SOUND hard teeth—straight strong bodies. These are not just luck. They are the likely result when children get enough Vitamin D in their daily diets.

Especially now when the winter sun is so weak, meals should include foods fortified with Vitamin D. No ordinary foods supply enough, most foods lack Vitamin D entirely.

Vitamin D helps your child's body use calcium and phosphorus—minerals needed to build, nourish, and help protect their bones and teeth. It is needed, too, to assure calcium's beneficial effect on nerve function, muscle tone, blood clotting and heart action.

Dear Mr. Berge,

Thanks a lot for the Cardinal Communique which I received today. Guess it must have come by way of Timbuctoo, but then one has to make allowances for mail lapses these days. I think you realize how much all those publications mean to me. At the risk of being considered a glutton I'd like to ask whether you'd send me the July alumni magazine. . . . I'd appreciate getting it so that I can keep abreast with events on the "Hill". Wherever I am, my heart will always be in Madison with a special spot reserved for the University.

Dear John,

Well, I'm writing the letter I promised to send about the get-together given by the Wisconsin Alumni Association in Honolulu. It was held at Iolani Palace on Saturday, Sept. 25. I'm enclosing a picture that was taken there of a part of the crowd.

The Betty Brown in the picture is the former Betty Abel. She entered the U.W. in 1930. It was the first time I'd seen her in 15 years since we were in the same sophomore English class back at Madison Central High. I recognized her immediately and she also remembered me, but we had forgotten names. It sure seems funny to run into someone you haven't seen in so long when you're so far from home.

You'll also notice that Mickey McGuire, the fellow that beat Minnesota in '32 is in the picture. I had quite a talk with him and he's doing all right for himself—he's traffic manager of the Honolulu Bus Co. I also met another fellow who said he was on the team the same year only I don't remember him. He is Capt. Tanck (I think that's how it's spelled). He said he was an end.

I met many others there, too. Fred Baxter, former sports editor of the

A LOOK Ahead..

CLARENCE A. DYKSTRA, the eleventh president of the University of Wisconsin, came to the University in 1937 from Cincinnati, Ohio, where he had been city manager for seven years. At that time he had already achieved national renown both as an educator and administrator. Of particular significance at this time is President Dykstra's membership on the Army and Navy Joint Committee on Education and Welfare, the Advisory Army Special Training Committee, and the National Committee on Defense and Education of the American Council on Education. President Dykstra served as director of the nation's first peace-time Selective Service law in 1940 till 1941, when he was named representative of the public and chairman of the National Defense Mediation board.

In this special article for the WISCONSIN ALUMNUS President Dykstra discusses a broad and objective philosophy of education which may serve as a constructive approach to the international post war challenge.

MANY peoples in many places have been taught for many centuries the aphorism "In time of peace prepare for war." Some learned that lesson so well that it became inevitable, "in the national interest," that there should be war. Within the last decade we have had ample demonstration that the world can be made a shambles by peoples who prepare for war and make force an instrument of national policy.

Fortunately, the state of mind in which we have found ourselves not long ago—"that our sole business is to win this war"—has given way to the more statesmanlike position "in time of war prepare for peace." We are now, even while waging war mightily, thinking of peace and asking ourselves how to establish peace—if possible a permanent peace. This it seems to many is the one greatest challenge to our generation. How shall we prepare for a "post war" world? In most minds this means "how shall we guarantee peace?"

This challenge comes home to everybody, in every walk of life. It faces us who live and labor in the field of education. It faces the University of Wisconsin. In the ninety-five years of its existence our institution has lived through three wars. One of these left a North-South breach which was long in healing. The Spanish-American war touched us very lightly. The first World War left not only scars but terrible disappointment. It is to be hoped that we can learn from the one we are now fighting.

Our responsibility as we look ahead is to see to it that some things shall not happen again and as a university engage ourselves positively in doing not only a task of prevention but also one of constructive planning.

By PRESIDENT C. A. DYKSTRA

The University is interested in the peace. Many groups on the campus are giving time and thought to the preparing of our American mind for a constructive approach to our international post war challenge.

But the University as an institution has to prepare itself to serve in the kind of world we hope for, one in which the sciences and the humanities can contribute to the well being and good will of the peoples of the world. In the last analysis this problem is one of joining natural forces and man's intelligence in an attempt to utilize knowledge, resources, statesmanship and moral force in reducing the causes of friction among men and in promoting cooperation among the nations.

How can our University serve its generation and the future in this colossal task. I am reminded at this point of the little boy who was playing so noisily that he disturbed his father who was reading his magazine. In desperation the father finally tore out a page which reproduced a map of the world, cut it into pieces and asked the lad to put the puzzle map together. In a few moments the father was astonished to be shown the map perfectly arranged. "How did you do it so soon?" "Oh," said the boy, "On the other side is a picture of a man. I put the man together and the world was all right." Here is an illustration of the problem of education—how shall we put man together so that the world will be all right? It is a challenge to our University.

We are now asking ourselves what we face as we look ahead to a time which will bring to the campus a college generation which has been training for war and has participated in fighting all over the world. It will be a mature generation thrown in with the boys and girls just getting out of high school. Some will find it hard to pick up where they left off. Others will have changed their objectives and professional plans. We must recognize this changed situation and meet it constructively and sympathetically. We must also assess and appraise the work we have been doing for the armed services to see whether this experience can serve us in discovering new methods of teaching or presentation and new materials and techniques which we have found useful. It goes almost without saying that we shall have a world approach to many fields which heretofore have been detached and isolated. We shall certainly have more departmental cooperation both in teaching and research. We shall more than ever be guided and inspired by what we have always declared to be our democratic faith. The factors, forces and philosophy which seem to me to be the stuff out of which an educational program for the future will be forged may be set down somewhat categorically. They are the precepts of democratic education:

1. That man is educable and that education can serve man and the future.
2. That liberty and cooperation form the basis of civilized life.
3. That freedom of choice can exist along with order and social action.
4. That universal brotherhood has had a deep appeal throughout the ages.
5. That most men are peaceful until stirred by what seem to them unjust discrimination and unfair practices.
6. That loyalties can be cultivated and directed toward desirable ends.
7. That individual men will strive to develop themselves if given the opportunity.
8. That men seek for some kind of religion or faith which will satisfy their hopes for a better life and a better world.
9. There is an essential unity of man which is recognizable and can be cultivated.

With such principles in mind it should be possible to set up goals for faculty and students in the field of general education for the man and citizen. If we have any hope of having a world which is democratic and cooperative, the educational task of providing intelligent citizens and leaders is an immediate challenge.

This education must include an appreciation of the fundamental unity and harmony which exist in the world of science, an understanding of the relation which pertains between man and the physical world, some knowledge of the biological, psychological, and social human being, and an experience in self-discipline and responsibility. It must find room also for the cultivation of the spiritual and ideal impulses which are latent in almost all of us. It must reach out beyond national boundaries and find faith and hope in a world setting. Our education must produce the matured and poised adult who will be at home in a world which requires problem solving on a wide scale. Such an education is as necessary for the specialist or technician as it is for the general student. Therefore a too early specialization or "professionalization" is to be avoided. In terms of organization extreme departmentalism and compartmentalism, favorable as they are for reproducing specialists, must be relaxed below the advanced and graduate levels. Special interest groups should not be allowed, by a process of senatorial courtesy, to set curricular requirements. We face the problem of a generation of students to be educated for participation in what we declare will be "a new world." To do this may mean the scrapping of some things that are traditional and accepted in the current educational set-up and many of our present dearly held opinions and methods may have to yield in the process.

Next month President Dykstra will discuss in a second article the specific applications of this philosophy behind post-war education in its relation to our own University of Wisconsin and its future.

Granted that we on a campus can set up general and desirable goals for education in a post-war world, we must be specific in finding the instruments and approaches which will further the ends we seek. Space limitations allow only a brief reference to some of the possibilities we are thinking about. Others will be discussed at another time.

The domain of adult education brings its challenges to all of us. The high school or college graduate has a good start toward the goal—an educated and matured person. We must seek opportunities to help all continue their development as personalities and participators in a world which gets more complex and complicated with each passing year. Our university has been in the forefront of institutions which have developed adult programs through university extension. We must extend and improve this service using all possible modern techniques including the film and the radio if we are to accept the responsibility now facing us.

