin campus life for a special pictorial article describing the campus in wartime which will appear in a forthcoming issue of the magazine.

Peter Stackpole, one of the original three Life photographers, took the shots and Don Morse, research man, wrote the legends.

Taking over 200 photographs, Life's men "shot" the armed forces on the campus, the women organized for war service, the practically all-woman staff of the Cardinal, the rathskellar with its many service men, and pictures of the university officials and faculty.

War Memorial Fund Plans Are Started

The first week in December was set aside by the students of the University of Wisconsin as War Memorial Fund week. Guided by Miss Anne Goodale and Dean Chester H. Ruedisili, the committee made plans for soliciting contributions for the fund, which will establish a memorial to university men and women serving in World War II.

Established in 1942, the fund now totals more than $2,000. Although no definite plans have been made, the students would like to dedicate the Memorial to the theme of peaceful international relations. The money will probably establish either a building, an exchange scholarship, or a professorial chair.

2,000 Women Organized in U. Volunteer Service

What is probably the most extensive war program to be found in any university or college is functioning right now on the Wisconsin campus. The University Women's Voluntary Service (UWVS), under the leadership of Coordinator Josephine Cohen, a senior from Lawrence, Long Island, New York, has more than 2,000 women in its organization.

Plans have been made for providing nurses' aides for Madison hospitals, for USO hostesses, for entertainment for the men in the hospital at Truax Field, and for canteen and motor corps. At present, it is furnishing the service men's day rooms, arranges "dates" through "social Post", and plans various types of social entertainments for service men. It also carries on campaigns for the sale of war stamps, and drives for scrap metal, paper, and old clothes.

Petticoat Rule Continues on Daily Cardinal

Pat Hogg, journalism junior from La Crosse, has been appointed to succeed Ruth Jaeger as editor of the Daily Cardinal. Pat is the third woman to serve in that capacity to date.

In addition to her duties as personnel director for the paper during the past semester, Pat has been reporting student board and war council meetings, has written columns and editorials, has worked on the sports staff and has been news editor one night each week.

Students Plan "Good-will" Talks For Spring Vacation

The Student Public Relations committee at the University will again sponsor the spring vacation "Good-will" project, it was announced recently. Under this plan students, home on vacation, speak before home-town groups interpreting for them the University's contribution to the war.

The bureau aims to bring to the attention of Wisconsin citizens the ideas and activities of the University and in this way to promote interest and co-operation between the state and University. The dates of spring vacation this year will be April 13-17.

The rest of the practically all-woman staff of the Cardinal includes Arlene Bahr as business manager, Eileen Martinson, managing editor, Jane Weisselberg, feature editor; Marilyn Johnson, university editor, and Lee Chynoweth, personnel director.

Student Board Surveys "Cribbing" in Exams

A student board survey has been made to discover how much "cribbing" goes on at the university during exam time.

The students were asked in a questionnaire to base their answers on observation, not hear-say, and to suggest how the problem should be met, as well as to whom the responsibility was to be charged.

"There Will Always Be—" A Prom

The office of the President knocked rumors that Wisconsin's Junior Prom would be a war casualty this year, by announcing that the function will take place on January 29.

Robert L. Henkel, Kelmar, N. Y., who was elected prom king, indicated that he would like the usual formal prom, but definite plans have not been revealed yet.

Students Model Fashions For Soldiers at Truax

Wisconsin sorority women presented a style show for the men at Truax Field, Madison, in the main service club of the camp last month.

Each girl was escorted by the soldier selected as the best looking man in his squadron. They had dinner at the field, and the style show was followed by a dance.

Miss Pat Sonnenburg, Chi Omega pledge, was chosen as the "Queen of Truax". Miss Sonnenburg wore a sophisticated model of red jersey fashioned with a bare midriff. Her wrap was grey wolf skin. (?)

Wisconsin Liberals Uphold Subsidies

The Wisconsin Liberal Assn. at the University, in agreement with President Roosevelt that the subsidy program will play a vital part in winning the war, carried on a drive to request the stabilization of living costs by controlling retail prices and leveling the cost of living to that of September 1942.

Petitions for signatures were distributed as well as posters and leaflets.

Eight Women Study To Become Engineers

Eight University of Wisconsin co-eds have been given fellowships in engineering by the Pratt and Whitney Air Craft Engine Corporation. On completion of their training, the women will act as assistants to the engineers in that corporation. Two others, abandoning their letters and science background, have enrolled in the regular four year course in the College of Engineering.

Organic chemistry, mathematics, physics, steam and gas laboratory, and mechanical drawing are among the not such 'snap' courses the girls are studying. Some of them plan to continue in engineering when the 'duration' is over, others will pick up their former careers, and still others will combine the two.

Lillian Feingold, Janesville, and Viola White, New York, are enrolled in the four year course. Janet Edwards and Jane Morris, of Madison; Genevieve Sherwin, Sterling, Colo.; Genevieve Sewall, Romaine O'Day, and June Dvorak, Racine; Dorothy Willson, Kenosha; and Natalie Bernstein, New York City, are the eight fellowship winners.

"The Bat" (Opera) Comes to Union

Coming to the Wisconsin Union theater on January 25 is the Philadelphia Opera Company of 70 young American singers and a 30-piece symphony orchestra. They will present "The Bat" ("Die Fledermaus") by Johann Strauss, singing in English.

This presentation and the concert of the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra on March 4 are being sponsored by the concert manager of the Union Music committee in addition to the regular Union Concert Series. This year's concert series was sold out in season sale, last fall.

Union Entertains Royally At Christmas Eve Party

Without doubt the largest party of its kind ever to be given in the Wisconsin Memorial Union was the Christmas Eve building party. It provided a wide variety of entertainment without charge to all students of the university and service members of the Union who were unable to go to their homes for the holidays.

A special feature of the Union directorate-sponsored party was the presentation of Duke Ellington and his famous orchestra in two shows in the Union theater.

Christmas trees, wreaths, and garlands decorated the building and the some 300 university women hostesses dressed formally to add the proper note of festivity to the occasion.

In Great Hall there was dancing to the music of Benny Ehr's orchestra. "Movie Time" presented "The Lady Vanishes" for two free showings in the Play Circle. The Rathskeller, with green and red checked oil cloth on the tables, provided refreshments, and throughout the evening the Three Adorables, strolling entertainers from Chicago night clubs, sang and played, leading the singing of carols. Billiards and table tennis were free.

The party was made possible by the Union's sponsorship of the big "Meet Your Navy" show and broadcast which was presented in the Stock Pavilion on December 3, and by the regular Union dues.

Union Holds New Year's Party For Students

With classes beginning again the Monday after Christmas, the Union directorate felt the need of a special celebration for New Year's Eve, so they staged an all-building party and a formal New Year's Eve Ball in Great Hall, complete with noise makers, balloons, and confetti.

Since the service units stationed on the campus were not at liberty, the party was strictly for students.

Thomas H. Benton, Judge, Gets Publicity For Salon

When Thomas Hart Benton, noted artist from Missouri, came to judge the tenth annual Wisconsin Salon of Art in the Memorial Union galleries, he observed in his lecture that "Pistol Packin' Mama" was an authentic expression of American culture. So it was from Wisconsin that Benton fired the shot which was heard 'round the country' through the press services. It caused much comment and some debate and suffered much misinterpretation, but it made good reading.

