(a) Point two Viet Minh proposal calls for evacuation foreign troops all three states Indochina but also for agreement re stationing French troops in Vietnam, implying at least for foreseeable future there would not be demand for total withdrawal. On this point paragraph 8 (a) calls for "readjustment" territories which troops of two parties occupy. While actual meaning is doubtless deliberately vague, suggestion recalls paragraph I (1) Bidault proposal (Secto 143)<sup>2</sup> calling for grouping regular units delimited zones. Viet Minh proposal appears even more detailed on surface providing each party shall give free access troops other party cross its territory to reach its assigned zones.

(b) Paragraph 8 (c) Viet Minh proposal provides for establishment control assure execution cease-fire recalling paragraphs Bidault proposal providing for control mechanisms with major difference Bidault called for international controls while Viet Minh appeal to nationalism Indochinese people by calling for participation only of belligerents thus eliminating all non-Asians except French.

(c) Paragraph 7 of Viet Minh proposal provides for exchange of prisoners of war recalling paragraph (3) Bidault proposal which also calls however, for exchange of civilian internees.

(d) Bidault, of course, calls for signature armistice agreement before end hostilities, while Viet Minh proposal states general political measures (paragraphs 1 through 7) "should be preceded by cessation of hostilities in Indochina and the conclusion to that end of accords between French and each of the three countries". These agreements should cover cease-fire, regrouping of troops, ban on admission of new troops (patterned after Korean armistice) and establishment of controls. While it is quite uncertain even these minimal arrangements are to be carried out before cease-fire occurs, Viets can presumably allege they like French are not calling for immediate cease-fire with no conditions.

(8) Addition elements recalling some of Bidault's points Viet Minh proposal contains other sections presumably designed appeal French. For example:

a. First, of course, are references French Union (paragraph 4). There is obviously no assurance whatever that the "single" government of Vietnam which is called for (nor the governments in the other two countries either for that matter) will join the French Union. However, fact concept is not rejected and indeed implication is free Vietnam may well "freely consent" joint union may furnish fuel for neutralists and others in France.

b. Provisions paragraph 5 recognizing special economic and cultural interests France in Indochina and proposing special reciprocal rights for ressortissants two parties are also unquestionably aimed at winning favor France even though references economic and cultural interests are reminiscent Soviet accords with Poland and Czechoslovakia.

<sup>2</sup> Dated May 8, p. 730.

(9) In summarizing acceptance Viet Minh proposal would seem to us result in rapid turnover Indochina to Communists. In our opinion, however, it has enough propositions designed appeal French opinion in its present state and which seem reasonable on surface perhaps to cause difficulties for French Government especially in light present Assembly situation.<sup>3</sup>

SMITH

---

<sup>3</sup> The U.S. Delegation reported in telegram Secto 175, May 11, that de Margerie of the French Delegation had outlined the tactics the French expected to follow on the Viet Minh proposal along the following lines: "While it is totally unacceptable, they cannot afford to turn it down cold but must rather go through the motions of trying to find something acceptable in it. They must expose it point by point beginning with immediate recognition of Viet Minh and establishing proposal means nothing but turnover. From French point of view, proposals put political cart before military horse and they will accordingly say such political questions should only be taken up after armistice, with satisfactory guarantees, has been concluded." (396.1 GE/5-1154)

---

396.1 GE/5-1154 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET NIACT

GENEVA, May 11, 1954—6 p. m.

Dulte 63. For Secretary from Smith. French have flash press report statement attributed to you that Southeast Asia can be held without Indochina or words to that effect.<sup>1</sup> Bidault is in complete tailspin. Sure

---

<sup>1</sup> A telegram from the French Embassy in Washington (En Clair No. 380, May 12) contained the following report: "Dulles said [in his news conference yesterday] the United States wanted a South East Asian alliance against Communism which would pledge member nations to fight if openly challenged by Communist aggression. While he hoped such an alliance would cover all Indo-China he firmly asserted that the loss of some or all of that country would not necessarily bring the loss of all South East Asia. In conversations with friendly nations the United States was trying to create a situation in which South East Asia would not go down like a row of dominoes if Indo-China fell." (Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 311)

In his news conference the Secretary of State stated in response to questions that the "purpose of this collective security arrangement which we are trying to create is to save Southeast Asia, to save all of Southeast Asia if it can be saved; if not, to save essential parts of it." He said that the "situation in that area, as we found it, was that it was subject to the so-called 'domino theory.' You mean that if one went, another would go?) We are trying to change it so that would not be the case. That is the whole theory of collective security. . . . And what we are trying to do is create a situation in Southeast Asia where the domino situation will not apply. And while I see it has been said that I felt that Southeast Asia could be secured even without perhaps Viet-Nam, Laos, and Cambodia, I do not want for a minute to underestimate the importance of those countries nor do I want for a minute to give the impression that we believe that they are going to be lost or that we have given up trying to prevent their being lost." (Department of State Bulletin, May 24, 1954, p. 782) this taken out of context from more comprehensive statement. Give me urgently anything I can say to him which will help counteract.<sup>2</sup>

SMITH

---

<sup>2</sup>The Department of State transmitted to the U.S. Delegation in telegram Tosec 125, May 11, the verbatim text of some of the pertinent questions and answers from the Secretary's press conference. (396.1 GE/5-1154)

---

751G.00/5-1154: Telegram

The Chargé at Saigon (McClintock) to the Department of State

SECRET NIACT

SAIGON, May 11, 1954—7 p. m.

2342. Sent Geneva niact 86; repeated information Paris 815, London 55, Tokyo 96. De Jean tells me, re Secto 164 repeated Paris 236, Saigon 55, London 148, Tokyo 43 [42],<sup>1</sup> that General Navarre has sought by direct radio message to Giap and by parachute letter dropped on Red Cross tent at Dien Bien Phu to indicate his immediate readiness to evacuate wounded.<sup>2</sup> De Jean has likewise telegraphed French delegation Geneva so to inform Viet Minh delegation.

Although French do not have many helicopters in area, they are getting together such machines as are available and plan to land with first party professor of faculty of medicine, Hanoi University, who personally knows General Giap and speaks Vietnamese. French helicopters will commence immediate evacuation most seriously wounded irrespective of whether French or Vietnamese. Less urgent cases will have to await C-47 evacuation after reconstruction of airstrip.

McCLINTOCK

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated May 10, p. 757.

<sup>2</sup> For documentation on the wounded at Dien Bien Phu, see volume XIII.

---

396.1 GE/5-1154

Memorandum of Conversation, by the Adviser to the United States Delegation (Bonsal)<sup>1</sup>

SECRET

GENEVA, May 11, 1954.

Participants: M. Paul-Henri Spaak, Minister of Foreign Affairs and Leader of the Belgium Delegation
Philip W. Bonsal

Subject: M. Spaak's views on Indochina

After General Smith's dinner, I had a lengthy conversation with M. Spaak whom I had known in the early days of the Marshall Plan.

---

<sup>1</sup> Summary of conversation transmitted to the Department of State in telegram Secto 195, May 13. (396. GE/5-1354)

M. Spaak believes the US should take the leadership in a policy for Southeast Asia similar to that which has given such good results in Europe. His thought is that we should establish a line on our side of which the governments and peoples will give adequate support to the concepts of free world orientation and collective security. We should make it quite clear to the Communists that if they step over that line they will risk a generalized war. With regard to Indochina, about which M. Spaak states he has no "expert" knowledge, it is his belief that we should leave the French and Vietnamese and the Vietminh to work out the best possible solution reflecting their relative potentialities and that we should not involve ourselves directly in the situation. I observed that we had already made a very considerable investment of prestige, material and funds in Indochina.

M. Spaak is most discouraged about the French situation although he expressed great admiration for M. Bidault personally. He states that the French Government must force the EDC matter to an issue in the Assembly without any further delay. He states that if Europe is not "created" in the near future, the whole structure of security which has been erected during the past few years will be in danger of falling to the ground. It is his thought that the other EDC partners should issue a pressing appeal to the French Government to move forward.

In the course of our walk from the Hotel du Rhone to the Hotel Beau Rivage we met General Bethouard who is in Geneva for two or three days. He expressed the gloomiest views regarding the French cabinet situation. He castigated the attitude of the Gaullists in most severe terms.

---

Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 308

The British Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs (Eden) to the Head of the United States Delegation (Smith)<sup>1</sup>

TOP SECRET

GENEVA, May 11, 1954.

MY DEAR BEDELL: Thank you for your letter of May 10<sup>2</sup> giving me a summary of the messages which you had received from Washington yesterday and which we discussed at noon.<sup>3</sup>

---

<sup>1</sup> Text of letter transmitted to the Department of State in telegram Dulte 67, May 13. (790.5/5-1354)

For a summary of Eden's reply and other related comments, see telegram Dulte 66, May 13, p. 791.

<sup>2</sup> Ante, p. 761.

<sup>3</sup> May 10. For a report of this discussion, see telegram Dulte 66, May 13, p. 791.

I enclose a copy of the text for the joint statement which we agreed would be suitable for use if it is found necessary to make a public statement.<sup>4</sup> Meantime you may care to know that in reply to questions in the House yesterday, the Minister of State used the phrases which you and I agreed upon,<sup>5</sup> and my feeling is that no further public statement is now necessary.

As regards the substance, I think you agreed with me that we should make a start with the Five Power Staff talks and should not commit ourselves, or appear to commit ourselves, at this stage to the exact composition of the wider group which we hope would eventually discuss South East Asia security arrangements.

My strong view remains that it would be fatal at this stage to begin discussions with a ten power group. To do this before the results of the Conference are known would destroy any prospect of bringing along the Asian powers who really matter.

What I do think will be useful is that we should inform and consult the Colombo Powers, Siam and the Philippines, and possibly others, about the progress of the work of the Five Power Staffs, in the hope that by the time we can see what prospects of Geneva are, they will be willing to take an interest in security arrangements of a wider character. We on our side shall also keep the Colombo Powers fully informed of the developments at Geneva and will do our best to bring them along.

This is, I am convinced, the best way of trying to bring Asian opinion along with us. As you personally are well aware, that has been one of my principal anxieties from the beginning. I do not understand how your Chiefs of Staff can have obtained a different idea of my purpose.

There is one further point. We discussed the question where the Five Power Staff Agency should have its first meeting. I had originally thought that Singapore would be the most suitable, but you thought it should start in Washington. I have now heard from our people in Singapore that they rather doubt whether Singapore is in fact suitable from the point of view of Asian opinion, and they throw doubt on Washington for this same reason. I wonder whether an alternative would be to have the first meeting in London?

I am available at any time in case you would like to discuss this further.

Yours ever,

ANTHONY

<sup>4</sup> Attachment 1 below.

<sup>5</sup> Attachment 2 below.

[Attachment 1]

DRAFT JOINT STATEMENT FOR ISSUE BY THE FIVE POWERS

Pending wider discussions of measures to support a stable peace in South East Asia, the Governments of Australia, France, New Zealand, the United Kingdom and the United States have agreed that their military representatives should undertake an examination of the situation in South East Asia.

This examination will be undertaken by existing staff agencies formed some time ago for the study without commitment of problems of common concern.

The problems to be reviewed will be of interest to a number of other countries, notably the Powers represented at the Colombo Conference, Siam, the Philippines, etc. These countries have been informed of the intention to initiate this study and, during the progress of the work, will be consulted and kept informed.

[Attachment 2]

Mr. Warbey

To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs if he will make a statement on the proposed staff talks with the United States, France and other countries concerning Indo-China?

Mr. Selwyn Lloyd

The existing military agencies have been examining and will, of course, continue to examine jointly the various contingencies with which we may be faced. The Five Power Staff Agency is one such organisation. I must emphasise that any examinations undertaken are without commitment.

MAY 12, 1954

396.1 GE/5-1254: Telegram

Smith-Bidault-Eden Meeting, Geneva, May 12, Noon: The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET

GENEVA, May 12, 1954—7 p. m.

Secto 183. Repeated information Paris 244, Saigon 59, London 152. At Eden's urgent request we met with him and Bidault this noon to discuss tactics on Indochina. If French and we agreed, he proposed to raise following questions<sup>1</sup> this afternoon after Cambodians and Vietnamese had spoken :

Is it agreed that first start is to get fighting stopped in orderly manner? It is assumed that arrangements dealing with wounded are in hand at Dien Bien Phu. If there is agreement on above question, following other questions require urgent answer :

1. Is it agreed that all troops on both sides shall be concentrated in determined area?
2. Is it accepted that Laos and Cambodia are in special category and that Viet Minh forces will be withdrawn from them?
3. Who is to work out areas of concentration for Vietnam? Is it to be commanders-in-chief?
4. Is it agreed that when all troops have been concentrated into determined areas, any irregulars shall be disarmed?
5. Are we in favor of international supervision? If so, in what form? UK would prefer UN. UN does not necessarily mean combatants or any of those here represented. There could be an agreed panel of countries.

There was agreement that his raising these questions presented no difficulty with French or ourselves. Bidault did not wish himself to question Viet Minh directly but felt Eden's questions and Communist answers would help him later to analyze Viet Minh proposals. On international supervision, Smith felt we should stick on principle that it be UN and that collectively we would have enough influence to insure acceptable composition. Eden felt composition in Korea had been mistake since two Communist nations blocked everything. He suggested four not from either side, such as Swedes, Swiss, Latin American and Asian, probably Indian. Smith said Indian soldier, such as General Thimmaya might be acceptable but Indian politician would be wholly unacceptable. Bidault also objected to any Indian but felt Thimmaya might be acceptable. Eden pushed hard for India as great power of Asia or at least one great power in Asia and held its policy gradually moving our way. It was nevertheless agreed that we should not at this time go beyond principle of UN supervision and fight out battle of composition later.

Eden asked whether we should continue regular meetings on Indochina or go into restricted sessions. Bidault felt restricted sessions might be agreeable later but felt principles should be further clarified in general meetings. Smith agreed.

SMITH

---

<sup>1</sup> In telegram Secto 185, May 12, the U.S. Delegation reported Bidault stated that Eden's questions may have saved the Laniel government. Bidault indicated that the threat of dissolution would have considerable effect on former Gaullists. He said he was also holding in reserve his own threat of resignation which, carrying 100 MRP votes with it, he believed would be effective in avoiding undesirable instructions. (396.1 GE/5-1254)

396.1 GE/5-1254 : Telegram

The Secretary of State to the United States Delegation<sup>1</sup>

CONFIDENTIAL PRIORITY WASHINGTON, May 12, 1954—2:09 p. m.

Tosec 138. For the Under Secretary from the Secretary.

Begin verbatim text.

The following basic instructions, which have been approved by the President, and which are in confirmation of those already given you orally, will guide you, as head of the United States Delegation, in your participation in the Indochina phase of the Geneva Conference.<sup>2</sup>

1. The presence of a United States representative during the discussion at the Geneva Conference of "the problem of restoring peace in Indochina" rests on the Berlin Agreement of February 18, 1954. Under that agreement the US, UK, France, and USSR agreed that the four of them plus other interested states should be invited to a conference at Geneva on April 26 "for the purpose of reaching a peaceful settlement of the Korean question" and agreed further, that "the problem of restoring peace in Indochina" would also be discussed at Geneva by the four powers represented at Berlin, and Communist China and other interested states.

2. You will not deal with the delegates of the Chinese Communist regime, or any other regime not now diplomatically recognized by the United States, on any terms which imply political recognition or which concede to that regime any status other than that of a regime with which it is necessary to deal on a de facto basis in order to end aggression, or the threat of aggression, and to obtain peace.

3. The position of the United States in the Indochina phase of the Geneva Conference is that of an interested nation which, however, is neither a belligerent nor a principal in the negotiation.

4. The United States is participating in the Indochina phase of the Conference in order thereby to assist in arriving at decisions which will help the nations of that area peacefully to enjoy territorial integrity and political independence under stable and free governments with the opportunity to expand their economies, to realize their legitimate national aspirations, and to develop security through individual and collective defense against aggression, from within or without. This implies that these people should not be amalgamated into the Communist bloc of imperialistic dictatorship.

5. The United States is not prepared to give its express or implied approval to any cease-fire, armistice, or other settlement which would have the effect of subverting the existing lawful governments of the

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by the Secretary of State. Repeated to Paris as telegram 4042, to Saigon as telegram 2265, and to London as telegram 6028.

In telegram Tedul 47, May 9, the Secretary sent to Under Secretary Smith a draft of the instructions and said he would try to obtain Congressional approval. The Secretary indicated that he had not yet submitted the instructions to the President or to the Department of Defense. (396.1 GE/5-954) On May 10 the draft instructions were sent to the Department of Defense. (396.1 GE/5-1054) three aforementioned states or of permanently impairing their territorial integrity or of placing in jeopardy the forces of the French Union in Indochina, or which otherwise contravened the principles stated in (4) above.

<sup>2</sup> In telegram Tosec 137, May 12, the Secretary informed Under Secretary Smith that he had read the text of the instructions to the House Foreign Affairs and Senate Foreign Relations Committees and had received no objections from them. (396.1 GE/5-1254)

6. You should, insofar as is compatible with these instructions, cooperate with the Delegation of France and with the delegations of other friendly participants in this phase of the Conference.

7. If in your judgment continued participation in the Indochina phase of the Conference appears likely to involve the United States in a result inconsistent with its policy, as stated above, you should immediately so inform your Government, recommending either withdrawal or the limitation of the US role to that of an observer. If the situation develops such that, in your opinion, either of such actions is essential under the circumstances and time is lacking for consultation with Washington, you may act in your discretion.

8. You are authorized to inform other delegations at Geneva of these instructions.

End verbatim text.

DULLES

396.1 GE/5-1254

Memorandum of Conversation, by the Special Adviser to the United States Delegation (Heath)

SECRET

GENEVA, May 12, 1954.

Participants: Nguyen Quoc Dinh, head of the Vietnamese Delegation

Nguyen Dac Khe, a member of the Vietnamese Delegation

Donald R. Heath, Ambassador to Cambodia

Subject: The Vietnamese Conference Plan Tactics

Dinh told me yesterday that the Vietnamese Delegation was against Bidault's armistice proposal; the Delegation is against any armistice as they feared it would inevitably work toward the Communists' advantage. Nevertheless, the Delegation would not in the Plenary Session at this time raise any general opposition to Bidault's armistice plan, realizing that it is politically necessary for the latter to present some proposal for eventual cease-fire to the French parliament. The Vietnamese tactics were to discuss the proposal with the French, to point out its weak points and stall for time. They believe that if Bidault finds parliamentary backing he would prefer to keep up the fight rather than negotiate a necessarily unsatisfactory armistice.

Dinh inquired whether there was [were] any developments of [on] the Secretary's consultation with the President, Congress and our military authorities. I replied that we had no news of the results of the Secretary's discussions. Dinh reminded me that he had told the Secretary, to the latter's evident approval, that rather than accept an unsatisfactory solution the Vietnamese Delegation would walk out of the conference.

396.1 GE/5-1254 : Telegram

*Third Plenary Session on Indochina, Geneva, May 12, 3:05 p. m.:
The United States Delegation to the Department of State*<sup>1</sup>

OFFICIAL USE ONLY      PRIORITY      GENEVA, May 12, 1954—midnight.

Secto 193. Repeated information London 157, Moscow 66, Tokyo 55, priority Paris 250, Saigon 63, Phnom Penh, Vientiane unnumbered. Tokyo pass CINCFE. Department pass Defense. Eden chaired third plenary session Indochina phase today. Although Vietnam inscribed to speak first, Eden permitted Cambodian delegate to open debate by reading text of telegram he had received regarding killing of Cambodian Government official and several other persons by Viet Minh on May 10.

Vietnam representative then reviewed events since World War II, blaming Communists in Viet Minh for betraying national aspirations Vietnamese people and turning movement into a tool of foreign ideology, and praising Bao Dai for progress made in winning recognition Vietnamese sovereignty. He then read text of April 28 joint Vietnamese-French declaration and also full texts of treaty of independence and treaty of association between Vietnam and French. (Translations sent Department in Saigon's 2145, April 28.<sup>2</sup>)

Recognition of Vietnam sovereignty deprived Viet Minh of its raison d'être. Vietnamese representative then made following points:

(1) Governments of Laos and Cambodia have full sovereignty, which state of Vietnam respects. Fate of "free Laos" and "free Cambodia" movements wholly within competence above-mentioned governments. Vietnam delegations, in view rejection by Cambodia and Laos Governments of proposal that these two movements be admitted to conference, has adopted same point of view. Reestablishment of peace in these countries will be accomplished simply by withdrawal all invading Viet Minh forces.

(2) Viet Minh proposals purposeless. Viet Minh has no right to negotiate in name of Vietnamese nation, since this exclusive right

<sup>1</sup> A set of minutes of this meeting (US Verb Min/3) is in Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 276. The minutes indicate that the meeting convened at 3:05 p. m. and adjourned at 5:35 p. m. The minutes are also printed in Conférence de Genève, pp. 58-79. The speeches of Chou En-lai and Eden and the proposal made by the Vietnamese Delegation are printed in Cmd. 9186, pp. 123-127. The speech by Eden and the proposal made by the Vietnamese Delegation, Indochina Documents IC/6 and IC/9, May 12, are in Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 279A.

<sup>2</sup> Not printed. (751G.00/4-2854)

State of Vietnam. France and Vietnam have already reached full agreement on question independence and participation in French Union.

(3) Viet Minh proposals do not constitute serious basis for discussion. Absence of all international control over elections is unacceptable.

Vietnam delegation then made proposals regarding (1) military settlement, and (2) political settlement (Secto 190<sup>3</sup>).

Chou En-lai then took floor and ran gamut of Communist propaganda charges regarding French colonialism and US imperialism. Chou used harsh tone and succeeded in being unusually insulting to US, France and Bidault personally. Said stepped-up US intervention created danger extension Indochinese war and posed "ever-increasing threat to peace of Asia and world." Chou called French military efforts "colonial war," while terming Indochinese resistance "just war". "Any attempt to ignore or underrate strength of Indochinese peoples or to deny existence of Democratic Republic of Vietnam and resistance Governments of Khmer and Pathet Lao is doomed to failure". French ruling circles "either are unwilling to stop Indochina war, which has been condemned by French people as 'dirty war', or deliberately put forward terms unacceptable to opposite side to obstruct termination of war." Chou said "activities of United States for forming aggressive blocs in Asia are inseparable from its objectives of preparing global war and establishing domination over whole world. Certain elements in ruling circles of US have of late concocted endless fictions about intervention of People's Republic of China in Indochinese war". US organization of blocs in Asia "having nothing in common with safeguarding of collective security" and "are being carried on behind backs of Asian peoples and of most Asian states. To organize certain Asian states into bloc against other Asian states can only create and aggravate trouble and division in Asia".

Referring to his April 28 statement regarding consolidation of Asian states for safeguarding of peace and security in Asia,<sup>4</sup> Chou said only by mutual respect for each other's independence and sovereignty and by developing normal relations could Asian states "avert unprecedented calamity arising out of attempts of new colonialists to use Asians to fight Asians."

Chou then cited desire for peaceful settlement of Indochinese war on part Chinese people and in India, Indonesia, Burma, Pakistan and Europe. According to him not all American statesmen in favor "of embarking upon military adventure in Indochina or Southeast Asia." Chou then paid brief tribute to "peace policy" of USSR.

<sup>3</sup> Infra.

<sup>4</sup> Made in Third Plenary Session on Korea, reported in telegram Secto 28, Apr. 28, p. 158.

Chou endorsed Viet Minh statement and proposals as "truly expressing will of Indochinese peoples to fight for peace, independence, unity and democracy as well as their legitimate demands." These proposals, he said, "have already opened way for peaceful settlement of Indochinese question." He then castigated Bidault for maintaining in his May 8 statement<sup>5</sup> "attitude of a colonial ruler, ignoring existence Democratic Republic of Vietnam, and refusing participation representatives Khmer and Pathet Lao at conference." Bidault also, according Chou, "left aside political basis for restoration of peace in Indochina and acted like victor laying unilateral terms for cessation of hostilities and demanding their acceptance by peoples of Indochina."

In milder conclusion to speech Chou again endorsed Viet Minh proposals "as basis for conference to discuss termination of war and restoration of peace in Indochina."

Eden then asked questions contained in Secto 183,<sup>6</sup> adding phrase "with, I suppose, reference to conference back here" at end of number three.

Smith then made statement, text of which contained Secto 191.<sup>7</sup>

Bidault took floor, expressed sympathy over events mentioned in telegram read by Cambodian delegate, stated conference should tackle at earliest possible date problem of restoration of peace in Laos and Cambodia, castigated Chou for presumption in telling him about state of French public opinion and endorsed Eden's questions as useful contribution.

Viet Minh representative made speech trying to show that Indochina is single theatre of operations and explaining intermixture of Cambodians, Laotians and Vietnamese in resistance movement.

Cambodian delegate endorsed Vietnamese statement and criticized Chou for confusing Viet Minh movement with Khmer Issarak movement and again denouncing so-called Khmer Government as invention of Viet Minh and People's Republic of China. He then replied to Eden questions saying Cambodian delegation wants Cambodia to be considered in special category, is in favor of immediate withdrawal of Viet Minh forces and irregulars under Viet Minh control, and favors international supervision of armistice.

Molotov then took floor and in clumsy statement tried to discredit telegram read by Cambodian delegate at beginning of session, saying

---

<sup>5</sup> Made in the First Plenary Session on Indochina, reported in telegram Secto 154, May 8, p. 734.

<sup>6</sup> Dated May 12, p. 776.

<sup>7</sup> Dated May 12, p. 784.

it was of uncertain origin, had not been distributed, if incident had occurred illustrated lack of Cambodian Government control, etc. Lively interchange between Bidault, Viet Minh representative, Cambodian representative and Molotov ensued, during course of which Molotov attempted ironic joke which drew laughter from Communist side and dignified but stinging rebuke from Bidault that death of human beings was not laughing matter, upon which Communist side fell dead silent.

After getting session under control again Eden set next Indochina plenary for May 14.

SMITH

396.1 GE/5-1254 : Telegram

Third Plenary Session on Indochina, Geneva, May 12, 3:05 p. m.:
The United States Delegation to the Department of State

PRIORITY

GENEVA, May 12, 1954.

Secto 190. Repeated information London 154, Tokyo 52, priority Paris 247, Saigon 61, Phnom Penh, Vientiane unnumbered, Moscow 64. Tokyo for CINCFE. Department pass Defense. Following is text Vietnamese proposals tabled Third Indochina Plenary:

The conference of Berlin recommended the restoration of peace in Indochina. This restoration implies:

- A military settlement, in order to end the hostilities, and,
- A political settlement, in order to establish peace on a real and durable basis.

A. Military Settlement

(1) The delegation of the state of Vietnam declares itself ready to examine any working paper to this effect submitted to the conference. These documents must present a serious and positive effort, susceptible of leading in good faith to a satisfactory military settlement.

(2) They must include guarantees sufficient to assure a real and durable peace, to prevent any possibility of a new aggression.

(3) They must not lead to a partition, direct or indirect, definitive or provisional, in fact or in law, of the national territory.

(4) They must provide for an international control of the execution of the conditions for cessation of hostilities.

B. Political Settlement

Concerning the relations between the state of Vietnam and France:

The relations will be settled on the base of the joint Franco-Vietnamese declaration of April 28, 1954, which foresees the signature of two fundamental treaties: The first of these treaties recognizes the total independence of the state of Vietnam and its full and entire sovereignty; the second establishes a Franco-Vietnamese association in the French Union, based on equality.

Concerning the internal political settlement in Vietnam:

(1) Because of the territorial and political unity of Vietnam, recognition of the principle that the only state qualified legally to represent Vietnam is the state personified by His Majesty Bao Dai, Chief of State. This state is the only one invested with the powers flowing from the internal and external sovereignty of Vietnam.

(2) Recognition of the principle of a single army in the entire territory. This army is the National Army, placed under the direction and the responsibility of the state of Vietnam.

Settlement of the status of the Viet Minh soldiers in the framework of the legal army of the state of Vietnam, in conformity with the above principle, and by modalities to be determined.

International control of the application of the above settlement:

(3) In the framework and under the competence of the state of Vietnam, free elections throughout its territory, as soon as a determination is made by the Security Council that the authority of the state is established throughout its territory and that conditions of freedom are found to exist. In order to assure the liberty and sincerity of these elections, an international control functioning under the auspices of the United Nations.

(4) Representative government formed under the aegis of His Majesty Bao Dai, Chief of State of Vietnam, following and according to the results of the elections.

(5) Engagement by the state of Vietnam to refrain from any action against persons having collaborated with the Viet Minh during the hostilities.

(6) International guarantee of the political and territorial integrity of the state of Vietnam.

(7) Assistance by friendly nations to develop the national wealth and to raise the standard of living of the country.

SMITH

---

396.1 GE/5-1254: Telegram

*Third Plenary Session on Indochina, Geneva, May 12, 3:05 p. m.:
The United States Delegation to the Department of State*

PRIORITY

GENEVA, May 12, 1954.

Secto 191. Repeated information London 155, Tokyo 53, priority Paris 248, Saigon 62, Phnom Penh, Vientiane unnn, Moscow 65. Tokyo for CINCFE. Department pass Defense. Following is text my statement today Third Indochina Plenary:

The United States delegation has listened with interest to the impressive observations of the chief of the Vietnamese delegation. We will give close study to the proposal he has made and in a future session will give the United States views on it. The United States and more than 30 other nations recognize the government which he represents here as the legal government of free and independent Vietnam.

I wish to make it clear, Mr. Chairman, that the position of the United States is, and has been, that while the Viet Minh is necessarily present as an armed aggressor engaged in hostilities against the Governments of Vietnam, Cambodia and Laos, this in no way implies recognition of the Viet Minh as a government.

The United States delegation "agrees with the delegate of Vietnam that a correct, practical and democratic way of restoring peace in Vietnam would be for the aggressive belligerents on the other side to make their peace with the legal government and once tranquillity is thereby restored, to accept the will of the people as expressed at the polls in national elections, the freedom and honesty of which would be assured by international supervision under United Nations' auspices".

We welcome the very pertinent questions put forward by Mr. Eden and will await replies with the greatest interest.

In particular, we consider it essential that the program for the orderly cessation of hostilities be under effective international supervision under the auspices of the United Nations.

I believe Mr. Eden's advice to this conference to be very sound. Therefore, I will not take your time to refer to the all too familiar distorted version of past and present events presented to us this afternoon by the delegate from Communist China. I don't think they'll change the considered opinion of anyone in this room, or anywhere else for that matter.

SMITH

---

751G.00/5-1254: Telegram

The Secretary of State to the United States Delegation<sup>1</sup>

TOP SECRET      NIACT

WASHINGTON, May 12, 1954—6:12 p. m.

Tedul 60. Paris for Ambassador, Geneva for Under Secretary, Saigon eyes only and info only McClintock, from Secretary. Ambassador Bonnet called on me today at his request.<sup>2</sup> He referred to our talk

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by MacArthur. Repeated to Paris as telegram 4048 and to Saigon as telegram 2269.

<sup>2</sup> For text of memorandum of conversation, May 12, see volume XIII.

May 8 when I told him US was prepared to sit down to talk with French about "internationalizing" war in Indochina (Tedul 46<sup>3</sup>). He said French Govt believes time has now come to have such discussions and wants to know US attitude and position in event Geneva does not lead to cessation hostilities and military situation Indochina makes it imperative for French to ask for outside assistance. French Govt cannot wait until outcome of Geneva to know US attitude since by then military situation may have so deteriorated that Indochina would be lost. French Govt knows US intervention must be within framework of collective action but doubts that Australia can move before May 29 elections and recognizes that UK "because of preoccupations re both Hongkong and Nehru" may not be willing to join. It is therefore very important to know precisely what US is willing to do and when it might be able to act.

I told Bonnet we were prepared to begin discussions with French but doubted desirability of doing so until after vote of confidence by French Assembly tomorrow. I added that problems involved in US participation had been under continuous examination by us including highest level this govt and I felt we could usefully begin talks at very early date after vote of confidence. Bonnet agreed and said he obviously was not in position to discuss substance today.

Question then arose as to where discussions should be held. I said we would wish to keep in close touch with Laniel and tentatively thought Paris might be best place. Bonnet said he would put this question to Paris indicating there were probably advantages in having them in Paris and also advantages in having them in Washington. He would seek French views on this.

DULLES

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated May 9, p. 742.

---

396.1 GE/5-1254 : Telegram

The Secretary of State to the United States Delegation<sup>1</sup>

TOP SECRET

WASHINGTON, May 12, 1954—6:50 p. m.

Tosec 143. Secretary saw Spender May 10<sup>2</sup> briefing him along lines conversation with Munro May 8 (Tosec 121).<sup>3</sup> Spender additionally raised question possible UN action. Secretary said he thought there should be some UN action but action should not be dependent UN

---

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by Raynor of EUR/BNA. Repeated to Canberra as telegram 209, to Wellington as telegram 158, to USUN as telegram 554, and to Paris and London by pouch.

<sup>2</sup> Text of memorandum of conversation is in Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 328.

<sup>3</sup> For text of memorandum of conversation, May 8, see volume XIII; for telegram Tosec 121, May 10, see volume XII.

because procedural slowness and probable difficulty obtaining two-thirds favorable vote. Secretary mentioned by way of illustration possible appropriate action by UN could be sending peace observation commissions Laos and Cambodia where it is clearer than in case Viet Nam external aggression involved. Spender raised personal basis possibility Cambodia, Laos or Thailand submitting question to Security Council but with action to be deferred pending outcome Geneva Conference. Secretary replied that while suggestion might have merit would not desire encourage such step pending clearer indication as to which direction French will take. He expressed apprehension that such step taken against wishes French might mitigate against possibility French maintaining firm position.

DULLES

MAY 13, 1954

751J.00/5-1354 : Telegram

The Chargé at Vientiane (Rives) to the Department of State

SECRET

VIENTIANE, May 13, 1954—10 a. m.

34. Sent Saigon priority 103, priority Geneva unnumbered, repeated information Paris 23. Crown Prince informed me today that Laotian Government has sent instructions Laotian delegation Geneva to oppose invitation so-called Pathet Lao members on both political and military grounds. Laotian Government sees no reason recognition Pathet Lao in view danger to Laos comes from outside and fears usual infiltration into power if even de facto recognition given. Militarily, Laos Government foresees continual ability Communist Laotians call for help of Viet Minh or China once their existence admitted.

Chargé requested [forward?] Laotian Government plea that US stand firm in opposition to invitation Pathet Lao participate conference.<sup>1</sup>

RIVES

---

<sup>1</sup>The U.S. Delegation replied in telegram Secto 204, May 14, as follows: "You may assure Crown Prince US firm in opposition invitation Pathet Lao and Khmer resistance groups." (396.1 GE/5-1454)

396.1 GE/5-854 : Telegram

The Secretary of State to the United States Delegation<sup>1</sup>

SECRET

PRIORITY

WASHINGTON, May 13, 1954—4:17 p. m.

Tosec 152. For your background information and for your use as check list in connection with proposals already made by French

---

<sup>1</sup>Drafted by Fisher of EUR/WE and Sturm of FE/PSA. Repeated to Saigon as telegram 2284, to Paris as telegram 4066.

(Secto 143 as modified by Secto 152<sup>2</sup>) and any compromises which French may appear to favor hereafter, following principles seem to us basic to any acceptable settlement in Indochina :

1. The establishment of international control machinery in place and ready to function prior to an actual cease-fire.
2. Representatives of the international control commission should be guaranteed unrestricted movement in, and free access to all of Indochina.
3. Such a commission should have sufficient military personnel and logistic support to discharge its responsibilities in connection with the armistice terms.
4. Provision for UN assumption of responsibility for supervision of the international control commission. (Some other form of effective international control might well be a satisfactory substitute for UN supervision.)
5. Measures to provide for the security of troops and populations, and guarantees against abuses of the cease-fire by either party.
6. Provisions for the humane and orderly liberation of POW's and internees.
7. Evacuation of Viet Minh forces from Laos and Cambodia.
8. Provision for examination of political and economic problems following an armistice agreement.
9. No provisions in armistice of a political nature, such as for early elections, or for troop withdrawals that would clearly lead to a Communist take-over.

French proposal appears to us to depart from above criteria at following points:

1. Hostilities are to cease immediately on signature of agreement and no time is allowed for installation of control commission.
2. Proposal omits statement re measures to protect Franco-Vietnamese military forces and civilian populations of Associated States, which statement was contained in Secto 132,<sup>3</sup> and only measure this nature proposed concerns regrouping of forces.
3. No provision is made for examination of economic and political problems following a cease-fire.

French proposal needs much spelling out in detail if significance is to be judged accurately. If French should proceed to attempt to reconcile their proposal with that made by Communists in effort negotiate compromise, careful attention must be paid to adherence or non-adherence to principles set forth above as well as to proposed details of implementation in order to determine point at which a French proposal would cross the line of what is not acceptable to US, thereby requiring a decision in the light of the NSC action of May 8.<sup>4</sup>

<sup>2</sup> Both dated May 8, see telegram Secto 143, May 8, p. 730.

<sup>3</sup> Dated May 7, p. 714.

<sup>4</sup> For a report on decisions taken by the NSC on May 8, see telegram Tedul 43, May 8, p. 731.

You are authorized to discuss contents this message as you may deem appropriate with French and other friendly delegations.

DULLES

---

110.11 DU/5-1854 : Telegram

The Secretary of State to the United States Delegation<sup>1</sup>

CONFIDENTIAL

WASHINGTON, May 13, 1954—5:08 p. m.

Tedul 65. Personal for Under Secretary from Secretary. I hear the finest reports of the way you have taken hold of the Geneva task. Certainly it is a tough one. But you should know that the President and I are delighted with the way you are tackling it. At the moment of dictating this, we await anxiously the results of the vote in Paris.<sup>2</sup> Best regards. Foster.

DULLES

---

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by the Secretary of State.

<sup>2</sup> The French National Assembly discussion of the question of debate on Indochina culminated in a vote of confidence late on the evening of May 13. The Laniel government survived by a vote of 289 to 287. For the record of the discussions, see France, Journal Officiel, Assemblée Nationale, 1954, Débats, pp. 2336-2345 and 2368-2383.

---

396.1 GE/5-1854 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET

GENEVA, May 13, 1954—6 p. m.

Secto 197. Repeated information Paris 254, London 159, Saigon 64, Moscow 68. Pass to Defense. Vietnamese proposal tabled yesterday (text transmitted Secto 190)<sup>1</sup> covers both military and political aspects problem. In effect Vietnamese delegation proposes Viet Minh dissolve their government and army under terms political amnesty supervised and guaranteed by "international control". Later Viet Minh soldiers of this army would be taken into Vietnamese National Army and there would be internationally supervised elections at some unspecified future date (as soon as security council determines Bao Dai Government is established throughout Vietnam and that conditions of freedom exist). This might be ideal solution from standpoint but hardly acceptable to Viet Minh who make same proposal in reverse. Both Vietnamese and Viet Minh proposals are obviously victor's solution.

Vietnamese proposal, especially with regard incorporating Viet Minh soldiers after they disarm and disband into Vietnamese National Army, will be quite unacceptable to other side. Vietnamese are certainly aware this aspect problem and their proposition clearly reflects basically differing French and Vietnamese objectives this conference. Whereas termination hostilities with more or less satisfactory guarantees is general French objective, Vietnamese, who have less substantial military assets, are primarily concerned avoid loss segments their territory to Viet Minh or any settlement which endangers their position as legal and effective government of Vietnam.

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated May 12, p. 783.

Following are comments on some of specific provisos :

1. Paragraph 3, Section A on military settlement categorically rejects partition in accordance with known Vietnamese position. From wording it is clear Vietnamese wish avoid not only partition by drawing a line across their country but also by permanent or semi-permanent establishment of zones, enclaves etc.

2. International controls and guarantees of execution military settlement are envisaged (paragraph 4, Section A) but it is not made clear how they will work.

3. Section B on political settlement contains philosophy Bao Dai Government is sole legal representative Vietnam. This is expressed even more strongly than Pham Van Dong's allegation regarding right Viet Minh speak for country. Stemming from this, Vietnamese view settlement is that Viet Minh Army should be merged into Vietnamese National Army, position sure to be unacceptable to Viet Minh. It is noted Vietnamese proposal further call international control of integration Viet Minh Army into National Army Vietnam, which would doubtless be difficult and highly complex problem to execute.

4. While Viet Minh proposal called for elections to be organized by "democratic republic of Vietnam", Vietnamese of course insist Bao Dai Government should organize them.

5. About only point resemblance between Viet Minh and Vietnamese proposals is recommendation clemency for all persons collaborating with other side during hostilities (paragraph 5, Section B).

SMITH

---

320.2 AB/5-1354 : Telegram

The Secretary of State to the United States Delegation<sup>1</sup>

SECRET      PRIORITY

WASHINGTON, May 13, 1954—6:58 p. m.

761. I believe that steps might now be taken to bring UN into Southeast Asia picture by instituting UN Observation in Indochina area. I think Thai presentation would be more effective than Cambodia or Laos initiative, since it would come from experienced representatives of an indisputably independent UN Member.

---

<sup>1</sup>Drafted by Popper and Stein of UNA/UNP. Repeated to USUN as telegram 555, to Paris as telegram 4068, to London as telegram 6061, to Bangkok as telegram 2234, and to Saigon as telegram 2291.

Therefore suggest you approach Prince Wan and ask him whether he would agree to revive Thai plan of June, 1953, for use of Peace Observation Commission in Indochina area to observe and report on threats to Thai security. Sarasin is familiar with Thai plan.<sup>2</sup>

If Thais would ask for POC, we would hope to push matter through SC to Soviet veto and then urgently convene GA. Assembly would be asked designate POC Subcommittee perhaps composed of Pakistan, India, Uruguay, New Zealand and Sweden. We would expect Associated States to associate themselves with Thai request at early stage and authorize Subcommittee to enter their territory. POC Subcommittee terms of reference would indicate that Subcommittee could carry out observation in general area of Indochina and send observers to any state in area on its request.

If Wan agrees, you should consult French, British and Associated States representatives.

DULLES

---

<sup>2</sup> For documentation on this plan, see volume XIII.

---

790.5/5-1354 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

TOP SECRET      NIACT

GENEVA, May 13, 1954—8 p. m.

Dulte 66. S/S-R pass Defense. I made an oral presentation to Eden of your Tedul 48<sup>1</sup> and followed it by an informal written summary.<sup>2</sup> British accept Washington viewpoint that we should move forward concurrently on two parallel lines, and are prepared at once to make a start with the five power staff discussions, which they understand will be exclusively concerned with the development of military plans. They believe we should not commit ourselves, nor appear to commit ourselves, at this stage to the exact composition of the wider group which we would hope to eventually discuss Southeast Asia security arrangements; in other words, the second of the two parallel lines of action proposed by your Tedul 48. They think it would be useful to inform and consult the Colombo powers, Thailand and the Philippines, and possibly others, about the work of the five power staff. They doubt that Singapore is suitable, but also question Washington as the location, and suggested as an alternative that the first meeting might be in London.

We concur with all but the final suggestion. Washington is without question the most suitable place. However, I think the suggestion made to me by the Australian and New Zealand representatives, who have been our strong supporters in this entire matter, is worth considering; that is, that while Washington is the appropriate location for staff discussions, it might be valuable to have the first meeting at Pearl Harbor. To us this has an added significance, because it is the headquarters of the Commander-in-Chief Pacific.

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated May 9. p. 745.

<sup>2</sup> Letter to Eden from Smith, May 10, p. 761.

The British now take the view that a joint statement is not necessary and, in fact, not particularly desirable. As I mentioned before, so much has already been said that any agreed public statement might be an anti-climax. The Australian and New Zealand representatives here, on the other hand, have felt that some sort of announcement would be necessary. Eden and I together worked out the following, which the British could accept and which looks reasonably satisfactory to us in case a statement becomes necessary:

"Pending wider discussions of measures to support a stable peace in Southeast Asia, the Governments of Australia, France, New Zealand, the UK and the US have agreed that their military representatives should undertake an examination of the situation in Southeast Asia.

"This examination will be undertaken by existing staff agencies formed some time ago for the study without commitment to problems of common concern.

"The problems to be reviewed will be of interest to a number of other countries, notably the powers represented at the Colombo conference, Siam, the Philippines, etc. These countries have been informed of the intention to initiate this study and, during the progress of the work, will be consulted and kept informed."

I assume that Washington will now take the initiative in getting these staff talks under way, but I would like to be informed at the earliest possible moment so that I can tell Eden. It is a purely technical exercise which must be done as a matter of prudence, and will be the beginning, I believe, of something of much greater importance.

SMITH

---

396.1 GE/5-1354 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET      PRIORITY

GENEVA, May 13, 1954—9 p. m.

Secto 199. Repeated information London 160, Paris 256, Saigon 65, Moscow 69. Following Korean Plenary Meeting today Eden raised with Bidault and myself "what we do next" respect to Indochina. He suggested he see Molotov and/or Chou En-lai to tell them they were "playing a dangerous role" in abusing United States and to a lesser extent France at every meeting. Things cannot continue on present basis. Bidault offered no objection as long as it was understood it would not interfere with his plan for full analysis of Viet Minh proposal and comparison with French proposal at plenary tomorrow. I offered no objection and during course of discussion Bidault and I agreed that Eden would first bring matter up with Chou En-lai when Eden calls upon him tomorrow and, as co-chairman, tell Molotov what he has said to Chou En-lai.

Eden stated in addition foregoing he proposes raise with Chou En-lai and Molotov on his own responsibility and ad referendum to our side question of how to handle replies to questions he put in plenary yesterday, making mention possibility discussion in restricted subcommittee meeting which would include all participants Indochina phase or in restricted meeting principal delegates.

During course conversation Bidault stated Molotov believed he could "make France explode" but that he was mistaken. Bidault also expressed hope press conferences Indochina questions be avoided as much as possible as they "make things very difficult for people here".

I told Eden and Bidault that in my call on Molotov I had expressed the view Indochina question highly inflammatory requiring careful and adroit handling to prevent unhappy results and that Molotov had agreed situation was "complex".

Before agreeing any restricted meeting<sup>1</sup> on replies to Eden's questions, I intend insist that those on our side get together to concert our views.

SMITH

---

<sup>1</sup> At the close of the Fourth Plenary Session on May 14 Molotov stated that the next meeting, scheduled for Monday, May 17, would be held in restricted session with participants limited to delegation chiefs and three advisers each. See telegram Secto 212, May 14, p. 795.

Anthony Eden in his memoirs, Full Circle, p. 133, wrote on this matter as follows: "As is usual at international conferences, much of the real work was done in informal talks which took place daily, away from the conference table. The course of the negotiations was frequently influenced, as a rule adversely, by diplomatic events far away from Geneva. It quickly became clear to me that we should make little progress if we continued to discuss Indo-China in plenary sessions, which merely provided a stage for the striking of attitudes by both sides. On May 13, I accordingly suggested to Bedell Smith and Bidault that we should continue our talks in restricted sessions, consisting of the heads of all nine delegations with only two or three advisers apiece. No account of the proceedings would be given to the press. This proposal was agreed upon, and on the following day Molotov and Chou En-lai also accepted it."

---

396.1 GE/5-1354 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET NIACT

GENEVA, May 13, 1954—9 p. m.

Secto 201. Repeated information Paris 257, Saigon 66, London 161. Department pass Defense. Re Secto 183, May 12.<sup>1</sup> My answer to Eden's questions 1 and 3 will be that if the concentration of all regular troops in determined areas is a preliminary step to provide for the unification of all Vietnam under its recognized government, then my answer is yes. If these concentrations are a preliminary to the partition of Vietnam we could not associate ourselves with this proposal. Since our final decision is dependent upon the ultimate results of these concentrations, we must reserve our reply. With regard to question 4, I will say that we agree that all irregulars shall be disarmed, but this must be accomplished under competent international authority and supervision. That competent authority is the United Nations.

---

<sup>1</sup> Ante, p. 776.

As for question 5, I will state that we are in favor of competent international supervision. The only competent organization capable of exercising such supervision is the United Nations.

Regarding question 2, I will heartily agree that Laos and Cambodia are in a special category and urge priority consideration of a settlement for these two states on the grounds that we should be able to move forward rapidly on the relatively simple questions involved in bringing hostilities to an end in Laos and Cambodia.

SMITH

MAY 14, 1954

Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 285

Meeting of the Six on Indochina, Geneva, May 14, Morning: Memorandum by the Special Adviser to the United States Delegation (Heath) to the Head of the Delegation (Smith)<sup>1</sup>

SECRET

[GENEVA,] May 14, 1954.

The following summarizes the results of the meeting of the Six on Indochina this morning:

1) Bidault will analyze the Vietminh proposals. He will support Viet-Nam's contention that Bao Dai's government is the only legal government of Viet-Nam. He does not propose to deal with the Vietnamese proposals (Vietnamese representative not too happy about this). Bidault's speech will also contain replies to the questions posed by Eden. He will advocate the separating out of Laos and Cambodia.

2) There was discussion as to whether it might be advisable today to propose that the delegations meet in a restricted form, i.e., the heads of delegations with two or three experts apiece in order to see whether better progress could not be made in that way. It is my understanding that Bidault will allude to this possibility.

3) There was also some discussion as to the desirability of setting up special working committees to deal with the questions of Laos and

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by Bonsal.

Cambodia. It was agreed that such a suggestion should only be made in the proposed restricted groups since that [sic] to raise this possibility now would probably produce a revival of the debate on the so-called resistance governments in Laos and Cambodia.

4) Several delegations expressed the view that plenary sessions should continue until Molotov has spoken particularly with respect to the Eden questions.

---

396.1 GE/5-1454 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET PRIORITY

GENEVA, May 14, 1954—2 p. m.

Secto 206. Repeated information Saigon 70, Paris 263, Hanoi 2. Delegation has been operating on assumption that situation in Indochina would not deteriorate radically during coming weeks and hence that time [was?] available required in order that efforts to reach common allied position defense Indochina and remainder southeast Asia might crystallize. Also indications here Communist bloc playing for time. In light of certain telegrams reaching delegation today indicating rapidly deteriorating political and military situation and persistent rumors Vietnamese-Viet Minh contacts we wonder if our assumption continues valid.

In view above, request Washington provide best coordinated military and political estimate on situation in Indochina we are likely to be facing (1) two weeks and (2) one month from now.<sup>1</sup>

SMITH

---

<sup>1</sup> For the reply to this request, see telegram Tosec 225, May 20, p. 870.

---

396.1 GE/5-1454 : Telegram

*Fourth Plenary Session on Indochina, Geneva, May 14, 3:03 p. m. :<sup>1</sup>
The United States Delegation to the Department of State*

OFFICIAL USE ONLY

GENEVA, May 14, 1954—midnight.

Secto 212. Repeated information Paris 266, London 163, Saigon 74, Moscow 71, Tokyo 62, Phnom Penh, Vientiane, unnumbered. Tokyo pass CINCFE. Department pass Defense, CINCPAC, COMSAC. Molotov chaired fourth plenary Indochina today and opened with 90 minute speech which on one hand attacked French colonial policies Indochina and on other was adroitly calculated to appeal to French public opinion. Asserted Bao Dai government established by French "occupation authorities" as compared with broad basis "Viet Minh regime," and castigated "failure" of what has come to be known as "dirty" war which French are waging against Vietnamese people. Again attacked recent activities of Secretary Dulles leading toward establishment of defense community in Southeast Asia on grounds defense of US, France and UK not involved here, but rather extension of war to Southeast Asia.

---

<sup>1</sup> A set of minutes of this meeting (US Verb Min/4) is in Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 276. The minutes indicate that the meeting convened at 3:03 p. m. and adjourned at 6:05 p. m. The minutes are also printed in Conférence de Genève, pp. 80-100. The speeches of Molotov and Bidault and the proposal made by the Soviet Delegation are printed in Cmd. 9186, pp. 127-136. The speeches of Bidault and Molotov, Indochina Documents IC/10 and IC/13, May 14 and 15, and the proposal made by the Soviet Delegation, IC/12, May 15, are in Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 279A.

Molotov endorsed substance Viet Minh proposals introduced at second plenary session May 10 (Secto 162),<sup>2</sup> stating they were based upon justice and honor, should satisfy needs of both Indochinese and French people. He then criticized French proposals (Secto 143 as modified Secto 152)<sup>3</sup> for failure to deal with "political elements."

Molotov then noted criticism of Viet Minh proposal for not including international supervision of cessation hostilities and "since reaching agreement this question great importance" proposed addition that supervision of agreement be entrusted to "commissions composed representative neutral countries" stating "no insurmountable difficulties should arise in determination composition neutral nations supervisory commission". Asserted France had choice between continuation of colonial war or negotiation.

Molotov observed that USSR would in future state its attitude toward all British proposals but considered that they also failed to cover all military and the political aspects of Indochinese war.

Bidault characterized Molotov statement as a propaganda diatribe which would not divert him from serious purpose of the conference. Turning to specific Viet Minh proposals (Secto 162) he noted they covered wide variety of subjects and therefore confused. Leaving aside such matters as fell outside purview of Geneva conference, Bidault supported position of Laos and Cambodia in their denial to Viet Minh of right to speak for those nations. He stated that any decision by Associated States to re-establish an Indochinese community should be taken by them in conformity with their own desires. France has recognized independence of Laos and Cambodia; problems mentioned in points 1, 3, 4 and 5 of Viet Minh proposal are therefore resolved for those nations and there remains only the invasion of their territories by Viet Minh foreign forces. Bidault noted that Viet Minh proposal evaded this problem except perhaps implicitly in point 2, referring to withdrawal of foreign forces.

---

<sup>2</sup> Dated May 10, p. 753.

<sup>3</sup> Dated May 8, p. 730.

In Bidault's view, withdrawal of foreign forces would call for specific control measures such as are mentioned in points 2, 6, 7 and 8 of Viet Minh proposal. Although problems of Laos and Cambodia are independent of one another, they cannot be confused with those of Vietnam, which are quite different. For that reason French proposal separated out Vietnamese provisions from those pertaining other two nations or of general character. In order to deal with Laos and Cambodia promptly, Bidault stated that France, on advice of interested governments should be prepared to recall its own forces if invading forces also withdrawn.

As regards Vietnam, Bidault pointed out that existence and recognition of Bao Dai government by 35 nations demonstrated redundancy of point 1 of Viet Minh proposal and superfluity of point 4.

As to point 2, Bidault observed that movement of French troops is determined by operational requirements during hostilities; once peace is established France would not propose to maintain troops in Vietnam against wish of legal government of country. Since it would be up to that government to make or modify provisions of agreement, France would not make re-establishment of peace in Indochina dependent on any commitments whatever concerning this question.

Bidault stated that conclusion of agreements concerning economic and cultural interests of France in Vietnam would never be a condition to concluding hostilities (point 5). He vigorously attacked point 3 as designed to assure total domination of Viet Minh over Vietnam even before elections. In his view, no political agreement should precede or hold up military settlement. Bidault cited Vietnamese proposals as an interesting basis of discussion in this connection.

He stated that points 6 and 7 would not be objected to by France. Having agreed upon principles, however, he would reserve right of examining implementing provisions, although clear POWs and civilian internees<sup>4</sup> should be immediately freed on cessation of hostilities.

Bidault inquired whether first line of point 8 of Viet Minh proposal meant that agreement on measures referred to in points 1 to 7 should precede cessation of hostilities. In the French view, solution of political problem should not be pre-condition to terminating hostilities. Moreover, no agreements between France and Laos or Cambodia necessary since France not at war with either.

Re subparagraph (a), point 8, concerning complete and simultaneous cease-fire, Bidault again considered that Cambodian and Laotian situations should be distinguished from Vietnamese, which involved a gradual process moving from one region to another. This should be studied by military commands. He felt that subparagraph (b) should be carefully clarified along lines of first section of French proposals, envisaging concentration areas and readjustment between such areas.

---

<sup>4</sup> Handwritten marginal notation to "civilian internees" as follows: "not mentioned in VM proposals".

Bidault stated that Viet Minh proposals did not cover disarmament of irregular forces belonging neither to armed forces nor to police, and referred on this point to French proposal (Section I, paragraph 2).

Bidault considered provisions of point 8 (c) to be less desirable than French proposals which clearly envisaged international commissions as essential to correct implementation of agreement. He observed that guarantee of these agreements would be assured by Geneva participants and stated that UK, US, Vietnamese and Laotian delegations had already agreed to principle of international control.

Bidault, in conclusion, gave following answers to British questions (Secto 183<sup>a</sup>) :

(1) Agree that forces in Vietnam should be concentrated in determined areas;

(2) Yes;

(3) Geneva conference should delineate areas of concentration in consultation with commanders-in-chief who would be responsible for working out details;

(4) Yes, when means of disarmament have been established taking into account conditions of regrouping of regular forces;

(5) France proposed international control and is ready to examine all suggestions for composition of control commissions. He noted that mixed commissions could have subordinate bodies under their control for full implementation of their tasks.

Following recess, Molotov called on Cambodian representative, Tep Phan, who again entered a formal denial of right of Viet Minh to speak in the name of Cambodian people. He observed that Cambodia had made its own independence with France and that reference to this subject in the Viet Minh proposal was harmful. If Viet Minh desired to enter into friendly relations with Cambodian people, it should cease its attacks against the country. Like Bidault, Tep Phan addressed himself to specific details of Viet Minh proposal, making these comments :

(1) Superfluous;

(2) Since French forces have already withdrawn from Cambodia, only Viet Minh and Royal Khmer forces remain. Absurd to consider latter as foreign forces;

(3) Cambodian Government has already been organized with general elections throughout country which could be repeated as soon as

<sup>a</sup> Dated May 12, p. 776.

Viet Minh forces withdrawn. Second half of point 3 inapplicable to Cambodia;

(4) Cambodia does not desire an intermediary in establishing its own form of association with France;

(5) To be handled by Royal Khmer Government;

(6) and (7)—Cambodia has never contemplated prosecution of those collaborating with the French. It is prepared to exchange Viet Minh POWs if Viet Minh forces withdraw;

(8) Cambodia demands simple retreat by Viet Minh aggressor.

Since Cambodian solution is simple, Tep Phan proposed that conference adopt his suggestions without delay.

Molotov noted that no additional speakers were inscribed and stated that delegations had agreed between themselves that no meeting should be held Saturday, 15 May. He stated next meeting on Monday, 17 May, would be held in restricted session with participation limited to delegation chiefs and three advisors each—it being understood that each delegation would supply its own interpreters. Meeting adjourned at 1805.

SMITH

790.5/5-1454 : Telegram

The Secretary of State to the United States Delegation<sup>1</sup>

TOP SECRET      NIACT

WASHINGTON, May 14, 1954—3:34 p. m.

Tedul 67. Dulte 66<sup>2</sup> indicates British accept view we should move forward concurrently on two parallel lines, and they prepared to proceed immediately at least along line of military staff discussion. Assume you will be reporting more fully on British views re other parallel line of procedure.

Problem of location of talks appears to us to be closely related to problem of public impression we desire create by having talks. We strongly believe talks should be held with no publicity whatsoever. We glad British now concur that no public statement of any kind necessary and we strongly believe talks should not be initiated in manner which attracts attention and gives impression of convocation of a special conference.

As indicated above, appearance of convocation of special conference undesirable. We therefore are opposed to London or Pearl Harbor. (Spender tells me Casey prefers Washington.) Our position remains firm that talks should be Washington where highly qualified representatives already located and talks could be gotten under way here immediately without any fanfare.

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by MacArthur of C and Fisher of WE.

<sup>2</sup> Dated May 13, p. 791.

We believe prior opening five power talks Washington it desirable inform confidentially Thailand and Philippines and perhaps others regarding background these talks and their objective which is to explore means by which five powers can assist countries of SEA in cooperative effort to defend themselves. UK could similarly inform Colombo powers. Subsequently we could decide in light of progress made particularly in getting on with SEA regional arrangements, extent to which participation in military talks by other Asian countries, notably Thailand and Philippines, is desirable.

FYI, our feeling is that if talks were held in London even only to start with this would suggest that UK view non-participation Indochina war had prevailed and that Indochina tacitly written off in current military planning. At this stage, this likely have particularly damaging effect French political situation.

DULLES

---

751G.00/5-1354 : Telegram

The Secretary of State to the United States Delegation<sup>1</sup>

SECRET

WASHINGTON, May 14, 1954—4:29 p. m.

Tosec 158. Deteriorating political and military situation Vietnam reflected in such telegrams as Saigon's 2372<sup>2</sup> indicates need for urgent consideration of possible countermeasures.

Appears from here that first step this connection is to urge Bao Dai to return at once to Vietnam. If Bao Dai proves unresponsive to Heath's approach you should discuss with Bidault re possible further steps that could be taken.

We are of course aware however of uncertainty as to what role Bao Dai could or would play under existing circumstances. Nevertheless Bao Dai's return to Vietnam is the one remedial measure we might put into effect most quickly. If Bidault and USDel concur, and if Bao Dai does not respond affirmatively to first suggestion, might be put up to Bao Dai that unless he is willing accept our recommendation, French and US policy with regard to him and his regime will have to be reexamined.

I believe moreover that we must at once undertake fullest discussions with French at Geneva as well as Paris and Saigon concerning

---

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by Sturm of FE/PSA. Repeated to Paris as telegram 4074, to Saigon as telegram 2300, and to Hanoi as telegram 630.

<sup>2</sup> In telegram 2372 from Saigon, May 13, McClintock reported that Defense Minister Phan Huy Quat had stated, citing recent desertions, that the internal situation had so deteriorated that all semblance of government might disappear within ten days. The Chargé further indicated that according to certain French authorities, unless Bao Dai returned and faced up to his responsibilities within ten days to three weeks there would no longer be a state of Vietnam. (751G.00/5-1354) further steps which might be taken toward rectifying political situation Vietnam and toward preventing apparent disintegration of governmental authority from further compromising Franco-Vietnamese military posture.

DULLES

---

Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 289

Memorandum of Conversation, by the Adviser to the United States Delegation (Bonsal)

TOP SECRET

GENEVA, May 14, 1954.

Participants: Pote Sarasin, Ambassador to Washington and Member of Thai Delegation
The Under Secretary
Philip W. Bonsal

Subject: Security Arrangements in Southeast Asia and U.S. Military Assistance for Thailand

Ambassador Sarasin stated that he was interested in getting information on his own behalf and that of Prince Wan regarding progress being made on (a) the development of collective security arrangements in Southeast Asia and (b) measures for strengthening the Thai armed forces. He said he had been informed of the call which the Thai Chargé paid on the Secretary on May 10th in Washington at which time it was the Chargé's impression that progress on the united action concept, at least so far as immediate implementation is concerned, is held up by British unwillingness to go along at this time.<sup>1</sup>

The Ambassador indicated a full awareness of the requirements of the Thai armed forces in the matter of equipment and training. He said that a certain amount of small arms had recently been received. He said that the Thai Prime Minister is anxious to increase the Thai army from its present strength of between 50 and 60,000 to a total of 150,000. The manpower is readily available but there is the problem of training cadres. There is also a financial problem. The Thai budget currently amounts to $250 million of which the armed forces absorb over $100 million. The Thai financial situation is very tight. This was confirmed by the International Bank recently when it refused to make a loan requested by Thailand because of concern over Thailand's public finances. The Ambassador concluded with an appeal for a statement of the extent to which US assistance might be counted on in developing Thailand's armed forces and improving Thailand's defense position.

---

<sup>1</sup> For memorandum of conversation between Secretary Dulles and Minister Thuathep Devakul, May 10, see volume XII.

The Under Secretary replied that while his information regarding progress on military assistance to Thailand was not entirely current, he could state that our JCS have been asked to examine and make recommendations with regard to a program which would include assistance in increasing the Thai army to 90,000; constructing the Saraburi Highway and certain other matters including an air base. The Under Secretary stated that his views had been requested and that he was making favorable recommendations. He said that he thought that ways and means would be found whereby existing resources might be made available to help the Thai Government.

The Under Secretary added that he had most strongly recommended the establishment in Thailand of an air base with fighter planes in the event that the Thai Government should request the installation of such a base. He stressed the top secret nature of this matter and the important part which such a base could play in free world defense of Southeast Asia against aggression.

The Under Secretary stated that, provided the necessary resources could be made available, the concept of assistance to be rendered the Thai Government in military matters would be broad and flexible. It would include financial support in view of the state of the Thai budget and assistance in the construction of housing and presumably in the provision of certain types of infrastructure (roads and air fields). The Under Secretary emphasized also the important assistance which we could render in training Thai officers and noncommissioned officers. He recalled the experience which the US Marine Corps has acquired in the peculiar problems of jungle warfare with modern weapons.

The Under Secretary then took occasion to reiterate the Secretary's appreciation of the strong stand taken by the Thai Government immediately after the Secretary had launched his united action concept. He said that this attitude had greatly strengthened the Secretary's hand. He added that he thought it important that the Burmese Government should now be encouraged to move away from its position of neutrality. He said that there were definite signs of a change. He expressed the hope that Thailand could be of assistance in accelerating this movement.

The Ambassador replied that Mr. Eden has requested Prince Wan to try to exert some influence with the Burmese. This matter is a delicate one because of some traditional factors in Thai-Burmese relations and also because of certain recent incidents, including the bombing of Thai territory by the Burmese air force. However, the Thai Government is taking a conciliatory and constructive attitude and hopes that it can be useful.

The Ambassador took occasion to express his satisfaction at the recent strengthening of the Cambodian Government as reflected by the fact that certain dissident elements have rallied to the King. He cited these developments as illustrative of the dynamic effect of real independence. The Ambassador stated that he was in full agreement that the situation in Laos and Cambodia should be disassociated from the situation in Viet-Nam in any settlement of the Indochina war.

The Ambassador then asked the Under Secretary whether the US would proceed with the united action concept even if the UK should drag its feet or even refuse to go along in any useful manner. To this the Under Secretary replied that in his opinion the situation with which we are confronted in Southeast Asia makes it essential that we and other likeminded countries proceed as rapidly and as energetically as possible.

The Ambassador then reverted to his theme as to the importance of keeping India out of any defense arrangements in the area. He said that collective arrangements which included India would insure united inaction rather than united action. The Ambassador indicated that the Indians had been trying to influence the Thai authorities away from the united action concept. He said, however, that Pakistan would be a useful participant in any arrangement.

---

Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 286

Memorandum of Conversation, by the Adviser to the United States Delegation (Martin)

CONFIDENTIAL

GENEVA, May 14, 1954.

Participants: Mr. Kenneth Young, U.S. Delegation
 Mr. John Calhoun, U.S. Delegation
 Mr. Edwin Martin, U.S. Delegation
 Mr. Humphrey Trevelyan, British Delegation

Subject: Views of Mr. Humphrey Trevelyan, British Chargé at Peiping, on various subjects relating to Communist China.