We must move much more extensively into the field of international relations and understanding. Particularly we need to have our students better acquainted with Eastern Europe and the Far East as well as with our neighbors to the South. For too long we have assumed that an acquaintance with Western Europe and its civilization is all that an American needs to meet his international and world obligation to understand the globe on which we live. Transport and communication have been revolutionized in our generation. These facts need recognition in our educational programs. We are on the way to an assumption of obligation to promote world peace through some kind of participation in what might be called a world view of citizenship. Cooperation between citizens of many lands is a necessary prerequisite to world peace.

We are entering an era when the field of social invention is becoming as important as the other areas of experimentation and development have been to our physical comfort and contentment. We need to discover the ways and means and the mechanics and devices which will ease the tensions between racial and religious groups and between nations large and small. The old conception of the sovereign state operating through power politics or even the balance of power has broken down time and again. We have adhered through thick and thin to the time worn devices of diplomacy and armed forces for the resolution of conflicting interests among the peoples of the earth. The national interest has been of paramount importance to every people and probably will continue so. Recognizing this fact we must discover on a world basis what we have learned in our country—that cooperation and union for the larger good can be achieved through political and legal devices which avoid conflict and aid in the sharing of resources and trade on a wide front. The great world problem of the moment is to find the way through some device to implement the peace which will be made in due time. Wide spread support for international unity and harmony through the regular educational process will be needed now and in the future.

This cataloging of a few of the educational ventures we face is but illustrative of some of our thinking on this campus. There will be more thinking and more reporting as time and opportunity offer.

HOLT HEADS NEW PUBLIC SERVICE DEPARTMENT

A department of public service, with Dean Frank O. Holt of the Extension division as director, was recently created by the board of regents.

The new department was created to expand the university's service to the state, and replaces the original office of assistant to the president set up by the regents last June and discussed in the July issue of the Alumnus.

Duties of Mr. Holt as director of the department, will be to accelerate and expand a program of state relations to develop closer contacts between the university and business, industry and labor, and professional and other groups within the state; to co-operate with the alumni association and alumni in promoting the welfare of the university; to act as an off-campus liaison officer for the university in discovering additional services which the university might render; and to represent the president in contacts with state groups, to represent the president before groups at which the president is unable to appear, to give the president help and support in official campus contacts and activities, and to be on call for any assignments which the president might make.

UNIVERSITY AFFAIRS

When the haze of registration cleared up officials reported the entire university enrolment for the first semester of 1943-44 to be 8,764. Of this number 5,264 are civilian students and the remaining 3,500 are military personnel.

Final count showed the freshman class to number 1,150, 88% of whom were women. Women dominated the scene all around, as even with the servicemen, the ratio is three girls to one man. (Normally it is five men to three girls.)

The normal peacetime enrolment at the university is 10,500, so the drop is small, only three and a half per cent below that of last year, according to Registrar Curtis Merriman. Hardest hit in the decline of student population is the Law School with an enrolment drop or around 90%.

Dykstra to Faculty

Pres. C. A. Dykstra, in his annual opening address to the faculty, called for two commissions, one to prepare for postwar educational problems, and the other to lay plans for a University of Wisconsin centennial in 1949.

The post war situation on the campus must have early attention, President Dykstra declared. "We must anticipate the responsibilities which peace and demobilization will bring to us. Doubtless we shall have a greatly enlarged student body in which there will be, mature and travelled hardy men returned from the battlefronts who must be approached and dealt with as mature adults."

First classes at the university were opened in Feb., 1849, and President Dykstra asked for a university centennial commission to be established by the regents which would be "widely representative of regents, alumni, faculty, and official and unofficial Wisconsin."

CAT School Opens

A military government school to train army officers for government in occupied countries was opened at the university late in October. About 90 officers are attending the civil affairs training school which lasts two months.

Few schools have been chosen for such training, as a highly skilled faculty is required. Greatly intensified instruction in political science, geography, and languages will be given the officers, training similar to that of the officers who are now handling the occupational government in Sicily and North Africa.

War Veterans

A vanguard of an expected large contingent of World War II veterans to return for university study arrived on the campus the first of October.

Nine disabled service men have enrolled for study intended to speed their rehabilitation. They have received honorable discharge from the army because of service connected disabilities. Their tuition and fees will be paid, and they will receive $80 monthly allowance for living expenses from the veteran's administration.

Dean Willard W. Blaesser has been appointed by President Dykstra as counselor for the disabled veterans and liaison officer between the school and the veteran's administration. The president has also appointed a committee which will consider each veteran's case individually and which is to evaluate the veteran's training and experience in terms of credits.

REGENTS

The regents of the university took the first step in improving university library facilities recently when it voted the appropriation of $5,000 to begin the 10-year, $50,000 task of combining the 4,000,000 card catalogs of the university library and state historical society.

This step was taken immediately after a report was made by Dean Theodore Blegen of the University of Minnesota graduate school, and Keyes DeWitt Metcalf, director of the Harvard university library, in which they indicated that the University of Wisconsin library in recent years had fallen behind libraries of other state institutions.

Their report said, "Both libraries are greatly hampered by the lack of adequate financial support, but this lack is far more serious in the case of the university library than in that of the society. The university library is unable to give first class reference service, and it cannot buy the books that it needs for undergraduates or scholars."

Gilbert H. Doane, director of university libraries, suggested to the regents that an extension might be built on Bascom hall to concentrate undergraduate library facilities there, and the main library could be kept free for advanced and research reading.

Post-War Building

A university post-war seven-point building program totaling more than $7,000,000 was adopted by the board of regents at their October meeting and will be presented to the legislature's postwar planning committee sometime in November.

First on the schedule of strictly university improvements is the fireproofing of Bascom Hall, and here the committee on construction and development suggested the entire interior be removed and replaced by non-inflammable material.

The remainder of the schedule called for the erection of a new dairy building at an estimated cost of $360,000; construction of a new wing to the home economics building, $200,000; a new engineering building, $1,415,000; a new library building, $1,618,000; and replacement of the central portion of the chemistry building, $1,696,000.

The regent committee on construction and development which has planned the building program is made up of Regents Daniel H. Grady, W. J. Campbell, and A. J. Glover.

Commerce School Separate?

Establishment of a separate school of commerce at the university, with complete separation from the College of Letters and Science, was debated at a public hearing before a special committee of the board of regents recently.

The question of the separation of the school of commerce from the L & S college is one of long standing at the university, and Prof. F. H. Elwell, director of the school of commerce, revealed that the National Association of Schools of Commerce has contemplated dropping Wisconsin from their membership but has deferred action till after the war.

Businessmen throughout the state spoke for the establishment of a separate school, claiming that business should have the same intensified treatment as farming receives in the College of Agriculture, engineering in the College of Engineering, medicine in the Medical School.

Anonymous Gift

A gift of $200,000 from two "friends of the university" was accepted by the regents at a recent meeting. The gift, made largely of cash and securities in American industries, is one of the largest ever received by the university.

The donors asked that the gift remain "completely and forever anonymous" while expressing the hope that "this fund may be used to strengthen and enlarge the cultural and artistic undertakings of the university. Even in the midst of war it is well that we remember the total experience of the race, which seems to indicate that our civilization finds its roots, and its greatest potentialities, in those sustaining and continuing forces which minister to human happiness and to the higher and better instincts of man."

An additional $21,100 in research grants was also accepted by the regents at that time, including $4,800 from Lederle Laboratories, Inc. for study on penicillin molds.

John Steuart Curry
Illustrates "Leaves of Grass"

FACULTY

John Steuart Curry, artist in residence at the university, has illustrated an outstanding new edition of Walt Whitman's "Leaves of Grass", just off the press.

A greased crayon medium has been used to illustrate the poems in the characteristic vigorous Curry technique, well suited to the robust Whitman style.

The volume contains 16 drawings by Curry, including a frontispiece and cover. Eight Curry drawings are featured at the beginning of divisions such as Incriptions, Song of the Open Road, Proud Music of the Storm.

The drawings, done in the exact size as reproduced in the book, took about a month to do.

4 on Listening Post

Four university faculty members have been named to a listening-post committee to aid the George Foster Peabody

Radio board in the selection of the annual Peabody radio awards.

Prof. Grant M. Hyde, director of the school of journalism; Henry L. Ewbank, professor of speech; Edward N. Doan, lecturer in journalism, and William G. Harley, program supervisor of station WHA are members of this committee. Throughout the year they will evaluate radio programs and make recommendations to the Peabody board.

The Peabody radio awards were initiated three years ago by the University of Georgia journalism school to give educational recognition and encouragement to the broadcasting industry.

Faculty Notes

John R. COMMONS, emeritus professor of economics at the University of Wisconsin, observed his 81st birthday Oct. 13 at his home in Ft. Lauderdale, Florida.

