★ So, until the last of our Fighting Badgers dons his civvies, we're going to keep sending that Badger spirit to our Fighting Badgers in the form of all the Alumni Association publications.

★ We know that thousands of alumni and former students are still in the armed forces. Mail means a lot to these Fighting Badgers. It is Association policy to keep sending the publications to these loyal Badgers until they come home for keeps.

★ Each membership check will help to supply our Fighting Badgers' publications, so send your check today—please. Regular membership—$4. Intermediate Membership (classes '41-'45 incl.)—$2. Sustaining membership—$10. Let's finish our job as effectively as these Fighting Badgers finished theirs.

COMBAT CANCER PREVENT POLIO

We can't put out five alarm fires with water pistols, but we can do something.

By Culver S. Bostwick, S/1c, '45

LET us face one of the greatest and most costly problems we have here in Wisconsin. Cancer and polio cost the lives of many of our state citizens each year. Thousands of dollars are spent annually on medical care for these diseases alone. Thousands of dollars more are lost in lowered productivity. This indirect expense of these diseases in our state runs into several millions of dollars a year.

Up to November first of this year over 540 cases of polio had been reported to the Wisconsin State Board of Health. This is the largest number of cases in any year since 1931 and surpasses the number of cases reported in the 1940 epidemic year. Furthermore, a quick check reveals that only four states in the union have reported more cases of polio up to November first. Obviously the polio problem remains just that, a major problem.

We can no more afford this annual economic loss than we can afford to burn down every four thousandth home or close down enough of our factories to throw every 500th worker out of a job. But what are we doing about it? We give some dimes to the March of Dimes campaign in January and tell ourselves that we in Wisconsin are doing our bit to help solve the polio question. After funds are deducted from our contributions for the therapy of our state victims, the amount left for research into the cause and cure of the disease is very small indeed. We are trying to put out a five alarm fire with a water pistol.

As a group of intelligent citizens, we Badgers have done a little better with respect to cancer. Some of the most significant research into the nature of cancer is coming from the McArdle Laboratories at the University of Wisconsin. The Women's Field Army collects other funds. Recently the governor of our state signed a bill providing an annual appropriation of $25,000 for research into cancer. But with all these measures we are still seeing the problem in a false perspective. We are unrealistically kidding ourselves into thinking we can do a major job with small time measures. Are we really saving ourselves any money in the long run?

Lots of our boys will not come home from this war because our army and navy casualties have nearly reached a million. What about the 700,000 people who have died from cancer in this country since Pearl Harbor? How about our polio crippled thousands? By 1950 they will outnumber all of our war casualties! In 1942, our ghastly war year, 163,400 persons died of cancer alone in our country. The Germans and Japs together failed to kill that many of our boys during the same period.

If We Are to Win This War on Disease

There is every reason to believe cancer can be conquered just as was atomic energy, but it is going to take lots of concerted action and sufficient funds if we are to do so. We must have the problem attacked from every conceivable angle.

Recently the papers carried news of significance in the development of a new insecticide at the University of Wisconsin. In 1940, Professor T. S. Allen of the department of Economic Entomology began studying the sabadilla plant. His study convinced him that the plant material was toxic to flies and might be a possible new insecticide. As his investigations developed, he discovered he had a problem of nomenclature right at the beginning. Dr. Norman C. Fassett and others of the department of Botany went to work and provided Dr. Allen with the classifications he needed. Before long it was necessary to determine what part of the sabadilla plant or seed was toxic; so our University

The cause and nature of diseases has always interested Culver S. Bostwick. Recently inactivated by the Coast Guard, Bostwick is now studying biological chemistry at the University of Texas. Since leaving Wisconsin in 1943, he has worked in aircraft production, as a technician in one of the Kaiser shipyards' pre-paid medical centers, in a government anti-biotic project, and as a processing chemist in a penicillin laboratory. He hopes to return to Wisconsin for graduate study eventually working into the field of anti-biotics and biological preventative.

The McArdle Memorial Institute, headquarters for all cancer research on the campus, has done some of the most significant research in the country into the nature of cancer, but the ground to be covered before all the answers to the cancer problem are discovered is tremendous. Only by viewing the problem in the light of the total picture do we realize how little has been done and how urgent is the need for further work on a larger scale.

Biochemistry department took over and after laborious work isolated the white crystals, cevadine and veratridine, which were so deadly to our insect hoards. Before Dr. Allen could state that the sabadilla had any practical uses, its toxicity on humans had to be explored; so two new groups came in to share on this project. The Wisconsin Alumni Research Foundation's biological division laboratories checked its effects on rats while the zoology department contributed its share by studying its effects on the endocrines. Finally the concentrated efforts of all these individuals and departments did what no one of them could have done effectively alone. They produced an insecticide that may be as many as one hundred or more times as powerful as D.D.T. By seeing this project in its true scope and by bringing every group into the project that was needed, this insecticide was developed. It was in the same manner that we won the round in the race to release atomic energy. It will probably be the same method which will produce our answer to polio and cancer.

We have at the University of Wisconsin the nucleus with which to build a great research machine to fight our dread diseases. But unless we alumni get busy now and organize a bold, effective program, these facilities will remain just the nucleus of an effective fighting force. Here are some of the things we alumni must do.