Benton, who was jury chairman at the second Salon, was invited to judge the Salon in November of this year as the student originated and managed art show celebrated its tenth anniversary.

Introduced as a special anniversary note was the idea of the committee's inviting all artists who had been represented in as many as three Salons to send one or two works for exhibition jury-free. So the anniversary Salon, with a record number of 165 pieces hung, reflected in large measure the common judgment of various jurors over a ten-year period.

The idea proved popular, since it also spared established artists the expense of crating and shipping work only to find it not selected for exhibition. Other artists were encouraged to submit work for jury consideration.

THE ARMY

By S/SGT. ROBERT MOOGK, '42

The Army "Specializer" Is Unique Publication

"The Specializer", weekly publication of the army specialized training program unit at the University of Wisconsin, is perhaps unique among ASTP units, disclosed Robert Foss, university publicity director, after completing an informal survey of such publications throughout the country.

Commended by the "Army Specialized Training Bulletin", published monthly at Washington, D. C., for its excellent work, "The Specializer" has developed a professional polish equal to the best of army publications anywhere. The problem of staff organization, uniform make-up, and policy has gone a long way since the experimental stages of its initial issues last June.

As a supplement to the "Daily Cardinal", the ASTP publication appears with at least one page in every Thursday issue. Fortunate in being able to use the facilities of an A-1 campus publication, the Specializer can offer much more in typographical versatility and photographic cuts than can most papers of its kind which are for the most part reproduced by mimeograph.

Sgt. Wendell D. Palmer, of ASTP headquarters personnel, U. W. '41, edits the Specializer. His staff is composed entirely of ASTP trainees who work on a voluntary basis in addition to their military duties and studies. With one man covering the news of each company, submitting a weekly summary of news items—including official, social, and sports items—complete coverage is assured. In addition, feature stories are assigned to various members of the staff. The paper runs at least one cut per week, and contributions of humorous poetry and jokes of the G.I. variety often liven up the page.

Lt. Lester R. Trautman, former reporter for the New York Times, acts in the capacity of advisor, tossing many a polished feature story into the lap of Editor Palmer.

"The Specializer", as a supplement to the campus newspaper, does much to cement good will between the soldiers and the students, according to Lt. Robert C. Rice, ASTP personnel adjutant, who was responsible for originating the paper last June. As one of the first publications to be organized after the inception of the army specialized training program, the paper has succeeded in showing the type of men enrolled in the ASTP program, what work is carried on, as well as providing a clearing house for information to the men themselves, Lt. Rice stated.

capacity, you may be sure that it was Pvt. Claus who had requisitioned the greatest Christmas Eve celebration the University has ever witnessed.

Festivities began at 8:30 p. m. when Duke Ellington and his band with a full stage show presented the same program in the Union theater that he gave in Carnegie hall December 11. A second performance was given at 10:00 so that all service men and students would have opportunity to see the show. There was dancing in Great hall to the music of Benny Ehr's orchestra, continuous movies in the Play Circle,

Soldiers Can't Complain About Madison Christmas

The bewhiskered little gentleman with the round, red face was forced to turn in his reindeer for a jeep and carry gifts in a barrack bag this Christmas. But he was here in Madison, in the ASTP barracks, and in the Memorial Union.

First evidence of his presence came when the soldiers returned from their eight-day leave early in December to discover barren barracks decorated with new curtains, pine boughs, wreaths, and holly. Cookie jars, sheet music, scrap books, and records were there in abundance. (Credit must go to either Pvt. Claus or a group of university girls.) Later there were Christmas trees that somehow found their way to each of the barracks.

Then came Christmas Eve in Memorial Union. Although you couldn't see him for the place was crowded to billiards, bowling, and table tennis, strolling entertainers, the singing of Christmas carols, while refreshments were served throughout the evening in the Rathskeller.

Military Instruction Started in Madison High Schools

Once a week 300 boys from Central, East, and West high schools meet for military instruction which is offered in conjunction with the Madison school board, the university extension division, and the military department of the university, announced Lt. Col. Franklin W. Clarke, commandant of the 3654th service unit.

Meeting from 7-9 p.m. in the weekly course held separately at each of the three high schools, the groups are composed of juniors and seniors ranging in age from 16 to 18 years who are taking the training on purely a voluntary basis.

Capt. Paul S. Davis, Lt. Ray J. Sandegren, and Lt. Sylvester A. McGovern teach the classes, aided by eleven advanced course ROTC students who have returned to this unit under the ASTP after completing six months of combat training with troops.

Although the training prescribed is comparable to basic ROTC instruction, it is the aim of the course to give the students an overall picture of the army, offering them the type of work best fitted to aid them when they are called into the service. Due consideration is given the age group of the youth. With one hour of drill and one hour of theory per week, the subjects stressed include: the school of the soldier with and without arms, military courtesy, and army organization. Frequent showings of the most recent army training films authenticate points of instruction which only can be mentioned in lecture.

Originally, this plan for high school military instruction began in Chicago. Here it met with such success that the idea spread to Milwaukee where the university extension division conceived the plan of it being well adapted to Madison. Col. Herbert H. Lewis, before his retirement as commandant here, appointed Lt. S. A. McGovern as liaison officer between the military and the Madison schools.

THE NAVY

By MARTIN GARDNER, Y3/C

Admiral Downes Swears in WAVE at Navy Show

One of the highlights of the "Meet Your Navy" show, held at the university stock pavilion on December 3 and broadcast over the Blue Network, was the ceremony in which Rear Admiral John Downes, recently retired commandant of the Ninth Naval District, swore in Arden Jost, a Madison girl, as a WAVE.

Before administering the oath, Admiral Downes remarked that in all of his 46 years of naval service, this was the first time that he had sworn in a woman. Then he glanced back at Miss Jost, an attractive brunette, and added: "And I can say that I am willing to repeat the ceremony."

An audience of more than 3,000 cheering spectators crowded into the pavilion for the broadcast and the three-hour variety show which followed.

The broadcast was the 100th presented by the Great Lakes all-navy cast of entertainers since the program originated shortly after Pearl Harbor. Admiral Downes declared that it was "especially pleasant to celebrate the anniversary in a community where the people have shown such consideration to navy men."

The "Meet Your Navy" show found its most enthusiastic Madison booster in Roundy Coughlin, of the Wisconsin State Journal, who wrote in his daily column:

"Madison will never see anything like that again as long as it is in existence unless the war ends and they bring Hitler back and put him in the stock pavilion and have the Navy band play so hard it will blow his mustache off."

Bluejackets Celebrate New Years by Working

New Year's day found the Bluejackets in the navy's radio communications school hard at work mastering the "dits" and "dahs" of international code.

Division 17 was graduated early in December, after making the most impressive scholastic record of any division to receive training on the campus. The graduating class was replaced by the 250 men of Division 21, who had just completed their "boot" training at the U. S. Naval stations at Great Lakes, Illinois, and Farragut, Idaho. Approximately 1,000 enlisted men are now receiving 19 weeks of radio instruction on the campus.