Prof. Commons joined the university faculty in 1904 after a stormy career at other universities. He retired in 1934, a power in state and national economics, and a professor beloved by thirty years of students.

A. D. WINSPEAR, associate professor of classics on leave from the university, is the director of the new Abraham Lincoln school for workers which opened in Chicago about six months ago.

The school is open to everyone, has no entrance requirements, and classes are taught at all hours during the day to accommodate workers on all shifts. More than 2,000 students, most of them from Chicago industrial plants, were registered in the school during the first six months.

The school is supported largely by labor unions, and the educational work covers economics, philosophy, fine arts and other typical college subjects.

Winspear is serving as administrative head of the school during its experimental period.

Research

Nature is a good engineer, and a natural standing position rather than a stiff and rigid stance is inherent in good body mechanics, Dr. Frances A. Hellebrandt, B.S. '28, M.D. '29, has found through research conducted at the university during the past several years.

Dr. Hellebrandt, associate professor of physical medicine and research associate in physiology at the university, and her associates have conducted their studies on posture not only to aid civilians in their everyday living, but also they have conducted a number of practical experiments and investigations such as one done in co-operation with the army to determine the easiest and best way for a soldier to carry his pack.

With the aid of equipment largely supplied through grants from the Wisconsin Alumni Research Foundation, Dr. Hellebrandt has examined many men and women during the last few years to determine where the center of gravity of a person's body does fall in relation to the base; to determine in which posture a person can stand the longest with the greatest of ease; and the metabolic cost to the body of the act of standing.

She has found that a person standing somewhat relaxed and allowing himself to sway back and forth slightly can stand for an indefinite length of time. Persons remaining for long in a rigid stance and not moving at all will collapse in a short time.

The best standing posture is a natural one in which the person stands with knees slightly bent, shoulders slightly rounded, and the trunk of the body leaning a trifle forward from a straight line.

Beats Japs

An assistant professor of agricultural bacteriology at the university, Wayne Umbreit, has found a new way of beating the Japs on the home front.

He has developed a substitute for Japanese agar, which cannot be imported now, but which is a gelatinous substance used in bacteriology as a solidifying agent in culture media.

By developing this substitute, called carragar, Prof. Umbreit has enabled the university to continue supplying farmers with bacterial root nodule cultures which clover, alfalfa and other legume seeds must have to utilize efficiently the "free" nitrogen in the air.

Tests show that the root nodule bacteria grow just as well on media containing the carragar as those made with agar, that they survive as well and "fix" just as much nitrogen.

The Faculty Writes

Abolition of the state department and "the restoration of foreign affairs to the representatives of the people would remove an inefficient, obsolescent obstacle to the peace and freedom of the world," asserts Dr. William B. Hesseltine, professor of American history at the university, in a current issue of the Progressive magazine.

"What useful purpose does the department of state serve in 1943? In the light of its record and its present performances, what utility can the foreign service of the United States have in that bright new world of the imperialists' dreams? Would the cause of democracy be better served by the abolition of the state department?" Prof. Hesseltine asks.

"The state department has arrogated to itself the task of formulating policies. Its permanent staff of experts, constituting a closeknit bureaucracy with no responsibility to the people, determines objectives and controls the machinery for obtaining them.

"The whole system, diplomatic and consular, is a vestigial reminder of an obsolete political and economic order. Modern governments—especially when they are representatives of the peoples—taking advantage of modern technology, have no need for the cumbersome structure of a medieval institution.

"In actual practice they have already been ignored. The president of the United States and the prime minister of Great Britain—with hardly a courteous glance toward their respective foreign offices—can convene at will on the Atlantic, in Africa, or in Quebec.

"The airplane and the telephone enable the president and the prime minister to consult at will. But an airplane can carry more than one passenger, and if Roosevelt and Churchill can meet in Quebec, a joint committee of the American congress can meet the foreign affairs committee of the house of commons in the Chateau Frontenac. Then, when comparable committees of the popular assemblies of the other nations of the world have assembled with them on the Plains of Abraham, the combined groups might begin to make a people's peace for a people's world."

THE CAMPUS

A Woman's World

Women, women, everywhere. They're all over, and the current college quip seems to be,

"1941 What a man!

1942 What, a man?

1943 What's a man?"

It looks like a dateless year for the coeds, with four girls to every man on the campus. It used to be five men for three girls. If you count the men in uniform the average isn't so bad, but you can't really count in or on the servicemen (socially!) since their time is strictly supervised by the army and navy, and as the saying goes, they're kept "on the books" most of the time.

Walking up the hill to Bascom, most of the students one meets are girls, except for the marching columns of two-by-two's who are all dressed alike. In the classrooms it's the same story, in one journalism class of 35 seniors there's not one man.

Women head the Daily Cardinal, the yearbook, the student governing board, the union. Yes, it's a woman's world and the girls are making the most of it.

Melting Pot

Fifty-six students whose homes are outside the continental United States have enrolled in the fall session at the University of Wisconsin, the dean of men's office has announced. Twenty of the group are freshmen.

The majority of the students come from the "good neighbor" countries, and those represented are: Peru, Territory of Hawaii, Canada, Puerto Rico, China, Nicaragua, Haiti, Turkey, Scotland, Iceland, Wales, Mexico, Paraguay, Nova Scotia, Costa Rica, New Zealand, Denmark, Columbia, Chile, Argentina, Germany, and Cuba.

Greeks vs. Independents

The oft-disputed contest for academic supremacy between independent and fraternity men and women again came to a draw, according to the dean's grade point statistics for the second semester of 1942-43.

The all sorority average of 1.766 topped the 1.608 of non-sorority women, while the non fraternity men with an average of 1.744 surpassed the 1.652 of the organized men.

The professional sorority actives won the scholastic high with a 2.131 average, Theta Sigma Phi, professional journalistic sorority taking individual honors with 2.414.

In the social fraternities, Pi Kappa Alpha, 1.990; Delta Chi, 1.891; and Alpha Gamma Rho, 1.873, paced the men. In the sororities, Delta Zeta, 2.086; Alpha Chi Omega, 2.076 and Alpha Phi, 2.036, were the highest of the women.

War Council Plans

In a recent meeting of the war council, Josephine Cohen, war co-ordinator, disclosed that the year's activity would include a nurses aide course for students which may be incorporated as a credit course. Students fulfilling the requirements would be qualified to work in any hospital as an aide.

Plans also included a clothes drive, aiming for contributions of one garment per person, and a plan for each sorority to take charge of USO entertainment and hostesses one night during the year.

At this meeting "Buy a jeep" day was planned, and one stamp day will be devoted to a concerted effort to raise $1,165, the price of a jeep.

To Be or Not to Be

The faculty committee on student life and interests is considering the problem of whether the annual Junior Prom should be or should not be held in this war year. Besides the fate of the prom, the question of management of it and other dances will be decided by the committee.

A source of conflict on the campus during the last year, the Union board and the student board both want control of university dances. The faculty committee is expected to decide the issue.

The Daily Cardinal stated editorially, "Prom must be held regardless whether the student board or the union runs it. . . . A speedy and intelligent settlement of the differences between the union and the student board . . . will help allay student apprehension as to whether there will be a prom this year."

If the full dress dance, long the foremost social affair of the year, is held, it will be minus elaborate trappings and a big time band, university officials intimated.

"Lend for Release"

Two hundred dollars has been appropriated by the student board to serve as a revolving bail fund this year for students detained by the police for some reason or other. One board member commented, "It is hoped that the fund won't revolve too rapidly."

Any regularly enrolled student, on being detained, may draw on the fund for bail if he is unable to produce money but can produce identity. All beneficiaries are expected to reimburse the fund.

Boys Will Be Boys

For the first time in 45 years there will be no Haresfoot show at the University of Wisconsin this spring. The shortage in male students is blamed for the plight, and the offices in the union have been officially closed for the duration.

And so goodbye to the famous Hares-foot chorines, and the muscular men impersonating winsome women. For the duration, at the university, boys must remain boys.

ARMY

Lt. Col. Franklin W. Clarke, infantry, former executive officer of the university military headquarters, has returned to Madison to succeed Col. Herbert H. Lewis as commandant of the university military units. Col. Lewis left October 25 and will be on leave until January 31, 1944, when he will retire from active military service. He has been with the department since the fall of 1936 and commandant for the past two and one-half years.

Arriving the early part of October, Col. Clarke assumed command upon Col. Lewis' departure. As commandant of this post, he will head the ROTC, the army specialized training program, the army specialized training reserves, the U. S. Armed Forces Institute, and the meteorology detachment on the Wisconsin campus.