Let Each One of Us Take Some Direct Action Now We must visualize the scope of this problem in its true proportions in order to get an idea of the facilities and personnel needed to adequately wage this fight. A dozen men and a few laboratories might unravel the answer, but it may take another ten years. In the meanwhile 150,000 persons a year die from cancer alone. Our University must be provided with the funds necessary to make a headon attack. Our duty is to see that she gets sufficient funds to do so. There are about three million people in Wisconsin. Surely we can afford to spend a dollar a year for each person in a drive to discover and eliminate the causes of polio and cancer. We hardly dare do less. Wisconsin has led the way before, we must do it again.

We must reach our legislators and show them the need for a much increased state aid program for pure research into these diseases. We must convince our representatives that they ought to increase that $25,000 annual appropriation for cancer research at least 40 fold in justice to the citizens of our state. Our legislators must be convinced before the state will provide more adequate funds. Only by getting into action en masse can we put this project across.

In addition to a request for increased legislative aid we alumni could organize a fund campaign to be conducted in every community in the state to solicit funds to further supplement our research program at the University. Such a drive could be an effective way of bringing home to our people the story of what our University could do to rid us of these diseases. It would undoubtedly bring in thousands of dollars each year for this purpose. Just as important, each citizen in our state would once more become aware of the important position the University of Wisconsin plays in providing for the welfare of our people. Let us begin now.

Byron B. Conway, '30, has been named Wisconsin State chairman of the 1946 March of Dimes to be conducted the last two weeks in January. Mr. Conway is a Wisconsin Rapids lawyer.

The National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, sponsors of the drive, have supplied scholarships for students in physiotherapy to 16 out of the 21 enrollees in the current course at the University.

UNIVERSITY NEWS

Where Are Students to Live? New Dormitories, New Trailer Camp

The most besieged individuals on the hill are without a doubt those whose job it is to find rooms and apartments for prospective students. Early this fall the housing shortage was proclaimed critical, but by mid-November university officials were willing to look back on September as a time when housing was only beginning to be the desperate problem it is now.

Pres. E. B. Fred reported to the Board of Regents that the present freshman class has broken all records and is the largest in the history of the University. This year 3,318 freshmen are enrolled, topping any previous high by almost 200 students. Veterans are coming to Wisconsin in droves, and by second semester the university will have to change its apportioning of dormitory rooms to make space available for these A-1 priority students.

To handle the situation, both for the immediate present and for the long-term future, the following steps have been taken:

1. The Board of Regents has approved the construction of two new student dormitories which will house 650 men and 400 women, and has authorized borrowing of $2,080,000 from the state annuity fund for their construction. The women's dormitory will be located east of Elizabeth Waters hall between the carillon tower and Lake Mendota. The first of several men's dormitories will be bounded on the east by Van Hise drive, on the south by relocated Observatory drive, on the west by relocated Babcock drive, and on the north by the road serving Tripp and Adams hall. This first dormitory will house 250 men.

These buildings will be constructed by the Wisconsin University Building corp., a private non-profit corporation of state and university officials created some years ago. The loan will be amortized by room and board income from the dormitories.

2. The Board of Regents has approved a site for the 100 trailers which will soon be added to the 91 trailers now at Randall Park. The second married veterans' trailer camp will be located on the women's intramural field east of the fieldhouse and stadium. This area is bounded by Monroe street, Randall avenue, and the wooded area of Memorial Park. It will extend into the level area of Memorial Park along Monroe street. Already 125 applications have been received for the 100 trailer units which will fill the new camp.

3. The division of residence halls has announced that Adams hall which has been occupied by women this first semester, will be reconverted into a men's dormitory for the second semester. In view of the usual number of graduations and withdrawals which have always come at the close of the first semester, university officials believe that Tripp hall can be made to adequately house all the women who are now living in both Tripp and Adams. A few shifts will have to be made to other women's dormitories, but all women students now in Adams will be supplied with rooms.

4. A. W. Peterson, director of business and finance, told the Regents that the university administration is working on methods of financing a new dormitory for married veteran students to replace the trailer camps, but that nothing definite has been arranged. He also explained that the possibility of using houses now available at Badger Village, near Baraboo, for married students is still open, and that investigation is being made concerning procuring buses from the government for use in transporting students from this village to the university. The university housing bureau is at present conducting a door to door survey of the housing situation in Madison in order to find housing for veteran students.

New Buildings

Some over three million of the eight million dollars which was appropriated for university building purposes by the state legislature last year has now been specifically allocated by the Regents for use in construction as soon as possible.

In action taken on Dec. 1 the Regents made the following provisions:

1. $200,000 was allocated for the fireproofing of Bascom hall.
2. $1,950,000 was set aside for the first unit of the Memorial library to be constructed east of the present Historical library. The Regents also approved a plan whereby all accumulated library fees will be used for purchase of equipment for the new Memorial library. It is estimated that these fees will total $165,000 by the end of this fiscal year.
3. $600,000 was allotted for the new dairy building, as was specified in the total appropriation by the legislature.
4. $280,000 was allotted for an addition to the home economics building.

The Regents specified locations for the short course dormitory and for the new bacteriology building. The short course dorms will be located in the northeast corner of the men's intramural field between Kronshage hall and the residence of the dean of the college of agriculture. The 1941 legislature appropriated $200,000 for these buildings.

