Ten Numbers Per Year

Published by the Public Library for the Citizens of Milwaukee

April, 1918

URING the latter part of March and the early part of April, in every city and town that has a public library, the campaign has been waged to secure books for the libraries in cantonments, where soldiers are being trained, also for the battleships of the navy, and for the army camps in France. The response has been more than gratifying as an evidence of the willingness and even of the anxiety of people to be serviceable and helpful to those who are fighting our battles.

The campaign for money, which was carried out last fall, secured something like $1,500,000 to be used for erecting and maintaining library buildings in each one of the camps and for putting into each of these buildings the necessary equipment.

All books that can be secured as gifts make just so much more money available for purchasing books that can not be secured as gifts. The drive for books, which was carried on through the kindness of the newspapers, and through a house to house canvass by those fine little chaps, the Boy Scouts (Think what those Boy Scouts mean to our citizenship twenty years hence!) resulted in collecting over 20,000 volumes for the soldiers and sailors. A proportion of these books is naturally fiction, but a surprisingly large amount is the very best and worth while fiction. The officers of the School Board, and the high school principals and teachers have contributed an excellent collection of textbooks on all subjects. Technical books, as was to be expected, are absent, and these are the books that are purchased from the funds collected in the previous campaign.

Each of these contributed books has to be prepared for circulation; a book pocket must be pasted in it and a title card made out for recording the name and service position of the borrower. Here again the excellent Boy Scouts have rendered fine service, and the Training Class of the library, also. As fast as the books are ready they are boxed for shipment, as directed from headquarters in the Library of Congress.

Books wear out and must be replaced, and Dr. Putnam asks us to understand that the campaign for books is not ended until the war ends and the boys come home. So the good people of Milwaukee, AND THEY ARE GOOD, don't for a minute think otherwise, are requested to keep this cause in mind, and whenever they have more books to contribute to notify the Public Library to call for them and prepare them for shipment, so that a continuous supply may be kept moving to the army which has gone, and to those who still must go.

They who remain at home, suffering the awful discomforts of enforced diets of oatmeal and corn bread, can still help the men at the front to whom a bit of honest Johnny Cake would not seem a hardship. Don't let up on the book business while the war lasts. It is just a bit of our bit.

THE LIBRARY LOG

Published for the citizens of Milwaukee, at the end of each month, except July and August, by the staff of the Milwaukee Public Library.

SYLVESTER J. CARTER, Editor.
JOSEPHINE KULZICK, Associate Editor.

Any citizen of Milwaukee County may have the Library Log sent to his home for a year by paying the postage, 10 cents. Send name and address to the editor, Milwaukee Public Library.

The Library Log will gladly publish criticisms of the library service, and suggestions for making it better. Kindly give name and address with all communications. Names will not be used for publication without express permission.

The young man who wishes to equip himself in advance with information that will be useful when his training for the world conflict begins will find a large collection of military manuals in the library to help him in his task. These may be withdrawn for home use from the History Room or consulted in the Reference Room where a complete collection of the official manuals of the War and Navy Departments is kept on file. Books for the study of French and other languages may also be obtained.

"DODO," a large extinct didoid columbine bird, (Didus ineptus), with short functionless wings, large hooked bill, clumsy aspect, and slow gait. It became extinct toward the end of the 17th century". Standard Dictionary.

The authority quoted above unfortunately makes no reference to another species, of like clumsy aspect, slow gait and functionless wings, still occupying a place of undue importance in popular imagination. We refer to Bibliothecarius antiquus, the ancient type of librarian, popularly supposed to infest all places where collections of books are brought together and to manifest a jealous and even violent disposition when persons molest the volumes. Some specimens have been noted in certain regions since the last recorded observation of the dodo, but the supply is not sufficient for exhibition purposes.

This bit of Natural History is set down in the hope of allaying a certain reticence on the part of library patrons. We would assure the public that the librarian and his assistants are concerned, not to keep them from getting what they want, but to keep them from not getting it. Attendants may even brave the danger of an occasional snub in proffering assistance, since nobody has an infallible sense for determining the psychological moment. In any event, the help the attendant may be able to give is part of the service for which the public is paying. A well organized library is more than a collection of books. It is that, plus intelligent and conscientious service.

The babies are now claiming their due share of consideration. With the inauguration of the child welfare campaign by the United States Children's Bureau, the attention of the whole country is being called to the incalculable value of the child. Should you be interested in what you can do and in what is being done "to save the lives of a hundred thousand babies and to protect children from the hazards of war time," you will find in the Municipal Reference Library a section devoted to the interests of the children, including the care and hygiene of children, public protection of mothers, infants and young children, child labor and education, recreation, children in need of special care, and the laws regarding children.