Col. Clarke was graduated from the university Law School in 1931 and practised law in Madison until his entrance into the service in 1940. Executive officer of this post last June, he left to become commandant of the ASTP unit at St. Norbert's college, West De Pere, and continued in that capacity until his reassignment here.

WAC'S Here

The university adopted its first contingent of WAC's when 16 enlisted women and one officer of the women's army corps reported to headquarters October 18. A highly select group which can boast of 12 college degrees, the young women are taking a six month's course in physio-therapy at the Wisconsin General hospital.

Although the group is not connected with the ASTP, its organization is much the same. The army has contracted with the university for instructional facilities as well as housing and meals for the WAC's. The course of study, too, is every bit as rigorous as that of the ASTP soldier-students, 59 hours of class room work and supervised study per week.

The University of Wisconsin is one of the few schools in the country to offer a course which prepares members of the armed forces for therapeutic work in army hospitals.

The Press "Sees and Believes"

Twenty Wisconsin newspapermen and women from all parts of the state turned soldiers for a day when they attended the ASTP press conference held at the university October 15 and 16. From reveille until taps the press followed the typical routine of the soldiers—attending classes, tiptoeing into study halls, scrutinizing the legendary meticulousity of the barracks, and eating in the Memorial Union mess hall.

It was something of a "seeing is believing" proposition for the newsmen, for even with the publicity that the ASTP has received throughout the nation, one must actually see these soldiers at work before appreciating what can be done with such a high-velocity educational program. Proof that nine months of intensive training in a foreign language can result in a fluent speaking knowledge seldom attained in a normal three-year college course was seen by the conversational ability of men who had had no more than five weeks of language instruction.

An incident which particularly impressed one flabbergasted journalist occurred when the writer accosted a trainee whose woebegone look demanded immediate sympathy. The journalist, inquiring as to the trainee's sad state, was informed that the latter had dropped his pencil during lecture, consequently losing out on one semester of integral calculus before he had time to recover the lost pencil.

Intensive as the schooling appeared, the visitors were assured that marching to and from class is not the only aspect of soldiering that these men get. At a review Saturday morning on the lower campus, five companies held parade maneuvers when Lt. Col. Clarke reviewed the men of his new command for the first time. The "West Point" precision of the marching men and the excellence of the ASTP's own marching band made it hard to believe that these soldiers spend 59 hours a week on books rather than on the drill field.

Parades

For the past five months the Saturday morning reviews of the ASTP soldiers have provided Madisonians with a military spectacle civilians are rarely privileged to witness. On the morning of Saturday, October 9, however, as the command of "Forward—March!" rang down through the ranks, every man of every ASTP company stepped out onto lower campus with the idea of outdoing his best. And they did. Major General H. S. Aurand, commanding general of the sixth service command, was reviewing the troops. To be reviewed by your commanding general is a great feeling for a soldier. And it was for the spectators that day, too.

NAVY

On Navy Day—Wednesday, October 27—the nation celebrated the 168th anniversary of the American navy. In Madison, the celebration was crowded with many colorful activities.

A two-mile-long parade, including the total complement of navy men and women enrolled in the radio communications school, was held at noon. The long columns of sailors, WAVES, and marine women marched up State street and around the square, executing "eyes left" as they passed the reviewing stand. Commander Leslie K. Pollard, commanding officer of the schools, Mayor Law, Secretary of State Zimmerman, and other civil and naval officials reviewed the parade.

In an afternoon broadcast over the university's radio station WHA, Commander Pollard spoke on the significance of Navy Day, and suggested that the university continue to maintain a training unit on the campus after the war.

"The navy's station in Madison is the largest that has ever been maintained by the navy in the state of Wisconsin," Commander Pollard said. "We hope that the people of this state will become such strong friends of the navy that they will continue after the war to maintain at the University of Wisconsin a naval training unit as one of Wisconsin's contributions to our national security.

"A state which is producing so many ships, submarines, diesel engines, and other naval equipment," he continued, "must be navy conscious. A state which has done so much to make our navy great today will surely, after the war, play an active part in the maintenance of this great organization for the national defense."

The celebrations came to a close with the presentation of a "Happy Hour" show in the university field house, featuring boxing and hand-to-hand combat exhibitions, and special musical and novelty numbers by sailors and women reservists.

During the day, numerous Navy Day programs were held in the city and throughout the Madison area, sponsored by local organizations and featuring Navy Day addresses by officers and enlisted men on the staff of the training schools.

Joint Graduation

The first joint graduation of both men and women reservists was held November 1 in the Union theater, with Rear Admiral John Downes, commandant of the ninth naval district, as the station's honor guest and principal speaker. President Dykstra spoke at the exercises.

Division 16 of the men, and division 10 of the WAVES and marine women received certificates of graduation at the ceremony, marking their completion of 19 weeks of intensive training in transmitting and receiving radio code.

V-12 Commencement

On October 15 the first commencement ceremony for the engineering students in the college V-12 program was held.

Of the eleven men who were graduated, seven were former University of Wisconsin students, and two had completed work qualifying them for a bachelor of science degree. They will receive the degrees from the University in June.

F. Ellis Johnson, dean of the College of Engineering, and Adam V. Millar, assistant dean, were guest speakers at the ceremony.

The two graduates eligible for bachelor of science degrees were Albert P. Fisher, Baraboo, and John F. Jorgensen, Racine. The other University of Wisconsin students were Willard H. Brown, Wauwatosa; Roger Huebner, Shawano; Arthur P. Jorgensen, Jr., Racine; Arthur W. Le Sac, West Allis; and Stanley V. Puidokas, Kenosha.

These men were transferred to the U. S. Naval Training Station, Norfolk, Va., for assignment to further technical training and naval indoctrination. Eventually, those who complete their training successfully will be commissioned ensigns in the naval reserve.

Lt. Comdr. Lambert Detached

Lt. Comdr. Jean A. Lambert, the station's executive officer since October, 1942, was detached from the station in September, and Lieut. James A. Harrington, former senior watch officer, took over his post.

Specialist Gerald Bartell, '37, former production manager of radio station WHA, also was detached from the station. He was commissioned an ensign and ordered to the naval flight preparatory school at Williams college, Williamstown, Mass., where he is serving as welfare and public relations officer.

212 Years of Service

Seven of the chiefs who are on duty with the navy school at the university have a combined total of 212 years of service in the navy, a mighty long time. Two of the seven recently received promotions to a higher rank and have abandoned their hash-marked sleeves for officer's uniforms.

Four of the chiefs are instructors in the radio communications school, Chief Warrant Officer Donald M. Cozzens, 32 years of service; Chief Alton L. Coley, 21 years; Chief Carroll Wylie, 30 years; and Chief F. E. Melton, 23 years.

Three of the chiefs work in the gatehouses as master of arms, Lt. (j.g.) Edward A. Stein, with 41 years of service; (Lt. Stein, who commanded a destroyer during the first World War, is serving as division commander since his promotion) Chief George N. Hupfer, 36 years, and Chief James McShane, 29 years.

SPORTS

From the win-and-loss point of view, 1943 is apparently going down in history as one of the University of Wisconsin's worst gridiron years. Wartime's football "lend-lease", under which experienced gridgers, enlisted in Uncle Sam's armed forces, were shifted from some schools to other schools for their training, hit Wisconsin earlier, and probably harder, than most other big time schools which attempted to continue their athletic programs.

As a result, Coach Harry Stuhldreher and his staff have had to face the toughest schedule in Wisconsin gridiron history with the youngest, lightest, and most inexperienced squad the Badgers have probably ever had. None of last year's veterans or freshmen were available. They are all in the armed forces.

But the Badgers of 1943, practically all of them pre-draft freshmen or navy trainees on the campus, have had plenty of spirit and courage during this topsyturvy season. Even when the boys knew they were in for a good licking from teams packed with veterans, they went out and fought it out to the best of their abilities, asking no quarter and giving none, and never, never giving up.

In their first game of the season, the inexperienced Badgers lost to Marquette by a 33-7 score. With the mistakes of that game corrected, Stuhldreher's boys tightened and played much better ball against the powerful Camp Grant Soldier eleven in their second game, losing only in the last few seconds of play, 10-7. Then the Badgers traveled to Iowa City, put up a whale of a game against the Hawkeyes to win their Big Ten opener 7-5.

