Amateurish Hitches Lacking In Edwin Booth Production

By P. H. J.

When one realizes that the three plays presented last evening by Edwin Booth society were directed, produced, and acted without professional aid, one must admit that their presentation was worth while to the large crowd which turned out.

Although "Pokey" was the play containing the laughs, the last offering, John Drinkwater's tragedy, "A Night of the Trojan War," was easily the most successful and the best handled piece of the evening. Directed by Ralph Scheinplug '23, the play, although it possessed none of the difficulties which a larger cast involves, ran along smoother and presented itself better than either of the first two offerings. This probably was because tragedy is easier to act and because of the excellent material furnished by Drinkwater.

Lawrence Norem as Salvius, and Laurens Hastings as Pronax, were convincing and quite fitted to the parts, while Capys, played by Harold Bentson, and Illus, by Cyrus Minshall were equally successful and well played.

Mention must be made concerning the celerity and ease with which this four part play was staged. No amateurish hitches marred the change from scene to scene, a thing highly desirable in the presentation of a tragedy to a

President Sparks To Speak Monday At Special Convo

Expected to Deliver Address at Phi Kappa Phi
Initiation

Dr. Edwin Earle Sparks, president emeritus of Pennsylvania State college, will address a special convocation in Music hall on Monday afternoon at 3:30. He is widely known as a speaker and educator, and was a member of the Philadelphia commission, which visited the university officially several years ago.

He is regent-general of Phi Kappa Phi, honorary fraternity, and is expected to give the principal address at the initiation banquet of that organization while he is in Madison.

"President Sparks is an unusually interesting and effective speaker," said Prof. A. P. Haake, of the faculty convocations committee. "He is particularly interested in college men and women and has a message of tremendous importance to them."

Since giving up active educational work, Dr. Sparks has devoted his time largely to traveling, speaking and executive work with organizations with which he is connected. He is on his way east after a trip to the Pacific coast stopping at various universities and colleges on the way.

Summer School to Open on June 26; New Bulletin Ready

The twenty-fourth summer session of the University of Wisconsin will open on June 26 this year. The session, which is six weeks long, will close on August 4, except in the law school, where the session lasts 10 weeks, beginning June 19 and closing on August 25.

A bulletin containing detailed information regarding courses, fees, requirements, and can now be obtained at the registrar's office.

The regular registration day has been set for June 24, and lectures and recitations, contrary to former practice, will begin on the first day of the session, June 26.

The fees are $22 for the six-week session and $35 for the 10-week session of law.

NEARING CAUSE OF NEW FIGHT

Starts Student-President Controversy at Clark University

Scott Nearing, radical lecturer, recent storm center of Wisconsin's open forum controversy, has again precipitated a student-president discussion of free speech, this time at Clark university, Worcester, Mass.

President W. W. Atwood, of Chase, began the controversy by interrupting a speech of Nearing in the university assembly hall, on March 14, and dismissing the meeting. He had previously given permission to the Clark Liberal club to hold the meeting and charge admission.

Part of the audience went to a nearby fraternity house, where Nearing completed his address on "Control of Public Opinion," in which he claimed that the dominant influences of society, to protect themselves, get control of opinion-creating forces.

"I closed the meeting because there were so many of our undergraduates present," said Dr. Atwood. "I naturally would feel a responsibility for their hearing further statements such as were being made by the speaker."

A protest meeting on the following day led by the senior president and other campus leaders denounced the action of the president, and the campus was flooded with quotations from national leaders supporting free speech. The will of the founder of the university, Jonas G. Clark, stipulating intellectual freedom for the university was also quoted. Membership in the Liberal club increased from 30 to 150.

President Birge Injured in Fall

Pres. E. A. Birge was confined to his bed Friday as the result of injuries sustained when he slipped and fell on the icy steps of Science hall about noon Thursday.

President Birge was not seriously hurt by the fall but his hip was painfully bruised and his physician advised him to remain in bed a few days. He will probably be at his office in Bascom hall by the first of the week.