The most noticeable change in the radio training program, in contrast to the past year, is the absence of all women reservists. The last Division of WAVES and Marine women—Division 11—was graduated December 13, and Chadbourne hall, which formerly housed the Navy women, was taken over by students in the Army's Specialized Training program.

The graduation was an informal luncheon ceremony in the dining room of Chadbourne. Thirty-three WAVES and 21 Marine women were awarded certificates of graduation and assigned to shore bases throughout the United States. Guest speaker at the luncheon was Miss Susan B. Davis, retired assistant dean of women at the university and chairman of the Dane county civilian advisory committee for WAVES procurement.

The only enlisted WAVES remaining in Madison are those assigned to "Ship's Company" (administrative staff) of the naval training schools, and the Armed Forces institute, with offices in downtown Madison. Approximately 25 WAVES are assigned to the training schools, and 20 to the Armed Forces institute. Both groups of girls are quartered in the former Delta Sigma Pi house, 132 Breese Terrace.

Three types of navy ratings are represented by the Ship's Company WAVES—yeoman, storekeeper, and pharmacist's mate. The girls have an 8-hour working day, and are given "liberty" outside of office hours.

Of the WAVES officers who were attached to the radio school, all have been transferred to new billets outside of Madison with the exception of Ensign Edythe Tenney, who was appointed officer in charge of Ship's Company WAVES.

Approximately 1,000 women have completed their training at the radio school since it was first opened to WAVES in October, 1942.

Basketball

It now appears that the University of Wisconsin's cagers have finally hit their stride. Coach Harold "Bud" Foster's boys started good, defeating the strong De Pauw Pre-flight navy school five 28-25. Then the Badgers went into a slump as far as their own ballhandling and shooting were concerned in their next three games against three of the most powerful quintets in the midwest. They lost their first game to Marquette 51-43; then dropped a ragged encounter to Notre Dame 41-31; and took another licking from the star-studded Camp Grant Soldier five 51-40.

In all three of these games, and indeed, even in their first win, the Badger basketekers' shooting was very poor, to put it mildly. They failed to work the ball in for close shots, often lost the ball on ragged handling before they could get set to sink one.

But the team refused to fall apart. On the contrary, Coach Foster and his boys worked just that much harder, and the result was a thrilling win over Marquette in the second game of the annual series between the two state rivals in the Milwaukee auditorium just before Christmas. The score was 40-37 in favor of the Badgers.

Statistics on that game show that the Wisconsin lads found their shooting eyes in that contest. In the first half, they made 36 per cent of their shots, and during the second half, they sunk 33 per cent.

Perhaps now the Badgers will be set for the Big Ten cage campaign, which opens against the 1943 defending champions, Illinois, in the Wisconsin fieldhouse on Jan. 3. At least, that's Coach Foster's firm belief. The Wisconsin mentor feels that his boys will be in better shape physically and mentally for the opening of the long, gruelling conference basketball season if they have played against none but the most powerful independent fives in their early season games, even if such tough contests do result in a few defeats for his team. And the boys like only the best in competition, too.

Only time can tell this story, however. So here's the rest of the Badgers' 1943-44 schedule, beginning with the opening Big Ten contest, so that you will know when and where the battling Badgers are playing:

- Jan. 3—Illinois at Madison
- 7—Illinois there
- 8—Northwestern there

- 14—Michigan at Madison
- 15—Michigan at Madison
- 29—Minnesota there
- Feb. 4—Northwestern at Madison
- 7—Great Lakes at Madison
- 11—Indiana there
- 12—Indiana there
- 19—Purdue at Madison
- 25—Minnesota at Madison
- Mar. 4—Chicago there

Coach Harold "Bud" Foster
His boys start a long, hard season

Two recent additions to the Badger cage squad from the U. S. Navy should add strength to the team for the rest of this schedule. Late in December, Russ Wendland, former Northwestern star, and Charles Tourek, Northwestern freshman last year, were transferred to Wisconsin from the De Pauw Pre-flight school for further navy aviation training. Both men were outstanding members of the De Pauw team, and should give the Badgers much needed strength at the guard posts.

Indoor Track

Only "fair to middling" are the prospects for the University of Wisconsin's 1944 indoor track team, according to the best judgment of the Badger's veteran track coach, Tom Jones.

With a squad of 47 hopefuls now in training for the sport, including a handful of cross country men from last fall who are still in school, Coach Jones feels that he will be able to build a fairly well-balanced team that will be quite strong in the distances and middle distances, but weaker in the field events.

In the running events, Jones will have veteran Knight Webster along with Arnold Jackson in the two-mile; Clarence Vickland, navy engineering student, in the mile; Kensal Chandler, Badger veteran who is also now a navy engineering student, in the half-mile; and veteran Gordon Duquemin and Roy Zobel, who was a Milwaukee city champion last year, in the quarter-mile.

The Wisconsin track coach expects to have a fairly strong squad of hurdlers, led by Tom De Young, engineering freshman from Milwaukee, who is also a fair high jumper. Other good performers among the hurdlers include Jerry Skelding, Keith Brown, and Bob Jindra.

Following is the schedule which Coach Jones has arranged:

- Feb. 5—Lawrence College here
- 12—Quadrangular meet (Purdue, Chicago, Northwestern, and Wisconsin at Chicago)
- 19—Marquette University here
- 26—Minnesota at Minneapolis
- Mar. 4—Iowa here
- 11—Conference Indoor meet at Chicago
- 25—Daily News Relays at Chi.

Boxing and Wrestling

Two other winter sports, boxing and wrestling, are now getting under full steam on the campus, and we'll have complete accounts of their progress, personnel, and schedules in the next issue of The Alumnus.

SAFEGUARD THEIR SYMBOL

To our Fighting Badgers, the University of Wisconsin is a symbol of what they are fighting for; a symbol of the kind of world they want to come home to after the Axis gangsters have been liquidated.

In the thousands of letters that have come to Association headquarters from our Fighting Badgers, not a single one has mentioned the four freedoms that get so much attention on the home front. Instead, their letters repeatedly include statements like this one from Ensign J. W. Van Camp:

"The University is the kind of America I like to think we are fighting for."

We on the home front should remember this fact as we celebrate the University's ninety-fifth anniversary on February 5. Founders' Day in 1944 is more than a birthday; more than just a date in our University's calendar. It is a day of multiple significance.

First of all, we must rededicate ourselves to safeguard the University which means so much as a symbol to our Fighting Badgers. They are counting on us to help in maintaining Wisconsin's leadership among American universities; to help in developing a university adequately staffed, equipped and financed to meet the new demands of a post-war world. When these boys come back they will expect new courses and new educational opportunities in tune with the times. Wisconsin must anticipate these needs and be ready to meet them when the lights go on again all over the world.

Preparation for these new educational needs must, of course, include an adequate building program.

Too many of our buildings are woefully obsolete. Our dairy building was obsolete fifteen years ago, but it's still there—fifteen years older and each year more inadequate to meet Wisconsin's needs in dairy education and research.

The Engineering College is struggling along in structures sadly lacking in space and equipment. Laboratories are hopelessly inadequate—in buildings that have long outlived their usefulness.

There is a crying need for more ample library facilities. In the Home Economics Department, 600 students are jammed into a building erected to handle 250 students. More space and equipment is sorely needed for the Chemistry Department. Bascom Hall must be repaired and fireproofed.