In the meantime, the Wisconsin squad began to lose some of its first string players, men who were naval trainees and who were being transferred to other centers to continue their training for Uncle Sam. At the same time, new men, sent to Wisconsin for navy training, reported for the squad. The turnover was terrific; each week there would be as many as a dozen changes in the Wisconsin squad roster. All of which added to the general confusion.

At any rate, the Badgers have continued to play ball at the starting whistle. They lost to the powerful Notre Dame team 50-0; they took another licking from a speedy Illinois eleven 25-7; and they were handed a stinging defeat by a strong Indiana outfit 34-0, lost to Purdue 32-0.

Left on the schedule at this writing are such formidable opponents as, Michigan and Minnesota. It seems that the hard way will continue!

X Country

Veteran Coach Tom Jones' cross-country team, also well bolstered by naval trainees on the campus, has used its balanced strength to good advantage so far this season. The Badger harriers have won two and lost one in three starts. They defeated Lawrence college 20-39 and Navy Pier at Chicago 24-31, but lost to the strong Notre Dame team 23-33.

Basketball

After three weeks of strenuous practice sessions, the University of Wisconsin's 1943-44 basketball squad has been cut to 38 men, but still it's the largest practice squad in recent Badger basketball history.

The reduced squad consists of 21 pre-draft freshmen, upperclass students enrolled in specialized training, and a few men discharged from the armed services for physical reasons; and 17 young men who are enrolled in the Navy V-12 engineering training program at Wisconsin.

Among the squad personnel are five members of last year's Badger varsity squad and five members of Wisconsin freshman squads of the last few years. Varsity veterans of last year include Center Ray Patterson; Guards Bill Johnson and Al Ryser; and Forwards Des Smith and Bill Lovshin.

Badgers 0, Northwestern 41

Wisconsin lost its Homecoming game to a highly superior Northwestern squad Saturday, Nov. 6, by a score of 41-0. The Wildcat aggregation, led by "Automatic Otto" Graham, is one of the nation's leading powerhouses and completely confused the Badgers the first quarter. The score at the end of the first quarter stood 21-0.

After the first surprise the Badgers pulled themselves together and played considerably better ball. Neither team scored in the second quarter, but Northwestern scored twice in the third quarter and once in the fourth.

Graham literally stole the show for the 13,000 Homecoming fans, as he ran and passed with brilliant precision. "Automatic Otto" scored four touchdowns, passed for another and scored three conversions, making his share 27 points of the total.

HOMECOMING

Madison celebrated a very rainy and cold Homecoming week end, Nov. 6, when the Badgers entertained Northwestern and the traditional Homecoming alumni. The weatherman and the Wildcats dampened the Badger spirits as Northwestern defeated Wisconsin 41-0 amidst a rain and sleet storm that kept up all week end finally turning into snow late Sunday evening.

Homecoming proper started Friday afternoon as sorority pledges and dormites and those few fraternities who are still doing business decorated their houses in the same festive manner as always. Decorations weren't as elegant or elaborate as in years gone by, but they were clever. "Pistol Packin' Mama" was there twice to make sure that Northwestern wouldn't get away with anything. The Alpha Phi's pictured a Badger riding in an airplane dropping a bomb labeled "touchdown" on Northwestern and the Alpha Gamma Delta house changed the Lucky Strike slogan to "It's Wisconsin two to one", with two oversized packages of cigarettes naming the starting line-ups of each team, with a box of matches in the center claiming that Wisconsin is a match for any team.

A sleeping sister in the Alpha Phi house was wakened in the dead of night to find her bed moving slowly but surely toward the open window. Upon investigation she found that the rope which supported the airplane wing in the house Homecoming decoration was anchored to the foot of her bed, and when someone outside was attempting to steal the airplane decoration he almost got the jackpot—decoration, furniture, girl and all.

Winners in the homecoming decoration contest were announced during halves of the game Saturday. In the sorority division Alpha Gamma Delta house took first place, Kappa Delta second, and Alpha Phi third. The nurses dormitory was judged the best in the independent group and Kaymir Manor was second.

The traditional pep rally was not as complete as in former years. There was no victory bonfire blazing majestically under a gruesome figure in effigy, as in days gone by. While the lower campus last year was stacked with scrap metal the huge pile of scrap took the place of a bonfire, but this year there was nothing. Coach Harry Stuhldreher spoke to an estimated crowd of 1500 students, Lt. Jack McCould of the navy V-5 contingent (which furnishes a large percentage of the players), assistant coach Ted Payseur of Northwestern and Ray Dooney, game captain, also spoke a few words and the band played on. After the rally the crowd and the band adjourned to the Union for the annual Homecoming band concert.

The State street parade, which in other years called out the riot squad as the crowd of students attempted to storm the Capitol and Orpheum theaters, this year was composed mostly of high school students who got a thorough wetting as the city water sprinkler drove up and down State street dispersing water and students in a subtle attempt to keep the crowd in order. It worked better than tear gas, interesting enough.

Three university men students were arrested Friday night as they attempted to improve on the paint job done on the Kiekhofers wall by the official Homecoming committee. The painting was all done in black and white, since the traditional red paint is out for the duration.

The Saturday morning Homecoming program called for sleep on the part of the students and visiting for the alumni. Then there was the game, which started out with a bang—for Northwestern—as Otto Graham got away for a touchdown on Northwestern's first play, made two more the first quarter. It was damp and it was cold and the game was rather one-sided, so the Badgers swallowed their disappointment till after the game was over, when they promptly forgot the score and went to the various open houses at sororities and fraternities and dormitories to make merry in the true Homecoming manner.

Between halves of the game the band played the new Wisconsin hymn, "Pioneers of Wisconsin", composed and written by Fritz Kreisler, internationally known violinist and composer, and President Dykstra. The words to the chorus are,

Now, Forward, Wisconsin, Forever,
Wisconsin,
To you we raise our song,
We sing of your glory and retell the story
With voices full and strong;
We give our all for Alma Mater,
Wisconsin by Mendota's shore,
Then Forward, Wisconsin, Forever,
Wisconsin,
Your sons and daughters all,
Sing to Wisconsin evermore.
That was Homecoming, alumni, not quite such a big, bang up party as we have known it to be, but still pretty good. Good enough to keep alumni interested till that wonderful riotous Homecoming, the first one after the war, when all the alumni and Fighting Badgers will be back in Madison, Wisconsin, for an occasion that will really be a "dilly".

The band had the leading role
"And the band played on"

EDITORIALLY SPEAKING

LESS TALK AND MORE ACTION

For twenty years there has been a lot of talk about the building needs of the University of Wisconsin, but very little action.

Except for the $200,000 appropriated in 1941 for short course dormitories, no appropriations have been made for new buildings since 1929, when the legislature authorized the construction of the Mechanical Engineering building. This building was the last one built from state funds because construction of the short course dormitories was delayed by World War II.

In the meantime, the old buildings on the campus have been getting older and older. Some of the engineering buildings are over fifty years old and completely out of date for today's teaching need. Laboratories are cramped and much of the equipment is old and antiquated. Our dairy buildings are a disgrace. Wisconsin makes two-thirds of all the Swiss cheese made in the United States—but the university dairy can't make Swiss cheese because its equipment is inadequate and obsolete.

Many campus buildings are over-crowded. The home economics department, for example, was originally built to handle 250 students but enrolment in this department has been running from 600 to 650 students.

Old buildings usually mean fire hazards. The old wooden stairways in Bascom hall are a constant fire-menace to the thousands of students who use this building daily. Other campus buildings have similar fire hazards which should be eliminated by necessary safety devices.

Facts like these emphasize the importance of the regents seven-point program reviewed on page 36 of this issue. This building program must be completed if Wisconsin is to continue its program of effective teaching, research and public service. The regents have repeatedly presented these building needs to the legislature. They have also repeatedly asked for the necessary funds for getting this building program under way, but so far the legislative action has failed to materialize.

The interim committee on Post War Planning appointed by the 1943 legislature has inspected campus building needs very thoroughly and conducted hearings. This committee, headed by your fellow alumnus, Senator William A. Freehoff, will make its report shortly.

Your Association recommends that you study the building program of the board of regents and give it your active support. This program represents the minimum essentials of your university. Every loyal alumnus should back up this program so that construction may get under way as soon as possible after the war is over.

CENTENNIAL PLAN

President Dykstra has endorsed the Association's suggestion for immediate action in developing a well-rounded program for commemorating the university's centennial in 1949.

"Five years of planning and preparation is none too long in which to prepare for our centennial," said President Dykstra at a recent faculty meeting. "I would like to suggest, therefore, that this faculty take some action which will request of the regents the establishment of a University Centennial commission which will be widely representative of regents, alumni, faculty, and official and unofficial Wisconsin."