FARM JOURNAL FLAYS FACULTY FOR RESEARCH

"Wisconsin Farmer" Criticizes
Professors for Not Teaching Frosh

CARDINAL EDITS CITED

Charging that university professors use time paid for by the state for their own individual gain, writing books and doing research work, and that the editorial policy of The Daily Cardinal is "faculty inspired," the Wisconsin Farmer yesterday printed a scathing article "What's Wrong With Wisconsin University?" written by E. R. McIntyre, editor.

The Wisconsin Farmer is an agricultural journal, with a circulation of approximately 90,000 in the state. Mr. McIntyre was formerly an assistant in the department of agricultural journalism.

Cardinal Independent

"The statement that Cardinal editorials are 'faculty inspired' is ridiculous," declared Sterling Tracy '22, chief editorial writer, last night. "The Cardinal policy is for high standards and is entirely on the initiative of the staff."

"These professors write books, publish them, and then compel the students to purchase them as textbooks," the article declares.

"These books were written while the authors were paid to instruct classes in the university; books written in offices furnished by the state, on paper supplied by the state, and typed by stenographers employed by the state. Is that following out the spirit of the appropriation for educational and administrative purposes?"

"These distinguished men are the lodestone that attracts the students and makes the university great. But the students, except on rare occasions, fail to come in contact with them."

Charges Incompetency.

"The instructional work is left to others, mainly instructors, assistant professors, graduate students, attracted to Wisconsin by promise of a small monetary recompense for a few hours each week, with plenty of time left that they may devote to further research work and higher study for their own personal gain; a class of instructors that have no experience in teaching, who could not obtain a teacher's license under the requirement of the state superintendent of schools. These men and women are

SHIFTERS AGAIN

SOMEBODY had handed us a clipping from a very conservative newspaper which gives some interesting facts about this erstwhile organization. The article is quite long, contains all the dope about the organization and gives lots of statistics concerning the various activities. Seven of our staff are boiling the squib down, and we are glad to announce that we shall have it ready for our readers in a day or two. Watch for it.

HEINZ RUBEL'S latest line concerns the trip of his grandfather and mother to Paris, on which occasion the grandfather in a joking way pushed the old lady off the top railing of the Eiffel tower.

HEINZ says that this accounts partly for the trace of insanity or coo-cootivity evidenced by the grandmother in her later years.

Male Dancers
To Be Pictured
In 1923 Badger

Glad in filmy and colorful costumes, in poses of the classic Greeks, Wisconsin's stalwart youth will appear in the 1923 Badger, presenting the kidnapping of Helen of Troy. Miss Margaret H'Doubler's efforts with the "sterner sex" have proved so successful that in the grace and form displayed in the five diffused art scenes, they vie with the most aesthetic Orchestus can boast.

Helen herself would "get a thrill" of her issshretasohrdlusuhuh tion of her irresistible charms, to say nothing of "being surrounded" by such campus celebrities as "Bill" Purnell, "Ken" Fagg, and "Larry" Norem depicting Hector and his Greek heroes. Not only do these versatile youths portray with dramatic poise the Greek warriors, but Greek maidens come within the scope of their art.

"Armo virumque cano!" wrote Virgil of the "prudent Ulysses." But, it is wondered, would words have failed him had he seen the twentieth century Apollo, he of dramatic fame, exquisite in the garb of the Greek sun god? Yes, that means dear old Ralph!

Injured Parader
Better; Loses Toe

T. Delbert Jones '22, who was injured in the Engineers' parade last Saturday is improving rapidly but he will not be able to attend classes for at least another week, according to a report from the hospital today. Jones caught his foot in the tread of one of the caterpillar tractors in the parade. It was so badly crushed that it was necessary to amputate one of his toes. It is believed, however, that the injury will not result in permanent disability.

John Lyons, Fireman at City Water Plant, Ends 24 Years Of Service For City Today

Employees of Department to Present Veteran City Employee With Gold Watch; Supt. L. A. Smith to Make Presentation Address

John Lyons, for 24 years fireman at the city pumping station, has resigned his position with the city, it was announced by Supt. L. A. Smith of the water department today. His resignation takes effect today.

Employees of the pumping station and water department have bought a gold watch for Mr. Lyons, and will present it to him at 4 o'clock this afternoon when he terminates his services with the city.