These building needs are not new; they have been here for years and each year they become increasingly urgent. Something must be done about them and Founders' Day is a good time for loyal alumni to swing into action.

Honor Fighting Badgers

Founders' Day, 1944, also offers a splendid opportunity to honor the thousands of Fighting Badgers who are doing such a grand job for their Alma Mater and their country. No Americans ever did a better job. In China—India—Italy—in the air over Europe our Fighting Badgers are doing their full share to make life miserable for the cohorts of Hitler and Hirohito.

On this Founders' Day let us honor these gallant Badgers and make sure that we on the home front are doing our full share. This full share will help to gratify the universal wish of all Fightin' Badgers: "Let's lick the * ! * ! so-and-sos and get home." To many of them, this will be their third Founders' Day overseas. Time correspondent Will Lang cabled recently that the American fighting man "is the most homesick soldier in the world."

Speakers for Meetings

With all these factors in the picture, Founders' Day meetings this year should set a new high in interest and attendance. Many clubs have already completed plans for fine meetings on February 5. Since this date falls on Saturday, some clubs will hold their meetings earlier that week and still others will meet the following week. In some cases the dates have been determined by the dates when desired speakers were available.

Faculty members and members of the Board of Regents are, of course, first choice for Founders' Day speakers. Don't overlook the opportunity of hearing from these Regents. They are 1A when it comes to giving your club first-hand information about University activities, needs and problems. But—don't overlook the possibility of calling on prominent alumni in your area, including alumni in the armed forces. If there is a military camp in your area, it's a safe bet that you'll find there some prominent Badgers. If you don't know who they are, write Association headquarters and we'll help you locate them.

In civilian circles, the list of prominent alumni qualified to give good Founders' Day addresses is longer than your arm. Here are ten suggestions, selected at random: Harry Bullis, Minneapolis; George Haight, Chicago; William S. Kies, New York; Joseph E. Davies, Washington; John Richards, Los Angeles; President Ralph D. Hetzel, Pennsylvania State College; Judge Robert Gorman, Cincinnati; Edwin E. Witte, Detroit; President Herman Wells, Indiana University; Dean Howard Mumford Jones, Boston. Even this very abbreviated list shows the potential possibilities of finding good speakers in our alumni body. With three such sources to choose from, your alumni club should have no trouble in finding an excellent speaker for celebrating Wisconsin's 95th birthday.

FIGHTING BADGERS

Lewis E. MOORE, a veteran of the first World War, was requested to resume an active duty status as colonel of the engineers on Dec. 15, 1941, and since then has been on active duty with the army. Last Sept. Col. Moore was retired to an inactive status because of the over-age requirement. He is now picking up his consulting engineering practice in Newtonville, Mass., and he writes, "What comes next is on the knees of the Gods."

1908

Col. Oscar O. KUENTZ, corps of engineers, is stationed at Camp Kilmer, N. J., in the command group A.S.F. Col. Edward J. OLIVER's address is Hopkins Apts. #603, 3100 St. Paul St., Baltimore 18, Md.

1913

1914

Col. George E. ARNEMAN, F. A., is chief of the army specialized training branch, Fort Douglas, Utah. Col. Arneman recently sent in a Victory membership to the Wisconsin Alumni Association . . . Thanks! Col. Stephan A. PARK, 2207 Eton Ridge, Madison, is going to school again, and on his own campus, too! Col. Park is attending the civil affairs training school at the University.

1915

Lt. Comdr. H. J. KOCH's address is (S C) USNR, Asst. Supply Off., Naval Torpedo Station, Newport, R. I. Dr. Robert P. PARSONS is now attached to the U. S. Naval Hospital in Pleasanton, California.

1916

Capt. Melvin H. HASS, U.S.M.C., has been transferred to the U. S. Marine Corp Base in San Diego, California.

1917

Lt. Comdr. William D. PATTERSON is attached to the U. S. Coast and Geodetic Survey. His military address is % Fleet Post Office, Seattle, Washington.

1918

Maj. Rodney L. MOTT, Spec. Res., has been transferred from Charlottesville, Va., to the office of the civil affairs training school, 685 Commonwealth Avenue, Boston 15, Massachusetts.

1920

Lt. Frank KARGER of Milwaukee is temporarily stationed at the Philadelphia Quartermaster Depot, Philadelphia, Pa. Lt. Sam E. OGLE, USNR, is located at 607 North Cedar St., Albuquerque, New Mexico. Lt. Col. Herbert P. SCHOWALTER writes from Somewhere in Sicily that his address has been changed to APO 758, % Postmaster, N. Y., N. Y. Maj. Herbert SPONHOLZ is in the army military government branch, temporarily stationed at Boston University, expects he will "go over from here."

1921

Col. William P. CORR, M.C., has been transferred to the Dibble General Hospital in Menlo Park, California, where he writes that he is in charge of all professional work, particularly of the medical branch. Lt. Col. Frank L. WESTON, Madison, formerly associate professor of clinical medicine at the University, has arrived "Somewhere in the southwest Pacific" with other members of the Wisconsin General Hospital unit.

1922

Everett G. DREW is now a "Fighting Badger" in Uncle Sam's army. Capt. Reginald W. HAMMOND, M.C., is on duty at the station hospital, Camp Swift, Texas. Willott Marcus WARREN from Chicago gives his present address as SK 2/c, Minecroft Shakedown Group, Little Creek, Norfolk, Va.

1923

Lt. Rollie WILLIAMS, class president and one of Wisconsin's athletic greats, is attached to an undisclosed naval air station, % Fleet Post Office, San Francisco. According to a letter received from Lt. (j.g.) Burleigh Jacobs, '42, Lt. Williams is getting all the men there in good physical shape.

1924

Lt. Comdr. Horace W. RISTEEN, (CES) USNR, gives his present military address as Pontoon Assembly Detachment, Navy 131, Fleet Post Office, San Francisco. Lt. Comdr. Risteen entered the service in June of 1941. Lt. Comdr. Gamber F. TEGTMEYER, M. C., is located at USNTS Bldg. 109, Great Lakes, Illinois. Comdr. Tegtmeier's home is in Milwaukee.

Capt. Samuel A. FREITAG, M.C., is taking indoctrination training at Carlisle Barracks, Pa., where he reported in August after being commissioned a short time earlier. When he completes this training he will be assigned to Fort Benjamin Harrison, Indianapolis, Ind. Capt. Frank A. LENICHECK who is in the AGD, gives his present military address as 213 Washington St., Newark, N. J. Maj. Benjamin H. PEARSE is attached to Wing Hdqtrs. A.T.C., APO 462, Grp. ## DESERT RENDEZ-VOUS

Three poor little lonesome Wisconsin boys were trying to get along in the desert this past summer and at 140 degrees had succeeded in coming to a slow boil. They had about decided to settle all their differences with the "Blues" for a large cake of ice, when a mirage hove into view and gave their morale a tremendous boost. It looked like an "Honest-to-God" Badger, out to remind them that all good Badgers can take it. Before it could get away they grabbed their "Mirage" and induced a "foreigner" to point the camera while they gathered around The Grand Old Man from Wisconsin. The result you see on this page, presenting Lt. Emil Kovacevic, Milwaukee; Capt. Otto Mueller '39, Lt. Lyle Zastrow, Wausau, and Furry Friend.