Such a program of activities deserves the whole-hearted support of all Wisconsin alumni. It fits in nicely with the four-point centennial program which the Wisconsin Alumni Association presented to the university last March.

This centennial offers excellent opportunities to organize and develop a long-time program to impress upon alumni and the citizens of Wisconsin the importance of providing for the continued welfare and progress of the University of Wisconsin. We must make sure that our university starts its second century with favorable opportunities to develop and expand its fine program of teaching, research and public service.

GOOD JUDGMENT

The thousands of alumni who know Frank Holt, '07, will agree that the board of regents used good judgment in selecting him as director of the university's newly created department of public service. His training, experience and state-wide contacts make him well qualified for this job. Non-alumni as well as alumni respect his administrative ability.

This new department is long overdue at the University of Wisconsin. Both state and university have long needed a well-organized program to develop closer contacts between the university and Wisconsin's business and industry. Such a program will make the university more valuable to Wisconsin and increase the number of citizens who benefit directly or indirectly from the university's manifold services.

These contacts will also suggest new ways in which the university may serve Wisconsin and the nation. Contacts with business and industrial groups, for example, should produce ideas for making the College of Engineering and the school of commerce more helpful to these groups. The same thing applies to other colleges and departments. Progressive faculty members will welcome these new opportunities to expand the university's usefulness.

The University of Wisconsin needs no defense but it does need to be interpreted. Wisconsin is proud of its university and the job it is doing. Their pride will be even greater when Frank Holt's interpretation work gets under way.

IN LINE OF DUTY

They Gave Their Lives So That Freedom in This Country and Abroad Might Not Perish

Col. Joe R. SHERR, '21, brother of Mrs. Nathan Cohen, 2709 N. 40th St., Milwaukee, was killed Sept. 21 when an army plane in which he was a passenger crashed and burned two miles from a Calcutta (India) airport. Col. Sherr was attached to Gen. MacArthur's headquarters as an expert on Japan and the Japanese language. During his 22 years of service he saw action in many parts of the world; one of the most spectacular events was when he accompanied Gen. MacArthur on his historic dash through enemy lines from Corregidor to Australia. He had been attached to the American embassy at Tokyo from 1931 to 1935.

Pfc. Eugene C. PETERS, '35, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Peters, 1047 Virginia St., Antigo, was killed in action Sept. 9 in the North African area.

Flight Officer Gustave MONTMAYOR, '38, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gustave J. Montemayor, 300 Forest Park Blvd., Janesville, was killed in a glider accident at Mackall Field, Hoffman, N. C. The war department notified his parents of his death in October.

1st Lt. Milton I. SHAKOW, '38, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph D. Shakow, 838 West End Ave., New York City, was killed in a plane crash in Latin America sometime in September. He was a member of the 2nd Photo Mapping Squadron.

Lt. (j. g.) Thomas W. DU BOSE, '39, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank W. Du Bose, 1260 N. Prospect Ave., Milwaukee, was reported killed in action somewhere in the European theater of war, in Oct. He enlisted in the naval reserve in 1940 and was called to active training in the air corps in Jan., 1941. He received his wings at Pensacola, Fla. and was ordered to Atlantic patrol service. He married Ruth Blakey Colegrove of Burlington, Vt. while in service.

Lt. Robert L. SCHANEN, '39, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. F. Schanen, 746 Grand Ave., Pt. Washington, was killed in action in the European area on Sept. 16. He graduated from AAF Navigation School, Hondo, Texas and was a navigator in the army air forces.

Ensign Thomas J. SCHMIDT, '43, son of Dr. Fred M. Schmidt, Eagle, Wis., was killed Sept. 27 when his plane crashed off No Man's land. He received his wings last March at the Corpus Christi, Texas naval air base.

A/C Bernard G. BAEBLER, '43, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Baebler, Belleville, was killed in the crash of his training plane at Crystobal City, Texas on Oct. 13. He is survived by his wife, Lois Zurbuchen Baebler, 442 W. Dayton St., Madison, and his 2 weeks old son.

MISSING IN ACTION

Lt. Col. Harry PIKE, '35, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Pike, Sr., Portage, has been reported missing in the China area. He was one of the U. S. airmen who replaced the American Volunteer Group in China and was closely associated with Gen. Clair Chennault of the "Flying Tigers." Harry had been awarded the Air Medal, the Oak Leaf Cluster and the Distinguished Flying Cross. While flying in a pursuit squadron as commander he was credited with shooting down at least four enemy planes.

Lt. Dave F. PREES, '41, Town of Menasha, a pilot with the American air force in England, has been missing in action in the European area since September 15, according to a notice received by his friends in Menasha. His parents were the late Mr. and Mrs. William Prees.

Lt. Charles BROWN, '45, son of Mr. and Mrs. Marshall C. Brown, Janesville, has been reported missing in action in the North African area since September 16. Lt. Brown participated in the Sicilian and Italian campaigns, was first pilot of a B-25 twin engine bomber, and was recently awarded the air medal "for meritorious action over enemy-held territory." Charles received his commission and pilot's wings at Blytheville, Arkansas.

Capt. Harold "Curly" HELSTROM, x'39, only son of Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Helstrom, 4002 Manitou Way, has been missing in action over Europe since Oct. 4, the war department has notified his parents. The Madison flier, pilot of a Flying Fortress, has been with the army air forces in England since June 1 and had participated in a score of bombing attacks on Nazi objectives. He enlisted in the air corps in January, 1942 and received his wings at Roswell, New Mexico, eight months later. Before being assigned overseas he was stationed on the west coast.

CARDINAL COMMUNIQUE

The Cardinal Communique is a special six-page newsletter published by the Wisconsin Alumni Association specially for Fighting Badgers in overseas service. The Association officers decided to publish this special letter, sent by first class mail, to the men overseas as postal regulations forbid sending the magazines overseas except to regular, paid-up members, and also, in most cases, because the letter, going first class, would get to overseas posts faster than the magazine, which is second class mail matter.

All Fighting Badgers who go overseas, then, should send their APO addresses promptly to the Association so that the mailing department will put them on the list to receive the Cardinal Communique.

GOING SOMEPLACE?

If so, send us your change in address.

Does the magazine (plus Badger Quarterly, plus Football Letters, plus Cardinal Communique) follow you from post to post, from Ipswich Corners to Steamboat Springs, so by the time it gets to you all the news that's fit to print is ages old and out of date as last year's football scores?

Then do something about it. We probably have your address listed at your first induction center, and the publications travel from pillar to post trying to catch up with you.

Send us your change in address and then we'll be able to keep up with you. Thanks!

WARF OFFICIALS "NOT WORRIED"

WHEN Wendell Berge, assistant U. S. attorney general, charged to a senate sub-committee last month that the Wisconsin Alumni Research Foundation has fixed prices, divided markets with foreign countries, black listed price cutting distributors and used threats of litigation to destroy competition, alumni throughout the country became quite concerned.

Officially the foundation members and officers have made no formal statement on the charges made to the senate sub-committee. The government, they point out, has never made any formal charge against the foundation. At the time the allegations were made public throughout the newspapers, George Haight, '99, president of the foundation and prominent patent attorney in Chicago, stated, "the foundation does not have to apologize to anyone for the manner in which it is handling its patents."

Off the record Mr. Haight talked to the board of directors of the Wisconsin Alumni Association at the Saturday morning Homecoming meeting, explaining the organization to alumni and emphasizing the fact that officials of the foundation were not worried in the least about the charges.

Dr. Steenbock, who discovered the irradiation process of producing vitamin D and who is a professor of biochemistry at the university, feels that the Wisconsin Alumni Research Foundation is "essentially an experiment in democracy" rather than a monopolistic trade group which fosters the growth of cartels and ruthlessly suppresses competition.

Dr. Steenbock also feels that the success or failure of this experiment in democracy would "have far reaching consequences." He regards the plan as an ideal method of protecting consumers against commercial exploitation of scientific discoveries. Although the foundation now controls about 30 patents, Dr. Steenbock's irradiation process is the only one which realizes more than a nominal income.

The foundation has no direct connection with the university other than turning over its annual income to the university to foster research. There are no strings at all tied to the gift, a check is merely handed to the university treasurer, usually in the amount of $200,000 to $250,000, and the foundation has no say at all as to the use of the money.

During the depression years little research would have been done at the university were it not for the WARF grant, since reduced state appropriations during that period would have allowed no money for experimentation.