During the course of a small dinner given by Mr. H. Trevelyan, British Chargé at Peiping, for three members of the U.S. Delegation, he expressed his views on several topics of interest relating to the Peiping regime and the Geneva Conference. A summary of his views follows:

1. British Recognition of Communist China

Mr. Trevelyan said that he felt strongly that there had been "no loss and some gain" by the maintenance of the British diplomatic mission in Peiping even though the Peiping regime had failed to recognize the British Government. He cited U.S. press reports that the British diplomatic representatives were laughed at in the streets as being not in accord with the facts. He had never felt any sense of being slighted or mocked at by Chinese in Peiping, because of his unrecognized status. On the other hand, he had personally made a very careful study of treatment of British firms as compared to the treatment of firms of other Western countries which have formal diplomatic relations with the Peiping regime and had been unable to find any evidence that British firms were less favorably treated. Mr. Trevelyan evidently felt that the Western countries which had established formal diplomatic relations with the Chinese Communist regime had not been able to protect their interest in China any more effectively than had the so-called British negotiation mission.

Mr. Trevelyan said that he had discussed with members of the Chinese Communist Delegation here the question of Peiping's failure to recognize the UK. The principal justification offered by the Communist representatives for this policy is that the UK had failed to support Peiping's seating in the UN; therefore the British were "not sincere" in their recognition of the Chinese Communist regime. Trevelyan indicated that the Communists had also mentioned such matters as the handing over of CNAC and CATC planes "to Chennault" in connection with Peiping's non-recognition of the UK, but the impression conveyed is that the British position on Peiping's entry into the UN is the main consideration.

2. Peiping Foreign Policy

Mr. Trevelyan is convinced that, except for Indochina, the Chinese Communist regime is not interested in pushing forward externally for the time being but wishes to concentrate on internal developments (this is in line with views expressed by Ford of the British Delegation—see memo of conversation May 12<sup>1</sup>). He expressed the belief that Peiping's tough talk and intransigent attitude both at the Geneva Conference and in their propaganda output is explained by the fact that the Chinese Communists are speaking primarily to an Asian audience and care little about the impression they make in the U.S. and Western Europe. Trevelyan does not believe that the Communists are disposed to bargain for admission to the UN but will continue to demand it as a right and are willing to wait indefinitely for admission rather than make concessions.

3. Internal Politics

In Trevelyan's view, the CCP's comment emphasis on "collective leadership" while reaching high into the party, even up to the Central Committee, does not affect the very highest strata. He feels that Mao Tse-tung's personal prestige and authority is stronger now than ever. He cited several recent events to support this thesis.

<sup>1</sup> Not printed. (396.1 GE/5-1154)

4. Economic Conditions

Trevelyan indicates that in conversation with Chinese Communist officials here, they have expressed great confidence in their ability to handle their economic problems. Trevelyan himself believes that the Communist regime has shown considerable flexibility in its economic policies in the sense of being able to reverse itself when a given policy proves to be ineffective or counter-productive. The Chinese Communists here have admitted to Trevelyan that there was no increase of food production in 1953, but they hope for a 6% increase in 1954. They explain the grain rationing program, which was formally introduced on January 1 though experimentally tried out as early as November 1953, in terms of the need for assuring an adequate supply of food grains to the rapidly growing urban population, particularly the industrial workers. Cadres have been sent out to explain to the peasants the need for the grain control program in these terms. Trevelyan, incidentally, quoted his local Chinese Communist contacts as saying the population of the city of Peiping is now approximately 3,000,000 and that of Shanghai is 7,000,000. Total population of the mainland is in excess of 500 million and increases at the rate of 8 to 10 million per year. This enormous annual increment to the Chinese population does not seem to worry the Communist regime, according to Trevelyan.

5. General Observations on Peiping and Environs

Trevelyan said no restrictions have been placed on his driving around the country side from Peiping. He has never been stopped on such excursions and does not know of any mileage limit imposed by the authorities. Frequently he walks in the Western hills and has never been molested. It is necessary, however, to get a permit to travel by train. He has experienced no difficulty thus far in getting a permit. In trips through villages in the environs of Peiping, Trevelyan has been impressed with the generally well-dressed and well-fed appearance of the inhabitants.

6. Impressions of Chinese Communist Delegation Members

Mr. Trevelyan says that on the whole his relations with the various members of the Chinese Communist Delegation have been pleasant and friendly. He apparently gets along best with Huan Hsiang, Ch'iao Kuan-hua and Kung Peng. On May 11 he was invited by Lei Jen-min, Vice Minister of Foreign Trade, to dinner. The guests included the four mentioned above and Huang Hua. (This is apparently the occasation on which Sino-British trade relations were discussed—see Secto 189<sup>2</sup>). . . .

<sup>2</sup> Not printed. (396.1 GE/5-1254)

110.11 DU/5-1454 : Telegram

The Secretary of State to the United States Delegation<sup>1</sup>

SECRET      PRIORITY      WASHINGTON, May 14, 1954—8:43 p. m.

775. For Under Secretary from Secretary. If you deem appropriate, please deliver following personal message to Bidault from me:

“Dear Georges: Am delighted that you are carrying on. I know this is good for France and for the friendship which has so long well served our two countries. I think I can appreciate the heavy burdens which you are compelled to carry. I have confidence that you will do so in a manner which will enhance the prestige of your country.<sup>2</sup> I hope we can increasingly find ways for cooperation to mutual advantage at this critical moment. Foster”<sup>3</sup>

DULLES

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by the Secretary of State.

<sup>2</sup> The U.S. Delegation informed the Secretary of State in telegram Secto 244, May 18, that the fourth sentence had been changed to read “The way you are doing it has done much to enhance the prestige of your country.” (396.1 GE/5-1854)

<sup>3</sup> Bidault’s reply, transmitted to the Department of State in telegram Dulte 87, May 19, was as follows: “Thanks for your friendly message. I know you are not unaware of either our difficulties or our efforts. I have confidence in this understanding and in our friendship to strengthen the close relations between our two countries essential for the good of all.” (110.11 DU/5-1954)

396.1 GE/5-1454 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET      PRIORITY      GENEVA, May 14, 1954—9 p. m.

Secto 209. Repeated information priority Paris 265, Saigon 72. We communicated substance of Saigon’s 109 sent Department 2391 Paris 841<sup>1</sup> to French this morning and offered to assist them in any way we could. They did not receive similar information directly until just before meeting this afternoon when they received it in instructions to Bidault to take it up at today’s session.

<sup>1</sup> In telegram 2391 from Saigon, May 14, not printed, McClintock reported that the Viet Minh had placed conditions on the evacuation of wounded from Dien Bien Phu. Dejean indicated to the Chargé that “this was but a diabolical ruse to delay evacuation of French Union wounded as long as possible in order to prevent French air attack of RC-41 while Giap moves his divisions toward delta. Wounded of Dien Bien Phu are in fact being used as hostages.” (751G.00/5-1454)

Bidault consulted Eden and me during recess in considerable distress. His information convinced him that Viet Minh would be able to move bulk of their forces from Dien Bien Phu to delta within two weeks necessary to fly out wounded unless their movement along RC-41 was effectively blocked. Viet Minh proposal would only be admissible if it were possible to have international control of RC-41 to insure it was not used for troop movements. This seemed wholly impractical. In circumstances Bidault felt that to raise it in public meeting today would do no good for wounded who were probably doomed in any event.

At later talk after meeting he and I decided best tactic would be for him to write head of Viet Minh delegation as one belligerent to another and to both chairmen protesting this diabolic blackmail. I agreed to raise supporting letters to both chairmen. Letters are being phrased to provide out for Communists if there is any possibility of their backing out. We will try to avoid publicity pending further developments.

SMITH

MAY 15, 1954

751G.5/5-1554 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

TOP SECRET

GENEVA, May 15, 1954—10 a. m.

Dulte 70. Limit distribution. I took occasion to tell Bidault last night that we should be under no illusions about troop withdrawal in Indochina, that it would be very difficult to prevent any lines fixed from developing into de facto partition which was something US could not accept. If we saw things heading that way, we would have to disassociate ourselves from this particular proposal.

Bidault replied that would be very serious. He said that military regrouping would postpone any political settlement and that neither Vietnamese nor Viet Minh would accept partition. He realized that if there were any clean-cut split on a given parallel, it would inevitably become partition and for that reason he felt jumbled and irregular lines like frontiers of Israel far safer. I said I agreed with this line of thought.

I also told him that we were making progress with British and I felt much more optimistic than two weeks ago. I also said we could do a great deal for the long pull, including training, provided it was not necessary for us to intervene directly in present fighting.

SMITH

Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 289

Memorandum of Conversation, by the Deputy United States Representative (Robertson)<sup>1</sup>

SECRET

[GENEVA,] May 15, 1954.

Participants: Prince Wan, Thai Minister of Foreign Affairs
Ambassador Sarasin, Thai Ambassador to the United States
Walter Bedell Smith, Under Secretary of State
Walter S. Robertson, Assistant Secretary of State

Subject: Revival of Thai Plan of June 1953 for UN Peace Observation Commission in Indochina

General Smith opened the conversation by summarizing Department's telegram to Geneva number 761.<sup>2</sup> He reviewed the circumstances of last June when due to French opposition we had to reverse our position and request the Thais not to present a plan at that time. He stated that if they would now revive the petition, we would make a firm commitment to push it through the Security Council to a Soviet veto and then urgently convene the General Assembly.

Prince Wan said that he agreed in principle and that he felt his Government would agree in principle but there might be some question as to timing. He stated he strongly felt that although the 16 powers participating in the Geneva Conference represented the UN in a sense, the UN as an institution had not been brought into consideration of the Indochina question. He went on to say that neither Bidault's nor Eden's proposals for guarantee of the agreements that might be reached seemed to be within the framework of the UN, and that he had told Bidault that in his opinion the UN rather than the participants in the Conference should be the guarantor. As to timing, however, he questioned whether they had as good a case now as they had in June 1953 and that it might be advisable to wait until there was an invasion of Laos before reviving the request. The Cambodian complaint, he said, was already before the UN and at the moment they (the Thais) did not feel that there existed a threat to Thailand. However, if our intelligence had information to the contrary he would be glad to have it.

General Smith said that in his opinion the situation was more threatening now than it was last June, that there was mounting tension throughout the area, that no one knew when the attack would come or where and it was highly desirable to have the POC on the ground before the event, if possible, rather than afterwards. Time was of the essence as it would necessarily take time to get action by the Assembly. General Smith pointed out that the Russian tactic here at Geneva is to bypass the UN and he agreed with Prince Wan that the UN should be brought back into the situation as involving one of its primary responsibilities to preserve the peace. He said he thought Thailand was the best country to ask for POC since it was an experienced and independent UN member. Prince Wan seemed impressed by these observations and said Ambassador Sarasin was leaving for Bangkok Sunday night and would discuss the matter with the Prime Minister. Prince Wan added that the composition of the POC had not been particularly considered last June, but in view of the experience in Korea was it not probable that Russia would attempt to load the commission with Communists or Communist sympathizers. General Smith replied that he thought we had strength enough in the UN to prevent the success of such a move and that we had in mind such countries as Pakistan, India, Uruguay, New Zealand and Sweden. General Smith asked Prince Wan's approval to discuss the proposal with the British and the French and Prince Wan agreed.

<sup>1</sup>This discussion and one held on May 14 between Smith and Sarasin were summarized in telegram Secto 230 to the Department of State, May 16. (396.1 GE/5-1654)

<sup>2</sup>Dated May 13, p. 790.

General Smith then referred to the conversation he had on yesterday with Ambassador Sarasin<sup>3</sup> with reference to measures for strengthening Thai armed forces and asked Prince Wan about the offer of bases in Thailand for the free world attributed to the Thai Chief of Staff. Wan said he had no official knowledge of such an offer but realized the desirability of defensive air base facilities. General Smith stated that if Thailand is willing to grant such bases, it might be desirable to negotiate agreements now for a fighter wing base which he thought would greatly increase the strength of Thailand's position. Prince Wan said he would consult with his Government.

---

<sup>3</sup> For a memorandum of conversation of this discussion, May 14, see p. 801.

---

396.1 GE/5-1554 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

CONFIDENTIAL      PRIORITY      GENEVA, May 15, 1954—1 p. m.

Secto 215. Repeated information Paris 268, Saigon 75. Re: Paragraph 3, Secto 209.<sup>1</sup> Following is unofficial translation letter delivered about midnight last night to Eden and Molotov (as Co-Chairmen Indochina Conference) by Bidault:

“Mr. Chairman: On May 10 the Geneva Conference, basing its action on a letter of Mr. Nguyen Quoc Dinh and on a declaration of

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated May 14, p. 806.

Mr. Pham Van Dong on the same day, gave its agreement in principle to the evacuation of the wounded from the former fortress of Dien Bien Phu.<sup>2</sup>

"The French Commander-In-Chief immediately got in touch with General Vo Nguyen Giap in order to arrange the practical steps in this evacuation.

"During the meeting which was held at Dien Bien Phu on May 14 it was noted that the first group of wounded designated by General Vo Nguyen Giap, that is to say 450 men, included no Vietnamese.

"It was made clear, however, in the declaration published on this subject by the Viet Minh delegation on the evening of May 10 that the Viet Minh command would not make any discrimination among the wounded based on considerations of race or nationality. Furthermore a new demand which raised an extremely serious problem was made by the representatives of General Vo Nguyen Giap. This in effect would have subjected the evacuation of the wounded to the condition that during the entire duration of this operation, which in view of the state of the terrain would have required about a fortnight, Provincial route number 41 should not be the object of any military action. No parallel can be established between the operation of evacuating the wounded from Dien Bien Phu, which has no military consequences, and the neutralization of the only major route existing in the area. This prolonged neutralization would in effect permit major troop movements of such a nature as to modify profoundly the military situation in North Vietnam.

"I would therefore be most grateful if you would communicate the foregoing on a basis of extreme urgency to Mr. Pham Van Dong so that he may intervene with the Viet Minh command in order that the measures which shall be taken to evacuate the wounded may conform to the letter and spirit of the decision of the Conference.

"Please accept, Mr. Chairman, the assurances of my very high consideration."

SMITH

---

<sup>2</sup> Discussion of the wounded during the Second Plenary Session on Indochina in the verbatim minutes of the session in Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 276.

---

396.1 GE/5-1554 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

OFFICIAL USE ONLY

GENEVA, May 15, 1954—3 p. m.

Secto 219. Repeated information Saigon 77, Paris 272. Reference Secto 209, repeated Paris 265, Saigon 72,<sup>1</sup> and Secto 215 repeated Paris 268 and Saigon 75.<sup>2</sup> Following is text of letter from Smith to Molotov as "Co-Chairman, Geneva Conference on Indochina" transmitted this morning. Letter to Eden is identical except for substitution of "Mr. Molotov" for "you" in first and last sentences paragraph 2, and "Mr. Molotov" for "Mr. Eden" in last paragraph :

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated May 14, p. 806.

<sup>2</sup> Dated May 15, supra.

“Excellency: It is with surprise that the US delegation has learned that the Viet Minh Military Command apparently is attempting to establish extraordinary conditions for the removal of the wounded from Dien Bien Phu. Most of these brave men have suffered under intolerable conditions for many weeks. I had shared the general hope that following the discussion of this matter at the plenary session on Indochina last Monday there would be no further obstacles to the prompt evacuation of all the wounded of General De Castries’ command at Dien Bien Phu.

“When I spoke with you after our session on May 10th I raised the question of the interpretation of the Viet Minh statement. I said that I assumed it covered all of the wounded at Dien Bien Phu regardless of whether they were members of the French Expeditionary Corps or of the Vietnamese National Army, and also regardless of whether they were French or Vietnamese or belonged to other nationalities. It was my understanding that you had reached the same conclusion and that Mr. Chou En-lai likewise had made the same interpretation.

“I am informed that there are no Vietnamese among the first group designated for release. I thought it had been made clear that there should be no racial or national discrimination.

“Apart from the foregoing, I have also been informed that Viet Minh Command’s representatives are apparently attempting to establish irrelevant conditions for the release of the wounded which would have the effect of giving marked military advantages to their side.

“I earnestly hope that you may find it possible immediately to bring the foregoing to the attention of the Viet Minh representatives here to the end that arrangements made by the Viet Minh Command for the evacuation of the wounded be in full accord with the letter and the spirit of the decisions made by our conference.

“I am transmitting a similar letter to Mr. Eden as Co-Chairman of our conference. (Signed) Walter B. Smith.”<sup>3</sup>

No public release of letter will be made until French decide whether and when release their letter.

SMITH

---

<sup>3</sup> In a letter to Smith, May 15, Molotov replied as follows: “I have received your letter of May 15 concerning the evacuation of the seriously wounded from Dien Bien Phu. Somewhat earlier I had received a letter on this same question from the Head of the French Delegation which I have today answered. I am sending you a copy of my reply to M. Bidault in which the questions which interest you are dealt with.” (Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 303) See telegram Secto 224, May 15, p. 817.

---

396.1 GE/5-1554 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET

GENEVA, May 15, 1954—3 p. m.

Secto 217. Repeated information Paris 270, London 164, Saigon 76.
Re Secto 183, May 12, repeated Paris 244, Saigon 59, London 152<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Ante, p. 776.

and Secto 201, May 13, repeated Paris 257, Saigon 66 and London 161.<sup>2</sup> Eden, Bidault and I have discussed tactics for Monday's<sup>3</sup> restricted session on Indochina which will be devoted principally to answers to Eden's questions.

During discussion Eden stated Chou En-lai had yesterday told him Viet Minh proposal indicated their agreement on Eden's first question. I warned against anything that could become de facto partition and suggested we concentrate first on separating out Laotian and Cambodian questions. Bidault agreed and thought Commie case weak on this point. On Vietnam, he maintained we must do everything possible to avoid simple line across country which would cost us North Vietnam. He thought Commies would continue firm on having political settlement before military one and that this left no alternative but to continue "casting iron dice" (shooting). Political settlement at this time would mean loss of whole country and French had not fought eight years for that.

In response to my question as to who would be responsible authority outside delimited areas, Bidault mentioned possibility international supervision, principles of which he observed Molotov had not rejected. I pointed out Soviet concept of effective supervision very different from ours and advised them of second letter of Swiss and Swedes asking to be relieved of their obligations on Korean commission since Commie members prevented them accomplishing task. I asked whether we were agreed there should be UN supervision. Bidault said it should be UN but he would not exclude some other set-up if satisfactory alternative could be found. Eden said we must avoid Korean set-up of two and two. We agreed to discuss this further in light of results Monday when Commies might show more of their hand in restricted session and that we would make every effort to draw them out on all points in Eden's questionnaire.

Eden anticipated battle over separating Laos and Cambodia with Commies again proposing admission of ghost governments. Bidault felt their case on this ridiculous and that more they pushed more they would hurt themselves with French opinion. I suggested that Commie intransigence on this would show they did not want settlement. Bidault felt there would be difficulties with Vietnamese over delimiting areas and that we should first seek agreement that military settlement must come before political. I remarked it would be impossible to have political settlement while fighting continued and Eden said Western insistence on this would put Commies in position of being ones who are preventing cessation of hostilities.

---

<sup>2</sup> Ante, p. 793.

<sup>3</sup> May 17.

We agreed first item should be Dien Bien Phu wounded, second separation Laotian and Cambodian cases from Vietnam and third principle that military settlement must precede political one. Eden will be in chair. We are coordinating this afternoon first with British and French and subsequently with Associated States.

SMITH

---

Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 285

Memorandum by the Special Adviser to the United States Delegation (Heath) to the Head of the Delegation (Smith)<sup>1</sup>

SECRET

[GENEVA,] May 15, 1954.

Subject: Restricted meeting on Indochina to be held Monday, May 17th.

After discussion of such details as the room, provision of interpreters, number of experts (3) and etc., following tentative procedure was agreed to at a tripartite meeting called this afternoon by Ambassador Chauvel:

1) Eden as chairman will call on Bidault to discuss the question of the wounded at Dien Bien Phu. Bidault will rehearse his own letter to Molotov and Molotov's reply and will then ask the Vietminh Delegation for their views on how to proceed to expedite this matter. (Bidault is favorably impressed by the Molotov letter which strikes him as favorable in substance, i.e., no discrimination between French and Vietnamese and generally conciliatory and courteous in tone.) Bidault may also ask whether there is any news about the nurse, the only French woman in the Dien Bien Phu garrison.

2) Eden will then bring up the matter of his five questions<sup>2</sup> and will ask Bidault if he has any further comment he would like to make.

3) Bidault will then ask if there is agreement on the separation of the problems of Laos and Cambodia from the problem of Viet-Nam. If agreement on this principle can be obtained, Bidault will suggest the appointment of separate working committees containing representatives of all nine delegations to endeavor to give form and content to practical solutions for Laos and Cambodia respectively. Perhaps the first task of these committees will be to agree on their terms of reference and to submit those terms to the Conference for approval.

---

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by Bonsal.

<sup>2</sup> Contained in telegram Secto 183, May 12, p. 776.

4) After the question of Laos and Cambodia has been disposed of, Bidault would endeavor to secure agreement on the principle that the cessation of hostilities with appropriate controls and guarantees need not wait upon the reaching of political agreements. This is a problem upon which agreement will be most difficult not only with the other side but also with our own side. The Vietnamese are strongly opposed to any agreement for cessation of hostilities which is not simultaneous with a political agreement recognizing their own status as the sole legal government of Viet-Nam.

---

Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 321

Memorandum by the Special Adviser to the United States Delegation (Davis) to the Deputy United States Representative (Robertson)

CONFIDENTIAL

[GENEVA,] May 15, 1954.

Subject: Indochina Guarantees

I think the following quotations are of considerable importance in connection with the guarantee feature of the French Indochina proposals.

General Smith's statement regarding the French proposals includes the following paragraph: <sup>1</sup>

"The United States notes the French proposal that 'agreements shall be guaranteed by the States participating in the Geneva Conference.' The United States has already demonstrated its devotion to the principle of collective security and its willingness to help in the development of collective security arrangements in Southeast Asia, as elsewhere. Until it is possible to see more clearly the exact nature of the agreement to be guaranteed and to determine the obligations of the guarantors, we will, of course, not be able to express any judgment on this section of the proposal."

Bidault's statement of yesterday contains the following paragraph: <sup>2</sup>

"The French Delegation considers that the institution of an international control is an indispensable guarantee to a correct application of the agreements. It should like to mention further that under

---

<sup>1</sup> Made during the Second Plenary Session on Indochina. For Smith's statement, see telegram Secto 161, May 10, p. 751.

<sup>2</sup> Made during the Fourth Plenary Session on Indochina. See telegram Secto 212, May 14, p. 795.

Chapter Three of the French proposals of the eight[h] of May, the guarantee for the agreements would be, and should, by the state members to this Conference. It notes that the delegation of the United States, of Viet-Nam, Laos, of Cambodia have already assented to the principle of international supervision and to the guarantee to be given to those agreements."

The underlined <sup>3</sup> portion of Bidault's remarks constitutes a flat statement that the U.S. has assented to the guarantee to be given to the proposed agreements. The discrepancy between this and General Smiths' statement is, in my opinion, so strong that it should not remain unchallenged. Otherwise we shall be tacitly committed to a form of guarantee to which I am sure we cannot agree.<sup>4</sup>

A. C. DAVIS

---

<sup>3</sup> Printed here as italics.

<sup>4</sup> Handwritten notation on the source text and a chit attached to the source text indicate that Robertson and Johnson agreed with Admiral Davis.

---

751G.00/5-1654 : Telegram

Eden-Smith Meeting, Geneva, May 15, Evening: The United States Delegation to the Department of State

TOP SECRET

EYES ONLY

GENEVA, May 16, 1954—4 p. m.

Dulte 72. Repeated information Paris 279. Eyes only for the Secretary. Eyes only Ambassador. Eden came to see me yesterday evening obviously quite irritated and bringing with him a copy of the Paris edition of the Herald Tribune for Saturday, May 15, which headlined Ned Russell's article "US-France To Discuss Terms For Intervention In Indochina Conflict". His irritation seemed to be less because we were moving positively than because the British had not been informed, particularly at a time when the Prime Minister and others are continually being forced to answer Parliamentary questions with regard to five-power discussions and relations with and position of the United States. I read him extracts from Deptel 4023 to Paris, repeated Geneva Tedul 54, and Paris to Department 4383, repeated Geneva 237.<sup>1</sup> He left in a more amiable frame of mind. I would suggest, however, that in matters of this kind we keep the British informed as far as possible in advance. It will assist them in meeting political situations and will encourage them to move further in our direction if they believe we are giving them a considerable measure of confidence. There will be disagreements and we will be obliged at times to tell them that we are going ahead whether they agree or not, but I think they would infinitely prefer this than to be surprised with a press story.<sup>2</sup>

---

<sup>1</sup> For telegrams 4023 to Paris and 4383 from Paris, May 11 and 14, pertaining to U.S. policy on intervention in Indochina, see volume XIII.

SMITH

---

<sup>2</sup>The Department of State in telegram Tedul 75, May 17, instructed Under Secretary Smith that as the result of newspaper stories "we are informing British and ANZUS Ambassadors in general terms regarding our talks with French." The Department asked Smith to report "urgently any specific points in Tedul 54 [telegram 4023 to Paris, May 11] which you did not cover with Eden." (751G.00/5-1654) Smith's reply is contained in telegram Dulte 80, May 17, not printed. (Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 245)

Under Secretary Smith reported to the Department of State in telegram Dulte 76, May 17, that Eden had recommended to Churchill that he treat lightly in Parliament press reports of French-U.S. talks on U.S. intervention in Indochina. Eden "suggested Prime Minister say that talks had not yet begun, that there had been slight slip-up in British not being informed such talks were in contemplation but that they had now been informed, that Eden was satisfied, and that he was sure they would continue to be kept informed." Smith recommended that "we must continue to keep them informed and Eden would prefer that it be done here while he is here." (751G.00/5-1754)

---

396.1 GE/5-1554: Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET

GENEVA, May 15, 1954—8 p. m.

Secto 223. Repeated information Saigon 79, Paris 273. Reference Saigon telegram to Geneva 96, repeated information Department 2372.<sup>1</sup> Heath, Achilles and Bonsal discussed with Chauvel, Roux and Cheysson of the French delegation today, the deteriorating political situation in Vietnam and the advisability of Bao Dai's returning to take over the reins of government. The French said that their reports noted political deterioration, but thought the answer was for Prime Minister Buu Loc to return forthwith to Saigon. They were inclined to doubt that Bao Dai's return would immediately change the situation for the better. In any case, they felt it very important, from their point of view, that Bao Dai stay in the neighborhood of delegation in Geneva as otherwise the Vietnamese delegation would hold up decisions and discussions at every point while they awaited instructions from Bao Dai. The Vietnam delegation has firm instructions to take no position without prior authorization from Bao Dai.

SMITH

---

<sup>1</sup> For summary of telegram 2372 from Saigon, May 13, see footnote 2, p. 800.

396.1 GE/5-1554 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

CONFIDENTIAL

GENEVA, May 15, 1954—9 p. m.

Secto 224. Repeated information Paris 274 Saigon 80. Reference Sectos 215, 219.<sup>1</sup> I have received from Molotov acknowledgment of my letter<sup>2</sup> and copy of his reply to Bidault which reads:

"I have today received your letter of May 14 regarding the evacuation of wounded from Dien Bien Phu.

"In accordance with your wish, I have brought the content of your letter to the attention of the head of the delegation of the Democratic Republic of Vietnam, Pham Van Dong.

"I also am aware of the statements which you mention of the delegation of the Democratic Republic of Vietnam of May 10 to the effect that its Commander would carry out no discrimination among the wounded on considerations of race or nationality.

"As you remember, at the Geneva Conference, May 10, a statement by the head of the delegation of the DRV was heard concerning its readiness to undertake without delay measures directed toward the evacuation of the seriously wounded taken prisoner at Dien Bien Phu. At the same time, the wish was expressed that representatives of both commands undertake practical steps on the spot to carry out this evacuation, and all participants in the Conference took cognizance of this.

"In accordance with this it is reasonable to think that all practical questions concerning the evacuation of wounded from Dien Bien Phu should be settled by agreement among the commands of both sides on the spot.

"It is possible that you, Mr. Minister, will find it expedient to establish direct contact with the delegation of the DRV which is in Geneva to clarify those questions, the settlement of which might assist in the establishment of a system of evacuation which would be satisfactory to both sides."

Bidault was struck by its courteous tone, its reference to nondiscrimination, its reiteration that practical questions be dealt with on the spot, and suggestion that French discuss it with Viet Minh here. He has not decided what to do next.<sup>3</sup>

SMITH

---

<sup>1</sup> Both dated May 15, pp. 809 and 810 respectively.

<sup>2</sup> Dated May 15. See footnote 3, p. 811.

<sup>3</sup> Bidault's comments on the Molotov reply are contained in a memorandum from Achilles to Johnson, May 15, in Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 303.

396.1 GE/5-1554 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET

GENEVA, May 15, 1954—9 p. m.

Secto 225. Repeated information Paris 275, Saigon 81, London 167, Moscow 72, Phnom Penh and Vientiane unnumbered. Department pass Defense. Following are comments Molotov and Bidault speeches fourth Indochina plenary yesterday:

(1) Molotov gave four-point program which he said was summary Viet Minh proposal. Comparison shows USSR four points (with one additional sentence which Molotov added) cover in briefer form first seven points Viet Minh proposal, as well as most of Viet Minh point eight (which provided for cessation hostilities as condition precedent for other seven and which vaguely outlined controls for cease-fire). Soviets do not repeat Viet Minh reference to "settlement of territories and of areas occupied" given in second sentence point eight Viet Minh plan, which presumably covers regrouping concept also found in French plan.

Supplement to Viet Minh proposal importance of which Molotov stressed was in fact, substitution for Viet Minh plan for mixed commissions comprising belligerents only (paragraph eight C). USSR proposed "setting up of a neutral nations supervisory commission shall be provided for in the agreement".

Portion Molotov speech covering various proposals already submitted and Soviet comments thereon was characterized by ostensibly conciliatory approach. He did not refer to Vietnamese plan (Secto 193<sup>1</sup>) at all, but stated drawback of French proposal was it did not deal with political problem which was inseparable from military stressing impossibility any purely military settlement. French, of course, had indicated Vietnamese should take lead on proposing political settlements, but Vietnamese recommendations would doubtless be completely unacceptable to Soviets. He said no cessation hostilities should be just "shrewdly-arranged respite". On guarantees question, Molotov agreed idea nine States participating conference would be guarantors, but rejected French concept individual guarantees and spoke only of "collective measures" to implement guarantees. He expressed hope other delegations would also comment on French plan which he said was "an important proposal". Thus Soviets gave some appearance conciliatory approach to French plan.

Molotov also said Soviet delegation would reply to Eden's five points at later date.

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated May 12, p. 780.

(2) Bidault's speech was point-by-point refutation Viet Minh proposal. He first isolated problems Laos and Cambodia and then refuted in detail Viet Minh proposals as applied to Vietnam (Secto 212<sup>2</sup>). For first time in plenary session, Bidault indicating French willingness withdraw troops from Laos and Cambodia under certain conditions.

Bidault statement did not disavow any of points previously made in French proposal submitted first plenary session. He did stress political settlement should follow military arrangement and that discussion former should not delay latter. This may cause some difficulties with Vietnamese who, of course, emphasize inter-relationship two problems. Bidault did admit tie existed between two, but said political settlement would be consequence, not precondition of military settlement.

In replying to Eden questions, on point number five, Bidault reiterated France had originally proposed international controls and said France "was prepared to examine all proposals which might be made concerning the composition of commissions and the methods of control". He added, if principle international control accepted, appropriate mixed groups could be established by common agreement and operating under international authority. This is slight though probably not significant modification French position as tabled first plenary session.

In general, Bidault gave impression that although talking to Viet Minh proposal his objective was refutation and France rejected Viet Minh plan as basis for discussion.

SMITH

---

<sup>2</sup> Dated May 14, p. 795.

MAY 16, 1954

396.1 GE/5-1654 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET

GENEVA, May 16, 1954—9 a. m.

Secto 228. Repeated information London 171. Limit distribution. Eden spoke to me briefly regarding talk he had time his call on Chou En-lai morning May 14. Allen gave Johnson detailed account Saturday and let him read UK's summary conversation made following meeting during which no notes were taken.

Allen stated Chou very reserved and formal, unbending only slightly toward end of meeting. Eden opened by stating he wished first as co-chairman Indochina phase discuss how conference could get down to negotiations, particularly on Indochina and suggested possibility restricted sessions next week. Chou responded with formal style statement that if everyone wanted peace, solution could be found that would be "honorable, fair and reasonable by both sides". Chou stated had studied Eden's questions on Indochina as well as Eden's points on Korea and would discuss restricted Indochina sessions with USSR and Viet Minh. Stated China supports North Korea and Viet Minh views and complained French had not answered Viet Minh political proposal, leaving political questions to Vietnam.

Eden then stated that as Foreign Secretary he wanted to do what he could to decrease tension between "five great powers", and a settlement was necessary to achieve this. Chou responded by referring to preamble recent Chinese Communist agreement with India on Tibet which set forth principles Chinese Communist foreign policy, that is, mutual non-aggression and peaceful co-existence. Chou then stated China wished to obtain recognition as a great power but "was not making this a condition for any settlement".

Eden then referred to dangers if Ho Chi Minh persisted in asking too much. He might feel that he could get it, and he "might even be able to get it", however wider considerations should be borne in mind or position could become dangerous. Chou responded by terming "Bao Dai's" proposals as unrealistic and his claims to absolute authority throughout Indochina as "absurd" as position taken by Chiang Kai-shek during the Civil War in China. He added that far eastern experts like Dennis Allen and Trevelyan who were present, would be fully familiar with the situation that had existed in China.

Eden suggested it would be better to discuss military armistice upon which Chou asked for explanation Eden's first question. Eden replied that if the fighting were to be stopped it would be necessary that the forces both sides be disengaged, and this would require some redeployment on their part. Chou said he could see that this might well be first point for discussion and would study situation.

Chou then made statement with regard to necessity both countries working for improvement of relations, implication being China would do little toward normalizing relations with UK until there was change in UK attitudes toward Communist China.

Eden then mentioned conversations between Trevelyan and Huan Hsiang, upon which Chou indicated he was closely following their conversations and giving detailed instructions to Huan Hsiang.<sup>1</sup> Eden then stated it is important both countries also "bring other countries along too", to which Chou replied that it was in main British who could do this.

---

<sup>1</sup> Reference to discussions on Sino-British relations between members of the Chinese and British Delegations at Geneva. For an outline of these discussions, see p. 803.

Allen characterized conversation as not offering much hope any change Chinese Communist attitudes or policies.

Eden told me that while term UN was never mentioned in conversation, implication he drew from Chou's remarks and general approach was that Chou was asking obliquely whether if Chinese behaved they would be admitted to UN. Eden said he made it very clear this was not a question to be handled by "deals", and that he was not making a proposal of any kind.

He also told me that just before leaving he had said he must add a word of caution about pushing the US too far—that we were "slow starters" but that when we did start we went all the way. This is not reflected in the memorandum.

SMITH

---

Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 331

Memorandum by the Special Adviser to the United States Delegation (Heath) to the Head of the Delegation (Smith)<sup>1</sup>

SECRET

[GENEVA,] May 16, 1954.

Subject: French request concerning your visit to Bao Dai.

Ambassador Chauvel this morning showed a member of the U.S. Delegation a telegram from French Commissioner General Dejean in Saigon.

The telegram was concerned principally with the very bad reaction to the Secretary's press conference remarks on May 11 to the effect that Indochina was not indispensable to the defense of Southeast Asia.<sup>2</sup> Dejean felt that this statement had destroyed the last French-Vietnamese trump at Geneva: the threat of U.S. intervention in Indochina. This feeling was strengthened by the fact that Secretary Wilson, General Van Fleet, and General Hull were not planning to visit Indochina during their tours of the area. However, Dejean understands that Secretary Wilson now intends to stop in Indochina.

With a view toward lessening the reaction to the Secretary's remarks, Ambassador Chauvel (speaking, I understand for Bidault) asked if you could tell Bao Dai that the U.S. position on Indochina has not changed, that we still consider it the key to defense of Southeast Asia, and that we are not planning to let it go to the Communists.

Ambassador Chauvel also said that M. Bidault agreed that Bao Dai should not go back to Viet-Nam for a week or ten days, since his absence would paralyze the Vietnamese Delegation. M. Bidault does feel that Vietnamese Prime Minister Buu Loc should return to Saigon immediately.

---

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by Getz.

<sup>2</sup> For summary of the Secretary's press conference, see footnote 1, p. 772.

---

396.1 GE/5-1654 : Telegram

The Chargé in India (Flanagan) to the Department of State

NEW DELHI, May 16, 1954.

Unnumbered. Sent Department Geneva and IPSNY unnumbered. Geneva for McCardle. USINFO. Nehru told House of People May 15th that if his Indochina ceasefire suggestion <sup>1</sup> had been thought of in more urgent terms, much suffering would have been avoided. Said satisfactory settlement procedural difficulties at opening conference good omen. Said countries of Asia intimately concerned with both Korea and Indochina. Said it not illegitimate desire of India that business of others carrying on warfare for their own purposes in Asia should cease.

Said imposition of settlement by either side impossible. Cited military stalemate in Korea. Said statesmen at Geneva actuated by strong desire for peace. Saw growing commonness in their approach.

Said he had no desire participate Geneva. Said he would hesitate very much to assume further burdens any kind. But said India cannot avoid fact that if situation arises which might require some kind of initiative on our part or association in any particular decision "We cannot run away. We cannot shed responsibilities that go with a great country."

Suggested that Geneva conference report to United Nations which could facilitate implementation Geneva decisions.

FLANAGAN

---

<sup>1</sup> Made on Apr. 24. For an outline of Nehru's proposal, see p. 635.

---

396.1 GE/5-1654 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET

GENEVA, May 16, 1954—1 p. m.

Secto 227. Repeated information Bangkok 4, Paris 277, London 170, Saigon 82. Discussed with Prince Wan and Sarasin contents of Department's telegram to Geneva 761.<sup>1</sup> Prince Wan said that he agreed in principle and that he would submit suggestion to his government. He felt his government would also agree in principle but there might be some reservation as to timing, that Cambodia's complaint was already before UN and that it might be advisable to wait until there had been an actual invasion of Laos before submitting to UN as reaction might be that there was no good reason for request.

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated May 13, p. 790.

I stressed that in my opinion there was better case to be made now than last June, that there was mounting tension throughout area, and no one knew what would happen or when. It was particularly important to get action started promptly on account of time factor involved in getting action through Assembly and POC on ground. Prince Wan seemed to be impressed and stated that he would communicate with his government immediately.

With Prince Wan's approval, I discussed subject with Bidault and Eden stating we thought time had come to bring in UN, preferably through revival of Thai appeal and that conditions were so different now that I strongly hoped French would find advantages now outweighed disadvantages. I believed "colonial" complications could now be avoided. I told them Wan agreed in principle but was not sure about timing and that we believed effective action could be gotten without too much delay in General Assembly after Soviet veto in Security Council. Eden referred to Cambodian appeal but I expressed belief Thailand more suitable as experienced independent UN member.

Bidault said it would be difficult to reply quickly but he would try to give answer early next week.

Thai appeal to UN also subsequently discussed with Chauvel and Allen. Chauvel stated he saw no objection in principle but questioned only timing and peg on which to hang appeal. He thought next week or two might provide peg either through further invasion of Laos or Cambodia, Communist refusal to agree to Viet-Minh evacuation of Laos and Cambodia or further insistence on representation phantom governments.

Allen indicated generally favorable view although both he and Chauvel raised question whether such action would prejudice conference efforts separate problems Laos and Cambodia from Vietnam.

SMITH

---

751G.5/5-1654 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

TOP SECRET

GENEVA, May 16, 1954—1 p. m.

Secto 229. Repeated information Paris 278, Saigon 83. Following is Heath's account of his talk with Bao Dai at Paris Friday:<sup>1</sup>

"Bao Dai had planned to drive his family down to Cannes Friday morning but postponed his departure until afternoon to see me. I told him I had thought it a good thing to get his present views on conference. Bao Dai said that although he had seen a great many people

<sup>1</sup> May 14.

during his stay in Paris he had been unable to obtain any clear view of what were intentions of French Government regarding Vietnam and Indochina, or how French attitude towards Indochina would develop. When he left Saigon he had not intended to remain long, but in this situation of complete uncertainty of French intention and actions which might gravely affect Vietnam, he thought it necessary to remain where he could consult with French Government and also keep in close touch with his own delegation to Geneva Conference. He believed or rather hoped that French were "so committed" (engagé) in this war that they could not withdraw their forces from Indochina, but he was far from sure of this.

"I then said that reports had reached us indicating a marked deterioration in political situation of Vietnam and that view had been expressed in Vietnam, with an echo in Washington that it was necessary for him to return to Vietnam now in order to take hold of things. Bao Dai said that there was some deterioration in Vietnam of which he was fully aware but it did not, he thought, present any immediate dangers and was in part caused by uncertainty regarding French intentions. He thought it better for him for moment to stay nearby in France. He indicated that he had thought to return to Saigon either with firm assurances that French would resist any Communist pressure for a phony peace settlement or that French had decided to give up and in which latter case he would return and head a national movement of resistance to Viet Minh. He was inclined to doubt that French would like him to return and issue an appeal for resistance to Viet Minh at very moment when French were still negotiating an armistice with latter at Geneva.

"He said that he had been disturbed by first press reports of Secretary's press conference of May 11.<sup>2</sup> I reassured him that in first press reports transmitted phrases taken out of their context and summarized complete statement for him.

"Bao Dai then said that he was deeply grateful for America's support and conscious that we had political problems at home in connection with this support. He wanted to say he would welcome any suggestions on our part as to what he might do or say that would be helpful in furthering our policy toward Vietnam. I said I would report this to Washington, mentioned that the Under Secretary would be glad of chance to meet him and talk things over with him, and inquired whether he intended to come, as I had heard, to near-by Evian. He said he would come to Evian and asked when Under Secretary would be free to see him there. I replied that Under Secretary would be somewhat freer of conference duties on Sunday and if Bao Dai were planning to go to Evian then, Under Secretary would drive over to see him. Bao Dai said that he would be in Evian on Sunday next."<sup>3</sup>

This has been cleared with French and I will make a short visit today. British also informed.

SMITH

---

<sup>2</sup> For summary of the Secretary's press conference, see footnote 1, p. 772.

<sup>3</sup> May 16.

Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 331

Memorandum by the Special Adviser to the United States Delegation (Heath) to the Head of the Delegation (Smith)

TOP SECRET

[GENEVA,] May 16, 1954.

1. Bidault, through Chauvel, says he sees no objections to your calling on Bao Dai.

2. I do not believe in view of Bidault's objection, (see attached memo)<sup>1</sup> we should attempt to persuade Bao Dai to return to Vietnam at this precise juncture.

3. As Bidault suggests, you might mention alarming reports of political deterioration and suggest urgently that Prime Minister Buu Loc return forthwith.

3. [sic] You might also ask Bao Dai's views on the alleged conflict between the Defense Minister Quat and Vietnam Chief of Staff, General Hinh.

4. You might smoke him out as to his plans for the conference. Evidently the Vietnam Delegation intends to stall for time without openly opposing the French, hoping the conference will break up without reaching a "solution" acceptable to the Communists, the French and ourselves and that the French will, therefore, have to keep on with the fight, with increased assistance, perhaps intervention from the U.S. If a conference solution is reached acceptable to the Communists and the French, he is considering the idea of keeping up the fight with the Vietnamese army alone provided we will come through with arms and financing. (The chances of any successful Vietnamese resistance unsupported will be very dubious to say the least.)

5. Another thing he hopes to do is to use the conference as a platform to help persuade the non-communists elements of the Vietminh supposedly in the majority, to break away and rally to the Bao Dai Government. (His chances of success in such an enterprise at this time seems to me to be very dubious.)

6. Without "protesting too much" you may wish to correct any misapprehension which may have arisen in Bao Dai's mind as a result of press conferences and statements over the past week, stressing to him the efforts being made by the President and by the Secretary to create further military and political assets on our side.

7. Finally you might refer with appreciation to Bao Dai's statement to me that he would be glad to receive any suggestions we might make as to what he might do or say that would aid the U.S. Government in its policy of helping Indochina.

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated May 16, p. 821.

After saying that you might inquire as to the plans and prospects for building a stronger and more efficient government and army capable of arousing unified national support. This is a first meeting so should not, I feel, start taking him sternly to task for his deficiencies as a ruler. He is still the best trump we have. But in discussing his willingness to do or say anything which would help us help him we can get across our thought that marked improvement in the performance of his Government and himself is necessary.

MAY 17, 1954

Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 285

Memorandum by the Special Adviser to the United States Delegation (Heath) to the Head of the Delegation (Smith)<sup>1</sup>

SECRET

[GENEVA,] May 17, 1954.

A meeting of the Six was held this morning:

1) Ambassador Chauvel explained that there would be no press conferences after the meetings and that only jointly agreed communiqués would be issued.

2) With regard to the Dien Bien Phu wounded, Bidault will review the situation in the light of latest developments including possibility that negotiations between the high commands in the field have been broken off. Bidault will also ask for news of prisoners.

3) Bidault will then take up the Eden questions and endeavor to ascertain whether agreement can be reached on (a) separate and rapid consideration of the problems of Cambodia and Laos, and (b) priority over political problems for a cessation of hostilities with appropriate guarantees and international supervision.

4) In the event that agreement is reached on the question of Laos and Cambodia, Bidault will suggest the constitution of a special committee to deal with the problems and to report back to the Conference (the Cambodians are insistent that separate committees be appointed for Cambodia and for Laos but are willing to defer taking their stand on this point until the principle of separate treatment for the two countries is accepted by the other side).

5) If the priority of working out a satisfactory cessation of hostilities is accepted, Bidault would plan to suggest (probably not today) that the military commands in the field, i.e., the Franco-Vietnamese command and the Vietminh command be asked to designate officers who would come to Geneva and would here endeavor to work out a detailed proposal for the regrouping of forces for submission to the Conference.

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by Bonsal.

6) There was some discussion of a Vietnamese proposal that there should be requested a cessation by both sides of military operations of any importance during the current negotiations. It was agreed that this proposal presents many difficulties and should not be made without a great deal of careful further study.

---

396.1 GE/5-1754 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET      PRIORITY

GENEVA, May 17, 1954—1 p. m.

Secto 232. Repeated information London 172, Paris 280, Moscow 73, Saigon 84. S/S-R pass Defense and CIA. Reference Secto 212,<sup>1</sup> we believe Molotov's speech most significant Communist pronouncement thus far in conference. Whatever may lie behind speech in terms Moscow-Peking relations, speech itself represents Moscow decision take open initiative re Indochina question along following lines:

1. After presenting what they may feel is strong case from Communist viewpoint re "just" character Ho Chi Minh was against legitimate authorities Indochina, Soviets have through Molotov issued warning against intervention in Indochina or continuing US efforts to organize collective security front SEA. Speech includes significant statement that "establishing new American military bases in this region . . . cannot be regarded indifferently by those states, the security of which is affected by plans to create the above-mentioned bloc" (reference is to "new military bloc" in SEA). No doubt one purpose this threat is to provoke US reaction to enable Communists better to determine our intentions.

2. Latter part Molotov's speech in marked contrast with foregoing and obviously intended represent constructive negotiating attitude re French proposal for guarantee by Geneva powers and British concept role for SOA Colombo powers.<sup>2</sup>

3. By threatening as to consequences of US intervention through "united action" and simultaneously holding out hopes regarding possible modification of Communist demands re Indochina Molotov is treating French and British to familiar Soviet carrot and whip technique. Message intended is that if they will disassociate themselves from US strength and leadership, they will find Soviets not unreasonable regarding their interests in Indochinese settlement. Worth noting that Molotov makes "full termination of movement into Indochina from outside of fresh troops and all types of arms and ammunition" a condition precedent to any settlement.

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated May 14, p. 795.

<sup>2</sup> SOA-South Asia. Powers included India, Indonesia, Pakistan, Ceylon, and Burma.

4. That Communists intend to play present military advantage in Indochina to full is clearly indicated in Molotov's statement to conference that "termination of hostilities in Indochina (cannot be transformed into shrewdly-arranged respite for one side which would like to use it to prepare for extension of war . . .". By coupling foregoing with statement that Geneva conference "must secure early cessation of hostilities and at same time reach such an agreement as will . . . satisfy legitimate demands of peoples of Indochina," Molotov also makes clear that Communist price for settlement is political turnover to Ho Chi Minh, however fancy may be the window-dressing in terms of French "honor" or prestige.

5. Boiled down practical aspects Molotov's speech looks like warning to west that if it wishes Indochinese settlement it had better set aside thoughts their direct military intervention Indochina or regional collective security moves SEA. Molotov by linking such threats with apparent parallel disposition toward negotiations hopes to exploit development negotiations so that latter may act as brake against US efforts organize collective security SEA. By combining this diplomatic tactic with full exploitation military possibilities Indochina Communists believe they can thwart our defensive efforts since it will be most difficult for us to build collective security enterprise around atmosphere of defeat.

6. Great danger for us is that if present situation continues to deteriorate Soviets, though still adhering to fundamental policy of avoiding risk global war, may now be so encouraged by what they believe to be weakness our local position SEA that they will take or permit steps necessitating counteraction on our part at later more unfavorable time from our viewpoint.

7. Communists may estimate that given present British and French attitudes and our present concentration on what at best will be long drawn-out effort to set up SEA collective security system, they now have excellent opportunity gain control Indochina and perhaps other SEA areas without undue risk.

It follows from foregoing that our willingness take concrete steps retrieve Indochinese position itself, expressed primarily through deeds rather than words, would have salutary effect in bringing Communists to their senses. Appreciate that strong US position might be viewed in some non-Communist Asian quarters as having "colonial" or "imperialistic" implication. This could be counterbalanced in part by our assuming favorable position re participation Colombo Government in machinery for Indochinese settlement.

396.1 GE/5-1754 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET      PRIORITY

GENEVA, May 17, 1954—1 p. m.

Secto 234. Repeated information priority Paris 281, Saigon 85. With Heath saw Bao Dai at Evian yesterday.<sup>1</sup>

I expressed our view regarding the advisability of associating the UN with the Indochina conflict, and told him of my talks with Bidault and Prince Wan. He seemed in accord with the idea, but made no definite expression of approval, apparently desiring to discuss the matter with his ministers and also to ascertain that this proposal would not cross wires with the French.

Bao Dai agreed with me that Bidault was making a courageous stand to prevent a Communist take-over of Indochina, but Bao Dai pointed out that the chances of survival of the present government, with a majority of only two in the vote of confidence, were not brilliant. In these days of critical uncertainty whether France was going to stand by Vietnam in the fight or walk out, he felt it was necessary to remain near Geneva and Paris. He had been disappointed with the reaction to the fall of Dien Bien Phu. He had thought that in France, a great military nation, or at least a nation with a great military tradition, the reaction would be one of increased determination and effort to turn the tide. That reaction had not appeared and the chief concern seemed to be to place the blame on some one.

He still hoped, however, that France would see that her true interest was in fighting loyally alongside the Vietnamese Army in the great task of preventing a Communist take-over of all Indochina.

He was alarmed over the French proposals for termination of hostilities and was determined that if the French insisted on an armistice that it should not bind the Vietnamese Army, which was willing to fight on to the end, even if the struggle looked like a suicidal one. He was confident of the loyalty of the army and he had recently received a large number of telegrams, including one from Bishop Le Huu Thi, assuring him the senders were ready to fight on whatever the French did. In this situation, he intended in the next few days to ask the Lanier Government whether the French were determined to make peace and withdraw or whether they would fight on with the Vietnamese Army. He did not want to do anything to increase French political difficulties at this time, but he was sure that the government would understand the necessity of his putting the question bluntly and without delay.

---

<sup>1</sup> May 16.

To my inquiry as to reports political deterioration in Vietnam, he replied that there was some deterioration but no political disintegration. This deterioration was in part due to uncertainty as to the French attitude. It was natural that many individuals and groups should seek to find new positions in case the French withdrew. Such political difficulties were confined to the south. The north was united and determined to resist, because it was close to the war and knew the danger of communism. The difficulties of the south were also caused in part by intrigues of low level French officials and interests who were backing certain Vietnamese individuals and groups. He had no complaints to make of high level French conduct and policy.

To my inquiry as to reported friction between Defense Minister Quat and General Hinh, Bao Dai replied that friction between military commanders and defense ministers occurred in many countries. The situation I had referred to was not serious and this friction would disappear before the great defense task confronting Vietnam.

Bidault had expressed concern over the absence of Prime Minister Buu Loc from Vietnam in the moment of political deterioration. Bao Dai avoided answering my question whether he intended sending Buu Loc back at this juncture.

He went on to say that among the fence-sitters who in these last days had expressed allegiance to him, he had received a message from Ngo Dinh Diem, a leading Catholic lay figure and "fence-sitter" offering to return to Vietnam and serve Bao Dai to whom in the past he has been hostile.

Bao Dai said he had therefore appointed Ngo Dinh Diem's brother Luyen, as his personal observer at the conference and if I wished to communicate with or receive information from Bao Dai I need only to call on the latter.

Bao Dai said that a former minister of his, present in Geneva, had received a request for an interview from Phan Anh, Dong's principal assistant at the conference. Bao Dai told him by all means to see Anh. Bao Dai said it was possible that Anh and others in the Viet Minh delegation really wanted to get in touch with him and possibly rally to his side, but on the other hand he had to be on guard lest this were a Viet Minh maneuver. He could not understand why the Viet Minh delegation included such non-Communists as Anh and Buu. Bao Dai had gone to school with both of them and both had formerly held Cabinet posts under him.

Bao Dai expressed no opinion as to Navarre's competency, merely saying that he had been most correct in his relations with the Vietnamese Government and had obviously done his best to build up the Vietnamese National Army. Bao Dai did, however, criticize the manner of using the Vietnamese National Army by the French High Command. He said that the Vietnamese training schools would "manufacture" a battalion which would forthwith be swallowed up in the French Expeditionary Force. Often times the Vietnamese Minister did not know where a given Vietnamese battalion was. He said that there should be found means of maintaining some degree of separateness and control for the Vietnamese units and the Vietnamese National Army must be given more responsibilities.

SMITH

396.1 GE/5-1754 : Telegram

*First Restricted Session on Indochina, Geneva, May 17, 3 p. m.:
The United States Delegation to the Department of State*<sup>1</sup>

SECRET

GENEVA, May 17, 1954—11 p. m.

Secto 240. Repeated information Paris 288, London 177, Saigon 86, Tokyo 68, Moscow 74. Department pass Defense, Tokyo pass CINCFE. At first restricted Indochina meeting today after discussion of Dien Bien Phu wounded,<sup>2</sup> Bidault as first speaker stated that although he had answered Eden's five questions,<sup>3</sup> he thought they should be clarified and supplemented. He proposed (1) that if there were agreement with the French position that Laos and Cambodia should be dealt with separately, there should be appointed an ad hoc committee for this purpose, and (2) that if there were agreement with respect to Vietnam on relative priority of the military over the political aspect of the problem and necessity for immediate cessation of hostilities, that the commanders-in-chief should send representatives to Geneva to study technical aspects of termination of hostilities and put forward their recommendations to conference.

Molotov said there were two proposals before conference, one French<sup>4</sup> and the other Viet Minh.<sup>5</sup> He said that Soviet delegation attached great importance to both military and political aspects of question, believing them closely linked but since military aspect was dealt with in both draft proposals whereas only one dealt with politi-

<sup>1</sup> A set of minutes of this session (IC Restricted/1) is in Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 278. The minutes indicate that the meeting convened at 3 p. m. and adjourned at 6:15 p. m. The minutes are also printed in Conférence de Genève, pp. 101-105.

<sup>2</sup> Discussion described in telegram Secto 241, May 17, infra.

<sup>3</sup> Reported in telegram Secto 183, May 12, p. 776.

<sup>4</sup> Reported in telegram Secto 143, as modified by Secto 152, May 8, p. 730.

<sup>5</sup> Reported in telegram Secto 162, May 10, p. 753.

cal, he would suggest that military questions be taken up first. After that one could go on to consider political matters. He suggested that conference (1) consider point by point the proposals in French and Viet Minh drafts, (2) since there were military provisions in both drafts, begin by considering those military provisions, and (3) while doing this, also consider the relevant questions advanced by Eden and at same time recall proposal made by Soviet delegation.

Laotian delegate then spoke of Eden's questions, all of which he answered in the affirmative and stressed importance of treating Laos and Cambodia separately by working sub-committee and achieving cease-fire as soon as possible.

Eden opined that there was not too much dissimilarity between Bidault's second question and Molotov's proposal. What was outstanding was question of how to deal with Laos and Cambodia. General Smith then suggested that Molotov amend his proposal so as to accept Bidault's wish for establishment of working sub-committee to deal with Laos and Cambodia and made statement supporting separate and early consideration of problem of these countries pointing out relative simplicity and ease with which Geneva conference could make solid step toward restoring peace to Indochina by its resolution.

After Chou had supported Molotov's proposal on procedure Molotov suggested that if conference accepted his proposal to use French and Viet Minh drafts as basis for discussion, this could be with understanding that substantive discussion would begin with question as to whether Laos and Cambodia should be dealt with separately. Vietnam delegate supported separate treatment for Laos and Cambodia and reminded conference that his delegation had also tabled proposal on Vietnam which it would expect to have considered as well.<sup>6</sup>

Viet Minh delegate in lengthy and somewhat confused statement eventually supported Molotov's proposal on procedure but ended with somewhat querulous assertion that they saw no real reason for considering Khmer and Pathet Lao first. After further clarification resulting in clear understanding that Molotov proposal on procedure did not exclude consideration of substantive proposals already tabled in addition to French and Viet Minh, his proposal was accepted.

It was agreed to postpone substantive discussion to next meeting, tomorrow afternoon at 3:00 p. m. text of routine communiqué to be issued by delegations individually was agreed on. Eden reminded delegations they were not to exceed its terms.

SMITH

---

<sup>6</sup> Reported in telegram Secto 190, May 12, p. 783.

396.1 GE/5-1754: Telegram

*First Restricted Session on Indochina, Geneva, May 17, 3 p. m.:
The United States Delegation to the Department of State*<sup>1</sup>

SECRET

GENEVA, May 17, 1954—11 p. m.

Secto 241. Repeated information Paris 289, London 178, Saigon 87, Tokyo 69, Moscow 75. Department pass Defense. Tokyo pass CINCFE. At restricted meeting Indochina conference this afternoon, Bidault raised question evacuation DBP wounded. After referring letters exchanged between delegations here, he stated his information now indicates (a) no Vietnamese wounded scheduled for evacuation thus violating principle of nondiscrimination, and (b) that Viet Minh Command has raised unacceptable conditions not mentioned Geneva, i.e., requirement that route 41 be not bombed during evacuation. Bidault said French Government ready evacuate Viet Minh wounded by air to any point designated by Viet Minh Command in number equal to wounded our side evacuated from Dien Bien Phu.

DRV delegate reiterated acceptance principle nondiscrimination but stated number Vietnamese wounded very low because "French command concentrated at Dien Bien Phu best troops of Expeditionary Corps," adding that original garrison had consisted of only 1/8th Vietnamese and many of these surrendered wholesale abandoning French during fight. He said there had been agreement in field that wounded would be free in three groups with 753 in first two groups and number of third group to be decided later by DRV, that evacuations would be at rate of 80-100 per day and that French were to suspend air action over certain ones during period of evacuation. He pointed out that while Franco-Vietnamese wounded evacuated by air, Viet Minh must have use roads. He said Cogny in radio broadcast midnight May 13 had agreed suspend air activity over an area 10 kilometers around Dien Bien Phu and on route 41 between Sonla and Dien Bien Phu.

Molotov supported DRV statement adding that contact between interested delegations in Geneva might be maintained while details worked out in field.

USDel received message monitored over DRV radio to effect only French, Africans and Foreign Legion would be evacuated and suggested possibility of misunderstanding. He also stated rate of 80-100 wounded per day suggested by DRV seemed very low.

Bidault indicated alleged agreement described by DRV delegate was not between soldiers but between doctors. He stressed principles of nondiscrimination and of avoidance of injecting strategic considerations into humanitarian matter.

---

<sup>1</sup>A set of minutes of this session (IC Restricted/1) is in Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 278.

CPR delegate supported DRV. Vietnamese delegate took sharp issue with DRV allegations re small number and/or conduct of Vietnamese troops at DBP.

Eden recorded agreement on nondiscrimination principle, on desirability that evacuation proceed rapidly and that contacts in field be supplemented by contacts in Geneva.

At intermission Chauvel told us Bidault did not feel discussion had been productive.

Later in meeting Bidault reverted this topic asking DRV delegate designate representative with whom French might pursue problem. Molotov then rather pointedly and looking at Dong expressed understanding of Soviet delegate that both parties would do everything to facilitate contacts both in field and in Geneva to which Dong nodded agreement.

SMITH

---

Editorial Note

On May 17 Prime Minister Winston Churchill made the following statement in Parliament on the proposed security pact for Southeast Asia.

"I am obliged to the right hon. Gentleman and other hon. Members for postponing these Questions until now.

"The Geneva Conference is now entering on its fourth week. The immediate object of the discussions about Indo-China is to bring the fighting to an end on terms acceptable to both sides. My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary is doing all in his power to help in finding an agreed basis for this, and I am sure the House would not wish that anything should be said which might make his task more difficult. Moreover, the situation is in constant flux. As those who have put these Questions on the Paper have no doubt seen for themselves, it has undergone changes even since last Thursday. I certainly feel sympathy with the desire of many Members of the House to discuss more fully than is possible at Question time the whole foreign situation in all its bearings, but I cannot yet fix a suitable occasion. It certainly would be a great advantage—I think we should all agree to this—if the Foreign Secretary himself were present to give his own account of the events which have taken place and set his own proportion upon them.

"All I will therefore say today is that until the outcome of the Conference is known, final decisions cannot be taken regarding the establishment of a collective defence in South-East Asia and the Western Pacific. Meanwhile it will be clear from the statements already made that Her Majesty's Government have not embarked on any negotiation involving commitments.

"These problems of future policy to which I have just referred are, of course, quite distinct from the question of the examinations undertaken without commitment by existing military agencies, to which my right hon. and learned Friend the Minister of State referred in reply to a Question on 10th of May. They are equally distinct from the conversations which, as reported in the Press, have been in progress during the past few days between the United States and French Governments about the situation in Indo-China.

"In our consideration of all these matters, we are maintaining the closest touch with the Governments of India, Pakistan and Ceylon, and also with the Government of Burma. All these Governments are being kept fully informed from day to day of the development of events at the Geneva Conference, since we fully realise that they will be closely affected by its outcome and may feel willing to make a contribution towards it. There is, of course, also very intimate consultation with the Governments of Canada, Australia and New Zealand through their Delegations at Geneva as well as through the usual channels of Commonwealth consultation.

"It should not, however, be thought that the terms of this statement cast any doubt upon our readiness to examine, when the outcome of the Geneva Conference is clearer, the possibility of establishing a system of collective security and defence in South-East Asia and the Western Pacific within the framework of the United Nations. We shall certainly do so. But our immediate task is to do everything we can to reach an agreed settlement at Geneva for the restoration of peace in Indo-China. Her Majesty's Government are resolved to do their utmost to achieve this aim and to exercise their influence to ensure that any acceptable settlement shall be backed by effective international guarantees." (Parliamentary Debates, House of Commons, 5th Series, volume 527, columns 1692-1693)

---

790.5/5-1754 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

TOP SECRET      PRIORITY

GENEVA, May 17, 1954—4 p. m.

Dulte 77. Repeated information Paris priority 283. Eyes only Ambassador. Reference: Tedul 67.<sup>1</sup> In reply to question whether subject Southeast Asia collective security measures should continue to be dealt with here between Eden and General Smith or in future be handled between Washington and London, Caccia said that from British point of view as long as Eden was here it would be better to carry on business in Geneva.<sup>2</sup> Other questions apart, Caccia felt that only outstanding problem regarding proposed military staff talks was development of terms of reference. He felt that Eden was now prepared to go along with Washington as site.

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated May 14, p. 799.

However with respect to subject in general, a new obstacle has been created by published reports of US-French talks on US participation in Indochina war. Before this report was published on Saturday Eden had been ready to agree to going ahead immediately with military staff talks but now felt he had to await outcome of US-French talks. Problem for him was that if French were to ask for US intervention on terms proposed it would not be possible for him to pretend that five-power military staff talks were "without commitment", for the US and France would in fact be planning on basis of very specific commitments. Caccia said that as far as British were concerned it remained essential that proposed five-power military talks be without commitment and that Eden be able so to report to Parliament.<sup>3</sup>

When it was pointed out to him that some time might elapse before French Government reached decision whether to request US intervention, Caccia seemed to reflect that this aspect had not been considered by Eden and he said that the latter would no doubt wish to give further thought to this aspect.

Caccia said Eden was disturbed by press reports indicating Department had put specific question re adherence to Southeast Asia pact to certain Colombo states including India and Burma and had got flat turndown. Eden was also concerned whether this reflected decision on our part not to follow agreed division of labor whereby British would deal with Colombo states and US with Thailand, Philippines, etc., on this subject. We are assuring British that there is no such intention on our part and that talks between Murphy and Ambassadors of Colombo states were of much more general character than that attributed to them by press.

SMITH

---

<sup>2</sup>The Department of State in telegram Tedul 86, May 18, instructed Under Secretary Smith that "so long as Eden remains Geneva substantive negotiation with British regarding Southeast Asia collective security measures should be dealt with by you. Will of course be impossible avoid consultation from time to time with Makins here. On such talks we will keep you informed and in order to avoid any possibility crossed wires will look to you to report in detail developments on this subject at Geneva." (396.1 GE/5-1854) Under Secretary Smith replied in telegram Dulte 88, May 19, that "I shall of course report immediately any developments here on SEA collective security measures and will not take any steps without your instructions. I would hope that Makins could be kept currently informed by you of any developments here so that we may avoid any crossed wires." (396.1 GE/5-1954)

<sup>3</sup>The U.S. Delegation reported in telegram Dulte 78, May 17, that "Eden had made up his mind to go ahead with five-power military staff talks. He only wanted to await the result of questions in Parliament this afternoon on the basis of which he would then determine whether to take decision himself or whether it would be necessary to refer to Cabinet." (396.1 GE/5-1754)

396.1 GE/5-1754 : Telegram

The Secretary of State to the United States Delegation<sup>1</sup>

TOP SECRET

WASHINGTON, May 17, 1954—7:51 p. m.

Tosec 190. Limit distribution. Merchant today separately saw New Zealand, Australian and British Ambassadors at their request. Informed them he thought general agreement just about reached on holding five-power military staff talks which we desire held Washington without fanfare. Also indicated we intend continue parallel talks with broader group interested states, bilaterally if necessary, on question development regional security arrangements.