Dramatic Decision

Lt. Keith T. KOSKE, Law '41, has been officially commended by Maj. Gen. Frederick L. Anderson, commanding general of the eighth air force bomber command, for saving the life of Sgt. Tyro C. Weaver of River View, Ala. Lt. Koske dropped Weaver by parachute from a bomber when Weaver was injured too seriously to survive the four-hour trip home. He has since been announced safe and well in a German hospital.

"That was one of the toughest decisions a man ever had to make," Gen. Anderson wrote to Lt. Koske, a Flying Fortress navigator.

"When Weaver's arm was shot off so near the shoulder a tourniquet could not be applied, you fixed the wounded man in his parachute and dropped him through the escape hatch, which course of action offered the only chance for Weaver to receive medical attention before the loss of blood would have been fatal.

"It must now be a source of gratification to you to know that your presence of mind under such extreme circumstances saved the life of your wounded comrade.

"Your courage and sound judgment in making this difficult decision is most gratifying and worthy of emulation. Your conduct on this occasion is a source of great credit to you and to the entire service."

DAYS OF OUR BEGINNING

IN HIS first annual message to the first meeting of the first legislature of the Territory of Wisconsin, Governor Henry Dodge, first governor of the Territory of Wisconsin, the "Old Blood and Guts" of his day who earned a reputation for taming the flaming west, said: "I recommend to the Legislative Assembly, the propriety of asking from Congress a donation of one township of land . . . for the establishment of an academy of youth . . .

"It is a duty we owe to the rising generation to endeavor to devise means to improve the conditions of those that are to succeed us; the permanence of our institutions must depend upon the intelligence of the great mass of people." The academy for the education of youth was to be called "The University of the Territory of Wisconsin". The year was 1836, the place was Belmont, in early La Fayette county.

Twelve years later Wisconsin was admitted to the Union as a state and in her constitution there read an article providing for "The establishment of a state university at or near the seat of government" . . . and the first state legislature, convening in June, 1848, officially voted "To establish the University of Wisconsin."

That was in the year 1848, and the following year, on February 5, 1849, Prof. John W. Sterling met with nineteen young men preparatory students in the Female Academy building, on the site of the present Central High School, and the University was officially founded. In honor of this event the University annually celebrates its anniversary on

By JEANNE LAMOREAUX

Feb. 5. It will soon celebrate its 100th birthday. To lay plans for the centenary President C. A. Dykstra has announced a university committee to lay initial plans and a preliminary working program for the event.

Walter Hodgkins, president of the board of regents, is honorary chairman of the committee and Prof. W. H. Kiehofer of the economics department is acting chairman, assisted by Profs. Paul Knaplund, history; R. A. Brink, agriculture; Morton O. Withey, engineering; Harold C. Bradley, medicine; Frank O. Holt, public service director; Andrew T. Weaver, speech; and John Guy Fowlkes, education. Other members, by virtue of their office, are President Dykstra, Edward P. Alexander, director of the Wisconsin Historical Society, and John Berge, secretary of the Wisconsin Alumni Association.

The people of Wisconsin, hardy pioneers who were opening a new frontier, met in 1846 to frame their state constitution, and found themselves embroiled in a heated and somewhat bitter debate over the subject of higher education in the state. The delegates expected that the federal government would grant the usual 72 sections or two townships to the new state, but how to use the money from these land-grants aroused a spirited and interesting discussion.

A Mr. Randall first took the floor and hoped "that all public moneys would go to the common district schools." Mr. Nathaniel F. Myer, a land commissioner from the Mineral Point district, jumped to his feet, vigorously objecting to Mr. Randall's proposition. All public moneys could go to the common district schools "except the moneys arising from the university lands", he cried.

Mr. A. Hyatt Smith of Janesville succeeded in getting the floor and asserted "We have no right to take those moneys for any other purpose than specified in the grant." Myer's amendment prevailed.

Nothing daunted, Edward G. Ryan of Racine, representing, no doubt, his 'constituents' who were interested in the competition-less future of their local 'seminary of learning', arose to his feet and cunningly moved, "Until a university shall be established the net income from the university lands shall be appropriated to the support of normal schools." The next day the amendment was happily defeated, though by an uncomfortably slender margin, 48 being for it and 51 against the proposal.

The motive's behind this close call to the University's future were mixed. Some of the men, interested in existing or prospective academies, all struggling institutions, were averse to seeing a state institution set up, with ample funds, which might easily monopolize the field of higher education in the state; others were honestly convinced that higher education could not be divorced from religious instruction and such instruction could not be taught in a state university. Still others probably voted against the university with the idea of aiding the public or common schools by encouraging teacher training for them in the special normal schools.

If Mr. Ryan's amendment had been passed and the income from the land fund had been diverted in that way, of course every political resource of the institution which was benefitted would have been exerted to prevent the establishment of the University and the University would have been a much younger institution than it now is. By only three votes the University had survived her first great crisis.

The first state legislature, meeting in June, 1848, passed Bill Number 13S 'to establish the University of Wisconsin' but not till after Mr. A. C. Brown of Grant county had thoughtfully assured the freedom of teaching in the University by moving that this important amendment be added: "That no religious tenets or opinions shall be required to enable any person to be admitted as a student in said university, and no such tenets shall be required as a qualification of any professor, tutor, or teacher of said university, and no student of said university shall be required to attend religious worship in any particular denomination."

The law itself which established the University was short and simple. It provided for an incorporation, the government of which was to be vested in a board of thirteen regents. Twelve of these were to be elected by a joint session of the legislature, and these twelve were to appoint a chancellor who would be chairman of the board. The University was to be comprised of four departments, (1) science, literature and the arts, (2) law, (3) medicine, and (4) the theory and practice of elementary instruction.

The first state capitol at Belmont
In this building Gov. Henry Dodge asked the first territorial legislature to establish "The Unive sity of the Territory of Wisconsin"

At the last minute the legislature still had so much business on its calendar that they were unable to meet to elect the regents and empowered the governor to fill these offices. Governor Nelson Dewey appointed an admirable first board of regents, six prominent Democrats of his own party and six equally prominent Whigs representing the opposition, thereby inaugurating the famous tradition that the University's management should be above partisan politics.

The twelve regents met for the first time Oct. 7, 1848, and voted to establish a preparatory school, fixed the conditions of admission, the date of opening, and chose the first teacher, John W. Sterling. They determined the conditions of the college classes to be opened later, took steps toward the purchase of College Hill which was to become our incomparable Bascom Hill, and most significant of all, they invited John H. Lathrop to become the first president of the University of Wisconsin at the yearly salary of $2,000.

The tuition fee to be charged students in the preparatory school was placed "at the rate of twenty dollars per scholar, per annum" which, "it is believed, will be amply sufficient to defray the expense of instruction." The course of study was established as follows: "English Grammar; Arithmetic; Ancient and modern geography; Elements of history; Algebra; Caesar's Commentaries; Aeneid of Virgil (six books); Sallust; Select orations of Cicero; Greek lessons; Anabasis of Xenophon; Antiquities of Greece and Rome; Exercises in penmanship; Reading, composition and declamation. Instruction will also be given, to all who desire it, in Book-Keeping, Elements of Geometry, and Surveying."