"The veteran city employee brings to a close 24 years of faithful service to the city of Madison," Mr. Smith, who will give a brief talk at the plant in presenting the watch to Mr. Lyons, said today. "He came to us when we were using the old hand-fired boilers, when every bit of coal and ashes had to be wheeled away. He remained to see the city install the under-feed type of boiler, and then the Murphy furnaces, which do away with all of that manual labor."

My Lyons will retire from active work, according to Supt. Smith, and the city will lose a valuable and efficient employee.

Mrs. Bertha Sinclair Cowan, better known by her pen name, B. M. Bower, and her husband, "Bud."

B. M. Bower, author of "Chip of the Flying U," is really Mrs. Bertha Sinclair Cowan, wife of R. A. "Bud" Cowan. And "Bud" is the hero of that novel. Cowan for ten years held the roping championship of three western states and at one time was a celebrated Indian fighter. Two years ago while searching southwestern Nevada for fiction material Cowan and his wife stumbled across rich copper, lead and silver claims. Now Mrs. Cowan has the distinction of being the only woman mine president in the west.

Siamese Twins Death Leaves Legal Tangle

Is Boy Son of One or Both of Twins, Is Question

CHICAGO—The death of Rosa and Josefka Blazek, the "Siamese Twins" has left the Cook county probate court with a legal problem which apparently is unprecedented in determining the disposition of the $100,000 estate of the twins the court must decide if 11 year old Franz is the son of one or of both of the twins.

A controversy has resolved itself into the question:

"Were Rosa and Josefka Blazek one individual personality or did they constitute separate entities?"

If they were one personality, the son will inherit the entire fortune accumulated by the twins. If they were two distinct personalities, Rosa being the mother and Josefka the aunt, only Rosa's half of the estate would go to the lad.

Physicians say there are physiological facts to support both contentions and attorneys agree that a legal opinion must be based upon a scientific analysis of the bodies. Decision concerning disposition of the bodies has been deferred pending word from the father in Czechoslovakia.

If the father does not desire to have the bodies returned to the homeland, the brother says he is willing that some local university be given an opportunity to make an examination.

STAR-GAZING IS PROMISED AGAIN FOR WEDNESDAY

Observatory Opens to Public; Grad Student in Charge

The Washburn observatory will be open again to the public at 7:30 next Wednesday night. Since Prof. G. C. Comstock, who has been at home with a sprained ankle for several weeks, will not be able to supervise the work at the observatory for at least a week, Howard Eaton, graduate student in economics and astronomy, will take charge of the telescope.

Eaton has always been interested in astronomy, and although his chief interest has been in the economic field, he is still making astronomy his foremost hobby, and can answer any questions the public may wish to know regarding the conditions of the celestial world.

The weather man, Eric Miller, is doubtful as to what the conditions of the atmosphere for next Wednesday will be. It is more apt to be cloudy than clear this time of the year, and partly cloudy weather would spoil good observation, according to Miller. The week's cloudiness may turn into sunshine, however, and give the anxious star gazers a chance to satisfy their curiosity.

Uniform Style For Graduation Gowns

Uniform collars, a uniform length of gowns 10 inches from the floor, and black shoes and stockings were the decisions made in regard to commencement gowns at the Blue Dragon meeting in Lathrop parlors yesterday noon. Through this uniformity it is hoped that the caps and gowns will add more dignity than in previous years when all kinds of collars and shoes as well as gowns of all lengths have been worn.

The Blue Dragon banquet will be held as early as possible in May in Lathrop parlors, so that it will not have its attendance cut down by the greater number of meetings and parties which take place just before commencement. Ninety cents is the limit set for the cover cost.

The report of the treasurer showed that Blue Dragon gave $50 to the cooperative house and $10 to the Charter street house. Approximately 200 senior women have paid their dues. Whatever money remains in the treasury at the close of the year was decided to be given to the senior chimes fund.

A motion was passed that Ima Winchell, president of Blue Dragon, appoint committees to plan a way of alumnae organization until the first reunion which will be held five years after graduation.

Stunt Night Given By Pythia Initiates

A stunt night was given by the newly initiated members of Pythia at a meeting last night. The program, which was in charge of Edith Erickson '23, consisted of "take offs" on college society.