Of paramount interest at the present time is the crippled and disabled soldier. Although we have encountered him only to a very slight degree in Milwaukee, nevertheless, the reports that we receive daily of the wounding of Milwaukee boys bring it home to us that in a very short time we shall see on the streets of Milwaukee many soldiers who must receive care and assistance in refitting them to our economic scheme of existence. Of course, the Federal Government is making every preparation to meet this problem, but we ourselves may be able to assist very materially in this vital work. The Municipal Reference Library is gathering from every possible source material on this subject. If you are desirous of informing yourself on the matter you will find reports from Canada, Great Britain and France. The Library will gladly assist in any investigation along this line.

A. L. A. WAR SERVICE.

Books collected for soldiers and sailors during the intensive book campaign of the American Library Association now number one million three hundred thousand volumes according to reports made by the State Agencies. Many states have not reported and none of the reports is complete. It is estimated that the total collection will be at least 2,500,000 when the reports are all in.

The collection in this city has reached the total of over 20,000 volumes.

Word has gone out that the campaign is to continue indefinitely. People are being asked to get the habit of turning in to the public libraries, for the soldiers and sailors, the new books as soon as they have been read.

WHAT DO THE SOLDIERS READ?

New light has been thrown upon this question by a resolution adopted at a recent conference of camp librarians at Waco, Texas. These men are representatives of the American Library Association, and are presumably experienced, both in general public library work, and also in the new camp libraries over which they now have charge.

By resolution these men called upon the people of the United States to give, through the one-cent stamp arrangement, more of the good magazines. They specifically named Punch, Judge, Life, Popular Science Monthly, Popular Mechanics, Scientific American, Atlantic Monthly, Harper's Magazine, Scribner's and Century.

A YEAR'S WAR SERVICE IN THE PUBLIC LIBRARY.

As we complete our first year of participation in the war, this little review of the library's share in public service may be of interest. In times so perilous as these, no institution which fails to contribute its portion of service to the national cause can justify its existence. We hope that we still have a reason for being.

Scarcely had the troops of Europe started to mobilize in 1914 before the library began to feel the pressure of special demands, and the mobilization of special material was begun. The Reference Department was probably the first to feel these demands. The best and latest possible wall and table maps of the countries involved were obtained. The history, government, political and social conditions of these countries became of increasing interest. The science and art of war, army and navy life, aeronautics, submarine warfare, size of standing armies and navies of the world, methods of military training, all were of intense popular interest, and the necessary books were procured for reference and circulation.

With the entrance of the United States into the conflict the immediate effect was felt in the library as it was in all branches of our national life. Perhaps the biggest opportunity the library has for patriotic service lies in its chance for influencing public thought and opinion. With a population so heterogeneous as ours, made up of peoples whose backgrounds and traditions are so various, it is no small task to develop in them a unity of purpose which will result in their giving to the government the support without which it is powerless to prosecute the war.

The branch librarians who come more intimately into contact with their patrons have had special opportunity to direct reading along patriotic lines. Reading lists, bulletins and book displays have brought results in the demand for material on American history, our national heroes, the historic background of the war and our reasons for being in it, and also requests for patriotic poetry and fiction. Assistance in all departments of the library has been given to teachers and pupils in preparing patriotic programs, entertainments and debates. Illustrated lectures on life in the army and navy were given at the South Division library.

Patriotic feeling naturally creates the desire to be of service to the country. The government selected those who were needed for different branches of the service, but those who remained at home were seeking their opportunity to serve. Just here the books on food and fuel conservation, gardening, domestic economy, knitting and needlework were very helpful. Government pamphlets were freely distributed. For the business man all available material was obtained on the industries which the war has stimulated or whose character has been changed by war conditions. Those preparing for civil service examinations have been furnished with the civil service manuals, as well as with special information bearing on the branch they proposed to enter. Young men entering military, naval or aviation service have been given every possible help.

The change in public interests has been reflected very decidedly in the decrease of circulation of fiction and light literature and the increase in demand for serious books.

Publicity has been given through the library to the work of national, state and local patriotic organizations. The library has assisted the Red Cross not only by the one hundred per cent membership furnished by the staff, but also by distributing information regarding their work, by the branch libraries serving as centers for knitting instruction and collection of knitted garments, and by the main library providing a room as center for the collection of garments for Belgian relief.