The story of the history of the University grows more fascinating with the years, but at no place succeeds the drama of its first founding as portrayed here. Its story is the story of men of the frontier who, a hundred years ago, fought to insure the future of higher education in this state, and succeeded by the narrow margin of three wise men.

Super-Battleship U. S. S. Wisconsin is Nation's Answer to Jap Infamy

"In the years to come this great battleship U.S.S. Wisconsin will be a leading member of the armada of peace—a navy so powerful and so invincible that its very strength will be our best guarantee of lasting peace.

"May God be with you always and with your dauntless crew."

With these words Governor Walter S. Goodland dedicated the $90,000,000 superbattleship Wisconsin to "those who are fighting this war, especially the 250,000 gallant men and women in the national service who hail Wisconsin as their home state." While a navy band played "On Wisconsin", Mrs. Goodland, first lady of the state, smashed a bottle of sparkling champagne cross the bow as the huge ship splashed into the waters of the Delaware river on its way out to sea.

The U.S.S. Wisconsin, launched at the Philadelphia navy yard on Dec. 7 as the nation's answer to the Jap infamy at Pearl Harbor, is a 45,000-ton battleship, nearly a city block in length, and the bow stands higher than a five story building. She will have a crew of more than 2,000 men and her top speed will be over 30 knots.

Its electrical generators can handle the equivalent of the industrial and domestic load of a city of 20,000. There are aboard 900 motors, 5,300 lighting fixtures, 250 miles of cables and 80 miles of pipes. Engineers and designers used 175 tons of blueprint paper in drawing plans for its construction.

The Wisconsin was one of the few ships in history that required six ways for launching. The usual number is two. Others which required six are the German battleships Bismarck and Tirpitz, the British Rodney and Nelson, and the Wisconsin, sister ships, the Iowa and New Jersey.

Ten former members of the crew of the old Battleship Wisconsin which patrolled the Atlantic in World War I, were invited to attend the ceremony. The steam whistle of the old Wisconsin has been returned to the new ship, but not as a whistle. It was melted down into a plaque and reads, "The U.S.S. Wisconsin. Battleship. Named for the state of Wisconsin. Built at the navy yard, Philadelphia. Authorized Mar. 27, 1934. Keel laid Jan. 25, 1941. Launched Dec. 7, 1943. Commissioned (blank). This plate has been cast of bronze salvaged from the whistle of the old Battleship Wisconsin."

The sign "Out to Launch" went up on the office doors of the governor of the state and twenty other prominent state delegates. Alumni at the ceremony included, Atty. Gen. John E. Martin, '16; Vernon Thompson, '27, speaker of the assembly; Robert L. Pierce, '22, chairman of the Republican state central committee; Carl Pick, '02, West Bend; Michael Cleary, '01, University regent; William T. Harvey, '07, Racine; John A. Stevenson, '12, president of the Penn Mutual Insurance company, and his wife, the former Josephine Reese, '13.

F. Halsey Kraege, '22, Becomes Madison's Mayor

Madison's 40th mayor is F. Halsey KRAEGE, '22, who took over his duties in the city's 87-year-old city hall last month after retiring as 10th ward alderman, a post he has held for the past 12 years. Former Mayor James R. Law resigned his position to accept an appointment as chairman of the state highway commission.

Mayor Kraege, who won his law degree from the University in 1924, has been practising with the Madison law firm of Wilkie, Toebeas, Hart, Kraege, and Jackman. He is the first man to be elevated to the mayoralty from the ranks of the council.

After being sworn into his office Mayor Kraege declared that during an emergency such as we are in now it is the duty of every citizen to accept

MORALE—MAIL

Broadway's Walter Winchell recently reported in his column that Frederic MARCH, '20, currently visiting troops in No. Africa on a USO circuit trip, wrote to friends back in the States, "Out here the boys spell MORALE—M A I L !" Have you written to a soldier, a sailor or a marine this week?

F. Winkley, x'82, Installs First Madison Telephone

The first telephone in Madison was built and installed by Frank D. Winkley, x'82, inventor, engineer, poet, owner of legal papers dating back to 1729, and builder of the planetarium and "eclipsorium" which the university observatory now owns. Here's the story.

Before he came to Madison to enter the University in 1877, Mr. Winkley went to see the Philadelphia Centennial of 1876 and there met and watched Alexander Graham Bell demonstrate the technique of his telephone.

"I believe I can build a talking instrument such as that Mr. Bell has invented", he remarked sometime later to Professor Holden who was then head of the astronomy department. Mr. Holden told him to go ahead and try, so Mr. Winkley worked on the instrument from time to time and when he thought he had it completed, he installed one end of it in the observatory and the other end in Science Hall . . . and it worked! He and Professor Holden were the first ones to talk over it, this first telephone in Madison, built by a young student who was working his way through school by doing janitor work in the observatory!

CLUBS

Chicago

Walter Hodgkins, president of the University board of regents, addressed a joint meeting of the Wisconsin Society and the U. W. Club of Chicago at a meeting Dec. 1. The subject discussed was, "Which Way Does the Trail Lead."

The Friday before Christmas the Chicago gang enjoyed the traditional "Petersen Punch" at the regular Christmas meeting.

Schenectady

The Schenectady, New York, Alumni Club announces its new slate of officers: President B. F. Bennett, '41; Vice-Pres. A. J. Pinard, '40, and Secretary-Treasurer Laura L. Blood, '12. The club features monthly informal luncheon meetings with short talks on the various phases of interesting work being carried on at General Electric by members, and programs of colored stills or movies of travel.

Ithaca

The Wisconsin Alumni Club of Ithaca, New York, is planning a program at which Dean Mark Ingraham, of the College of Letters and Science at the University, will be the main speaker. The meeting will take place this month.

Southern California Alumnae

The junior division of the University of Wisconsin Alumnae Association of Southern California has elected the following officers to serve during 1943-44: Mrs. Herman (Lucille Sattler) Hendrickson, '26, president; Mrs. Joseph (Rita Pollo) Harrecker, '32, vice-president; Mrs. D. E. (Alice Grinde) Zilmer, '37, secretary; and Mrs. Louis J. (Alice Sprague) Bender, '29, treasurer.

Wausau

The University of Wisconsin Alumni Association of Wausau has undergone a reorganization and members have elected a new board of directors consisting of George Stueber, Mrs. C. J. McAleavy, H. L. Geisse, Miss Sigrid Rasmussen, Thomas E. Trainor and Miss Norma Week. Mr. Geisse has been elected president of the group and Miss Week is the new secretary-treasurer. The board planned an early January meeting to complete reorganization plans.

BADGER BIGS

Arnold Zander, '23, is President of Nat'l Union

ARNOLD S. ZANDER, Jr., Two Rivers, who earned his bachelors degree from the University in 1923, his M. A. in 1929 and his Ph. D. in 1931, is the national president of the American Federation of State, County, and Municipal Employees. He was graduated as an engineer but his graduate work was in the field of city planning and public administration.

It was while he was working with the bureau of personnel in the state capitol that he and some other employees conceived the idea of initiating the employees' organization. Within seven years it had established 700 local unions in nearly every state. In 1936 the organization received a charter as a separate union from AFL and Mr. Zander was chosen national president. Last August he traveled to Quebec to represent the union at the opening session being held there.