The bacteriology building will be on the present parking lot north of the west wing of the biochemistry building. Construction of this building has been approved by the regents but money has not yet been allocated from the post-war building fund.

The Regents also approved other university construction totalling $25,000 with the money to be taken from regular university funds. These projects include a metal building for housing of livestock used in breeding purposes on the agriculture campus, $5,000; new brooders and other equipment for the poultry department, $10,000; and remodelling of the stock pavilion to provide rooms for the department of veterinary science, $10,000.

Two new commandants on the University campus mark the return of the Army ROTC and the establishment of the Navy ROTC here.

Col. Willis S. Matthews and Capt. Jack E. Hurff are busily rounding out details of the army and navy courses which are now beginning in earnest. Each course was coordinated with the College of Engineering semester, starting therefore, Nov. 1.

Military training is compulsory for freshmen and sophomores, but university regulations allow veterans of six months army service to forego the freshman training, and veterans of a year to forego the sophomore training.

This provision makes way for veterans to enter the advanced army ROTC course directly. The advanced course is being reactivated this year in order to permit veterans to capitalize upon their war experience. Credits in ROTC apply to graduation, as they have in pre-war years.

At present the NROTC course is concerned only with former V-12 sailors here and transfers from other navy schools which have been closed down. Eventually, however, the course will be open to civilian students, and a regular major in naval science will be available.

The NROTC students will go on summer cruises, just as the Army ROTC students go to summer camps. Each will receive various financial benefits as well as a reserve commission upon completion of the course.

Army headquarters remain in the Armory, whereas the Navy is located in the mechanical engineering building and the recently released radio school quarters in a former garage on University avenue. Each course has about 575 students at the present time.

Col. Matthews and Capt. Hurff are both men of much action in World War II. Col. Matthews, a graduate of West Point, served under Gen. MacArthur in Australia,

Capt. Jack E. Hurff

New Guinea, the Solomon islands and the invasion of Luzon. He was overseas for 30 months.

Capt. Hurff, an Annapolis graduate, commanded a transport in the Atlantic from Casablanca through the Sicilian campaign, and then was transferred to the Pacific where he commanded a squadron of destroyers in the Solomons and was commander of the heavy cruiser New Orleans from the Marianas campaign through Okinawa.

WARF Buildings

Because the university will be needing all the space in Bascom hall to accommodate the ever-increasing student enrollment, the Wisconsin Alumni Research Foundation is planning to leave its present offices there sometime within the next three years and move into its own buildings.

Plans are now being formulated for the construction of a group of Research Foundation buildings in the 2400 block on University avenue. The first building to be erected will be a plant for the manufacture of vitamin D concentrate. Near this building will be constructed a four story office building and a laboratory building. The processing building will be the first to be constructed because the present quarters in a building behind the old Forest Products Laboratory are too small.

For Scholarships

Early this fall alumni in the California area received letters from Josephine Sarles Simpson, (Mrs. David), '83, which said:

"I am asking you to become a Kemper Knapp on a small scale." (Kemper Knapp recently bequeathed the bulk of his estate, amounting to two and a half million dollars, to the University.)

When answers to Mrs. Simpson's letter began to pour in, the total of the Julius Olson scholarship loan fund was greatly swelled, for alumni agreed with Mrs. Simpson that "we have no right to deprive ourselves of the pleasure of giving even a little to Old Wisconsin, which gave us so much."

Two scholarship funds are now open for contributions from alumni who wish to enable more students to be afforded the University of Wisconsin's facilities. The Julius Olson Scholarship Loan fund commemorates the late Prof. Olson of the Scandinavian languages department who fathered the whole scholarship idea at Wisconsin. The Allen Shafer Memorial Fund is a living memorial in honor of the late Allen Shafer who died so tragically after an accident on the football field a year ago.

The goal for each of these funds is $10,000. Present totals of the funds are $7,419.62 in the Olson fund, and $5,889.79 in the Shafer fund. Contributions to either fund may be sent to the Wisconsin Alumni association, Memorial Union, Madison 6, Wis. Checks made out to these funds are tax deductible.

The WISCONSIN ALUMNUS is published monthly, October through July, by the Wisconsin Alumni association and is entered as second class matter at the post office at Madison, Wis., under the act of March 3, 1879. Subscription to the ALUMNUS (included in the membership dues of the Wisconsin Alumni association) is $2. a year; subscription to non-members is $4. per year.

Gifts to UW

Gifts and grants to the University of Wisconsin during the last two months total almost $70,000.

Perhaps the most unusual of the lot came from a 4-H club in Osakis, Minn. Their gift of $12 came with the following note:

"Our 4-H club decided to give a play and send the proceeds to your university for cancer research. Enclosed is a check for same. Could I please have a receipt for this to keep my book clear?"