Also reviewed with each of them in general terms talks which have taken place with French.

Ambassadors in the main listened although Munro and Spender by referring to Webb's and Casey's statements gave impression they feel political talks should go forward as matter of urgency. Munro and Makins both also queried what French were doing on matter independence. Munro inquired if we had received any approach similar to French from Associated States. He also probed into question of what type of UN action US had in mind.

Makins indicated Eden keeping India, Pakistan and Ceylon informed closely re Geneva developments. He expressed the view that all three might come in with respect to a settlement provided settlement were guaranteed multilaterally by both sides. Makins added that in so far as he knew there had been no discussion or suggestion that Eden had in mind that these States would come into a collective security arrangement as members.<sup>2</sup>

DULLES

---

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by Raynor of EUR/BNA.

<sup>2</sup> Memoranda of conversation, May 17, are filed in 751G.00/5-1754.

790.5/5-1754 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

TOP SECRET

GENEVA, May 17, 1954—10 p. m.

Dulte 79. Repeated information Paris 286, London 176. Paris eyes only Ambassador. London eyes only Ambassador. Re Dulte 77, repeated Paris 283.<sup>1</sup> Caccia has just informed us that Eden has gotten off telegram to London recommending approval of immediate start of five-power military staff talks. He has asked for reply by tomorrow and believes it will be favorable. His only reservation will be that committee which is to start its work in Washington should have power to move to meeting place other than Washington if later developments would indicate such move desirable.

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated May 17, p. 835.

Re Dulte 76, (repeated Paris 282, London 173) Caccia reported subject had gone well in Parliament this afternoon.<sup>2</sup>

SMITH

<sup>2</sup> For summary of telegram Dulte 76, May 17, see footnote 2, p. 816.

MAY 18, 1954

Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 285

Memorandum by the Special Adviser to the United States Delegation (Heath) to the Head of the Delegation (Smith)

SECRET

[GENEVA,] May 18, 1954.

At this morning's meeting of Six it was agreed :

1. that Laotian and Cambodian delegates would carry the ball, with US, UK and France generally supporting their statements either directly after them or after Communist speeches in between.
2. that general line would be that while the Vietnamese problem was both military and political, the Cambodian and Laotian problems were purely military and simpler than the Vietnamese military problem.
3. that they would deny the existence of the phantom govts and maintain that if Vietminh forces left, problem would be solved.
4. Cambodia would be prepared to suggest international control over withdrawal of Vietminh forces and to prevent their reentry.
5. that nothing would be said about elections except as a retreat position, in which case both Laos and Cambodia would refer to their constitutional provisions concerning periodic elections.
6. when Communists raise question of withdrawal of French forces, Cambodians and Laotians will suggest they withdraw except as provided by respective treaties or to the extent the two countries request them to remain.
7. that if Communists attempted to pass to other questions without agreement being reached on separating Laotian-Cambodian questions, determined effort would be made to resist it. (West could call for Plenary session on this point. There would be no point in appointing sub-committees until agreement had been reached in principle.)

Eden would like to sum up discussion but Chauvel suggested he might do so better tomorrow when he is in chair.

Chauvel commented that at yesterday's meeting Molotov appeared to be seeking formula for separation Laotian-Cambodian cases, whereas Chou seemed cool and Dong opposed.

It was pointed out that Molotov might try to force discussion point by point on French and Vietminh proposals.

396.1 GE/5-1854 : Telegram

*Second Restricted Session on Indochina, Geneva, May 18, 3 p. m.:
The United States Delegation to the Department of State*<sup>1</sup>

SECRET

GENEVA, May 18, 1954—9 p. m.

Secto 251. Repeated information Paris 294, London 184, Saigon 90, Tokyo 71, Moscow 76. Department pass Defense. Tokyo pass CINCFE. Re Secto 240 repeated Paris 288 London 177 Saigon 86 Tokyo 68 Moscow 74.<sup>2</sup> Restricted Indochina meeting May 18.

Molotov in chair referred to yesterday's agreement to take up today question of separate consideration for Laotian and Cambodian problems.

Laotian delegate referred to widespread support of government since dissident movement had declared itself satisfied and made peace with government in 1949. Laotian problem was simple one of Viet Minh invasion of small areas near frontier and withdrawal of invading forces was sole requirement. Elections scheduled for 1955 would enable population freely to express political preferences.

Cambodian said their problem was simple one of foreign invasion aided by handful of rebels. Invaders were aliens by race, religion and ideology. French troops had already been withdrawn.

Viet Minh delegate held war and peace indivisible in Indochina and problem could only be settled as a whole. People of all three countries were fighting against foreign intervention. Leaders of Khmer and Pathet Lao controlled vast territories, enjoyed support of population and represented will of millions of people. There were same military and political problems throughout Indochina and only solution would be simultaneous cease-fire throughout Indochina followed by political settlement which would provide unification. He flatly rejected separation of their problems.

Bidault spoke briefly to Dong's remarks and recalled Ho had sought to dissolve Indochina federation and achieve independence for each of three countries. Dong's attempt to speak for all three conformed neither to reality nor previous Viet Minh position.

Solution for Laotian and Cambodian problems lay in obtaining controlled withdrawal of Viet Minh forces. Viet Minh refusal to separate problems would delay work of conference.

Dong replied that by "unification" he meant unification of each country and that he had no desire to reestablish Indochina federation.

---

<sup>1</sup> A set of minutes of this session (IC Restricted/2) is in Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 278. The minutes indicate that the meeting convened at 3 p. m. and adjourned at 6:15 p. m. The minutes are also printed in Conférence de Genève, pp. 106-112.

<sup>2</sup> Dated May 17, p. 831.

He spoke for governments of Khmer and Pathet Lao only because they had been excluded from conference.

Eden stated British Government considered Laotian and Cambodian problems basically different from that of Vietnam. British information was that both countries had only recently been invaded, that the areas occupied were small and adjacent to Vietnam border, that there were no pockets of resistance, that the peoples were fundamentally different, that in 1947 Laos and Cambodia had obtained democratic constitutions and had since held free elections. Dissident movements in both countries had dissolved themselves or surrendered. USSR, China and Viet Minh had not recognized phantom governments. UK would take serious view of any further aggression by any one against other country.

Smith cited practical reasons as well as those of logic and justice for separating problems and held failure to reach agreements on Laos and Cambodia would bode ill for success of conference. He cited recent dates they had been invaded, ethnic and religious differences, and popular support of Laotian and Cambodian Governments reflected through democratic processes. We could countenance no solution which would give recognition to small dissident groups which with outside assistance were threatening frontier areas.

Chou reiterated that war was between colonialism and forces seeking liberation and independence in all three countries. Foreign intervention began with French violation of its agreement with Ho Chi Minh. Problem Indochina must be settled as a whole by simultaneous cease-fire throughout Indochina.

Vietnamese delegate asked for agreement on separation of problems as test of sincerity in seeking restoration of peace.

Molotov stated conference was hearing only one side regarding conditions Cambodia and Laos. He recalled earlier proposal that representatives resistance governments be invited and said not too late to do so. He stated DRV representative in closest contact with conditions Pathet Lao and Khmer. Information made available by DRV demonstrates struggle for national independence carried on not only by people Vietnam but also in other two countries. CPR statement bears this out. France carries on colonial war throughout Indochina. Molotov rejected thesis external factors governing events in Cambodia and Laos. Such countries as CPR and India have refuted this thesis. Nehru speaks of independence struggle throughout Indochina. Other Asian countries do the same. Molotov also alluded to Secretary's May 7 statement which referred to Indochina as a whole and to alleged failure French to give real independence to Vietnam, Cambodia and Laos.

According to Molotov, Secretary made no distinction between three states or between struggles for national independence going on in each. Molotov stated greater part Vietnamese territory under control DRV. Similarly in other two countries resistance governments control parts of territory. Soviet delegate therefore rejects separate approach for Cambodia and Laos. Such approach would also be contrary to Berlin communiqué which speaks of restoring peace in Indochina as a whole.

Cambodian delegate then briefly refuted DRV statements with particular reference to Son Ngoc Minh. Cambodian delegate stated this man represents nothing in Cambodia where unknown. He accused Viet Minh of imperialism and repeated thesis re absence indigenous Cambodian independence movement fighting royal government.

USDel then suggested adjournment in view lateness hour although indicating would wish to speak further this subject. There was some discussion as to whether Korea or Indochina should be conference topic tomorrow. Molotov indicated speakers inscribed for Korea. However USDel with strong support UKDel took view undesirable to top Indochina this stage and agreement finally reached for next Indochina restricted meeting tomorrow 3 p. m.

One sentence communiqué was agreed to as follows: "At restricted meeting of the 9 delegations on May 18, the consideration of the problem of restoring peace in Indochina was continued".

US and USSR delegates reiterated agreement to effect delegation press officers should not go beyond terms of communiqué in informing press regarding proceedings the restricted session.

SMITH

---

790.5/5-1854 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

TOP SECRET

PRIORITY

GENEVA, May 18, 1954—5 p. m.

Dulte 84. Repeated information Paris 293, London 182. Paris and London eyes only Ambassadors. Re Dulte 83.<sup>1</sup> Eden handed me following copy draft terms of reference for Five-Power military staff talks which he is submitting to London. I believe they are generally acceptable and would appreciate Department's views as soon as possible.<sup>2</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Smith reported in telegram Dulte 83, May 18, not printed, that Eden stated he had received authorization from London to go ahead with the five-power military talks. (Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 245)

<sup>2</sup> Department's and Joint Chiefs of Staff's views are contained in telegram Tedul 93, May 20, p. 858.

Begin verbatim text.

1. Venue—start in Washington, with the right to move elsewhere later, e.g. Singapore, if found advantageous.

2. Terms of reference—the Five-Power Staff Agency representatives will undertake military planning studies in order to recommend possible courses of action to enable an effective line of resistance to further Communist aggression or infiltration in Southeast Asia to be established. They would examine all possible courses of action in the light of the current situation and of the known capabilities of the anti-Communist countries concerned in Southeast Asia and the Western Pacific.

3. Informing participating and non-participating powers.

(a) Participating powers.

Australia and New Zealand to be informed in Geneva by UK.
France to be informed by US-UK in Geneva.

(b) Non-participating powers.

US Government to inform Siam and Philippines.
HMG to inform Colombo powers and Canada.

Non-participating powers to be informed that the object of the exercise is “to examine without commitment the various contingencies with which we may be faced, including practical means of help for those nations of SEA who may call for it”. This was the wording used in the House of Commons, and we would prefer it to the wording proposed by Washington, which was “to explore means by which the Five Powers can assist the countries of Southeast Asia in a cooperative effort to defend themselves”.

Comment: I see no objection to British taking this line with Colombo powers, but believe we should feel free to inform Thailand and Philippines as we deem best. End comment.

4. Start of meetings—first meeting to be called by US military authorities in Washington through normal military channels.

5. Publicity—no public announcement at the beginning of the talks, and no information to be given to the press as the talks proceed. Questions to be answered on the lines already taken in the House of Commons (see above) if there is a leakage.

End verbatim text.<sup>3</sup>

SMITH

---

<sup>3</sup> The Secretary's Special Assistant, Roderic L. O'Connor, in a memorandum to MacArthur, May 19, indicated that the Secretary had read telegram Dulte 84 and had noticed that the concept of a cooperative effort had been left out of the proposed British text and felt strongly that this concept should be included in the statement. O'Connor said that the Secretary was also disturbed by the idea of an agreement with Eden on division of functions with the British talking exclusively to the Colombo powers. The Secretary wondered if “we had made any specific agreement with Eden which would exclude us from dealing directly with the Colombo powers if we so desired. I told him that I did not think there had been any very specific agreement at all but that I would check.” (Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 289)

751G.00/5-1854

Memorandum of Conversation<sup>1</sup>

TOP SECRET

[GENEVA,] May 18, 1954.

Participants: Ngo Dinh Luyen, Bao Dai's Personal Representative
The Under Secretary
Philip W. Bonsal

Subject: Alleged views of Bao Dai on Current Military and Political Situation in Vietnam

Mr. Ngo Dinh Luyen called at his request in his capacity as Bao Dai's personal representative in Geneva. He delivered a letter<sup>2</sup> from His Majesty to the Under Secretary and also showed his credentials.

Mr. Ngo Dinh Luyen set forth the following views alleged to be those of Bao Dai:

1) Some six years ago when Bao Dai returned to Viet-Nam with the French, he did so, not because the political solution then adopted seemed to him ideal, but because he wished to avoid a situation in which the fight in Viet-Nam would be purely one between colonialism on the one hand and Communism on the other. Bao Dai wished to make a place in the struggle for true Vietnamese Nationalism and to insure that Vietnamese national interests would win out in the end over those of both the Communists and the colonialists.

2) Bao Dai has been thwarted throughout by the French, and has been unable to follow truly national policies which would rally the people behind his government and army. According to Ngo Dinh Luyen, even the most recent treaties signed with the French are regarded by Bao Dai as merely further "pieces of paper" which can in practice be nullified by French actions and restrictions. As a result, the mass of the people in Viet-Nam consider that the Vietminh represent the "good cause".

3) On the military side, the French for a long time refused to create a Vietnamese National Army and when they did so, they did not provide this army with the necessary artillery, armored elements or aviation so that it could function as an autonomous force. The Vietnamese national army at the present time is merely a source of light

<sup>1</sup> Name of drafting officer not indicated; presumably it was Bonsal.

Summary of this conversation transmitted to the Department of State in telegram Secto 261, May 20. The telegram contained the following comment: "Heath and Bonsal believe Luyen may be overstating Bao Dai's views, but that latter may indeed be considering Ngo Dinh Diem if assured US support. Recommend Paris contact Diem discreetly, now residing . . . [in Paris], in effort develop his views and degree to which Bao Dai-Diem reconciliation has progressed.

"As regards Luyen's claim that many members of Bao Dai's Government were imposed on him by the French, Heath doubts that Bao Dai said it and remarks that if he did say it, it is not true. If, however, Bao Dai considering getting rid of this government, this claim might be an excuse for such action to present to Vietnamese public opinion." (396.1 GE/5-2054) infantry reinforcements which are fed into the battle as required by the French Command and are more often than not destroyed before they achieve any real combatworthiness. As a result Vietnamese military morale is low in contrast to the very high morale of the Vietminh armed forces.

<sup>2</sup> For text, see telegram Secto 265, May 20, p. 863.

4) Bao Dai recognizes that the presence of the French army is essential in Viet-Nam under present circumstances. Nevertheless, he believes that the presence of that army prevents the development of the national spirit which alone can truly vitalize the Vietnamese National Army. He believes that further French reinforcements, necessary as they may be to meet an immediate military emergency, will further destroy the military morale of the Vietnamese people and therefore further diminish the efficiency of the Vietnamese National Army.

After having set forth the above alleged factors in the situation at some length, Ngo Dinh Luyen stated that His Majesty was thinking seriously of adopting a new political program which would in effect rally behind him the true nationalist elements in Viet-Nam. Bao Dai is fully conscious of the need of insuring continued French support. He also realizes that the attitude of the US and of the UK toward the French must be a most prudent one and that we would not wish to bring any real pressure to bear on the French. Bao Dai wonders therefore whether he could count on our support for any radical political initiative which he might himself take and which would rally his people behind him although it might to some extent alienate the French. (It seems quite evident that to the extent that Ngo Dinh Luyen reflects Bao Dai's views, the latter is trying to find out whether the US is disposed to replace France in Indochina to an extent which would virtually free Bao Dai from the need for taking into account French views about the military and political requirements of the situation in Viet-Nam.)

General Smith commented briefly that in his opinion the French at the highest levels were sincere with regard to the independence of Viet-Nam. The General recognized that possibly some lower level officials, particularly in Indochina, might still harbor illusions based on a possible return to a vanished past. But he said he thought that the Vietnamese might well have confidence in Laniel and Bidault, adding that we should do everything possible to strengthen the hand of these courageous French political leaders. He advised that Bao Dai reserve his judgment as to the significance of the new treaties.

With regard to the Vietnamese army, General Smith agreed with much that Ngo Dinh Luyen had said. He recognized that the French had first delayed the fundamental decision to have a national army and had then failed to carry out that decision as energetically and rapidly as was desirable. He said that US influence had been constantly exerted in favor of the creation of a truly autonomous Vietnamese national army. He described our experience in Korea. He said that, of course, seventeen months are ideally required before combatworthy troops can be created and that more time is needed to create the necessary cadres at all levels. General Smith told Ngo Dinh Luyen that he believed the French attitude regarding participation in the training of Vietnamese troops by the US was being currently modified.

General Smith concluded by saying that he had listened with attention to Mr. Ngo Dinh Luyen's exposition and that if later he had any specific suggestions of comments to make for transmittal to His Majesty, he would arrange to do so.

Ngo Dinh Luyen indicated to Mr. Bonsal that Bao Dai is contemplating the early dismissal of Buu Loc as Prime Minister. He gave the strong impression that, if Bao Dai were in fact free to choose, he would now call Ngo Dinh Diem to power. He intimated, however, that the French would oppose his brother's nomination because of Ngo Dinh Diem's well known independent policy and that Bao Dai believed this opposition would, under present circumstances be decisive.

Ngo Dinh Luyen took occasion to say that many members of the Bao Dai Cabinet have been imposed upon His Majesty by the French and are not persons in which His Majesty can have confidence. Thus, for example, Bao Dai does not feel able to communicate with General Smith through members of his government but is obliged to seek a personal, unofficial representative such as Ngo Dinh Luyen.

Ngo Dinh Luyen later set forth for Mr. Bonsal's benefit another idea with which His Majesty is toying. It is the neutralization of Vietnam with guarantees by the powers participating at the Geneva Conference. This would apparently involve a complete break with the French Union.

Mr. Ngo Dinh Luyen made the somewhat startling statement that one of the ways in which the French control Bao Dai's movements is by limiting his transfers of piastres into foreign exchange. Ngo Dinh Luyen said that Bao Dai could hardly afford to stay at hotels and was obliged to spend much time at his own villa at Cannes, where he has now gone. On the other hand, he stated that Buu Loc had recently been authorized to transfer ten million francs for travel expenses.

Mr. Bonsal endeavored to stress to Ngo Dinh Luyen that, in the present emergency, the proper course of action was not one of recrimination and consequent destruction of existing assets but rather one of united action in order to surmount the immediate crisis successfully. Unless that were done there would be nothing left to save. Mr. Bonsal stressed the hope that the elements which had remained apart from the situation would rally to the support of the government. (Ngo Dinh Luyen has been away from his country for five years and his brother, Ngo Dinh Diem for about three.)

(The analysis of the above in which Ambassador Heath and Mr. Bonsal concur is that Ngo, while he is probably what he represents himself to be, has perhaps overstated Bao Dai's views on the situation. On the other hand, Bao Dai is probably seeking to reconcile to himself every possible element of strength. He is undoubtedly carrying on a political flirtation with Ngo Dinh Diem who does have a certain amount of support particularly in Vietnamese Catholic circles. He might well play the Ngo Dinh Diem card if he could be sure we would support him; otherwise not. Ngo Dinh Diem is a visionary, doctrinaire individual with a high reputation for integrity and patriotism. He might well refuse to take office except on terms which would alienate much French support and facilitate the task of those Frenchmen seeking an apparently honorable exit from the Indochina scene. On the other hand he would strengthen the Vietnamese government in local eyes if he were to take office. It is recommended that direct contact with Ngo Dinh Diem be established—he is now in Paris.)

---

751G.00/5-1854

Memorandum of Conversation, by the Director of the Office of British Commonwealth and Northern European Affairs (Raynor)

TOP SECRET

[WASHINGTON,] May 18, 1954.

Subject: Indochina; Southeast Asia

Participants: Sir Roger Makins, Ambassador, British Embassy
Mr. Merchant, Assistant Secretary, EUR
Mr. Raynor, Director, BNA

Ambassador Makins called this afternoon at his request. Sir Roger said he wished to raise a few questions with respect to our discussions with the French for the purpose of clarification. His first question pertained to the level of continued French military effort and said he understood from Mr. Merchant that our condition was that the French should maintain the present level of their effort. From French sources the British had obtained the idea that we had indicated that the French must increase their effort proportionately to the effort made by others. Mr. Merchant replied that we had made no effort to arrive at any mathematical formula on this question but that the principle which we had put to the French was to the effect that any outside assistance from the United States or others must be additive to the general situation and not substitutive for the present French effort. The only basis Mr. Merchant could possibly have for the French misunderstanding our position on this matter was the fact that we did continue to feel that the size of the native forces should be augmented.

Sir Roger's second point was to the effect that the French in Geneva had given British officials the impression that the current talks had devolved from U.S. rather than from French initiative as Mr. Merchant earlier told Sir Roger. Mr. Merchant reaffirmed that the present talks commenced as a result of French initiative in Paris last Tuesday or Wednesday. He said, of course, the French had known for some time we were willing to discuss this matter with them.

Sir Roger then inquired as to our present views with respect to possible UN action on a peace observation commission. Mr. Merchant indicated that we had not arrived at any final position but our present inclination was leaning in favor of this action being initiated by the Thais inasmuch as they were members of the UN and seriously considered taking this type of action late last summer.

Sir Roger then inquired if, on the question of conditions, it was correct to assume that the ball was now in the hands of the French in the sense that we were awaiting replies from them. Mr. Merchant said this was correct although he would not describe the matter as one of conditions. He said rather what we had put forward to the French was essential elements.

Sir Roger then said that he had been informed that Mr. Eden would be advising General Smith today that the British are agreeable to the holding of five-power military staff talks immediately in Washington with fairly broad terms of reference but without commitments. Mr. Merchant raised the question as to whether the French had been consulted on this matter and Sir Roger said he did not know. He did say that he thought Mr. Eden would advise the Colombo powers with regard to the holding of the five-power talks as soon as agreement is formally reached. He inquired what reactions we had as a result of our talks with the Colombo powers. Mr. Merchant replied he understood Mr. Murphy had only general talks with them.

Mr. Merchant then referred to Churchill's statement in Commons. Sir Roger said that the statement in his opinion had been very very carefully worded in an effort to keep the door open for possible group discussion of South Asian collective security arrangements at a time when the situation at Geneva became clearer. In Sir Roger's view the language clearly indicated that Churchill had not meant to imply that these talks must await the actual conclusion of the Geneva talks. Sir Roger added, however, that he thought it would be unwise to press Churchill on this at least for the next few days.

MAY 19, 1954

751G.00/5-1954

*Memorandum by the Adviser to the United States Delegation
(Bonsal) to the Head of the Delegation (Smith)*

TOP SECRET

[GENEVA,] May 19, 1954.

Subject: Further call of Bao Dai's personal representative, Mr. Ngo Dinh Luyen.

Mr. Ngo Dinh Luyen called on me this morning to say he had reported to Bao Dai on his interview with you yesterday.

According to Ngo Dinh Luyen, Bao Dai is most anxious to change the Vietnamese Government. He would bring in Ngo Dinh Diem as Prime Minister and replace most if not all present ministers. A new policy of independence based upon the creation of a real Vietnamese national army would be the program of the new government with which Bao Dai hopes to revitalize the Vietnamese struggle against Communism.

Bao Dai would like to know, however, to what extent he can count on US support. He would like to know whether, if the present Franco-Vietnamese military effort is insufficient to hold the Delta, the US would plan to intervene directly. He is also concerned lest the French Government, under the pressure of French political and public opinion, should decide to abandon the struggle. In that case, would the US intervene directly?

I replied that I saw no signs of a weakening of French determination to continue the fight. On the contrary, recent indications show a firming up of French determination. I said that I would convey Bao Dai's questions to you.

Bao Dai is also worried as to what the attitude of the Vietnamese Government should be in the event that the Geneva Conference shows signs of moving toward a situation which would in effect involve the abandonment of Viet-Nam to the Communists. Should the Vietnamese Delegation pull out? What is our advice?

Bao Dai is also interested in having US military assistance (MDAP) delivered directly to the Vietnamese national army or at least specifically earmarked for that army instead of being delivered as at present through the French. Bao Dai does not want to make a revolutionary change in present arrangements but would like to see our assistance specifically identified with Viet-Nam rather than with France. He would like your views on this point too.

In the event a new government under Ngo Dinh Diem takes over, its first act would be the creation of a new Vietnamese army. In this army, Bao Dai would hope to consolidate the present elements of the Vietnamese army plus Vietnamese soldiers now serving with the French Expeditionary Corps plus all types of irregular and religious troops. He anticipates French opposition because according to him over half the French Union forces in Viet-Nam are Vietnamese and therefore those forces would be much weakened by Bao Dai's plan. Also, Bao Dai believes the French fear that a strong Vietnamese national army might make possible direct negotiations and agreement between Viet-Nam and the Vietminh. His Majesty, however, desires to create a fighting offensive-minded army. (I commented that such a plan while it might eventually help create a strong Vietnamese national army would in the mean time probably weaken the military potential of our side. In reply Ngo Dinh Luyen stated that it would be His Majesty's idea to proceed somewhat gradually.)

Recommendation

I recommend that for the present you authorize me to tell Ngo Dinh Luyen that I have communicated the above to you,<sup>1</sup> that you are not prepared at once to reply to the questions raised by Bao Dai but that you have them under serious consideration.<sup>2</sup> I might add that it is your view that under present critical circumstances all positive elements on our side must be united and that consequently all important decisions should so far as possible represent agreement between all concerned.

<sup>1</sup> In a note of May 25 attached to the source text, Hennes informed Bonsal that "Regarding your attached memorandum, General Smith has approved your telling Ngo Dinh Luyen that you have communicated his report to General Smith. There is no reply, but General Smith may want to talk to Ngo Dinh Luyen at a later date."

<sup>2</sup> In a handwritten marginal notation, Walter S. Robertson wrote "I suggest elimination of this instruction" in reference to the following part of the sentence: "that you are not prepared at once to reply to the questions raised by Bao Dai but that you have them under serious consideration".

396.1 GE/5-1954 : Telegram

Smith-Eden-Bidault Meeting, Geneva, May 19, Morning : The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET

GENEVA, May 19, 1954—2 p. m.

Secto 253. Repeated information Paris 296, London 185, Saigon 91. Discussed tactics for next few days with Bidault and Eden this morning. Since it appears undesirable to risk Korean plenary before Saturday<sup>1</sup> at earliest and since today's restricted Indochina meeting should exhaust discussion on separation Laos and Cambodia, I proposed plenary on Indochina tomorrow in order that six could make public their position on separation. Eden would have preferred plenary on Korea tomorrow to hear Molotov and Pearson, who would like to speak before returning to Ottawa Friday,<sup>2</sup> but I explained we at long last may be near agreement on proposal by sixteen and that I could not accept responsibility should premature Korean plenary spoil this. Bidault referred to Molotov's apparent desire to stay off Indochina for 24 hours and felt that French opinion would require him to see whether this produced any more favorable Soviet attitude, although he personally was not optimistic. Case for separation of Laotian and Cambodian questions was sound logically but had little popular appeal. From his point of view tomorrow would be too soon to make public position of six. French opinion would feel inadequate effort had been made in restricted sessions before resorting to invective and would believe conference already failing. For this impression to be given so soon might well bring down French Government.

<sup>1</sup> May 22.

He proposed that today's meeting be held as scheduled, that there be no meeting tomorrow on either subject, that on Friday there be another restricted meeting on Indochina and that if Friday's meeting produced no progress, he would be ready for plenary on Indochina at any time. This was agreed and Eden subsequently obtained Molotov's concurrence.

It was expected that today's meeting would largely repeat yesterday's discussion, with Bidault expecting to say that while France insisted on separate consideration of Laos and Cambodia, it did not insist such discussion precede discussion on Vietnam. It would be necessary to see outcome of today's meeting before planning tactics for Friday.

I proposed that at some early date the six should make public an agreed statement on separation of Laos and Cambodia. Eden was unenthusiastic. Bidault felt statement should not be made until we had made further efforts in restricted session and that statement should not be limited solely to Laos and Cambodia. He thought early next week would be soon enough.

Incidentally he and Eden are scheduled to be in Paris on Saturday for celebration of entente cordiale but do not know yet whether they will go.

I raised question of Thai appeal,<sup>3</sup> mentioning desirability of having observation commission proceed first to Thailand and then Laos and Cambodia. Eden agreed it would be useful to have such commission there at least for fact-finding but wondered about juridical basis and timing. Bidault was bothered by length of time necessary to go through Security Council procedure to Assembly decision and possibility of Assembly speeches touching Morocco, et cetera. He hoped quicker and simpler procedure could be found and Chauvel was confident it could be done. He has asked UN Section Quai d'Orsay to suggest procedure and expects to have it during day. Eden again said he would need London's decision on political question of this magnitude. He agrees appointment of commission would be useful but fears its effect on course of conference here and public repercussions in Britain.

---

<sup>2</sup> May 21.

<sup>3</sup> For status of the Thai appeal, see telegram Tosec 203, May 19, infra.

SMITH

396.1 GE/5-1854 : Telegram

The Department of State to the United States Delegation<sup>1</sup>

SECRET

WASHINGTON, May 19, 1954—12:36 p. m.

Tosec 203. Now that French, Cambodian, and Lao agreement obtained to principle of Thai appeal, (Secto 248 repeated Paris 290 Bangkok 6 London 180 Saigon 89<sup>2</sup>) we hope prompt reply will be forthcoming from Thai and British so that early action can be initiated in New York. Trust French agreement envisages prompt action. Geneva confirm.

Request Donovan discuss matter with Prime Minister.

In your further conversations following comments on points set forth Secto 227 (repeated Bangkok 4 Paris 277 London 170 Saigon 82 USUN by pouch)<sup>3</sup> may be helpful:

1. Re Wan's concern as to lack of current reason for request to UN, we doubt there could be serious question that sufficient reason presently exists. Vietminh invasion troops still on Lao and Cambodian territories. Threat to these states and Thailand increasing as result military developments. There can be no question condition international tension now exists which is sole prerequisite for POC observation under Uniting for Peace Resolution. Moreover if Vietminh should press Laos invasion it would be important have POC on spot in advance. Principal function POC to report on situations international tension prior to actual invasion.

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by Stein of UNA/UNP. Sent to Bangkok as telegram 2277; repeated to USUN as telegram 565, to Paris as telegram 4140, to London as telegram 6175, and to Saigon as telegram 2343.

<sup>2</sup> The U.S. Delegation reported in telegram Secto 248, May 18, as follows: "Chauvel states French Government last night agreed to principle of Thai appeal [telegram Secto 227, May 16, p. 822]. Cambodia had previously expressed agreement and Laotians indicated they would agree provided French did." (396.1 GE/5-1854)

<sup>3</sup> Dated May 16, p. 822.

2. Re Wan's and Eden's comment on Cambodian appeal to UN this appeal addressed to Secretary General did not request UN action.<sup>4</sup> However it did reserve Cambodia's right request action under Charter Article 35. If Wan and others definitely prefer, Thailand, Cambodia and possibly also Laos could file joint request or simultaneous requests for Security Council action.

3. Re desirability separate problems Laos and Cambodia from Vietnam. When POC subcommission established request for observation could be made by Thailand, Laos and Cambodia only, deferring Vietnam request pending development Geneva negotiations. Thus at least initially situation in Vietnam would not be before UN for action. This would assist rather than hamper efforts separate Lao-Cambodian problem from Vietnam at Geneva as French desire.

If question of relationship POC to possible armistice machinery raised, you might point out:

(a) POC would operate at least in part for benefit Thailand which obviously not within area of armistice.

(b) Presence of POC in Laos and Cambodia would supplement armistice supervisory machinery since POC would report to UN on developments affecting tension in area including Communist attempts at subversion of armistice. Such reports could serve as basis for UN action. POC particularly useful if supervision of armistice should be entrusted to mixed commission or other non-UN body.

(c) Pending negotiations for and implementation of armistice, presence of POC might have some effect in discouraging Communist infiltration and subversion.

DULLES

---

<sup>4</sup>The U.S. Delegation reported in telegram Dulte 89, May 20, that "Eden is backtracking on UN and says decision must be by Cabinet and may take some time. Am sure we should go ahead full speed without them and that they will come along." (110.11 DU/5-2054)

---

110.11 DU/5-1954 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET

GENEVA, May 19, 1954—1 p. m.

Dulte 85. Re Dulte 83.<sup>1</sup> Following is summary of some recent British messages from capitals Colombo powers which Eden has made available to me and which he is also sending to Makins.

Begin verbatim text:

1. Ceylon: Ceylon Government are prepared to consider associating themselves with support for an Indochina settlement reached by all parties concerned in the dispute, subject to scrutiny of terms of the settlement.

---

<sup>1</sup>Telegram Dulte 83, May 18, not printed, reported that Eden had received authorization from London to go ahead with the five-power military talks. (Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 245)

2. Pakistan: Pakistan Government are also ready to examine possibility of Pakistan's helping to guarantee any settlement of Indochina problem reached at Geneva, and supported by all powers participating in Geneva conference.

3. India:

(a) Responsible Indian officials have informally indicated that India might not only participate in a neutral supervisory commission in Indochina, but also send troops to help implement an agreed settlement.

(b) Indians are paying considerable attention to Burmese attitude towards Indochina problem and, primarily for this reason, are beginning to worry about dangers of Communist control in Indochina. Responsible Indian officials favor retention of French Forces in Indochina until local troops can be trained to take their place.

(c) A leading article in Hindustan Times welcomed Mr. Eden's five questions on Indochina at Geneva and declared that Colombo countries would do their utmost to see that this initiative succeeded.

4. Burma:

(a) Burmese attitude towards Indochina and general menace of international communism is rapidly becoming realistic, but Her Majesty's Ambassador considers any overemphasis on collective security for Southeast Asia as a purely military or strategic plan will tend to scare Burmese and hinder this desirable development.

(b) Acting Foreign Minister has informed us that Burmese Government will participate in a neutral supervisory commission in Indochina if invited, though Burma could not provide more than token forces.

End verbatim text.

SMITH

---

751G.00/5-1954: Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

TOP SECRET      PRIORITY

GENEVA, May 19, 1954—2 p. m.

Dulte 86. Repeated information Paris 295. Eyes only Ambassador Paris. Chauvel states privately Bidault somewhat concerned by fact he cannot be in on impending French-US talks in Paris and thinking of suggesting they be held here between him and me. Reminded Chauvel that military aspect of talks and other reasons made it desirable to have them in Paris and will talk with Bidault at early opportunity to see how seriously he takes this. Ely-Trapnell talks I should not take place here. My own feeling is that talks should be held in Paris, with Bidault kept fully and currently informed through me, allowing him time to express his views before decisions are reached.<sup>2</sup>

SMITH

---

<sup>1</sup> For documentation on the talks held between Generals Ely and Trapnell, see volume XIII.

<sup>2</sup> The Department of State in telegram Tedul 97, May 20, replied as follows: "Concur your views Dulte 86 re location talks and your informing Bidault." (Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 242)

---

396.1 GE/5-1954 : Telegram

Third Restricted Session on Indochina, Geneva, May 19, 3 p. m.: The United States Delegation to the Department of State<sup>1</sup>

SECRET

GENEVA, May 19, 1954—9 p. m.

Secto 259. Rptd info Paris 299, London 188, Saigon 93, Tokyo 75, Moscow 78. Dept pass Defense; Tokyo pass CINCFE. Re Secto 251 repeated Paris 294 London 184 Saigon 90 Tokyo 71 Moscow 76.<sup>2</sup> Restricted Indochina meeting May 19.

Eden in chair, US del first speaker. Referred to incorrect use by Molotov of Secretary's May 7 statement<sup>3</sup> pointing out that while Secretary drew distinction between sovereignty and independence of three Indochina states we do distinguish between these three sovereign states and so-called resistance governments Pathet Lao and Khmer and we also note difference in extent and source of aggression affecting three states themselves. US del described briefly fictitious character so-called resistance governments in both Khmer and Pathet Lao stating that in case of latter large numbers regular and irregular Viet Minh troops followed by Viet Minh political cadres have invaded country. US del pointed out that Viet Minh radio itself broadcast instructions for conduct Viet Minh "volunteers" in Laos during first invasion year ago. US del concluded with urgent appeal early consideration of proposal advanced by Laos, Cambodia and France, i.e., withdrawal Viet Minh troops from Laos and Cambodia.

Bidault then spoke briefly with regard Molotov's remarks yesterday denying Molotov's interpretation of Berlin communiqué.<sup>4</sup> He stated

---

<sup>1</sup> A set of minutes of this session (IC Restricted/3) is in Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 278. The minutes indicate that the meeting convened at 3 p. m. and adjourned at 6:30 p. m. The minutes are also printed in Conférence de Genève, pp. 113-121.

<sup>2</sup> Dated May 18, p. 839.

<sup>3</sup> Reference to Secretary Dulles' address of May 7, p. 720.

<sup>4</sup> Made during the Second Restricted Session; see telegram Secto 251, May 18, p. 839.

war in Vietnam has recently overflowed into Laos and Cambodia as result invasion of those countries by foreign forces. Said latter two countries should be dealt with separately because simpler and can be handled more rapidly. Bidault stressed French not proposing priority for Laos and Cambodia over Vietnam but rather separate parallel and simultaneous procedures with Laos and Cambodia situation entrusted to subcommittee of conference. Viet Minh representative then made lengthy florid propaganda statement more suitable to plenary than to work session. He traced alleged national liberation movements in both countries from earliest days of French conquest last century. He then described condition surrounding "second French conquest" after 1954. He stated that in Cambodia resistance government controls large area not only along Vietnam border but in other parts of country and that same situation prevails Pathet Lao.

DRV del attempted to demonstrate undemocratic and fraudulent nature Cambodian and Laotian constitutions and elections. He referred to Franco-Laotian treaty of independence quoting obligation of Kingdom of Laos to join its resources with those of members of French Union for defense purposes, emphasizing coordinating function of French Government as proof hollow nature independence granted by France.

DRV del claimed that reality national liberation movements of three countries IC is why French authorities with expeditionary corps and so-called national armies amounting to over 1/2 million men had been unable conquer these movements. He attacked so-called national governments as former servants of French colonialism now in fact serving same interests and US interventionists after having collaborated with Japanese Fascism.

DRV del concluded problems of Vietnam, Pathet Lao and Khmer cannot be disassociated. DRV then proposed discussion proceed on basis point 8, and particularly point 8A, Viet Minh proposals<sup>5</sup> and points 1 and 5 French proposals.<sup>6</sup> (Point 8 Viet Minh proposals refers complete and simultaneous cease-fire throughout Indochina and points 1 and 5 French proposals are included in French section dealing only with Vietnam.)

Following the recess first Cambodian and Laotian dels in turn refuted convincingly and in detail the assertion of Dong. Both insisted on independent and national character of their governments and on the synthetic nature of so-called liberation governments. Both stressed point that all that was required to re-establish peace in Cambodia and Laos was the withdrawal of the foreign Viet Minh invader.

---

<sup>5</sup> Contained in telegram Secto 162, May 10, p. 753.

<sup>6</sup> Contained in telegram Secto 143, May 8, p. 730.

Chou En-lai then spoke in support of Viet Minh. He agreed that there were three separate nations and three states but in all three a colonial war was raging caused by same source. It must be stopped throughout the three countries as asked for by Berlin communiqué. He could not agree with French del that decision to treat two separately would aid progress of conference. He tried to prove existence and importance of national liberation movements in each of three countries and concluded with assertion that if peace were to be restored in Indochina, it would have to be by simultaneous cease-fire throughout whole area.

Eden suggested no meeting tomorrow to see if private contacts could contribute to overcoming difficulty blocking progress.

Molotov said he was not asking decision but wished to express desire of Soviet del at next meeting to conduct point by point discussion of military aspects French and Viet Minh drafts.

Eden closed meeting with statement that all agreed there was no agreement what would be done at next meeting, Friday May 21.

Comment: Meeting made no progress whatever. Communists showed no signs of any willingness compromise. Viet Minh and Chinese Communist statements were propaganda harangues rather than type of discussion expected in restricted session. Communists appear confident and in no hurry get down to business. Difficult assess significance Dong's suggestion (supported by Molotov) to consider jointly military portion Viet Minh proposal (which is applicable whole area) and that portion French proposal dealing only with Vietnam and appeal this may have for French. End comment.

SMITH

---

Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 242

The Secretary of State to the United States Delegation<sup>1</sup>

SECRET

PRIORITY

WASHINGTON, May 19, 1954—4 p. m.

Tedul 88. For Under Secretary from Secretary. A news ticker report from London indicates British sources have informed the press there re agreement on five-power talks. In view of firm UK agreement set forth in Dulte 84<sup>2</sup> that there would be no publicity whatsoever and no announcement to the press I find this development most disheartening. Unless you perceive objection, please mention this to Eden and tell him ticker report on information given out in London arrived at precise time that President was going over his proposal which specifically stated nothing would be said to press.

---

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by O'Connor of S.

<sup>2</sup> Dated May 18, p. 841.

DULLES

MAY 20, 1954

396.1 GE/5-2054 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

TOP SECRET

GENEVA, May 20, 1954—9 a. m.

Secto 260. Repeated information Saigon 94, Paris 300. Heath comments on Saigon's 2419, May 17,<sup>1</sup> to Department that the thought of deposing Bao Dai and establishing a regency council is not a new one and has been advanced by some Vietnamese and has received some consideration by the French. Heath observes that a regency might conceivably be a future solution but is very strongly of the opinion that it should not be talked about with the French or anybody else at this time. Principal Vietnamese support for such proposals in the past has come from certain southern Vietnamese who propose regent be the Empress who is a southerner. It's unlikely that the Empress or the Crown Prince would connive at deposing Bao Dai. A government headed by Tri and Premier Quat as proposed in reference telegram would be very unpalatable to the southern Vietnamese and Tri would be very unhappy heading a government in which Tam, whom he dislikes and distrusts, held the extremely important portfolio of the interior. The French would certainly not agree to such a proposal at the present time and without their consent, in view of the French armed forces in Saigon, the coup could hardly be pulled off. Bao Dai states that Ngo Dinh Diem has agreed to rally to him and this is confirmed by Diem's brother, whom Bao Dai has appointed as secret personal observer for the conference and a channel of secret communication, if need should arise, between himself and the American delegation.

In short, Heath feels we must, at least for the time being, bear with the Bao Dai solution.

SMITH

---

<sup>1</sup> For text, see volume XIII.

790.5/5-1854 : Telegram

The Secretary of State to the United States Delegation<sup>1</sup>

TOP SECRET

NIACT

WASHINGTON, May 20, 1954—10:32 a. m.

Tedul 93. Under Secretary from Secretary rptd info and eyes only Ambs. JCS have submitted following comments on draft terms of reference for five-power military talks:

"1. The recommendations of the JCS on State Dulte 84 May 18, 1954<sup>2</sup> on above subject are as follows:

"a. Re para 1, meetings should be held and completed in Washington. JCS do not concur in British recommendation 'to move elsewhere later'.

"b. Re para 2, terms of reference should read as follows: 'Military representatives of participating powers (i.e., no reference to be made to a five-power staff agency) will meet in Washington and will undertake military planning studies, objective of which will be to examine, without commitment, security matters of mutual interest and to explore means by which military assistance could be rendered to countries of SEA which might request it.'

"c. Re subpara 3(A), US and UK should inform France, Australia, and New Zealand, simultaneously and jointly, in Geneva.

"d. Re subpara 3(B) US Govt should inform Japan, Republic of Korea, Nationalist Govt Republic of China, Thailand, and Philippines. UK may inform Colombo powers and Canada.

"e. Re unnumbered subpara following subpara 3(B), nonparticipating powers should be informed that purpose of exercise is 'to undertake military planning studies, objective of which will be to examine, without commitment, security matters of mutual interest and to explore means by which military assistance could be rendered to countries of SEA which might request it.'

"f. Re para 4, as to start of meetings, upon notification from Geneva of acceptance by France, Australia, and New Zealand, US military authorities would initiate call for first meeting.

"g. Re para 5, there should be no public announcement at beginning of talks and no information should be given to press as talks proceed. With reference to possibility of a leakage, in that eventuality appropriate quotations from terms of reference should be used in answering questions.

"2. Copy of this memorandum has been provided directly to Department of State in view of urgency this matter. For JCS: s/Arthur Radford, Chairman, JCS."

I discussed above with Admiral Radford this morning and send following comments (on numbered paras in JCS memo) for your guidance in further talks with Eden:

1.a. I explained to Radford that in our opinion any decision to move elsewhere would have to be concurred in unanimously by all participants and is not subject to majority vote. This is our interpretation which you might confirm with Eden.

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by the Secretary of State. Repeated to Paris as telegram 4169 and to London as telegram 6209.

<sup>2</sup> Ante, p. 841.

1.b. JCS attaches particular importance to this para dealing with terms of reference and we hope very much you can get Eden to accept.

1.c. Assume you can work out arrangements to inform France, Australia, and New Zealand simultaneously or jointly in Geneva of terms of reference when they have been agreed by US and UK.

1.d. We of course reserve right to inform other countries in general terms re exercise and would expect in fact to inform countries mentioned in JCS memo and possibly others.

1.e. Is designed to bring information to others in line with terms of reference proposed in 1b above.

1.f. Self-explanatory.

1.g. Has been somewhat overtaken by events as result of yesterday's leak in London.<sup>3</sup>

There is one point which has not been covered in Eden's memo which is, informing Associated States. We are going on assumption this is oversight since notification of these States we regard as essential. Suggest you seek Eden's agreement to their being informed. Assume this would be done by French and possibly yourself also as representative of host govt.

DULLES

---

<sup>3</sup> See telegram Tedul 88, May 19, p. 856.

---

396.1 GE/5-2054

Memorandum of Conversation, by the Adviser to the United States Delegation (Bonsal)

TOP SECRET

GENEVA, May 20, 1954.

Participants: Ngo Dinh Luyen, Bao Dai's Personal Representative
Philip W. Bonsal

Subject: Bao Dai's concern over the outcome of the Geneva Conference and his desire for direct US assistance for Viet-Nam

Mr. Ngo Dinh Luyen called at his request. After telling me that Bao Dai has almost decided to change his government, Mr. Ngo Dinh Luyen said that Bao Dai is somewhat worried about recent declarations by the President and the Secretary. Specifically, he would like to know whether the US is disposed to give assistance to Viet-Nam and in what form.

Bao Dai wonders whether help for the Vietnamese army could be immediate in view of the present situation. Although Bao Dai hopes that the Vietnamese army will be able to hold back the enemy, he would like to know whether we have decided to give direct assistance if such assistance should be necessary. Bao Dai considers that the French military effort is becoming daily more insufficient.

According to Ngo Dinh Luyen, Bao Dai is very worried about the consequences of a take-over in the Delta by the Vietminh. The Delta is the great reservoir of recruits for the Vietnamese National Army and its loss would be a tremendous blow. Bao Dai would envisage direct US intervention if the French were to abandon the Delta.

I said that I saw no signs of a policy of abandonment of the Delta on the part of the French. In fact I had been much encouraged by the reaction to the admittedly serious military situation on the part of Bidault and of the French Government in general. Ngo Dinh Luyen replied that Bao Dai fears that French public opinion may force the French Government to adopt a policy of appeasement.

According to Ngo Dinh Luyen, Bao Dai thinks that the Geneva Conference will probably result in a Communist victory. He is considering the attitude which the Vietnamese Government should adopt in that eventuality. He is weighing in his mind the apparent divisions of opinion between Western powers. He is trying to determine the attitude which the Vietnamese Government should adopt in the event that the Conference in Geneva takes a position contrary to the basic position of the Vietnamese Government.

Ngo Dinh Luyen mentioned a telegram which Bao Dai had received from Governor Tri in which the situation in North Viet-Nam is described as "tragique".

In describing the new policy which Bao Dai would like to adopt, Ngo Dinh Luyen stated that His Majesty is anxious to take an entirely new political stand and at the same time create a real Vietnamese National Army. He has, however, not finally decided to proceed actively at this time and would only do so with US support. Ngo Dinh Luyen asked whether that support would be forthcoming. In reply Bonsal made the customary statement regarding our unwillingness to interfere in internal Vietnamese affairs.

Ngo Dinh Luyen then said that Bao Dai's thinking was along the lines of bringing Ngo Dinh Diem in as Prime Minister and making a complete change in the cabinet. Ngo Dinh Luyen took occasion to say that the French have always dominated His Majesty and that French influence has had the result that many of the men whom His Majesty has called in to serve the governments have, as a consequence of that service, seen their influence and prestige in Viet-Nam seriously diminished. Ngo Dinh Luyen stated that Bao Dai would welcome political suggestions from us.

Ngo Dinh Luyen stated that he had conveyed to Bao Dai the remarks made by General Smith to Ngo Dinh Luyen concerning the time which it takes to form truly combat worthy troops (17 months) as well as the longer period required to train really effective officers at field and general levels.<sup>1</sup> His Majesty's comment is that there are Vietnamese soldiers in the French Expeditionary Corps, in the national army and in various irregular paramilitary, and suppletif forces. It is His Majesty's intention to group all these forces in a new Vietnamese army. Bao Dai is aware that the French will oppose this move for two reasons. First, because they want to keep all French Union forces under their own control and over half of those forces are Vietnamese. (This is probably an exaggeration; the accurate proportion is perhaps 40%.) The second reason is that, according to His Majesty, the French fear a possible agreement between Viet-Nam and the Vietminh, an agreement which would be possible if the preponderance of forces on the Franco-Vietnamese side were to become that of the Vietnamese National Army controlled by the Vietnamese Government.

Bao Dai's general idea is to create a nucleus of combat-worthy troops which would largely be those taken from the present French Expeditionary Corps. His concept is that the army would be a highly mobile, aggressive, offensive-minded force. Ngo Dinh Luyen concluded this exposition of Bao Dai's alleged views by an appeal that we should understand His Majesty's position.

Bonsal asked whether the rather drastic measures proposed, while they might eventually result in the creation of a Vietnamese National Army along the lines envisaged by His Majesty, would not at least at first disorganize and weaken the major fighting units upon which the continuation of successful resistance to the Vietminh depends. In reply Ngo Dinh Luyen stated that of course His Majesty would envisage proceeding gradually and avoiding any such situation as that contemplated in Bonsal's question.

Bao Dai is anxious to obtain direct US assistance for the Vietnamese army. Ngo Dinh Luyen here was referring to MDAP assistance. Bao Dai's thought is that such assistance should come direct to the Vietnamese army instead of through the French authorities as at present or that, if this should prove impractical, there should at least be a specific earmarking of certain items of US assistance as being destined for the Vietnamese National Army. If such an arrangement could be made it should be supplemented by some sort of control machinery to see that earmarked items actually did get to the Vietnamese army.

---

<sup>1</sup> See memorandum of Smith-Ngo Dinh Luyen conversation, May 18, p. 843.

Luyen stressed that Bao Dai did not wish to introduce any revolutionary changes which might adversely affect the present combat situation even though theoretically such changes might be desirable.

In conclusion Bonsal told Ngo Dinh Luyen that he would convey the above to General Smith and would advise Ngo Dinh Luyen in the event the General wished to make any specific replies or comments at this time.

---

Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 257 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET

GENEVA, May 20, 1954—2 p. m.

Secto 263. Dept pass USUN. Substance Tosec 203<sup>1</sup> and Usun 745<sup>2</sup> to Dept discussed with Chauvel this morning:

1. He agrees quick action desirable and believes whatever Washington decides re timing should be controlling.

2. He concurs with Lodge Thailand case should go first to Security Council. He believes it should then go to Interim Committee rather than Assembly in interests of speed and avoiding possible complications in Assembly.

3. He believes appeal should be made at this time exclusively by Thailand. He concurs in Lodge's thinking and adds that for Asiatic state not participating in Indochina Conference to appeal to UN on grounds of tension in nearby areas would reinforce allied position at Conference and suggest externally successful settlement on Indochina unlikely at Geneva. For Laos and Cambodia to be associated with it at this time would carry connotation they and France had prematurely given up hope for successful conclusion at Geneva. He stated incidentally latest military information was that Vietminh were moving slowly towards Delta and not towards Laos.

He will consult Bidault on foregoing but is confident of his agreement.

SMITH

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated May 19, p. 851.

<sup>2</sup> Telegram 745, May 19, from New York, not printed, contained USUN's comments on the question of Thailand's initiating a request for United Nations POC action for Indochina. (751G.00/5-1954)

396.1 GE/5-2054 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

TOP SECRET

GENEVA, May 20, 1954—5 p. m.

Secto 265. Repeated information Paris 306, Saigon 97. Secto 261, repeated Paris 302, Saigon 95.<sup>1</sup> Following is translation letter to Under Secretary from Bao Dai presented by Ngo Dinh Luyen :

"Up to the present I have had neither the occasion nor the opportunity to break through the thick curtain of silence with which I have been constantly surrounded.

"The concurrence (connivance) of the cease-fire plans presented by France and the Viet Minh, both directed against the interests of Vietnam and the peace of the world, removes any scruple I might have had about making direct contact with peace-loving nations which are friendly to Vietnam.

"Mr. Ngo Dinh Luyen, in whom I place my entire confidence, is empowered by this letter to give and to receive in my name all information, all explanations, all proposals with regard to a concerted action looking toward, with a non-Communist Vietnam, consolidation of world peace, by diplomatic or any other means.

"I wish ardently that nations devoted to peace and liberty hear through my feeble voice this last call of the Vietnamese people for the solidarity of free peoples."

SMITH

---

<sup>1</sup> Telegram Secto 261, May 20, contained report of conversation between Under Secretary Smith and Ngo Dinh Luyen on May 18. For memorandum of conversation, see p. 843.

396.1 GE/5-2054 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET

GENEVA, May 20, 1954—6 p. m.

Secto 267. Repeated information Paris 307, London 191, Saigon 98. Eden advised Bidault and me of his talks this morning with Chou along following lines :

Eden had argued case for separation of Laos and Cambodia. Chou had agreed that military and political aspects must be dealt with separately with priority for cease-fire. Cease-fire should take effect in all three States on same date. Political settlements might be different for three. Eden's advisers who had accompanied him felt that Chou wanted an early agreement for cease-fire. Chou had repeatedly stated that if no progress could be made on one line, another should be tried.

Bidault observed that situation with respect to cessation of hostilities was different in three countries. It could be brought about immediately in Cambodia and Laos where it was simply a problem of external forces, while some regrouping of forces would be essential in Vietnam. Any extension of this regrouping concept to Laos and Cambodia (as distinct from withdrawal) would complicate their situation by establishing pockets. He did not wish to free conference, but if we abandoned principle of separation, even temporarily, we would not know when or on what level we would be able to take it up again. Laos and Cambodia had said this morning they would not go along if we abandoned separation.

I said I believed Communists desire to produce troop concentrations which they could point to as areas controlled by resistance movements. It would be difficult to determine whether such concentrations were natives or invaders and much would depend on composition and effectiveness of supervisory commission, which was matter of supreme importance. We must maintain our position regarding separate consideration Laos and Cambodia, but might explore Communist ideas regarding mechanism of an armistice.

Eden had said West denied so-called resistance movements in Laos and Cambodia had any existence whatever. Chou had said they might be minorities, but they existed and could not be swept out of countries.

French believed Viet Minh proposal (Secto 259, repeated information Paris 299, London 188, Saigon 93<sup>1</sup>) to discuss their point 8(a) and French points one and five, indicated possibility Communists might still agree to separation. I said we would fully reserve our position on separation, but having done so, would agree look at these specific points.

Eden subsequently told me that he had warned Chou again that Indochina situation was dangerous and might lead to unpredictable and serious results. Chou had said he was counting on Britain to prevent this happening. Eden had warned him not to do so, since even though Britain desired moderation, in event of showdown, she would stand with United States.

SMITH

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated May 19, p. 854.

---

396.1 GE/5-2054 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

TOP SECRET

GENEVA, May 20, 1954—6 p. m.

Dulte 92. Eyes only for Secretary. Your Tedul 79.<sup>1</sup> It is difficult to estimate duration Geneva. Communists have not given an inch and

---

<sup>1</sup> In telegram Tedul 79, May 18, the Secretary asked Under Secretary Smith if he had "any estimate as to duration Geneva or at least duration of your tour of duty there?" (396.1 GE/5-1854)

I do not believe they will make any concessions. They have a big fish on the hook and intend to play it out. They must feel sure that one way or another they will get at maximum a major part or possibly all of Indochina, and at minimum a partition which would produce a Communist state comprising considerable part Vietnam with a slice of Laos and possibly even part of Cambodia. Believe they have decided to risk chance of our intervention, estimating that even if this occurs the result will be another, and for us a more expensive, Korea. They probably count on restraining influence of our allies to prevent us from extending war or striking directly at Communist China or even at the direct source of all the trouble. They must anticipate that the present French Government cannot long survive, and certainly cannot survive a complete impasse here, so it is to their interest to prolong this conference without making concessions. Churchill's statement that no commitments will be made till after Geneva should convince them that time is on their side. On Korea there is nothing whatever to be expected from them. Dean's latest message indicates that it will be impossible to produce proposals agreed to by all 16. Best we can hope to do is avoid open opposition by our side when Pyun produces his 14 points. Others of the 16 will possibly then present proposals of their own or speak in support of Eden's points. We will continue, and try to induce others to continue, to hammer as hard as possible on repudiation by all Communist delegations of authority and moral force of United Nations. World public opinion seems becoming conditioned to negative results. Unless something unexpected happens the Korea phase will drag along with an occasional plenary session while Indochina discussions go on.

How long the Indochina phase will continue depends on length of time French are able to sustain the pressure and British believe, either honestly or for political effect, that they can continue to play the role of mediator. Best hope seems to me to be injection of the United Nations factor. I suppose I must stay here as long as Molotov, Eden and Bidault remain, and apparently they have no immediate intention of leaving. Molotov obviously attaches real importance to this meeting. We will certainly go on for another two weeks at very minimum, and probably longer. Our only strength lies in what you are doing in Washington. Were it not for that, I would suggest that you give serious consideration to coming here when we approach the break-off. If Molotov and Eden leave, I will ask you to replace me. If the conference really gets into an Indochina settlement we could have another Panmunjom.

Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 242 : Telegram

The Secretary of State to the United States Delegation<sup>1</sup>

SECRET

WASHINGTON, May 20, 1954—6:26 p. m.

Tedul 95. Defense informs us that Gen Valluy called on Admiral Radford this morning saying French were much upset over news report from London published yesterday about forthcoming five power military talks.<sup>2</sup> General Valluy said French were completely uninformed about such talks.<sup>3</sup> Radford replied that we had had a preliminary exchange of views with UK but no final decisions had been reached and that obviously as soon as matter was a little more concrete it would of course be discussed with French.

General Valluy also commented that French would be unable to reach any final decision about possible five power military talks until after Ely's return to Paris from Indochina sometime next week.<sup>4</sup>

DULLES

---

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by MacArthur. Repeated to Paris as telegram 4187 and to London as telegram 6223.

<sup>2</sup> See telegram Tedul 88, May 19, p. 856.

<sup>3</sup> The U.S. Delegation in telegram Dulte 94, May 21, informed the Department of State with reference to Tedul 95 that the delegation "assume[d] Defense has advised General Valluy French were advised here on May 15 of impending talks. Bidault may not have advised Paris or Paris not advised Valluy." (Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 245)

<sup>4</sup> The Department of State in telegram Tedul 104, May 21, informed the U.S. Delegation that "Valluy informed Radford this morning that French agree to five-power military talks and indicated that Valluy will probably be French representative." (Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 242)

---

396.1 GE/5-2054 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET

GENEVA, May 20, 1954—7 p. m.

Secto 268. Repeated information Bangkok 8, Paris 309, Saigon 99, USUN/NY 1. Robertson, Phleger and Bonsal today discussed with Prince Wan question Thailand initiating United Nations POC action. Robertson gave Prince Wan gist of second paragraph Tosec 203<sup>1</sup> and read him Lodge's comments contained New York's 745 to Department, repeated information to Geneva as 2.<sup>2</sup> Robertson also made clear to Prince Wan that French Government now in full agreement this proposal.

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated May 19, p. 851.

<sup>2</sup> Not printed, but see footnote 2, p. 862.

Prince Wan expressed agreement with procedure outlined reference telegram from Lodge. He is instructing Khoman to begin drawing up necessary communications and statements and to get in touch with Phleger and Henkin regarding them. He agrees that Security Council phase should involve Thailand along with support from Cambodia and Laos being introduced only at time of General Assembly consideration. If Department or USUN have further specific suggestions on drafting or procedure, please telegraph them here.

With regard to timing, Wan still has reservations. He would evidently prefer to await some specific military move upon which Thailand action would be based. We will continue to urge gravity of present situation upon him, desirability of having POC in place before grave emergency arises and evident intent of Viet Minh to dominate Cambodia and Laos at this time with obvious threat to Thailand.

Prince Wan particularly impressed by argument that United Nations has been excluded from Indochina situation and that Thailand initiative would be partial remedy.

SMITH

---

396.1 GE/5-2054 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

TOP SECRET

GENEVA, May 20, 1954—7 p. m.

Dulte 93. Repeated information Paris 208. Eyes only Ambassador. Reference Dulte 86, repeated information Paris 295.<sup>1</sup> While not happy about situation, Bidault agrees that for time being talks should continue in Paris on understanding he will be kept closely informed here. He was worried at receiving no news from Paris of talks in last few days, but felt better when I told him we had heard of none and were sure there had been none. He was concerned about intrigue there, while expressing complete confidence in integrity of Laniel and Maurice Schumann, he appears to feel that his political antennae are more sensitive than theirs. He mentioned one mechanical problem in that Margerie was only one in Quai d'Orsay at working level whom he trusted to backstop these conversations satisfactorily, but felt he could not spare him from Geneva. He believes that it should be fairly clear by end of next week whether there is any chance of doing any serious negotiating here and if prospect is then negative, he hopes to turn over to Schumann and return to Paris.

SMITH

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated May 19, p. 853.

790.5/5-2054 : Telegram

The Secretary of State to the United States Delegation<sup>1</sup>

TOP SECRET

WASHINGTON, May 20, 1954—7:20 p. m.

Tedul 98. Limit distribution. We consider it necessary that we and British work as closely as possible and have as full an understanding as possible of each other's viewpoints and objectives with regard to Southeast Asian problems. This particularly important in view recent trend drifting apart from each other and resulting adverse effect Western unity. We hope that British now understand what we are doing in the talks with French at Paris. We are not so sure we have a full understanding of what Eden has in mind with regard to the Colombo powers. We do fully concur that he should, in the first instance, work with these powers and with Canada and have concurred specifically with his point on this in the terms of reference for the five power military staff talks. We do however believe that this point should not preclude us from talking with the representatives of these states here in Washington or at their capitals it being understood that we would take pains not to work at cross purposes with the British and would keep Eden fully informed.

We note (Dulte 66<sup>2</sup>) that British concur in our concept of parallel lines of development, one with regard to military staff talks and other with regard collective grouping in Southeast Asia. We would like fullest information obtainable regarding Eden's views on the latter. You should express our great concern that if we were to await final outcome of Geneva before doing anything further with respect to Southeast Asia we would be playing into hands Communists who can stall at Geneva while pressing military situation in Indochina to point where Associated States may be beyond saving and it would be too late enlist active cooperation other states in area or draw anything like an effective or satisfactory line to be held at all costs. Consequently we believe that prior outcome Geneva we must, in addition to having military talks, get UN POC into area soonest, clarify possibilities of military participation of US and others within Indochina itself and continue preparations for collective efforts even though precise stand to be taken by collective group cannot yet be determined in light uncertainties (1) military-political developments within Viet Nam (2) French position (3) prospects for armistice at Geneva. We also hope that our talks with French in Paris may help to bolster

---

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by Fisher of EUR/WE. Repeated to Paris as telegram 4188 and to London as telegram 6227.

<sup>2</sup> Dated May 13, p. 791.

French at Geneva and to give Communists cause for concern that might help achievement more acceptable armistice.

We plan talk to Makins here soonest along foregoing lines.

DULLES

110.11 DU/5-2054 : Telegram

The Secretary of State to the United States Delegation<sup>1</sup>

CONFIDENTIAL PRIORITY WASHINGTON, May 20, 1954—7:50 p. m.

Tedul 99. Personal for Under Secretary from Secretary. Have just read full text of Churchill's statement May 17, relevant portion of which is quoted in today's New York Times.<sup>2</sup> It is noteworthy that Churchill's statement involves a substantial repudiation Dulles-Eden joint statement of April 13 which had previously personally been approved by Churchill.<sup>3</sup> Last paragraph of Churchill's present statement is a paraphrase of our April 13 statement with following essential changes:

1. April 13 statement was one of present readiness to examine. Churchill's statement expresses readiness to examine "when the outcome of the Geneva Conference is clear."

2. April 13 statement speaks of readiness to examine "with the other countries principally concerned". This important statement is omitted.

3. April 13 statement spoke of "establishing a collective defense". Churchill's statement says "establishing a system of collective security and defense". The word "system" was proposed by Eden at the dinner with Churchill and after discussion it was omitted from our agreement because the urgency of the situation was such that the need was for "defense" and not for a "system" which would be a matter of long negotiation and ratification.

Officially-inspired statements from London represent this statement of Churchill's as an amplification and confirmation of April 13 agreement and say that US Government has not asked the British Cabinet to go beyond what Churchill pledged last Monday.<sup>4</sup>

I wonder whether the British want us or expect us to remain silent and uncommunicative to the press here while they misrepresent our position and attempt to conceal their repudiation of our April 13 agreement. I do not want to make your task more difficult but I do feel a certain righteous—I hope—indignation. What would you think of

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by the Secretary of State.

<sup>2</sup> For text of Churchill's statement made in Parliament, May 17, see editorial note, p. 834.

<sup>3</sup> See extract of telegram 4523, from London, Apr. 13, p. 514.

<sup>4</sup> For British decisions on collective security in Southeast Asia and on holding five-power military talks, see telegrams Dulte 72, 77, 79, and 84, pp. 815, 835, 837, and 841, respectively.

asking Aldrich to inquire of the Foreign Office as to what interpretation US should put on Prime Minister's statement having regard to Dulles-Eden agreement of April 13?

DULLES

396.1 GE/5-1454 : Telegram

The Secretary of State to the United States Delegation<sup>1</sup>

SECRET      PRIORITY      WASHINGTON, May 20, 1954—7:50 p. m.

Tosec 225. As requested Secto 206 repeated Saigon 70, Paris 263, Hanoi 2,<sup>2</sup> there follows text NIE 63-3-54: Probable Military and Political Developments in Indochina over the Next Thirty Days, which was approved by Intelligence Advisory Committee today.

Begin text:

The Problem

To estimate the probable military and political developments in Indochina over the next 30 days.