Two girls, looking over the pictures of a kodak book, introduced the characters who entered as they were being discussed. The mannish girl, the girl from New York, a typical landlady, an esthetic dancer, and the tea hound and his lady friend, the flapper, acted their parts in the play.

"Is it any wonder then that 700 of the students were dropped from the university rolls at the end of the first semester and, according to well authenticated report, fully one-fourth of the entire university registration was placed on probation?"

Student "Nuisances"

"That the majority of the students thus dropped were freshmen is not surprising to one who has investigated the situation and the temperament of the faculty handling these students. Elimination is the only method possible to remove 'the nuisances' that one professor informed me 'interfered with his personal research and study.'"

The article quotes the recent resolution of the engineering faculty, which deplored "the practice of engaging undergraduate students of junior as well as senior rank for instructional work in the fundamental courses of the university." "Seven hundred freshmen students," the article concludes, "the cream of the graduates of the Wisconsin preparatory schools, dropped and marked 'inefficient' by these men because they were not given the proper care and attention by those really employed and paid for by the state to look after their interests, but were left to the care and supervision of hirelings, designated by the resolution of the college of engineering as 'immature instructors.'"

Cardinal Quoted

A quotation from the editorial column of The Daily Cardinal which is alleged to be "faculty inspired," is also cited.

"To illustrate the faculty attitude as to students and higher education. I am going to quote from what I am authoritatively informed was a 'faculty inspired' editorial in The Daily Cardinal after this investigation of the university and its ways and means had reached such a stage that the faculty were affrighted at its magnitude:

"Restriction of college attendance by some form of selection is finding many advocates now. Some presidents suggest personal tests for freshmen, some advise a strict weeding out of students during all four years, and some ask for admission only of students who have maintained a certain standing in high school."

"Here is a student publication advocating a limitation of students to a restricted class, voicing the sentiment of a faculty that has formulated such a policy and succeeds in putting it into actual practice. Is it not deplorable?"

A considerable portion of the article is given over to statistics on the salaries of leading professors and to lists of their books.

STRIFE

STRIFE of man against man and party against class has existed since the time that there were two men in the world. Few cases of a Damon and Pythias friendship have ever been recorded.

Perhaps it is well that such is the case. Adversity and antagonism may ultimately result in a betterment of man. It may be a part of the great plan that there shall be a survival of the fittest and that warfare, petty or otherwise, is necessary to sort out the strong from the weak and the good from the evil.

Competition is the life of trade. But too much competition only results in a hardship on perhaps thoroughly worthy enterprises.

On a college campus there should certainly be a minimum of strife as between individuals or among organizations. Every one enrolled at the university is supposedly here for a common purpose—that of securing an education. The background is set for good will to all rather than for the petty antagonisms and difficulties that too often arise.

Man's inhumanity to man as evidenced in organizations, clubs and class politics on the campus is lamentable, to say the least. The possible good service that friendly rivalry might give is given negation when such friendly rivalry passes into the stage of antagonism. Differences are sure to arise; but they should be mended before they have a chance to grow into something infinitely more harmful to those actively concerned, as well as to the university.

RESEARCH AND TEXT-WRITING

AGAIN the agricultural population of Wisconsin is treated to a scathing story on the evils of the university. This time it is the faculty that is subjected to the scorching rebukes of the journalists.

E. R. McIntyre, editor of the Wisconsin Farmer, writes in his magazine an article in which he attempts to tell "What's Wrong With Wisconsin University," and the article goes out for the attention of 90,000 Wisconsin agriculturists.

Picturing the university's more distinguished professors as a group of high-salaried gentlemen of leisure, he upbraids them for spending their time in research and writing, instead of teaching freshmen the date of the Magna Charter; he rebukes them for compiling works on the classics instead of teaching freshmen not to split infinitives. They write text-books instead of conducting quiz sections, he says. Students are attracted to the university by the great achievements and reputations of these professors, but are denied contact with them, he declares.

Granted. But does Mr. McIntyre believe for a minute that those professors would have acquired their erudition and renown if they had spent all their time in correcting quiz papers and freshman themes? What does he think they would teach, if no time were spent in research and study? What text-books would they use, if there were no men of research to write them?