Mr. Zander also edits the official labor journal of the union, which is printed in Madison and has a 50,000 circulation; he is also president of the Eastern labor press conference composed of more than 70 labor editors.

Glenn Gardiner, '18, Gives Industry the "Show-How"

Glenn GARDINER, '18, an industrial executive and a leader in the field of supervisory training, is the man who created the Job Instructor Training Program, with the co-operation of several of his associates, which was described in the October issue of The Reader's Digest under the title "SHOW-HOW: A Revolution in Management" by Stuart Chase.

Quoting from the article, "The War Manpower Commission set up a Training Within Industry branch to deal with the immense and urgent problem. (of training the vast influx of new workers in industry how to do their job efficiently) Four top-drawer executives borrowed from industry were placed in charge. Their first task was to work out a simple, standard procedure for supervisors to use in passing their know-how along to the new man.

"The original draft was worked out by a well-known industrial engineer. (Our Mr. Gardiner!) It was tried out in a few picked plants. When the "bugs" had been eliminated, it was offered to war industry—and snapped up. Almost 725,000 supervisors have already been given Job Instruction Training, as this method is called—which means that upwards of seven million workers have learned their new jobs efficiently, instead of by guess and by God."

Mr. Gardiner is the author of the popular "The College Senior Seeks A Job, Suggestions from a Wisconsin Alumnus to Wisconsin Seniors," which was published in 1938. Mr. Gardiner's suggestions proved so helpful and practical that they were reprinted three times.

After earning his masters degree from the University in 1920 Mr. Gardiner started as a molder's helper and worked his way up through the ranks to the superintendency of a General Motors assembly plant. Chevrolet and Fisher Body Corporation hired him as a labor manager. He is a recognized leader in the allied fields of industrial management, personnel relations and foremanship management.

J. L. Savage, '03, Builds World's Biggest Dams

John Lucien SAVAGE, '03, the man who designed the Boulder and Grand Coulee Dams, left last month for India where he will work on the final designs of a huge dam to impound waters to irrigate more than two million acres, an acreage larger than that involved in the Grand Coulee, and designed to remove the ever-present specter of famine from the lives of millions of Indians in the Punjab.

Mr. Savage also plans to spend some time in China working on the final designs of three huge dams. "I don't know much about the Chinese plan," he says, "except that I believe the emphasis will be on hydro-power to develop industry, along with flood control. I couldn't talk about their plans if I did know them, but it is evident that the Chinese are making great post-war plans."

The Department of Interior has released this highly laudatory account of Mr. Savage's accomplishments: "When the Who's Who of this war is written, high on the list of outstanding contributors to the victory of the United Nations will be the name of John Lucien Savage, world trouble-shooter, public servant extraordinary, and chief designing engineer for the Bureau of Reclamation of the Dept. of Interior.

"Of all the fearsome weapons of the present struggle, Public Servant Savage is responsible for creating the mightiest pair of all—Boulder and Grand Coulee Dams—the largest war power plants on earth. He's a 'billion dollar engineer' . . .

"In his 26 years on the Federal payroll, Savage has built 60 major United States dams in addition to thousands of other structures . . . Under 'projects completed' in the files of Secretary of the Interior Ickes, you'll see the name Savage as many times as there have been big power or reclamation jobs done. You'll find it signed, as designing engineer, to the $112,000,000 Shasta Dam of the Central Valley Project in California, the $36,000,000 Norris Dam and power plant of the Tennessee Valley Authority, the $32,000,000 Wheeler Dam and power plant of the TVA, the $15,500,000 Friant Dam in California, the $12,500,000 Madden Dam and power plant which serves the Panama Canal, the $11,000,000 Marshall Ford Dam in Texas, and the $8,600,000 Imperial Dam on the border of Arizona-California.

"From Australia across the world to England, and from Panama to England, when engineering problems stump the experts they cable Savage. And invariably he comes through as he came through with the designs for Boulder and Grand Coulee . . ."

JOHN STEUART CURRY'S PAGEANT OF AMERICA by Lawrence E. Schmeckabier

Prof. Schmeckabier, one-time member of the department of fine arts at the University, and now head of the fine arts department at the University of Minnesota, presents a remarkably fine interpretation of the work of John Steuart Curry, artist-in-residence at the University of Wisconsin.

The book is divided into three main parts, Preparation and Growth, The Work, and A Contemporary Evaluation. Evaluation and interpretation of Curry's work is exceedingly well presented in this book which reproduces many of Curry's better-known works in full color.

THE GROWTH OF AMERICAN THOUGHT by Prof. Merle Curti, History Dept., U. W.

Many critics claim that Prof. Curti's book is one of the most important history books ever produced by an American. The book covers the entire panorama of American thinking since Colonial days.

The 750-odd page book draws on an immense number of sources such as old newspapers of all kinds, literary magazines, folk songs, chautauqua meeting proceedings, old prints and a score of like sources along with the coffee house and tavern talk of the periods involved.

Americans, too often awed by the sight of cathedrals in the Old World that existed for centuries before the Pilgrims came to America, frightened by the huge doses of culture contained in

The Tornado by John Steuart Curry
Prof. Schmeckabier claims "The Tornado is Curry's best known and in many ways his greatest painting . . ."

HENRY W. GRADY, Spokesman of the New South by Raymond B. Nixon, '34

A great editor, a sparkling human-interest writer, an astute politician and a superb orator, Henry Woodfin Grady, directing genius of the Atlanta Constitution, won his way into the hearts of the North and South alike during the troubled times of the reconstruction in 1886.

Dr. Nixon has been doing research on this biography for nearly a decade. He has talked with all those living who knew Grady intimately, he has studied the files of the Constitution and its leading contemporaries, and is the first writer to have had access to the private papers of Grady. A fascinating story of a brilliant journalist is the result of Dr. Nixon's forceful work.

places like Oxford and the Sorbonne, too often tend to overlook their own history as being inferior.

SHADOW OF THE NIGHT by August Derleth, '30

The "Sac Prairie Poet" has written another pleasing regional novel of Wisconsin with the setting this time in the 1850's. "Shadow of Night" deals with the moving and dramatic story of a man who traveled from Europe to America in search of his brother's slayer to mete out the age-old punishment of "an eye for an eye."

The book, like others in Mr. Derleth's widely known "Sac Prairie Saga", is the story of a whole group of Sac Prairie characters. It has romance, humor, and a great deal of descriptive material of the Wisconsin countryside.

WISCONSIN WOMEN

Twenty-nine Wisconsin branches of the American Association of University Women paid tribute to Miss Ellen C. Sabin, M. A. '95, "Wisconsin's greatest woman educator and one of the foremost leaders in education in the country," on occasion of her 93rd birthday Nov. 29. Miss Sabin is president emerita of Milwaukee Downer College.

A radio broadcast, "Saga of a Schoolmarm", based on the pioneer educational work of Miss Sabin, provided the program for the celebration. Plans were made for this chapter's part of the million dollar Ellen C. Sabin fellowship which is being established to assist women with college degrees toward further research.