Assumptions

1. That no cease-fire agreement is reached at the Geneva Conference during the period of this estimate.

2. French policy with respect to Indochina will not undergo a radical change for the worse during the next thirty days.

The Estimate

I. Military Developments

1. The fall of Dien Bien Phu has not precipitated a collapse of the French and Vietnamese military position in Indochina, but it has had a significant impact upon the attitudes toward the war of all participants. From the Viet Minh viewpoint, the fall of Dien Bien Phu has created a climate of victory which offers possibilities for further advances. We believe that the Viet Minh will raise their present level of operations, seeking to reduce further the French and Vietnamese will to continue the war, to improve the Communist basis for bargaining at Geneva, to prevent major redeployments of French Union forces, to prepare for major campaigns and to exploit any opportunities for early victory. From the French Union viewpoint, the defeat at Dien Bien Phu has underscored the fact that the war cannot be won by French efforts alone. Accordingly, the main French effort appears at present to be directed toward maintaining and in any case preventing a collapse of the French Union military position before a cease-fire is negotiated at Geneva or the conflict is internationalized.

A. Military Developments Within the Next Two Weeks

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by Trueheart of R. Repeated to Saigon as telegram 2365, to Paris as telegram 4190, and to Hanoi as telegram 650.

<sup>2</sup> Dated May 14, p. 795.

2. Without redeployment of major units, the Viet Minh will have during the next two weeks the capability to increase the present level of their military operations throughout Indochina. In the Delta, the Viet Minh over the next two weeks will probably continue to mount attacks against French strong points and to cut temporarily the lines of communications between Hanoi and Haiphong. In addition, they will probably continue to augment their capabilities for sabotage and terrorist activities in Hanoi and Haiphong. However, while the scale of these activities will increase, they will probably not exercise these capabilities for sabotage and terrorism to the full during the next two weeks except in the event of large-scale military operations in the Delta. Outside the Delta, the Viet Minh will probably launch attacks in Central Vietnam, conduct raiding operations in Laos, and increase guerrilla operations in Cambodia.

3. We consider that, despite the defeat at Dien Bien Phu, the French Union forces still retain the will to defend key points. In the Delta, the French almost certainly will possess for at least the next two weeks the capability to hold major positions. They have redeployed one mobile group from Laos to the Delta, and they apparently intend to regroup forces already within the Delta even though this may require the abandonment of some outlying Delta strong points. Outside the Delta region, the French will probably have the capability to hold most positions during the next two weeks although they may abandon certain positions in order to concentrate their troops in critical areas elsewhere.

B. Military Developments Within the Next 30 Days

4. If major units now at Dien Bien Phu are redeployed as rapidly as possible, the Viet Minh can within the next 30 days attain a capability for launching a heavy assault against French positions in the Delta. Preparations are now being made for moving the bulk of the Viet Minh units from Dien Bien Phu toward their bases in the Delta area, and there are indications that redeployment has begun. We believe that approximately one division will remain initially in the vicinity of Dien Bien Phu. The major portion of the forces at Dien Bien Phu with their heavy equipment could not assemble in the Delta area before 7-15 June, although it is believed that their lightly equipped units could complete the movement by 31 May. However, the gradual increase in intensity of rains during the month of June, combined with French aerial attacks on Route 41, may slow down the movement.

5. In addition to the force at Dien Bien Phu, the concentration of 17 battalions at Thai Nguyen, a point approximately 35 miles north of Hanoi, may be used to augment the Viet Minh capability for major attacks against the Delta. This group, 13 of which are regional battalions, appears to be undergoing advanced training. It is unlikely that these troops will be independently committed in major attacks on Delta strong points during the next 30 days. However, they might be used to attack French static defense units or to fill out a major attacking force made up of units now at Dien Bien Phu.

6. If military considerations alone dictate, we estimate that the Viet Minh will not launch an all-out assault against the Delta during the next 30 days. The major factors militating against such an assault are: the requirements for reorganization and recuperation of Dien Bien Phu main striking force, the limited period of time to prepare for major assaults against fortified positions, the possibilities of delay in movement of artillery units into position, the onset of the rainy season with resultant supply difficulties, and the flooding of areas within the Delta which restrict routes for troop movements and areas of maneuver. The most important deterrent, however, is the French strength in manpower, firepower, and airpower. However, the Viet Minh might undertake an assault on the Delta because of political requirements in relation to Geneva, or on the basis of their estimate that French Union forces had become demoralized and that Viet Minh capabilities for assault combined with sabotage, terrorism, and insurrection might prove decisive in the Delta. Barring a serious deterioration of the will to fight of the French Union forces as a result of political developments in Indochina or elsewhere, we believe that the French would be able to counter or blunt such an assault within the next 30 days.

7. On the other hand, we anticipate that, short of mounting an all-out assault on the Delta, the Viet Minh during the next 30 days will increase their present level of operations and will attack French strong points in the Delta and elsewhere. Although we consider it likely that the French will suffer some reverses from attacks on this scale, we believe that they will be able to retain possession of most of their key strong points throughout Indochina, and will be able to keep open the lines of communications between Hanoi and Haiphong except for frequent but temporary interruptions.

8. It is possible that defections by Vietnamese units will occur during the next 30 days and will thus reduce the capabilities of French Union forces. Some Vietnamese from militia units are believed to have defected recently to the Viet Minh with their arms. On the other hand, since the fall of Dien Bien Phu, French and Vietnamese units have been engaged with no indication of impaired morale or will to fight. We estimate that, unless the Vietnamese become convinced that the French intend to sell out in Indochina or unless the Viet Minh achieve substantial military successes, the fighting capabilities of the French Union forces during the next 30 days will not deteriorate so severely as to preclude their employment as an effective military force. There is always the possibility however that some spectacular Viet Minh success in the Delta would convince the native population and Vietnamese troops there that victory in the Delta was imminent, in which case an extremely rapid deterioration of the situation in North Vietnam would ensue.

II. Political Developments

10. Barring the unlikely event of a large-scale Viet Minh invasion, or of a coup d'état, Laos and Cambodia will probably retain their present uncertain political stability during the next 30 days. The Laotian Government will almost certainly remain in power if the French continue to provide it with support. The Cambodian Government will probably retain control and will continue its efforts to solicit direct US aid.

11. Political stability in Vietnam will probably continue to deteriorate during this period. In the absence of both Bao Dai and Buu

Loc, factionalism has become extreme, and the Vietnamese central government is virtually paralyzed. It is possible that the Vietnam central government will disintegrate during the next 30 days. It is also possible that a coup may be attempted by General Hinh, who has obvious dictatorial ambitions. If the Vietnam central government should disintegrate, the French could almost certainly maintain civil control temporarily in the regions they occupy by working through Vietnamese regional governors and local officials. A large part of the Vietnamese troops in the French Union forces probably would continue at least temporarily to be responsive to the French High Command. Thus disintegration of the Vietnam central government, while it would complicate negotiations at Geneva, would almost certainly not cause an immediate collapse of French control in Indochina unless it were accompanied or preceded by a collapse of the French military position.

End text.

DULLES

---

396.1 GE/5-2054

Bidault-Eden-Smith Meeting, Geneva, May 20, Evening: The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET

PRIORITY

GENEVA, May 20, 1954—midnight.

Secto 271. Repeated information Paris 311, London 193, Saigon 101. Bidault, Eden and I this evening discussed tactics for tomorrow.

French outlined their thinking on discussion of Viet Minh Point 8 (a) and their Points 1 and 5.<sup>1</sup> Viet Minh proposal provided for cease-fire based on agreements concluded between French and each of three countries, with cease-fire simultaneous throughout Indochina and regrouping in all three countries. This obviously impossible for French since Associated States were its allies and armistice could only be between France and Associated States on one hand and Viet Minh on other. Nevertheless this provision might be utilized to set up two or three committees to study conditions for cessation of hostilities in three countries. This would have advantages of maintaining position on separation, permitting us to go ahead on Laos and Cambodia, exploring possibilities of general cessation of hostilities and, if Communists refused, putting them in unfavorable light. It would have disadvantage when coupled with Points 1 and 5 of French plan<sup>2</sup> of facilitating Viet Minh thesis re regrouping in Laos and Cambodia, of being distasteful to Associated States and, in event of cessation of hostilities, would make it more difficult to clean up South in event of armistice violations. It was unlikely Communists would agree to cease-fire in Laos and Cambodia on basis of troop withdrawal but West might propose progressive withdrawal.

---

<sup>1</sup> For Viet Minh proposal, see telegram Secto 162, May 10, p. 753.

<sup>2</sup> For French proposal, see telegram Secto 143, May 8, p. 730.

Bidault was not optimistic about Associated States reaction to this gambit nor did he believe Communists would buy it. However, he felt he must push detailed analysis of Viet Minh proposal clear to bottom before drawing positive conclusions. He had no intention of accepting single military and political treatment for three countries.

I pointed out that Viet Minh proposal contained elements (8 b) such as prohibition on movement of troops or arms into Indochina which would destroy our position. We would comply while they would not. Any such agreement would be fatal unless there were really effective supervisory machinery. Bidault recognized impossibility of controlling Chinese frontier and Mekong.

It was agreed we would propose setting up three committees, one for each country, or two with Laos and Cambodia lumped in one. This would be discussed by 6 tomorrow and decision then made between two or three. I stressed importance of making very clear to Associated States that we were in no way receding from our stand on separation. If Associated States were in full agreement, France would propose setting up committees, otherwise either US or UK would do so. If Communists refused this, we would be prepared on Monday to begin discussion of military provisions of French and Viet Minh proposals with respect to Vietnam, reserving our position on others.

SMITH

---

396.1 GE/5-2154 : Telegram

Smith-Eden Meeting, Geneva, May 20, Evening: The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET

GENEVA, May 21, 1954—3 p. m.

Secto 275. Repeated information Paris 313, London 195, Saigon 103, Moscow 79. Limit distribution. Eden told me at dinner last night Molotov made "personal" observation could get ahead with work on Indochina by examining certain proposals (within framework of French and Viet Minh proposals<sup>1</sup>) for cessation of hostilities, which would in any event inevitably apply to all three Associated States. Molotov specifically mentioned the question of supervisory machinery and the segregation of opposing forces. Molotov suggested after this has been done, conference could examine application to each country of the general proposals. Over and above foregoing, political issues with respect to each country could be dealt with separately. Molotov said he did not know what Chinese would say to such proposition and was putting it forward only as his own personal idea.

---

<sup>1</sup> See footnotes 1 and 2, supra.

Eden stated he made no commitment. He reported conversation to Bidault after returning from dinner last night. Neither Eden nor I yet have any information on Bidault's reactions.

Eden said that Molotov was in very relaxed mood. At opening of their conversation had referred to various press rumors on US-UK differences, stating he did not believe them. Eden said he replied that Molotov was right. Molotov then went on to state we should not imagine the Soviet Union does not have its differences with its allies and stated it would be wrong to believe that Soviet Union controls China.

Eden stated he had impression Molotov really wanted to "get moving" on Indochina. Said much easier to deal with him than Chou En-lai who was personally stiff and unresponsive, usually giving a cold exposition of China's position in response to Eden's attempts at fruitful discussion. Eden stated throughout evening Molotov refrained from any criticism US and again adverted to Secretary's departure from Geneva with some puzzlement. Eden said he referred to Secretary's statements at Berlin that he would be unable to spend any length of time in Geneva. Eden agreed with my observation that Molotov was probably worried over what the Secretary is doing back in Washington, and that this was a good thing.

SMITH

MAY 21, 1954

396.1 GE/5-2154 : Telegram

The Secretary of State to the United States Delegation<sup>1</sup>

CONFIDENTIAL NIACT WASHINGTON, May 21, 1954—2:44 p. m.

Tosec 228. Urtel Secto 273.<sup>2</sup> Below is Thai draft letter to SC President containing Department modifications as given to Sarasin last June. No memo of transmission required for SC proceeding.

Verbatim text:

"I have the honor, under instructions from my Government and in conformity with Articles 34 and 35, paragraph 1, of the United Nations Charter, to bring to the attention of the Security Council a situation which, in the view of my Government, represents not only a threat to the security of Thailand but is likely to endanger the maintenance of international peace and security of the region.

Large-scale fighting has taken place in the immediate vicinity of Thai territory; there has been a clear possibility of direct incursions

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by Stein of UNA/UNP. Repeated to USUN as telegram 574.

<sup>2</sup> Not printed. (396.1 GE/5-2154)

of foreign troops into its territory. This possibility continues to exist [despite the temporary recession of the direct threat of military incursions.]<sup>3</sup>

I have the honor to bring this situation of international tension to the attention of the Security Council to the end that the Security Council may provide for observation in the area under the Peace Observation Commission.

The Royal Thai Government makes this appeal to the Security Council not only as a firm supporter of the United Nations but as a power firmly determined to play its part in the maintenance of international peace and security in Southeast Asia.

Finally, I have the honor to request that you call a meeting of the Security Council to consider this matter and, as representative of Thailand, I may be invited, in conformity with Rule 37 of the Rules of Procedure of the Security Council, to participate in the Council discussion of the question.

Accept, Sir, the assurances of my highest consideration."

Suggest bracketed portion of last sentence second paragraph be omitted.

Next following telegram contains text of draft resolution.

We are pouching you Thai text of Thai statement in SC and Department redraft thereof prepared last June. Believe this will need considerable reworking to bring it up to date. We are reviewing this text and will send you our comments.

Also pouching set of drafts outlining problems expected arise in SC and GA proceeding. These are working papers only and contain no firm positions.

DULLES

---

<sup>3</sup> Brackets in the source text.

---

Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 250 : Telegram

The Secretary of State to the United States Delegation<sup>1</sup>

CONFIDENTIAL      NIACT      WASHINGTON, May 21, 1954—3 p. m.

Tosec 229. Urtel Secto 273.<sup>2</sup> Following is text draft resolution agreed between Thailand and Department last June :

Verbatim text :

"The Security Council, recalling General Assembly Resolution 337 (V) (uniting for peace), part A, section B establishing a peace observation commission which could observe and report on the situation in any area where there exists international tension, the continuance of which is likely to endanger the maintenance of international peace and security, finds that there exists in the general area of [and adjacent to]<sup>3</sup> Thailand [and Laos]<sup>3</sup> a condition of international tension the continuance of which is likely to endanger international peace and security, requests the Peace Observation Commission to establish a subcommission composed of hiatus members, with its seat at the United Nations Headquarters, with authority:

---

<sup>1</sup> Repeated to USUN as telegram 575.

<sup>2</sup> Not printed. (396.1 GE/5-2154)

(a) To despatch such observers as it may deem necessary to any part of the above area on the request of any state or states concerned, but only to the territory of states consenting thereto;

(b) To visit if it deems necessary, any area in which observation requested under sub-paragraph (a) is being conducted;

(c) To consider such data as may be submitted to it by its members or observers and to make such reports as it deems necessary to the Peace Observation Commission and the Security Council for the information of member states."

Suggests as minimum desirable changes:

(1) Omission bracketed words second paragraph. Words "and adjacent to" would foreclose possibility using POC in Vietnam if words "and Laos" are also omitted.

(2) Re paragraph three, Department has in mind subcommission of five (India, New Zealand, Pakistan, Sweden and Uruguay) and believes it would be preferable name these states in resolution since if composition left to POC, there would be additional delay and greater risk appointment less desirable members.

DULLES

---

<sup>3</sup> Brackets in the source text.

---

396.1 GE/5-2154 : Telegram

*Fourth Restricted Session on Indochina, Geneva, May 21, 3 p. m. :
The United States Delegation to the Department of State*<sup>1</sup>

SECRET

GENEVA, May 21, 1954—11 p. m.

Secto 279. Repeated information Paris 316, Tokyo 80, London 199, Moscow 80, Saigon 104. Tokyo for CINCFE. Department pass Defense. Re Secto 259, repeated Paris 299, London 188, Saigon 93, Tokyo 75, Moscow 78.<sup>2</sup> Restricted Indochina meeting May 21, 3-7:15 p. m.

---

<sup>1</sup> A set of minutes of this session (IC Restricted/4) is in Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 278. The minutes indicate that the meeting convened at 3 p. m. and adjourned at 7:15 p. m. The minutes are also printed in Conférence de Genève, pp. 122-130.

<sup>2</sup> Dated May 19, p. 854.

Molotov in chair referred to "wish" expressed May 19 by Soviet delegation that discussion of paragraph 1 of French proposal and paragraph 8-a/of DRV proposal be initiated.<sup>3</sup>

Bidault recalled that French proposal dealt only with Vietnam while DRV proposal covered all three countries. He accepted principle of examination of all current proposals including Vietnamese, Cambodian and others. He noted that DRV and USSR have apparently accepted the principle that priority be given to military questions, but that they object to separate treatment of Cambodia and Laos on one hand and Vietnam on other. While French delegate agrees object of present exercise is peace in all three states, French delegate never had in mind priority for one over other and agrees must be guarantees and controls international character to cover cease-fire in all three states. Nevertheless fact that conditions in Laos and Cambodia are different from those in Vietnam must be taken into account.

DRV delegate stated that differences in three states were of degree but not of kind and rejected idea of disassociating Cambodia and Laos from Vietnam.

Cambodian delegate reiterated view that Cambodia was special case to be considered separately and on priority basis. Suggested however possibility discussion of Vietnam and then of Cambodia and Laos in alternate sessions. Laotian delegate spoke to same effect.

Chou En-lai spoke in favor of Molotov's proposal on basis objective was working out of cease-fire throughout Indochina.

US delegate, making clear that he was not commenting on substance of proposals pointed out French proposals deal only with Vietnam which is principal problem. If way can be found of solving it we will have less trouble with others. He suggested application to Vietnam of French and Viet Minh paragraphs be discussed. US delegate maintained the view that Laos and Cambodia present a different and simpler problem from Vietnam.

Eden agreed with US and Cambodian proposal suggesting discuss application Vietnam one day and then next day application to Cambodia and Laos. He reserved position regarding details of proposals (as had US delegate).

Molotov then recalled that though some delegations had wished to start discussion political problems, compromise had been reached on suggestion of French delegate that military problems be discussed first. French and Viet Minh proposals accepted as basis for discussion. He said paragraph 5 of French proposal to be discussed in addition to one so as to match paragraph 8-a of Viet Minh proposal. Molotov suggested that these paragraphs be discussed from the point of view first of finding what provisions would be applicable to all of Indochina. Conference would proceed to discuss questions peculiar to different parts of the area.

---

<sup>3</sup> For the Viet Minh and French proposals, see telegrams Secto 143, May 8, and Secto 162, May 10, pp. 730 and 753, respectively.

DRV delegate supported Soviets proposal stating that before going into problems of Vietnam, Khmer and Pathet-Lao it would be well to establish certain general principles applicable to whole area.

Bidault said he did not think any general rules could be worked out which would be applicable to these special and particular situations. He felt that if special character was not established no results would be achieved.

US delegate then said that although US delegation believes relatively simple problem of Laos and Cambodia should be handled separately, US delegation willing to discuss application French and Viet Minh paragraphs to Vietnam in order to ascertain whether such discussion can give us some general principles applicable elsewhere. US delegate supported Cambodian proposal of alternate meetings.

After recess Eden made two points: (1) if we were to discuss two texts and proposals they contained, we should also discuss separately their application to each of three states, and (2) all delegations should also be free to discuss related proposals such as those dealing with international control.

Molotov stated his understanding we would discuss general principles applicable to all three cases and then their application to each separately. He agreed to discussion of any closely related proposals. He then suggested discussion turn to substance.

Bidault thought there would be confusion and waste of time unless there were agreement as to questions which would be discussed as relating to all three. He suggested committee be established to draw up such list.

Molotov saw no need for committee and suggested we begin by discussing two questions: (1) simultaneous cease-fire throughout Indochina, and (2) zones for regrouping forces. This would not preclude discussion of other elements such as international supervision and non-introduction of foreign troops or arms.

Dong concurred with Molotov's first point, amplified second by saying there must be readjustment in each of three countries of areas held by opposing forces, and proposed discussion also to cover non-interference with movements of troops into zones. Proposal for cessation of introduction of foreign troops and arms spoke for itself. He supported Soviet proposal for neutral commissions and guarantee of agreements by members of conference acting of course collectively.

Bidault cited reference in point 8 to agreements between France and each of three countries. He said France had agreements with each but they were allies rather than enemies and would be on same side any armistice agreement. Point 8 (a) ignored distinction between civil war in Vietnam and external invasion in Cambodia and Laos and was not acceptable as basis for discussion. He reiterated proposal committee draw up list of questions for discussion. He also suggested the conference summon representatives of Commanders-in-Chief to Geneva to assist in separate discussion of problems of three countries.

Smith cited problem of who would determine whether hostile forces in Laos and Cambodia were Viet Minh invaders or indigenous and agreed with Bidault we should have list of basic questions before proceeding to substantive discussion.

Chou thought committee would be pointless if conference itself could not agree on agenda. First point for discussion should be general principles for simultaneous cease-fire throughout Indochina. He granted application would be different in three countries. He supported Soviet proposal on neutral commission and guarantees. Viet Minh proposal re cessation of all entry of foreign troops and arms was essential to any effective cease-fire.

Bidault suggested two chairmen might be asked to establish list of questions.

Molotov said we had decided on May 17 to consider Viet Minh point 8 (a) and French points 1 and 5 and any other related questions. He saw five principal ones: first simultaneous cease-fire throughout Indochina. After decision in principle, this would require detailed consideration including fixing of time limits for carrying it out. Second was establishment of zones in each of three states. Third was non-introduction of foreign troops or arms. Fourth was supervision over terms of agreement. Fifth is need for guarantees. Other questions might emerge from discussion.

Bidault said Molotov had listed five questions and he himself eight. Bidault could agree to discussion of any of them provided it was on basis of dealing with fundamental principles rather than national application.

Eden suggested Molotov's five questions plus Bidault's three others be taken up at next session. He thought it well to consider getting representatives of two commands here since that would take some time.

Molotov reaffirmed that his five questions were not exclusive and that anyone could add others. His referred only to military aspects and political problems could be discussed later.

Cambodian delegate reiterated that in Cambodia there could be no question of regrouping troops in internal zones, only withdrawal of invaders.

DRV saw no need for representatives of two commands and said any delegation could call anyone it wanted.

Next meeting will be restricted one on May 24.

SMITH

396.1 GE/5-2154

Memorandum of Conversation, by the Special Adviser to the United States Delegation (Heath)

SECRET

GENEVA, May 21, 1954.

Participants: M. Marc Jacquet, French State Secretary for the Associated States.

Donald R. Heath, Ambassador to Vietnam and Cambodia

During the conference intermission today I spoke with Jacquet. He said:

1. The political situation in Paris was very shaky.
2. Reports of political deterioration in Vietnam were very disquieting.

3. He was also disturbed by the friction between Generals Cogny and Navarre. The latter had lost much of his former moral authority over his command.

4. To my question whether he had heard rumors of the reconciliation between Bao Dai and Ngo Dinh Diem, he said that last December he would have favored Bao Dai's appointing Ngo Dinh Diem as Prime Minister, now he is not so sure it would be a good idea to change Buu Loc.

5. He had heard rumors of contacts between members of the Vietnamese and Vietminh Delegations which he found alarming. If there was a conciliation of the two factions it would be the Bao Dai crowd which would lose out. In that connection he recalled that Bao Dai, during a recent conversation had made a cryptic remark which had disturbed him. Bao Dai had said "we should approach this situation as we did in 1945". Bao Dai would not explain this statement and Jacquet recalled that in 1945 Bao Dai had abdicated and accepted a job as Political Counselor to Ho Chi Minh.

Comment: It was rather interesting to hear Jacquet worry about contacts between the Vietminh and Vietnam Delegations. According to a memorandum <sup>1</sup> from Chester L. Cooper, "M. Marc Jacquet, without Bidault's knowledge, has designated staff members Michel Audiat and Tezenas du Montcel for secret contacts with the Vietminh in Geneva. Bao Dai is aware of this arrangement".

<sup>1</sup> Not printed.

---

Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 250 : Telegram

The Secretary of State to the United States Delegation<sup>1</sup>

SECRET      PRIORITY

WASHINGTON, May 21, 1954—6 p. m.

Tosec 231. Re Secto 263<sup>2</sup> Department agrees appeal at this time should be made exclusively by Thailand. Believe important you press for definitive French and United Kingdom agreement in order furnish basis press Thailand for immediate action.

Department has serious doubts regarding use interim committee for establishment POC subcommission and prefers use GA for following reasons.

We consider it most desirable obtain greatest possible Asian support: India would interpret bypassing GA over which Mrs. Pandit would preside by reviving moribund body as slap at Indian Government; India and other Asians would react badly to deliberate choice forum which Soviets consider illegal and have hitherto boycotted, and Asians might not support establishment subcommission or agree serve on it. Reports by subcommission so established might not carry same weight as body created under unchallenged auspices. If Soviets should not take seats in interim committee, we would gain little if anything by reactivating it.

Use interim committee would give Communists pretext for challenging legality POC operation; if POC set in motion by GA, Soviets could not convincingly oppose it. USSR did not oppose POC section of uniting for peace resolution and is member of full POC. USSR would not of course be appointed to POC subcommission.

Might also be fairly serious procedural complications. While terms of reference interim committee could be interpreted mean it can meet while GA recessed, practice has been for committee not to meet unless regular session GA has adjourned. Thus committee did not meet in 1951 or in 1953. GA is now in recess. There might thus be procedural wrangle at outset when interim committee is being organized.

While its terms of reference prohibit interim committee from itself taking any substantive action other than establishing subcommission, committee can recommend additional action to GA and can convene special GA session. Particularly if piqued, Asians likely press for additional action and immediate GA session. Would be difficult prevent this and net result would be two debates on Indochina.

---

<sup>1</sup> Repeated to New York as telegram 577, to London as telegram 6247, to Paris as telegram 4202, to Saigon as telegram 2375, and to Bangkok as telegram 2307.

<sup>2</sup> Dated May 20, p. 862.

DULLES

MAY 22, 1954

Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 327

The Special Adviser to the United States Delegation (Achilles) to W. Dennis Allen of the British Delegation

CONFIDENTIAL

GENEVA, May 22, 1954.

DEAR DENNIS: With reference to our conversation of this morning, I am quoting below the draft letter to the President of the Security Council which the Thai government proposed to send last June. The only change which Washington believes need be made at this time is deletion of the bracketed portion at the end of the second paragraph.

"I have the honor, under instructions from my Government and in conformity with Articles 34 and 35, paragraph 1, of the United Nations Charter, to bring to the attention of the Security Council a situation which, in the view of my Government, represents not only a threat to the security of Thailand but is likely to endanger the maintenance of international peace and security of the region.

"Large-scale fighting has taken place in the immediate vicinity of Thai territory; there has been a clear possibility of direct incursions of foreign troops into its territory. This possibility continues to exist [despite the temporary recession of the direct threat of military incursions].<sup>1</sup>

"I have the honor to bring this situation of international tension to the attention of the Security Council to the end that the Security Council may provide for observation in the area under the Peace Observation Commission.

"The Royal Thai Government makes this appeal to the Security Council not only as a firm supporter of the United Nations but as a power firmly determined to play its part in the maintenance of international peace and security in Southeast Asia.

"Finally, I have the honor to request that you call a meeting of the Security Council to consider this matter and, as representative of Thailand, I may be invited, in conformity with rule 37 of the Rules of Procedure of the Security Council, to participate in the Council discussion of the question.

"Accept, Sir, the assurances of my highest consideration."

The following is the text of the draft resolution which the Thai government intended to propose last June. Washington believes that it is still suitable with deletion of the bracketed words in the second paragraph. The Department also has in mind a subcommission of five—India, New Zealand, Pakistan, Sweden and Uruguay—and believes it would be desirable to name these states in the resolution.

<sup>1</sup> Brackets in the source text.

"The Security Council,

"Recalling General Assembly Resolution 337(V) (uniting for peace), part A, section B establishing a peace observation commission which could observe and report on the situation in any area where there exists international tension, the continuance of which is likely to endanger the maintenance of international peace and security,

"Finds that there exists in the general area of [and adjacent to] Thailand [and Laos]<sup>2</sup> a condition of international tension the continuance of which is likely to endanger international peace and security,

"Requests the Peace Observation Commission to establish a sub-commission composed of . . . members, with its seat at the United Nations Headquarters, with authority:

(a) To despatch such observers as it may deem necessary to any part of the above area on the request of any state or states concerned, but only to the territory of states consenting thereto;

(b) To visit if it deems necessary, any area in which observation requested under sub-paragraph (a), is being conducted;

(c) To consider such data as may be submitted to it by its members or observers and to make such reports as it deems necessary to the Peace Observation Commission and the Security Council for the information of member states."

Sincerely,

THEODORE ACHILLES

<sup>2</sup> Brackets in the source text.

396.1 GE/5-2254: Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

TOP SECRET      NIACT

GENEVA, May 22, 1954—11 a. m.

Dulte 96. Eyes only Secretary. I think it very likely that we will be confronted with the proposal that India participate in this conference, and in view of future possibilities it is a proposal which it will be difficult for us to resist. However, this will raise very serious questions. For instance, we should not accept India without alternatively proposing the Philippines and Thailand who have already indicated their willingness to join the Southeast Asian Pact. Our thinking at the moment is that if and when a proposal for Indian participation is made, we might accept but propose also the inclusion of these two other nations who are on our side. There is a chance that this would open up a whole Pandora's box. The question is one on which I urgently need your guidance because Menon's visit here may bring up the matter.<sup>1</sup>

SMITH

<sup>1</sup> For the Secretary's reply, see telegram Tedul 108, May 22, p. 889.

790.5/5-1854 : Telegram

The Secretary of State to the United States Delegation<sup>1</sup>

TOP SECRET

WASHINGTON, May 22, 1954—11:08 a. m.

Tedul 106. Limit distribution. In May 20 meeting with Webb and Munro Secretary outlined JCS recommendations (Tedul 93<sup>2</sup>) re UK terms reference (Dulte 84<sup>3</sup>) proposed five power military talks. Secretary said US believes talks should take place Washington and not transfer elsewhere later without full agreement of five. Webb expressed hope representation at talks would be high level in view importance New Zealand and world opinion. Secretary thought Defense tentatively had in mind two or three star general but indicated no decision yet taken. Subsequently it appeared New Zealand thinking of General Gentry, Chief of General Staff.

Secretary revealed background our recent discussions with UK re Southeast Asia action beginning with April 13 communiqué issued following London visit. He explained his concern that Eden had agreed to establishment working group Washington but subsequently backed out just prior scheduled meeting, which then had to be changed to meeting of 16-power Korean group plus Associated States representatives.<sup>4</sup> Secretary stated Churchill's May 17 Commons statement was further repudiation original April 13 joint communiqué.<sup>5</sup> Churchill modified statement on readiness examine possibility establishing collective defense by inserting additional phrase "when the outcome of the Geneva Conference is clear". Churchill statement also omitted UK readiness make such examination "with other countries principally concerned". Churchill changed April 13 statement "establishing a collective defense" to "establishing a system of collective security and defense". Secretary felt establishment of "system" might unduly delay necessary and immediate measures, noting that NATO Treaty had taken over year to work out.

Secretary outlined reasons which led US in April to take initiative in creating ad hoc coalition to offset then impending fall Dien Bien Phu. He admitted UK change of position had not been helpful to US-UK relations.

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by Horsey of EUR/BNA and Draper of S/S. Repeated to London as telegram 6275, to Paris as telegram 4222, to Wellington as telegram 166, and repeated from Wellington to Canberra as telegram 217. Memorandum of conversation, May 20, is in Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 328.

<sup>2</sup> Dated May 20, p. 858.

<sup>3</sup> Dated May 18, p. 841.

<sup>4</sup> For the Secretary's briefing on Apr. 20, see the memorandum of conversation, p. 535.

<sup>5</sup> For text of Churchill's May 17 statement, see editorial note, p. 834.

Turning to recent conversations with French re "internationalizing" Indochina war, Secretary said French had never until recently asked us sit down discuss situation even though they have known we were prepared do so. French apparently not willing limit their complete freedom of action in spite our swift and extensive responses virtually to all specific aid requests except one, an air strike at Dien Bien Phu. Secretary said we made clear then we could not commit belligerent act unless based on sound principles fundamental to which was idea of collective action.

Secretary enumerated, in response recent French approach, what we told them would be necessary basic conditions for such internationalization i.e., France and Associated States request direct US military participation with similar invitation to Australia, New Zealand, UK, Thailand and Philippines; matter presented to UN in some form promptly; Associated States guaranteed complete independence by France; France not to withdraw its forces even with addition other forces supplementary to those of France and Associated States; agreement on command structure and raising-training native troops.

Secretary emphasized, in spite press leaks, these discussions in very preliminary stage and would probably remain suspended until General Ely return to Paris. He felt certain French had not yet reached firm decision.

Full memorandum follows.

Webb also made courtesy call on President May 20.

DULLES

---

396.1 GE/5-2254 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

CONFIDENTIAL      NIACT

GENEVA, May 22, 1954—noon.

Dulte 95. Eyes only for the Secretary. Your Tedul 99.<sup>1</sup> Last night I dictated a message to you sharing your indignation regarding British statements and agreeing that Aldrich should act in accordance with your suggestion. However, after sleeping on the matter, and because I hope and expect that Eden will insure British support of the peace observation plan while in London over this week end, I think now we should withhold any protest until after this is done. I agree these things are hard to swallow, but you know how pettish both Eden and Churchill can be at times, and if we stir them up at this moment they may again back-pedal on support of the Thailand proposal, which I now believe they are prepared to accept. Also, cannot forget that British are equally concerned and upset by President's statement regarding possible Southeast Asian pact "without Britain".<sup>2</sup>

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated May 20, p. 869.

SMITH

---

<sup>2</sup> At his news conference on May 19, the President, in response to a question whether "we could build an effective pact back there [in Southeast Asia] without Great Britain's support", answered: "Well, after all, you must remember that Australia and New Zealand are the countries of the British Commonwealth of Nations that are directly involved. I should say that with the proper Asiatic nations, which of course I lay down as a sine qua non, and Australia and New Zealand, we might possibly work out something that would be maybe not as satisfactory or as broad as you would like it, but could be workable." (Public Papers of the Presidents of the United States: Dwight D. Eisenhower, 1954, p. 497.)

---

790.5/5-2254 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

TOP SECRET      NIACT

GENEVA, May 22, 1954—1 p. m.

Dulte 97. Eyes only Secretary. Re Teduls 93<sup>1</sup> and 88.<sup>2</sup> Eden left early this morning for Paris and London before I had time to analyze or to speak to him regarding our JCS recommendations on the British text re five-power staff talks.

Since I received these comments in Tedul 93, you have probably seen Avis Gento 32 of 21 May<sup>3</sup> reporting summary given him by Colonel Monckton, British military adviser. You will note that the British propose these talks be conducted at Chief of Staff level, Australia and New Zealand concurring. They intend to send to Washington the Army Chief of Staff, General Harding, with advisers of major general rank from the other three services. This automatically lifts talks above level of "five-power staff agency".

You will also note the comprehensive items for discussion proposed by British delegation here to British Chiefs of Staff, which I assume will be adopted.

Under these circumstances, I am extremely reluctant to open up again the whole matter with Eden on the basis of our JCS comments, some of which I think are no longer pertinent, and most of which I think should be settled by these senior staff officers themselves when they first meet in Washington.

Department's assumption that omission of informing Associated States from Eden's memo is an oversight, is correct. He understands

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated May 20, p. 858.

<sup>2</sup> Dated May 19, p. 856.

<sup>3</sup> Not found in Department of State files. In a note (attached to the source text) Kitchen informed the Secretary that "we have made arrangements to obtain the reference Defense message (Avis Gento 32 of 21 May) from Defense as quickly as possible."

they will be informed. He also understands that the information which will be given by the several participants to their Asiatic protégés as to terms of reference will vary. His wording is that which he proposes to use to those nations that will be informed by Britain, and I told him that we would probably modify it to a certain extent in speaking to the countries whom we are to inform.

I have pushed this matter pretty hard with Eden because I believe that these talks were desirable to lay some of the dust which has been raised about disunity, and also because I believe that serious military technical discussions are imperative.

So far as joint participation in staff conversations are concerned, the first objective has already been accomplished by the press. The scope and effectiveness of the second will depend very largely on the ability of the soldiers to get down to serious business, and as we have quite enough points of friction here, I would hope to be relieved of the necessity of going again to Eden on this matter unless a real major issue arises.

Monckton informed us that Eden is very concerned about the leak to the British press of details regarding the five-power talks and that a thorough investigation is being made both at London and at Geneva to determine the source.<sup>4</sup>

SMITH

---

<sup>4</sup>Memorandum of conversation, May 21, between Colonel Monckton, Colonel Ferguson, and Colonel Taber, not printed. (396.1 GE/5-2154)

---

790.5/5-2254 : Telegram

The Secretary of State to the United States Delegation<sup>1</sup>

TOP SECRET      PRIORITY      WASHINGTON, May 22, 1954—1 : 51 p. m.

Tedul 107. Eyes only for Under Secretary from Secretary. Re Dulte 97.<sup>2</sup> You may advise Eden acceptance his proposal Dulte 84<sup>3</sup> on following understandings which we believe acceptable and understood by other participants:

1. Any decision to move from Washington would involve unanimous concurrence rather than majority vote;

2. We will ourselves prefer to call the group "military representatives of the participating powers" but since it is understood that no official announcement will be made this matter is presumably academic.

---

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by the Secretary of State; cleared by Admiral Radford.

<sup>2</sup> Supra.

<sup>3</sup> Dated May 18, p. 841.

3. We understand that the terms of reference should be interpreted so that the second phrase dealing with examination of "all possible courses of action in the light of the current situation" etc. is without limitation, and in particular is not restricted by the prior sentence dealing with "an effective line of resistance".

4. We see no objection to UK informing Australia and New Zealand because of commonwealth relationship. We would also expect to keep them informed in view of our ANZUS relationship and in fact we did inform Webb fully of the then status of the matter during his recent visit here.

5. The US would expect to inform others in accordance with its standing policies in such matters, possibly varying the precise formulation of the terms of reference according to the circumstances of the case. Also, we assume that Associated States will be informed in the first instance presumably by France.

We suggest that a letter of memorandum be handed to Eden to the foregoing effect at the time you explain the above points orally.

For your information US and British Chiefs have exchanged despatches on the subject of level of representation. British Chiefs originally proposed Chief of Staff level or two star level. US Chiefs replied that they preferred two star level. British Chiefs yesterday requested reconsideration of this matter and US Chiefs replied that they still preferred the two star level and were not willing to raise it to the Chief of Staff level but would go along with British and French senior representation from Washington which would mean that the British could designate four star General Whiteley<sup>4</sup> and French could designate three star General Valluy. That is acceptable to the French. US Chiefs intend to maintain their direct representation in these meetings on two star level, even if British accept this last proposal. We feel here that this particular matter is one which can be adjusted between the Chiefs themselves. End FYI.

DULLES

---

<sup>4</sup> Gen. Sir John F. M. Whiteley, Chairman, British Joint Services Mission in Washington, and British Representative on the NATO Standing Group.

---

790.5/5-2254 : Telegram

The Secretary of State to the United States Delegation<sup>1</sup>

TOP SECRET      PRIORITY      WASHINGTON, May 22, 1954—2:15 p. m.

Tedul 108. Ur Dulte 96.<sup>2</sup> My preliminary thinking is that we should not resist participation South Asian countries. If they effectively assume responsibilities in Indochina, Thailand and Burma, that would either constitute a useful deterrent influence against communist takeover or if it did not accomplish this it would be educational, particularly to India and we might thereby gain. If India is to be there, believe also Pakistan and Ceylon should participate, also of course Thailand, Philippines, and presumably Burma.<sup>3</sup>

---

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by the Secretary of State.

<sup>2</sup> Dated May 22, p. 884.

Before you take definitive position I want to think further about this matter and clear it higher level.

DULLES

---

<sup>3</sup> Smith in telegram Dulte 102, May 24, replied that "In my Dulte 96 am not sure I made it clear that proposal may be that India participate in this Geneva conference on Indochina. If this proposal is made, we have a perfectly valid case for admission to the conference of the Philippines and Thailand, probably also for Pakistan, and as you say, presumably Burma. If it is brought up, will take no position until I hear further from you." (396.1 GE/5-2454)

---

396.1 GE/5-2254

Memorandum of Conversation, by the Special Adviser to the United States Delegation (Heath)

SECRET

GENEVA, May 22, 1954.

Participants: Buu Kinh, Vietnamese Delegation
Donald R. Heath, Ambassador to Vietnam and Cambodia.

Buu Kinh called by appointment to say that the Vietnamese Delegation was somewhat worried over the developments of the last restricted session. They had understood that the French Delegation and the British and American Delegations as well, would insist on a separate treatment for Laos and Cambodia on the one hand and Vietnam on the other. However, the French and British Delegations had apparently swung around to Molotov's program of discussing general principles adaptable to all three states. This was not the Vietnamese position nor that of Cambodia and Laos, and they thought it a potentially dangerous procedure to adopt. He was particularly worried over the very first proposal advanced by Molotov and the cease-fire must be simultaneous in the three countries. The Vietnamese position was that peace might be obtained more quickly in Cambodia and Laos in which case cease-fire should not be held up there while awaiting conclusion of armistice arrangements with Vietnam which might take a long time and indeed might never occur except on terms which would pave the way for a Communist takeover.

On the other hand, Vietnam did not want at this stage to be too vociferous and intransigent in opposing such commitment proposals as were accepted by the French since it did not wish to embarrass the position of the French Delegation and the French Government. Vietnam had a great deal of confidence in Bidault and hoped that his position, policy and support by French parliamentary opinion could be strengthened during the week or so.

I said I was thoroughly inclined to believe that we should not accept without reservations the proposition that the cease-fire should be simultaneous in the three countries but I had not yet discussed the matter with the head of our delegation. I observed he must have noted that we in effect had not only asked separate treatment for those countries but even priority of settlement because of the simplicity of their problems. I added we had very great confidence in Mr. Bidault but realized the latter's position was presently difficult and that, therefore, we all should at this stage try to co-ordinate our action with that of the French.

I said it was my understanding that Mr. Bidault, in accepting the Russian proposal to discuss fundamental points had made a distinct reservation as to the necessity of separate treatment of the Cambodian and Laotian situations.

I then went on to say that as he doubtless knew, we were actively exploring various possibilities of strengthening the military and political assets of France and the Associated States in the Indochina conflict and we felt that progress is being made. We were, for example, actively promoting the formation of the Southeast Asia Mutual Defense Pact.

I then inquired as to rumors of contacts between the Vietnamese and Vietminh Delegations. Buu Kinh, with air appearance of candor said that no contacts, to his knowledge, had occurred and he doubted any would or could occur because of the close supervision over the Vietminh Delegation exercised by its own and Soviet and Chinese security agents. He said that Phan Anh as long ago as 1946 at the Fontainebleau conference had told his friend Dinh, now head of the Vietnamese Delegation here, that he had made a mistake in going over to Ho Chi Minh since the latter by then had revealed himself as a Communist. Anh had said then, however, that he was "embarked" and could not change his course. He had advised Dinh to steer Vietnamese nationalists towards association with the United States.

396.1 GE/5-2054 : Telegram

The Secretary of State to the United States Delegation<sup>1</sup>

TOP SECRET

WASHINGTON, May 22, 1954—3:48 p. m.

Tedul 110. Eyes only Ambassadors. Reference Secto 261<sup>2</sup> and 265.<sup>3</sup> In view of role which US may be called upon to play in Indochina, we have given much thought to Bao Dai's offer to maintain contact with you. I believe this offer should be discreetly exploited. Moreover, because of delicacy and importance of contact, I believe it should be pursued directly between you and Bao Dai.

FYI I am aware of disabilities ascribed to Bao Dai and believe him to be an ally of uncertain value for the long push. If we are to take active part in Indochina war, we must work toward rapid establishment of authentic Vietnamese nationalist government. Our present thinking envisions as an important first step the creation of a provisional National Assembly having initially broad consultative, but more importantly constituent, powers. Besides symbolizing national independence, such assembly would furnish necessary safety valve and continuing source of new leadership. It would of course function haltingly at first and cause some trouble, but these hazards would have to be accepted and would be lessened by method of establishment suggested below.

During period in which assembly was being established and coming to some measure of maturity and a more nearly representative government being set up, it would be necessary that Bao Dai continue to contribute whatever he represents of governmental legitimacy and unity. If there were no substantial change from performance he has been giving since 1949, we believe he could be largely neutralized if responsible Vietnamese, backed by France and US, found this to be necessary.

On other hand, it is possible Bao Dai is both sincere and accurate in his contention that French have prevented him from playing more effective part as Chief of State. Despite his known deficiencies, it may be that Bao Dai is a patriotic Vietnamese, and that under other auspices his patriotism might find more satisfactory expression. In any event, we do not seem to have on this side of the lines an immediately available substitute whose advent to power would not occasion more or less grave disturbance in some part of territory of Vietnam under nominal control of National Government.

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by Sturm of FE/PSA and Gullion of S/P. Repeated to Paris as telegram 4225 and to Saigon as telegram 2385.

<sup>2</sup> Telegram Secto 261, May 20, contained a report of a conversation between Under Secretary Smith and Ngo Dinh Luyen on May 18. For memorandum of conversation, see p. 843.

<sup>3</sup> Dated May 20, p. 863.

Accordingly, it would seem advisable not to attempt find substitute for Bao Dai, but to avail ourselves of what he has to offer, meanwhile remaining alert to minimize his power to do harm if he should evince tendency to revert to his old habits or to adopt new ones contrary to our interests.

As we now conceive it, the provisional legislative body mentioned above (whose initial membership could come from among local councillors elected in January 1953, representatives chosen by religious and political groups, and other persons selected as far as possible from elements which have stood aloof from politics since beginning of present hostilities) would have to grow into its job. At outset, it should have right to approve the government then existing or new one chosen by Bao Dai in consultation with French and ourselves, or it might elect an executive committee from its own membership from which part or all of the cabinet would be chosen. Assembly could thereafter have right to question ministers and probably vote budget, but its primary attention should be directed toward writing constitution, aided by French and American constitutional experts.

While we should under no circumstances commit ourselves irrevocably to Bao Dai nor indicate a fixed opinion in favor of any particular governmental reform, we must seek what good we can derive from his cooperation at least for the time being. Thus far the worst in his character seems to have been indulged, with results which are all too apparent. If he should now prove to have better stuff in him, we shall have gained useful ally. End FYI.

I hope you will take earliest occasion to renew personal contact with Bao Dai. Because of his oriental reticence, perhaps it would be advisable for you to talk with him only in presence of an interpreter of his choice. In this interview you should draw him out as far as possible on following lines (FYI portion this message may be useful to you in formulating questions, and was included for that purpose, but you will of course avoid indicating trend of our thought to Bao Dai) :

1. What can be done quickly to rectify political situation in non-Communist Vietnam?
2. What kind of "concerted action" does he have in mind?
3. What kind of working relationship does he see between himself and US?
4. What would be French reaction to such a working relationship, and how does he envisage operation of a Franco-US-Vietnamese partnership?

This conversation should of course be purely exploratory. Its purpose is to afford us a better current appreciation of one who may of necessity play important part in Vietnam for some time to come. You should assure Bao Dai you are ready to communicate with him directly whenever he wishes. After interview, I would like you to make full report including your personal estimate of Bao Dai and of his probable utility in developing situation.

I know that you understand clearly the delicacy vis-à-vis Bidault and the French generally of our seeming to intervene in this regard. I leave tactics to your good judgment.

Request Delegation, Paris and Saigon comment on FYI section this message.

DULLES

---

751G.00/5-2254

Memorandum of Conversation, by the Adviser to the United States Delegation (Bonsal)

TOP SECRET

GENEVA, May 22, 1954.

Participants: Tezenas du Montcel, Minister of the Associated States
Philip W. Bonsal

Subject: Visit to General Smith of Bao Dai's Personal Representative, Ngo Dinh Luyen

Pursuant to General Smith's approval of the recommendation contained in my memorandum of May 21,<sup>1</sup> I asked Tezenas du Montcel to come to see me. He did so on Saturday evening, May 22.

Emphasizing the highly sensitive and confidential nature of what I was about to tell him, I gave Tezenas du Montcel a broad outline of the approach made to General Smith by Ngo Dinh Luyen in the capacity of Bao Dai's personal representative. I indicated that the major purpose of the approach seemed to be in order to find out to what extent Bao Dai could count on American support in the event that present French support should appear to weaken for any reason. I told Tezenas du Montcel that General Smith had stressed in the most emphatic terms to Ngo Dinh Luyen his conviction regarding French resolution and determination under present circumstances. I added that no reply had as yet been given to Ngo Dinh Luyen with regard to the questions which he had asked. I said also that we are somewhat puzzled as to whether Ngo Dinh Luyen is in fact accurately stating the views of His Majesty. He may be serving more as a mouth-piece of his brother, Ngo Dinh Diem.

Tezenas du Montcel expressed great appreciation of General Smith's action in seeing that the French were informed of this move. He assured me of his realization of the very sensitive nature of this information. He said that it was his impression there was no love lost between Bao Dai and Ngo Dinh Diem and that in the past when Bao Dai had spoken of the possibility of giving Ngo Dinh Diem the post of Prime Minister, it had been with the idea of breaking Ngo Dinh Diem's back ("pour lui casser les reins").

---

<sup>1</sup> A memorandum dated May 21 from Bonsal to Under Secretary Smith has not been found in Department of State files.

In conclusion Bonsal said that we had merely listened to Ngo Dinh Luyen and had given him no answers regarding our policies in certain contingencies. Bonsal said that we would not give such answers in the absence of coordination with the French.

---

751G.00/5-2354 : Telegram

Smith-Molotov Meeting, Geneva, May 22, Evening: The United States Delegation to the Department of State<sup>1</sup>

TOP SECRET      PRIORITY

GENEVA, May 23, 1954—5 p. m.

Dulte 101. Repeated information Moscow 82. Moscow eyes only Ambassador. S/S limit distribution. At Molotov's invitation, Robertson, Phleger, Johnson, Reinhardt, and I dined last night at his house. We were cordially received and the atmosphere during dinner was reminiscent of the days toward the end of the honeymoon period. After dinner Robertson and I were steered into a room with Molotov, Gromyko, Zarubin, and Troyanovsky. The others were, by clearly calculated arrangement, conducted into another room, where they could hear only snatches of our conversation. Molotov was completely relaxed, quite friendly, and objective.

He began the conversation with a few remarks about the conference and led immediately into Indochina, asking me for my view of the situation as it existed in the separate states. I replied that as I had stated in the closed sessions of our conference, we believed the situation in Vietnam to be quite different from that which existed in Laos and Cambodia. In Vietnam we recognized that the forces of Ho Chi Minh were well organized, disciplined, formidable, and controlled a considerable portion of the territory of the country. Here, it was our feeling that where two completely hostile ideologies were in serious conflict there would have to be some sort of separation in the form of

---

<sup>1</sup> Transmitted in three sections. Memorandum of conversation of this meeting, May 23, is in Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 289.

In Tedul 119, May 24, the Secretary of State replied that he was "Much interested your Dulte 101 and am transmitting textually to President." (751G.00/5-2354) In a memorandum to the President, May 24, transmitting the telegram, the Secretary commented that "Molotov's attitude, as described, conforms generally with that which I found in Berlin, and which appeared from the two talks I had with Molotov at Geneva. However, in this case, there is a good deal more detailed discussion of China and Indochina than has heretofore taken place between us." (Eisenhower Library, Dulles papers, "1951-1959, Korea-Political Conference, Geneva, 1954") an armistice and a withdrawal of the regular contingents to specified areas with probably prolonged discussions leading toward a political settlement, all under supervision of some genuinely neutral authority. With respect to Cambodia and Laos, the situation was entirely different. Our information was good and we were convinced that the statements made by the representatives of the Cambodian and Laotian Governments were substantially correct. I had, I stated, on our staff, officers who had visited all parts of both Laos and Cambodia and who were able from personal observation to confirm the fact that in both states the dissident elements were not indigenous and controlled very little, if any, of the country. Molotov replied that he agreed generally with regard to Vietnam, and he also agreed that there was a great difference in the problem of Vietnam as against that of Cambodia and Laos. However, he said, from what information he had, which was not very complete, he had arrived at the impression that the governments of the two countries actually controlled only about half of their territory, and that all of their troubles were not by any means due to external causes. I replied that apparently our information was different, and how did he suggest the question be resolved? He said that this was difficult, and repeated that he was inclined to the view that the governments of both states were weak and really controlled only about half of their respective territories. I said that there was one way of finding out and that was to have an inspection made by a genuinely neutral committee who could determine the real facts. Molotov said it would hardly be possible to do this during the period of our conference, but that the matter must of course be resolved. He then repeated that he did not challenge the fact that the problems were considerably different. There was a good deal of discussion of this subject, during all of which Molotov took the same apparently detached and objective position. It is our view that he visualizes the solution lying in some form of a cease-fire operation which would ultimately divide Vietnam, but he did not object when I remarked that the conditions in Cambodia and Laos were not such as to justify even considering slicing off pieces of their territory to provide for the concentration of dissident elements. He said that we were not making much progress in the conference and he thought it might be advisable to have the parties most concerned, namely, the French, Vietnamese and Viet Minh, meet and see if they could not come to some solution among themselves which they could present to the conference. I said I did not know how the French would react to this; that I could not recommend it to the French, but that I would not oppose it. Our position here with regard to Indochina was different from Korea. We wanted to be helpful. We were not a belligerent, although we were assisting France and the Associated States with money and equipment. Our interest was great as France was our ally, and Britain, another ally, was in Malaya. Also we had a treaty with the Philippines, where we had a special interest. Molotov said he understood this, but there were reports that US did not want fighting to stop. I said thing we wanted most was an honorable cessation of hostilities, on just terms, but we would not associate ourselves with any capitulation to what we believed to be aggression.

I then mentioned Korea, pointing out that discussion in plenary session today had again emphasized deep cleavage and bitterness of feeling between North and South Korea. Molotov agreed and said that this was obviously a matter which would require a great deal of time to produce a solution. He thought that political settlement in Korea would come about possibly as a result of some years of living together. I mentioned a recent statement of Nehru's, saying that while I did not by any means subscribe to most of his statements, his recent one regarding Korea had interested me. Mr. Nehru, I understood, had said, in effect, that he did not expect a political solution for Korea to arise from Geneva conference, but that it might be that some loose association as a result of trading together would, after a period of time, reduce the tension and produce some form of agreement. The interpretation I gave this was, I now understand, a good deal different from what Nehru actually proposed. Molotov repeated that a period of "living together" and some form of commercial or other contact over a period of time might reduce the bitterness and permit some political solution. He obviously expects none here.

The conversation then passed to the subject of our general relationship, and via that, to China. I said that I believed, with regard to the Soviet Union, as I expected Mr. Molotov to believe with regard to the United States, that we genuinely desired peace. We had come, I hoped correctly, to think in the United States that although we went through periods of public name-calling, we could, in the last analysis, sit down at the conference table with the Soviet Union and work out some form of solution for our major problems. We did not have this same feeling about some of their associates; we had sensed a lack of restraint and an intransigence which caused us grave concern. Molotov looked up immediately at me and said China. I said yes, China. Well, he said, you must remember that China is still a very young country, and you must also remember that China is always going to be China, she is never going to be European. The Soviet Union, he went on, had worked out a relationship with Communist China. I should also remember that we had done a good many things to irritate Communist China and cause them difficulties. I replied that the Soviet Union and Communist China had one point in common, they had a common political ideology which made it easier for them to arrive at common understandings. We did not share that common ideology with Communist China. Molotov said that, in effect, we weren't the only ones that are worried, the Soviet Union would like to devote all of its time and resources to improving its internal situation, but from time to time events took place which made it necessary for them to realize that they would have to devote their attention and resources to matters outside their borders. He said China was only five years old and she also needed time to devote her attention and resources to her internal problems. I said that President Eisenhower believed in world trade but the Chinese made any contact impossible. He said there was a great deal in our attitude which gave the Soviets ground for serious thought. Here he groped for a word to imply hostility or aggressiveness without being discourteous. I supplied the word and said we sensed the same attitude in the Soviet Union. The question which concerned us both was war or peace, and if there was any doubt in his mind as to the pacific intentions of the United States, I would demonstrate to him that they were unfounded. We had intervened in Korea as a result of deep-rooted moral principles. When we reversed the situation and the Chinese Communists intervened, we could have dealt with Communist China without difficulty had we been willing to go into general mobilization and use all of the resources at our disposal. We had not done so, and had taken thousands of casualties rather than commit the full prestige of the United States and possibly that of the Soviet Union in an issue which would have involved broadening the conflict and possibly brought on global war. I would remind him of the first official conversation that I had when I arrived in Moscow, and suggested that when he returned he get out a memo of that conversation and re-read it. He said he recalled it. I then said that he would also recall that I told him at that time that there was a line beyond which compromise could not go; that we were willing to reach honorable compromise, but compromise was a two-way street and we would not abandon our principles. He replied in a perfectly friendly way that he understood, and again he said that China was a very young country. He also said, and this is very interesting, that it will become known some day that in the Korean matter the Soviet Union had acted as a restraining influence. He repeated that we had done some things to irritate Communist China. Robertson said that the Chinese Communists had done many things to irritate US, one illustration of which was the matter of American citizens and air force personnel, none guilty of any crimes, now imprisoned, and also those unable to get exit visas.<sup>2</sup> Some of these people had died in prison, and they have been mistreated. Molotov obviously was completely informed in the matter.

<sup>2</sup> For documentation on this issue, see volume XIV.

He at once replied that there were some Chinese students in the United States who had been unable to leave. Robertson said that this was correct, but they were neither imprisoned nor ill treated, and that under proper arrangements they could be permitted to go. Molotov said he saw no reason why a matter of this kind could not be very readily adjusted. I said that although the number involved was few, incidents like this made it almost impossible even to consider moving close toward an understanding. The American people reacted very strongly to what they considered unjust or inhumane treatment—that they would take hundreds of casualties, but that they would never abandon efforts to obtain the release of one single prisoner. Molotov again said that this should be easily resolved. He went on to say that the Soviet Union, along with US, had for a long time done all it could do to uphold Chiang Kai-shek, and had only abandoned him when further support became completely impracticable. Neither Robertson nor I felt there was any purpose in replying to this comment.

Robertson remarked at this point that he had heard much said here about Colonialism. This was no longer an issue. Britain had given complete freedom to India, Pakistan, Burma, et cetera, and Holland to Indonesia. Our record re the Philippines was well known. We were perfectly willing and should be able to live at peace with people of a different political ideology, but it ought to be recognized that our differences were not Colonialism but ideological. Molotov replied that this was so.

The thing that impressed me most last night was the difference in Molotov's attitude now from what it was when Stalin was alive. He went further, was much more frank, made no charges, by implication or otherwise, no recriminations, and it was as though he were looking at the whole situation through a magnifying glass and analyzing its various aspects. There is apparent much greater self-confidence and authority. It is interesting that Molotov, having toasted every one of his guests, then proposed a toast to the heads of our respective states, "the President of the United States, General Eisenhower, and the President of the Supreme Soviet, Marshal Voroshilov". This is the first time I ever heard such a toast given by a top Communist official which placed the President of the Supreme Soviet in the position of head of the state. Molotov also commented again on your departure from Geneva and asked again how long I would be here. I said my movements depended on his decisions. We had gone to Panmunjom expecting to stay three weeks, and had stayed 27 months. If we did not complicate the problems of Laos and Cambodia, it should not take too long.

MAY 23, 1954

Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 308

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

TOP SECRET PRIORITY

GENEVA, May 23, 1954—2 p. m.

Dulte 100. Eyes only Secretary. Your Tedul 107.<sup>1</sup> I will advise Eden in accordance with your instructions and provide him with a confirming memorandum.<sup>2</sup> Will omit paragraph four, since Australia and New Zealand have been informed and are participating and our relationship to ANZUS is well understood.

With regard to final paragraph of Tedul 107, it is completely impossible for me to understand the reasoning which prompts the decision by our Joint Chiefs of Staff that they should downgrade the rank of our representation on these five power staff conferences. Regardless of the actual outcome, the simple fact that very senior military officers of the five powers were meeting in Washington would convince the Russians and Chinese, who inevitably would know about it, that, regardless of protestations or statements to the contrary, we really intended serious business. I really regret this decision more than I can say.<sup>3</sup>

SMITH

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated May 22, p. 888.

<sup>2</sup> In telegram Dulte 117, May 26, Smith reported that "Eden has forwarded my memorandum to London and is confident it will be well received. He hopes talks will start as quickly as possible and so do I. Can we not get on with them?" (790.5/5-2554)

<sup>3</sup> In telegram Tedul 112, May 24, the Secretary of State informed Under Secretary Smith that he had "discussed final paragraph [of telegram Dulte 100] with Radford and Chiefs will reconsider. Their motivation has been primarily political, feeling that British wanted high ranking to obviate carrying on broader political talks." (Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 242)

MAY 24, 1954

396.1 GE/5-2454 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

TOP SECRET

GENEVA, May 24, 1954—11 a. m.

Dulte 103. Repeated information Paris 320, Saigon 105. Re Geneva Tedul 110, repeated Paris 4225, Saigon 2385.<sup>1</sup> I agree fully that it would now be very useful, later possibly imperative for me to have personal contacts with Bao Dai. That said, I do not believe we should make any move in that direction without prior discussion and approval of Bidault. While the latter raised no objection some eight days ago when I told him of my intention to pay a courtesy call on Bao

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated May 22, p. 892.

Dai and made no comment when, through Ambassador Chauvel, Heath reported on my meeting.<sup>2</sup> I am sure that Bidault was uneasy that this meeting would be used by the opposition to increase the difficulties of himself and the Laniel government. There was in fact some unhelpful French press speculation over what transpired at my meeting with Bao Dai.

Before making any arrangements for a next meeting, therefore, I would like to discuss the matter with Bidault in such a manner as not to allow him to impose a veto on my eventually seeing Bao Dai but agreeing if he raises objections to the political effect of such a meeting (which would be sure to be known) to defer any contact for some days to come. Bao Dai himself evidently feels that our meeting at this precise time would be unwise in view of probable French reaction and this is one of the reasons that he appointed Luyen as channel of communications. (See telegram Secto 265 repeated Paris 306, Saigon 97.<sup>3</sup>)

The four-point outline suggested in reference telegram would be a good agenda for our first meeting.

As regards the program outlined in the first five paragraphs of reference telegram everyone including Bao Dai would agree as to the necessity of strengthening Vietnamese government in face present emergency. Bao Dai might also if we insisted agree to the creation of a provisional assembly having initially broad consultative powers and would probably agree that it have constituent powers as well.

The Buu Loc government has in fact promised the creation of a consultative assembly. Bao Dai's own immediate solution has been strengthening the efficiency and autonomy of the army and the creation of war cabinet with real authority.<sup>4</sup>

<sup>2</sup> Held on May 16; for summary of discussion, see telegram Secto 234, May 17, p. 829.

<sup>3</sup> Dated May 20, p. 863.

<sup>4</sup> In telegram 2541 from Saigon, May 26, McClintock stated that "with all deference" he wanted to correct this sentence. He commented that "Bao Dai has not strengthened efficiency and autonomy of Vietnamese National Army. On contrary, as Embassy's telegrams have pointed out, morale of army is at new low ebb and its efficiency is gravely impaired by open rivalry between Minister of Defense Quat and Chief of Staff Hinh. Furthermore, Geneva conference has had deleterious effect on fighting spirit in all ranks. There has been no creation of a war cabinet with real authority. This cabinet had one meeting and has since lapsed into oblivion. Its composition is Buu Loc as Prime Minister, Quat as Minister of Defense, and Hinh as Chief of Staff. Since Buu Loc is in France and neither Quat nor Hinh will ratify suggestions of other, war cabinet is an absolute nullity." (751G.5/5-2654)

In commenting on McClintock's telegram Under Secretary Smith said "there seems to be some difference of view between drafting officer Ambassador Heath and Chargé d'Affaires McClintock, a condition which probably exists in other missions elsewhere in the world. However, it would have been more accurate if our Dulte 103 had stated 'Bao Dai's own proposed solution is, et cetera'. Personally, Bao Dai did not impress me as a man to lead forlorn hopes." (Telegram Dulte 118; 396.1 GE/5-2654)

I believe he would go along with the creation of the assembly and the lines mentioned in reference telegram seem to be wise and practical.

SMITH

396.1 GE/5-2454 : Telegram

Smith-Bidault Meeting, Geneva, May 24, Morning: The United States Delegation to the Department of State

TOP SECRET

PRIORITY

GENEVA, May 24, 1954—10 p. m.

Dulte 107. Repeated information Paris 322. Eyes only Secretary; Paris eyes only Ambassador. Re Paris 4499 to Department.<sup>1</sup> In accordance with Dillon's suggestion I had long talks with Bidault this morning. Only Margerie and Achilles were present. Day in country and good night's sleep had put him back in good condition.

I told him of Saturday night's talk with Molotov,<sup>2</sup> including my conclusions that Russians expected no progress on Korea but thought they had hooked big fish on Indochina which ought involve Europe as well, that they considered time on their side although their worries over developments elsewhere might impel them to accept a less favorable settlement than they had hoped. I thought next two or three days might shed further light.

Bidault felt we should go right ahead with Franco-US talks as to what would be done should conference fail and that public knowledge such talks were going on was helpful. "Lightning should not strike during conference but occasional rumbles of distant thunder were useful and the quicker the better." We should go ahead as rapidly as possible and get the British to come along. His talks with Eden on Saturday and British press comment, particularly Saturday's Economist and yesterday's Observer, convinced him Eden was making rapid progress in right direction. This was important from Paris viewpoint because Gaullists were particularly responsive to British thinking.

He said his troubles in Assembly were primarily due to bitterness over EDC and that this week and especially tomorrow would be unusually dangerous. It was becoming apparent to opponents that MRP and Socialist Congresses would probably result in majority for EDC unless government were overthrown.

<sup>1</sup> In telegram 4499 from Paris (May 22, in volume XIII) Ambassador Dillon reported that "Bidault also made several remarks about how ill-informed he had been in Geneva on these negotiations [regarding intervention in Indochina]. He said that Margerie had talked with Achilles but that he himself had never talked with the Under Secretary on this subject. I have the impression that he would very much like to have the Under Secretary talk with him about this early next week." (751G.00/5-2254)

<sup>2</sup> The French informed the press about the Smith-Molotov talk of May 22; for Under Secretary Smith's reaction, see telegram Dulte 122, May 26. p. 936.

Bidault expressed great confidence in Ely and was eager to hear his impressions, particularly as to seriousness of situation in delta. There must be change in commander in chief. In view of French superiority in men and weapons, something was obviously wrong when French suffered defeat after defeat. Asking if I might speak bluntly, I said any second rate general should be able to win Indochina war, if there were proper political atmosphere. Present political climate of Indochina made it very hard to produce native forces with real will to fight. Did he believe I could help with Bao Dai and was it true that he did not want Bao Dai back in Indochina?