A university must be an institution of learning before it can be an institution of instruction. It must gather knowledge before it can dispense it, and there are few scholars of sufficient wealth to be able to devote their lives to unsubsidized study. Few text-books are best-sellers; one cannot clip coupons from theses.

It is interesting that Mr. McIntyre confines his observations to the College of Letters and Science. Why does he overlook the research men of the College of Agriculture? Surely Stephen Moulton Babcock, when he invented the milk tests that revolutionized Wisconsin dairying, might better have been teaching freshmen to milk cows. Certainly William A. Henry would have served the state better if he had spent his time filling mangers in the stock barns, instead of writing the Wisconsin farmer's standard handbook—"Feeds and Feeding." What of the scientists in the College of Agriculture now, who are spending their time in learning the best ways to breed stock, to sow wheat, to utilize poor soil?

But there is some truth in Mr. McIntyre's article. It is unfortunate that some of the instructors assigned to freshmen are young and inexperienced. Is it possible that Mr. McIntyre's own literary style may indicate this incompetency he deplores? He was formerly an assistant in agricultural journalism.

This last problem which he presents is one of paramount importance. It is one that the engineering faculty has publicly recognized, and we may hope that the whole university will face it. This solution is doubtful. Is it possible that higher salaries for instructors might attract better men?

INDIVIDUAL COURAGE

Success comes not to the man who follows the crowd, but to the one who dares to go it alone. In any vocation, profession or trade, one finds most workers aping others; they depend upon the multitude for support, and if they were placed upon their own initiative, they would become panic-stricken and flee. This dependency upon others is even more evident in college and college life. Few of us have sufficient courage to stand and defend our convictions, but become slaves to "the popular thing." Some are afraid to tackle their studies alone; they must have assistance. An education means little to these people, for, after their college career, when they strike out for themselves, they will find that they must do the task themselves without aid. And then will come the test of their individual courage.—Daily Nebraskan.

The play which was presented is a sketch of American farm life and is one of several one act plays written by Miss Reely. An informal discussion followed the reading.

Cadets Commence Ticket Drive For Military Function

A squad of cadet officers will attack all the companies drilling at the armory today in a wind-up of the ticket selling campaign for the tenth annual Military ball.

Lawrence P. Warner '22, chairman of the sale, will be in charge of the squad. Each company is to be approached by flank movements, in order to avoid any possibility of escape on the part of the cadets. Upon payment of $4, a sign of good faith, each prisoner is to be paroled until Friday, April 7, the date of the Military ball.

Those not belonging to the cadet corps may obtain their tickets at Morgan's, the University pharmacy, and at Menges', according to Warner. Groups which have put in reservations should call for their tickets as soon as possible.

Officers to Give Dinner Before Ball

With men signing up each day more than 30 cadet officers are expected to attend the formal dinner on April 7, preceding the Military ball.

The officers' banquet will be held either at the capitol or in the Woman's building, according to William A. Field '23, chairman. If a sufficient number of officers signify their intentions of attending the banquet, it will be held in the Woman's building. Tickets are $5 for each couple.

Junior Women Are Bowling Champions

The women's bowling championship went to the juniors in the close games played off with the sophomores Thursday evening. The juniors won two games of the three games necessary to decide the tie by the scores 548-531 and 609-564. This extra game had to be played as both the juniors and the sophomores had won two games and lost one game in the tournament series.

High scores were bowled by Elizabeth Baird '23, 141; Edith Hess '23, 135; Maude Killam '23, 139; Katherine Fuller '24, 132; Rosamond Nolte '24, 129; Esther Harris '23, 121, and Louise Clancy '24, 121.

A Peerless sedan, owned by T. A. Coleman, 1114 Sherman ave., was slightly damaged by fire this morning as it stood parked in front of the Keeley-Neckerman Co. A short circuit is believed to have caused the blaze. Fire company No. 1 extinguished it with chemicals.

String Quartette Has Classical Program

By LOIS COLE

Good technique and a wealth of expression marked the concert given at Music hall Thursday evening by the Chicago String quartet before an appreciative audience of several hundred people. The program consisted entirely of classical numbers, which included such composers as Mozart, Rimsky-Korsakoff, and Maurice Revel.