University officials estimate that 99% of all research being done at the university with money received from the foundation results in no discoveries of a marketable nature. Sometimes many thousands of dollars are spent on an idea before it is proved unworkable. Individual faculty members could not afford to undertake such research without financial assistance such as that provided by the foundation.

Dr. Steenbock perfected his process in 1923 after long and tedious experiments. Reluctant not to patent his discovery for fear it would be exploited by commercial firms which might not use legitimate methods in the process,

Dr. Harry Steenbock
Discoverer of irradiation process

Dr. Steenbock's first thought was to turn the patent rights over to the university.

The university at that time was unable to undertake a commercial venture, and then Dr. Steenbock and Dr. C. S. Slichter, former dean of the graduate school, hit on the idea of organizing a non-profit, nonstock holding and developing company which would license use of patents and fix royalties. All income from earnings, it was decided, was to revert to the university research funds granted by the legislature.

"It is an organization without capital stock," Dr. Steenbock has stated, "the business and purpose of which is to promote, encourage, and aid scientific investigation and research at the University of Wisconsin for the faculty, staff, alumni and students thereof. It can prosecute and aid in application for patents. It can receive donations, gifts, bequests or assignments of inventions. It can function in the testing, development, manufacture, use and disposition of patented articles, devices and processes upon such terms and conditions and with such provision as to the application and use of earnings and proceeds as may be agreed upon.

"The corporation is without capital stock, and no dividends or pecuniary profits shall be declared or paid to the members thereof."

In a report submitted in 1932, the trustees explained the foundation's operation in this way:

"The sole purpose for which the foundation was originally created is to support and encourage the development of university research through the maintenance of definite lines of scientific study.

Dean Harry L. Russell, for 23 years dean of the College of Agriculture, was named director of the Foundation in 1930. As incorporated in 1923 by Louis Hanks, '89, Timothy Brown, '11, and Thomas Brittingham, '21, the foundation included 10 members—Evan A. Evans, '97, Charles L. Byron, '08, and George Haight, '99, Chicago; William S. Kies, '99, James F. Case '90 (deceased), and Gerhard M. Dahl, '96, New York, and Harry Butler, '89, Madison (deceased).

The foundation members, who receive no compensation, yearly elect a board of directors who also serve without remuneration. The trustees, who conduct the affairs of the foundation, and make decisions on general policy are Haight, president; Brittingham, vice president; and Hanks, secretary-treasurer. Other trustees are David A. Crawford, '05, W. S. Kies, and Timothy Brown, Madison.

WILL YOU GIVE A PINT OF "LIFE INSURANCE"?

AMERICAN NAMES—how many, no one knows—are written on the bullets, bombs and shells that the desperate enemy even now is forging. Some are names you know . . . of neighbors, friends, relatives.

If you could help save even one of these men when "his" bomb or bullet strikes . . . a man who might be your husband, son or sweetheart . . . you would, wouldn't you?

You can!

A pint of your blood will help to insure an American fighter's life—by helping to restore it.

Shipped to every fighting front in plasma form, used in thousands of emergency operations, the blood of generous civilians has already cheated death of untold victims. But the need will last as long as war does.

It's easy to pay this small insurance premium in plasma. Less than an hour of your time. No pain. Nothing to worry about. But the protection it buys is infinite in value. Every pint is a policy against needless death!

Plasma for fighters— policies for families

We hope you'll read — and heed — the message on the opposite page. You'll get a lot of satisfaction from giving blood to an unknown soldier or sailor.

Some of the same self-respect comes from guarding those you do know and love. Family risks are less apparent than those of war. But the need for family protection is just as real.

Every life insurance program ought to be reviewed regularly to keep it up to date. Perhaps yours needs a shot in the arm right now. Below is a list of people who can give you good advice.

They're alumni of your college and they talk your language. They are also trained representatives of the First Mutual Life Insurance Company Chartered in America.

Out of their experience you'll get practical suggestions. They'll help you make the most of your limited life insurance dollars—help you protect your present policies with premium loans if necessary.

Fighting Badger Mail Bag

Cardinal, was pointed out to me and I also met a Lt. Frank Sawaki, '42. He introduced himself to me thinking we had gone to school together. I told him we had gone to the same school but about ten years apart.

The whole thing was a gab fest and we had a good time. It sure was a grand feeling to run into someone from home that you don't even imagine is near here.

Letters From States the Best

"Somewhere in a pup tent, you know where"

Dear John B.,

The body politic back home can build all the USO clubs they want, but to the boys up here, it's still letters from the States that ring the bell. Your very good letter was chock full of news about the University and was very much appreciated. I feel very luxurious having a typewriter at hand and couldn't resist showing my appreciation by sending a letter your way which can authentically be described as originating "up forward".

I have just completed a hasty review of the Yale Alumni magazine (May 1943) and remain content in my belief that our publication is a leader in the field. I have also read with considerable interest the pending suit against the Wisconsin Alumni Research Foundation. If Bill Haight represents us, I know a good account will be given.

Reads Alumnus in a Slit Trench

APO 302, New York City

Dear Mr. Berge,

One issue of the Wisconsin Alumnus reached me during one of the rough phases of the campaign and I read most of that issue in between bombings, strafings, and artillery fire. You probably can guess that I read it from inside my slit trench. You know it's funny how a soldier can come to love that hole he has dug in the ground. I know mine became quite "close" to me—especially when I was in it hoping and praying that one of Jerry's eggs was not coming in with me. Those days were rough but we had a job to do and we did it.

That new Cardinal Communique is tops. No University in the country is doing as much as Wisconsin to keep their former students and alumni informed as to what is happening back home. That can be easily understood since there is no other school quite like Wisconsin. Keep up that good work back there and we'll do likewise over here. That home front-fighting front combination just can't be beat and we all know it.

No Glamour in Persia

Persia

Gentlemen,

I am very happy indeed when a quarterly arrives, recounting the activities of my classmates for the previous four months. Persia, as you probably know, lost its glamour centuries ago. A land of furnace-like deserts, barren mountains, and mud hut cities, it offers very little in the line of amusement or entertainment for the American soldier.

While our boys are doing a marvelous job of pushing supplies to Russia, there isn't any glamour in the operation. We are all hoping that the war in Europe will develop so that this supply route is no longer needed.

Mrs. Roosevelt Didn't Stay

APO 709, % PM
San Francisco, Calif.

Dear Badgers,

Enjoyed reading the July issue of the Wisconsin Alumnus very much. Sure is good to get news of the campus way down here on this island.

I left the States in May, staying at New Caledonia before coming here. Can't say where I am, but Mrs. Roosevelt waved to us as she drove by. Believe it or not, it didn't surprise us one bit to have her visit this island. I notice she didn't stay, though.

LT. BRUCE R. RASMUSSEN, '42

Sicily Isn't So Bad

Somewhere in Sicily

Dear Mr. Berge,

The July issue of the Wisconsin Alumnus came in a short time ago and was certainly welcome. I'm anxious to get on the mailing list for the "Cardinal Communique" and hope that this new APO number will bring your publications to me sooner.

We have all found Sicily a much nicer place to be than Africa, and why shouldn't we feel that way when you consider that we are now located in a city, live in a five story apartment building, have elevator service, cots to sleep on, food as good as can be expected, and a swell office in which to work. A big improvement over the bivouac days of North Africa where one did everything from cleaning his teeth to taking a bath out of his helmet. But don't get the idea that I've found a home here, the big objective is to get back to the States and in particular to Madison as soon as possible.

ALUMNI NEWS

SS Zona Gale

A Liberty ship named the SS Zona Gale slid down the ways at the Calship yards in Los Angeles, one warm day last July. The ship, the 22nd launched by the Calship corp., was named for the famous Wisconsin authoress.

Zona Gale was graduated from the University of Wisconsin in 1895. She won her M. L. in 1899, and was awarded an honorary degree in 1929. She served for many years on the university board of regents.

Miss Gale wrote the famous "Miss Lulu Bett" Pulitzer prize winner and also was the author of "Mr. Pitt," "Yellow Gents and Blue", and "Preface to Life."

She died Dec. 27, 1938.

On the Air

"Letters From Fighting Badgers", a brand new radio program sponsored by the Wisconsin Alumni Association, was officially premiered over state station WHA Saturday, Oct. 16, immediately following the Notre Dame game.

The Alumni Association office has bragged so about the interesting, inspiring and educational letters received from the Fighting Badgers, that the suggestion was made to go on the air with them, and now John Berge, executive secretary, reads excerpts from the letters in the after-the-game spot every Saturday over station WHA.