He expressed surprise and said Bao Dai at Cannes was completely useless. Either he should stay in Evian and run his delegation or, better still, get back to Indochina and run his country. He would be glad to have us try to get him to do one or other.

He said he did not understand very clearly what was contemplated on POC and thought that if Security Council veto was followed by interim committee action, there would be less chance of unfortunate speeches by Asiatic, Latin American and Arab delegates. However, he appeared agreeable to leaving decision between the two to the experts.

Reverting to Franco-US talks, I believed it important they be held in Paris but that he and I should be kept closely informed and that decisions not be taken until we had had chance to express our views. He expressed pleasure and we agreed to keep in close personal contact about it.

He was worried by report from Bonnet that US intervention would be limited essentially to naval and air support, that there was strong feeling in Congress against use of ground forces and that joint resolution might be passed prohibiting their use on continent of Asia. Bonnet felt US military might be less interested in saving Associated States than in A-bombing China. I told him Congressional resolution authorizing naval and air support would be major accomplishment.<sup>3</sup> Navy included marines, now a major military force, but still one which benefitted from traditional feeling that they could be used in remote places without constituting an act of war. US would be unwise to commit major ground forces in Indochina and if there were real war, it would not be fought in Asia.

He said if he were not in Paris on Wednesday, he would be glad to speak on Korea and to take line that to speak of UN as belligerent was in effect to tear up charter.

SMITH

---

<sup>3</sup> For a draft Congressional resolution authorizing the President "to employ Naval and Air forces of the United States to assist friendly governments of Asia", see annex to memorandum of conversation with the President, May 19, in volume XIII.

Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 286

Memorandum of Conversation, by the Adviser to the United States Delegation (Martin)

SECRET

GENEVA, May 24, 1954.

Participants: Amb. Acikalin, President of Turkish Delegation
Mr. Vergin, Turkish Delegation
General W. B. Smith, United States Representative
Mr. Martin, U.S. Delegation

Amb. Acikalin called at his own request on General Smith at 11:15 this morning. Dr. Acikalin opened the conversation by asking as to our thinking on tactics. General Smith replied that a restricted meeting on Indochina was scheduled for today and there would probably be another one tomorrow, but he planned to ask for a Plenary on Korea for Wednesday.<sup>1</sup> General Smith said he would speak on Wednesday and noted that Amb. Acikalin was also planning to speak. General Smith emphasized his hope that as many as possible of the Allied Delegations would inscribe for the next Korean Plenary; even if all were unable to speak at the one session, the inscriptions could be carried over to the next.

General Smith then referred to his conversation with Mr. Molotov during the dinner given for him by the latter on May 22.<sup>2</sup> General Smith commented that he had been struck by Mr. Molotov's demeanor during this dinner as contrasted with that which he had customarily displayed on similar occasions when Stalin was alive. Mr. Molotov now was far more relaxed, self-possessed and confident than he had been in those days. General Smith also commented on the fact that Molotov had offered a toast to General Eisenhower, President of the United States, and to Marshal Voroshilov, "President of the Soviet Union", (Chairman of the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet). When Stalin was alive Mr. Molotov's toast had invariably been to Stalin, while the Soviet chief of state was entirely overlooked. General Smith then reviewed in some detail his conversation with Mr. Molotov, and indicated that he did not intend to discuss it with anyone else except Mr. Eden and Mr. Bidault.

Commenting later on General Smith's reference to Molotov's toast, Amb. Acikalin said that the post-Stalin regime had been very clever in making Voroshilov President. He said that Voroshilov, who represented the power of the Soviet Army, was one man Stalin had never been able to suppress.

---

<sup>1</sup> May 26.

<sup>2</sup> For a report of this conversation, see telegram Dulte 101. May 23. p. 895.

Amb. Acikalin asked General Smith whether he thought the Communists would eventually agree to elections in Korea under UN supervision. General Smith replied that at one time he thought this might be possible; but since Molotov had made a speech flatly rejecting the idea, he now felt certain that the Communists would not agree. General Smith pointed out that the Soviet Union was perfectly capable of pulling the rug out from under a satellite, but once it had publicly gone on record on a matter of this sort, its prestige was committed and it would not reverse itself.

Amb. Acikalin then outlined briefly what he planned to say at the next Korean Plenary. He said he would stress two points:

(1) The distortions and untruths in the Communists' allegations concerning the UN and US roles in Korea; and

(2) the necessity of upholding the role of the UN in any Korean settlement. The Ambassador said he would again reject the North Korean proposals and would support Dr. Pyun's proposals as a good basis for discussion. In this connection, Amb. Acikalin said he felt Dr. Pyun's argument that the Chinese Communist forces should not be put in the same category as the UN forces was a valid one. General Smith agreed and expressed approval of the line Ambassador Acikalin proposed to take in his speech.

Amb. Acikalin asked General Smith whether he thought that the Soviet Union wanted any settlement at this time. General Smith replied that he did not know: he had so often [been] deceived by the Soviets in the past. If he were to make an estimate, however, he would say that the Soviet Union is prepared to agree to a settlement which would give them some advantages. The Soviets undoubtedly have a maximum and minimum position in Indochina and will, of course, strive to obtain the maximum. It is too early to tell whether a settlement is possible in Indochina, but the Communist position should be more clearly developed within the next few days. As to Korea, the Communists appeared not to expect any settlement, and it seems probable that we will have the status quo for an indefinite period.

Amb. Acikalin's final question related to the progress being made on united action in Southeast Asia. He was particularly interested in whether the objective was to provide for some joint action in the future, after a settlement on Indochina, or whether more immediate action was contemplated. General Smith indicated that discussions on this subject were proceeding through diplomatic channels and that military staff talks would shortly commence in Washington. As to the timing of any joint action, General Smith said that presumably alternative plans would be discussed during the military staff talks. General Smith stressed that the major difference with the British on the question of united action had been one of timing; but the British were beginning to change their minds on the necessity of awaiting the outcome of the Geneva Conference, as the Communist position was already becoming clearer. On the other hand, General Smith acknowledged that the U.S. may have tried to hurry things up a little too much, and the British have a point in feeling that too precipitate action might alienate such countries as Burma which otherwise might be brought along to some form of participation. Amb. Acikalin commented that the British attitude on timing was probably also affected by the need for dealing with British political opposition groups.

On leaving Amb. Acikalin expressed appreciation for the information which General Smith had given him. General Smith said that he hoped they would be able to see him soon again.

---

396.1 GE/5-2454

Memorandum by the Special Adviser to the United States Delegation (Heath) to the Head of the Delegation (Smith)

SECRET

GENEVA, May 24, 1954.

Subject: Meeting of the Six

1. Agreed to accept the French list of questions as a basis of discussion.<sup>1</sup>

2. Agreed that France would speak first, Cambodia second, Laos third and we fourth.

3. It is possible the French may seek to revise the order of questions and move the question "international control of the execution of agreements" from fourth place to second.

4. The French Delegation is unwilling at this stage to take the position that international control should be exercised only by the United Nations. Cheyssou [Cheysson], of their Delegation, however, raised the point, if the control commission was not under the United Nations, under whose authority would it be?

5. The suggestion was made that the Six discuss in an early meeting just what real neutrals might usefully serve on the control commission. Ambassador Chauvel made the point that any effective international control would have to have several countries since the smaller countries could not provide sufficiently large contingents of control troops.

---

<sup>1</sup> See report of the Fourth Restricted Session in telegram Secto 279, May 21, p. 877.

396.1 GE/5-2554 : Telegram

Fifth Restricted Session on Indochina, Geneva, May 24, 3 p. m.: The United States Delegation to the Department of State<sup>1</sup>

SECRET

GENEVA, May 25, 1954—1 a. m.

Secto 292. Repeated information Paris 323, London 205, Tokyo 85, Moscow 83, Saigon 106, Phnom Penh 3, and Vientiane 2. Tokyo pass CINCFE. Department pass Defense. Fifth restricted session met under presidency Eden today.

Eden said it had been left last meeting conference would discuss Molotov five points and additional ones submitted by Bidault. He then read list seven-point proposal made by Bidault and asked if discussion this list would be satisfactory basis continue meetings. Points were: (1) cessation of hostilities; (2) measures concerning regular troops; (3) measures concerning irregular forces; (4) questions concerning introduction into three states further foreign troops and matériel; (5) liberation prisoners war and civilian internees; (6) international supervision execution of agreements; (7) guarantees of agreements.

Molotov said there was no great difference between his list and French and two lists were satisfactory basis discussion, but he noted inseparability political and military solution and concluded after brief discussion military problem we should pass on to political.

Bidault said what conference had agreed was priority military over political solution. He noted mixing of two in case Laos and Cambodia would cause delays settlements there since no political problem existed and solution would be forced await political settlement Vietnam.

Smith pointed out first task was to end shooting and then settle political questions later. He added only problem in Laos and Cambodia was withdrawal invading forces and implementation settlement this simple problem should not await arrangement more complex Vietnamese problem.

Bidault then gave detailed comments his own seven points as follows:

(1) on cessation hostilities, he said French had laid down principle May 8 fighting should cease under adequate security guarantees. He said France wanted war in all Indochina stopped, but we should not insist principle simultaneity cease-fire all three countries since it would be unfair to continue fighting in any state where agreement terminate

<sup>1</sup> A set of minutes of this session (IC Restricted/5) is in Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 278. The minutes indicate that the meeting convened at 3 p. m. and adjourned at 7:10 p. m. The minutes are also printed in Conférence de Genève, pp. 131-142. This telegram was transmitted in two sections.

it existed. He said France continued insist on Article 5 (section I) May 8 proposal.<sup>2</sup>

(2) Bidault said he defined "regular troops" as being all those permanently organized, noting Viet Minh had many so-called irregulars who were just as well-organized as so-called regulars. He said in Cambodia and Laos problem was simply evacuating Viet Minh, while for Vietnam France proposed delimited zones for regular forces both sides with demilitarized zones between probably required to avoid danger contact between opposing forces. He agreed there appeared little difference between French and Viet Minh proposals this point. He said Viet Minh point re passage of troops through opposing zones might be acceptable if under adequate controls and not used to permit strengthening forces or areas either side.

(3) Bidault said forces both sides not required for army or internal security should be disbanded. He said this was important since Cambodian and Laotian armies and Franco-Vietnamese troops in Vietnam would be imperiled if grouped in delimited zones and irregulars free to harass them.

(4) On introduction new forces, Bidault stated we should return to this problem when vital question of nature controls determined.

(5) France has asked immediate freeing of prisoners of war and civilian internees since May 8. This operation should be subject same controls as remainder agreement.

(6) Bidault said French had asked for effective international controls since beginning. He said France open to suggestion on structure and membership control committee. He added we could not go further into detail on nature control entity until we know details of agreements which committee would supervise. He said France suggested (for Vietnam only) mixed committee two opposing military staffs to operate under international control group.

(7) On guarantees, Bidault said France had proposed conference guarantee agreement and nine parties should consult immediately in case violation and proceed to appropriate individual or collective measures.

In conclusion, Bidault said France would not accept solution any individual point but only "package deal" on all.

Chou En-lai said he had no objection general discussion these questions but reminded conference of Molotov's point political was inseparable from military. He reserved right reply Bidault later.

Cambodian representative made point conference should not insist on simultaneity cessation hostilities all three countries since this unfair those with simpler problems. He noted Viet Minh withdrawal would solve Cambodian problem.

---

<sup>2</sup> Article 5, Part I, of proposals submitted by the French Delegation at the First Plenary Session on Indochina, May 8, read as follows: "Hostilities to cease as soon as the agreement is signed. The assembly of troops and disarmament of forces as above provided to begin not later than x days (the number to be fixed by the Conference) after the signature of the agreement." (US Verb Min/1, May 8, 1954, Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 276)

Viet Minh representative expressed following views on seven points :

(1) Cease-fire must be complete, simultaneous and as soon as possible throughout whole area ;

(2) Regular troops of both belligerent sides must be assembled into zones established in accordance with principles agreed to by conference but worked out in Indochina separately in each state ;

(3) Problem of irregulars does not arise since when agreement reached each side would have responsibility of seeing that cease-fire observed in areas where it has authority ;

(4) Essential there be complete cessation introduction into Indochina of new forces or additional military equipment, munitions, etc. Cease-fire must lead to real peace and not be respite to permit preparation for expanding war ;

(5) Control would be effected (a) by joint commissions made up of representatives of belligerents having knowledge local conditions, and (b) by international control commission composed of neutral countries. If agreement in principle can be reached here should be possible work out composition, functions and relations between types of committees ;

(6) Democratic Republic Vietnam agrees that agreements be guaranteed by states members of Geneva conference on basis guarantees will have strictly multilateral and collective character ;

(7) There seems to be general agreement regarding release of prisoners of war.

Democratic Republic Vietnam proposed that following discussion of principles and agreement thereon conference could then proceed to apply same to individual countries. Dong suggested beginning with Vietnam as most important theater of war and then proceed to Khmer and Pathet Lao. He concluded with statement advocating examination of political questions by conference and stating sooner conference occupies itself with these questions the better.

US delegate spoke favorably of restrained way in which Democratic Republic Vietnam had spoken and also regarding Molotov's clear, concise analysis of military questions before conference at last meeting. US delegate stressed importance of cessation hostilities and suggested conference vigorously explore whether progress could be made toward that end. US delegate said Dong statement encouraged optimism this respect.

Laotian delegate expressed general agreement with proposed list of questions. He emphasized importance of effective international control and fact withdrawal of foreign troops would automatically bring about cessation of hostilities in Laos.

Vietnamese delegate agreed with great desirability of cease-fire, but stated that Franco-Vietnamese declaration of April 28 and two treaties agreed to between France and Vietnam had important bearing since as result independence has been achieved by Vietnam. This problem of independence dominates events in Indochina. Vietnam has negotiated independence from France and must defend that independence against all foreign dangers. Vietnam delegate urged this question be debated.

Eden expressed hope there would be general agreement with US delegate's suggestion leading to fruitful further discussion military aspects beginning with cessation hostilities. He expressed hope discussion general principles be brief and that conference get down to application. He agreed with Democratic Republic Vietnam suggestion that application in Vietnam be first topic after general principles.

Molotov, after speaking of desirability of effective cease-fire leading to durable peace, urged direct contacts be established either in field or at Geneva between parties directly concerned. Molotov then reminded conference of agreement take French and Viet Minh proposals as basis for discussions and pointed out these deal with both military and political matters. Molotov urged political problems be taken up without delay and urged that following tomorrow's meeting on military problems that next meeting be devoted to political problems. He apparently contemplated alternate meetings on military and political problems.

Bidault stated that he could not accept proceeding to political problems until some real progress had been made on military problems. He said that to link two questions now would cause confusion and might lead to failure of conference.

Chou En-lai agreed with Soviet proposal to take up political matters day after tomorrow and also with proposal that parties directly concerned, whom he defined as France and Democratic Republic Vietnam, should make direct contact.

US delegate supported Bidault's point of view regarding delay in taking up political problems until military questions further advanced. He also stated parties at interest include not only France and Democratic Republic Vietnam but also Laos, Cambodia and Vietnam.

Viet Minh delegate advocated rotating discussion political and military problems. He accepted Soviet proposal for contacts between directly interested parties and referred to precedent already established on Dien-Bien-Phu wounded.

Bidault stated that while contacts in Geneva had been relatively satisfactory, it would be necessary to have all interested parties and not only these. He denied any agreement to take up military and political problems together and said it was wholly impractical and undesirable to go on to political problems without having at least provided for stopping bloodshed. He proposed that at tomorrow's restricted session decision might be taken regarding next session.

Molotov then made very strong brief statement to effect that agreement already reached to take up French and Viet Minh proposals made necessary discussion both military and political problems.

Eden said no one denied political problem would eventually have to be discussed, but questioned helpfulness their injection at this stage. Suggested conference reflect on this point and discuss further tomorrow.

US delegate said that rather than challenge Molotov's recollection of agreements earlier reached he proposed adjournment.

However, Cambodian delegate said that he would hope military problem would be cleared up first since Cambodia has no political problem, Cambodia independent sovereign country represented only by Cambodian Government.

Comment: Appeared Communists concerned at trend toward discussion military matters before political question and were attempting recover ground lost in this regard. Molotov appeared particularly concerned and his specific suggestion meeting following tomorrow discuss political questions discourages hope Communists might, while reserving their position, permit substantive discussion on military matters proceed without simultaneously injecting political issues. Conclusion is that Communists still playing for time on premise time is on their side in Indochina.

SMITH

---

396.1 GE/5-2454: Telegram

The Secretary of State to the United States Delegation<sup>1</sup>

CONFIDENTIAL

WASHINGTON, May 24, 1954—6:50 p. m.

Tosec 252. For Suydam. Public opinion polling results based on interviews May nineteen through twenty-two.

Sixty-nine percent say if other countries join us, US should "take part in Indochina fighting to keep Communists from taking over all of Indochina". Twenty-three percent say No, remainder no opinion. Those approving were asked should US take part in fighting even if other countries not willing. Yes twenty-one percent, No forty-four percent, No opinion four percent, total sixty-nine percent.

NATO approved by eighty-five percent, and fifty-nine percent approve "US signing agreement for defense Southeast Asia, along with such countries as Philippines, Siam, Australia".

---

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by Foster of P/PS.

Indochina truce as soon as possible desired by forty-six percent, while forty percent want fighting there kept up until Communists defeated.

Our government's handling Indochina problem approved by fifty-four percent, disapproved by sixteen percent, no opinion thirty-three percent. Dulles' handling Geneva conference approved by forty-two percent, disapproved seventeen percent, no opinion forty-one percent. On general way Dulles carrying out job, fifty-seven percent approve, ten percent disapprove, thirty-three percent no opinion compared approval fifty-six in March, sixty-one late April.

DULLES

396.1 GE/5-2154 : Telegram

The Secretary of State to the United States Delegation<sup>1</sup>

SECRET

WASHINGTON, May 24, 1954—7:49 p. m.

Tosec 254. Reference Secto 279 May 21.<sup>2</sup> We are disturbed by persistent Communist bloc attempts during restricted Indochina meeting May 21 to gain acceptance of principle that all three Associated States, to some degree at least, should be given simultaneous consideration and similar treatment.

We note with approval your statements tending to stress essential difference between Vietnam on the one hand and Laos and Cambodia on the other. In this connection we refer to Tosec 152<sup>3</sup> which states as seventh principle basic to any acceptable settlement "evacuation of Vietminh forces from Laos and Cambodia".

We are apprehensive that if Molotov and DRV delegation obtain acceptance of proposition that any single provision or group of provisions is applicable to Indochina as a whole, way will in effect have been opened for internationally recognized implantation of Vietminh elements in Laos and Cambodia.

You should continue vigorously to reject DRV contention that "differences in three States are of degree but not of kind". Our contention is that distinction is precisely one of kind and that failure to insist upon this difference will tend to extend a kind of recognition to shadow Khmer and Pathet-Lao. We must decline to be brought into discussion of Molotov's point 2, "zones for regrouping forces", as this provision might apply to Laos and Cambodia. Our position with regard to these latter two countries is that they are victims of foreign aggression and there can be no question of establishing zones in them for regroupment of enemy forces.

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by Sturm of FE/PSA. Repeated to Paris as telegram 4235 and to Saigon as telegram 2393.

<sup>2</sup> Ante, p. 877.

<sup>3</sup> Dated May 13, p. 787.

DULLES

396.1 GE/5-2454 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

CONFIDENTIAL

GENEVA, May 24, 1954—10 p. m.

Secto 291. Repeated information Paris 321, London 204, New Delhi 16. Allen (UK delegate) said in talk he had with Menon last night Menon appeared to have been very taken aback by vehemence of Chou En-lai's attack on UN during his conversation with Menon that afternoon. From Menon's account, appears Chou had largely repeated same attack on UN as in his speeches in Korean plenary sessions. Chou also stressed Chinese Communist views on linking political agreements with cease-fire which Menon said contrary Indian views.

Allen said Menon as "fiery" as ever and was vaguely talking about "standstill agreement with modifications" in Indochina, but seemed clear on desirability UN role in supervising any Indochina settlement. He said thought India would accept active role "if invited by both sides" and mentioned team composed of India and Norway.

SMITH

396.1 GE/5-2554 : Telegram

Smith-Menon Meeting, Geneva, May 24, Evening: The United States Delegation to the Department of State

TOP SECRET PRIORITY

GENEVA, May 25, 1954—11 a. m.

Dulte 108. Repeated New Delhi 17. Eyes only Ambassador. I spent three hours with Krishna Menon last night. He did most of the talking and I made very few comments. He said he was giving his own ideas and did not speak with any authority from his government. I knew, of course, that he would not have spoken as he did without Nehru's authority.

Summary of his remarks as follows :

(a) The conference should reach some agreement on Korea, if only agreement in principle that Korea should be reunited and an agreement to disagree. On procedure, therefore, even an agreement to disagree was a small step forward and not a step backward. After "two years or twenty years" of loose association and some trade and cultural exchanges, they could learn how to get along together. I asked him whether he was suggesting an international body to mediate between the United Nations and the Communists on Korea. He said no, the United Nations, while a belligerent, was also the "umbrella held over the world". In this dual capacity it could mediate with itself

(meaning that the non-participating nations of the UN could mediate between the 16 participants on the one side, and the Communists on the other).

(b) Agreement could be reached on Indochina. He estimated Chou En-lai as a man "with whom one could do business", and Molotov as "quite different and much improved".

(c) There should not be a partition in Indochina, but after a standstill the opposing forces should be gradually gathered into "pockets".

(d) It is unrealistic to think that all military problems can be settled without some corresponding political settlements. For instance, Cambodia and Laos had been invaded, but there were indigenous elements associated with the invaders. All belligerents should stand still and ground their arms while a neutral authority sorted out the invaders. Presumably the indigenous elements remaining in opposition would have little significance in an election. Also, without some political understanding, in which all three states participated, Cambodia and Laos would have no assurance against repetition of trouble.

(e) I asked (because I knew) what his ideas were about a supervisory authority. He said that to be effective it would have to be accepted by all five major participants. India, if agreed to by all and requested to do so, would probably accept the responsibility along with some European nation. He thought Norway was the only one left that might accept and be acceptable to everyone. I mentioned several others, such as Sweden, et cetera, and he said they would probably not accept or would not be acceptable to the Communist side because of close association with NATO. A Latin American country would not do because considered part of the "American Bloc". Canada, though otherwise very good, was probably out for the same reason. Thailand, though Asiatic, was considered generally aligned with the American bloc. Burma might be acceptable, but had local troubles. However, Burma might be able to provide some "token representation". The United Nations as a direct supervisory authority would, he thought, be rejected by Communist China.

(f) The only way an agreement can be reached on a supervisory authority is by private discussions among heads of the five delegations themselves. If India's services were desired, it would have to be a governmental decision; therefore India should not become a bone of contention.

He will be here until Wednesday, will probably talk with Eden again, and may ask to see me once more before he goes to New York.

SMITH

MAY 25, 1954

396.1 GE/5-2554 : Telegram

Smith-Buu Loc Meeting, Geneva, May 25, Morning: The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET

GENEVA, May 25, 1954—9 p. m.

Secto 298. Repeated information Paris 328, Saigon 109. Prince Buu Loc called on me this morning prior to his return to Paris today and then to Saigon. He asked me for my views on the conference and the situation in Indochina. I told him I would speak with the frankness of a soldier to say that with two to one numerical superiority and great superiority in armament the Franco-Vietnamese forces should be able, even under second class general, to defeat the Viet Minh provided there was a political situation and a political leadership behind the lines which would inspire the loyalty of the Vietnamese forces and their determination to win. We were prepared to increase our assistance, particularly in form of a training mission and we thought the record showed our methods of mass production achieved results whether in producing automobiles or training troops. Buu Loc said that he was sure that Bao Dai was more than ever determined not to give up the fight but did not want to return to Vietnam without bringing back the treaties establishing Vietnam's independence from France fully signed and sealed. When Bao Dai left Saigon in early April he thought this would be accomplished in two or three weeks. Actually the French were refusing to sign these treaties on the pretense that signature must await conclusion of the subordinate financial and cultural agreements, but, actually, Buu Loc thought because the French did not want to commit themselves irrevocably until they saw how the Geneva conference would turn out. He asked our assistance in bringing strongly to French attention the advantage and indeed necessity in signing these accords without further delay. I told him we favored such action and would do what we could to bring it about. Buu Loc said that it was necessary that the Vietnamese Army have more autonomy and national identity. I told him that we sympathized with that idea and that was the idea of General O'Daniel who wished to form Vietnamese divisions. Buu Loc then went on to say that with military autonomy and with assurance of our continued military assistance, Vietnam would keep up the fight even if the French should agree to an armistice or even withdrawal their military forces in Vietnam. Buu Loc felt that Vietnamese National Army supported by US could hold the southeastern quarter of the Tonkin delta. His government was convinced that it must not yield the northern delta to the Communists which would probably thereafter take over southern Vietnam.

He said he was returning promptly to Saigon and had only stayed these last few days because various delegations of Vietnamese nationalists were arriving in Paris and Geneva and had asked him to stay over and brief them. He said he was urging Bao Dai to leave the further negotiations with the French in the hands of the Vietnamese Foreign Minister and Minister Dac Khe and let Buu Loc take the other Ministers now engaged in such negotiations back to Saigon to govern and reorganize the country.

SMITH

396.1 GE/5-2554

Memorandum by the Special Adviser to the United States Delegation (Heath) to the Head of the Delegation (Smith)<sup>1</sup>

SFCRET

[GENEVA,] May 25, 1954.

There was a meeting of the Six this morning.

1) Ambassador Chauvel suggested that the program for this afternoon should be continued discussion of the seven questions on which Bidault and Dong gave their views yesterday. He hoped that the discussion could be point by point, making clear however that what was involved was agreement on all seven. We expressed general agreement.

2) Chauvel made clear that the French would most strongly resist Molotov's proposal to pass on to political questions at this time. He asked for support from other delegations. We expressed general agreement.

3) Dennis Allen, on instructions from Eden tabled two proposals (attached)<sup>2</sup> dealing with respectively cessation of hostilities and international supervision. Eden's purpose is to secure on these points agreement on certain principles and on certain immediate action. In this way he hopes to cut ground out from under Molotov by showing real progress being made on military questions and hence no reason to pass on to political problems at this time. All of the other delegations reserved their position on the Allen papers although the possibility of a meeting in Geneva of representatives of the two commands in order to work out regrouping arrangements for Viet-Nam alone seemed generally acceptable.

4) Allen took position Dong's proposal yesterday indicated Viet-minh acceptance of principle Viet-Nam to be treated separately from Cambodia and Laos. This argument was not convincing to Cambodian and Laotian representatives who continue to insist on both separation and priority for their relatively simple problems.

Attached is a draft statement<sup>3</sup> for your use today which covers the first four of the seven French questions: cessation of hostilities, regular troops, irregular troops and the supervisory authority.

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by Bonsal.

<sup>2</sup> Attachments 2 and 3 below.

<sup>3</sup> Attachment 1 below.

[Attachment 1—Draft]

Talking Paper for May 25 Indochina Session on "Cessation of Hostilities"<sup>4</sup>

1. We agreed yesterday that this afternoon we would talk about cessation of hostilities in Vietnam. I believe that we can achieve a cessation of hostilities in Vietnam if agreement can be reached on four points:

- a. Withdrawal of Vietminh forces from Laos and Cambodia.
- b. Withdrawal into specified areas of regular forces in Vietnam.
- c. Disarmament and disbanding of irregular forces.
- d. Establishment of adequate safeguards and creation of an international supervisory commission whose composition and terms of reference would permit it to function effectively.

2. On the first point I will merely repeat again what has been said so many times. Hostilities in Laos and Cambodia can be stopped by arranging for the withdrawal from those two countries of the invading Vietminh forces. I hope this arrangement can be made immediately.

3. On the second point Mr. Bidault has made a proposal for assembling all regular units in assembly areas. If such a regrouping were based on the assumption that this is a preliminary step to provide for the unification of all Vietnam under its recognized government, I would support Mr. Bidault's proposal. If on the other hand, these concentrations, in our judgment, appeared to be a preliminary to the partition of Vietnam, the United States could not associate itself with such a proposal. I will thus have to examine specific proposals which may be advanced before my delegation can take a definitive position on this question.

4. With reference to the third point the United States believes that agreements for the cessation of hostilities should include provisions for the disarmament of all irregular forces. From the statements made yesterday it appears that there is a general consensus on this point.

5. Finally it seems to us of the utmost importance that there should be effective safeguards to provide for the security of armed forces and the civil populations and to ensure against abuses of the cease-fire by either party. The United States maintains these safeguards must be exercised under competent international supervision and that the competent authority is the United Nations. To be effective it seems clear to me that adequate UN control machinery must be in place and ready to function before there is an actual cease-fire.

---

<sup>4</sup> Dated May 25. Drafted by Stelle.

If progress here indicates that an effective agreement for the cessation of hostilities may be realizable in the near future, we should take up with corresponding urgency the establishment of adequate control machinery.

Representatives of the control commission must have guarantees of unrestricted movement in and free access to all parts of the area in which peace is restored. Such a commission would also have to have sufficient personnel and logistic support to be able to discharge its responsibilities.

6. If we could reach agreement here on the four points I have outlined it would be possible to put an end to the fighting in Indochina.

[Attachment 2]

BRITISH PROPOSAL MADE AT MEETING OF SIX DELEGATIONS MAY 25
BUT NOT ACCEPTED BY OTHER DELEGATIONS

CESSATION OF HOSTILITIES

A. Agreed Principles.

1. To take place simultaneously throughout all three States as soon as the necessary military agreements are concluded.

2. To be effective for all armed forces of both sides.

3. To take effect by means of :

(a) immediate standstill of all forces ;

(b) immediate subsequent regrouping of forces into areas determined by prior agreement ; and

(c) unhindered passage for the purposes of (b) of forces of one party through areas allotted to the other.

B. Immediate Action.

1. The areas in 3(b) above to be worked out for Vietnam.

2. Representatives of the two commands to meet in Geneva for this purpose.

3. These representatives to report their findings and recommendations to the Conference as soon as possible.

4. The Conference meanwhile to proceed with examination of other military matters, beginning with arrangements for international supervision.

[Attachment 3]

BRITISH PROPOSAL MADE AT MEETING OF SIX DELEGATIONS MAY 25
BUT NOT ACCEPTED BY OTHER DELEGATIONS

SUPERVISION

A. General Principles

1. Commissions shall be set up in each of the three States.
2. These shall be composed of representatives of neutral countries not members of the present Conference to be chosen by agreement at the Conference.
3. In Vietnam mixed groups consisting of representatives of the two Commands shall also be set up to function under the authority of the Neutral Commission.

B. Immediate Action

1. Representatives of the two Commands, meeting in Geneva, to prepare plans for the constitution and operation of the proposed mixed groups in Vietnam.
2. The Conference to examine the constitution and membership of the proposed Neutral Commissions.

---

Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 286

Memorandum of Conversation, by the Adviser to the United States Delegation (Young)

[Extract]

CONFIDENTIAL

GENEVA, May 25, 1954.

Subject: Questions Relating to Southeast Asia and Korea

Participants: Prince Wan, Thailand Delegation
Walter S. Robertson, U.S. Delegation
Kenneth T. Young, Jr., U.S. Delegation

Prince Wan informed Mr. Robertson that the Government of Thailand had decided to proceed with an appeal to the United Nations regarding aggression in Cambodia and Laos and had instructed its representative in New York to discuss the Thai communication to the United Nations with Ambassador Lodge before filing it. Mr. Robertson expressed his gratification that the Thai Government had taken this action and hoped that it would be carried out as quickly as possible. Prince Wan also informed Mr. Robertson, who agreed, that it would be better to hold off discussion on certain military matters until Ambassador Sarasin had returned to Geneva, which now would be Saturday.<sup>1</sup> He explained that Ambassador Sarasin would have the benefit of the views of the Prime Minister.

---

<sup>1</sup> May 29.

396.1 GE/5-2654 : Telegram

Sixth Restricted Session on Indochina, Geneva, May 25, 3 p. m.: The United States Delegation to the Department of State<sup>1</sup>

SECRET      PRIORITY

GENEVA, May 26, 1954—1 a. m.

Secto 302. Rptd priority information Paris 329, Tokyo 86, London 206, Moscow 86, priority Saigon 110, Phnom Penh, Vientiane unnumbered. Tokyo for CINCFE. Department pass Defense. The sixth restricted session met May 25 with Molotov as chairman.

Molotov indicated there was no need to remind conferees where session had terminated on previous day. He then asked for speakers.

Molotov thanked French delegation for translation of Bidault's statement of yesterday. He had received text of Bidault's statement only upon entering Palais and might reply at next session.

Molotov indicated this session should deal matters upon which there was common view taking up later other matters on which there was no agreement.

Vietnamese representative recalled meeting supposed to examine general principles. However, in doing so it must recognize different situation in three states, Laos, Cambodia and Vietnam. First problem to be recognized was cessation of hostilities. In considering this problem a different situation exists in Vietnam than in other two states. Negotiations must be based on independence which Vietnam has acquired. If peace restored it must be done within terms of Berlin communiqué. Peace should be restored anywhere possible.

Re measures for regular troops Vietnam held problem in Laos and Cambodia relatively simple. These are sovereign states which he was certain no one at the conference would contest. Conference need only agree on withdrawal of invading troops. Problem of concentration of regular troops existed only in Vietnam. He recalled plan he had previously put forth and made following points:

a. Vietnam would not agree to any plan which would result in its partition.

---

<sup>1</sup> A set of minutes of this session (IC Restricted/6) is in Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 278. The minutes indicate that the meeting convened at 3 p. m. and adjourned at 7:15 p. m. The minutes are also printed in Conférence de Genève, pp. 143-153. Under Secretary Smith's speech, Indochina Document IC/14, May 26, is in Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 279A.

b. Vietnamese National Army set up under a legal government and there should be no agreement which would result in restrictions on Vietnamese troops.

c. Concentration of troops should take into account security.

d. It would be necessary to take measures to prevent any further aggression.

Irregular troops must be disarmed if minimum security precautions were to be met. He proposed procedure be worked out for handling this.

All delegations in agreement on release of POWs and internees. Cease-fire must be on international basis and internationally guaranteed. Such action required if Vietnam to be assured against further aggression. Withdrawal of foreign troops must be taken up after agreement reached on all other issues.

All points inter-dependent and there must be agreement on all before conference can succeed.

Eden submitted a proposal which he hoped would enable the conferees to deal with certain points and then move on to other points. He stated that his proposal related principally to international supervision. Text read :

"In order to facilitate early cessation of hostilities it is necessary to determine areas within which the forces of both sides shall be regrouped.

To this end it is proposed that :

1. Representatives of two commands should meet immediately in Geneva.
2. Their first task should be to work out regrouping areas for Vietnam.
3. They should report their findings and recommendations to conference as soon as possible.
4. Conference meanwhile should proceed with examination of other military matters, beginning with arrangements for international supervision."

DRV representative stated cessation of hostilities means complete cessation to include not only ground action but air and sea action as well. After cessation of hostilities his government would not tolerate French aircraft in the air over territory nor would they permit the French engage in warfare against their fishermen.

He stated that separation of the problem of cessation of hostilities would mean that the conference is moving away from the stated intention of general cessation of hostilities. Separate cessation of hostilities would result in a concentration of forces in areas where hostilities continued would lead to general hostilities. Then made the following points:

a. Must be recognition of the principles of readjusting areas under control each state.

b. Readjustment would mean exchange of territory taking into account actual areas controlled including population and strategic interests.

c. Each side would get territory in one piece to include complete control of the area both economic and administrative.

d. Line of demarcation should be established following the topographical line of territory to make transportation and communications possible within each state.

e. When the demarcation lines are determined each side would withdraw its troops into its own area including all air and sea forces, military facilities and police forces.

f. Territory under administration of one side would continue under the control of that side until its troops were withdrawn, immediately after which administration would be transferred to control of the other side.

In conclusion, stated that agreement must be worked out on a cease-fire and once principle is agreed to by Geneva Conference, the commanders of both sides should meet and make recommendations to the conferees on the terms of the armistice. Conferees could then agree on final terms of settlement. Pointed out that any arrangement for cease-fire must include arrangements for Khmer and Pathet Lao.

Bidault referred to proposals made for regrouping of forces, pointing out that procedures should be examined as the first step in that direction. Referred to proposals previously made for examination by the High Command on the spot stating that conference convened in Geneva and the High Command should prepare and submit recommendations to the conferees for consideration. He mentioned that representatives of High Command might appear in Geneva for consultation.

Bidault proposed that the conference speed up consideration of the problem of Laos and Cambodia pointing out that the conference must not submerge a simple problem only to consider a more complex problem.

General Smith then made the following statement:<sup>2</sup> "When we left yesterday, I was under the impression that we would talk about a cessation of hostilities in all of Indochina, with specific reference to Vietnam.

"If I understand the proposal of the Viet Minh representative, he referred to partition of Laos, Cambodia and Vietnam. I do not believe we should seriously consider this proposal. I believe that we can achieve a cessation of hostilities if agreement can be reached on three points:

<sup>2</sup> Correction in Under Secretary Smith's statement transmitted to the Department of State in telegram Secto 304. infra.

- “(1) Withdrawal into specified areas of regular forces in Vietnam;
- “(2) Disarmament and disbanding of irregular forces;
- “(3) Establishment of adequate safeguards and creation of an international supervisory commission whose composition and terms of reference would permit it to function effectively.

“On the first point, Mr. Bidault has made a proposal for assembling all regular units in assembly areas. I can wholeheartedly support Bidault's proposal.

“In the meanwhile, Mr. Eden has submitted a proposal which is preliminary to achieving a cessation of hostilities. I believe that we should proceed with an examination of it immediately.

“With reference to the second point, the US believes that agreements for cessation of hostilities should include provisions for the disarmament of all irregular forces. It was my understanding yesterday that there was agreement on this point.

“Finally, it seems to us to be essential that there be effective safeguards to provide for the security of armed forces and the civil population, and to insure against abuses of the cessation of hostilities agreement by either party. It seems unlikely that men who have been fighting for months will ground arms and keep the peace unless they are under competent international supervision. From our point of view, the most competent authority in existence for such purpose is the United Nations.

“I have addressed myself exclusively to the problem of Vietnam because it was my understanding that was our agreement. However, I shall repeat what I have said before that hostilities in Laos and Cambodia can be stopped by arranging for the withdrawal from those two countries of the invading Viet Minh forces. I would hope that this arrangement can be made without delay. I will not say anything further on this point at this time.”

Molotov concluded by stating that Eden's proposal would be circulated to permit quick consideration. He then stated that he hoped that he would be expressing a common view if he proposed recess.

Following recess, Molotov proposed certain amendments to Eden's draft text: In preamble, addition of words “and simultaneous” between “early” and “cessation”; in paragraph 1, addition of the phrase “in order that this would contribute also to the establishment of contacts between interested parties on the spot”; and paragraph 2, to read “their task should be to work out the regrouping areas for the two sides and first of all for Vietnam”. He had no amendments for paragraph 3 but thought that paragraph 4 was hardly necessary because it dealt with matters which related to conference as a whole and not to immediate problem.

Bidault supported Eden's proposal but Cambodian delegate asked whether it applied to all Indochinese states or just to Vietnam. Eden replied that preamble intended to be general but that paragraph 2 was for Vietnam. To this, Cambodian entered reservation in order "not to mix up those things which should be kept distinct". Furthermore, he could not accept any of the Soviet amendments.

General Smith thought that British delegate's proposal extremely well-drafted and got by two opposing positions now occupied without doing violence to either and offered possibility of progress. On other hand, he thought that amendment to paragraph 1 proposed by chairman was sensible and reasonable. Facilitating their contacts in the field would help work at Geneva and US delegation could accept this. The other suggestions he would find too difficult to accept and believe so would other delegations. He would explain his reasons to his colleagues. US delegation had made its position very clear regarding situation it believed existed in Laos and Cambodia. Yet in effort to be helpful and contribute to work of the conference, the delegation had gone along with examination of various proposals but making it very apparent that it was not abandoning its position. British proposal would make it possible to make progress without surrendering this point. He suggested conference accept Molotov's amendment to paragraph 1 and eliminate the others, namely to preamble and paragraph 2, returning to original draft. This would permit conference to proceed without further obstacle or damage to US position.

Bidault then stressed that British proposal must be applicable only to Vietnam, that it was only there that a regrouping of military forces was required. He was agreeable to establishment of contacts at Geneva and in the field.

Vietnam delegate expressed view that first sentence of British proposal prejudged situation in Cambodia and Laos. He supported Bidault's statement and requested specification that first sentence where reference was made to regrouping of forces only applied to Vietnam. He could not agree to Soviet addition of "simultaneous". Cessation of hostilities should occur wherever possible without delay. Soviet amendment to paragraph 2 by generalizing concept prejudged by its terms result of any regrouping. As a final remark, he stressed concern with which Vietnam nation views possibility that conference may produce partition of national territory. This was contrary to wishes of Vietnam people and he was duly bound to request conference to give its assurances that regrouping of forces would not result in partition.

Eden supported General Smith's analysis of meaning of his text and proposed amendments. He had simply tried to put down greatest common measure of agreement without prejudging any issues. He had not tried to deal with that of Laos and Cambodia but simply with great task of work regarding Vietnam which sooner or later conference had to deal with. He expressed hope that agreement could be reached on Molotov's amendment to first paragraph and that his other amendments would not be pressed.

Molotov offered to withdraw his amendments excepting that to paragraph 1 but added that in order to avoid controversial issues he coupled this with proposal that text be restricted to paragraph 1. If necessary, paragraph 3 could remain as new paragraph 2, although its content was obvious.

Bidault replying first to Vietnam statement, assured him that conference had not been convened to tear apart unity of Vietnamese nation. He then expressed view that suppression paragraphs 2 and 4 from Eden proposal would render document null and void. He proposed that if whole text with Soviet amendment to paragraph 1 could not be accepted, that time be taken to ponder the problem. It might be advisable to devote tomorrow to full examination of all proposals made so far in order to understand complete situation where there was agreement and where not.

Cambodian delegate then announced it was his duty to state that he could not accept UK proposal since in some points it applied to Cambodia. It was his understanding that today was to be devoted to Vietnam. He appreciated Eden's efforts at conciliation but was obliged to make firm reservations regarding any decisions which might be taken affecting his country.

A final effort by General Smith to obtain agreement to Eden's proposal with Soviet amendment to paragraph 1 only impelled Molotov to accept Bidault's suggestion that tomorrow be devoted to clarification of delegation's views on this and other proposals.

Following agreement of routine communiqué, next restricted meeting Indochina phase agreed for Friday, May 27.<sup>3</sup>

Comment: It is clear from foregoing that separate treatment Laos and Cambodia remains fundamental issue on which Communists despite procedural dialectics are not yet prepared to compromise. DRV proposal is clear bid for partition. All delegations excepting Laos and Cambodia have agreed to contact between representatives High Commands both in Geneva and in field.

SMITH

---

<sup>3</sup> Date of next restricted meeting, Indochina phase, given incorrectly; it should read Thursday, May 27. (Corrected in telegram Secto 304, infra.)

396.1 GE/5-2654 : Telegram

Sixth Restricted Session on Indochina, Geneva, May 25, 3 p. m.: The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET      PRIORITY

GENEVA, May 26, 1954—11 a. m.

Secto 304. Repeated information priority Paris 331, priority Saigon 111, Tokyo 88, London 207, Moscow 87, Phnom Penh, Vientiane. Department pass Defense. Tokyo pass CINCFE. Reference Secto 302,<sup>1</sup> repeated foregoing addressees. Correct first quoted statement by General Smith to read as follows:

"When we left yesterday I was under the impression that we would talk today about a cessation of hostilities in all of Indochina, with specific reference to examining the problem of Vietnam.

"If I understand the proposal of the Viet Minh representative, he is now proposing to partition Laos, Cambodia and Vietnam. I do not believe we should seriously consider this proposal. I believe, however, that we can achieve a cessation of hostilities if agreement can be reached on three general points: These are (1) withdrawal into specified areas of regular forces in Vietnam; (2) disarmament and disbanding of irregular forces; (3) establishment of adequate safeguards and creation of an international supervisory commission whose composition and terms of reference would permit it to function effectively.

"On the first point, M. Bidault has made a proposal for assembling all regular units in Assembly areas. If such a regrouping is a preliminary step to provide for the ultimate unification of all Vietnam under its recognized government, I can support M. Bidault's proposal. However, we will want to examine the specific suggestions which may be advanced.

"In the meanwhile, Mr. Eden has submitted proposal which is an inevitable preliminary to achieving a cessation of hostilities. I believe that we should accept it and proceed with it immediately.

"With reference to the second point, the US believes that agreements for cessation of hostilities should include provisions for the disarmament of all irregular forces. From the statements made yesterday, it appears that there is a general consensus of opinion on this point.

"Finally, it seems to us to be essential that there be effective safeguards to provide for the security of armed forces and the civil population, and to insure against abuses of the cessation of hostilities agreement by either party. It seems unlikely that men who have been fighting for months will ground arms and keep the peace unless they are under competent international supervision. From our point of view the most competent authority in existence for such purpose is the United Nations. To be effective, it seems clear to me that adequate UN control machinery must be in place and ready to function at the time of actual cessation of hostilities.

"I have addressed myself exclusively to the problem of Vietnam because it was my understanding that was our agreement. However I shall repeat what I have said before that the situations of Laos and Cambodia present a special case, and hostilities in Laos and Cambodia can be stopped by arranging for the withdrawal from those two countries of the invading Viet Minh forces. I would hope that this arrangement can be made without delay. I will not say anything further on this point at this time."

<sup>1</sup> Supra.

The foregoing text being circulated to other delegations.

Additional correction: Date of next restricted meeting Indochina phase given incorrectly Secto 302. Should read Thursday May 27.

SMITH

396.1 GE/5-2454 : Telegram

The Secretary of State to the United States Delegation<sup>1</sup>

TOP SECRET      PRIORITY      WASHINGTON, May 25, 1954—4: 53 p. m.

Tedul 121. Reference Dultes 103<sup>2</sup> and 107.<sup>3</sup> Your talk with Bidault effectively clears way for developing direct personal contact between you and Bao Dai.<sup>4</sup> Reports your further conversations with Bao Dai will assist us in decisions which may have to be taken quickly.

Despite rapid course of events in Vietnam, we fear that Bao Dai and Buu Loc government lack sense urgency and believe we should do all possible to encourage them to initiate prompt and radical action.

As indicated, FYI portion Tedul 110<sup>5</sup> was intended serve only as background and not as subject specific discussion.

DULLES

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by Sturm of FE/PSA. Repeated to Paris as telegram 4244 and to Saigon as telegram 2403.

<sup>2</sup> Dated May 24, p. 900.

<sup>3</sup> Dated May 24, p. 902.

<sup>4</sup> Smith reported in telegram Dulte 115, May 26, that "through intermediary appointed by Bao Dai I have suggested a conversation with Bao Dai but have indicated this might take place after French Assembly debate on Indochina now scheduled for June 1st." (396.1 GE/5-2654)

<sup>5</sup> Dated May 22, p. 892.

Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 242 : Telegram

The Secretary of State to the United States Delegation<sup>1</sup>

TOP SECRET      PRIORITY      WASHINGTON, May 25, 1954—6: 51 p. m.

Tedul 123. Limit distribution. Hope your talk with Eden resulted in British agreement go along on Thai initiative in SC,<sup>2</sup> since we are eager begin proceedings without delay.

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by Popper of UNA/UNP. Repeated to USUN as telegram 588.

<sup>2</sup> Regarding the Thai decision to make an appeal to the United Nations, see the memorandum of conversation, p. 919.

We would expect Khoman would be able to send Thai letter raising this matter in SC before end of week, and that SC meetings could be scheduled, say, for Wednesday, Thursday and Friday next week (June 2, 3 and 4). If SC action could be completed that quickly, and assuming Soviet veto, we would expect General Assembly might meet on or shortly after June 15th.

Would appreciate it if you could ask Eden to request Dixon in New York to cooperate to extent possible in arranging for SC proceedings.

We will want to approach Indians as soon as we know Eden has consented.

DULLES

---

751G.00/5-2554 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

TOP SECRET

GENEVA, May 25, 1954—8 p. m.

Dulte 111. Eyes only Secretary. Eden showed me today in confidence a Cabinet message from Burma which stated that Burma was willing if called upon to participate as a member of a supervisory commission in Indochina, although they could contribute little in the way of troops. It went on to state that Burma was also prepared, in the event the Geneva conference failed, to join a Southeast Asian security pact.

SMITH

---

Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 246 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

CONFIDENTIAL

GENEVA, May 25, 1954.

Dulte 112. Eden has just informed me officially that although the British Government has serious misgivings about the timing of the Thai appeal to the UN, they will nevertheless go along with us if we decide that it must be done at this time. Eden gave me a memorandum of the following questions for consideration. I answered most of these informally and apparently to his general satisfaction in accordance with previous correspondence with the Department, but we agreed that Dixon, Lodge and the French representative should get together in New York and arrive at a coordinated position with respect to the considerations raised in the British memorandum.

1. I told him that our thought was that the appeal should go to the Security Council and then to the Interim Committee but I did not think we would have any objection were it to go direct to a special session of the General Assembly, although I thought the French might object.

2(a) I had no ideas with regard to the problem of Chinese representation.

(b) We felt that the appeal should be direct from Thailand to the United Nations and that the Associated States should not be brought into the picture until later.

3(a) Draft resolution was being worked out by Thailand. Subsequently, subcommission would visit the other areas which might invite them.

(b) Lodge, Pearson and associates could work out the proposed composition of the subcommittee. That proposed in the British memorandum was not far away from our own ideas.

4. Could not answer it here.

5. It would probably be difficult to control debates in the General Assembly and the French are worried about various issues of colonialism being dragged in, particularly Morocco and Tunisia.

6. We believe the effect would be good here, providing the appeal was divorced entirely from the Geneva Conference and was direct from Thailand to the United Nations.

7. The Peace Observation Commission is probably our best chance of getting anything like genuinely neutral supervision later in the Associated States.

8. We believe that Thai appeal to UN should proceed as rapidly as possible and be completely divorced from the Geneva Conference at this time.

Following is text of British memorandum :

“Questions for consideration with respect to the proposed appeal by Thailand to the United Nations.

1. Should the appeal go direct to a special session of the General Assembly or should it go first to the Security Council and then to the General Assembly in accordance with the United Action for Peace procedure?

2.(a) How should the problem of Chinese representation be handled?

(b) What, if any, governments or authorities would be invited to participate in the debates in the Security Council and the General Assembly? Possible claims to appear by Laos, Cambodia, Viet-Nam and Viet-Minh, should be considered.

3.(a) What should be the exact terms of the draft resolution? For example, consideration should be given to phrase “the general area of Thailand”? What areas should the sub-commission visit?

(b) Would the proposed composition of the sub-commission—India, New Zealand, Pakistan, Sweden and Uruguay—be satisfactory or feasible? If not, what should be its composition?

4. What votes in support of the draft resolution would there be in the Security Council and the General Assembly? Would there be a sufficient majority in the latter?

5. Would it be possible to control the debates especially in the General Assembly?

6. What would be the effect of the debates on the position in Indo-China and on the Geneva Conference?

7. What would be the relations between the functions of the sub-commission and any agreement on Indo-China that may emerge from the Geneva Conference?

8. What would be the timing of proceedings in the United Nations, especially in relation to the Geneva Conference?"

SMITH

---

396.1 GE/5-2554 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

TOP SECRET

GENEVA, May 25, 1954—9 p. m.

Dulte 113. Limit distribution. In conversation with Eden this morning, he showed me in great confidence, message from High Commissioner in India,<sup>1</sup> the text of which is given below, which is illuminating and shows some of the considerations which are conditioning United Kingdom thinking regarding our maneuvers with respect to Southeast Asia :

"1. Indians realise that if Geneva Conference fails, dangerous situation will arise throughout Southeast Asia and the Far East, carrying with it whole series of alarming possibilities. These are seen as ranging in order of gravity from large scale Western intervention in Indochina (involving another 'Korean' campaign with every risk that this time the conflict could not be localised) to abandonment of Indochina, but formation under Western auspices of a collective defense organization designed to safeguard neighboring territories. In Indian eyes, former at best, would be a tragedy, not least for the people of Indochina themselves; at worst, it would be suicidal as opening way for general war. Latter might enable peace to be preserved for a while, but in Indian estimation, further clash would only be a matter of time. And either course would involve renewed Western domination in a large part of Southeast Asia which would not only offend Asian nationalist sentiment everywhere, but would, in Indian view, be a futile and self-defeating policy. They are convinced, indeed, that peace can never be established on any lasting basis, unless Western powers keep their hands off Asia and leave Asian countries on a basis of full independence to settle their affairs amongst themselves.

"2. But while such considerations may be at back of their minds, Indians have not yet brought themselves to think seriously of possibility of failure of Geneva Conference. It is all-important to them that it should succeed, and they view progress to date, though slow, as not unsatisfactory. They feel that there is now good hope of a cease-fire. Once that stage is reached, the rest should, in their view, be much easier, even though negotiations for a political settlement are bound to be prolonged.

---

<sup>1</sup> Sir Alexander Clutterbuck.

"3. In the above circumstances, any new deal between the United States and Siam on the lines indicated in your telegram would be regarded here as quite disastrous. It would be looked on as a new attempt by the United States to sabotage the Geneva Conference and one which almost certainly would have that result. All hopes built on present negotiations would be shattered and it would be felt that last opportunity for peaceful settlement has been wantonly thrown away. American stock, already very low here, would sink to rock-bottom and political reactions would be very serious.

"4. Apart from impact on Geneva Conference, proposal would be bound to cause indignation from India's own standpoint. With United States/Pakistan deal on one side, and United States/Siamese deal on the other, India would feel herself being contained by United States and her associates; distrust and suspicion of United States motives would be magnified, and there would be serious risk of anti-American feeling taking an anti-Western form.

"5. From the angle of this post, therefore, I must hope that advantage will be taken of any opportunity that arises to impress on Americans extreme unwisdom of pursuing any such proposal while Geneva Conference is in session. If Conference fails, whole situation will no doubt have to be considered de novo, and this might be part of the defensive measures that may then become necessary. But if trouble here is to be avoided, it is essential that current negotiations should be given every chance before there is any airing of measures which, from Indian standpoint, are bound to appear provocative to the other side."

SMITH

MAY 26, 1954

110.11 DU/5-2654 : Telegram

Smith-Eden-Chauvel Meeting, Geneva, May 26, Morning: The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET      PRIORITY

GENEVA, May 26, 1954—8 p. m.

Dulte 121. Repeated information Paris 338, Saigon 118, London 211. This morning Eden and Chauvel, in Bidault's absence, and I discussed tactics for next few days, particularly with respect to Laos and Cambodia and question international control.

Eden wondered at what point we are going to stand on Cambodia and Laos. Their problem was separate but complementary to that in Vietnam and he saw no reason why simultaneous cease-fire was in itself objectionable. He thought an acceptable formula would:

(1) Cease-fire, (2) withdrawal of troops into areas near frontier and (3) withdrawal of all foreign forces within six months. He recognized danger of this was that foreign troops were not now concentrated and that we could have no confidence they would be gotten out of country in absence of effective supervision.

Chauvel said France did not consider the proposal of a simultaneous cease-fire throughout Indochina to be one which we could oppose in principle. Moreover, it was likely to happen anyhow. The identity of regular Viet Minh battalions in Cambodia and Laos has been definitely established, and they are known to be elements of regular Viet Minh divisions. Chauvel believed these forces must be regrouped on Vietnamese territory and not on Laotian or Cambodian territory. French also had heard rumors Communists might be less difficult on Laos and Cambodia than on Vietnam. Cease-fire could be simultaneous in all three but certainly restoration of peace would not.

I agreed with Chauvel's views but said I would need further instructions. We must assume bad faith on Communist side and must insure that Communists did not profit by armistice period to strengthen and extend their position. It would be difficult to oppose proposal for simultaneous cease-fire but composition and effectiveness of supervisory control was basic problem. Chauvel said Viet Minh had yesterday agreed to give French written copy of their proposal but were still stalling hour by hour and it might be somewhat different when finally received. It would be desirable if West could make counterproposal at next meeting.

On question of controls, Eden said Krishna Menon had indicated India would participate in military supervision of regrouping. Presumably India neither would nor should act alone. Norway and probably Burma might be acceptable and might agree.

I said I had just been talking to Menon and raised question under what authority India would be acting if a participant. Would it be UN or under terms of reference from Geneva conference, perhaps referred to UN? Contingent of Indian army acting under international command was one thing, while Indian contingent acting under direct control of Nehru and Indian Government quite another. (Some influential US opinion would consider latter would mean turnover of Indochina to Communists.) Menon had said India did not rent out its army. I said neither did we but we had on occasion placed ours under international control where interests of world required. Eden did not think Menon would object to UN auspices but doubted Chinese would accept it. Menon had said that the UN might be brought into picture by conference here agreeing on composition of international authority and informally approaching agreed-upon nations to ascertain whether they would be willing to serve. These nations might thereupon reply that they would so serve providing they were asked to do so by UN.

This would automatically induce some element of UN supervision. Chauvel said French had no definite views and asked whether group of India, Norway and Burma would be agreeable to us. I said we had strong views on what should be established for fully effective supervision and that suggested grouping would not be fully satisfactory to us but might be best we could get. There was some advantage in making Asians police their own back yard. Also somebody would have to provide a considerable military force.

Chauvel asked whether some continuing agency set up by this conference could provide suitable auspices. I said that would be dangerous in diluting and confusing authority of UN. Chauvel suggested we give Communists burden of making first proposal. Eden felt when conference adjourned it would probably have to leave some ad hoc body in existence anyway. I stated that Menon seemed to want some connection with UN and seemed to be searching for formula "such as under general UN guidance."

It was agreed that tripartite working group would meet this afternoon on problems of troop withdrawal from Laos and Cambodia and international control, including alternatives as to composition, and that we would meet again tomorrow morning. It was also agreed Lodge, Hoppenot and Dixon would be asked to work together in New York on devising quickest and most effective UN procedures for handling Thailand appeal.

I objected strongly to continuing leaks on restricted sessions and recalled Molotov had said we might as well be in open sessions. French maintained embarrassed silence. Eden wished to think it over. We have got to do something about present disorderly and distorted leakage.

SMITH

---

396.1 GE/5-2654 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET      PRIORITY

GENEVA, May 26, 1954—5 p. m.

Secto 309. Repeated information Paris 336, Saigon 115. In immediately forthcoming Indochina sessions we will undoubtedly be discussing question of international supervision. I need guidance urgently on following points: <sup>1</sup>

1. Do we stick to the position we have so far taken that international controls should be under UN auspices? If so, what and how direct should relations to UN be?

---

<sup>1</sup> Department of State reply contained in telegram Tosec 288, May 28, p. 966.

2. If we accept control not under UN auspices for Vietnam should we insist on UN supervision of Laos and Cambodia?

3. If we stick to UN controls what will be our maximum and our minimum positions with regard to the composition of a control commission?

4. If we agree to supervision not by the UN what would be our maximum and our minimum positions with regard to the composition of the control body?

5. What should be our suggestions as to the authority to which a non-UN commission should report?

6. What should be our suggestions on financing such commission? Our estimate here is that the French will not propose, but might go along with a proposal for control machinery under the UN. The Laotians will go along with the French. The Cambodians will be adamant for UN control. The Vietnamese will want UN machinery but may possibly agree to other international supervision. The English will probably push for non-UN controls. The Communists will, of course, oppose UN control.

SMITH

---

790.5/5-2654 : Telegram

The Secretary of State to the United States Delegation<sup>1</sup>

TOP SECRET      NIACT      WASHINGTON, May 26, 1954—6:07 p. m.

Tedul 126. Re Dulte 117.<sup>2</sup> UK military have informed our JCS of receipt of message from Eden yesterday indicating he had accepted interpretations set forth in your memo;<sup>3</sup> that USDel Geneva had been informed; and that it was now agreed talks could proceed as soon as possible.

Our JCS would like to issue invitations Thursday<sup>4</sup> for five-power talks to begin Washington about June 2 and would appreciate urgent confirmation way is now clear.<sup>5</sup>

DULLES

---

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by MacArthur.

<sup>2</sup> In telegram Dulte 117, May 26, Smith reported that "Eden has forwarded my memorandum to London and is confident it will be well received. He hopes talks will start as quickly as possible and so do I. Can we not get on with them?" (790.5/5-2554)

<sup>3</sup> See telegrams Tedul 107, May 22, and Dulte 100, May 23, pp. 888 and 900, respectively.

<sup>4</sup> May 27.

<sup>5</sup> The JCS issued the invitation on May 27 for talks to begin June 3, and designated Adm. Robert B. Carney, Chief of Naval Operations, as Senior U.S. Representative to the talks.

110.11 DU/5-2454 : Telegram

The Secretary of State to the United States Delegation<sup>1</sup>SECRET      PRIORITY
NO DISTRIBUTION

WASHINGTON, May 26, 1954—7:39 p. m.

Tedul 127. Eyes only for Under Secretary from Secretary. Re Dulte 105.<sup>2</sup> If your answer reflects merely personal preference I can well understand it. However, we want to be sure that you feel that the substitution mentioned would not be misinterpreted by other friendly Foreign Ministers who are there as a slight to them and also that you feel that it would not be interpreted as U.S. writing off the conference or effort to sabotage conference. We do not want to be blamed for causing conference failure. We assume that if you do plan return as suggested, you would get here June 7th or 8th, and the maximum advance notice should be given so as to avoid impression that your departure is related to some particular event. On receipt of your reply<sup>3</sup> I will take matter up with the President.

Incidentally, I find at all quarters agreement on brilliant job you are doing.

DULLES

---

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by the Secretary of State.

<sup>2</sup> In telegram Tedul 111, May 24, Secretary Dulles informed Under Secretary Smith that he had planned for some time to make a trip of the Middle West and West beginning on June 9 and that he "would hope very much you could be back by then as would be reluctant to leave Department for several days at this juncture without you." (110.11 DU/5-2454) In reply, Smith, in telegram Dulte 105, May 24, informed the Secretary that "nothing would make me happier. I see no reason why this could not be done." (110.11 DU/5-2454)

<sup>3</sup> See Dulte 123, May 27, p. 940.

751G.00/5-2654 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

TOP SECRET      PRIORITY

GENEVA, May 26, 1954—8 p. m.

Dulte 120. Repeated information Paris 337, Saigon 117. Eyes only Ambassadors. Re Dulte 109, repeated Paris 325, Saigon 107.<sup>1</sup> My Dulte 109 should have said "I would like to reinforce last four numbered paragraphs of Dillon's message<sup>2</sup> on independence Associated States".

---

<sup>1</sup> In telegram Dulte 109, May 25, Under Secretary Smith reported that he "would like to reinforce the last paragraph of Dillon's message on independence Associated States. I believe that it is of the utmost importance to have prompt signature of the two basic treaties. Aside from the fact that we are in a false position here until these are signed, it is probable that when they are signed Bao Dai will return promptly and, to the extent his energy and ability permit, will try to assume national leadership." (751G.00/5-2554)

<sup>2</sup> For telegram 4514 from Paris, May 24, see volume XIII.

Am convinced that we should not continue to press at this time for statement granting Associated [States] right of withdrawal from French Union, as this would not produce sufficiently favorable effects in Vietnam to counterbalance undoubtedly adverse effects including diminished support French Assembly and public opinion for immediately required military measures in Indochina.

Urgent thing now is to get the two basic treaty documents signed.

SMITH

---

396.1 GE/5-2654 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

TOP SECRET

GENEVA, May 26, 1954—8 p. m.

Dulte 122. Eyes only Secretary; Paris 339 eyes only Ambassador. Reference Dulte 107 repeated Paris 322.<sup>1</sup> Following my confidential talk with Bidault on Monday, he and Margerie, with incredible stupidity, gave Baeyens generalized account of what I had told them in complete secrecy about my dinner with Molotov, including Molotov's groping for word and my supplying it.

Baeyens, who tells everything, repeated this to AFP correspondent who used it. Fortunately his remarks on substance were only banalities which did no particular harm, but that one touch made it obvious to Molotov that I had personally described our conversation to Bidault. Word comes back from Russians through US correspondent that Molotov is greatly annoyed, and I think the incident has probably destroyed our small base of contact.

This demonstrates practical impossibility of speaking to French with anything like real frankness about such matters, and I will unfortunately have to act accordingly in future. I have so advised Bidault.

SMITH

---

<sup>1</sup>Dated May 24, p. 902.

---

396.1 GE/5-2654 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

TOP SECRET

GENEVA, May 26, 1954—8 p. m.

Secto 313. Repeated information Paris 340, Saigon 119. Re Sectos 261<sup>1</sup> and 265.<sup>2</sup> Member USDel today told Ngo Dinh Luyen, Bao Dai's personal emissary, that General Smith has no comment for present regarding various questions as to US action in certain contingencies (question referred mainly to US intervention if French pull out, to US direct assistance for Vietnamese Army and US views on political developments in Vietnam including particularly Bao Dai's alleged project of replacing Buu Loc with Ngo Dinh Diem).

---

<sup>1</sup>Telegram Secto 261, May 20, contained a report of a conversation between Under Secretary Smith and Ngo Dinh Luyen on May 18. For memorandum of conversation, see p. 843.

<sup>2</sup>Dated May 20, p. 863.

Ngo Dinh Luyen was told Under Secretary appreciates contact established and that in addition Under Secretary believes, if Bao Dai concurs, that further meeting between Bao Dai and Under Secretary might be useful in event Bao Dai plans to be in Geneva neighborhood. Date of such meeting tentatively suggested as late next week after forthcoming French Assembly debate.

We have endeavored impress Ngo Dinh Luyen with USDel view that (a) nothing should be done to weaken French determination to react vigorously in present military emergency in Tonkin and (b) major importance that all positive elements on free world side (including Bao Dai) should be united and move forward in most coordinated fashion possible.

Ngo Dinh Luyen tells us decision as to Ngo Dinh Diem's departure for Saigon not yet firm.

SMITH

---

Eisenhower Library, Dulles papers, "Indochina": Telegram

The Head of the United States Delegation (Smith) to the Secretary of State

TOP SECRET      PERSONAL AND PRIVATE      [GENEVA,] 26 May 1954.