The concert opened with Mozart's Quartet, "B flat Major," which included four movements of wide contrast. The selection was characterized throughout by delicate phrasing and deep expression. The different moods of the movements were brought out in such manner that each one was distinct and clear.

The second number was "Allegro Russe," by Rimsky-Korsakoff, and was marked by spirited melodies and well accented rhythm.

"The Lonely Shepherd," by Speight and "A Suite" by Frank Bridge, were given in response to enthusiastic applause.

"The Quartet, F Major," by Maurice Ravel, was the big number of the evening. This selection consisted of four movements which were presented with an individuality that was unusual and delightful. Beautiful harmonies made up the first movement, and the second displayed clever cut string effects.

Basketball Spread Held This Morning

The annual woman's basketball spread for all those who have played this year and who are interested in basketball will be held in Lathrop hall this morning at 11:30 o'clock. The women's Varsity basketball team will be announced at this time, and that team will play the faculty in a match game after the spread.

college audience.

"Pokey," styled as "a somewhat historical play," opened with a unique situation, probably inspired by certain Shavian ideas. Pokey, described in the program as Princess Pocahontas (Olivia Orth), is struggling on the edge of a precipice with John Rolf (Don Marvin). With arms about his neck she kisses, hugs, sways, and wrestles with the poor man in an effort to convey to him a small idea of her affection and savage love. This preliminary action was just a little overdrawn and might have been more effective had less time and energy been consumed.

Just as things begin to look hopeless for Rolf, Heinz Rubel, disguised as Captain John Smith, arrives and saves the day. Rubel was fully capable of portraying this historic figure much better than he did, but the unusual costume probably embarrassed him, perhaps he would have made a better Englishman if he had been permitted to appear in the golf outfit.

Miriam Doan, playing the part of Mrs. Powhatan, wife of Mr. Powhatan, tom-tom beater and heavy sleeper, had the privilege of hurling most of the play's clever lines, although Ruth Koppke, cast as the 108 year old mother of Pow, made a few bright remarks herself. Karl Kraemers, Fulton Lieberman, and Everett Bogue, whose Indian names would make this story several columns longer, acquitted themselves quite well even if they were in the way most of the time.

"Pokey" Too Pokey

The main trouble with "Pokey" was its clumsiness and slow action. The hocus-pocus about the trick fire could easily have been cut down several times without leading the audience to believe that Gitchigummi was too readily obliging. Philip Moeller, when he wrote the play, probably conceived it as a sketch suited only for rapid-fire action. But even with these defects it was quite enjoyable.

Lady Gregory's "In a Workhouse Ward," an Irish comedy, would be more entertaining as a reading than as an acted play. A sketch with little or no action must be as cleverly acted as such a play must be written. Two men who exchange barrages of Irish brogue while they calmly lie in adjacent beds certainly do not furnish this necessary activity, and it must be admitted that an average audience soon tires of such unenlightening conversation, especially if they cannot catch most of the lines.

This doesn't mean that Hughes, Conlin and Fentress company did not get all they could out of the material they had. Idris O. Hughes and Vincent Conlin as Michael and Mike respectively, worked hard in an effort to put the thing across. Olivia Fentress, introduced as Bridget Donohue, was admirable in every respect.

In passing, it is quite too bad that such hard-working players were not cast into a better vehicle. Perhaps the play was just an experiment.

Madison Working Girl Can Clothe Herself On $182.78 Says University Economist

Home Economics Head Figures Minimum Cost of Girl's
Clothing Under $190 a Year; Silk Socks Taboo;
Standard of Living Not Considered

By PENNELL CROSBY.

Madison business girls may clothe themselves on $182.78 a year according to a budget just completed by Miss M. G. Arbogast, assistant professor of home economics of the University of Wisconsin. This is a little lower than the New York estimate of $250, but is considerably higher than the Chicago and Topeka, Kan., dress allowances for working girls.

It costs New York girls at least $250 annually to clothe themselves properly, members of the League of Girls clubs, announced. The report, filed after the working girls composing the league had answered a questionnaire on the subject, declared that Topeka, Kas., and Chicago estimates are too low for New York. The recent findings of the Topeka merchants declared that $82 was a sufficient dress allowance for a working girl. Chicago girls later reported they could dress properly on $117 annually. To keep up appearances to New York business standards, New York girls claim their clothes allowances can be no lower than given in the following items:

One suit, $30; one coat, $50; shoes, $16; hose, $11; lingerie, $34; hats, $20; gloves, $10; waists and dresses, $80.