Other amounts accepted by the regents are as follows:

$4,500 from the United States Maltsters' association, Chicago, for the study of the quality of barley for malting purposes;

$1,400 annually for a five year period from Standard Brands, New York, for fellowships to encourage young men to study in the field of fermentation biochemistry;

$1,200 annually for a three-year period from the Pabst Brewing co., Milwaukee, to study amylolytic enzyme production by micro-organisms;

$1,000 from Holton and Hunkel Greenhouse co., for a fellowship in horticulture;

$100 from Mrs. Katherine Keating, Neenah, for use of polio patients at the Orthopedic hospital;

$3,500, annually for three years from the Nutrition Foundation, New York, for a study of amino acids requirements in the diet;

$15,000 from the International Cancer Research foundation, Philadelphia, for a study of bacteriological cell multiplication in plants;

$3,000 from Merck and co., inc. Rahway, N. J., to study the role of certain vitamins and sulfa drugs in the early nutrition of the calf;

$1,500 from Merck and co., inc., to study the nutritional requirements of micro-organisms;

$300 from the United Air Lines for the reproduction of curriculum materials in the secondary school workshop held here last summer;

$600 from the Radio Corp. of America (RCA) for a scholarship to encourage the training of students in science and radio.

The Regents also accepted a collection of 700 advanced mathematical books and periodicals, for use in the Milwaukee area, from Mrs. E. B. Van Vleck and her son, Prof. J. H. Van Vleck of Harvard university.

The collection is the library of the late Prof. Edward B. Van Vleck who served as chairman of the mathematics department from 1916 to 1929. It includes a portion of the library of his father, Prof. John Moore Van Vleck, who was a distinguished mathematical astronomer.

The Regents also accepted an herbarium consisting of 2,000 cards with specimens of plants from the late Nettie May Cook, '04. Miss Cook was a retired teacher from Spokane, Wash.

The Regents also accepted the offer of George Moffett, Queenstown, Vt., to furnish dairy cattle for continuation of a study of the transmitting ability of inbred and outbred Guernsey sires in improving the production of dairy herds.

Medical School

Honors to the Medical school have recently been received from both the United States navy and from the Veterans Administration, thereby bringing nationwide recognition to the University of Wisconsin.

A certificate of commendation was recently presented to the Medical school by the navy for the school's outstanding contribution to the war effort and to medical education. Vice Admiral Ross T. McIntyre, surgeon general of the navy, wrote, "I want you to know that the personnel of the Medical department of the navy joins me in expressing sincere appreciation of your splendid cooperation and assistance in handling our medical personnel war problem."

The Medical school has graduated 161 men for the Navy and Army during the war years.

Indirect praise of the Medical school came to the city of Madison recently when it was announced that a four and a quarter million dollar Veterans' Administration tuberculosis hospital to be located in Madison had been approved by Pres. Truman.

Rep. Robert H. Henry was advised by Gen. Omar N. Bradley's office that Madison was selected as the site for the hospital because the Veterans' Administration "considers the University of Wisconsin medical school worthy of having a Veterans' Administration hospital."

Law School

Plans are now being made by the Law school for a refresher course for lawyers who are leaving military service, Dean Oliver S. Rundell announced. The Board of Regents

Throughout each day, each season, each year the patience which characterizes the proverbial saint also characterizes William "Bill" Aspinwall, '29, business manager of athletics for the university. For, as Bill explains it, "I am here to serve the public, and without keeping patient and looking at the other person's point of view, I simply could not do my job."

A glance at the duties connected with Bill's job readily reveals a multitude of details which might easily set anybody's patience off on an hegira.

He does everything from keep up the stock of athletic equipment (yes, now that the war's over the cotton and wool goods can gradually be replaced) to arrange for the football trips (yes, each player receives a copy of the detailed itinerary).

Now that the beginning of the season rush is over and the "get-me-a-seat-on-the-fifty-yard-line" days have passed, things should be somewhat less hectic for Bill, but there are always budgets, reports, audits and minor sports to be completed.

Bill Aspinwall knows that he could injure relationships for the whole university if he didn't handle people carefully, so he practices what he preaches, keeps his "mad" inside on occasions, and laughs at things the rest of the time.

has appropriated $3,000 to finance the new course.

It is hoped that a four or six-week course can be offered at the start of the second semester. Between 400 and 500 Wisconsin lawyers were in service, many of them having entered the armed forces immediately after receiving their law degrees. The proposed course should fill a real need among law school graduates.

Faculty Returnees

Action by the board of Regents resulted in reappointment of eight professors who have been on leave from the university for military and government service.

Already at their posts on the faculty are Carl A. Brandly, professor of veterinary science, who has been in government service, most recently at Harvard university; Dr. Joseph W. Gale, professor of surgery, who has been in the army; Dr. John E. Bentley, associate professor of clinical medicine, who has been in the army; Charles V. Seastone, professor of medical bacteriology, who has been in military service; Louis Kaplan, assistant professor and reference librarian, who has been in the navy; and Robert D. Specht, assistant professor of mathematics, who has been in the navy.

James S. Watrous, association professor of art history, and Nathan P. Feinsinger, professor of law, are both returning for the second semester. Watrous has been in the navy and Feinsinger has been in government service in Washington.

See and Hear

Three Wisconsin educators have turned journalists and are now the editors of the pocket-size monthly magazine, See and Hear, the Journal on Audio-Visual Learning.

The three men are C. J. Anderson, dean of the School of Education, John Guy Fowlkes, dean of the Summer Session, and Walter A. Wittich, director of the bureau of visual instruction.

The idea for this publication was formulated about two years ago and actual appearance of the magazine grew from an intense desire by the three educators to make the University of Wisconsin the focal point of research and professional participation in the field of teaching with films.