DEAR FOSTER: Dag Hammarskjold came to see me this evening on pretext of courtesy call. He is leaving tonight for New York and will confer with Cabot Lodge and Dixon on Friday<sup>1</sup> regarding the Thailand proposal. He had just been with Eden, who told him the British position which I have already given you. Dag Hammarskjold does not think the Thai proposal will weaken the U.N. if properly handled, but he is worried about tactics, not only in the Security Council but in the General Assembly, with Mrs. Pandit in the chair. He said with some hesitancy, that he found it difficult to discuss things seriously with Cabot Lodge, who did not seem to be well informed on details and who seemed unwilling to transcend U.S. internal political factors. Dag Hammarskjold said he confined himself strictly to proper channels, to avoid arousing resentment, but on this matter, the timing and impact of which is of so much importance, he would hope after his Friday conference to have a private talk directly with you in order to decide on strategy. He could come to Washington Monday afternoon, quite quietly. I told him I would pass this on to you through private channels and that if you were willing you could get word to him by phone Friday afternoon, or Saturday morning. I am inclined to think this would be useful and we transmit it through Allen Dulles' channel as I do not want anyone here to know about it.<sup>2</sup>

<sup>1</sup> May 28.

SMITH

---

<sup>2</sup> Allen W. Dulles informed the Department of State at 6:22 p. m. on May 26 that he had received the above message from Smith and that Smith wanted the Secretary to see it that night. (Eisenhower Library, Dulles papers, Telephone conversations) A notation on the source text by O'Connor indicates that the Secretary saw the letter. Concerning the Dulles-Hammarskjold meeting, June 2, see p. 1012.

MAY 27, 1954

751G.00/5-2754

Memorandum by the Special Adviser to the United States Delegation (Heath) to the Head of the Delegation (Smith)<sup>1</sup>

SECRET

[GENEVA,] May 27, 1954.

Subject: Meeting of the Six Delegations May 27.

1) At this morning's meeting the French Delegation submitted an entirely new paper<sup>2</sup> regarding establishment of contact between military commands for the determination of regrouping zones in Viet-Nam. Under general principles, the paper reproduces the language of the Viet Minh proposal for exchanges of territory based on a variety of political, demographic, and economic principles. French military and political experts (Major Debarnot and Cheysson) spoke briefly in favor of the proposal. The Vietnamese Delegate took strong issue with the proposed acceptance of the Viet Minh language which he said would merely lead to partition; (in this he was conservative; acceptance of the Viet Minh principles would very probably give to the Viet Minh a firm springboard from which they could rapidly absorb the entire country). It was finally agreed that if the French make their proposal, they will include only strictly military considerations plus a positive statement against any arrangements leading to partition.

2) This current French proposal takes as a point of departure Eden's May 25 proposal.

3) The British paper<sup>3</sup> providing for the regrouping in Viet-Nam of Viet Minh troops in Laos and Cambodia was read but was not given thorough consideration. It appears that the problem of the simultaneity of the cessation of hostilities is recognized to be a practical rather than a theoretical one.

---

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by Bonsal.

<sup>2</sup> Attachment 1 below.

<sup>3</sup> Attachment 2 below.

4) The Cambodian Delegation strongly restated the well known Cambodian position regarding the necessity for a withdrawal of all Viet Minh forces from Cambodia.

[Attachment 1]

CONFIDENTIAL

FRENCH PROPOSAL FOR THE SETTLEMENT OF THE MILITARY PROBLEM OF VIETNAM

(Further proposals will be put forward in the immediate future for Laos and Cambodia and it is understood that nothing agreed for any one area will prevent the entry into force of a cease-fire in all areas simultaneously.)

1. Representatives of Commanders-in-Chief of the two parties will meet at Geneva on _____.

2. They will examine, in the first place, the demarcation of the zones of regrouping in Vietnam.

3. They will present their recommendations and observations to the Conference.

4. It will be their task to propose the basis upon which the regroupment will be carried out, taking into account the following two principles: (a) the regroupment must not lead to a dismemberment of Vietnam, and (b) the regroupment has for its objective the reestablishment of peace and security in Vietnam.

5. If it should be considered necessary, they will be able to request the Conference to define such points as they consider useful.

6. During this time the Conference will continue to study other problems relative to the peace in Indochina.

[Attachment 2]

CONFIDENTIAL

PROPOSAL OF THE U.K. DELEGATION

In order to facilitate the early and simultaneous cessation of hostilities [~~it is necessary to determine the areas within which the forces of both sides shall be regrouped.~~

~~To this end~~<sup>4</sup> it is proposed that:

1. Representatives of the two commands should meet immediately in Geneva in order that this should also contribute to the establishment of contacts between the two parties on the spot.

2. Their first task should be to work out the regrouping areas for Vietnam [~~the two sides and first of all for Vietnam~~].<sup>4</sup>

3. They should report their findings and recommendations to the conference as soon as possible.

<sup>4</sup> Brackets in the source text.

4. The conference meanwhile should proceed with examination of other military matters, beginning with arrangements for international supervision.

---

396.1 GE/5-2754 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET      PRIORITY

GENEVA, May 27, 1954—10 a. m.

Dulte 123. Eyes only Secretary. Reference Tedul 127.<sup>1</sup> I would like to reserve final recommendation till Monday or Tuesday of next week. Believe it very likely that following ten days will be the critical period. As your own departure caused some comment here, and as Molotov, Eden and Bidault apparently intend to stay on through next ten days or so, my own view and that of Phleger, to whom I have talked privately, is that I should also remain. I don't imply that Murphy and others could not do quite as good or even a better job.

The probability is that general interpretation, no matter what was said, would be that we had written off the conference and were pulling out by degrees, or even that we were sabotaging at critical moment.

If you were leaving the US, it would, of course, be different. On the other hand, I do not think you should cancel out this very important trip. If you feel you cannot maintain adequate direction by phone, et cetera, and that I should be there, possibly I could come home for period of your trip with understanding that I was returning in few days, leaving Robertson to carry on. Trouble is that Phleger, whose judgment is very valuable, will be leaving at same time. I have reasonable excuse for short trip home as I was scheduled to receive honorary degree at New York University June 9.

SMITH

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated May 26, p. 935.

---

110.11 DU/5-2754 : Telegram

The Secretary of State to the United States Delegation<sup>1</sup>

SECRET      NIACT

WASHINGTON, May 27, 1954—10:22 a. m.

Tedul 131. Re Dulte 124.<sup>2</sup>

1. Our military authorities are today inviting representatives of other four powers to meet Washington June 3.

2. This invitation is for moment secret because Australians last

---

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by MacArthur. Repeated to London as telegram 6374, to Paris as telegram 4276, to Canberra as telegram 224, and to Wellington from Canberra as telegram 174.

<sup>2</sup> In telegram Tedul 124, May 27, Smith said he urgently confirmed "my own view way has been cleared for several days for beginning Five-Power talks. Eden has same view and confirms despatch instructions to UK military Washington mentioned first paragraph reference telegram." (110.11 DU/5-2754) night made strong démarche urging that there be public announcement re meeting. In view leaks and speculation, State and Defense agree public announcement would be useful.

3. We therefore have agreed to following text proposed to us by Australians (which we modified in two minor respects) :

Begin text. The Govts of Australia, France, New Zealand, the UK, and the US have agreed that talks will begin in Washington on June 3, between military representatives of their Chiefs of Staff.

Discussions will survey the military situation in the Far East arising out of developments in Indochina. Talks will be without commitment to any of the govts whose military representatives are participating. These discussions should be of value not only to these five govts, but to other govts in the region in any further conversations, military or political, which may take place later on a wider basis.

End text.

4. Coordination and timing of press release will be difficult unless it is done at Geneva where you, Bidault, Eden, and Australian and New Zealand representatives can work out details. Simultaneous release would be made in five capitals.

5. Accordingly you are authorized (a) to agree to any minor changes in above text; and (b) to agree on release time. (We would suggest 4 pm Washington time Friday May 28.)

6. Please keep us informed niact re text and release date agreed for issuance here.

7. In past UK and French have consistently leaked virtually everything to press and jumped gun on ironclad agreements on release time of joint announcements, to disadvantage of US press and our embarrassment. Know you will impress on them there should be no gun-jumping.

DULLES

---

Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 250 : Telegram

The Secretary of State to the United States Delegation<sup>1</sup>

CONFIDENTIAL

WASHINGTON, May 27, 1954—11 a. m.

Tosec 271. Our comments on questions raised by Eden Dulte 112.<sup>2</sup>

1. Thai should raise matter first in SC through letter to SC president along lines given in Tosec 228, Usun 574<sup>3</sup> with Wan's modification given in Secto 293 passed USUN.<sup>4</sup> Possible title of item: "Request of the Government of Thailand for UN observations." In event of veto matter should go to GA. Reasons for our strong preference for GA over interim committee given in Tosec 231, repeated

---

<sup>1</sup> Sent to New York as telegram 593.

<sup>2</sup> Dated May 25, p. 928.

<sup>3</sup> Dated May 21, p. 875.

<sup>4</sup> May 25, not printed. (396.1 GE/5-2554)

Usun 577 and termed persuasive in Usun 759 [579].<sup>5</sup> Three alternative methods of convening GA discussed in working paper sent Ross May 20. We lean toward emergency session under "uniting for peace" resolution since under rule 10 of GA rules it would be most difficult add other items (i.e., Korea, Morocco) to agenda.

2. (A) We believe Chinese representation problem must be dealt with in SC and GA under moratorium agreement that is, any proposals to be ruled out of order or deferred.

(B) Expect Thailand only to be invited to SC table. Would hope associated states would not request participation in SC. However, they could express support for Thai move in written communication to SC.

3. (A) Terms draft resolution given in Secto [Tosec] 229, repeated Usun 575.<sup>6</sup> When POC subcommission established Thailand would and associated states could request observation.

(B) Subcommission membership of India, New Zealand, Pakistan, Sweden, Uruguay satisfactory and we hope feasible. Key question will be India's willingness serve. Hope UK will strongly urge Indians to agree serve.

4. Would expect nine votes in SC and more than necessary two-thirds majority in GA.

5. We would hope to control debate in GA through strenuous advance consultation to discourage submission any other agenda item and to support presiding officers in focusing discussion.

6, 7, 8. Agree with Smith's comments.

Our purpose at this time is limited to obtaining in smoothest and quickest way, establishment of UN observation. Statements in SC should therefore stress incontestable existence of international tension and need for ascertaining facts and should as far as possible avoid detailed accounts of military and political situation.

DULLES

<sup>5</sup> Usun 577 dated May 21, p. 882; Usun 579 not printed.

<sup>6</sup> Dated May 21, p. 876.

Eisenhower Library, Eisenhower papers, Whitman file

Memorandum of Discussion at the 199th Meeting of the National Security Council, Thursday, May 27, 1954<sup>1</sup>

[Extracts]

TOP SECRET EYES ONLY

Present at the 199th meeting of the Council were the President of the United States, presiding; the Vice President of the United States; the Secretary of State; the Acting Secretary of Defense; the Director, Foreign Operations Administration; and the Director, Office of Defense Mobilization. Also present were the Secretary of the Treasury; the Attorney General (for Items 1 through 6); the Director, Bureau of the Budget; the Chairman, Atomic Energy Commission (for Items 5 and 8); Assistants Attorney General Barnes and Rankin; Mr. Herbert Hoover, Jr., Department of State (for Item 2); the Chairman, Joint Chiefs of Staff; the Director of Central Intelligence; Mr. Robert Cutler, Special Assistant to the President; the Deputy Assistant to the President; Mr. Robert Amory, Jr., Central Intelligence Agency; the White House Staff Secretary; Mr. Bryce Harlow, Administrative Assistant to the President; the Executive Secretary, NSC; and the Deputy Executive Secretary, NSC.

<sup>1</sup> Prepared by Deputy Executive Secretary Gleason on May 28.

There follows a summary of the discussion at the meeting and the chief points taken.

. . . . .

10. Southeast Asia (NSC 5405; NSC Actions Nos. 1086-b and -c, 1104-b, 1110 and 1112)<sup>2</sup>

Mr. Cutler then asked the Secretary of State if he would report any recent developments regarding the Geneva Conference.

Secretary Dulles replied that he had nothing of significance to report from Paris or Geneva. Everything was awaiting the return of General Ely from Indochina, which had just occurred. General Trapnell had reached Paris at about the same time, but had not yet seen General Ely.<sup>3</sup>

Dr. Flemming inquired of Secretary Dulles the significance of Mr. Eden's proposal at Geneva for a cease-fire. Secretary Dulles replied that acceptance of the Eden proposal would bring about a de facto partition of all three of the Associated States. Beyond that, the Communists would certainly infiltrate the areas assigned to the other side, with the result that sooner or later they would obtain complete control of all three States.

Secretary Dulles went on to express his great concern over the deterioration of the Bao Dai regime, and mentioned the possible need for "drastic action" if Bao Dai did not regain control of his government.

<sup>2</sup> For the text of NSC 5405, Jan. 16, 1954, "United States Objectives and Courses of Action With Respect to Southeast Asia," and related documentation, see volume XII.

For texts of NSC Action Nos. 1086-b, Apr. 6, 1954, and 1104-b, Apr. 29, 1954, see footnotes 4 and 5, p. 705. For discussions in the NSC and actions taken on NSC 1086 and 1104, see memoranda of conversations, in volume XIII.

For NSC Action Nos. 1110 and 1112, see memorandum of discussion at the 196th meeting of the NSC, May 8. ibid. For the text of 1110-a, see telegram Tedul 43, May 8, p. 731.

<sup>3</sup> For an account of General Trapnell's meeting with General Ely the morning of May 27, see telegram 4566 from Paris, May 27, in volume XIII.

The National Security Council:

Noted oral remarks by the Secretary of State on developments in France and at the Geneva Conference with respect to Indochina.<sup>4</sup>

11. Significant World Developments Affecting U.S. Security

Mr. [Allen] Dulles commented on intelligence reports which suggested the presence of a certain number of Soviet advisers with the Vietminh as early as April 29. He then went on to point out that the redeployment of the Vietminh forces from Dien Bien Phu toward the Delta had proceeded more rapidly than originally anticipated, so that the bulk of these forces was now likely to arrive early in June. Whether or not they would attack the French position in the Delta wasn't yet clear. Meanwhile, the French were reinforcing the Delta with troops from other parts of Indochina. Plans for further reinforcement from the Metropole or North Africa would await the report of General Ely. The French were also studying plans to reduce the size of their defense perimeter in the Delta.

Mr. Dulles' final point was to emphasize the near chaotic situation in Saigon, which was actually more unstable than at Hanoi or Haiphong. A significant development was that the Saigon press had now taken a very strong anti-American position.

S. EVERETT GLEASON

<sup>4</sup>This sentence constitutes NSC Action No. 1142.

110.11 DU/5-2754 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET

GENEVA, May 27, 1954—3 p. m.

Dulte 125. Repeated information Paris 341. Bidault gave me following account of his trip to Paris yesterday:

He had gone for only one purpose—to get mad and raise hell. It had worked and French Government had decided to act in national interest of France; that is to say, it would stand fast at Geneva and send reinforcements to Indochina. Reynaud was, nevertheless, continuing to demand capitulation and Bidault might have to go to Paris again tomorrow. Laniel was firm but Bidault himself had to do most of the talking. His opponents were having fine time insulting him but he was confident their actions were costing them thousands of votes with public opinion. I hope he is right.

SMITH

396.1 GE/5-2754 : Telegram

*Seventh Restricted Session on Indochina, Geneva, May 27, 3 p. m.:
The United States Delegation to the Department of State*<sup>1</sup>

SECRET      PRIORITY

GENEVA, May 27 [28], 1954—noon.

Secto 325. Repeated information priority Paris 343, priority Saigon 120, Tokyo 93, London 213, Moscow 89, Phnom Penh and Vientiane unnumbered. Department pass Defense. Tokyo pass CINCFE. Seventh restricted meeting met May 27 with Eden as chairman.

Eden recalled his proposal last meeting and Molotov amendments and then referred new French proposal (see Secto 327<sup>2</sup>) asked Bidault to comment thereon.

Bidault commented on number of proposals before meeting and desirability concentrating attention on arranging meeting of representatives of commands in Geneva for purpose establishing regrouping zones in Vietnam. He pointed out eight out of nine delegations had agreed in principle and ninth had not expressed opposition to this concept. In tabling proposal dealing with Vietnam he stated French delegation would present in very near future proposals re Laos and Cambodia. He supported principle of simultaneous cease-fire provided this did not result in delaying cessation of hostilities in any given territory. He expressed view conditions in each of three states should be taken up on merits.

In commenting on proposal Bidault said principle of regrouping zones in Vietnam seems generally agreed as well as idea that representatives of commands meet in Geneva. There would also be required exchange of views with commands in field. Bidault urged haste stating time saved Geneva saves blood Indochina and time wasted Geneva wastes blood there.

Bidault suggested June first as date for meeting of representatives of commands in Geneva and asked delegates express themselves re date.

Chou En-lai then presented six-point proposal (see Secto 326<sup>3</sup>) on basic principles pertaining to cessation of hostilities. He reiterated need for simultaneous cease-fire. He stated he shared belief that situation different in three states but regrouping needed in all three. He expressed agreement to contact both at Geneva and in field between commands of two sides in order determine zones for regrouping and other matters. He said Bidault's suggestion of demilitarized zones warranted further consideration and might be topic for discussion directly between parties. He expressed himself strongly on need for preventing introduction further troops and military matériel into Indochina after cessation of hostilities. He said Korean armistice procedures offered precedent and took occasion to stress importance he attached to stopping introduction into Indochina by US of military personnel and weapons. On question of supervision of armistice Chou En-lai endorsed DRV proposal of joint committees of belligerents and in addition Neutral Nations Supervisory Commission along lines followed in Korea. He spoke in most laudatory terms of performance of NNSC in Korea adding that failure by US forces to abide by provisions of armistice including those concerning prisoners of war had created difficulties. He painted picture of smoothly functioning armistice supervision by NNSC in Korea. With regard to international guarantees Chou En-lai said he shared view of French and Soviet delegations (to which he stated no objection had been taken) that all Geneva states join in guarantee. In case of violation, there should be consultation leading to collective rather than to individual measures. He anticipated no difficulties regarding prisoners of war and civil internees.

<sup>1</sup> A set of minutes of this session (IC Restricted/7) is in Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 278. The minutes indicate that the meeting convened at 3 p. m. and adjourned at 5:15 p. m. The minutes are also printed in Conférence de Genève, pp. 154-158.

<sup>2</sup> Dated May 27, p. 948.

<sup>3</sup> Dated May 27, infra.

Chou En-lai envisaged agreement on principles followed by discussion regarding concrete application.

Vietnamese delegate then delivered earnest statement of Vietnamese views on imperative necessity of avoiding immediate or eventual partition through establishment of proposed regrouping zones. He stated DRV proposal would lead to this end due broad nature of economic, political, demographic and other considerations introduced by DRV in proposal as factors in determining zones. He recalled that conference designed not only ascertain and recognize facts but also achieve respect for justice and law. He recalled UN Charter provision re conditions for peaceful settlement of international disputes and also Stimson doctrine as applied Manchukuo. He recalled Stimson doctrine of non-recognition of results of acts of force had been approved by League of Nations members including some states represented at conference. He said partition would only lead to further war and presented proposal reading "The regroupment zones will be so established as not to impair the territorial and political unity of Vietnam."

During recess Bidault, Eden and Smith agreed that Eden should seek Molotov's agreement to adoption of either French proposal or of Eden's proposal of May 25 with preamble and paragraph one amended to read, "In order to facilitate the early and simultaneous cessation of hostilities it is proposed that: 1. Representatives of the two commands should meet immediately in Geneva in order that this should also contribute to the establishment of contacts between the two parties on the spot." with paragraphs two, three and four as originally presented (Secto 320 [302] <sup>4</sup>).

Molotov declined to accept either in absence of some indication there would be regrouping in Laos and Cambodia as well. Western three refused to concede on this and proposed that, rather than continuing discussion this afternoon, "drafting committee" should meet tomorrow at 11:00 to consider Eden, Bidault and Chou proposals and attempt to come up with common one. This was agreed. Phleger, Allen and Chauvel will represent Western three on drafting committee.

Comment: In private meeting of three at recess Bidault took strong stand, which I supported, against suggestions by Eden which would have had effect of so far by-passing issue as to permit Communists interpret as capitulation to their point of view. We much prefer French draft and will press for something along these lines in drafting committee.

It was clear Communists are in no hurry, and thus far entirely unwilling make any concession which would even temporarily bridge gap so as permit work start on Vietnam. Apart from events in Indochina they may well also be influenced by scheduling of Indochina debate for next Tuesday in French Assembly.

It was a day of complete frustration and we encountered absolute intransigence on Communist side.

SMITH

---

<sup>4</sup>Telegram Secto 302, dated May 26, p. 920.

---

396.1 GE/5-2754 : Telegram

Seventh Restricted Session on Indochina, Geneva, May 27, 3 p. m.:
The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET      PRIORITY

GENEVA, May 27, 1954—midnight.

Secto 326. Repeated information priority Paris 344, priority Saigon 121, Tokyo 94, London 214, Moscow 90. Department pass Defense; Tokyo pass CINCFE. Saigon pass Phnom Penh and Vientiane. Following is text Chinese Communist proposal presented at seventh restricted meeting:

"The participants of the Geneva Conference have agreed upon the following basic principles pertaining to the cessation of hostilities in Indochina:

"1. A complete cease-fire by all the armed forces of the two belligerent parties—ground, naval and air forces—is to be simultaneously carried out throughout the territory of Indochina.

"2. The two parties are to begin negotiations on appropriate readjustments of the area of their occupied zones, the passage of troops of the two parties during the readjustments and other related questions that may arise.

"3. The introduction into Indochina from outside of all kinds of fresh troops and military personnel as well as all types of arms and ammunition is to cease simultaneously with the cessation of hostilities throughout the territory of Indochina.

"4. Joint committee composed of representatives of the commands of the two parties are to supervise the implementation of the terms of the agreement on the cessation of hostilities.

"International supervision by a neutral nations commission over the implementation of the aforesaid agreement is also to be carried out.

"The question as to the composition of the neutral nations commission is to be examined separately.

"5. The states participating in the Geneva conference undertake guarantee the implementation of the agreement.

"The question as to the nature of the obligations to be undertaken by the states concerned is to be examined separately.

"6. War prisoners and interned civilians are to be released by the two parties."

SMITH

---

396.1 GE/5-2754 : Telegram

Seventh Restricted Session on Indochina, Geneva, May 27, 3 p. m.:
The United States Delegation to the Department of State

CONFIDENTIAL
 PRIORITY

GENEVA, May 27, 1954—midnight.

Secto 327. Repeated information priority Paris 345, priority Saigon 122, Tokyo 95, London 215, Moscow 91, Phnom Penh, Vientiane unnumbered. Tokyo for CINCFE. Department pass Defense. Following is text of proposal presented at seventh restricted meeting by French delegation for settlement of military problem of Vietnam:

"(Further proposals will be put forward in the immediate future for Laos and Cambodia and it is understood that nothing agreed for any one area will prevent the entry into force of a cease-fire in all areas simultaneously).

1. Representatives of commanders-in-chief of the two parties will meet at Geneva on blank.

2. They will examine, in the first place, the delimitation of the zones of regrouping in Vietnam.

3. They will present their recommendations and observations to the conference.

4. It will be their task to propose the basis upon which the regroupment will be carried out, taking into account the following two principles:

(a) The regroupment must not lead to a dismemberment of Vietnam, and

(b) The regroupment has for its objective the re-establishment of peace and security in Vietnam.

5. If it should be considered necessary, they will be able to request the conference to define such points as they consider useful.

6. During this time, the conference will continue to study other problems relative to the peace in Indochina."

SMITH

---

Eisenhower Library, Dulles papers, Meetings with the President

Memorandum by the Secretary of State to the President

[Extract]

SECRET

[WASHINGTON,] May 27, 1954.

PERSONAL AND PRIVATE

. . . . .

When these [travel] plans were made, I had expected that General Bedell Smith would be back. With reference to his possible return and replacement by Murphy, I am inclined to feel that to pull him out at this time, particularly with Eden, Bidault and Molotov staying on, might be interpreted as an effort on our part to sabotage the conference, especially as around June 9 or 10 may be the critical time.

My disposition, therefore, is to have Bedell stay and plan to make my trip with the understanding that the Army can set up communications for me with Washington, and I can, of course, come back on short notice.

Does this have your approval? <sup>1</sup>

JOHN FOSTER DULLES

---

<sup>1</sup> A handwritten notation by President Eisenhower on the source text indicated that the President approved the Secretary's decision to leave Under Secretary Smith at Geneva.

---

Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 242: Telegram

The Secretary of State to the United States Delegation <sup>1</sup>

TOP SECRET

WASHINGTON, May 27, 1954—5:58 p. m.

Tedul 135. No distribution. Eyes only Under Secretary from Secretary. Your Tedul 127.<sup>2</sup> Subject matter discussed with President who agrees you should not by your departure risk misinterpretation. I shall, therefore, plan Western trip on assumption communications will be adequate. If not will interrupt and return canceling out my speaking.

---

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by the Secretary of State.

<sup>2</sup> Dated May 26, p. 935.

I assume by time Phleger gets through his case, Geneva will probably be over but if not and you need him, I will ask him to return to Geneva.

DULLES

---

Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 242 : Telegram

The Secretary of State to the United States Delegation<sup>1</sup>

TOP SECRET      PRIORITY      WASHINGTON, May 27, 1954—6:51 p. m.

Tedul 136. Re Tedul 131.<sup>2</sup> Assume you will inform Prince Wan and Garcia soonest re decision on five-power talks; Associated States will also be informed at Geneva; UK will inform India, Pakistan, Burma, Ceylon, and Indonesia. We will also inform other appropriate Asian countries here prior to announcement. See no objection your informing ROK representative Geneva if you desire.

DULLES

---

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by MacArthur.

<sup>2</sup> Dated May 27, p. 940.

---

396.1 GE/5-2754 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State<sup>1</sup>

[Extracts]

CONFIDENTIAL      PRIORITY      GENEVA, May 27, 1954—7 p. m.

Secto 319. For McCardle from Suydam. Following is extensive selected verbatim Under Secretary's press briefing U.S. correspondents morning 27th. Full text will be pouched.

Question: Have Cambodian or Laotian delegations indicated to us they might walk out of conference if principle of partition should be applied to their two states?

Answer: They have not so indicated to us because we do not accept principle of partition. Our position is that Laos and Cambodia have been invaded. Way to stop trouble in Laos and Cambodia is for invaders to withdraw.

Q: You said Viet Minh proposal seemed to go lot further than we were willing to go. Could you give us any sort of general guidance on how far we are prepared to go?

---

<sup>1</sup> Transmitted to the Department of State in three sections.

A: You know basic position of U.S. It is that Laos and Cambodia are separate distinct problems from Viet Nam, that Laos and Cambodia have been invaded and that settlement of their respective problems is completely simple; all that is necessary is for invader to withdraw. It is recognized, however, that in Viet Nam we have powerful, indeed formidable, opposition, well-organized and national. That is, national in sense that they are Vietnamese; whereas dissident elements in Laos and Cambodia, in accordance with our info, are not Laotian or Cambodian but are also Vietnamese. So that there the problem is quite different.

Q: Do we recognize any difference between Cambodia, where apparently there are no areas which are really under control of Viet Minh, and Laos, where there are very definitely areas which have been more or less constantly under Viet Minh control, in north?

A: Not in principle, because forces which control those areas are identified battalions of Viet Minh Army, identified even with respect to divisions to which they belong. So in principle there is no difference.

Q: When Indochina discussions opened it evidently was strategy of six powers to isolate and deal first with Laotian and Cambodian questions, but now over last two days six delegations have moved around to position of evidently trying to deal with Viet Nam first. Wonder if you could give some explanation or reason for change in strategy.

A: We have not changed our views, have made our position completely clear. It is, as I have outlined to you, with regards to Laos and Cambodia. We propose to deal with them first because they are most susceptible of quick solution. Since other side would not accept that approach, while completely reserving and maintaining our position with respect to Laos and Cambodia, we have, in interest of possible progress, been willing examine other one, because from purely practical point of view, if solution could be reached with regard Viet Nam, it would be very simple to apply principles which have governed that solution to much less difficult problems of Laos and Cambodia. We do not believe cessation of hostilities in Laos and Cambodia should wait on solution of problem in Viet Nam.

Q: Thing that seems to have Cambodians and Laotians worried is, for example, if you accept internatl supervision or some political formulas in case of Viet Nam you might be walking into trap where those formulas would be made to apply to Laos and Cambodia as quid pro quo of winding up Viet Nam war.

A: If we are blind enough to walk into trap, then they have reason enough to worry. Don't think we are.

Q: Are all our allies in same position of completely separating Laos and Cambodia at present?

A: At present, and in general, yes. There are certain differences of opinion as to tactical approach, slight differences of view as to real practicalities of situation as against position in principle. There is no basic difference.

Q: You have emphasized our position in respect to principle of partition of Cambodia and Laos. Does that also apply to principle of partition in respect to Viet Nam?

A: Our present official position is yes. However, we do have recognized and very practical difference there. You just cannot ignore fact that Ho Chi Minh has well-organized, disciplined formidable military force which controls considerable proportion of country. You cannot just wish that out of existence. Actually, what we are doing here is rather groping for possible solutions which do not violate our principles, but which might produce objective we are seeking, that is, termination of hostilities on honorable basis.

Q: What is your reading as to whether Communist side, on basis of last few days' sessions, appear to be trying to come to settlement or are they planning for deadlock? What is general tone at this point?

A: I would answer if I could. I really don't know yet. In dealing with Communists, you know, it takes infinite time. There is unending argument about minutiae of phraseology of proposal, or paragraph, or sentence. We have not gone far enough yet to be able to determine whether we are going to encounter complete intransigence or whether we are going to encounter slight move toward compromise coupled with proposals we cannot accept, or whether we are really going to find some way out. Think next coming week may well tell story.

Q: Do you see any indications here that Communist bloc at present in light of governmental situation in France, is trying through its strategy to link Indochina with EDC?

A: That has worried me great deal; but, again, because I don't know I haven't been able form considered opinion as to what their strategy or intentions are. I can very well answer. Obviously, there is or could possibly be very important connection.

Q: Have we any reason to believe there is difference in approach among three Communist delegations on Indochina negotiation?

A: Can't say I have. Would also be very reluctant to say Molotov, without consultation, is able speak authoritatively for all three. Have seen huddles during recess and delays obviously for tactical purpose of permitting time for discussion among themselves, even on very simple things.

Q: How does this look to you in terms of time? Does it look like all summer job? You mentioned in a week you might be able tell whether you could see any quick ending or another Panmunjom.

A: If one can approach military solution, or if there seems to be military solution in sight, discussions might go on for long time. But discussions would certainly not go on at foreign minister level. Can't estimate at this time.

Q: What kind of military solution would that be?

A: First object is to stop killing. Granted you can't arrive at solution which would stop killing everywhere without considering some political questions along with military solution, because to certain extent there are corollary military political considerations.

Q: What can you tell us about state of Anglo-American relations?

A: They are good, I think. As matter of fact, you know there was terrific amount of "dust" raised about Anglo-American differences. There were not real differences either as to policies or as to objectives; such differences as existed were differences of opinion with regard to tactics and timing.

We are in very close indeed constant contact with British delegation. Relationships are extremely good. I am not prepared to say in fact I am inclined to believe that in some respects their views on timing were right, while in some respects our views were right. Won't go into any further detail on that. In any event, there are no serious or substantial differences.

Remember that this conference is in effect still groping. We have our respective basic positions. That does not mean there cannot be or would not be certain amount of compromise, not only between our own, and that of our allies, but between our combined positions on one side, and that of Communists on other, if it will produce end product we want. Nothing rigid about this. As I have said several times, we are really groping to see if there does lie in middle of all this "spate of oratory" germ of solution. It will take little while to do that.

Q: Think we get impression that British probably more inclined to look favorably on some kind deal involving partition than we are. That would seem to be rather fundamental difference.

A: I don't say that British are not opposed to it in principle either. Don't think their views have crystallized any more than our own have. We have our respective principles.

Thank you, gentlemen. Hope will be seeing you little more often.

SMITH

---

110.11 DU/5-2754 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET NIACT

GENEVA, May 27, 1954—10 p. m.

Dulte 126. Repeated information priority Paris 342, London 212, Canberra 9, Wellington 5. Tedul 131.<sup>1</sup> Discussed with representatives of other four governments. While recognizing desirability of avoiding extravagant speculation which might arise for example when Australian and New Zealand Chiefs of Staff depart for Washington, there was agreement it would otherwise be desirable avoid public statement and particularly joint announcement five capitals. FYI: Watt had received same instructions from Canberra as had Spender and had replied as above. End FYI.

<sup>1</sup> Dated May 27, p. 940.

Eden will have to refer to London in view of questions which last sentence of text may raise as to whether UK has agreed to wider conversations and if so, on what basis. It was recognized that Bidault had most serious problem and that his views, which we will not be able to obtain until morning, should be given major weight.

Subject to change as result of London's or Bidault's views in morning, consensus was that there should not be simultaneous announcement in five capitals but that each should talk from text given in reference telegram as and when necessary to prevent or counteract press speculation. I think best thing possible would be to say nothing and just let things happen.

SMITH

MAY 28, 1954

396.1 GE/5-2854 : Telegram

Smith-Eden Meeting, Geneva, May 28, Morning: The United States Delegation to the Department of State

CONFIDENTIAL

GENEVA, May 28, 1954—3 p. m.

Secto 328. Department pass USUN New York 2. Reference Tosec 271.<sup>1</sup> In conversation this morning I showed Eden copy Tosec 271. Eden said report had just been received of meeting between Dixon, Hoppenot and Lodge. Eden particularly referred to Hoppenot's suggestion that Security Council might put Thai appeal on its agenda but postpone debate until Geneva Conference was over. Eden stated he was informing Dixon that he thought this was not a bad suggestion and was well worth further consideration.

With reference last sentence paragraph 2B, Tosec 271, Eden stated he understood our view was Associated States would keep out of matter entirely until POC established when Cambodia and Laos might invite POC extend observation their areas. I confirmed this was strong view of USDel here, and we would so recommend to Department.

Eden stated he was seeing Krishna Menon again tomorrow morning and would discuss with him question Indian role on POC. I told Eden in conversation I had with Menon last night he had initially taken strong position against Indian participation, but at end had softened his attitude.

<sup>1</sup> Dated May 27, p. 941.

Eden said UK was not so sanguine of two-thirds majority in GA at present moment, being particularly doubtful attitude Arab bloc which in addition to traditional attitudes toward "French colonialism" might wish to repay USSR for its veto on Palestine case.

SMITH

Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 281

United States Minutes of the First Meeting of the Drafting Committee on Indochina<sup>1</sup>

CONFIDENTIAL

GENEVA, May 28, 1954—11 a. m.

IC/DC/1

Participants:

United Kingdom

Lord Reading

Mr. Allen

Mr. Tahourdin

Mr. Vallat

U.S.S.R.

Mr. Gromyko

Mr. Novikov

Mr. Troyanovsky

Vietnam

Mr. Dac Khe

Mr. Thanh

Mr. Buu Kinh

Cambodia

Amb. Nong Kimny

Mr. Sam Sary

Mr. Son Sann

Communist China

Chang Wen-tien

Li Ke-nung

Pu Shou-chang

Ch'en Chia-k'ang

United States

Mr. Phleger

Amb. Heath

Mr. Stelle

France

Amb. Chauvel

M. Roux

M. Cheyssou

M. Andronikov

Laos

Mr. Sananikone

Mr. Panya

Viet Minh

Mr. Phan-Anh

Mr. Hoan

Mr. Quat

Lord Reading stated that he had had discussions with Mr. Gromyko as to the question of Chairmanship. Since this committee was formed in yesterday's restricted session, they had thought it should be treated as a carry-over from that session when Mr. Eden was in the Chair rather than a committee which would be attached to the next session of the Ministers when Mr. Molotov would be in the Chair. Mr. Gromyko and he had thought, therefore, that it might be appropriate to have him in the Chair. He wondered whether this was generally agreeable to the other delegations.

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by Stelle. Minutes indicate that meeting convened at 11 a. m. and adjourned at 1 p. m. Summary of minutes was transmitted to the Department of State in telegram Secto 333, May 28. (396.1 GE/5-2854)

Chauvel stated that the French delegation was in full accord with this idea. If meetings similar to this one should be held, the same arrangement might be carried out. The other delegations signified their agreement.

Reading stated that he thought the purpose of the meeting as set by the Ministers was to consider three drafts—the UK draft of the day before yesterday, and the French and Chinese Communists' drafts which had been tabled at yesterday's sitting. He thought it would be remembered that Mr. Molotov had proposed certain amendments to the UK draft, that these amendments had been discussed, but that in the end it had proved impossible to reach agreement. Lord Reading distributed drafts of a UK proposal which follows:<sup>2</sup>

“In order to facilitate the early cessation of hostilities it is necessary to determine the areas within which the forces of both sides shall be regrouped. To this end it is proposed that :

a. Representatives of the two commands should meet immediately in Geneva.

b. Their first task should be to work out regrouping areas for Vietnam.

c. They should report their findings and recommendations to the Conference as soon as possible.

d. The Conference meanwhile should proceed with examination of other military matters, beginning with arrangements for international supervision.”

He stated that the UK itself would like to make one amendment. He would like to delete in the preamble the phrase “It is necessary to determine the areas within which the forces of both sides shall be regrouped. To this end”.

This amendment would leave the effective part of the proposal unchanged. Reading stated he did not want to take advantage of being in the Chair to talk too much, but he would like to make one suggestion on the procedure of this meeting. During the last few days at the restricted meetings we have been making a vigorous effort to arrive at a point where action at last could be taken. It would be a relief and incentive to all of us if we felt we were making genuine progress towards a settlement. It would also be a satisfaction to the whole world which was watching these proceedings.

---

<sup>2</sup> The British proposal was transmitted to the Department of State in telegram Secto 332, May 28. (396.1 GE/5-2854)

He stated that we have been searching for common ground but to him two points seemed agreed upon. The first was the necessity for direct contacts between the commanders either in Geneva or on the spot, or perhaps preferably both. The second was the extreme desirability for a simultaneous cease-fire throughout Indochina. He wondered whether it was not possible and urgent to get representatives of the commanders together to begin work on the terms and methods of cessation of hostilities while the conference proceeded with other matters. The conference could then at any time enlarge the terms of reference upon which the military representatives could work. The important thing to do was to get them started on something, and we might get them working on something more later on. He thought it well to recall that the commanders or their representatives could only present proposals to the conference. Only the conference itself could approve or disapprove those proposals. He thought the UK proposal did not conflict in any way with the proposal which had been tabled by Mr. Chou En-lai even though the ideas contained in the Chinese proposal were perhaps expressed in different language. He thought that the first two of the Chinese proposals might be referred to the military representatives and that others might be taken up perhaps later on. He was sorry that he had talked at such great length, but he had thought that it might be useful to give expression to the sense of urgency which he was sure all delegations share. He hoped that the other delegations would express their opinions.

Chauvel gave thanks from the French delegation to the Chairman for a clear and lucid exposition of the task of the committee. He thought the committee was not meant at this level to replace the conference and to repeat its work but rather to facilitate the work of the conference. He thought that if the committee could find points of common agreement it could achieve positive results. He thought the task of the committee should be approached in a positive way and that to this end it should limit the scope of the matters with which it dealt. He thought the committee should address itself to specific matters.

The last meetings of the Ministers have been concerned with the question of bringing together representatives of the commanders-in-chief. He thought the question should be put as to whether the conference wants these representatives to meet and to undertake certain tasks for the conference. He thought it was not very difficult for the committee to arrive at useful results. There were quite a few points of common agreement although the angles from which those points were approached were not necessarily the same. He thought that in the various proposals some were addressed to immediate tasks whereas some—such as, for example, some of those of the Chinese Communists' proposal—were larger in scope and addressed to principles. Even in the Chinese Communists' proposal, however, there were certain immediate tasks which were in common with those of the other proposals. He did agree that proceeding toward finding items of common agreement should be the purpose of this meeting. Finally, of the three proposals he thought that Point a, of the UK proposal, covered the same ground as the first point of the French proposal; Point b of the UK proposal was similar in purpose to the second point of the French proposal; Point c of the UK proposal could be equated with the third point of the French proposal and Point d of the UK proposal with the sixth point of the French proposal.

Chauvel stated that the Chinese proposal was much broader in scope and covered very much the whole ground of the discussions of the conference. However, Paragraph 2 of the Chinese Communists' proposal did cover points which were referred to in the British and French drafts. If his memory was correct he believed that Chou En-lai had noted the desirability of contact between the commanders in Geneva. The same statement had been made in one form or another by many other delegations. He thought, therefore, that without difficulty this could be extracted as a point of common agreement. He might further say that he had had the feeling that the proposal which the French had made on the 27th of May was not far removed from Mr. Dong's proposal and that it did not conflict with what the Viet Minh representative had put forward.

The Cambodian, Ambassador Nong Kimny, took note of the amendment which the UK had made to the proposal which it had itself distributed. He stated that the head of the Cambodian delegation had the other day mentioned that the British proposal might raise certain misunderstandings. The head of the Cambodian delegation had at the same time addressed to Mr. Eden questions as to whether the UK proposal applied to all three countries or whether it applied only to Vietnam. Eden had replied, he believed, that the preamble applied to all three countries and the rest to Vietnam. The Ambassador thought he should again address these questions to Lord Reading. He believed that to start with the UK draft might again give rise to a series of amendments and objections. He thought it might be better to start with the French plan, particularly since Paragraph 4 of the French plan removed some of the difficulties which were raised by the proposal of the UK delegation. He would like to propose that the committee begin by considering point by point the French proposal in which case it might then attack directly the question of achieving contact between the two commands.

Lord Reading stated that the UK proposals were general and intended to apply to all three states. Only the specific Paragraph b was directed to Vietnam since this was a question of the greatest urgency. He thought it was for the meeting to decide which proposal it should consider. He himself had no personal objection to considering the French draft.

Gromyko referred first of all to the proposal tabled by the Chinese delegation. He understood that there had been some agreement among the Ministers that these proposals should be considered tomorrow at the next meeting of the Ministers. He thought that at this meeting the committee should begin work at the point where the Ministers had stopped which was, as he saw it, in reconciling the various texts of Eden's proposal for achieving contacts between the commanders of the two sides. He believed that to save time discussions should be started with the last draft presented by the representative of the UK which as he understood it had been formulated taking into consideration the various opinions expressed around the table. From the observations of the UK representative he understood that this draft had been also formulated in such a way as to represent the ideas proposed by the French delegate. He would like to speak first about the preamble. He thought it would be desirable to insert the phrase "and simultaneously" between the words "the earliest" and the phrase "cessation of hostilities". He thought that proceeding from the fact that there had been at one time no objections from other delegations to the insertion of such a phrase he did not see why such a very general statement should be unacceptable to any delegation. He thought that if all delegations concurred, the committee could agree on the preamble in its new form.

As to Paragraph a of the UK proposal he would suggest the addition of the phrase "and also to establish contact on the spot". He proceeded from the fact that this addition had also been discussed in various meetings and had not evoked disapproval. He believed that Mr. Bidault had spoken of the desirability of contacts on the spot.

At this point Lord Reading raised the question as to whether the Russian amendment might read more smoothly if it read "and contact also be established on the spot". Gromyko acquiesced in Reading's revision.

Gromyko proposed that Paragraph b of the UK text be amended to read "their task should be to work out regrouping areas for the two sides" or alternatively it should be amended to read, "their task should be to work out regrouping areas for the two sides beginning with Vietnam". Gromyko accepted Paragraph c. He stated that he still held the view that there was no need at all for Paragraph d. He justified his feeling that there was no need at all for Paragraph d by stating that the Ministers had agreed that the re-establishment of peace should begin with a discussion on how to bring about a cessation of hostilities. There had been already considerable discussion on this point and this committee was addressing itself to these matters. The conference had still to talk political matters.

The question of when they should discuss these was something which the Ministers themselves should decide. There was no reason for the committee to commit them in that respect. In his own view, Gromyko said, if the French and the DRV delegations were agreeable he thought it might be well to give a date when the contacts between the commanders should be established and to amend the British draft on that respect. Gromyko concluded by advocating that it was advisable to take up the last UK draft read, to take into consideration the amendments he had proposed, and to prepare a text for consideration by the Ministers.

Phleger raised a point of inquiry as to whether the USSR had accepted the UK deletion in the preamble of the British draft. Lord Reading thought the USSR had accepted that amendment and read the text including the Russian amendments and deletion of the phrase the UK had recommended to be deleted. Gromyko said he had had in mind the Russian text which had been distributed and that the text as he had it in mind would read "in order to facilitate the earliest and simultaneous cessation of hostilities it is necessary to determine the areas within which the forces of both sides shall be regrouped". (This made it evident that Gromyko did not accept the UK deletion.)

Reading asked whether Gromyko would have objection to the amended form which he stated was intended only to simplify the proposal. Gromyko said that simplification was good within certain limits but it was not useful when the limits were surpassed. He therefore thought that it was more useful to use the fuller formula of the original UK text.

Sananikone, the Laotian representative, stated his pleasure that after two weeks the conference was about to reach a constructive stage. As to which paper the committee should consider the Laotian thought that it was preferable to extract common points of agreement. He thought that all were agreed on the desirability of the meeting of the commanders. He questioned why that point should not be presented to the conference for a decision. He had one question, however, to address to Lord Reading. He had understood Reading to say that all except Paragraph b of the UK proposal applied to all of Indochina. If this were so, he wanted to know what commanders were referred to in Paragraph a. If the reference were to the Laos commander and the Viet Minh commander, he thought it should be again made clear that there was in Laos no question of any regrouping but merely a question of simple withdrawal of Viet Minh forces.

Dac Khe thought that progress could be made by leaving the level of the abstract and progressing to the concrete. He thought that progress had been made by beginning a concrete examination of the problems of Vietnam leaving aside for the moment those of Cambodia and Laos, which would be settled later on their merits. He pointed out that the French proposal clearly refers to Vietnam and only Vietnam. Moreover Paragraph 4 of that proposal contained elements which he thought it was necessary for the commanders to have for guidance in their work. He therefore proposed that the committee take the French draft as a basis for discussion.

Lord Reading stated that he fully realized the reasons advanced by the representatives of Laos, Cambodia and Vietnam, but he wondered whether in view of the fact that the British proposal was so similar to the French, and since it had been already commented upon by the USSR whether it would not be useful for the committee to come back to the UK text and to deal with Gromyko's amendments as well as certain other amendments which he himself was prepared to make, and amendments which others might care to make. He thought the question needed considering, but he wondered if we could not return for the moment to the British text.

Chauvel commented that he had no pride of authorship, that he did think that the French proposal, particularly with the points which were made in Paragraphs 4 and 5, had some advantage and that there was also an advantage in the fact that the French proposal had no preamble. His mind, however, was open to any text. As regards the UK text, he endorsed the deletion in the preamble which the UK had recommended. He thought that whatever text the committee considered it was running the risk of making no progress unless it realized that principles were one thing and implementation another. He thought it was important to begin with the problems of Vietnam which was the most important theatre of operations. If it were attempted at the same time to deal with the problems of Laos and Cambodia, this might temper whatever draft was arrived at and complicate it. He thought the committee should limit its objective and start with Vietnam. It could immediately thereafter address itself to work on Laos and Cambodia if the conference should so decide. Chauvel commented that if we were dealing with Vietnam alone the notion of a simultaneous cease-fire had no application or meaning. He was concerned that the committee should reach a practical conclusion. If the conference wanted military people to meet and to take up the problems of Vietnam, we should say so simply. If at a later date the conference wanted the same military people to take up the problems of Laos and Cambodia, it could say so at that time. With regard to the question of simultaneous cease-fire the French delegation admits this as a practical possibility, and as a matter of fact, the first part of the French proposal contained mention of the possibility. Chauvel thought that it would be an improvement if the UK proposal could be clearly headed "Proposal for Vietnam".

As to the question of timing which had been raised by Mr. Gromyko, Chauvel would like to inform the committee that military representatives of the Franco-Vietnamese High Command would be arriving in Geneva Monday.

Phleger stated that his understanding of the terms of reference of the committee was that the committee was to examine the various proposals and the discussions concerning those proposals which had been put forward in the last few days and to extract from them those points on which there was agreement. It was not the task of the committee to make suggestions on matters on which there had been no meeting of the minds. From examination of the proposals and the discussions of the last few days it seemed to him that there were only two clear points on which there was general agreement. First there was general agreement that representatives of the Franco-Vietnamese commanders should meet in Geneva. Second there was agreement that these military representatives should explore means and methods of working out regrouping areas for Vietnam. If there were general agreement on these two points it should be possible to find a way to express this agreement clearly and simply.

Phleger said it was equally clear from an examination of the discussions and proposals that there was not a meeting of the minds on two subjects: (a) There was no agreement that the three countries should be treated in the same manner. (b) There was no general agreement that there must be a simultaneous cessation of hostilities. There might eventually be agreement to that effect but as yet there existed no such agreement. It therefore seemed to him that all language which referred to agreement on simultaneous cessation of hostilities should be excluded from proposals drafted by the committee. Application of the test as to areas of agreement lead him to the view that as amended by the UK the UK proposal was one which clearly stated points on which there was general agreement. It is clear that the task of the military commanders applied solely to Vietnam. The amendments suggested by the USSR on the other hand introduced matters on which there had not been agreement and therefore he did not think that the amendments proposed by the Russian representative should be acceptable. Phleger stated that in a desire to be helpful he made the suggestion that the UK proposal be restricted to Paragraphs a, b and c, that the preamble be dropped and that in line with the views of the Russian representative Paragraph d be omitted also. He thought it would be useful if the names of the commanders referred to were inserted. The proposal would therefore read :

1. "Representatives of the Franco-Vietnamese and Vietminh commands should meet immediately in Geneva.
2. "Their first task should be to work out regrouping areas for Vietnam.
3. "They should report their findings and recommendations to the conference as soon as possible."

Lord Reading stated that several delegations had requested to speak, that there was a plenary on Korea this afternoon, that since it was one o'clock already he did not believe agreement could be reached on the various proposals at this meeting. He recommended an adjournment and asked whether it would be agreeable to the others to meet again at 1030 Saturday morning. The other delegations indicated readiness to meet on Saturday morning. Lord Reading stated that there was just one point he would like to make in closing the meeting—the military representatives would be here Monday, and he thought it would be absolutely a tragedy if we did not have something for them to do.

---

110.11 DU/5-2854 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET

GENEVA, May 28, 1954—3 p. m.

Dulte 131. For the Secretary from the Under Secretary. Limit distribution. If we succeed obtaining agreement on beginning military staff talks on Indochina, we will shortly thereafter be facing up to question of supervisory organization. What would you think of asking Colombo Conference countries (Pakistan, India, Burma, Ceylon and Indonesia) to undertake role, they to invite participation of European neutral which I would assume would be Norway ?

It seems to me this would have certain definite advantages. It would place responsibility on Asians for "policing their own back yard", the participation of a European state being justified by European interest in Indochina. It would be difficult for India to refuse association with Pakistan if placed in this context, and such association might contribute to reduction tension between the two. Indian and Pakistan Armies should be able to get along in such a role, they having common traditions and training under UK.

Whatever countries are invited, necessary they be able supply considerable numbers of troops which will be required. I would think it would take strength of about two divisions and in Asia only India and Pakistan will be able qualify.

SMITH

396.1 GE/5-2854 : Telegram

The Secretary of State to the United States Delegation<sup>1</sup>

SECRET

NIACT

WASHINGTON, May 28, 1954—3:21 p. m.

Tosec 285. For Under Secretary from Secretary. Advices from New York indicate that British and French are both opposing Thai request for UN observation commission. I had understood from you that the French had definitely agreed to support this and that while the British were reluctant to go along and wanted to work out procedural understanding with us, they were in last analysis prepared to support step. Last fall the Thais were ready to go ahead and papers were all drawn. Then at last minute we advised them to give in to pressure from the French. Now again they are ready to go and have sent representative especially to New York for purpose and matter has received wide publicity. In my opinion US will appear as totally bankrupt, incompetent and undependable if we now repeat the performance of last year and tell the Thais we will not support them. It will be particularly ignominious since I publicly stated at press conference that we would support UN application. I feel so strongly on this matter that I would be disposed to push ahead even though we know British and French would oppose us openly. I would rather accept that consequence bad as it is than the alternative.

There is mounting tide of Congressional criticism due to failure to bring Indochina matter before UN. This was indicated at yesterday's Foreign Affairs hearing on Indochina authorization of funds. It is difficult to overstate the importance which we attach to proceeding in the UN. Failure may jeopardize our chance to get funds for area and also our larger objectives. The Thai proposal takes matter to UN in form least likely to compromise or embarrass Geneva discussions.

I would be willing to limit present decision to Security Council application, leaving open the question of what if anything should be done if Soviet vetoes in Security Council. It is probable that by that time fate of Geneva will be known.

DULLES

<sup>1</sup>Drafted by the Secretary of State. Repeated to USUN as telegram 599, to Paris as telegram 4300, to London as telegram 6420, and to Bangkok as telegram 2366.

396.1 GE/5-2854 : Telegram

Smith-Eden-Bidault Meeting, Geneva, May 28, Afternoon: The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET      NIACT

GENEVA, May 28, 1954—8 p. m.

Secto 336. Limited distribution. This afternoon Eden proposed the following:

“In order to facilitate the early and simultaneous cessation of hostilities it is proposed that:

(a) Representatives of the two commands should meet immediately in Geneva and contacts should also be established on the spot.

(b) They should study the dispositions of forces to be made upon the cessation of hostilities, beginning with the question of regrouping areas in Vietnam.

(c) They should report their findings and recommendations to the conference as soon as possible.”

Eden discussed this with me and Bidault as [representing?] the maximum that he believed the Communists would accept. He proposes to discuss this tomorrow with Molotov firstly with the words “and simultaneous” omitted, but if necessary agreeing to inclusion of these words. If Molotov agrees and the French, ourselves, and the Laotians, Cambodians, Vietnamese agree then he would present it at tomorrow’s Indochina session.

In Phleger’s opinion this proposal confirms the Russian position that all three states should be considered in the same category, Vietnam State being different only in the priority given it. He, therefore, believes that we should not consent to the inclusion of the word “simultaneous” and that the instruction to the military people should be limited at this time to the study of the question of regrouping areas in Vietnam. He believes the resolution treating all three states as being in the same situation would give the military authority to propose a plan that could give the Viet Minh areas in Laos and Cambodia. He does not think our assent should be used to secure assent of Laos, Cambodia and Vietnam. However, if all except ourselves agree he believes that we could go along without expressing concurrence.

I do not share his apprehensions.

I have made clear constantly that US considers Laos and Cambodia in a different situation than Vietnam and I do not view this proposed resolution as departing from this principle. I assume that the military representatives of the French and Associated States in their talks will under no circumstances agree to anything other than the withdrawal of Viet Minh forces from Laos and Cambodia. If all others agree I will state that our position re separate problems of Laos and Cambodia remains unchanged, and that I will reserve my opinion until I see the recommended solution of the military experts, but will not oppose the effort to arrive at one.

SMITH

396.1 GE/5-2654 : Telegram

The Secretary of State to the United States Delegation<sup>1</sup>

SECRET

WASHINGTON, May 28, 1954—4:09 p. m.

PRIORITY

Tosec 288. Following are replies to numbered questions in Secto 309:<sup>2</sup>

1. Since sticking to UN as only control machinery would raise in acute form problem of Chinese representation, answer is no.

2. Our position is that Laos and Cambodia constitute problem separate from Vietnam. We would favor POC observation in those countries as substitute for armistice supervision. While this would not be equivalent to UN supervision of an armistice, it would provide UN observation of any major breaches in armistice involving those countries.

3. In light of (1) above, this question does not arise.

4. Our minimum position should be to oppose any commission composition of which would place a veto in Communist hands (Cf. NNSC in Korea). Our optimum position would be an international control commission composed of: Thailand, India, Burma, Ceylon, Pakistan, all nations which have consistently been spokesmen for Asian integrity and generally occupy range of territory nearby or contiguous to danger zone. (We prefer not to include Indonesia but if this were done we would insist on addition of Philippines.)

5. We consider that personnel of this commission would act as representatives of their respective govts and would engage responsibility of those govts to which they would report.

This procedure would we hope involve Asian nations responsibly in an undertaking affecting their own security and contributing to their understanding of (a) Communist imperialist threat to South and Southeast Asia, and (b) burdens of maintaining independence in face of such menace.

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by Sturm of FE/PSA and Gullion of S/P. Repeated to Paris as telegram 4302 and to Saigon as telegram 2440.

<sup>2</sup> Dated May 26, p. 933.

6. Salaries of a control commission could be paid by their govts and logistic support could be financed by opposing sides. However size and nature of supervisory body would largely control type of financing, which might in end prove to be extremely costly. For this reason we would have to reserve our position on this until later stage in negotiations.

DULLES

---

751G.00/5-2854 : Telegram

The Secretary of State to the United States Delegation<sup>1</sup>

TOP SECRET

WASHINGTON, May 28, 1954—4: 18 p. m.

Tedul 137. Eyes only for the Under Secretary from the Secretary. It seems to me that there is a growing possibility that the DVR cease fire proposal might develop into form of de facto partition which Eden might be expected to encourage and which French might find impossible to refuse but which Associated States would oppose.

If this situation should arise we would face necessity for very difficult decision and I hope it would be possible for you to inform me before taking irrevocable position so that I could consult with the President. This would of course have bearing on paragraph 5 of your President-approved instructions (Tosec 138).<sup>2</sup>

DULLES

---

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by Merchant of EUR.

<sup>2</sup> Dated May 12, p. 778.

---

396.1 GE/5-2854 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

CONFIDENTIAL

GENEVA, May 28, 1954—5 p. m.

Secto 329. Repeated information Paris 347, Moscow 92. French tell us that nothing of interest or substance transpired at Bidault's dinner for Molotov last night and that neither principal made any effort to raise serious subject. Russians arrived at 8:40 and left at 10:30. Molotov was described as genial and mellow and conversation as vague and general. Laloy remarked that Molotov was in same relaxed mood that he had first observed at Berlin. French thought that Molotov had given slight indication growing impatience at length of Geneva sojourn.

SMITH

396.1 GE/5-2854 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

TOP SECRET

GENEVA, May 28, 1954—7 p. m.

Secto 331. Repeated information Paris 349, Saigon 123. Re Deptel 4272 to Paris repeated Geneva Tosec 269 and Saigon 2418,<sup>1</sup> and Paris 4565 to Department repeated Saigon 549 Geneva 304.<sup>2</sup> Bidault has received full report from Parodi of our proposals. Margerie states Bidault personally thinks they are good and that much of this program can be carried out. There is of course considerable difference between what Bidault may advocate and what Cabinet may agree to but Department's suggestions have at least been very well received.

SMITH

---

<sup>1</sup> In telegram 4272 to Paris, May 26, the Department of State outlined the U.S. views on the independence of the Associated States for use by the Embassy in Paris in discussions with the French. The United States could not "wait for an abolition of all deep-rooted causes and extra-territorial privileges"; the United States must make it "clear that the Treaty of Independence between France and Vietnam represents full and unqualified commitment on part of France which will be carried out in practice." In order to achieve this purpose, the United States, France, and other countries, associated in a regional grouping for collective defense, could join "in a formal pledge of fulfillment of full independence and sovereignty provided by Article I of Treaty of Independence." In addition, France and Vietnam should sign the draft treaties immediately and France should undertake to indicate that the French Union was composed of equal and sovereign states, to declare that France would withdraw its expeditionary force from the Indochinese states at an earliest practicable date after an end of hostilities, to provide military aid to the Associated States, and to facilitate Associated States participation in measures required for the defense of their territory. As a final suggestion, and one the Department felt was fundamental, France and the United States should encourage the establishment "at earliest date possible of representative and authentic nationalist governments." (751G.00/5-2454)

For the full text of telegram 4272, see volume XIII.

<sup>2</sup> Telegram 4565 from Paris, May 27, not printed, contained a report that the contents of telegram 4272 had been passed to the French. (751G.00/5-2754)

396.1 GE/5-2854 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

TOP SECRET

GENEVA, May 28, 1954—8 p. m.

Secto 335. Repeated information Paris 352. Department pass Usun 3. Following yesterday's discussion between Lodge, Dixon and Hoppenot on Thai appeal,<sup>1</sup> French express increased worries over (1)

---

<sup>1</sup> Henry Cabot Lodge, Henri Hoppenot, and Sir Pierson Dixon, Permanent Representatives of the United States, France, and the United Kingdom, respectively, to the United Nations, met in New York City on May 27 to discuss the matter of proceeding in the U.N. Security Council on the Thai appeal. Lodge reported to the Department of State in telegram 777 from New York, May 27, that the British and French Representatives were "reluctant to go along with the proposed Thai initiative" and that they were "concerned about the timing of discussions here in relation to the discussions in Geneva." Lodge said he "felt discussions here

Pandora's box possibilities and (2) possible coincidence of introduction of appeal in Security Council with some favorable development here such as opening of talks between representatives of commanders in chief. Nevertheless, we are told Bidault has today instructed Hoppenot that (1) French Government is committed in principle to supporting introduction of appeal and (2) that recommendations as to most appropriate and least embarrassing timing should be made ad referendum by him, Lodge and Dixon.

SMITH

would be helpful" and recommended that since the United States had encouraged Thailand for a second time to make an appeal, "we ought to inform Khoman that he proceed with the letter asking for a SC meeting." (751G.00/5-2754)

The three Permanent Representatives met again on May 28 to discuss the text of the Thai appeal. They agreed that some modifications should be made to the text but they disagreed again on the timing for submission of the appeal. Hoppenot and Dixon felt submission should be delayed; Lodge said the appeal should be submitted on May 29. After consultation with the Department of State, Lodge informed Dixon and Hoppenot that Secretary of State Dulles wanted the appeal to be filed as soon as possible; the Secretary indicated to Lodge that in order to meet the French and British views on timing it would not seem essential for the Security Council to meet right away. The French and British accepted the U.S. views. For the text of the memorandum of conversation between Lodge, Dixon, and Hoppenot, May 28, see volume XIII.

The Government of Thailand submitted its appeal in the form of a letter to the U.N. Security Council on May 29, drawing the Security Council's attention to the Indochina situation, which Thailand contended threatened Thai security, and requesting that the Security Council provide observation of this situation under the auspices of the U.N. Peace Observation Commission. The letter of appeal was circulated as U.N. doc. S/3220.

MAY 29, 1954

396.1 GE/5-2954 : Telegram

The Acting Secretary of State to the United States Delegation<sup>1</sup>

SECRET

WASHINGTON, May 29, 1954—1 : 39 p. m.

Tosec 302. Reference Tosec 288<sup>2</sup> and Dulte 131.<sup>3</sup> While the line of reasoning adopted is similar in both referenced telegrams, I believe, as indicated in Tosec 288, that our initial position with reference to a supervisory organization should provide for the inclusion of Thailand. If Indonesia were included we should insist also on the Philippines.

I see no objection to agreeing that the Asian members of a control commission might invite a non-Asian state to join them. However I believe it might be offensive to the Asian members of a control commission if it were stipulated that they must include in their membership a non-Asian state, particularly a European nation. This would suggest to them that we have no confidence in their reliability unless buttressed by non-Asian support. Accordingly, I feel that for the time being we should neither make nor support a recommendation that a non-Asian state be included in a military control commission for Indochina.

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by Sturm of FE/PSA.

<sup>2</sup> Dated May 28, p. 966.

<sup>3</sup> Dated May 28, p. 963.

MURPHY

396.1 GE/5-2854 : Telegram

Eighth Restricted Session on Indochina, Geneva, May 29, 3 p. m.: The United States Delegation to the Department of State<sup>1</sup>

CONFIDENTIAL

GENEVA, May 28 [29], 1954—midnight.

Secto 349. Repeated information Paris 365, London 229, Moscow 99, Tokyo 100, Saigon 132, Phnom Penh Vientiane unnumbered. Tokyo pass CINCFE. Department pass Defense. Eighth restricted session, Saturday, May 29, Molotov presiding.

Eden stated informal talks yesterday had, he hoped, produced agreement on text which was merely attempt to express generally accepted view without anyone accepting at this stage undertakings they found impossible (text telegraphed separately<sup>2</sup>). If agreed, date for meeting of representatives of commanders should be fixed.

Bidault held it important to begin concrete discussions between representatives of commanders and that Eden text permitted such discussions to start. French did not object, it being understood talks would begin on regrouping in Vietnam. France reserved its point of view on other problems, notably on difference between Laotian and Cambodian problems, and that of Vietnam. Other questions dealt with in general discussion such as controls and guarantees must also be solved before any agreement could be considered valid. Military experts would work merely on behalf of conference and their findings could not commit it without its explicit approval. Representatives of French and Vietnam Commands would be available here as of June 1.

Dong in long prepared statement said regrouping essential but must not interfere with essential unity of country. Two armed forces must first be separated but peace could only be based on recognition of national rights and independence of people of Vietnam. Essence of military problem was cease-fire. Essence of political problem was independence and territorial unity. Establishment of zones was only transitory and provisional measure looking toward national unity to be attained through free elections. Progress toward peace and unity was disconcerting to US interventionists but their obstinacy deceived no one, particularly in Indochina. Bao Dai's army and administration were falling apart. Viet Minh proposals were greeted with unanimous enthusiasm by Indochinese in France as well as Indochina. He thought Chinese proposals should be accepted as synthesis of views so far expressed and conference then pass on to other questions. British proposal contained essential element of direct contact between military and was acceptable. It would take some time to get Viet Minh representatives here. Local contacts between commanders would be even more important than those in Geneva. (He distributed statement on completion of evacuation of 858 wounded of 21 nationalities from Dien Bien Phu with what he stated was agreed report on evacuation by field representatives of two parties.)

<sup>1</sup> A set of minutes of this session (IC Restricted/8) is in Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 278. The minutes indicate that the meeting convened at 3 p. m. and adjourned at 7 p. m. The minutes are also printed in Conférence de Genève, pp. 159-167. The communiqué issued by the Conference is printed in Cmd. 9186, p. 136.

<sup>2</sup> Telegram Secto 336, dated May 28, p. 965.

Molotov remarked sharply that Viet Minh statement covered several points not dealt with in Eden proposal. They could be dealt with later. Eden proposal was subject of discussion at present. No objections had been raised to it. If it was agreed, conference could pass on to other work.

Bidault said that although Viet Minh statement on evacuation of wounded contained many misstatements, he would not enter into polemics other than to say evacuation of wounded had not been completed. French Government for its part was prepared unilaterally to liberate a large number of wounded Viet Minh.

Chou in single sentence favored adoption of Eden proposal.

Cambodian delegate stated understanding Eden proposal concerned Vietnam only. Cambodia had no objection to simultaneous cease-fire provided arrangements were made for withdrawal of foreign invaders from Cambodia. Since no Cambodian representative would participate in discussions, he reserved right to contest any prejudicial recommendations. Regrouping could not apply to Cambodia. If his reservations were accepted by all other delegations, UK proposal was acceptable as starting point for military experts, who should be instructed to consider regrouping in Vietnam only.

Laos accepted Eden proposal on understanding regrouping could be applied only to Vietnam.