A minimum clothing budget for the business girl in Madison prepared by the department of home economics of the University of Wisconsin for March, 1922, shows that $182.78 is the lowest possible cost at which a girl may supply herself with the necessities of life. It does not take into consideration the standard of living in Madison, which almost compels a young lady to have stockings of a better quality than 50 cents a pair. The majority of girls demand silk socks as only commensurate with their station in life.

The competition among girls, even of the working class, because the majority of young women in Madison (outside of the university are employed) is so great that silk stockings costing from $2 to $5, are a necessity in life. The budget given below is not set forth with the knowledge that many girls adhere to it in detail, but shows the minimum cost at which a girl may clothe herself. The budget follows:

New Site For Church Sought By Catholics

Abandon Extreme West
End Property; Committee Is Appointed

Plans of the Dominican fathers to build a Catholic church, a school and a rectory at Commonwealth ave. and Gregory st., Hillington, have been abandoned, and a new site, nearer to the city in the region of Warren st., is being sought.

This change was determined upon at a meeting last night, when B. J. Halligan, Dr. J. H. Cunningham, William Powers, Miles C. Riley, John Jordan and J. H. Kelly were appointed a committee to look about for a site.

The alteration in plans, according to Father H. C. Hengell, became necessary, when it was found, following the survey of the district, that only 70 families resided in the territory covering the new proposed parish. Funds raised from these families, it was pointed out, could not finance the new parish, so a slice of St. Raphael's parish, on the west side, is being given over to the Wingra Park parish. The dividing line is now Warren st. instead of Harrison st.

This will make, it is estimated, at least 150 families in the new parish. The Dominican fathers have been able to withdraw from their agreement to purchase the lots at Commonwealth and Gregory sts., on which they had an option. The new property will have to have at least a 300 foot frontage. The committee is to report on sites within a week.

Good Friday Not A Holiday For Local Stores; Keep Open

Stores in Madison will not close on Good Friday, April 14, as is the custom in a number of other Wisconsin cities. Madison merchants have never followed this custom and are not likely to consider it this year, it was said today at the Association of Commerce. In many European countries, practically all business is suspended on Good Friday.

Senate Body Votes For Continuing Dye Embargo

WASHINGTON — A provision of the permanent tariff bill under which the present dye embargo with a licensing system would be continued for one year from the date of the signing of the measure was agreed upon today by majority members of the senate finance committee. The vote was six to four. At the expiration of the one year period duties proposed by the special dye sub-committee would come into force. Those are 7 cents a pound and 50 per cent ad valorem on intermediate unfinished components of dyes, and 7 cents a pound and 60 per cent ad valorem on finished coal tar products.

Although this pair have been in Madison before, their line hasn't changed noticeably. You probably remember the girl who asks "why" when she ought to ask "because."

Monroe & Grant

Lots of fun with a motor truck which is turned into one of those springing affairs from which the men jump into the air as the orchestra plays dump-de-dump, dump-de-dump.

OPEN LETTER ON PROTEST MEETING

Editor Daily Cardinal:

Those few who attended the Wednesday evening protest meeting of the American Legion and other patriotic organizations with the expectation of witnessing fair play were sadly disappointed when they saw Philip Voltz '23, the only speaker for the opposing view, hissed, jeered, and forcefully dragged from the rostrum.

Mr. Voltz probably did not make his attack and rebuttal in the most tactful way in view of the prejudiced audience he was addressing, but he used no improper language, made no personal accusations, and made no statement which he did not sincerely believe and was not willing to defend.

Whether Mr. Voltz is right or wrong in his principles, in the interest of fair play he should have been given a chance to speak by those who consider themselves just and fair-minded enough to criticize the governor. But unfortunately the meeting turned itself into an emotional spree rather than a fair and frank discussion of principles, and an unprejudiced onlooker could not but be struck by a more asinine exhibition of intolerant "patriotism."