This new and very readable publication differs from others in its class because it comes from the teacher rather than from the manufacturer of educational films. Primarily it will deal with the place and use of existing and developing means and methods of visual instruction.

Faculty Committees

The transition from war to peace was marked by the faculty when a new committee was added to the usual roster. This year the new standing committee of faculty members will deal with special educational problems of war veterans.

Prof. Henry A. Pochmann is chairman of this committee, Alden White is secretary, and members include Profs. Vincent E. Kivlin, Philip G. Fox, A. L. Gausewitz, G. L. Meloche, E. E. Milligan, M. J. Musser, H. A. Ramsperger, and L. F. Van Hagen.

Two other committees of timely importance which were appointed last year for the first time are the special war history committee of which Prof. C. V. Easum is chairman, and the university Centennial committee of which Prof. W. H. Kiekhofer is chairman.

On Nazi Blacklist

Prof. Edmond I. Zawacki

According to a Nazi list discovered recently in Poland, Prof. Edmond I. Zawacki might not have been with the University of Wisconsin very long if the Nazis had conquered America.

The list upon which Zawacki's name was included marked about 100 Americans whom the Nazis intended to liquidate as soon as they achieved victory over this country.

Also mentioned on the list was Dr. Kazimierz Strzemienski, a former faculty member here.

Apparently the Nazis considered these two men among the most dangerous of the Polish anti-Nazis and consequently placed their names on the "blacklist".

Prof. Zawacki, formerly an instructor at the English language college at Warsaw, Poland, said that he probably was placed on the blacklist because of a conversation he had in 1934 on the German liner Europa, with Miss Lottie Kuemmel, who was traveling back to Poland after spending a year organizing the German American Volksbund.

Zawacki had expressed criticism of conditions in Germany, later learning that Miss Kuemmel and all the ship's officers were hostile to his point of view. At the time he was extremely aware of this hostility, and even feared for his life.

Prof. Zawacki is chairman of the slavic languages department.

Dr. Strzemienski was an agricultural chemist in the soils department from 1941 to 1943. He left to become secretary to the Polish consulate at Wellington, N. Z.

Alumni reading the January 5 issue of the Saturday Evening Post will find interest in the article on the city of Madison which will appear there. Beautiful color illustrations will show portions of the campus and other parts of the city, and a large section of the article itself will deal with the University of Wisconsin.

An article featuring the University's Randall Park trailer village will appear in the February issue of Mademoiselle. Photographs will show Mayor and Mrs. Clifford Hicks and life in their trailer.

New Faculty

Several new faculty members have been appointed since the start of the fall semester.

Dr. William B. Sarles, '26, associate professor of agricultural bacteriology, has been made half-time assistant to Pres. Edwin B. Fred. This new appointment, requested by Pres. Fred, involves also a promotion to a full professorship.

Prof. Sarles has just been released from the navy where he held the rank of commander and was stationed in Washington, D. C.

Sarles received three degrees from the university his bachelor's in 1926, his master's in 1927, and his doctor's degree in 1931.

A member of the American Society of Bacteriologists, Sarles has worked in the fields of sterilization of dairy equipment, fermentation of cellulose at high temperatures, and root nodule bacteria and leguminous plants.

Dr. Mark Stahmann, '41, formerly of Rockefeller Research Foundation, New York, has come to the campus to serve as a research associate in the biochemistry department.

Originally scheduled to start at Wisconsin on Jan. 1, Stahmann came here earlier to take over the work of Prof. Karl Paul Link who has been ill. Stahmann is a well-known biochemist and received his Ph. D. degree here in 1941.

Knut Johanssen, a graduate of the University of Oslo, has arrived at the university

Faculty Author

Prof. Jerome H. Buckley

WILLIAM ERNEST HENLEY by Prof. Jerome H. Buckley. Princeton University Press. $2.75.

This scholarly biography is the first to evaluate Henley's life and work, to relate him to the complex cultural milieu of late Victorian England. Prof. Buckley has received excellent reviews in publications all over the country. Buckley interprets Henley's activity as the most influential editor of his day in terms of the "activist" philosophies of his time.

to serve as a graduate assistant in the Scandinavian language department. He came from Norway on the recommendation of Aasta Stene, lecturer in Scandinavian and acting head of the department.

Marine Lt. John J. Walsh has arrived back in the States and expects to be out of service soon. His duties as boxing coach are being handled by DeWitt Portal, who came to Wisconsin from San Jose college this fall.

RESEARCH

Wartime research which went on under a lid of military secrecy in University of Wisconsin laboratories now receives its well-earned spot-light, and for the first time some of the major projects undertaken by Wisconsin scientists and engineers can be revealed.

Nitrate Research

Behind the mining and metallurgy building stands a huge locked shed, out of which fumes have continually poured indicating alone that there might be some curious goings-on within.

Inside this shed was conducted successful experimentation on the conversion of nitrogen in the air into fertilizer and explosives—a process which promises to become one of the great industries of the world.

Although the actual conversion of nitrogen in the air is not an original development at Wisconsin, the simplified method by which results are accomplished has been worked out here. Prof. Farrington Daniels of the chemistry department has been in charge of the project, and during his absence from the campus for work with the government, the work has been supervised by William G. Hendrickson, research chemist for the Wisconsin Alumni Research Foundation.