Vietnam representative agreed representatives of two Commands should meet here soonest but their work would be purely technical. It must be guided by general principles, one of which as included in French proposal was that regrouping should not be detrimental to Vietnamese political and territorial unity. Press had been nearly unanimous in regarding Viet Minh proposals as [calling for?] partition. Even if it were called provisional, same had been true of division of Korea. He asked that statement of this principle be added to Eden proposal.

Smith made statement given in Secto 343<sup>3</sup> and Secto 344.<sup>4</sup>

Molotov stated Soviet delegation considered Eden proposal acceptable and would in due course express its views on matters covered therein. Speaking again as chairman, he wished to sum up discussion. Meeting was discussing question of whether Eden proposal was acceptable. Account must be taken of the reservations already made and others which might be made by other delegations. He believed all were proceeding on assumption UK draft did not exhaust questions upon which it touched but that on other hand it was acceptable in its present form as all had spoken favorably of it as step forward. If it were acceptable to all, date should be fixed and he suggested June 1 as French had earlier proposed.

Dinh said that as representative of most interested party, he must return once more to question of safeguarding Vietnamese political and territorial unity. Without assurance on this point, it would be difficult for him to accept Eden proposal which neither provided for nor excluded partition.

Molotov expressed desire to help. He suggested it was common view of all that we should proceed from principle of Vietnamese unity and that this matter could not provoke any discussion.

Dong expressed agreement.

Molotov again inquired as to date.

Dong recalled his reservation as to delay in arrival of his military representative and suggested continuing and expanding contact already established between his delegation and French.

Bidault suggested that if Viet Minh representatives were not here by June 1 talks could start with whomever they had on hand. Chou referred to mechanical difficulties of transport and suggested meeting recess. Smith believed any mechanical difficulties could be easily overcome and asked estimate of time necessary.

Following recess during which Communist delegates met, Viet Minh delegation, after smilingly turning down US delegation offer of plane of "aggressor state" to bring Viet Minh military representative to Geneva, repeated Viet Minh "taking necessary dispositions" and finally said would advise prior June 1 date when Viet Minh military representative would arrive Geneva.

Molotov then embarked on lengthy commentary of principles set forth in CPR proposal of May 27 (Secto 326<sup>5</sup>). He said all delegates seemed to agree regarding simultaneous cease-fire applicable all armed forces in Indochina and that direct negotiations between parties concerned both in Geneva and on spot should lead to implementation this principle. Question of adjustment of territories, grouping of troops and passage of troops across areas held by each side and other matters could also be discussed by military representatives in Geneva and on spot.

<sup>3</sup> Infra.

<sup>4</sup> In telegram Secto 344, May 29, the U.S. Delegation reported that the last sentence of text of telegram Secto 343, infra, should read "US delegation of course reserves its right, as do others, to decide for itself." (396.1 GE/5-2954)

<sup>5</sup> Dated May 27, p. 947.

Molotov strongly endorsed CPR position regarding importance of stopping entry of troops and war matériels into Indochina. This problem leads to problem of controls and supervision. Molotov stated that supervision by an international commission had been proposed by the French delegation and others and that the Soviet delegation had proposed supervision by commission of neutral countries. After an agreement in principle on this point, question of composition could be taken up. Molotov also endorsed Viet Minh proposal supported by CPR regarding principle of control by commission made up of representatives of two Commands. He discussed this as an indisputable proposal to which no one had objected. Molotov then referred to French proposal that agreements be guaranteed by Geneva conference states and said Soviet delegation had expressed agreement. He continued that no other delegation had expressed objection. Following agreement in principle on guarantee Molotov envisaged discussion of character of commitments to be entered into as suggested by CPR. Molotov said that USSR believes in consultation which would then provide approach collective action. Molotov believed no difficulty would be encountered regarding prisoners of war and civil internees.

Molotov suggested it would be well to record agreement regarding principles involved in CPR proposals. Their adoption would facilitate discussion of other matters on which agreement not yet reached.

US delegate stated he could not accept all of "interesting summary" made by Molotov, adding that there are objections to CPR proposals. He added that some of CPR proposals already taken care of in UK proposal adopted. He stated nothing more important than questions of supervision. He suggested that at next meeting conference devote its attention to such matters as type, quality and composition of supervisory authority, stating that if this matter could be disposed of practically all others might fall into line; if not, problem very difficult indeed.

Molotov then read draft communiqué (see Secto 347 *).

US delegate stated that while there was agreement on communiqué various delegations have made reservations or statements establishing their positions regarding UK proposal. US delegate stated he reserved right to make US position clear and to make statement to press along lines brief statement he had previously made (see Secto 343 and Secto 344).

---

* Dated May 29, p. 975.

Cambodian delegate made statement endorsing US delegate's statement and stating that Cambodian delegate would make Cambodian reservation available to press.

Soviet delegate said that if each delegation could give its point of view regarding communiqué, nature and purpose of communiqué might be vitiated. He suggested perhaps conference had better resume plenary sessions.

US delegate stated this special case and suggested perhaps a sentence could be added to communiqué to effect various delegates reserved position on certain matters of principle.

Eden, who during this discussion had been showing signs great impatience and irritation then said perhaps terms of UK proposal might be altogether omitted from communiqué (see below).

Chou En-lai said communiqué had better be left as read and asked whether US delegate proposal would not empower every delegation to make its views known through a press conference.

US delegate expressed appreciation for Chou En-lai observation. Stressed that US delegation has observed press ethics in matter of restricted sessions. He pointed out however this peculiar situation in which US delegation authorized not to accept and not to oppose UK proposal but rather to record certain principles. He stressed he did not intend, in dealing with press, to go beyond framework of brief remarks he had made.

Molotov then suggested that agreement be reached to adopt communiqué without additions, to take note of observations made by delegates regarding their reservations and not to restrict delegations in their dealings with press on this topic. This was generally agreed.

Comment: It was clear that while there had been prior coordination between Molotov and Chinese, Viet Minh had not been given their instructions prior to meeting and were somewhat slow in responding to Molotov's clear directions that they agree to meeting of Commanders in Geneva if possible by June 1.

Although I had discussed with Eden at intermission fact that we would have to make our position clear on various reservations of principle we had taken, when I raised subject in meeting both Eden and Reading gave a startling public exhibition of impatience and pique which included an irate aside by Reading, audible throughout room to effect UK should withdraw its proposal. In contrast Molotov remained calm and finally accepted that it would be understood each delegation would be able to make clear positions it had taken with regard to resolution.

396.1 GE/5-2954 : Telegram

Eighth Restricted Session on Indochina, Geneva, May 29, 3 p. m. : The United States Delegation to the Department of State

CONFIDENTIAL      NIACT

GENEVA, May 29, 1954—7 p. m.

Secto 343. Repeated information London 223, Paris 358, Saigon 128. Following is text of statement made by Smith in restricted session Saturday May 29 on Eden proposal. We will release it to press if text of Eden proposal is incorporated in communiqué or if it leaks textually. Department may wish to do same.

"I would like to make clear the position of my delegation on proposal submitted by Mr. Eden.

"I have frequently made it clear that US wants killing to stop throughout Indochina as soon as possible.

"I have also made it clear that US maintains problems of Laos and Cambodia are of a distinctly different nature from problems of Vietnam. It is my view that forces which are now carrying on hostilities against Governments of Laos and Cambodia are foreign forces. US believes it essential that any settlement for Laos and Cambodia must provide for complete withdrawal of these forces from both countries.

"However I do not view proposal made by UK as departing from principle that Laos and Cambodia are in a different situation than Vietnam. Moreover, I would assume that no recommendation made to this conference by any military representatives will involve any violation of this principle and that they will provide for withdrawal of Viet Minh forces from Laos and Cambodia. Having made known these views and assumptions, and upon understanding that this proposal is acceptable to all of the other delegations participating in this conference, USDel will not oppose convening of the military representatives as proposed by UK and would hope that they will produce acceptable solutions. US delegation, of course, reserves its right as do others, to decide for itself whether any of the solutions ultimately proposed by the military experts are consistent with our firm positions on Laos and Cambodia as well as Vietnam which I have already stated to the conference."

SMITH

396.1 GE/5-2954 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

GENEVA, May 29, 1954.

Secto 347. Repeated information Paris 363, Moscow 98, London 227, Saigon 131, Tokyo 99, Phnom Penh and Vientiane unnumbered. Tokyo pass CINCFE. Department pass Defense. The nine delegations met in a restricted meeting on May 29, and continued their discussion of the problem of the reestablishment of peace in Indochina. The meeting adopted a proposal presented by the delegation of the United Kingdom, which reads as follows :

“In order to facilitate the early and simultaneous cessation of hostilities it is proposed that :

“(a) Representatives of the two commands should meet immediately in Geneva and contacts should also be established on the spot.

“(b) They should study the disposition of forces to be made upon the cessation of hostilities, beginning with the question of regrouping areas in Vietnam.

“(c) They should report their findings and recommendations to the conference as soon as possible.”

It was agreed that the date of the first meeting of the representatives of the two commands in Geneva shall be fixed before June 1.

SMITH

396.1 GE/5-2854 : Telegram

The Acting Secretary of State to the United States Delegation<sup>1</sup>

TOP SECRET      NIACT      WASHINGTON, May 29, 1954—3:37 p. m.

Tosec 307. Reference Sectos 332,<sup>2</sup> 333<sup>3</sup> and 336.<sup>4</sup> We realize from Secto 336 that you are fully alive to the dangers of associating Laos and Cambodia with Viet Nam in any cease fire and troop regroupment. We agree with Phleger's analysis of the position and believe that great attention must be paid to the wording of any agreed proposal on this subject.

As we have stressed in a series of messages, especially Tosec 254<sup>5</sup> and Tosec 288,<sup>6</sup> we firmly maintain the position that the three Associated States are not to be treated as a bloc in proposed military arrangement.

As to paragraph (b) of UK draft (Secto 332 and 336) we believe that our position could be fairly represented by a redraft along the following lines :

“The first task should be to work out regrouping areas within Vietnam, for Vietminh forces operating in all three Associated States, and for Franco-Vietnamese forces operating in Vietnam”

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by Sturm of PSA and Gullion of S/P.

<sup>2</sup> Telegram Secto 332, May 28, contained the U.K. proposal presented to the Drafting Committee on Indochina. (396.1 GE/5-2854) For minutes of the meeting of this committee, May 28, and the text of the British proposal, see p. 955.

<sup>3</sup> Telegram Secto 333, May 28, contained the summary minutes of the first meeting of the Drafting Committee on Indochina. (396.1 GE/5-2854) For minutes of this meeting, May 28, see p. 955.

<sup>4</sup> Dated May 28, p. 965.

<sup>5</sup> Dated May 24, p. 912.

<sup>6</sup> Dated May 28, p. 966.

With reference to the Eden version in Secto 336, we oppose the words of the preamble "and simultaneous" unless it is made clear thereafter that regrouping would be effected only within Vietnam.

As you know (Tedul 137)<sup>7</sup> we fear that zonal "regrouping" may tend to de facto partition which would raise serious questions for us. Also, the feasibility of maintaining the integrity of enclaves and isolated sectors is problematical. Without effective policing and guarantees, which an Asian commission may be unable to supply, we fear a possible general merging under Communist pressure, unless Western powers are willing and ready to intervene on detailed and regional questions.

We should like as soon as practicable receive whatever series of maps or other topographical descriptions of the zones projected under the various propositions may be obtainable from French or other sources.

MURPHY

---

<sup>7</sup> Dated May 28, p. 967.

---

Eisenhower Library, Dulles papers

Memorandum by the Director of Central Intelligence (Dulles) to the Secretary of State

SECRET

[WASHINGTON,] May 29, 1954.

PERSONAL AND PRIVATE

I received the following eyes only message for you from Bedell sent Geneva Saturday, May 29.

"Please give this privately to Foster preferably by phone as soon as convenient after he arrives in New York on Tuesday. Bedell is convinced that Eden and Bidault are willing to accept Foster's leadership and judgment on matter of Thai Resolution but they would like to be sure that decisions are his, personally, and taken after he has personally considered their respective problems. Eden's position vis-à-vis India particularly difficult now as result of Allen's statement to Pillai re British support. This statement was made before Eden had informed Krishna Menon, which he did this morning, with bad reaction."

MAY 30, 1954

741.13/5-3054 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Secretary of State

TOP SECRET

GENEVA, May 30, 1954—4 a. m.

Unnumbered. Eyes only Secretary. Absolutely no distribution. Following personal message from the Under Secretary is to be delivered to Secretary Dulles and to no one else.

Dear Foster: The conclusion of our closed session today was so revealing that I must give you my personal impressions to supplement Secto 349.<sup>1</sup> Although, during the recess, I told Eden that when Molotov suggested, as a communiqué, the plain text of the United Kingdom proposal, I would be obliged to say that the United States must also make plain its reservations on matters of unagreed principle; and although at that time he indicated complete agreement, his subsequent performance and that of Lord Reading, was absolutely shocking to me.

I stated the United States position in the most restrained terms. Eden and Reading, although informed in advance as I have said, staged a demonstration of petulance and annoyance, the like of which I have never seen before at an international conference. Their attempt to distort and deceive was so obvious that even Molotov could not swallow it, and his final proposal was, by comparison, reasonable and moderate.

I have done everything I possibly can here to retain an Anglo-American equilibrium. I smiled pleasantly today when Eden told me that my statement at yesterday's plenary session, which the London Times reported as "a clear and restrained defense of the United Nations and the principle of collective security," was "frightful." I shall continue to do so. . . . I felt, in view of the impending visit, that I should give you this personal estimate. You may not agree with it, but here it is, for what it is worth. Signed Beetle.

SMITH

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated May 29, p. 970.

Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 286

Smith-Robertson-Sarasin Meeting, Geneva, May 30, 10:20 a. m.: Memorandum of Conversation, by the Deputy United States Representative (Robertson)<sup>1</sup>

TOP SECRET

GENEVA, May 30, 1954.

Participants: Ambassador Sarasin, Thai Delegation
 Walter Bedell Smith, U.S. Delegation
 Walter S. Robertson, U.S. Delegation

Ambassador Sarasin, just back from a week's visit to Bangkok, came in to report the result of his conversations there with the Prime Minister and other government officials. He stated that decision had been made to proceed with the appeal to the United Nations without delay. The Thais felt that while the threat was not overt, it had actually increased since last June. He hoped we would give our unqualified support, and General Smith assured him that we would. He said he doubted what the attitude of India would be. Prince Wan was seeing Krishna Menon today and they hoped that India could be induced to accept a place on the Peace Observation Commission. If India accepted, Burma might be persuaded to accept too.

---

<sup>1</sup> Summary of discussion was transmitted to the Department of State in telegram Dulte 139, June 1. (790.5/6-154) For text, see volume XII.

General Smith related his conversation with Menon regarding Thailand's appeal to the Security Council. Menon's first reaction was that it was just "American propaganda" and the appeal should not be made until the Geneva Conference had been given full opportunity to reach agreement. After General Smith emphasized the necessity of bringing the United Nations into the Indochina picture and the important role that India should play in such a situation, possibly as a member both of the Peace Observation Commission and of the International Control Commission to enforce the armistice, Menon's attitude seemed to be somewhat modified.

Ambassador Sarasin reported that Thailand's relations with Burma were very much improved, citing the evacuation of the KMT as being very helpful in improving relations. He related conversations which a representative of the Thai Government had with the Acting Foreign Minister of Burma on a recent visit to Rangoon. The Minister stated that Burma was opposed to communism but must appear to be neutral on account of its proximity to communist power. For this reason Burma could not afford to accept assistance from the western countries. If bad came to worse, however, Burma would throw in its lot against the communists.

With reference to the proposal to establish a fighter wing base in Thailand, Ambassador Sarasin reported the Prime Minister said it would be very difficult to explain a Spanish base agreement to his people at this time. He said, however, that his Government agreed in principle and that the base would be acceptable if established in any one of the three following conditions: (1) as a result of United Nations resolutions; (2) as the result of a decision by a collective security organization; (3) in connection with a mutual defense pact with the United States. While Thailand did not want to grant us a base along the lines of the Spanish agreement, it would welcome being furnished with a group of jet fighters for the training of its own pilots and to receive through MAAG the necessary assistance to enable them to establish a base of their own which would be available to us in case of need. The Thais' main concern at the present was to build up its own military forces through MAAG. At present their military organization seemed to be bogged down in procedures and the Thais were confused about what America would or would not do. General Gillmore<sup>2</sup> stated that there was a 50% deficiency in non-commissioned and commissioned officers, that the Air Force while lacking in equipment was making progress, and that the Navy was "all right" for present purposes. He said, however, that Thailand's economic situation had deteriorated so seriously that they would need economic assistance to help relieve the strain of building up its military strength. He cited, for instance, that although they had been furnished with planes it was necessary to use its slender foreign exchange balances to buy spare parts and fuel.

---

<sup>2</sup> Maj. Gen. William M. Gillmore, U.S.A., Chief, Joint U.S. Military Advisory Group, Thailand.

With some initial hesitation but with complete frankness, Ambassador Sarasin stated that General Gillmore, while evidently an able and efficient officer, was very blunt in his relations with the Thai Prime Minister and military officers and that some friction had developed. General Smith suggested that General Donovan might act as mediator to smooth things over. Ambassador Sarasin replied that it appeared the two did not get along very well. General Gillmore considered General Donovan a World War I officer and General Donovan considered General Gillmore to be a young man not mature in experience.

General Smith suggested that in view of the Thais' confusion about what we were willing and able to do and our lack of knowledge of what the Thais themselves were willing to undertake, the best way to resolve the confusion would be for the Thai Chief of Staff and appropriate officers to come to Washington for a frank discussion with our Chiefs of Staff. He said that he would have to obtain authority from Washington for such a procedure, but he felt it could be done if the suggestion appealed to the Thais. Ambassador Sarasin thought it would be an excellent idea and would so report to his Government. General Smith emphasized that if the Thais came they should have clearly in mind beforehand what they are prepared to do and what economic assistance would be needed to carry out their desired program.

Ambassador Sarasin stated his Prime Minister was extremely upset by the five-power talks to take place in Washington on June 3. The Prime Minister felt that if Thailand, the first country to respond to Secretary Dulles' appeal for a SEA collective security pact, was left out of the discussions now to take place, it would seem as if Washington was just taking Thailand for granted. The Prime Minister said it would be impossible to explain Thailand's omission to the Thai people and he earnestly hoped Thailand could be included. General Smith explained that the five-power talks were a continuation of talks which had been going on between the five powers over a period of several years, that they did not represent a discussion by members of a collective security organization, and that none of the countries participating had yet made a definite decision to become parties to such a pact. He said that Great Britain, as has been generally publicized, was unwilling to join a SEA pact before the Geneva Conference had shown whether or not it was able to reach a satisfactory agreement, and that the Australians had been unwilling to take a position before the Australian elections. New Zealand, which at one time was very cold to the idea, was now showing indication of falling in line. In order to get going, it was necessary to fall back on an already existing agency. The purpose of the talks was to obtain the best military evaluation by the five powers of the situation in Indochina. General Smith hoped that such an evaluation would prove to all the participants the need for the pact. He stated that other interested governments would be kept informed as to the discussions and that at the appropriate time it was hoped to have a conference to include them all.

General Smith said it was necessary to get high level military talks started not only to determine an over-all strategic concept but also to impress the communists with allied unity. Ambassador Sarasin was persistent in his unhappiness about the situation. General Smith patiently emphasized that it would be impossible to get the United Kingdom, Australia and New Zealand to participate if other nations were included at this stage, that these were the facts and it would be helpful if he could use his good offices in making them clear to his Prime Minister.

---

396.1 GE/5-3054 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

TOP SECRET      NIACT

GENEVA, May 30, 1954—3 p. m.

Dulte 134. Personal for Murphy. Probably the major part of this conference will be wound up by the end of next week. Eden is leaving within a few days. I believe Molotov will leave as soon as the military experts get started to work under the general terms of the British proposal of yesterday. In any event, things are likely to move very fast. Please emphasize to all concerned that Departmental instructions received after the event, as was Tosec 307,<sup>1</sup> are of very little help.

[Here follows the portion of this message relating to the Korean phase of the Conference; for the text, see page 324.]

Next, and equally important, is the vital matter of the Indochina control authority, particularly its composition. Discussions on this will begin on Monday. The Communists will probably propose a counterpart of the NNSC, possibly offering India as a fifth. The British will probably propose India in association with a European country (Norway is India's choice). The Communists would not accept Thailand or the Philippines, and India would not accept association with them. The realistic element in the problem is the necessity for troops—about 30,000 of them. I hope you will continue to take this fact into consideration, as well as the fact that the period referred to in Tosec 302<sup>2</sup> as "for time being" is likely to be very short unless I am to be continually exposed to pressures from several Foreign Ministers who are becoming very impatient, and irate.

<sup>1</sup> Dated May 29, p. 976.

Therefore, while I am glad to know what our initial position should be, I also need most urgently to know, if it can now be estimated, what our final position may be on this important question. I am still of the opinion that the Colombo powers, in association with a neutral European nation of their selection, would be the best solution. I did not, in my previous message on this subject, imply that the US should propose it.

The other important matter which will come up in few days is the question of international guarantees, either by the nations represented at this conference, or by some other body such as the UN. I very much need to know the Secretary's views about this, and I hope you will get them to me at the earliest.<sup>3</sup> The Communists will insist on consultation and collective action which builds in a veto. We might accept consultation, but should maintain the principle that action shall be taken "jointly or severally" on receipt of a plea from the supervisory authority.

SMITH

<sup>2</sup> Dated May 29, p. 969.

<sup>3</sup> The Department's reply is in telegram Tedul 144, May 31, p. 989.

MAY 31, 1954

Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 285

Memorandum by the Special Adviser to the United States Delegation (Heath) to the Head of the Delegation (Smith)<sup>1</sup>

SECRET

[GENEVA,] May 31, 1954.

Subject: Meeting of the Six regarding this afternoon's restricted session on Indochina.

1) In reply to Chauvel's question, I stated that your remarks Saturday<sup>2</sup> regarding supervision and controls did not indicate that you were ready to submit definite proposals on this subject. I added that we were not taking the initiative in submitting proposals on this or other questions, leaving this to the countries more directly interested. The Cambodian Delegate pointed out that on this question the Viet-minh and the Communist Chinese have advanced rather definite proposals whereas our side is still talking general principles. Chauvel made it clear that Bidault is not yet ready to talk about the composition of the international supervisory authority but that he might advance some ideas regarding the tasks of that authority ((a) keeping the belligerent armies apart and (b) supervising frontiers and ports of entry).

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by Bonsal.

<sup>2</sup> May 29.

2) It was brought out that the other side will probably wish to talk about point 3 of the Chinese Communist proposal relating to the introduction of fresh troops and weapons. We should take the position, as was implicitly stated in your remarks last Saturday, that this issue can only be taken up after agreement has been reached regarding the supervisory authority.

3) It was tentatively agreed that this afternoon Eden would begin with a general statement regarding the position of the Conference in the light of Saturday's developments, that you would then talk briefly expanding the remarks you made on Saturday (draft being prepared) and possibly recounting our experience with NNSC in Korea thus refuting the rosy picture painted by Chou En-lai. Bidault might then make a few remarks regarding the tasks of the supervisory machinery in Indochina.

4) It seemed generally agreed that our side does not have very much to say today and that we need to develop a coordinated position on the supervisory authority. Therefore it was tentatively agreed that we would try to avoid a meeting on Indochina tomorrow holding the next one on Wednesday, June 2nd.

5) The Cambodian Delegate expressed the hope that at the meeting following the one this afternoon the cases of Cambodia and Laos could be taken up again. He made the point that until Vietminh troops were evacuated from Cambodia, Cambodia could agree to no restrictions on Cambodia's right to introduce reinforcements and weapons.

6) The Vietnamese representative expressed regret that the Conference agreement regarding the unity of Viet-Nam had not been incorporated in the communiqué. He may raise this issue. We could probably support a public statement on this subject if other delegations approve (we should not, however, carry the torch on this one).

---

396.1 GE/5-3154 : Telegram

*Ninth Restricted Session on Indochina, Geneva, May 31, 3 p. m. :
The United States Delegation to the Department of State*<sup>1</sup>

CONFIDENTIAL

GENEVA, May 31, 1954—midnight.

Secto 356. Repeated information Paris 369, London 232, Saigon 137, Tokyo 103, Moscow 101, Phnom Penh, Vientiane unnumbered. Tokyo

<sup>1</sup> A set of minutes of this session (IC Restricted/9) is in Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 278. The minutes indicate that the meeting convened at 3 p. m. and adjourned at 7 p. m. The minutes are also printed in Conférence de Genève, pp. 168-175.

for CINCFE. Department pass Defense. Ninth restricted session, Monday, May 31, Eden presiding :

Eden stated conference had Chinese proposal of May 27 (Secto 326<sup>2</sup>) before it. First two paragraphs covered by military negotiations agreed last session. Most important remaining provisions refer to supervision on which US delegate spoke last meeting.

Gromyko who led Soviet delegation in Molotov's absence pointed out CPR proposal dealt other matters which must be discussed also.

US delegate agreed stating CPR paper contained two most important points: Supervision and guarantees. US delegate, after stressing fact restricted meetings make it possible for delegates to speak plainly without worrying about public effect, spoke of great importance of supervisory machinery to be available as soon as fighting stops. He said this could at first be of an interim, local character but function must be taken over at earliest possible moment by international supervision.

US delegate then referred to Korean experience with NNSC "which we hopefully called neutral" and to Chou En-lai's remarks concerning Korean experience. He said UN side had acted in good faith toward Commission and Communists had not. He read from letters of May 4 and 7 from Swedish and Swiss members of Commission to prove his point by impartial testimony. He concluded that armistice supervision by Neutral Nations Commission will not be effective unless:

- (a) Commission composed of truly neutral nations
- (b) Agreed system for checking reinforcements not dependent primarily on good faith opposing forces, and
- (c) Personnel of NNSC unrestricted geographically in activities.

Chou En-lai took strong issue with Smith's statement. After criticizing Swiss and Swedes for lack of complete impartiality, he turned to report of Repatriation Commission in which there was majority report agreed by Indians, Poles and Czechs and minority report submitted by Swedes and Swiss. Chou En-lai said, however, NNSC had been basically successful and he referred to supervision over rotation of military personnel and replacement of arms and munitions. There has been no incident reported basically detrimental to armistice such as recurrence of hostilities. He denied reports that there have been armistice violations by North Koreans or Chinese volunteers. He referred to charge made on October 12, 1953, by senior delegate of UN Command to effect North Koreans and Chinese had shipped aircraft into North Korea. A thorough inspection on ground by NNSC revealed this was without foundation. On other hand, UN Command's requests to investigate North Korean Army to determine if POWs captured from ROK Army were serving there had been denied as beyond terms of armistice agreement. If this were not so, Communist side might well request right to investigate on UN side and even on Taiwan to find 48,000 prisoners held by force. Such request if made by Communists would also be denied as exceeding armistice agreement.

<sup>2</sup> Dated May 27, p. 947.

As to matter introduction fresh troops or matériel, Chou En-lai alleged NNSC inspection teams stationed at entry ports have full facilities. Those teams receive from North Korean-Chinese volunteer side reports in advance and may make inspections at any time including spot checks. He mentioned particularly possibility of making inspection of trains on which no advance report had been submitted. He referred also to fact that UN side had insisted on inspection teams located at two ports of entry which Communist side not using for rotations or replacements.

Chou En-lai "acknowledged fact" NNSC has met difficulties created by UN side. He referred to statements by Czech and Polish members April 15 and April 30. He mentioned four items.

(1) 14,000 prisoners of war shipped out of Korea at Inchon in violation Neutral Nations Repatriation Commission agreement. NNSC not allowed make inspection this movement. This was violation of agreement.

(2) In ten months UN side has brought in over 7,500 combat aircraft allegedly as replacements but NNSC inspection has reported in addition 186 aircraft shipped in illegally resulting in increase of combat strength in violation of agreement.

(3) There have been violations in matters of spare parts and other items which UN side has not allowed NNSC to inspect. This also increases combat strength and constitutes violation.

(4) UN side only allows inspection of ships reported but refuses to permit inspection of ships not reported.

Chou En-lai concluded that Neutral Nations Commission should be able reflect views both sides and take care interests both belligerents while supervising terms of armistice impartially. He also favored joint commissions of representatives of two sides charged with implementation of armistice agreement.

US delegate repeated that Czechs and Poles on NNSC not neutral and added view Communists cannot be neutral.

After recess, DRV representative took issue with US delegate's view regarding neutrality of Communists. He then announced designation by Viet Minh High Command of Ta Quang Buu (member of Viet Minh delegation here and currently Vice Minister of Defense) as official delegate to meetings of representatives of two High Commands. He will have several military advisers. Colonel Ha Van Lau of Viet Minh delegation will be prepared meet with Brebisson and others on French side on June 1 to prepare opening meeting representatives two High Commands.

Bidault accepted proposal for meeting and later indicated Franco-Vietnamese representative at military representatives meetings is to be General Deltiel assisted by high French and Vietnamese officers including Colonel Brebisson.

Cambodian delegate supported US delegate's position regarding desirability appointing true neutrals to supervising authority and impossibility of Communist neutrality. He also reiterated that Chinese Communist proposals could refer only to Vietnam not to Cambodia. He stated he would submit a proposal dealing with Cambodia.

Gromyko then rehearsed Communist Chinese proposal (Secto 326) along very much the same lines followed by Molotov on May 29 (Secto 349<sup>3</sup>). He advocated recording agreements which had already been reached on these principles, namely,

- (1) That cessation of hostilities should be simultaneous;
- (2) That parties have now agreed to enter into military contacts to make appropriate readjustments of territories held by them;
- (3) That it is indispensable to control introduction into Indochina of fresh troops and matériel;
- (4) Need for international supervision and for proposed joint committee of belligerents to help supervise armistice;
- (5) Desirability of guarantees by Geneva powers with provision for consultation and collective action; and
- (6) Release of prisoners of war and civilian internees.

In speaking of supervision, Gromyko referred to alleged general approval of concept of joint commissions representing two commands. He also said there was general agreement regarding a neutral nations commission. He agreed with US delegate's view that this matter of neutral nations commission required full discussion. He suggested a neutral nations commission composed of India, Poland, Czechoslovakia and Pakistan, stating that such a commission could supervise the implementation of the terms of the cessation of hostilities. He said it would have every reason to insure an impartial approach and every facility for carrying out its task. It would have the "necessary international authority".

Gromyko took issue with US delegate's statement regarding impossibility Communist nation being true neutral. He said this position might be turned in opposite direction but that he refused to reach any such gloomy conclusion. He said ideology is one thing and cooperation and the maintenance of peace is another thing.

---

<sup>3</sup> Dated May 29, p. 970.

Gromyko concluded by expressing hope conference could adopt a resolution setting forth agreements on principle which he had outlined in general support of CPR proposal.

Bidault said his understanding of agreements reached was not as broad as Gromyko's. He considered international control as fundamental preliminary to any regrouping of forces and agreement on guarantees. International control must be effective, equitable and respected. He indicated he would be prepared later to give views.

With regard to Cambodia and Laos, Bidault said main task of control commission would be to insure withdrawal of invading troops. In Vietnam, task would be considerably more complex including internal organization, inspection of regrouping areas and of lines separating zones and disarmament of irregulars. He indicated acceptance of concept of joint commissions representing belligerents as adjuncts to international commission. He stressed, however, responsibility of control would rest with international commission which would have supreme authority to see to implementation of agreements. He said conference must define :

- (a) Functions of international commission ;
- (b) Composition to be drawn from countries truly neutral ; and
- (c) Permanent authority to which commission would report.

As to composition, Bidault refrained from entering controversy as to whether Communist countries can be neutral but he said Gromyko's proposed commission bore a great resemblance to composition already accepted in Korea. Bidault noted with approval views of US delegate on results there. He suggested conference would be justified in seeking some new approach and said that he might later have some proposals.

Cambodian delegate then took strong issue with Gromyko's statement on paragraph 2 of China's proposal dealing with regrouping zones. He stressed that military conversations will deal only with Vietnam. He recalled that Molotov, as chairman at last meeting, had taken note of Cambodian and other reservations but that today Gromyko had referred only to communiqué. Cambodian delegate asked that Cambodian reservation be included in today's communiqué. Eden turned down this request with statement situation was as left at last meeting, namely, that conference took note of reservations and delegates were free to make these reservations public.

Agreement was then reached on communiqué (Secto 355<sup>4</sup>). It was agreed, on Eden proposal, that a day for contacts and reflection would be useful. The next restricted meeting will be June 2.

Original draft of communiqué spoke of "military representatives of France and the DRV". As a result of point made by Vietnamese representative and proposal of Soviet delegate language finally adopted was "military representatives of the two sides".

(Comment: Although this may be somewhat ambiguous, record of discussion makes clear that military representatives included on the one hand French High Command including French and Vietnamese officers and on the other hand representatives of DRV High Command.)

(Comment: Chou En-lai was obviously caught unprepared by Smith's statement on NNSC and after period of silence during which there were no speakers finally spoke extemporaneously and with more animation than he has thus far shown while aides scurried out to obtain material brought in piece-meal while he was speaking.

SMITH

---

<sup>4</sup>The text of the communiqué, transmitted to the Department of State in telegram Secto 355, May 31, was as follows: "The nine delegations continued in restricted session their discussion of the problem of restoring peace in Indochina. The conference was informed that a preliminary meeting would be held on June 1 between military representatives of the two sides in order to make arrangements for the meetings of the representatives of the two commands. The next meeting of the conference will be held on June 2." (Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 258)

---

751G.00/5-3154 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

TOP SECRET

GENEVA, May 31, 1954—4 p. m.

Dulte 135. Repeated information Paris 367, Saigon 135. Re Tosec 269 (repeated Paris 4272 and Saigon 2418)<sup>1</sup> and Paris 4565 to Department (repeated Geneva 304 and Saigon 549).<sup>2</sup> Am advised Bidault wishes to discuss with me in near future question of clarifying independence. Am told he is in general agreement with line of thinking Tosec 269 but has some ideas of his own on how to proceed.

My own views remain those expressed in Dulte 120.<sup>3</sup>

SMITH

---

<sup>1</sup> See footnote 1 to telegram Secto 331, p. 968.

<sup>2</sup> See footnote 2, ibid.

<sup>3</sup> Dated May 26. p. 935.

396.1 GE/5-3054 : Telegram

The Acting Secretary of State to the United States Delegation<sup>1</sup>

TOP SECRET

WASHINGTON, May 31, 1954—6: 14 p. m.

Tedul 144. For Smith from Murphy. Re Dulte 134.<sup>2</sup> Your urgent need for guidance fully appreciated as well as your capacity to absorb pressures of "irate Foreign Ministers"!

Secretary will not be available until Tuesday<sup>3</sup> morning in New York arriving Washington about nine p. m. EDT.

You have been given our thinking on Korea in Tosec 316<sup>4</sup> subject Secretary's approval.

On Indo-China we are giving Secretary outline our thoughts for his consideration as follows (and no doubt he will communicate to you his views as soon as possible).

I. Outlook for Conference.

Conference is rapidly approaching new stage with summoning of military experts to Geneva and forthcoming departure of Molotov and Eden. Therefore, important at this time we review our total position. Military experts cannot, of course, commit us to accept their recommendations or any territorial settlement in Viet Nam which threaten to deteriorate to disadvantage of anti-Communist security position. As you indicated in your remarks May 29 (Secto 343<sup>5</sup>) we should continue reserve right to decide for ourselves whether any of solutions ultimately proposed are "consistent with our firm position on Laos and Cambodia, as well as Viet Nam". (Underscoring mine.)

If evolution of military campaign should threaten maintenance of key positions in Tonkin Delta, this might confront United States with grave decisions (key areas may be those outlined in paragraph (4) of Dillon's 4605, repeated Geneva 560 May 30<sup>6</sup>). It is no less true that loss these key positions through negotiated settlement would be unacceptable to United States.

On basis latest messages from Paris, present French Government seems disposed to hold in the Delta. Our actions in Geneva and elsewhere are calculated strengthen its ability and will to resist. If French Government or its successor should weaken and seek end fighting on worse terms, prejudicial to free world security and integrity of Viet

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by Gullion of S/P, Tyler of WE, Popper of UNP, and Sturm of PSA. Repeated to Paris as telegram 4334, to Saigon as telegram 2463, and to London as telegram 6474.

<sup>2</sup> Dated May 30, p. 981.

<sup>3</sup> June 1.

<sup>4</sup> Dated May 31, p. 326.

<sup>5</sup> Dated May 29, p. 975.

<sup>6</sup> For text, see volume XIII.

Nam, we might have seriously to consider extent if any to which we could associate ourselves with such a settlement.

Dubious attitude of British as reflected by Eden would not prevent us from making this independent assessment.

II. Composition of Control Authority.

We are opposed to any "counterpart of the NNSC". Our preferred solution is control commission organized as suggested our Tosec 302.<sup>7</sup> You are authorized, however, support commission which included Norway or another friendly European nation provided Asian powers who might be expected make up control commission should indicate no insuperable objection. If, as counterpart to friendly European nation, Soviets should propose European satellite, this would be unacceptable and we would prefer stand for purely Asian membership.

III. International Guarantees.

In my view necessary sanctions against violation should preferably be supplied through UN. It is increasingly clear here that if US must eventually intervene, public and congressional opinion would much more readily support action within UN framework. Moreover, this solution would commend itself to Asian nations, particularly Associated States.

Asian nations acting alone without UN would have neither will nor ability prevent or penalize violations; in fact, they may even be unwilling assume field supervision functions without some relationship to UN.

Action by signatory powers alone would have relatively narrow base. Moreover, on practically every issue action would be inhibited by sharp divisions between Communist and free world components. If intervention were then undertaken "jointly or severally" by free nations it might have aspect of an action by interested powers unbacked by disinterested support of third parties.

In UN there exist established procedures for intervention which could be rapidly utilized, whereas these would have to be devised and spelled out for intervention by signatory powers, doubtless over opposition of Communists.

Despite SC veto, UN charter and procedures provide effective means for individual or collective defense against armed aggression.

For above reasons, UN responsibility from outset is preferable but we could accept solution in which: 1) signatories pledge responsibility for no breach in armistice by participants their side; 2) signatories agree as part of armistice that if control commission reports breach in armistice, any signatory may refer matter immediately to UN.

---

<sup>7</sup> Dated May 29, p. 969.

MURPHY

---

Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 810

The Acting Secretary of State to the Secretary of State

TOP SECRET

WASHINGTON, May 31, 1954.

DEAR FOSTER: During your absence as brief as it has been, it seems to have become increasingly clear that the basic decision which confronts you regarding Geneva is whether you want the United States to be particeps to an agreement on Indochina which, in the light of the Geneva conversations, cannot be happy from the American point of view. Nothing has happened so far which provides encouragement for belief that a satisfactory understanding would eventuate. I doubt you have expected that. The United States is not a belligerent in the Indochina hostilities and barring overt Red Chinese participation, perhaps will not enter at this late hour. In view of the British obvious determination to see some form, almost any, of settlement, and what appears an unmistakable trend in Paris on the political side to achieve a settlement, we have the concomitant of a French effort to nudge us into some form of military participation. I think you have said that if the latter effort is designed to strengthen the position at Geneva, there will be no objection; but if it will lead to compromising the conditions laid down by the United States for participation, that was to be avoided. At the risk of belaboring the obvious, it is suggested that giving instructions to Bedell without a clear-cut conviction whether in the end we wish to be parties to an agreement of settlement for Indochina, whether termed "honorable" or not, is an exceedingly difficult undertaking. The arguments for and against are fairly clear. Our tactical position would be best protected if the United States would not be particeps. I hope that we can have the benefit of your guidance on this basic consideration after your return.

We have elaborated some thoughts on both Korea and Indo-China which are enclosed in the forms of a copy of our Tosec 316<sup>1</sup> and a staff memorandum on Indo-China, Tedul 144.<sup>2</sup>

I hope the short break you had was beneficial.

All the best.

Yours,

ROBERT MURPHY

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated May 31, p. 326.

<sup>2</sup> Supra.

396.1 GE/5-3154 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

TOP SECRET      NIACT

GENEVA, May 31, 1954—9 p. m.

Dulte 136. Personal and eyes only for Secretary.

Dear Foster: There is one consideration in connection with your Western trip that worries me a great deal. This trip might, I fear, coincide with what one might call the windup of the "Foreign Minister" phase of the Conference. I think Eden will leave Thursday, for reasons which I told you privately. Molotov is making a quick trip to Moscow this weekend, and my guess is that he will leave around the end of next week, or the first of the following week if by then the military representatives are on the spot and working. Bidault, who trusts few of his associates, will probably divide his time between here and Paris, as he has a large stake in the military recommendations.

I think we should wind up Korea during the next week or ten days, depending on your decision regarding the two alternative lines of action suggested in my Dulte 134 of May 30<sup>1</sup> to Murphy, and during this period the senior members of the sixteen will be drifting out. Some have already gone.

The trouble is that this will be just the time I need to be in close touch with you. I have the feeling that things are going to happen very fast during the next ten days. Unless arrangements can be made for me to receive your personal advice and instructions very promptly, it might be better for me to come home as you originally suggested, either letting Murphy replace me or, possibly even better, leaving Robertson and Johnson to carry on here. After a month here, I have a certain feeling of the realities of the situation that I find reflected only in your personal messages and in the conversations we had before your departure. I am quite certain, for example, that we will see a division of Vietnam, no matter what it is called, and that we will be lucky to save half of it, as we will be lucky if we do not lose a considerable northern slice of Laos. We will be equally lucky if all concerned would accept supervision in Indochina by the Colombo powers, possibly with the association of a neutral European State. Norway, by the way, was not my suggestion. but Menon's, and I agree that we should not propose it as the French don't take to it. I am reasonably sure that neither the Communists, nor India would take Thailand or the Philippines, as they consider them our stooges, but I think we should try for them, at least as a gesture, if the Colombo powers or other Asian States are proposed by others. Menon has been busy trying to sell the idea of India and Norway to the Russians and Chinese,

---

<sup>1</sup> Ante, p. 981.

I do not know with what success. Incidentally, today the Russians made the first bid: India, Pakistan, Poland and Czechoslovakia.

If I could have your own personal thoughts on these matters, it would be of great help to me. Signed Bedell.

SMITH

JUNE 1, 1954

396.1 GE/6-154: Telegram

Smith-Eden-Bidault Meeting, June 1, 1954, Noon: The United States Delegation to the Department of State

TOP SECRET

NIACT

GENEVA, June 1, 1954—4 p. m.

Dulte 138. Eden asked for a private meeting this noon with Bidault and myself. After apologizing for passing out "the usual British bit of paper", he handed each of us the following, saying at the same time that "British would support the position of France in Indochina and would go along with Americans in Korea".

"I. Indochina.

"1. How do the French and Americans see the future development of the conference? Is it or is it not urgent to get an agreement? What are the chances of getting the main lines of an agreement worked out by the end of next week?

"2. Will the French have ready for tomorrow's meeting their own detailed proposals on international control under M. Bidault's headings:

"(a) Form and functions.

"(b) Composition.

"(c) Ultimate authority.

"3. In particular, can we make a counterproposal on composition? Can we propose the five Colombo powers?

"4. Have the French also begun to work out their ideas on the guarantee, the introduction of new material and personnel and the other remaining questions covered by the Chinese proposals?

"5. What may we say to Chou En-lai tonight? May we sound him about the Colombo powers?

[Here follows Part II which dealt with Korea; for text, see page 333.]

After some discussion we agreed with regard to point one—Indochina—it is urgent to clear the thing up with the main lines of agreement worked out by the end of next week in order that the major issues will not be fuzzed up by a mass of supplementary proposals.

With regard to points 2 and 3, it was agreed that the Soviet proposal made yesterday was completely unacceptable. We agreed as a tactical procedure that the US would make the first counterproposal as suggested by Tosec 288.<sup>1</sup> Neither the US nor British should propose the Colombo powers, but France might do so on the basis of a compromise, and we would then see how it might develop. My own view is that this is the best solution we are likely to get, and it has marked advantages from many points of view.

With regard to point 4, the decision will depend on what develops in connection with the cease-fire and the ultimate authority for supervision, and we will not touch on that matter.

With regard to point 5, it was decided that Eden would say tonight to Chou En-lai simply that the Soviet proposal was completely unacceptable; that the Americans had very strong views which were supported by France and British and they would probably make a counterproposal.

[Here follows a portion of the telegram which dealt with discussion of Part II on Korea: for text, see page 333.]

SMITH

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated May 28, p. 966.

---

396.1 GE/5-3054: Telegram

The Acting Secretary of State to the United States Delegation<sup>1</sup>

TOP SECRET      NIACT

WASHINGTON, June 1, 1954—3:37 p. m.

Tedul 146. For Under Secretary from Secretary in New York. Reference: Dulte 134<sup>2</sup> and Tedul 144.<sup>3</sup>

1. In these matters we must bear in mind the basic Presidential instructions, of which Congressional committees were informed, from which we should not depart without previously informing these committees.

2. It seems unlikely that the basic settlement will be one with which we would want to be formally identified or attempt to guarantee. Certainly this cannot be known at this juncture. Therefore discussion of control commission is awkward without knowing what it is that will be controlled or US responsibility in relation thereto. Under these circumstances it seems that in any suggestions or arguments we make, real composition of control commission must be carefully safeguarded so as to avoid other parties feeling that because they have deferred to our views regarding composition of control commission we are committed to some basic decision or solution.

---

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by the Secretary of State. Repeated to London as telegram 6483, to Paris as telegram 4338, and to Saigon as telegram 2467.

<sup>2</sup> Dated May 30, p. 981.

<sup>3</sup> Dated May 31, p. 989.

3. In view of the misconduct of Poland and Czechoslovakia on NNSC we should under no circumstances give any acquiescence to their playing a like role in relation to Indochina. Furthermore, I do not see why Indonesia should play supervisory role merely because of the accident that it happened to attend a single meeting at Colombo which was called for a different purpose. It has nothing to contribute but its own fears. By every test of stability and ability to contribute, Thailand [out?] ranks Indonesia. So also does the Philippines. It seems to me that the key role in supervision might be assumed by India and Pakistan as the only two Asian nations of the area which are perhaps generally acceptable and which can make any contribution. These two might pick up their own associates.

4. My view in general is that on this matter we should make suggestions which indicate our best judgment but that we should not take any "final" position in the sense of, stating that one setup is acceptable and another setup unacceptable. Our necessary reservation with reference to the ultimate solution forbids, it seems to me, action on our part other than contribution of friendly advice at this juncture.

MURPHY

JUNE 2, 1954

396.1 GE/6-254: Telegram

Tenth Restricted Session on Indochina, Geneva, June 2, 3 p. m.: The United States Delegation to the Department of State<sup>1</sup>

CONFIDENTIAL

GENEVA, June 2, 1954—midnight.

Secto 364. Repeated information Paris 374, London 237, Saigon 139, Tokyo 104, Moscow 103, Phnom Penh, Vientiane unnumbered. Tokyo for CINCFE. Department pass Defense. Tenth restricted session, Wednesday, June 2, Molotov presiding:

US delegate made statement replying statements May 31 by Chou En-lai regarding NNSC in Korea and by Gromyko regarding composition proposed NNSC for Indochina. Statement based on quotations from May 4 letter to Military Armistice Commission signed by Swedish and Swiss members commenting on Polish-Czech report dated April 29. Quoted portions dealt with wholehearted support of NNSC by UNC, with absence any evidence indicating UNC has increased combat strength, concluding with full quotation final two paragraphs in which Swedish and Swiss members record refutations allegations of Poles and Czechs and full compliance of armistice agreement by UNC.

<sup>1</sup> A set of minutes of this session (IC Restricted/10) is in Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 278. The minutes indicate that the meeting convened at 3 p. m. and adjourned at 6:55 p. m. The minutes are also printed in Conférence de Genève, pp. 176-186. The speech by Bidault is in Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 283, and the speech by Pham Van Dong, Indochina Document IC/16. June 3, is in Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 279A.

US delegate stated Gromyko proposal on composition unacceptable since it would result in arrangement exactly like Korea. With reference India and Pakistan, US delegate stated this might be helpful suggestion meriting serious consideration. He concluded: "It seems to us that India and Pakistan, in association with other genuinely neutral states, might provide the basis for a satisfactory and really effective supervisory commission".

Chou En-lai made feeble reply referring again to reports of Neutral Nations Repatriation Commission where India sided with views of Poles and Czechs rather than with those of Swedes and Swiss as proving, on basis India's unquestioned neutrality, that Poles and Czechs neutral rather than Swiss and Swedes.

Chou En-lai also stated he would distribute Polish-Czech communications dated April 15 and 30 and May 8 and 20. He concluded that rejection of Communists as neutrals unacceptable since on this basis there would be no neutrals because world divided between ideologies. He defined neutrals as countries not having participated in Indochina war and willing contribute peace there.

Chou En-lai supported Gromyko proposal as to composition Indochina NNSC (India, Pakistan, Poland, Czechoslovakia) pointing out that Poland and Czechoslovakia have diplomatic relations with DRV while India and Pakistan have them with France. (Chou En-lai defined two belligerents as DRV on one hand and on other France and her Associated States.)

Chou En-lai concluded by quoting paragraph 37 of Korean Armistice Agreement in which neutral nations defined as nations whose combat forces have not participated in Korean hostilities. He asserted this definition applicable to Indochina.

Bidault took issue with assertion of Soviet and CPR delegates regarding extent and number of points on which agreement reached. He said his delegation not bound by formal agreement on simultaneous cease-fire although believes this would be desirable if achievable in all three countries. However, if cease-fire can be achieved in one country at once, so much the better.

Principle of regrouping is acceptable to French delegation and to other eight delegations only so far as Vietnam is concerned. Military representatives currently studying regrouping in Vietnam. Results of these studies will be brought before the conference which will then have to examine consequences of proposals, methods of implementation, movement of troops, administration of zones, etc. Bidault stressed that questions of Laos and Cambodia remained entirely open and must be taken up as soon as possible by conference.

Bidault said he thought there was general agreement on principle of release prisoners of war and civilian internees and that this agreement could be recorded.

Turning to controls and guarantees, Bidault said that it would be an exaggeration to say there is any general agreement. Nine delegations have gone no further than to state there should be international neutral control in all three countries of Indochina. Little has been said regarding functions, structure, composition and supreme authority.

Bidault limited his remarks to Vietnam stating he would later give his views regarding Laos and Cambodia. He said function of international commission would be control of all clauses of armistice agreement and particularly :

- (1) Those dealing with regrouping including movement of troops;
- (2) Supervision of demarcation lines separating regrouping zones and, if necessary, of demilitarized sectors and territorial waters;
- (3) Execution of provision concerning prisoners of war and civilian internees and other problems.

Bidault noted that problem of prevention introduction fresh arms and troops following cessation of hostilities would arise only in case Vietnam since in other two countries cessation of hostilities would result achievement final peace. He expressed surprise Chou En-lai had referred only to introduction American personnel and troops and that both Chou En-lai and DRV had failed refer material assistance other side received at Dien Bien Phu and elsewhere from Communist China, USSR, Czechoslovakia, etc. He said French delegation could not accept control which was not complete and equitable.

Bidault envisaged central control commission choosing own headquarters and able set up necessary number of local commissions (also of international character) at locations related to tasks. Number of these local commissions would be scattered over territory at frontier points, ports and elsewhere. Central commission would also set up ad hoc international subcommissions for special tasks such as supervising release of prisoners of war and local manufacture of arms. Bidault stressed need for adequate modern transportation and communication facilities so that groups can be mobile and efficient. International commission would be able in its discretion to create and use joint bodies representative of two belligerents which, however, would function under the authority, responsibility and direction of international commission for performance certain special duties. Bidault again stressed importance that kernel of international organization be on ground at time of cessation of hostilities.

Bidault suggested that at all levels of international control decisions be taken by majority. Conference need not otherwise set up rules of procedure determination of which could be left to international commission.

Regarding composition of international commission, Bidault agreed with US delegate's appraisal of Korean experience. He said that commission which merely balanced opposite tendencies would be impotent which not equivalent of neutral. With regard to thesis that Communist countries cannot be neutral, Bidault read following quotation from statement by Mao Tse-tung in "new democracy" in 1940:

"At a time when rivalry between the Socialist states of Soviet Russia and the imperialist states of England and America is becoming still more acute, China must take sides. Such is the inevitable tendency. Can China be neutral and avoid taking a side? That is a day dream. The whole world will find itself included in these two battle lines. In the world, from now on, the word 'neutrality' is only good for deceiving the peoples."

Bidault concluded with statement French delegation prepared examine any proposal on composition which would meet requirements of objectivity and disinterestedness.

Eden spoke after recess. Referring to Bidault's proposal he stated some parts dealing with structure and functions of the neutral commission are inevitably technical in character. After consideration has been given to proposal it should be referred to a technical committee to work out details. Technical committee would then report back to restricted session.

Eden then referred to paragraph 4 of Chinese proposal, which suggested that joint committee be established consisting of representatives of two commands. Eden stated joint committee could render help to international commission provided the committee is subject to command of neutral commission.

Referring to composition of neutral commission, Eden stated it must be composed of truly neutral countries, not involved in Indochina conflict, and must not be deadlocked by two opposing views. It must act independently and impartially. Eden stated he could not agree that Korean Armistice Agreement provides acceptable precedent for Indochina neutral commission, and that two European countries, Poland and Czechoslovakia, would not be acceptable.

Viet Minh representative stated question of cease-fire must be considered as a whole. He then listed matters to be studied—implementation plans on zones and transfer of troops; prohibition of introduction of forces and equipment into Indochina; and organization for controlling cease-fire, including joint committee to supervise readjustment of zones and transfer of troops; and neutral commission to work with joint committee. Neutral commission would supervise non-introduction of troops and equipment into Indochina. He stated joint committee and neutral commission must work impartially. Dong mentioned responsibility for implementation of cease-fire would be up to joint commission which would be equivalent to armistice commission and would have representatives of two commands. Stated if two sides want peace, and presumably that is why they are at Geneva, it is up to conference to see that details of agreement will work.

Dong stated violations of armistice would be referred to joint committee which would take steps to refer matter to proper side for action to comply with armistice. Believes solution is simple and logical. If both sides—French and Viet Minh—really want peace, they should take action to obtain it with help of friendly countries.

Referring to relationship between joint committee and neutral commission, Dong stated their relationship would be one of coordination, not subordination. He then indicated Viet Minh agreement with Soviet proposal for neutral commission consisting of Poland, Czechoslovakia, India and Pakistan.

Dong stated international control for Indochina should not be under the United Nations and charged UN not really representative since one of great powers not represented there.

Molotov stated Eden's recommendation for technical committee would best be considered after basic issues have been clarified by the conference. At that time, a technical committee could work out detailed arrangements.

Molotov referred to various proposals—Chinese, French and statements by other delegates—mentioning that there are a number of areas of basic agreement. The conference should record areas upon which there is agreement and then move on to areas of disagreement. Molotov noted only proposal for neutral commission for Indochina had been made by the Soviet delegation. There have been critical remarks on the Soviet proposal but not counterproposals. He stated criticism followed two lines—practical consideration and considerations on matter of principle. On former, he referred only to NNSC operations in Korea; on latter, he referred to statements by General Smith earlier in session. He stated position taken by US delegation might mean US has no desire for reaching agreement, does not want settlement of problem, and such position will hamper settlement. Stated much could be said about this matter and he might do so on another occasion. Further stated Soviet Union's view on whether Communist nations neutral obvious and no comment necessary.

Referred to Soviet proposal for neutral commission which he stated recalls Korean neutral nations supervisory commission. Recognized NNSC had deficiencies and both sides at conference had criticized operation of NNSC. He stated regardless how much Swedish and Swiss members NNSC criticize Polish and Czech members, comments of latter much more solid than Swedish and Swiss comments. He then referred to comments by Chou En-lai on documents refuting statements of Swedish and Swiss members NNSC. He stated all four countries acknowledge US violations to Korean armistice and referred to statements of NNSC dated September 11, 16 and December 22, 1953, respectively. Referred to specific violations reported by Polish and Czech representatives NNSC, including 177 military aircraft, 465 guns and Howitzers, 1365 machine guns. Stated Polish and Czech representatives NNSC also drew attention that during October 1953-February 1954 UN Command used up tremendous number of shells including 130 million cartridges and 1,100,000 shells. This he indicated during period in which there were no hostilities.

Molotov stated in spite of weaknesses in NNSC, Soviet delegation, in interest of getting ahead with work, desired to make neutral commission in Indochina a workable organization. Molotov stated in considering matter of a neutral commission it would be inappropriate to draw upon references as to whether neutrality possible between Communism and imperialism as a question of principle. He stated question of neutral commission should be approached in the same manner as in Korea.

Molotov then repeated Soviet proposal for neutral commission for Indochina to be composed of India, Pakistan, Czechoslovakia and Poland. He stated Korean NNSC composed of four European countries whereas Soviet proposal for Indochina calls for two Asian and two European. Stated neutral commission should not be composed of countries having diplomatic relations with only one side, but two having relations with one side and two with other side. This would lead to better understanding and more secure armistice.

Cambodian representative challenged statement made earlier in session regarding non-introduction of arms and equipment into Indochina. Stated reference had been made to all of Indochina including introduction of arms and equipment into three states. Stated Cambodia would never agree and referred specifically to French proposal which had referred only to Vietnam.

Cambodian representative stated would again like to ask when case of Cambodia would be taken up by conference. If conference is to succeed, would be necessary to carry out coordinated and parallel examination of problem in Indochina.

In concluding meeting, Molotov read following communiqué, which was approved:

“At the restricted meeting on June 2, the nine delegations continued their discussion of the re-establishment of peace in Indochina. The next restricted meeting on this subject is to be held on June 3.”

Comment: At the tenth session, lines were clearly drawn on two points:

(a) Composition of neutral nations commission. Communist side supported Soviet proposal for commission including India, Pakistan, Czechoslovakia and Poland. Our side rejected Czechoslovakia and Poland and favored Asian neutrals as basis.

(b) Status of international commission in relation to supervision of armistice. On this point, Bidault clearly upheld authority and responsibility of international commission while DRV gave major responsibility to joint bodies made up of belligerents with international commission merely in a vague coordinating, auxiliary role. Molotov has not yet indicated whether DRV has Soviet support on this point although Chou En-lai appears to have given his approval to DRV general concept at May 31 meeting.

In course of Molotov's remarks addressed to US delegation contention Communist state cannot be neutral, Troyanovsky, translating for Molotov, gave impression Molotov indicated countries not Communist must be imperialist. This was caught by Gromyko and correction rapidly made to general effect that question was neutrality between “Communism and imperialism”.

SMITH

---

Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 242: Telegram

The Secretary of State to the Embassy in France<sup>1</sup>

TOP SECRET      NIACT      WASHINGTON, June 2, 1954—5:33 p. m.

4356. Eyes only Under Secretary and Ambassador from Secretary. Reur 4596.<sup>2</sup> We are gratified at progress made but believe you should warn Laniel that no statement implying anything like final agreement should be made to his Cabinet or in Parliament or otherwise now or at any time without careful prior agreement between our Governments as to precise form of words. You will bear in mind that the U.S. conditions required among other unfulfilled conditions assurances of action and participation by other governments and also that political and military conditions cannot be divorced for, as I earlier pointed out, the military situation might deteriorate to a point where a collective defense of Indochina would be impractical. Any premature or inaccurate statements which now attain publicity would cause Congressional and public reactions which might necessitate a denial or explanation here which would leave the situation worse than if nothing had been said by Laniel.

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by the Secretary of State. Repeated to Geneva as telegram Tedul 149.

<sup>2</sup> In telegram 4596 from Paris, May 29, Ambassador Dillon reported on a discussion with Laniel concerning the status of the U.S.-France negotiations. Laniel expressed great satisfaction at the fact that “we had now reached accord in principle on political side” and said that “our political agreement made it urgent that we start military conversations immediately to complete the negotiations regarding training, command structure, and war plans.” Ambassador Dillon said he “made it clear to him that we had now answered all questions posed by French Government but that, except for important military phase of negotiations, we were awaiting further action from the French side.” The Ambassador recommended strongly that the United States agree to a proposal made by Laniel “that Franco-US military negotiations be held in Washington next week.” (751G.00/5-2954) For the full text of telegram 4596, see volume XIII.

DULLES

---

396.1 GE/6-254 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State<sup>1</sup>

CONFIDENTIAL
PRIORITY

GENEVA, June 2, 1954—6 p. m.

Secto 360. For McCardle from Suydam. Following is substantial verbatim Under Secretary's briefing US press morning June 2:

We have tried, as executive sessions on Indochina went on, to give certain amount of guidance, which I hope has been helpful. On one occasion, as in reserving our general position with regard special problems Laos, Cambodia in connection with proposal for military staff talks, I gave you practically verbatim statement. Those of you who read statement will note we did not interpret UK proposal as deviating any way from principle which we on our side all accept, that is special situation which exists in Laos, Cambodia. No difference opinion on our side about that.

As Korean phase approaches conclusion, very clear Allied side is able to rest its case on one very important principle and one clear-cut issue. We stand before world on that issue and that principle. Issue is authority and moral force of UN as exponent collective security.

This has been categorically rejected by all Communist participants: it has been strongly upheld by all other participants. It is issue we cannot see fuzzed up or abandoned, from which we have no intention retreating. It looks as though two opposing points view were not reconcilable at this time.

With regard Indochina phase, as I told you before, our position in conference itself is little bit different from what it is in Korean side of conference. We are not belligerents although we have given assistance to our allies in Indochina. In conference itself, our position is rather one of trying to give friendly advice when suitable and of upholding there, as well as in Korea, certain principles to which we adhere.

---

<sup>1</sup> Transmitted to the Department of State in two sections.

Indochina phase is seeking solution for problems of supervision and guarantees. Has been pretty generally reported what first definite proposal was, with regard to composition of supervisory commission. Without going into details in regard that proposal, would like mention performance neutral nations supervisory commission in Korea which, as you know, consists of Switzerland, Sweden, Poland, and Czechoslovakia.

Senior Swedish representative, General Mohn, who has recently returned to Sweden, officer of great character, ability and integrity, has characterized that performance as complete farce, and so it is.

Swiss and Swedes have had complete access to UN side for most thorough inspections. They have made separate report in which they completely disassociated themselves from report submitted by Poles and Czechs. Swiss and Swedes refute and deny point by point allegations made by two Communist members. We have done everything we could to help make that supervisory commission effective. It had built-in veto at beginning, and that veto has been consistently exercised during entire scope its operation. US, under no circumstances, would even consider adopting similar formula anywhere else in world where really neutral supervision by international authority was necessary for solution.

Have interesting paper <sup>2</sup> on my desk which was prepared by staff of coordinating committee just before I left Washington. C. D. Jackson, who at that time was intimately concerned with work of committee, assisted in reviewing paper. Title is "War by Cease-fire". Some day will make it available to you. It starts out with quotation from Chou En-lai, which is extremely significant. It points up very definitely crux of this whole problem of what Chou En-lai calls "coalition government" as corollary of an armistice, a cease-fire, for political reasons. We cannot lend ourselves to any theory like that, and won't.

Question: When military men sit down here and start drawing up papers, are they working on basis of general line across Indochina or are they working on basis of trying to define pockets and areas of controls?

Answer: Can only tell you what French theory is. Can guess how Viet Minh will approach it. My guess is Viet Minh will try draw line right across, further down the better. I know French do not accept theory like that. They propose outlining certain areas. That is what you call at Leavenworth "drawing goose eggs on map", that is, assembly areas for regular troops. Of course, that will leave certain other areas which are in effect demilitarized, where irregular forces would presumably lay down arms. That is why question of supervisory authority assumes such transcendent importance. In first place, where men have been fighting for almost eight years, you cannot expect when whistle blows they will in good faith lay down their arms, sit there, and look at each other. You know what will happen unless there is some really competent neutral, effective supervisory authority on spot. That means on spot with troops.

---

<sup>2</sup> Not printed.

Q: Could thing equally break down on issue of whether you draw continuous line, or whether you try to do it by areas?

A: Again, from my point view, we are not in position here of either forcing viewpoint or of obstructing or preventing agreement. It might be agreement with which we could not associate ourselves.

Q: Would it not take great deal more troops and logistic facilities to supervise French plan?

A: Indeed it would, because other is simply partition.

Q: This morning BBC announced consideration was being given to French plan under which Britain, Russia, Sweden and Switzerland would be members of neutral commission.

A: I hadn't even heard of it.

Q: Have we any suggestions ourselves as to what composition of neutral commission should be?

A: No, we have no suggestions.

Q: Do we have general suggestions in terms what categories of countries, how to divide them up far as areas of world might be concerned, as Asians, Europeans, and that sort of thing?

A: We have two views in matter. First I have already given you, and that is that country in Soviet orbit cannot be neutral. Second one is that insofar as possible, we would like see Asiatic nations police their own back yard. There are, of course, European interests there and very strong ones, but we have in mind no specific proposals as to what consortium of nations would or would not be acceptable, except we completely reject idea there should be two so-called neutral nations and two so-called Communist neutral nations. We do not think second thing exists.

Q: What would our attitude be, say, towards Colombo powers taking on job, with India carrying most of load far as providing troops?

A: I don't know. I do not have instructions from Department on it.

Q: Will you give us our position as of now in regard Laos, Cambodia?

A: Our position as of now in regard Laos, Cambodia is that they are invaded by foreign troops, that foreign troops should be withdrawn, and that when foreign troops are withdrawn there is no problem either in Laos, Cambodia. Sooner foreign troops are withdrawn, sooner fighting stops. There are in both states regular Viet Minh battalions identifiable by division. They should be withdrawn.

Q: Is there agreement among the six on that position?

A: Yes.

Q: What do you understand about that agreement, as announced in communiqué Saturday night? What do you understand position is going to be under provision for military talks in Indochina as well as here?

A: Ultimate decisions will have to be made here. There would, of course, have to be certain field reconnaissance and field contacts, but our view is that decision is to be made here, not by two sides in Indochina sitting down and defining areas, because there are political considerations involved.

You mentioned two possible alternatives, one which might be quite acceptable to soldier in field, and that is just drawing line, pretty easy thing to do. This would be completely unacceptable, I would say, from political point of view.

Q: Does this statement in regard to our position re Laos, Cambodia mean we would probably disassociate ourselves from any agreement which would give Viet Minh northern Laos, which they now effectively control?

A: Yes. At present time our position is we cannot associate ourselves with any formula which partitions or dismembers Vietnam.

Q: I was talking about Laos, north Laos.

A: You said "which they effectively control". I don't understand they effectively control it at all.

Q: French themselves say that 25% is controlled by Viet Minh.