Miss Sabin entered the University of Wisconsin in 1866 at the age of 15. She took no particular course, but just busied herself with "getting educated," as she puts it. While still attending the University she began teaching in the Sun Prairie township district school which had two terms of four months each for children who were needed on the farms during the spring planting and fall harvesting seasons.

Because one of her pupils had difficulty learning geography Miss Sabin tried an experiment which won her an appointment as principal of the Fourth Ward school in Madison. She hung big brown paper charts of the globe on the walls of the schoolhouse and daily drills were held in spelling and locating points on the maps. Children were asked to urge their parents to dig up information on different parts of the country, the minister's aid was enlisted, and finally the whole community became aroused over the young teacher's project.

The daily geography exercise was held first thing in the morning and as parents drove to the school to leave their children they fell into the habit of coming in and listening and later participating. The experiment grew so far-famed that she was asked to describe it at a teacher's convention and out of that came her Madison school appointment.

In 1890 she became president of the Judge Jason Downer college at Fox Lake, which was later amalgamated with the Milwaukee college to become Milwaukee-Downer under Miss Sabin's leadership. At the age of 71 she retired from the presidency of the college but her interest in educational matters has never been weakened in the intervening years.

Her name will never be forgotten, and in honor of a great woman in 1929 the Wisconsin AAUW named its share of the $1,000,000 national fellowship fund after Miss Ellen C. Sabin.

Fighting Badger Mailbag

very interesting and if I do say so myself the ATC has been doing a truly wonderful service during this year and a half throughout the continent.

Surprisingly so, I have met very few Wisconsin graduates over here, Capt. Ben Axel, '33, being one and Ivan Lusk and Dan Duane the other two. I did however have the good fortune to meet Frederic March when he and his USO troupe passed through and I had a nice visit with him.

... In the words of the '42 alumnus, you can just bet that the first post-war Homecoming will "really be a dilly". I can just see myself now with a cold bottle of good old Wisconsin beer in one hand, a football program in the other, howling at the top of my lungs and the place I am now can go to h**l.

A Mess Sgt. from Wis.!

Southwest Pacific

Dear John,

Well, we just finished our Thanksgiving dinner and what a meal that was. If I had to go back to work right now I don't think I could accomplish a great deal. With the exception of the weather it was just like the ones they serve in Wisconsin—it sure is great to have a mess sergeant from the Badger land!

We're being kept fairly busy these days as you can no doubt judge by the news. But I manage to see a movie every night, play ball with the squadron team, and get to the beach quite often—it's just like spending the winter in Florida. Seeing these countries is an experience I will never forget but you can well imagine where my favorite stamping grounds are!

Chronicle of R. P. Lee

% Postmaster, San Francisco

Dear Jeanne,

It was in a foxhole in New Guinea about a year ago that a copy of the Wisconsin Alumnus first strayed into my hands. Thanks to our efficient APO your delightful magazine has been reaching me with indifferent regularity ever since, in spite of the incorrect address.

I've met very few Badgers over here. There are many around, perhaps I don't travel in the right company to run into them. During my first encounter with our buck-toothed "friends" I was under the command of Capt. John L. Leigh, '31. He has since been transferred.

REMEMBER WHEN

REMEMBER WHEN there were night shirt parades during which bands of students wearing night shirts paraded through the student section of town? And remember when they would perpetrate such tricks as burning the sidewalks (many of them were wooden in those days) and tipping over "Chic Sales"?

REMEMBER WHEN Friday night was Engineer's Night? If there was a show at the Opera House they would attend in large numbers and very likely break up the show by cat calls and hooting?

REMEMBER WHEN the famous Varsity crew of 1900 was competing in the regatta at Poughkeepsie and at the last minute, the Wisconsin shell struck a berry-crate and was nosed out by the Pennsylvania crew, and after that the Varsity was known as the "Berry-crate Crew"?

REMEMBER WHEN "Benny" Snow was professor of Physics at the University? He was a most eccentric man since to become a campus legend. When demonstrating at his desk, he would announce what he was doing or what he had accomplished with an individual note of defiance and arrogance. All his students of that time will remember how he would shout, "I did the work!" When his child was born some of the boys wheeled down a baby carriage with that legend on it.

REMEMBER WHEN Bascom Hall started sprouting wings? In 1900 a south wing was added to the building; in 1906 a north wing was built on "Old Main." Renamed Bascom Hall in 1921, a third southwest wing was added in 1925.

REMEMBER WHEN the "Battle of the Goal Posts" took place at the Iowa game, Dad's Day, in 1929? A placard from the Iowa campus demanding reparation for the loss of the goalposts after last year's game predicted the battle. As soon as the final whistle blew after the game thousands of Wisconsin rooters swarmed onto the field and surrounded the two goal posts. Two cheerleaders climbed each post and the crowd defied any Iowan to take them away. In the face of this angry multitude the opposition melted. Some hardy Hawkeyes tried to tear the Wisconsin pennant from the pressbox while others tried to set fire to the hay stack at the south end of the stadium. They didn't get away with anything, though, and were finally forced to retire.

REMEMBER WHEN the student slogan in 1936 was "The spirit's Back"?

TRAILING THE BADGERS

W . . . . . 1890

Orithia HOLT Steenis writes: "Please change our address from Madison to 404 Holt ave., Winter Park, Fla. Mr. Steenis came here last season and bought a winter home. One does not enjoy moving from Madison, and Mr. Steenis says he intends to return to Madison in summer as long as he lives. But we love it here—Winter Park is a beautiful town. I have never been in more congenial and delightful society. Most of these people, in fact, are from New England and we have quite a Wisconsin crowd here too. Dr. L. R. Jones is here. Everyone has been telling me the Scotts are here from Madison. We see a good deal of the E. E. BROWNES. Mary A. SMITH is also here and Mrs. Xenophon Caverno and her cousin, Miss Ellen Caverno, are coming next week. Miss Ellen is the one who was so splendid a help at our Jubilee Reunion. I have never been in a place where I have wished so much to have everyone I know come."

The chronicle of R. P. Lee is a very drab story. In March of 1941 Uncle sent me his greetings and since then I've been a dogface in the infantry. Before coming overseas we made a Cook's tour of the U. S. ending up in Calif. from where we embarked for Australia. On April 21 I will have two years of overseas duty to my credit, if that's what it is.

Four of those months I spent in New Guinea where our outfit made life not only miserable but not even worth while for a few Nips. Except for a slight case of malaria I was none the worse for the experience. Since we are here for the duration I rather expect to have a few more go's at them.

At this point I fail to recall a time that I was not a soldier. Do people still wear those silly looking jackets and trouser combinations which I vaguely remember being called store clothes? After 20 months in Australia I am no longer aware that traffic travels on the left, beer is served warm (when you can get the putrid stuff) and eggs are almost invariably served with steak—but since there is no beef you eat mutton. I don't mind mutton but I do object to the wool content served here.

At present I am somewhat of an orphan. While sweating out a couple attacks of malaria I got separated from my outfit and I'm waiting here in this replacement training center for transportation to it. Although I have absolutely nothing to do here besides make the noon and evening "Beer Calls" down at the corner pubs, I don't like it very much and I'm anxious to join my company again. When I left my unit I was battalion communications chief and I want to get back before they discover that it is possible to get along without me!

S/SGT. ROBERT "BOB" LEE, '40