The original idea was conceived by Dr. Frederick G. Cottrell, chemical research consultant of California, and Nathan Gilbert conducted three years of early research on it here in the university laboratory under Daniels' direction.

This nitrogen conversion is known popularly through the Muscle Shoals plant in Tennessee chiefly. Hendrickson, when questioned about the Muscle Shoals plant and the Wis. process, explains, "The method developed at the university will be appreciably cheaper than any other known method of nitrogen fixation."

An outstanding feature of the new method is its suitability to small units which can be located in advantageous spots, operated economically, and constructed easily. The saving in shipping and hauling plus that involved in the actual process will be great.

Prof. Kenneth M. Watson

Patents on the Wisconsin process are held by the Wisconsin Alumni Research Foundation which financed the extended research development after the university carried it into the laboratory stage. Profits on the patents are turned back to the university to finance further research.

Nitrogen consumption of a country during peacetime is said to be a fair measure of its prosperity. This country has consumed more than half a billion pounds annually in mining, road building, quarrying, and clearing land for cultivation as far back as 20 years ago. Under the Wisconsin process a furnace about as big around as a silo and a third as tall will produce 25 tons of calcium nitrate a day, a fertilizer with a retail value of approximately $40 a ton.

Synthetic Rubber

A small scale butadiene plant in the chemical engineering building is now giving engineers information which will improve the design and operation of synthetic rubber plants throughout the country.

This butadiene research is being conducted by Prof. Kenneth M. Watson of the department of chemical engineering.

In 1940 when it became apparent that vast quantities of synthetic rubber might become immediately vital to the United States, synthetic rubber plants were set up, "designed almost entirely by guess-work," according to Prof. Watson. "At the university we are now doing what it was impossible to do before the war. In many cases, the plants will have to be redesigned, and at best, many need changes in operating or manufacturing procedures."

The most important problem is to conserve butene, the raw material from which both butadiene and an important constituent of aviation gasoline are obtained. At present the University of Wisconsin is the only institution undertaking research in this field and so the results obtained here are being utilized by the entire group of manufacturers. The research here is sponsored by the Rubber Reserve company, a government agency under the Reconstruction Finance corporation.

High Explosive Fuels

Another project handled by the School of Engineering is one involving comparative studies of high explosives fuels, with the hope that as a result of their findings better high-explosive fuels for postwar automobile and airplane engines can be developed.

Prof. L. A. Wilson of mechanical engineering and Prof. Kenneth M. Watson of chemical engineering are working with two graduate students, Phillip Myers and Otto Uye-hara, on this project under a $53,000 grant from the Wisconsin Alumni Research Foundation.

"We are making a study of fuels, particularly in regard to their molecular structure and the combustion process," explained Myers, "studying the temperature and pressure of the exploding gases within the cylinder."

Because the poor combustion of diesel engines at high speeds presents a problem in loss of potential speed and power, these Wisconsin engineers hope to perfect a fuel more efficiently combustible. At the present time Diesel engines are not used in aircraft because the weight of a diesel engine obtaining high enough horsepower is too great.

Myers explained that as a result of the research being conducted a higher horsepower-weight ratio might be obtained, thus broadening the scope of use of the diesel engine. "Now we're even expanding our work on spark-ignition engines and their fuels, so perhaps we'll be improving performance of both types," Myers stated.

The instrument which the Wisconsin engineers have worked out to secure recordings of fluctuations of temperature and pressure within the cylinder of an engine which is running, is the only one of its kind in existence. It will take a continuous temperature recording from the time the fuel within the cylinder starts to burn until it stops.

TNT Chemicals

One project now no longer critical which was studied on the campus for 18 months involved the production of chemicals used in TNT manufacture. This project, done by the chemical engineering department, was conducted by the Office of Production Research and Development, helping American manufacturers obtain the necessary materials for TNT and rubber from petroleum rather than from coal tar, a relatively scarce substance.

Prof. Watson explained that the great bulk of chemicals needed now are being obtained from petroleum, a much more abundant source than coal tar.

Berge Visits Eastern Clubs

Wisconsin Alumni Club of Washington, D. C., Banquet meeting, Nov. 16, 1945.

Five alumni clubs throughout the east heard John Berge, executive secretary of the Wisconsin Alumni association, at their November meetings, when Berge made a speaking trip in connection with the Navy-Wisconsin game on Nov. 17.

Climaxed by a banquet of Washington, D. C. alumni on the Friday night before the game, the trip included luncheon meetings with the Buffalo Alumni club on Nov. 13, with the Pittsburgh club on Nov. 14, with the Philadelphia club Nov. 15, and an organizational dinner meeting in Baltimore also on Nov. 15.

Among those in attendance at the Washington, D. C. banquet were a number of Wisconsin men in Congress, including the two Wisconsin senators, both University alumni, Robert LaFollette and Alexander Wiley.

George E. Worthington, '10, president of the Washington, D. C. club, presided at the banquet and handled the arrangements for the affair.

Thomas Holgate, '40, was in charge of the organizational meeting in Baltimore.

Washington Lawyers

Washington, D. C. alumni of the Law School gave a dinner last month in honor of Lloyd K. Garrison commemorating his service as dean of the Wisconsin Law School. Justice Wiley Rutledge of the Supreme court spoke, and a watch and testimonial scroll were presented to Garrison by Mrs. Virginia COLLINS Duncombe, '38, spokesman of the group. Clark BYSE, '38, was toastmaster.