As is fitting in all movements for popular education, the Young People's Department has taken a prominent part in this work. Much stress has been laid on patriotic reading, through printed lists, book displays and the librarian's personal guidance. The need for conservation of food, clothing, school material, books (including library books) has been emphasized. Promptness in returning books has been urged as a means of avoiding the waste of paying fines. The children have been interested in saving for thrift stamps by means of talks and the posting of the names of stamp owners on a special bulletin. The boys working on farms in the Boys' Working Reserve have been supplied with small collections of selected books. A prize contest for the best essay on war saving and some related topics, now being conducted jointly by the library and the Milwaukee Journal, is proving of much juvenile interest. The special war service of the Boy Scouts and Junior Red Cross is given publicity and encouragement through the Young People's Department.

Throughout the library a feature this year has been the posting of advertisements of the government's war measures, calls for military and civil service, special war regulations, and the patriotic posters issued by the food and fuel administrations and the liberty loan committees. The Reference Department has been tireless in its efforts to accumulate as complete a file as possible of the war literature issued by the various executive departments, as the president's messages, governor's proclamations, army and navy manuals, etc. The formation of so many new bureaus, commissions, and departments has made the collection and classification of their publications an arduous task. The endeavor also to collect material showing the participation of the community in the war has been ceaseless. The library has now been designated by the Wisconsin War History Commission to take charge of the collection, cataloging and storing of all records and materials dealing with the participation of Milwaukee County in the war.

The Municipal Reference library has had unique opportunities for rendering war service. It has been of material assistance to the County Council of Defense in providing its various departments and bureaus with the technical literature necessary to their activities. It has also aided the Election Commissioners in the draft registration work, and has furnished information to the women's organizations engaged in war work, municipal gardening, etc.

The library took a most active part in the campaign last fall for the Camp Library fund, one-tenth of the total amount from the state of Wisconsin being raised by the Milwaukee library staff. The recent drive for books for the soldiers resulted in over 20,000 volumes being collected by this library. Publicity was given the campaign through the newspapers, bills, posters, moving pictures, and booths in department stores. A house to house canvass was made by the Boy Scouts. From the books collected, all suitable for camp libraries were selected and prepared for use.

Aside from the service rendered in the regular course of their duties at the library, members of the staff have been active in war work during their spare hours. Their services have been given to the Red Cross, County Council of Defense, and other patriotic organizations. They have knitted several hundred garments, and have subscribed to the liberty loans, war saving stamp and various war relief funds, a total sum amounting to nearly $13,000. Three of our former employees, Ray Albright, William Blumberg and Walter Zmysloney, are now in the army, and Mr. S. A. McKillop, Director of Extensions, has been serving since March first as librarian at Camp Beauregard, where he has built and organized the Camp Library.

This brief summary indicates the nature of the war service attempted at the public library. We have purposely avoided statistics, for as a recent author remarks, "Nobody believes in statistics but the statistician, and he doesn't believe in them unless he has compiled them himself."

CONCISE.

One of England's first 100,000 men spent two years at the front without once writing home. At last his mother wrote to the captain of his company asking him to prevail upon the unliterary Tommy to write.

The captain did. After two days Alfred produced the following:

"Dear Ma: This war is a blinger. Tell auntie. ALF."

"Far more seemely were it for thee to have thy studie full of Bookes, than thy Pursse full of Money."—John Lyly.

"The love of reading enables a man to exchange the wearisome hours of life which come to every one for hours of delight."—Montesquieu.

BOOK NOTES FOR BUSY PEOPLE

Atherton, Gertrude. The White Morning. 1918. Stokes. $1.00 A2766

"A novel of the German revolution that may come"—a tribute to the intelligence and justice of German womanhood. We see millions of German women, disillusioned, awakened, determined, rising against and subduing the system that has appalled the world. The women are as ruthless, as relentless, as their hated masters; and it is this unhesitating efficiency that gives power and success to their grim and lofty purpose. We are convinced that when the tools of Prussian efficiency are used in the hands of democracy against the tyrannical Prussian autocracy, the latter will cease to be, and the reign of schrecklichkeit be passed. Lest the story be thought a wild freak of unbalanced fancy, Mrs. Atherton has added at the end of her book an argument in which she quotes reliable and irrefutable authority for "daring to believe that a revolution conceived and engineered by women is possible in Germany."—Book Review Digest.