There are those who believe that false political principles can be killed by repression, and there are those who believe that such principles, when denied the open forum, the public highways to the literate and elite minds, take recourse to the secret by-ways, silently, surreptitiously spreading and enveloping like poison the illiterate and weaker minds.

There are those who, by their unsound and anarchistic principles, would rob peace and liberty-loving citizens of the protection of stable government, but there are also those who by their childish faith in the perfection of whatever is in our government—by their intolerant and over zealous "patriotism"—are not willing even to listen to sincere suggestions for betterment, and are thereby as great a menace to peace and liberty-loving individuals as the others.

In either case, each party has a right to his view, but in the interest of sportsmanship, fair play, a fuller understanding of both sides of the question, each should be willing to listen to the other's viewpoint. It was just this that the Legionnaires and their friends refused to do on Wednesday evening. They even publicly denounced our governor for taking a fair-minded stand upon the question.

The writer has a good over-seas service record but cannot agree with the president of Gun and Blade and the Legion commander that this service gives him any greater right to call the capitol "his" capitol than has any member of the Social Science club, and he further expresses his appreciation to that club for its insistence upon bringing to Madison well-known speakers on both sides of these vital questions,—speakers conservative and speakers radical, even though they are popularly accused of bringing only the latter.

TWENHOFEL LAYS ETNA ERUPTION TO SEA DROP

"Of course I am not sure why these constant eruptions are taking place, and I only know how serious the damage is from what I read in the papers," said Professor Twenhofel.

Basketball Victory Wrested By Juniors

Playing the hardest fought game of the women's basketball tournament, the juniors wrested the class championship from the seniors on Tuesday night, by one basket, with a score of 32 to 30.

The juniors ran up a large majority in the first part by the accurate shooting of Phylis Tatman '23 and Florence Hupprich '23, and ended the first quarter 17 to 3 before the seniors struck their pace. Getting into their real team work in the second quarter, the seniors brought the score up to 19 to 12 at the end of the first half. The last half was fast playing on both sides, the ball shooting rapidly from end to end. In the last few minutes of play the seniors with their best teamwork of the season brought the score up to 32 to 30.

The sophomores lost to the freshmen 27 to 22, the freshmen shooting into the lead early in the game and maintaining it throughout. The sophomores, playing with a rearranged lineup, were unable to get onto the freshmen's game in the first of the match, but staged a spirited come back in the last quarter, which brought the score from 25-11 to 27-22. Marion Fisher, Esther Fifield, and Gladys Samson played good games for the freshmen; while Florence Fox, Frances Hullebrandt, and Esther Bilstad played well for the sophomores.

The juniors having won all their games win the championship, and the seniors are awarded the second place.

ONE-ARM BEST FOR PRESIDENT, LIT DECIDES

"I can't steal so much with my one hand as others can with two, therefore I should make a better president than others have," President Obregon, one-armed leader of the Mexican government was quoted as saying by Ralph Peterson, closer of the winning negative team in the Hesperia debate last night. The question was "Resolved, that the United States recognize the Obregon government in Mexico." The winning negative team was composed of Oliver T. Banton '23, R. B. Russell '23, and Ralph Peterson '23. The affirmative team men were David Sinclair '24, Ben White '23, and John Slezak '23.

The negative Philomathia team debating on the question "Resolved, that the states should adopt a cabinet parliamentary form of government" won its debate last night. The team consisted of George Tomlinson '23 (closer), Nels Nelson grad, and Bryn Nissen '24. The affirmative team consisted of A. Walter Dahl '23 (closer), Arnold Zube '24, and C. Engelke '23.

"Obregon's statement shows that Mexico is avowedly filled with a lot of treacherous rascals who are anxious to find cause for petty revolt and destruction of property," Peterson said in the Hesperia debate. "Under Article 27 of the Mexican constitution, the government reserves the right to confiscate any natural resources. How can America and Americans deal with such an uncertain government as that?"

"There is no hint of confiscation in Article 27," Slezak retaliated. "Obregon said that every assurance of respect of property rights made prior to the drawing up of the constitution in 1917 has been made and insured."

The last game of the series will be played Friday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock, when the seniors meet the freshmen. Both of these teams having lost games the result of the game is not able to change the settlement of the championship.