Law school faculty members and former faculty members who were present at the dinner were Prof. J. A. BEUSCHER, '30, Prof. Charles Bunn, Prof. Nathan Feinsinger,

Milwaukee Alumnae Greet '45 Women

Mary Louise Freyermuth, president of the Women's Division of the Milwaukee Alumni Club, Mrs. Richard Krug, director of the Wisconsin Alumni association, and Mrs. Willard Huppert, vice-president of the Milwaukee club greet May graduates at tea.

Recent alumnae of the university were guests of the women's group of the Milwaukee Alumni club at a tea held on Nov. 17 at the College Women's club in Milwaukee.

New York Alumni

Any Badgers now in or near New York who are interested in joining the reviving alumni group there are urged to contact Miss Helen R. Ulrich, 393 Seventh ave., New York City.

A group of about 25 alumnae from the more recent classes have been meeting for luncheons this fall, and they are hoping to reestablish a regular alumni club for men as well as for women. Miss Ulrich can be reached at Lackawanna 4-0780.

Racine and Kenosha

Two alumni clubs, those of Racine and Kenosha, held a special joint meeting at the Racine Elks club on December 5 to hear William J. Hagenah, father of the new campus expansion plan, explain the program and disclose the model of the proposed expanded lower campus.

W. G. Aschenbrener, president of the Racine club, presided at the meeting, and David G. Phillips, president of the Kenosha group, arranged for the attendance of the Kenosha delegation.

Superior

Members of the Superior Alumni club honored Coach Harold "Bud" Foster of the Wisconsin basketball team at a dinner in the Androy hotel, Superior, on Nov. 17. A smoker was held before the dinner.

Foster visited Superior in connection with the Wisconsin Interscholastic Athletic association basketball and boxing clinic where the basketball squad and a group of Badger boxers presented a public demonstration.

Laurie Carlson, president of the club, announced that arrangements for the smoker-dinner were handled by Roland Amundson, chairman and Ed Conley, Jr., Harvey Buchanan, William Finn, Barney Barstow, Leonard Moran, L. R. McPherson and Harvey Sargent. Judge Carl Daley was toastmaster at the dinner.

UW Foundation's Executive Director

William J. Hagenah
Handles New Post

WILLIAM J. HAGENAH, '03, active and prominent alumnus of the University and father of the new plan for expansion of the lower campus, will serve as executive director of the University of Wisconsin Foundation. As executive director Mr. Hagenah will plan, manage, and direct the foundation's solicitation of gifts for the great post-war development program of the university which he was instrumental in initiating. His keen interest in the University's welfare will provide the enthusiasm which is needed to spark the current drive for gifts and bequests in the Centennial campaign.

Earlier this fall the so-called Hagenah plan for expansion of the lower campus was revealed to interested alumni and supporters of the University. Now Hagenah's appointment as executive director of the Foundation marks the beginning of a widespread campaign for the execution of the many ideas which he has fostered. His appointment falls in line with the policies of both the University of Wisconsin Foundation and the Wisconsin Alumni Association, to establish a greater university by the time of the University's centennial which will come in the academic year of 1948-49.

Hagenah's record as a lawyer, a corporation executive, and a public utility expert mark him one of Wisconsin's most outstanding alumni. A graduate of the university in 1903 and of the Law school in 1905, Hagenah's career has taken him all over the United States, Brazil, Mexico, and the West Indies for consultation in the field of public utilities. He has spent many years making appraisals and rate studies of gas, telephone, traction, electric, and water utilities for municipalities and corporations.

At present he is serving as chairman of the Schering corporation, Bloomfield, N. J., makers of endocrine and pharmaceutical preparations. This company is a German owned one which has been taken over by the United States government as alien property in this country. Hagenah has been acting as its head for the government since 1942, and has been on leave from the presidency of the Public Utility Engineering and Service corporation, a service company for the operating units of the Standard Gas System. From 1931 to 1938 Hagenah served as counsel for the Standard Gas and Electric company and its subsidiaries.

Hagenah's interest in and support of the University has been of long standing. For a number of years he has given funds to maintain a scholarship for deserving students in the Law school.

The purpose and program of the University of Wisconsin Foundation has been outlined in a booklet entitled, "Your Help is Needed Now—in 1945" which is being distributed through the foundation offices at Madison. The establishment of this organization is an outgrowth and development of a resolution passed by the Wisconsin Alumni Association in 1941, pledging itself "to the task of promoting specific gifts and bequests to the University."

Guest Editorial

"Friends of the University of Wisconsin should approve the plan recently outlined by the Wisconsin Alumni Association for the solicitation of private funds to finance certain physical improvements on the school's campus.

For a time it seemed to some that the acknowledgements of the university and its quasi-official spokesman toward the legislature for the $8,000,000 building fund appropriated this year were too grudging.

The university had asked for more money, it will be recalled. The governor endorsed the university's proposals. The legislative finance committee took a more cautious view of state financial abilities, however, than did the executive office, and cut down the appropriations proposed by the governor. Because the university had been put down for the largest figure, its cuts were also the largest. To judge from some of the commentaries, the legislature had ignored the university altogether, although the sum granted was larger than any other legislature at one sitting had ever made available to the school.