Brown, Demetra. In the Heart of the German Intrigue. 1918. Houghton, Mifflin. $2.00 940.91-B87

Mrs. Brown, who writes under her maiden name of Demetra Vaka, is a woman of Greek birth who is married to an American and who has become very thoroughly Americanized. Finding, to her own surprise, that she still harbored enough of love of race to make her feel ashamed of the part Greece was playing with regard to the World War, she determined to go to Greece and if possible discover the truth. In the autumn of 1916 she went to Greece and with the aid of high authorities succeeded in gathering much information with regard to the part being played on the one hand by King Constantine and his generals, and on the other, by Venizelos and his followers. German intrigue in all its most ugly aspects probably bore more fruit in Greece than even the Kaiser could have hoped for. Unhappy Greece has suffered much. Between the blockade and the action of a pro-German King who delivered half of the harvest of Thessaly to Bulgaria, there was not much left for the Greek populace but starvation. The author makes a strong plea to America for help for the Greeks, whom she considers have not had a fair deal.

Clarke, Ida C. American Women and the World War. 1918. Appleton. $2.00 940.91-C59

The author states in her preface:—"The purpose of this book is twofold: first, to discover to American women themselves their tremendous opportunities and responsibilities in the present world conflict; second, to record in a form that is in some degree permanent the actual beginnings of the greatest massed effort of women the world has ever known." In each state of the Union the Woman's Committee of the Council of National Defense is charged with the responsibility of coordinating the war work of all existing organizations of women and the report from each state is based entirely on information given by the State Chairman, who is responsible to the National Council of Defense. The book gives a very clear general idea of what is being done in each of the many lines of activity. Of a necessity the reports from the various states are brief and in some instances inadequate to give a correct idea of what is being accomplished. This defect was inevitable and does not detract from the great value of the book as a source of information and inspiration.

Colvin, Sidney. John Keats; his Life and Poetry his Friends Critics and After-fame. 1917. Scribners. $4.50. 92-K25C

The author published, thirty years ago, a monograph on Keats which is included in the "English Men of letters" series. The present volume which is not to be confused with the earlier one, is an accurate and exhaustive work which takes its place as the authoritative biography of Keats. As well as the detailed account of the life of Keats Mr. Colvin gives us much that is of great critical value with regard to Keats's poetry. "It is a book to read with delight; better still, it is a book that compels one to turn back and re-read the poet himself."—W. C. Greene... Dial.

Duncan, Frances. Home Vegetables and Small Fruits; their Culture and Preservation. 1918. Scribners. $1.40. 635-D91

"Now whether you garden from habit, from patriotic motives or just because you like to mess about in the earth and be out of doors, you will enjoy 'Home Vegetables and Small Fruits'. Her book deals with small spaces, small quantities and small outlays. It sounds the thrift note insistently, but without taking the joy out of gardening."—Publishers' Weekly.

Hendrick, Ellwood. Everyman's Chemistry. 1917. Harper. $2.00 540-H49

This is a book for the layman and is one of the most successful attempts ever made to give an accurate, and at the same time an interesting and readable account of the wonders of modern chemistry. Much attention is given to industrial chemistry and in this connection the reader may profit much by the information given concerning various chemical compounds largely advertised in the pages of magazines. The enormous profits made by unscrupulous dealers in many chemical compounds would be greatly curtailed if the public became well informed on many of the topics so simply and entertainingly presented in this book. The relation of chemistry to war work is brought to notice and its importance emphasized.

Holliday, Robert C. Booth Tarkington. 1918. Doubleday. $1.25. 92-T187H

In view of the fact that a great many people are spending time reading books written by Booth Tarkington the author explains himself as producing:—"A little book (which with all of its multiplicity of failings, fears bunkum like the devil) about a gentleman who certainly must be held a thoroughly characteristic American writer. Mr. Tarkington as one of our most popular novelists, should be a thoroughly legitimate object of attack. Has he got any justification for being around these days and for going on? Are you making a decent use of your time in reading him? Ought all his early books to be scrapped? And how, exactly, did he come about anyhow?" As to "how he came about" Mr. Holliday gives a detailed biography of Tarkington which accounts for many tendencies and their development until the age when the writing of books became an accomplished ambition. In his keen critical analysis of Tarkington's novels the author has done as fine a piece of work as we are apt to find.

Rhodes, James F. History of the Civil War, 1861-1865. 1917. Macmillan. $2.50 973.7-R47

The author has given us in this book, not a revised and condensed edition of his earlier work on the Civil war, but a study which makes use of much material only made accessible during recent years. A very readable style combined with the methods of presentation only known to the scholar, make of Mr. Rhodes' work an unusual contribution to the literature of the Civil war. The fact that the work is in one volume, and is provided with a bibliography and a very complete index adds to its value.

