3:00 P.M. Recognition Service

Mr. J.S. Hotton, Chairman of the Historical Museum Committee, Mr. S.B. Barrett, who will label the exhibits for the Walworth County Centennial at the Fair, and F.M. Van Epps, Executive Secretary of the Centennial, attended a Committee meeting at the home of Miss Maude Mitchell on Booth Lake last Sunday afternoon. A picnic lunch was enjoyed.

LOG CABIN FUND- WANT TO HELP.

The Log Cabin now under construction on the County Fair Grounds in Elkhorn to house the Historical Museum is rapidly nearing completion. More money is needed toward the budget of $2000 which includes the cost of the Log Cabin and expenses of the Centennial.

Instead of asking for large contributions, many smaller ones are wanted so as to give as many as possible in the County an opportunity to help build the Cabin which is to be permanent.

The Cabin is to be headquarters for boys and girls groups of the County throughout the year, and is thus of interest to friends of boys and girls and their activities, such as Four-H and Boy and Girl Scout groups.

If you have not given, mail or give your contribution to Mrs. O.M. Waterbury, Williams Bay, or to Mr. F.E. Lawson, Treasurer, Centennial Committee, Walworth, Wis. Wms Bay will receive credit for the amount toward its goal.

RESIDENTS OF WALWORTH COUNTY FOR FIFTY YEARS OR MORE

A Badge of Honor or Recognition will be given to all residents who have lived in the County for a half century or more as a part of the Recognition Services at the Centennial Day Celebration. Let F.M. Van Epps, Williams Bay, who is Executive Sec'y of the Centennial, know about yourself.

Trap Shooting scheduled to take place at 11:00 A.M. to 3 P.M. in the Lake Front Park (Edgewater Park) on the Play Day Thursday (to-day) will be held three blocks North of the business district instead. Please take notice.

What Is Worship?

It is the soul searching for its counterpart

It is the thirsty land crying out for rain.

It is a candle in the act of being kindled

It is a drop in quest of the ocean.

It is a man listening through a tornado for a

Still Small Voice

It is the voice in the night calling for help.

It is a sheep lost in the wilderness pleading for rescue by the Good Shepherd.

It is the same sheep nestling in the arms of the

Rescuer

It is a soul standing in awe before the mystery
of the universe

It is a poet enthralled by the beauty of a sunrise.

It is a workman pausing a moment to listen to a strain of music

It is a hungry heart seeking for love.

It is Time flying into Eternity

It is my little self engulfed in the Universal self.

It is a man climbing the altar stairs of God.

THE MURDER AT CONWAY'S

Seventh Installment

Mr. Conway returned Friday. He had started to take his car and found the tank empty. Had boarded the freight train at 3 O'clock and went up to Tom Jenkins' place. Jenkins wasn't home, so he hitch-hiked up to the fishing ground and then came home on the train.

Another conference in Chief Hogan's office that afternoon.

Mr. Armentraut thought the Smith girl told a straight story. He had found out that Stacey had disappeared and that Bill's step-mother had been seen in Denver. He was inclined to doubt Conway's story. "Fishing might mean anything," he said.

"We can talk to Marge Eaton in the morning. I am hoping for a definite clue from her," remarked the Chief.

"And still no word from Jones and the widow", said Armentraut. "I have decided that Barnett may know more than he has told. Tomorrow I shall put him through a sweating process. Havn't either of you thought of him?"

We both confessed we had thought about him very seriously. I knew he was jealous of Bill that Monday evening and jealousy is a vicious thing. But my thoughts kept reverting to the galloping horse.

"Mr. Armentraut", I ventured, "I heard a galloping horse about two o'clock Tuesday morning just before I dropped off to sleep."

"And you never mentioned it?" He was very angry.

"I have reason to believe that Stacey was on a horse Monday night," remarked the Chief.

"What do you know about it?" barked the detective.

"Not much. But we must find Stacey. I'm sure he can tell us something."

"We must find him," declared Armentraut. "And we must find Frank Hayes."

the nerve to wake him up. As I started out my fist hit something and I stooped down and picked it up; When I got into my room I nearly fell over when I realized I had Bill Yerkey's billfold".

"Somewhat surprised," I ventured.

"Surprised," Mr. O'Brien, I was paralyzed with fear. I Didn't know what to do. I was afraid to go back. I couldn't keep it. I was frantic. Murdock wasn't home and the door of his room was open so I just slipped in there and put it in the pocket of a coat hanging on the back of the door. Then I planned to leave before Yerkey reported the theft."

"About what time did you go in there?" I inquired.