The Alumni Association in its recent proposal to raise $5,000,000 from private sources takes a more constructive approach. It acknowledges its appreciation of the substantial contribution made out of public money. It points out that the university doubtless has enough friends, that the university's expansion plans have a sufficient economic importance to business and industrial groups in the state and outside the state, to make it possible to obtain additional building funds from sources other than the state treasury.

The new alumni Foundation has already made progress in soliciting private funds for loan and scholarship benefits to poor but worthy students. If it wants a precedent for seeking building endowments, it can find one at a sister school, Ohio State University at Columbus. There a building foundation has contributed strategically to the state university's development by seeking funds from private sources."—Green Bay Press Gazette.

BACK THE FOUNDATION

The training season is over and it's time to roll up our sleeves and get to work. For some time the Wisconsin Alumni Association has been getting ready to do its share in building a greater University. Our membership has tripled, new alumni clubs have been organized, and Association services have been expanded to make our organization increasingly effective as the strong right arm of the University. Most of these new activities will also help to make the University's Centennial in 1949 a red-letter event.

While all these activities deserve your support, there is one project that merits special attention during the next three years: the fund raising program of the University of Wisconsin Foundation.

Five Million Dollars

The Foundation's Centennial goal is a fund of five million dollars for a greater University. Since the University will celebrate its hundredth birthday on February 5, 1949, this means that we have just three years to do this job. It's unquestionably one of the biggest jobs ever tackled by Wisconsin alumni, but it is also the most important.

This fund raising program is a logical feature of the University's Centennial. It offers alumni and friends of the University an opportunity to commemorate this event with suitable bequests and memorials. One hundred years of outstanding service to the state and nation deserves such recognition.

Funds raised in this campaign will not supplant the biennial appropriations made by the legislature. Instead, these contributions and bequests will supplement the funds provided by the state so that the special projects thus financed will increase the scope and value of the University's appropriations. Prominent in this list is an auditorium seating four or five thousand—a place suitable for the large gatherings that are a vital feature in campus life. Such meetings are now being held either in the stock pavilion or in the Field House—both hopelessly inadequate for the University's needs. The only building on the campus suitable for student meetings or convocations is the Union Theatre. Fine as it is, this theatre, with a seating capacity of 1,296, is much too small for present needs.

A building for the scores of institutes now being held annually on the campus is another Foundation objective. Last year's food conference, sponsored by the School of Commerce, had to be transferred to Milwaukee because no place was available on the campus to take care of the hundreds of Wisconsin people attending this institute. Such a building would fill a long-felt need on our campus.

War Memorial

Foundation plans also call for a suitable memorial in honor of the gallant Badgers who served in World War II, as well as in earlier wars. During the war that just ended, nearly five hundred Wisconsin alumni made the supreme sacrifice so that universities like ours might continue their work in education, research and public service. To all these gallant Badgers we owe a debt of gratitude that can never be fully repaid. We can, however, indicate our appreciation for their services and sacrifices through a suitable memorial. Such a memorial is one of the first projects that will be sponsored by the University of Wisconsin Foundation.

In future issues we shall give complete details of all the various projects which will be sponsored by the University of Wisconsin Foundation. All these projects have been selected after a careful analysis of the University's needs. Right now, however, let us remember that these various projects are your projects and need your support.

The University of Wisconsin Foundation was developed by the Wisconsin Alumni Association to meet specific, definite University needs—urgent needs that must be met if Wisconsin is to remain a great University. Each year these needs have become more and more self-evident. Each year it has become increasingly clear that the funds appropriated by the legislature were inadequate to meet the University's growing needs.

Back the Foundation

The Foundation is our baby and it's our job to see that it gets the necessary nourishment for healthy growth. Many of its officers and directors are also officers and directors of the Wisconsin Alumni Association. This insures teamwork between the two organizations; cooperation that is highly essential in raising a sum as large as five million dollars.

The close tie-up between the Association and Foundation also emphasizes our obligation as members of the Wisconsin Alumni Association. As Association members it's up to us to carry out the primary objective of our organization as expressed by its founders on June 26, 1861: "to promote, by organized effort, the best interests of the University of Wisconsin." This new Foundation provides a splendid opportunity for this "organized effort."

However, it is more than an opportunity. It is also a responsibility. As loyal graduates of the University of Wisconsin, we can carry out this responsibility by backing the Foundation and its program of activities. Through this support we can each do our share to maintain Wisconsin's leadership among American universities. Wisconsin needs your support NOW—JOHN BERGE.

B-24 Book By Badger

B-24 fliers in Europe all know about one more Wisconsin product—the tactical manual which they used.

Fighting Badger and ex-Hares-footer Warren E. Alberts, '38, supervised the preparation of the manual which standardized operational procedures for all B-24s. In the early part of 1942 the lack of uniformity in operational procedures resulted in high personnel losses, so Alberts worked on the problem and the result of his work is the SOP manual which has been in use since then. Problems covered in the manual include take-off, assembly, formation, bombing, and communication. He fostered prebriefing and target study and helped establish the system of lead crews.

Now Alberts has put aside the silver oak leaves he wore as lieutenant colonel in the air corps and with 179 points and 1,200 military flying hours to his credit, plus the Legion of Merit, Bronze star, Croix de guerre, and the order of the British empire, he is back in Waukesha as a civilian.