Some issue when we can turn the trick we're going to devote several pages to these letters of which we are so proud and grateful, but till then, listen to that "Letters From Fighting Badgers" program, WHA, after the football game!

Alumni in the Hawaiian Islands turned out in large numbers for Wisconsin Day in Hawaii held Saturday, Sept. 25, at Iolani Palace grounds. Jack Brown, '32, newly elected president of the Hawaii Chapter of the Wisconsin Alumni Association was in charge of arrangements and welcomed alumni serving in Hawaii in the armed forces or in war jobs.

Jack and Betty Abel Brown, '34, compiled a Wisconsin quiz for the group and Mickey McGuire, '34, famous football player, directed the quiz.

Mrs. Etta Radke Washburn, '16, secretary of the Wisconsin Alumni Association of Hawaii, spoke on behalf of the Wisconsin women in Hawaii.

An army and navy band provided music for the event and "On Wisconsin" boomed out over the palace grounds loud enough to be heard by King Liliuokalani and all the ancient chiefs of the island.

Beloit

The Beloit chapter of the Wisconsin Alumni Association is planning a directory of members, and all persons in Beloit and vicinity who have attended at least one semester at the university are asked to turn in their names and addresses to Ole Kvittle, chairman of the directory committee.

An observance of Founders' Day this winter is being planned, and Pres. Harold Sosted, '39, has announced that the chapter will aid financially with the sending of alumni publications to Wisconsin men and women in service.

So. Calif. Alumnae

Similarities between Russians and Americans include their interest in "bigger and better things", Dr. Lawrence A. Wilson, pastor of the Pasadena First Congregational church, told members of the Southern California Wisconsin Alumnae association at the September luncheon meeting.

Dr. Wilson spoke to the group on his findings about Russia when he visited there a few years ago. Miss Carolyn Gallagher, president, presided.

West Bend

The West Bend Alumni club had a party for Wisconsin alumni Saturday, Sept. 25th. "Fun" was the only admission charge, and the group enjoyed dancing, card playing, games, and refreshments.

BADGER BIGS

When Harvard University's Graduate School of Arts and Sciences was reorganized last summer, HOWARD MUMFORD JONES, '14, was named the new dean of the school. Dean Jones had been head of the English department at Harvard since 1936.

A nationally known author, educator and scholar, Jones is the author of many critical works, including, "The King in Hamlet", "The Romantic Lyric," and "Plays of the Restoration and the Eighteenth Century", as well as several books of poetry and a play.

A departure from tradition, two Associate deans have been selected from other fields of learning to assist Dr. Jones, and PAYSON SIBLEY WILD, Jr., '26, associate professor of government, is one of them. Dr. Wild is the author of Treaty Sanctions and has written, among other publications, a textbook on international law.

Prof. RALPH O. NAFZIGER, B.A. '21, M. A. '30, Ph. D. '36, now on the staff of the School of Journalism at the University of Minnesota, took an active part in the organization of Uncle Sam's official news agency, the Office of War Information. Prof. Nafziger was formerly on the staff of the School of Journalism at the University of Wisconsin.

In August, 1941, he went to Washington to gather information on the relationship of the press and foreign affairs but was sidetracked into doing some special work as a consultant for the Coordinator of Information. After Pearl Harbor he assisted in the organization of the Office of Facts and Figures.

Early in 1942 Prof. Nafziger became chief of the media division of the Office of Facts and Figures, and later that year, after the OWI was organized and had absorbed the OFF, he continued in the same post.

RICHARD KNOX BRAYTON, B. A. '27, now has the largest display rooms for decorative accessories on the west coast, Betty Cass, (Frances Elizabeth Cassell, '24) Wisconsin State Journal columnist reports. He also is the proud owner of a tall and handsome silver loving cup which was awarded him for the "finest and most practical exhibit" at the wholesale gift show last year.

Going by the name of Dick Knox, for the purpose of euphony, he also owns a new ceramics factory at Laguna Beach in which he turns out decorative table pieces, figurines, birds, cigarette boxes and other quaint pieces. Here two designers and 25 potters and decorators turn the humble lump of clay into subtle works of art.

Incidentally, Dorothy Dykstra Plummer, President Dykstra's sister, is one of the craftsmen, Russell Leidy, Dick's partner, and Cloyd Freeman, two very well known names in the ceramic industry, are the designers at Dick's Laguna Beach workshop.

WISCONSIN WOMEN

Sometime look on the masthead of Life magazine and you will see the name of CAROLINE IVERSON, '39, listed as an associate editor.

Caroline started her job on Life a little better than a year ago, and from a position of aviation researcher she has worked herself up to associate editor, has two researchers working for her and handles about all the big aviation assignments that come along.

Combining her hobby with her profession, journalism, is the recipe for Caroline's success. Flying has been her first love since she started the first CPT course given by the university in Milwaukee the summer of 1940. A little later she took up long distance flying, her longest trip being to Alaska and the Yukon Territory. Caroline is the daughter of J. E. Iverson, and Ella Schmidt Iverson, '14, Wauwatosa.

BERNARDINE FLYNN, '29, who for more than ten years has been "Sade" of the popular "Vic and Sade" soap opy, turned newscaster Sept. 20 when she began a new series over the Columbia network.

Fresh from the university but backed with good Wisconsin Players experience, Miss Flynn enjoyed a brief but satisfying career before the footlights and then jumped into really big time when she was chosen to portray the character "Sade" in the NBC sustained show. Later the show was bought by a big soap company and in 1942 it won the Chicago Federated Advertising club award as the best daytime program originating in Chicago. The fall before it was voted the best daytime program on the air by 600 radio editors.

Miss Flynn will be heard in her new role at 12:39 p.m. Mondays through Fridays. She is the wife of Maj. C. C. Doherty, U. S. Army Transport Command, and the proud mother of two small sons.

For the past ten years he has been a staff member of the Institute of Human Relations at Yale university.

FLIGHT OF THE CHIEFS by Buell H. Quain, '34

Time was when the South Sea Islands stood for paradise in the minds of worn-out business men. Clear blue waves flecked with whipped cream white gently lapped on shores of sand bleached pale by the sun, and palm trees gently swayed. It was at that time that Buell Quain, a young and brilliant zoology major at the university, traveled to the Fiji Islands and from his stay and experiences skilfully wove this charming and thrilling collection of Fiji epic poetry. Mr. Quain died early in August, 1939, at the age of twenty-seven in Brazil. The introduction to the book is written by Wisconsin's William Ellery Leonard.

REMEMBER WHEN

A really good Badger never tires of hearing tales of Wisconsin's football hero, Pat O'Dea, the "Kicking Kangaroo" from Australia.

There wasn't anything he couldn't do with a football. In his first season against Minnesota, O'Dea caught a Gopher punt, ran it back 20 yards and then drop-kicked a field goal, while on a dead run, from 42 yards out and five yards from the sidelines.

Against Chicago that year Pat drop-kicked one goal of almost 60 yards, returned one kick-off fifty yards and ran back a punt the same distance, besides sandwiching in some remarkable punting, himself.

The next fall Pat drop-kicked a goal against Northwestern which stood as the longest on record for nearly 20 years. It was from 62 yards out and near the sidelines, made in a driving blizzard!

In a game against Illinois at Milwaukee in 1899 the Kangaroo scored on a place kick, also made from the sidelines, after a fair catch, and he made it exactly 60 yards from the goal line. The ball split the air between the goal posts and sailed all of 20 yards further . . . in the air!

The tales are many and his prowess was great. When cornered by a tackler, Pat would side-step him, drop-kick a goal over the tackler's head, at almost any distance from the goal posts. The crowd loved the spectacular Australian and after a game he would get fan mail in the same prodigious amount that Frank Sinatra does now.

And then . . . the great hero disappeared. Rumor had it that he had joined some Australian troops in 1917 and was buried 'neath some unnamed cross in Soldier's Field or Flanders. Until Sept. 19, 1934, when all of a sudden he was found after twenty years, working under an assumed name in a lumber business in northeastern California, Westwood.

For the 1934 Homecoming celebration, Pat O'Dea came home, and never has there been a happier, more exciting homecoming. Wisconsin scored three victories over Illinois that day, in soccer, cross country, and football. And it was all for the long lost hero of the occasion, that greatest kicker of all time, Wisconsin's Pat O'Dea.

initions, quotations from literature, interesting incidents from famous lives, and unusual phrases. Two chapters are devoted to how to prepare speech and how to make a speech sparkle. It's good.