"About three, or a little before. I heard the train whistle in after that. That's what gave me the idea of getting away."

That was the train Conway took. Bill must have been murdered before that.

"Didn't you see anything of Marge? She must have been there at that time?"

"No, I was going to wait 'till morning to speak to Yerkey. But when I found the billfold I feared the investigation that would follow Yerkey's complaint. I might become involved and I couldn't have that."

"So you put the billfold in the pocket of Murdock's coat? Rather placing the blame on him, eh?"

"Honestly, I never thought of that, I just wanted to get rid of the thing. But the queer part of the story is yet to come. I went up to my room with the officer Tuesday afternoon. He wanted to search my room. As I opened the door, there on the floor behind the door was the billfold."

"Well, that was a surprise!"

"For a moment I thought I was going to faint. I continued to stoop down to tie my shoe. and I got hold of that billfold. Then England has now contracted for a new super ocean liner, mate to the Queen Mary, The King George V.

If England has so much ready surplus why not pay the United States some of the past due War debt?

Soon after I reached Conway, Lawrence came to my room. I was glad to see him, for I sensed
he knew something and I hoped he was going to tell it. I recalled the promised sweating by Armentraut.

He sat down, nervously lighted a cigarette and began, "I'll feel better if I get something off my chest."

"I shall treat whatever you tell me confidentially, but don't tell anything that will in any way incriminate you", I said.

"I was insanely jealous of poor Yerkey. I came up to my room Monday night, undressed, and went to bed, but not to sleep. I had never known such insane jealousy. I adored Jean and I had never seen her act so possessed. She certainly fell for him. I was beside myself,
I heard Yerkey come upstairs
and then I heard him singing softly. I lay on my bed tormenting my very soul. One moment I was going to leave and never see Jean again, then I was going in Yerkey's room and beat him to a pulp."

"I finally decided I would go in and tell him to pack his stuff and leave. I opened my door very quietly and looked toward his door. Imagine my surprise when I saw someone go in the room and close the door.
I was so beside myself I thought it was Jean. I am ashamed to confess such a thing. It must have been Marge. I went back into my room and closed
the door, and walked the floor like a mad man. Finally I decided to investigate, I couldn't go to sleep 'till I knew who went into that door."

"When I stepped into Bill's room I saw no one except Yerkey apparently sound asleep. I decided I had been wrong about seeing somebody open his door and go in, and I didn't have

"And where is it now," I asked as casually as I could.

"I wish you could tell me. I went down to look for it as soon as I could, but it wasn't there any place. Now, how can you explain that?"

"Gone eh?" What time was that?"

"About five."

"Well, I wish you had never entered that room. I fear it will go hard with you if it is ever found out..."

"I am afraid of that. But you know Mr. O'Brien I never killed Bill Yerkey."

"I don't know anything about who did. Investigators always look for a motive and jealousy is a strong motive."

"Oh! I know it. I know it. But I never killed Bill Yerkey." And he put his head in his hands and cried like a baby. I felt sorry for him. He had told me a tale no Judge would believe. I wondered if he had told all. I decided to say nothing to Armbrust but rather await developments.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH AT FONTANA
BUYS A HAMMOND ELECTRIC ORGAN

A group of Williams Bay people attended the morning church service at Fontana on Sunday August 9 and heard the new Hammond Electric Organ played by Mr. Ted Grosbeck of Elkhorn. The organ is a beautiful sounding instrument and has all the keyboard and pedal attachments and properties of the larger organs, but is much less difficult to play.

The organ is without pipes or reeds. It covers the entire range of musical tone color. Its volume is adaptable to every type of installation.

It is hoped the Williams Bay Cong'l Church might acquire one.

In producing "The Gods Laugh", an original dramatic comedy by Jacqueline Cour and Esther hotton, The Belfry Players are trying an experiment which may effect not only their own but other little theatre groups
all over the country.

"The Gods Laugh" was written
as a result of problems encountered in producing professional plays. The Belfry Players are faced with the handicap of a small stage and a lack of back stage space. In addition, the royalties which must be paid for the majority of interesting plays are rather overpowering to a theatre with an auditorium
so small that only a limited number of persons can be seated each evening. It was with these drawbacks in mind, as well as a desire to utilize to the best advantage their available talent, that the idea of an original play was conceived.

The scene of "The Gods Laugh"
is described as "The Moosehead Inn", one of the stops on a cross-country bus line, somewhere in the middle west.

"The Gods Laugh" will be presented at the Belfry Theatre
on September 9,10,11, and 12.