Roof, Katharine M. The Life and Art of William Merritt Chase. 1917. Scribners. $4.00 927.573-C487R

"For many years before his death last year, William Merritt Chase was regarded as perhaps the most characteristic of American painters; and Miss Roof was appointed by him to write the story of his life. This she has done in cordial coöperation and with the assistance of the artist's family. With the inclusion of many letters and personal reminiscences and much illustrative material she tells the romantic story of Chase's discontented boyhood in the West, his escape to Paris, and apprenticeship to art, and his subsequent crowded and picturesque career in New York. The work contains an introduction by Alice Gerson Chase and many reproductions of the artist's works."—Literary Digest.

Savić, Vladislav R. South-Eastern Europe; the Main Problem of the Present World Struggle. 1918. Revell. $1.50 949.6-S26

M. Savić, a native Serb, has had much opportunity to judge of affairs in the small states of southeastern Europe. These states he regards as a possible menace to any permanent peace. The relations of Austria-Hungary with Serbia, the part that Serbia has played in the war and the history of all the unhappy southern Slavs is clearly stated. A chapter on the relations of America with the southern Slavs and a tribute to President Wilson are included. The book closes with "A glance into the future" which is perhaps prophetic of what may come to pass in this corner of the world.

Stuck, Hudson. Voyages on the Yukon and its Tributaries. 1917. Scribners. $4.50
917.98-S93v

Archdeacon Stuck has every right to be heard on the subject of Alaska since he has had years of experience with things Alaskan. This book and a former account entitled "Ten Thousand Miles with a Dog Sled", together give a very complete survey of Alaska. "Voyages on the Yukon" is less descriptive of the country than the title indicates. The Klondike rush for gold, the mushroom towns, history of the river regions, the Indians, the schools of Alaska, economic conditions, together with much of personal observation, make the book a most valuable source of information. The vigorous, often picturesque, style of the author adds much of interest to the narrative.

Trufanoff, Sergei M. The Mad Monk of Russia, Iliodor. 1918. Century Co. $2.00
92-T867

There is to the mind of the matter-of-fact American, no more puzzling phase of Russian affairs than the influence exerted by Rasputin, known as the "holy devil" of the Russian court. Mr. Trufanoff, once Father Iliodor, Abbot of the Russian monastery of Tsaritzin has been living in New York. As "Father Iliodor" he was directed to prepare the uneducated, wily Rasputin for the priesthood. Becoming convinced of Rasputin's knavery Father Iliodor had the courage to lead a popular movement which was directed not only against Rasputin but against all who shielded him, including the Holy Synod and the weak Czar and the hysterical and credulous Czarina. Iliodor was unfrocked and made a prisoner, though he later escaped and finally reached New York. The story he tells is amazing and it is well that the publishers took pains to make very detailed investigations with regard to the author's veracity, before the book was offered to the public. Mr. Trufanoff has documents and photographs which seem to investigators to settle the question of veracity. As a side light on Russian affairs, if not as a work of historical value, the book is at least interesting.

Zabriskie, Luther K. The Virgin Islands of the United States of America. 1918. Putnam. $4.00
917.29-Z12

Fifty-one years ago the United States began negotiations for the purchase of the Danish West Indies. On March 31, 1917, the islands became ours. Mr. Zabriskie, who was vice-consul of the United States at St. Thomas gives us in this book "Historical and descriptive, commercial and industrial facts, figures and resources", in order that we may not be ignorant of the value of our new possessions. Much information concerning steamer service, harbor facilities, banks and banking, and the various industries of the islands is included. There is also an account of the sale negotiations between Denmark and the United States. The illustrations are many, made from photographs, and would alone make the book very attractive. The maps and index add to the value of the book.

Meriam, Lewis. Principles governing the retirement of public employees. N. Y. 1918. 477p. 351.8M54

"The object sought in preparing the present book has been primarily to set forth the principal economic, social, administrative and financial questions involved in establishing a retirement system and then, in so far as possible in limited space, to summarize the more important arguments for and against alternative lines of action.

No attempt has been made to outline an ideal retirement system. In the course of the discussion the statement is made that the ideal retirement system is one that is equitable as between the government, the employees and the public, that meets the special needs of the service, and is financially sound. Many general principles may be laid down by which an ideal system for a particular service may be developed, but they have to be applied in the light of facts regarding that particular service."