A: We have couple of bright young soldiers here who have been all over it. One has visited every Cambodian battalion but one. That terrain, he reports, is just as wild and jungle-like as Bataan peninsula used to be in early days when I took parties over it to keep trails open. Battalion or part of battalion can take position anywhere in that northern territory of Laos and claim it controls everything within 500-mile radius. It can probably maintain that claim until two battalions go and chase it out. Then it moves couple hundred miles away, sits down and makes same claim. So there you are. It is extremely rugged terrain.

Q: But even as far as Vietnam is concerned, we would not associate ourselves with any formula which resulted in dismemberment or partition of country, is that it?

A: Permanent dismemberment or partition. Molotov has categorically stated that views of entire conference are that there will not be dismemberment or partition.

Q: Is operative word there "permanent"? You said "permanent partition or dismemberment". In other words, if there is temporary line drawn we could associate ourselves with two-zone system.

A: Even that I would hesitate to subscribe to because once you draw line, divide country and provide what you might call demilitarized zone in between, you have in effect partitioned it. It would depend largely on political formula whether that were permanent partition or not. But what we witnessed in Korea is not in any way encouraging to thought that there could be reasonably prompt, political formula which would resolve it and prevent it from being dismembered or partitioned.

Q: What's your interpretation of Molotov's categorical assertion on this point? Does it mean they want whole country?

A: That's right.

Q: Is there any news about American prisoners in China? You told us last week it seemed to be reasonable thing to engage in direct contracts with Chinese if necessary.

A: If we can do it on proper basis, yes, but we haven't found out anything yet.

Q: What would be proper basis?

A: Basis of complete disassociation of any recognition. Don't know whether that can be done or not.

Q: If we were opposed to principle of partition and we are opposed to any form of coalition settlement, how do we see solution of that problem?

A: Actually, we are just now shooting at cease-fire side of it. We do not believe you can have any kind of political settlement, any reasonable political settlement, until military operations have ceased until peace and tranquility have been restored, if that is possible.

Q: But that in itself will involve some sort of de facto revision of forces which could be beginning of partition, even unintentionally. Most of our partitions started off that way in other countries.

A: Can only repeat what I said before, that if you drew line across country that would indeed be beginning, in our view, of partitioning. If, however, you withdrew regular troops into series of enclaves or pockets of various sorts, depending on locations, and kept them there and disarmed irregulars in demilitarized areas in between, and did it under effective international supervision, this would not necessarily involve partition.

Q: When Molotov made his categorical rejection of idea of partition could you draw from that the meaning that in military talks Communists will accept principle of grouping by areas rather than trying draw continuous line?

A: Can only give you Molotov's words.

Q: It strikes me as being rather important, categorical statement like that.

A: It strikes me as being very important. Can draw my own conclusions and I leave you to draw yours, but I can't interpret his words because he didn't interpret them. He just simply says we are all in agreement that there should not be dismemberment.

Q: In view military situation in Indochina today, do you think West can afford to keep these negotiations going for indefinite time here?

A: Sometimes I have mental picture of myself wandering up and down corridors of hotel Du Rhone with long white beard. It is very hard to say.

Q: Last week you said you were still groping for some solution. Do you see any more daylight today than you did last week?

A: Only in sense that it does look as though finally we get some of military people down to drawing goose eggs on map then we can see what is going to come out of it.

Q: What's our attitude towards Siamese proposal on Korea to set up semi-permanent commission to continue exploring problem?

A: I didn't know there had been any such proposal officially made.

Q: Well, Prince Wan has been promoting idea and New York Times had it Monday.

A: Well, actually until I get it from Prince Wan or get it officially I won't comment.

Q: Do we favor any possible semi-permanent machinery to continue exploring problem?

A: I don't know because if and when such proposal were officially made would have to go back to Department and find out.

Q: You said any neutral supervision in Indochina would have to be with troops. Do you have any idea how many troops would be necessary?

A: Have my own ideas which probably not entirely accurate because to make estimate of that sort you have to go over terrain and map very carefully and make military plan. I should think it would be somewhat on order of about three times as many as were needed in Korea. In Korea it was 5,000. Should think it would take two or three times that many in Indochina, considering nature of terrain and long frontiers involved.

Q: You are talking about Vietnam itself?

A: No, I am talking about whole area because you have got border problems, even though Viet Minh regular troops are withdrawn, you have got some irregular troops. Remember frontier between Laos and Vietnam is extremely long frontier and very rugged. There are Vietnamese living on Laotian side of frontier and there are Laotians living on Vietnamese side, so you really have problem of border observation, as well as problem of administering cessation of hostilities inside one country.

Q: Would there be American troops among this approximate 15,000?

A: Hell, no.

Q: Korean plenaries will presumably continue more or less as they have been going. There is no move to break that side off, is there?

A: It's pretty hard to forecast tactics on matter of that kind, but we do have really basic and fundamental issue which it does not appear we are likely to be able to resolve here. When you have real basic and fundamental issue, one might as well stand on that rather than have it fuzzed up by lot of possibly supplementary suggestions and speculations. That is way I feel about it.

Q: Have there been any indications from Communist side here, since conference started, that it would try to persuade West to drop American conception of Asiatic Pact in return for guarantee system?

A: No.

Q: Will Thailand move in UN have an effect on conference?

A: Don't think it should. I think that it is just move of common prudence.

SMITH

---

396.1 GE/6-254 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

TOP SECRET      PRIORITY

GENEVA, June 2, 1954—9 p. m.

Dulte 141. I hope to see Bao Dai within the next few days and when I do, I will put to him the four questions listed in Geneva Tedul 110<sup>1</sup> and urge on him the formation of an appointive provisional national assembly initially having broad consultative powers but also constituent powers.

I will, I believe, get answers to the questions and probably approval, in principle, of a consultative-constituent assembly. I doubt, however, that I will be successful in getting Bao Dai to return promptly to Vietnam. He will wish to continue in close contact with his delegation here. Furthermore, his decisions regarding degree to which he will directly engage his person and his fortunes in fate of Vietnam at this time will, in my judgment, not be made until current Franco-American discussions reach conclusion. Even if Bao Dai does return, it, of course, highly problematical whether he is capable of exerting real leadership or of setting an inspiring personal example or of driving through fundamental reforms in his government.

<sup>1</sup> Dated May 22, p. 892.

To the extent that the trend of Bao Dai's recent thinking has been accurately reported by Ngo Dinh Luyen (Secto 313<sup>2</sup>), it seems likely that Bao Dai will endeavor to draw me out on the degree to which he can count on direct US assistance particularly in the event that French will and capacity to carry on the struggle in Indochina should markedly decrease. With any assurance, of unconditional backing from us or perhaps merely encouragement, Bao Dai might conceivably within a week or so withdraw his delegation from Geneva although he would, of course, consult with Bidault first. Vietnamese Foreign Minister Dinh told Heath May 31 that tactics of the Vietnamese delegation for next few days were to go through the motions of negotiating a cessation of hostilities in order not to embarrass Bidault whose private preference, Dinh felt, would be for a firm stand for continuing the fight against the Viet Minh if his government and French Parliamentary and public opinion would allow it. Dac Khe, deputy chief of the Vietnamese delegation, said he was thinking of recommending to Bao Dai the withdrawal of the Vietnamese delegation after a few days and asked Heath what he thought of such an idea. Heath replied that it would be unthinkable to break up the conference at this stage.

Bao Dai will, therefore, probably ask me for my advice as to the course of action he should take and the support he would receive from us in the event the French here appear disposed to agree on a cessation of hostilities on a basis which will practically result in a turnover of Vietnam to the Communists.

I should like to take the position with Bao Dai that these are not profitable topics for exploration and discussion at this time. I shall inform him in general terms of the present state of our efforts to create an effective organization for united action and of the discussions we are having with the French regarding possible US intervention in Indochina (in this I shall be confirming widespread press reports). On the other hand, we could not consider participating in the conflict without prior Congressional approval, assurances of continued French participation and some form of UN association and assurances of cooperation from other countries in the area. I would wish to take the line that any important action now taken by either France, by Vietnam or by the US as the three active partners in the enterprise to save Vietnam from Communist control should be carefully coordinated with other partners in order to make sure that any single action will in fact result in net addition to strength of the partnership as a whole.

---

<sup>2</sup> Dated May 26, p. 936.

I shall say that particularly in France there are dangerously strong forces of defeatism which will seize upon any pretext or excuse to diminish or even abandon the French contribution. I shall say to Bao Dai that in my judgment for the present and probably for many months to come that contribution is vital and irreplaceable.

I shall tell Bao Dai that I have been encouraged by the French plans for reinforcing the expeditionary corps and at the general willingness of the French to envisage a more direct US participation in the training and perhaps also the supplying of the Vietnamese national army. I shall state that I would hope his relations with the French would be constantly characterized by the mutual confidence and consultation which has existed in the past.

I shall add, however, that if the present relatively favorable situation should change, I should hope immediately to have consultations with Bao Dai in order to concert with him such measures as might seem appropriate. I would expect him to take no decisions, based upon a French withdrawal from the struggle, until he had given me and other representatives of our government a full opportunity to discuss the situation with him and to see what measures might be requisite.

Urgent guidance requested.<sup>3</sup>

SMITH

---

<sup>3</sup> Department's reply contained in telegram Tedul 159, June 5, p. 1044.

---

396.1 GE/6-254 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET

GENEVA, June 2, 1954—9 p. m.

Secto 361. Repeated information Moscow 102.

1. Dennis Allen (UK) informed Johnson today regarding Eden's discussion with Chou En-lai at private dinner last night. While Chinese were friendly and congenial, they left immediately after dinner and nothing of particular significance resulted from meeting. Four points of interest came up during conversation :

(a) Eden raised question of Chinese Communist treatment of Trevelyan in Peking after he returns there. Eden asked that he be accorded the usual courtesies and privileges and be allowed to see appropriate Chinese Communist officials. Huan Hsiang Head of European and African Department in the Chinese Communist Foreign Ministry, said he would see that these things were done and looked at Chou En-lai who concurred. Allen commented this would be helpful but UK will wait and see if Chinese Communists actually carry it out.

(b) There was no discussion of diplomatic relations or exchange of Ambassadors or of UN representation for Chinese Communists. However, Chou remarked cryptically during evening "what makes you think we want a seat in the UN?" Allen commented perhaps sense of obscure remark was to effect Chinese Communists should be in UN by right and that its seat is not negotiable in relation to anything else.

(c) On the question of embargo, Eden inquired of Chou regarding Chinese Communist construction projects, particularly Huai River development. He asked if Chinese Communists could get all the machinery and equipment they needed for these projects and remarked that the embargo probably was limiting this development. Chou responded only to effect that they needed equipment and machinery from wherever they could get it but admitted economic restrictions were giving them difficulties.

(d) Regarding Indochina Eden emphasized again to Chou that it was a dangerous situation and that UK and other delegations on our side really did not know whether the Chinese Communists and particularly the Viet Minh really wanted a settlement. He wanted to make it clear to Chou that it even looked as if the Communists did not have real intention to seek genuine settlement here. However, these remarks drew no useful response from Chou since he replied Vietnam delegation was not helpful.

(e) Eden told Chou he hoped he understood UK and other delegations believed control, authority and supervision is particularly important aspect Indochina problem. Eden said Soviet proposal for Poles and Czechs on commission is totally unacceptable to UK. Also UK does not believe Poles and Czechs, as European countries and as Communist countries, have any competence or knowledge deal with Indochina, and UK not only cannot understand why they should be suggested but is convinced such proposal is not helpful or acceptable. Chou replied that there are four European nations supervising the armistice in Korea which has "worked out well" whereas on Indochina Soviet Union proposed two Asian countries both of which have close relations with UK and one of which has a "treaty" with US. Chou thought this should be much more satisfactory from UK point of view than Korean setup. He insisted that it was essential to have some countries which would "reflect the interests of the Viet Minh and in which the Viet Minh would have confidence."

2. Molotov came to see Eden briefly this morning ostensibly to find out from him his co-chairman about any developments re Indochina and what would be taken up at restricted session this afternoon. Eden stressed the importance of adequate control, authority and supervision and said session today should continue discussion of that problem to work something out. Molotov replied that that was an important consideration but there are also other items in the Chinese Communist's proposal particularly the matter of the introduction of arms into Indochina. Eden acknowledged that was also factor. Eden then told Molotov that Soviet proposal made in his absence regarding Poland and Czechoslovakia was totally unacceptable to the UK. He took same lines as Chou En-lai and stressed necessity for having Poland and Czechoslovakia to reflect point of view of the Viet Minh. He said that there had to be countries on the commission acceptable to the Viet Minh.

SMITH

396.1 GE/6-554 : Telegram

Dulles-Hammarskjold Meeting, June 2, 1954: The Secretary of State to the United States Delegation<sup>1</sup>

SECRET

WASHINGTON, June 5, 1954—9 : 56 a. m.

Tosec 354. Following is summary of conversation between Secretary-General Hammarskjold and Secretary June second :

"After exchange of courtesies, etc., Mr. Hammarskjold mentioned pending Thai application. He said he was afraid result of this might be to reduce chance of success at Geneva. He said while Thai application did not necessarily involve any agreement about Indochina matter being discussed at UN, the Russians probably would feel called upon to cover the entire territory, and that this might precipitate chain of events which might end up with certain duplication of Geneva talks.

I said that 'success' at Geneva seemed to me to involve something more than merely getting an agreement but involved getting the right kind of agreement. That, I thought, would be impossible unless French had some alternative to complete surrender and US was trying to provide that. One of preconditions to any contingent US action would be some participation in area by UN. Also it was important from standpoint of getting MSA appropriations. We had followed the course which seemed to us least likely to involve Geneva. I did not see how the Russians could very well make this reason for breaking off at Geneva if only reason why UN talks covered Indochina was because Russians themselves brought that element in.

Hammarskjold then spoke of possible UN Assembly action following prospective Soviet veto in SC. He said he doubted whether we could get two-thirds vote, or certainly not more than bare two-thirds vote, if matter came up while Geneva was still offering some hope. I said I thought we could decide on what to do about Assembly after SC dealt with matter, and we did not need to make any firm decision at this time."

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by Popper of UNA/UNP. Repeated to USUN as telegram 622.

DULLES

JUNE 3, 1954

396.1 GE/6-354 : Telegram

The Secretary of State to the United States Delegation<sup>1</sup>

CONFIDENTIAL

WASHINGTON, June 3, 1954—12:39 p. m.

Tosec 334. In future conversations re Thai SC appeal for UN observation, may be helpful for you to know British have been making strenuous efforts in New York to ensure that Thai request is for UN observation limited to Thailand alone. British have pressed USUN use influence with Thai Del to restrict opening Thai SC statement accordingly. USUN has refused, stating our position clear from outset POC subcommission must be given authority observe in other states in general area if those states so request, though we would expect Laos and Cambodia would not at this time make such a request. Khoman told USUN yesterday he could not accept restriction POC subcommission authority to Thailand alone; said public opinion his country would not consider it provided adequate protection for Thailand.

DULLES

---

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by Popper of UNA/UNP. Repeated to London as telegram 6520 and to Bangkok as telegram 2405.

751G.00/6-354 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

TOP SECRET

GENEVA, June 3, 1954—3 p. m.

Dulte 142. Repeated information Paris 376. Paris limit distribution. I told Eden this morning that with the deteriorating military situation Indochina and the Vietnam-French military talks now going on here I was seriously concerned that if within the next week or two the Communists offered France a cease-fire the French would be in a weak position to resist and might have to accept without any agreement on effective international control machinery or with machinery which would be purely nominal. Eden said he fully shared my fears in this regard.

SMITH

396.1 GE/6-354 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

TOP SECRET      NIACT

GENEVA, June 3, 1954—3 p. m.

Dulte 143. For Secretary from Smith. Our messages cross rather often. Believe this summary will help to clarify :

[Here follows the portion of this message pertaining to the Korean phase of the Conference; for the text, see page 339.]

B. Tedul 146<sup>1</sup> and Dulte 138.<sup>2</sup>

Your recent instructions have given us a clear line of procedure for next few days. Gromyko's proposal of supervisory authority consisting of India, Pakistan, Poland, and Czechoslovakia, and our rejection, supported by our associates, of Poland and Czechoslovakia or any other Communist states in the Soviet orbit, leave us at an impasse which Eden thought last night might be a breaking issue. At the closed session on Indochina this afternoon the French will probably make some counter-proposals. I do not yet know what these may be but if it becomes necessary I will throw in Thailand and the Philippines; otherwise, will make no statement.

I believe the Communists are convinced that once military talks reach point of producing some sort of cease-fire formula acceptable to France, that then nothing can stop the cease-fire and that when this occurs the composition of a supervisory authority will become almost academic and they will get about what they want. Meanwhile, the continuing deterioration of the military situation in the Delta will exert increasing pressure on the French to accept almost any face-saving cease-fire formula.

SMITH

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated June 1, p. 994.

<sup>2</sup> Dated June 1, p. 993.

396.1 GE/6-354 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

CONFIDENTIAL

GENEVA, June 3, 1954—3 p. m.

Secto 367. Repeated information Paris 377, Saigon 140, London 238, Tokyo 16, Moscow 104. Department pass Defense; Tokyo pass CINCFE; Saigon pass Phnom Penh and Vientiane. Cambodian Foreign Minister tells us he plans introduce in an early session following proposal. Unofficial translation follows :

“Cambodian proposal for the settlement of the Cambodian problem :

“1. A cessation of hostilities will be proclaimed in Cambodia, if possible simultaneously with a cessation of hostilities in Laos and Vietnam. In the event of an agreement on a simultaneous cessation of hostilities, the three plans relative to Cambodia, Laos and Vietnam will be placed in force simultaneously.

"2-a. All the regular and irregular Viet Minh forces will be as of the date of the cessation of hostilities, evacuated outside the territory of Cambodia and regrouped in Vietnamese territory within the regrouping zones assigned to the Viet Minh Command in accordance with the agreement between the French, Vietnamese and Viet Minh Command.

"For this purpose, the Cambodian and Viet Minh Commands will meet on the spot in order to fix the details of the evacuation.

"2-b. All of the armed elements which do not depend [?] either from the army or from police forces will be, as of the date of cessation of hostilities, disarmed and disbanded. Foreign elements, non-nationals, will go back to their countries of origin.

"3. After agreement between the Cambodian and Viet Minh Commands, there will be carried out a release or an exchange of prisoners of war and civilian internees.

"4. A system of control by the UN or a system of international control functioning under the auspices of the UN will be established to watch over the execution of the above-mentioned agreements. This system of international control must be organized and ready to function as of the date of the cessation of hostilities."

SMITH

---

396.1 GE/6-354 : Telegram

Eleventh Restricted Session on Indochina, Geneva, June 3, 3 p. m.:
The United States Delegation to the Department of State<sup>1</sup>

CONFIDENTIAL

GENEVA, June 3, 1954—midnight.

Secto 370. Repeated information Paris 380, London 241, Saigon 141, Tokyo 108, Moscow 105, Phnom Penh, Vientiane unnumbered. Tokyo for CINCFE. Department pass Defense. Eleventh restricted session, Thursday, June 3, Eden presiding:

Vietnamese delegate spoke on question international controls. He limited discussion to Vietnam stating Laos and Cambodia separate problems involving two independent sovereign states victims foreign invasion. He referred Bidault's proposal yesterday emphasizing particularly need for vigorous control over 1,000 kilometers of frontier separating China from Vietnam.

Regarding composition of international control commission, he agreed with French and US delegates regarding need for impartiality. He rejected concept that nonbelligerent states, in present world conditions, meet test of neutrality. He described absolute and exclusive nature of Communist ideology, contrasting it with conditions in non-Communist countries. There are differences between non-Communist states but not in and among Communist states. He referred both to internal regimes of Communist states and to voting record of those states in UN and other international organizations.

---

<sup>1</sup> A set of minutes of this session (IC Restricted/11) is in Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 278. The minutes indicate that the meeting convened at 3 p. m. and adjourned at 7 p. m. The minutes are also printed in Conférence de Genève, pp. 187-195. This message was transmitted to the Department of State in three sections.

Vietnamese delegate rejected Soviet proposal that Czechoslovakia and Poland be included in neutral nations commission for Indochina. He referred to Chinese delegate's contention that Soviet proposal equitable because two of proposed countries have recognized Viet Minh (Czechoslovakia and Poland) and two others have not. Vietnamese delegate pointed out, however, that while all four states proposed have normal relations with France, none has recognized Vietnam. Thus, Soviet proposal totally unacceptable for Vietnam which is completely ignored in Soviet proposal. He recalled 35 free states have recognized Vietnam, concluding that it is duty Vietnamese delegation protest vigorously against Soviet proposal.

Vietnamese delegate then referred to complex character Franco-Vietnamese side in struggle in which Vietnam and Vietnamese National Army play effective, increasingly important role. He stated that garrison of Yen Phuh, which has victoriously resisted Viet Minh for past three weeks, almost wholly Vietnamese. He added 80 percent of garrisons fighting Viet Minh in North Vietnam are Vietnamese.

Vietnamese delegate then turned to Korea pointing out that here UN carrying out action against aggressors from North by virtue Security Council decision based on Security Council responsibility for maintaining international peace and security. Enemy in Korea consists of both North Korean Army and Chinese People's Volunteers. This is reflected in preamble and terms of armistice agreement alluding to dual character of Sino-Korean Command. Vietnamese delegate stated impossible to ignore state of Vietnam in considering make-up of anti-Communist side in Vietnam.

Vietnamese delegate stressed that state of Vietnam had freely agreed participate this conference and could not have been compelled to do so. He emphasized that conference could do nothing without agreement of Vietnam.

With reference to Eden proposal suggesting that conference include in control commission Asian states, Vietnamese delegate expressed favorable view but made two reservations:

First, pointing out that Indochina war is currently matter of worldwide interest and concern, he asked whether composition of international control commission should be confined exclusively to Asian states; although recognizing their great interest therein; and,

Second, since control of cessation of hostilities and all related agreements has technical character, he stated controls should be entrusted to states having sufficient stability and experience needed for task in question.

After summarizing views on neutrality and technical competence, Vietnamese delegate made proposal that control of execution of terms of Indochina agreement be handled through UN which meets conditions of neutrality. It is an organism of collective nature which already exists. It has no special sympathy for any state or group of states. It has on occasion synthesized policies of all member nations as in case of approval of declaration of rights of man in 1948. Although Communist states did not vote for this declaration, they did not vote against. He described two-thirds majority requirement in General Assembly as guarantee for all members. He also stressed technical competence of UN to which all main powers of world belong.

In closing, Vietnamese delegate cautioned against danger of neglecting UN where maintenance of peace involved. He stated that creation of ad hoc bodies endangers organization which aroused so much hope in world.

M. Bidault then spoke. He said Vietnamese proposal deserved careful consideration. He said undeniable UN founded by 50 countries in order advance rule of law and specific conditions necessary for maintenance of peace. He said UN had had successes, failures, and half successes. He recalled recent Colombo meeting where several Asian countries invited parties to Indochina conflict to have recourse to good offices and, eventually, to services of UN. The goodwill and impartiality of these Asian countries are beyond question. Therefore, Vietnamese proposal should be studied with great care.

Bidault stated that there are two aspects to be examined:

First, should conference ask UN to suggest composition of international commission or does conference prefer provide for this itself?

Second, what will be final authority supervising work of international commission—will it be UN as proposed, or will there be some other organism to which international commission would report?

Bidault asked that conference reflect on these two questions and be prepared with replies in near future.

French delegate then turned to Viet Minh explanation of functions of control mechanism made at tenth restricted meeting yesterday, which he described as unsatisfactory and surprising to French delegation. French delegate, following Molotov's statement of May 14 (Secto 212<sup>2</sup>) and CPR statement of May 27 (Secto 325<sup>3</sup>) had believed there was agreement in principle regarding international control. Bidault quoted from Molotov's speech of May 14 (not from proposal) as follows:

---

<sup>2</sup> Dated May 14, p. 795.

<sup>3</sup> Dated May 28, p. 945.

"It would be possible to come to an agreement that supervision of implementation of the provisions of the agreement on the cessation of hostilities should be entrusted to commissions composed of representatives of neutral countries."

Bidault recalled great satisfaction with which this agreement in principle had been received throughout world.

Bidault stated DRV proposal of yesterday very far from agreed concept. Dong proposes that control of armistice would rest solely on hands of joint commissions made up of representatives of two commands which would be termed an armistice commission and would alone be designated to fill this role. DRV gives to neutral commission merely secondary role including international aspects such as entry of matériel and personnel from outside. Viet Minh representative assigns entire enforcement of agreement to parties to struggle. Bidault stated this absolutely unworkable.

Bidault pointed out also that Viet Minh proposal dealt with all Indochina while French delegate can conceive of joint commissions of belligerents only for Vietnam. Bidault stated he reserved right to return to problem of Cambodia and Laos on another day, which he hoped would be soon.

Bidault, continuing analysis of Viet Minh proposal, stated that such important matters as regrouping of forces would escape neutral commission entirely being confined to joint commission whose role would be limited to supervision of ports and, with Viet Minh permission, to land frontiers. But neutral commission entirely eliminated from control of essential clauses of cessation of hostilities agreement.

Bidault referred to experience with joint commissions made up of belligerents eight years ago as demonstrating inefficiency and serious danger involved in this type of arrangement. Bidault admitted utility of joint bodies made up of people having practical knowledge of country but stated such bodies cannot act as judges in disputes of which their members are parties. In case of a violation, it would be presumably impossible to get agreement of joint body even as to fact of violation and thus control would break down. Joint commissions would be useless in cases of violations and, added Bidault, "I am afraid this is the goal sought". Under Viet Minh proposal such important clauses as those referring to regrouping, transfer of troops, supervision of limits of zones, liberation of prisoners would escape from any real control. Result would be an interminable quarrel, without an arbiter, without an end, and without hope. French delegation warns conference against this result.

Following recess, General Smith recalled US preference for UN as supervisory authority and stated Vietnam had given convincing speech to this end. He recalled US view Czechoslovakia and Poland could not be considered for NNSC and suggested India, Pakistan, Sweden and Switzerland might well have been proposed by our side. However, suggested not appropriate bandy names of countries in such a meeting. Therefore, if others agreed two chairmen arrange for discussion actual composition in more private manner. He also pointed fundamental importance resolving evident differences supervisory authority highlighted by Dong's and Bidault's presentations.

Chou started by saying that with respect to Eden's proposal for the formation of technical committee he agreed with Molotov that we should exchange views and determine first principles before tackling question technical committees. He wished to set forth CPR delegation views on principal controversial questions. Most disputed dealt with question joint committees. On May 27 he had said that in order to supervise armistice there should be two kinds of organizations; (1) joint committee as proposed by DRV which should be actual armistice commission made up of representatives of two belligerents; (2) neutral nation supervisory committee as proposed by Molotov on basis of Bidault proposal that this commission would be composed of neutral nations invited by the conference. Question of terms of reference could best be determined by using those of Korean armistice agreement. He stressed that these two kinds of organizations would be mutually related but neither was to be superior to the other and NNSC was by no means to be over the joint committees. Function of joint committees to supervise fulfillment by two parties of armistice provisions. Function of NNSC to supervise and inspect violations of armistice agreement. Such violations could take place inside or outside Indochina. He found example of competence of both parties to carry out armistice in their implementation of recent agreement for evacuation of seriously wounded of Dien Bien Phu although he suggested that measure of sincerity had not been equal on both sides. Disputes or violations of armistice agreement which two sides could not reconcile would be taken up by NNSC which would be established for that purpose. Its functions would be two-fold: (1) to supervise demilitarized areas separating two sides in Indochina; and (2) to supervise throughout Indochina and along common frontiers with other countries introduction whether on land, sea, or air of fresh troops, arms and ammunition. With respect to first function joint commissions would see to execution armistice agreement and NNSC would also supervise. Thus within Indochina there would be two kinds of organizations working together. Along frontiers NNSC would be directly responsible and this would be its more important function. Prohibition of introduction of fresh troops and material most essential to consolidation of peace in Indochina. CPR delegate cannot agree that NNSC would have different function in different states. Cambodian delegate had said that clause re non-introduction not applicable to his country but this would mean that the US could establish military bases in Indochina and thus threaten peace. CPR delegation for this reason could never accept this suggestion.

CPR view was that NNSC should be responsible to international guarantee of nine nations parties to conference. If NNSC should find impossible to deal with certain incidents they would be reported to nine nations who should seek agreement for collective measures to deal with problem. He still felt that neutral nations should be as defined in Article 37 of Korean armistice agreement. Bidault's citation of Mao yesterday only proved that if ideological measure used there could be no neutrals. Only realistic approach was to define neutrals as those who had not participated in war. Vietnam delegation had proposed that UN supervise armistice. CPR must oppose. UN had nothing to do with Geneva conference and although some people were trying to drag UN into Indochina war for their own purpose only result could be new difficulties and obstacles in way of armistice in Indochina.

DRV delegate stressed necessity to agree on principles before proceeding to the details. Problem of restoration of peace in Indochina war not difficult to achieve if two principal parties wanted it. In that case questions of control and implementation of cease-fire would present no difficulties. French and DRV had right and responsibility exercise such control. His delegation wanted peace and if it signed an agreement intended to implement it. Why renounce responsibility for benefit of international body, he asked and he denied any difference in views between his and Soviet delegation on subject of control as alleged by Bidault. He stressed that control should be exercised over all three states of Indochina without exception; otherwise if Vietnam only were controlled shipment of troops and equipment could be made to adjoining state. This would constitute threat to security and serious menace of aggression against peace. He strongly reconfirmed his opposition to any and all proposals tending to give UN authority for execution of armistice saying everyone knew who hid behind that organization and asking was it really organization of United Nations, was it impartial and neutral?

Then Cambodian delegate unsuccessfully sought recognition and Bidault suggested that further debate of this important subject be deferred to next meeting in order to avoid any temptation to polemics.

This was agreed and Eden found no objection to his proposal that Indochina restricted meeting be held tomorrow, Friday, June 4, and that there be Korean plenary on Saturday,<sup>4</sup> Monday<sup>5</sup> restricted session probably on Korea, and Tuesday<sup>6</sup> plenary session on Indochina.

Comment: Clear Communist concept supervision closely follows Korean pattern. Chou today appeared give somewhat wider role to NNSC than Dong's presentation yesterday by according it supervision of demilitarized areas along with joint commission and task of taking up disputes which two sides could not resolve. However difficult reconcile latter point with Chou's statement supporting Dong's position that NNSC was not "over" joint committee. No sign whatever of any break in rigidity Communist position on composition.

SMITH

---

<sup>4</sup> June 5.

<sup>5</sup> June 7.

<sup>6</sup> June 8.

---

110.11 DU/6-354 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET

GENEVA, June 3, 1954—4 p. m.

Dulte 146. For Murphy. Just before leaving here, Achilles gave me the following memorandum,<sup>1</sup> which represents his personal thoughts on some of the matters we are dealing with. I thought it good enough to bring to your attention, and suggest you ask the Secretary to read it at his convenience.

“Memorandum

It is essential to prevent the loss of Southeast Asia to communism. We are currently losing ground militarily and politically on the spot and there is danger of losing more politically here. On the other hand, every inch we lose makes it harder to keep from losing more. On the other, there is no sense in saying we will not yield another inch unless we damn well mean it. What we have got to find is a practical and realistic means of holding every inch we can.

We cannot stop the expansion of communism in Southeast Asia by either war or appeasement. We can do so only by deterring it. In Ernest Bevin's words (the genesis of the Atlantic Pact): 'What we need is such a mobilization of moral and material force as will inspire confidence and energy within and respect elsewhere.' To deter you have got to be willing to fight if necessary, but a US military victory in Indochina might cost us the rest of Southeast Asia psychologically. The difficulties in Asia, like the distances from home, are far greater than in Europe and the community of interest between possible partners far less. In deterring something, the greater the force and determination available, the less is the likelihood of having to use it. The converse is equally true, and the present mess in SEA is such that the risk of having to use it is great.

---

<sup>1</sup> A copy of this memorandum, dated May 31, 1954, is located in Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 321.

The narrow ledge between war and appeasement seems a little wider than it did a month ago, due primarily to the lessening of allied disunity. Despite American pressures toward war and British pressures toward appeasement, the enormity of the issues involved and the need of each for the other have tended to keep both on the path. Bidault has almost single-handedly kept the French Government from selling out and has secured approval for the sending of substantial reinforcements but he is not yet out of the woods.

The dilemma between war and appeasement is only one of several. A second is between the need to build a sound long-term defense in Southeast Asia and the need for immediate military action. A third is between wishful thinking that we might get by with use of US sea and air power and the painful certainty that, once involved, we could not achieve victory or even a Korean type stalemate without at least as large a commitment of ground forces as we had in Korea. A fourth is between the need for solid Asian support and the present Asian attitude of antipathy toward the west and apathy toward communism.

We could easily fumble into a disaster either way. While the right answer is hard to see, certain elements seem reasonably clear:

(1) We must mean whatever we say, and the Russians must know we mean it.

(2) If we decide to intervene directly we must be prepared militarily and psychologically to take on at least another Korean war and quite possibly World War 3.

(3) If we decide to let part or all of Vietnam go we must seek a new line as far north and east as possible which we are prepared to hold militarily, politically, and economically, at the cost of war if necessary.

(4) We cannot count on much help from France or anyone else.

(5) Nothing we do to stop communism in Asia will succeed unless it has the wide support of Asian opinion, not just that of our friends out there. We have got to bring Asian opinion along as far and as fast as we can. This cuts directly across (2) but not necessarily (3). It will take more patience and suppleness than we usually show.

(6) Any real barrier to communism in Asia is going to take time to build and we are going to lose some ground, whatever we do, before we get it built.

(7) If we have to intervene militarily to save the immediate situation we should, while being prepared for the worst, make every effort to keep our intervention limited to a minimum and not get sucked into a major effort to drive the Chinese and Viet Minh back into China. That slope is just as slippery as the one of appeasement.

(8) If there is any prospect of a settlement here that we could live with it is because of Russian respect for the A-bomb and fear of our intentions. While we must be careful to avoid bluffing, the current military talks may well help to increase their uncertainty."

SMITH

396.1 GE/6-354

Memorandum by Chester L. Cooper and Joseph A. Yager of the United States Delegation to the Special Adviser (Heath)

SECRET

GENEVA, June 3, 1954.

Subject: National Intelligence Estimate on Laos and Cambodia <sup>1</sup>

On June 1, the Intelligence Advisory Committee approved the attached National Intelligence Estimate of the effects of certain possible developments on the military security and political stability of Laos and Cambodia through the end of this year. The principal conclusions of this estimate are:

1. Communist political influence in Laos and Cambodia is probably minimal outside those areas firmly occupied by Viet Minh forces. Those forces, moreover, are not now an imminent threat to the legal governments, because of the military support provided by the French.

2. Laos and Cambodia are vulnerable to Communist pressures, chiefly because of their military weakness. Additional sources of weakness are unpredictable leadership, the rivalry of cliques, and, in Cambodia, the existence of armed, non-Communist dissidence.

3. If, as a result of a negotiated agreement with the Communists covering all of Indochina, French and Viet Minh regular units were actually withdrawn from Laos and Cambodia (leaving Viet Minh irregular forces still operating in those countries), native forces could probably preserve for some time approximately the present degree of security and stability in Laos, provided French cadres and the present scale and nature of French material aid remained available to the native armies. However, such an agreement with the Communists would be extremely difficult, if not impossible, to implement and police, and in these circumstances the native armies could probably not for long successfully resist the Viet Minh without increased outside support.

4. If Laos and Cambodia were partitioned, the will of the non-Communist remnants to maintain their independence would greatly decrease. Under such circumstances, probably nothing but military occupation of those countries by non-Communist forces would assure their continued freedom from Communist control.

<sup>1</sup> For a National Intelligence Estimate on Communist Capabilities in Indochina, June 1, see NIE 10-3-54, in volume XIII.

Attachment

EFFECTS OF CERTAIN POSSIBLE DEVELOPMENTS ON THE MILITARY SECURITY AND POLITICAL STABILITY OF LAOS AND CAMBODIA THROUGH 1954

I. PRESENT SITUATION IN LAOS AND CAMBODIA

A. Military Security

1. Viet Minh forces are operating in Laos and Cambodia, but do not currently present an imminent threat to the existence of the native governments. However, this is so only because the security of Laos and Cambodia is supported by French regular forces and extensive French assistance to native forces. (See page 7 for force strengths [post, page 1028].)

Laos

2. Viet Minh regular troops in Laos are organic to regular Viet Minh divisions and are Vietnamese invaders, not Laotians. Viet Minh regional forces, scattered throughout Laos, are pre-dominantly Vietnamese, but include Laotians as well. These regional troops have effectively conducted guerrilla-type operations at company level and are considered equal in effectiveness to companies of the Laotian National Army. They could be easily organized into larger units, with a consequent increase in their capabilities. There are no known armed non-Communist dissident forces in Laos.

3. The defense of Laos has depended primarily on French Expeditionary Forces. For military reasons, the French may at any time reduce or increase the present strength of regular units in that country. If such strength is reduced substantially below 10,000, Laos would be seriously exposed to Viet Minh attack or subversion.

4. The Laotian National Army, numbering 14,500, is organized into six infantry battalions, seven light infantry battalions, and one parachute battalion. The combat effectiveness of the Army as a whole is only fair. It is inadequately trained and lacks experienced native officers and NCO's. The Laotian National Guard is poorly trained and equipped.

5. The Laotian military establishment depends almost entirely on outside support. France (and, indirectly, the US) furnishes all equipment and almost all the necessary funds. The French train, advise, and tactically direct the Laotian forces. All French expeditionary and Laotian National Army troops in the country are under French operational command. Approximately 300 French officers and NCO's serve in the Laotian National Army, and French officers occupy most field grade positions.

Cambodia

6. Two Viet Minh regular battalions, organic to a Viet Minh division, are now in northeast Cambodia. These troops are Vietnamese invaders who entered Cambodia in March 1954. In addition, small units of Viet Minh regulars, regional troops, and militia are scattered throughout Cambodia. The combat effectiveness of these regional and militia forces is generally only fair, but those east of the Mekong river will probably be raised to a high standard of organization and training before the end of 1954.

7. There are also in Cambodia several hundred armed non-Communist dissidents, who are followers of the Nationalist leader, Son Ngoc Thanh.

8. The Cambodian Royal Army, numbering 14,000, is organized into ten regular infantry, one parachute, and three light infantry battalions. Cambodian armed forces are heavily dependent on the French for finance, equipment, training, and advice, though less so than is the case in Laos. However, the Cambodian government exercises much greater command responsibilities than does the Laotian government. French officers and NCO's, who formerly served in the Royal Army, are at present in the process of being withdrawn. The Cambodian King has full administrative control over all royal forces, and operational command west of the Mekong river.

9. The Cambodian Royal Army is reasonably well equipped and trained, but has a number of deficiencies, chief among which are a lack of adequate numbers of trained officers and NCO's, a low standard of discipline and responsibility in the officer corps, and an almost paralytic defensive-mindedness. In time, the effectiveness of the Royal Army may be increased as a result of the efforts of General Nhiek Tioulong, recently appointed by the King as Defense Minister, Chief of Staff, and Commander-in-Chief of the armed forces.

B. Political Stability

10. The political situation in both Laos and Cambodia is uncertain, but at present is relatively quiet. In Cambodia, the royal institution is held in high regard by the people, who have traditionally accepted monarchical authority, and the King is personally popular. Moreover, Cambodia enjoys a high degree of cultural, ethnic, and religious homogeneity. In Laos, the population is largely apolitical. In neither country is there any appreciable economic or social unrest. In both countries, a tradition of governing elite subordinate to the throne attracts most educated Laotians and Cambodians to government service.

11. Communism has thus far made little progress in either Laos or Cambodia. The Viet Minh is unpopular in both countries because its members are Vietnamese, who are heartily disliked by both the Laotians and the Cambodians. Communist sponsored "free governments" and "independence forces" in Laos and Cambodia are viewed as parts of the Viet Minh and thus far have evoked little support in those countries. Communist political influence is believed to be minimal outside those areas firmly occupied by Viet Minh forces. The "Nationalist" appeal of the Communists, which has been relatively successful in Vietnam, has been blunted in Laos by the general political inertness of the country, and in Cambodia by the vigorous nationalist efforts of the King.

12. The Cambodian government derives considerable domestic support from the fact that it is anti-French. The Laotian government, on the other hand, is outwardly pro-French, but this policy does not adversely affect the government's domestic strength.

13. However, both Laos and Cambodia are vulnerable to Communist pressures, chiefly because of their military weakness. Moreover, in times of crisis their political leadership is often unpredictable, especially in Cambodia. There has been a widespread tendency in both countries to regard the war against the Viet Minh as being "someone else's business". In addition, the Communists may be able at any time to take advantage of the fact that in Laos, and especially in Cambodia, there are rival cliques presently contending for political power.

Non-Communist Dissidence

14. A source of weakness in Cambodia is the existence of non-Communist dissidence. The principal dissident is Son Ngoc Thanh, who is believed to be essentially an independent nationalist. A premier of Cambodia under the Japanese during World War II, Thanh is believed to have a latent political following throughout the country, particularly among students, intellectual groups, and younger army officers who see in him the embodiment of Cambodian independence aspirations. Thanh's political influence has been sapped in recent months by the nationalist efforts of the King, but is still far greater than the small size of his present armed following would suggest. Cambodia's political stability would be greatly enhanced if he should rally to the government, but his future behavior cannot be predicted and it is conceivable that he might join forces with the Viet Minh. In addition to Thanh, there are a number of former dissident leaders who have rallied to the King, but who continue to enjoy warlord-like "autonomous" powers in certain regions of Cambodia. These people are essentially opportunists, whose future loyalty cannot be assured.

15. There are no significant non-Communist dissident groups in Laos. However, Prince Petsarath, now resident in Thailand, is a pre-tender to the Laotian throne and has at times been reported to be planning a coup d'état.

II. THE EFFECT OF CERTAIN POSSIBLE DEVELOPMENTS ON THE SECURITY AND STABILITY OF LAOS AND CAMBODIA

16. The future security and stability of Laos and Cambodia will almost certainly be determined by outside developments. The fate of these kingdoms will be largely fixed, not by their own efforts, but by a number of interacting factors, chief among which are probably: (a) the trend of developments in Vietnam; (b) the scale and nature of outside assistance given the governments of Laos and Cambodia, and (c) the nature and strength of Viet Minh military and political pressures against those countries.

Developments in Vietnam

17. Developments in Vietnam will have an immediate effect on Laos and Cambodia. A strong non-Communist position in Vietnam would tend to assure military security and political stability. However, if key areas of Vietnam fell to the Communists, pressure on Laos and Cambodia would be greatly increased. The military capabilities of these countries are so slight that they would almost certainly request outside aid to defend themselves. If such aid were not immediately supplied, Laos would be quickly overrun, or its government would seek accommodation with the Communists. Cambodia might hold out longer, but in the end it too would be forced to surrender or accommodate. If a negotiated settlement placed the Communists in a position which would enable them eventually, but not immediately, to dominate Vietnam, the immediate danger to Laos and Cambodia would be less and the Laotian and Cambodian governments could probably maintain control for some time.

French Withdrawal

18. If, as a result of a negotiated agreement with the Communists covering all of Indochina, French and Viet Minh regular units were actually withdrawn from Laos and Cambodia (leaving Viet Minh irregular forces still operating in those countries), native forces could probably preserve for some time approximately the present degree of security and stability in Cambodia and a certain minimum security and stability in Laos, provided French cadres and the present scale and nature of French material aid remained available to the native armies. However, such an agreement with the Communists would be extremely difficult, if not impossible, to implement and police, and in these circumstances the native armies could probably not for long successfully resist the Viet Minh without increased outside support.

Outside Assistance

19. Under the adverse alternatives discussed in the two preceding paragraphs, outside support on a scale larger than the French could provide would be required to assure a satisfactory level of security and stability in close countries. If such additional support were not quickly forthcoming, the resistance of Laos and Cambodia to Communism would collapse.

20. If outside support took the form of a security system involving multinational guarantees for the security of Laos and Cambodia and could be implemented in time, that would probably permit Laos and Cambodia to maintain their security, despite rising pressures from the Communists in Vietnam and a probably growing degree of internal Communist unrest in both countries, we believe that the requirements of such a security system will be: (a) adequate MDAP-type aid; (b) effective protective forces appropriately located in the area; and (c) assurance of assistance in the event of internal subversion as well as external attack. The success of the above measures, in the long run, would also require the maintenance and development of a political and psychological atmosphere which would motivate any indigenous peoples against Communism.

Partition

21. If Laos and Cambodia were partitioned, the will of the non-Communist remnants to maintain their independence would greatly decrease, and their ability to do so would be weakened because of the new establishment in those countries of strong and legalized Communist positions. Under such circumstances probably nothing but military occupation of those countries would assure their continued freedom from Communist control.

FORCE STRENGTHS

	LAOS
	Regulars	Other	Total
Viet Minh	10,300	8,500	18, 800
French Expeditionary Corps	18,000 (5,000 Laotian)	2,000 (attchd Laotian militia)	20, 000
Laotian Nat'l Forces	14,500 (Nat'l Army)	6,500 (Nat'l Guard & semi- milit)	21, 000

CAMBODIA

	Regulars	Other	Total
Viet Minh	2,200	6,500	8,700
French Expeditionary Corps	5,000	1,000	6,000
	(3,000 infantry, 2,000 service)	(attchd Cam- bodian militia)
Cambodian Royal Forces	14,000	19,000 (Nat'l Guard 4,000; semi- milit 15,000)	33,000

JUNE 4, 1954

396.1 GE/6-454

Memorandum from the Special Adviser to the United States Delegation (Heath) to the Head of the Delegation (Smith)<sup>1</sup>

SECRET

GENEVA, June 4, 1954.

Subject: Meeting of the Six on Indochina this Morning.

1. The British and French representatives advanced the thought that Chou En-lai's address yesterday represented a slight concession from the Vietminh representatives' proposal, in that Chou En-lai recognized that the Neutral Commission could also take cognizance of violations of the armistice agreement although it would have no authority or superiority over the mixed commissions. This view was not shared by other Delegations. Ambassador Chauvel suggested, however, that perhaps Molotov is having trouble coordinating his people.

2. This afternoon, both Eden and Bidault may seek clarifications of certain statements made by Chou En-lai and Dong yesterday with particular reference to discrepancies between them.

3. The Cambodians may make some brief statements rejecting Chou En-lai's proposal that the international mechanism control the nonintroduction of troops and war material into Cambodia after the cessation of hostilities. However, the Cambodian Delegation has a fairly long speech almost prepared which it may deliver this afternoon or may wait for the plenary. (We should get the plenary organized as soon as possible.)

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by Heath and Bonsal.

4. The meeting was given some interesting information regarding Krishna Menon's calls on the representatives of the Associated States (telegram being drafted).<sup>2</sup> Menon, who only called on the Associated States Delegations after the Cambodian Delegate had expressed to the press his great surprise at the absence of such visits, showed great ignorance of the political situation of the three countries. He wants an international control of the introduction of troops and arms into all three countries and an immediate cease-fire. His idea of a court of last resort in the event of serious violations of the cessation of hostilities arrangements in Indochina would be the Four Great Powers who would presumably consult together and take appropriate measures; the alternative would be World War. Menon indicated that India was ready to participate in the enforcement of an armistice in Indochina. The Cambodian Ambassador added that his Delegation's enthusiasm for having India in the Control Commission had been "greatly tempered" by Menon's call. Menon suggested to the Laotian Delegation that they consent to Vietminh troops remaining in a small area in Laos. The Vietnamese Delegate said that the Foreign Minister had a two hour talk with Menon of which he did not have a full report but the Vietnamese Foreign Minister had taken Indian policy to date to task as favoring the Vietminh rather than the legitimate government of Vietnam. Vietnamese Delegate said that before accepting India in any capacity in Indochinese affairs, he would like to feel India was neutral and not merely neutralist.

---

<sup>2</sup> Summary of Menon's discussions with the Associated States representatives is in telegram Secto 390, June 5, p. 1045.

---

396.1 GE/6-454 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET

GENEVA, June 4, 1954—noon.

Secto 371. Department pass USUN; repeated information Paris 381, London 242, Bangkok 16, Usun 11. Reference Tosec 334<sup>1</sup> and Secto 366.<sup>2</sup> It seems to me that we must choose a careful path between resolution which would limit POC to Thailand and one which specifically provides for observation elsewhere in the area or directly implies that such observation will take place. As I said in Secto 366 Eden wants to avoid resolution specifically extending scope of POC beyond Thailand but will support resolution which does not prohibit at a later stage, without further SC or GA action, the extension of this observation to Cambodia or Laos when those governments request it. It should not be difficult to find form of words to achieve this result. If the present subparagraph (a) of the draft resolution (Tosec 229<sup>3</sup>) carries too strong an implication to insure promised British support, perhaps it can be more generalized.

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated June 3, p. 1013.

<sup>2</sup> In telegram Secto 366, June 3, not printed, the U.S. Delegation reported that "Eden today said UK felt Security Council consideration Thai appeal should 'not be pressed urgently' and no resolution should be tabled which would have effect extending scope POC beyond Thailand." (396.1 GE/6-354)

SMITH

---

<sup>3</sup> Dated May 21, p. 876.

---

396.1 GE/6-454 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET

GENEVA, June 4, 1954—3 p. m.

Secto 374. Repeated information Saigon 142, Paris 384. Dac Khe told Heath yesterday that he had protested to French delegation that French Officers, who have now started talks in Geneva with representatives of Viet Minh command, are defeatists. Vietnamese Government has Colonel Kim sitting in on these talks and Vietnamese delegation has added Tran Van Tuyen, both of whom have been instructed watch for any signs of "defeatist concessions" by their French colleagues.

SMITH

---

396.1 GE/6-454 : Telegram

*Twelfth Restricted Session on Indochina, Geneva, June 4, 3 p. m. :
The United States Delegation to the Department of State<sup>1</sup>*

CONFIDENTIAL

GENEVA, June 4, 1954—10 p. m.

Secto 379. Repeated information Paris 387, London 245, Saigon 144, Tokyo 110, Moscow 107, Phnom Penh, Vientiane unnumbered. Tokyo for CINCFE. Department pass Defense. Twelfth restricted session, Friday June 4, Molotov presiding:

Cambodian delegate reiterated views re special character Cambodian problem. He referred to CPR position yesterday that international control including control over introduction war material and troops be extended to Cambodia. After referring to complete independence and sovereignty of Cambodia and to absence French troops there and to foreign (Viet Minh) invasion of which Cambodia victim and after referring to fact Viet Minh has foreign armament (including shells with Chinese characters) and after stressing pacific nature Cambodian Government and people, Cambodian delegate stated that when peace is restored Cambodia will need to import war materials and also foreign military technicians and instructors for legitimate purposes Cambodian organization for defense. He said international control over this legitimate activity would be dangerous intervention in Cambodian domestic concerns. He added, however, Cambodia would give commitment not permit introduction foreign troops into Cambodia and also to inform control commission re Cambodian importations of arms. He said international control in Cambodia over introduction arms and troops made as much sense as would similar control in Thailand and in China.

---

<sup>1</sup> A set of minutes of this session (IC Restricted/12) is in Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 278. The minutes indicate that the meeting convened at 3 p. m. and adjourned at 7 p. m. The minutes are also printed in Conférence de Genève, pp. 196-204.

Cambodian delegate believes composition of international control commission for Cambodia should be different from that for Vietnam because of Cambodia's special situation. He reiterated proposal he had made on May 16 and 17 that selection of members international commission basis proposals by Geneva Conference and added that in case of Cambodia it should be Cambodia herself that would make proposal. International control in Cambodia would be designed purely to protect Cambodia against fresh invasion following evacuation of Viet Minh troops.

Cambodian delegate proposes seven states (India, Pakistan, Burma, Philippines, Japan, Canada and Italy), asking conference select three of these for international control commission in Cambodia.

Mr. Eden reiterated that he had always agreed Cambodia and Laos were special cases which should be taken up by conference at an early date, and he referred to views earlier expressed on this subject by UK delegate. Dismissing Cambodian intervention, he then turned to general subject of international supervision. He mentioned statements yesterday by French, US and CPR delegates.

Eden said first important point regards functions and relations between proposed joint committees of belligerents and proposed international supervisory commission. He stated DRV-CPR view to effect joint committees have primary responsibility for carrying out cease-fire provisions but added he may not clearly have understood Chou En-lai's remarks re this topic. He said further clarification would be helpful. He stated his own view to effect joint committees in Vietnam could be helpful but that since obviously differences will arise between two sides, there must be an authority, namely, the impartial international committee of control, to resolve these differences and to assure correct execution all clauses of cessation of hostilities agreement. Mere coordination between two bodies clearly insufficient. Even international body will not be able function satisfactorily if made up on same bilateral basis as joint committees. Membership of international commission must not reflect points of view of two sides but be truly impartial and endowed with necessary authority for task.

Re composition, Eden referred to agreement that this should be pursued in private discussion. He repeated need for clarification re authority and status of the international committee. Thereafter, conference should take up structure and functions thereof. He stated Bidault's June 2 proposals would be most useful.

Eden said next question would be decision on authority to which international committee will be responsible. He expressed interest in CPR proposal that responsibility could be to Geneva Conference nations who have task of guaranteeing agreements. Eden suggested guaranteeing powers might see fit set up permanent control organism made up of members. This required further consideration.

Summarizing, he stated following questions:

1. What should be the function and responsibility of joint committees, of impartial international commission and of guarantor powers?
2. What should be the relations between these three bodies?

Molotov then spoke re composition of international commission. He referred to Soviet proposal (India, Poland, Czechoslovakia, and Pakistan) and to objections on basis Communist ideology of Poland and Czechoslovakia. He stated these objections untenable. Capitalistic countries on this basis could not be neutral either. He discussed organization of such bodies as UN, Security Council, ECOSOC and International Court of Justice. He stated charter of ICJ clearly calls for makeup on basis differing juridical systems which reflect existing dominant political, economic systems.

Molotov rejected proposal to introduce UN into Indochina matter. He stated UN unfit if only because absence China whose people denied their legal right of membership. He also pointed out majority members Indochina phase Geneva Conference not UN members.

Re composition of international commission, Molotov stated there should be included countries having diplomatic and political relations with both of the parties to the dispute which means Poland and Czechoslovakia "or others" cannot be omitted.

On subject of relation between joint committees and international commission, Molotov stated relationship should be one of coordination, that they should work in agreement but not be subordinate one to the other. He referred to precedent in Korea where no such subordination exists in case of joint bodies representing belligerents. He described role of international commission as one of helping parties to carry out terms of their agreement. With reference to matter of appeal by NNSC in event unable settle disputes, Molotov referred to statement made by CPR in which Eden had expressed interest to effect that guarantor states mentioned in original French proposal would receive for consideration disputes which neither NNSC nor, in first instance, joint committees had been unable to settle. The guarantor states would then agree on necessary collective measures.

Molotov stated that NNSC must cover all three countries of Indochina. Otherwise there might occur in Laos and Cambodia a concentration of military personnel and arms or even establishment of foreign bases which would threaten permanence of cessation of hostilities in Indochina. He reminded conference that France and French troops have relations with all three states. He added that original French proposal spoke of international control for all three states, only difference being nature of responsibility in each.

Molotov denied there was any difference in the proposals of Soviet delegation and DRV in matter of NNSC. He expressed full Soviet endorsement of observations made by DRV and by CPR on this question.

Molotov also drew attention to second paragraph of Chinese proposal (Secto 326<sup>2</sup>) providing that parties concerned should begin negotiations upon appropriate readjustments of their occupied zones and other related problems. He stated contacts have been established between commands in Geneva but noted that none had yet been established in field in spite of fact that conference "resolution" of May 31<sup>3</sup> clearly provides for special contacts. He expressed hope these would be established in near future. Molotov expressed agreement with suggestion made yesterday re private exchanges of views on international control commission problems.

After intermission, Bidault spoke at some length on need for effective impartial permanent control authority over armistice agreement which could take immediate action whenever necessary.<sup>4</sup> Otherwise every agreement would be in danger. If no difficulties arose in implementation agreement, no need for such impartial arbiter. However, all agreed that violations likely and that disputes would arise mixed commission. Therefore, must be dispassionate and responsible control authority which would be removed from heated disputes and able move quickly. French could not abandon this concept.

Bidault continued he would speak of Laos and Cambodia later, and was concerning himself today only with situation Vietnam. He re-

---

<sup>2</sup> Dated May 27, p. 947.

<sup>3</sup> Reference to the communiqué agreed to during the Ninth Restricted Session on May 31: see telegram Secto 356, May 31, p. 983.

<sup>4</sup> French proposal on "Structure of Supervision in Viet-Nam" is infra.

marked Chou yesterday had considered it necessary establish two joint bodies—mixed commissions which knew well geographic areas and which would participate in implementation armistice agreement and at same time international commission. He again stressed need of neutral supervision and pointed out areas disagreement which might arise in mixed commissions such as those concerning regroupment troops, exchange prisoners, increase war potential. He considered solution these problems extremely difficult and without precedent that first condition for adequate control over these problems was need for real neutral observers who would have authority and who could act quickly for, if breaches of the armistice were permitted endure, disaster would result. He advocated efficient system of supervision control which would be fixed yet mobile, large enough to be effective, and with modern means of transportation, communication, etc. He said each time dispute arose which could not be settled by mixed commissions it must be referred international commission which would have last word and full authority. If there were no such controls there could be no guarantees for effective armistice.

Bidault continued mixed commissions should actively participate implementation of armistice agreement. Their duties, following directive of international commission, could be widened. But they were always subordinate to international commission. When violations in armistice terms fell within competence international commission, international commission would take action. When secondary violations within competence mixed commissions arose, they would attempt to settle them, but if they were unable they must be referred back international commissions.

Bidault then turned to question composition international commission but made no proposal. He noted various proposals on Indochina armistice had been tabled, including one by Eden today and suggested they be considered seriously and talked over in subsequent restricted meeting. He said he would circulate views French delegation on results thus far Indochinese debate.

General Smith had three brief observations:

(1) Was impossible reach meeting minds on interpretation actual neutrals on one hand and effective impartiality of non-belligerents on other. He suggested new approach in accordance with Eden's statement today on impartial international controls. He proposed discard word "neutral" and insert "impartial" and then perhaps delegates might find impartial nations for participation in international commission;

(2) He associated himself completely with British and French views re relationship between mixed commissions and impartial international commission. There must be supreme authority by latter and reasonable subordination by former;

(3) He agreed that Chou's basic principles might in long run be framework for agreement on condition that agreement be reached separately on three points, namely, (1) composition international commissions; (2) relationship between commission and mixed commissions; and (3) nature of obligations of guarantor states. Without this, Chou's basic principles remained skeleton without substance.

SMITH

Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 283

Twelfth Restricted Session on Indochina, Geneva, June 4, 3 p. m.: Proposal Made by the French Delegation

MOST SECRET

[GENEVA,] June 4, 1954.

STRUCTURE OF SUPERVISION IN VIET-NAM

Supervision in Viet-nam shall be organized in the following manner:

1. An "International Supervisory Commission" shall be set up composed of representatives of neutral countries.

2. Joint commissions shall likewise be set up composed of representatives of the Commands.

3. The "International Supervisory Commission" shall be responsible for the execution, by the parties, of the clauses of the armistice agreements.

For this purpose, it shall establish a complete system of supervision, inspection and investigation, comprising a central commission, local commissions distributed over the whole of the territory, and ad hoc mobile commissions which can be utilized in any part of the country. These commissions shall carry out all necessary investigations both documentary and on the spot, either on their own account, or at the request of either of the parties, according to the decisions of the central commission. Any complaint shall be followed by an investigation.

Throughout the whole of the territory, the international commissions shall be given every facility by the civil and military authorities to enable them to carry through their mission.

The international commissions, at every level, shall take their decisions by a majority vote in accordance with a procedure to be determined.

4. The joint commissions shall take part in the execution of the armistice terms, particularly of those which imply regular contact between the parties or which require a thorough knowledge of local conditions.

The joint commissions shall act under the authority of the "International Supervisory Commission", which shall assign to them special duties taking account of the foregoing considerations. They shall report to the international commissions, in proper form to be established by the latter, on the performance of such duties.

Any difference of opinion arising within the joint commissions shall be submitted to the "International Supervisory Commission" which shall settle the dispute directly with the parties.

5. The "International Supervisory Commission" shall be installed as soon as hostilities cease. It shall begin work immediately and define at once the spheres of action and the working conditions of the joint commissions. Measures consequent on the cessation of hostilities (re-groupings, transfers of units, release of prisoners etc.) shall be carried out under its supervision with the assistance of the joint commissions.

---

396.1 GE/6-454 : Telegram

Twelfth Restricted Session on Indochina, Geneva, June 4, 3 p. m.:
The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET      PRIORITY      GENEVA, June 4, 1954—10 a. m. [p. m.]

Secto 381. Repeated information Paris 388, London 246, Saigon 145, Tokyo 112. Department pass Defense. Tokyo pass CINCFE. Indochina restricted session Friday June 4, continued discussion international controls armistice agreement.<sup>1</sup> There was no apparent progress toward meeting of minds.

On composition international commission, our side upheld thesis true neutrality or impartiality while Molotov stated essential commission contain countries having diplomatic, political relations each side and that countries like Poland and Czechoslovakia could not be rejected. General agreement this subject might be pursued in private conversations.

On relations between joint committees of belligerents and international control commission, Eden, Bidault and Smith reiterated strong stand that international commission must have authority and full facilities and joint committees be definitely subordinate. Molotov equally firm that task of international commission one of coordination and assisting belligerents to implement armistice agreement.

Eden expressed interest in Chou En-lai's proposal that nine Geneva powers act as court of appeal in case international control commission unable settle disputes. Eden stated this worthy further study. Molotov said nine guarantors might receive unresolved disputes from international commission and agree on collective measures.

---

<sup>1</sup> For the French proposal made at the Twelfth Restricted Session on "Structure of Supervision in Viet-Nam", see supra.

Cambodian Del reiterated special nature Cambodian case and proposed special international control commission for Cambodia made up of three nations to be selected by conference from India, Pakistan, Burma, Philippines, Japan, Canada and Italy.

SMITH

396.1 GE/6-454 : Telegram

The Secretary of State to the United States Delegation<sup>1</sup>

OFFICIAL USE ONLY

WASHINGTON, June 4, 1954—7:40 p. m.

Tosec 352. Department has received no reports tending confirm any information set forth in UP press story datelined London June 2 and desires any comments which would help evaluate authenticity significance.<sup>2</sup> Information in press item which is attributed to informed and authoritative sources is summarized below :

Molotov quick visit Moscow from Geneva was result conversation Menon with Molotov in which former conveyed India's stand that support of Viet Minh position on Laos and Cambodia would jeopardize friendship USSR among independent nations Southeast Asia. USSR may modify its support of Viet Minh refusal withdraw from Laos, Cambodia. This could produce rift between USSR and Communist China. UK and India closely cooperating on this issue which Eden discussed with Chou at dinner June 1. Prime Minister Burma said to have influenced Nehru inform USSR dangers overly ambitious USSR policy in Southeast Asia. SEA governments reported satisfied sincerity Eden's efforts reach settlement Geneva and his awareness importance of sympathies people Laos, Cambodia with Buddhist peoples Burma and Ceylon. Molotov reportedly cooperative but Chou firmly insisting not possible treat Cambodia, Laos separately from Vietnam.

DULLES

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by Day of FE/PSA. Repeated to New Delhi as telegram 1402, to London as telegram 6574, and to Moscow as telegram 769.

<sup>2</sup> The delegation reply is in telegram Dulte 154, June 5, infra.

110.11 DU/6-554 : Telegram

Smith-Menon Meeting, Geneva, June 4, Evening: The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET

GENEVA, June 5, 1954—3 p. m.

Dulte 154. Reference Tosec 352.<sup>1</sup> Can best comment on Tosec 352 by giving you substance of conversation I had last night with Menon, who asked to see me. Principal burden of his remarks, again was that in interest of reducing world tensions and to avoid complete failure of international conferences, we should not have a break here on Korea, but should announce a few points of agreement on principle and then agreement to disagree, et cetera.

<sup>1</sup> Supra.

He had just talked at length with Chou En-lai, and in response to my question, he said Chinese recognized special problems of Laos and Cambodia, but could not agree to their special treatment. Possibly having been filled in on the substance of yesterday afternoon's debate, Menon gave as a specific example, that the Chinese could not agree to "neutral" supervision in Vietnam and no supervision, or different supervision in Laos and Cambodia. He repeated same arguments given by Molotov and Chou En-lai at yesterday's closed session. France and United States would build up military strength in Laos and Cambodia for aggression toward Vietnam, et cetera. (Of course, to us this is a subsidiary problem to that of the regroupment of Viet Minh forces outside Laos and Cambodia.)

There was no indication yesterday of a softening of the Communist position as previously described regarding Laos and Cambodia, and I intend to talk privately with Molotov on this matter when he comes to dinner Monday, and may be able thereafter to give a better estimate. My own impression has been that the Communist position hardened somewhat after Molotov returned.

SMITH

JUNE 5, 1954

396.1 GE/6-654 : Telegram

Smith-Bidault Meeting, Geneva, June 5, Morning: The United States Delegation to the Department of State

TOP SECRET

GENEVA, June 6, 1954—2 p. m.

Dulte 156. Repeated information Paris 393. Paris eyes only Ambassador. Reference: (1) Deptel 4023 repeated Geneva Tedul 54<sup>1</sup> (2) Deptel 4272 repeated Geneva Tosec 269<sup>2</sup> (3) Deptel 4286 repeated Geneva Tedul 133.<sup>3</sup> Bidault made following comments yesterday morning on US conditions for internationalization Indochinese conflict:

1. Reference 1 paragraph 2b: He foresaw no difficulties regarding request to other nations but wondered whether this problem might be simplified, although he did not amplify. I feel sure French would like to be informed soonest of progress negotiations with other interested nations.

<sup>1</sup> Dated May 11; see volume XIII.

<sup>2</sup> Dated May 26; see ibid.

<sup>3</sup> Telegram 4286 to Paris, May 27, not printed, contained suggestions for meeting the French requirement that an agreement for joint action must allow France some flexibility in regard to the withdrawal of its forces from Indochina in the event of a substantial increase in the strength of the Vietnamese National Army. (751G.00/5-2254)

2. Reference 1 paragraph 2c: Bidault feels Thailand resolution provisionally takes care this problem. He reminded me of difficulties which might arise regarding similar action on part of Laos and Cambodia. I pointed out that we able move fast in Korea because of POC on spot and stated most desirous establish counterpart in Thailand which at later date could extend activities to whole region. He was noncommittal.

3. Reference 2 paragraph 2: Bidault questioned advisability President unilaterally making formal pledge re fulfillment full independence and sovereignty Vietnam. He believed isolated American guarantee ran risk of being interpreted as "vassalization" of Associated States by US; that guarantee should be directed toward territorial integrity, defense and security of Associated States rather than independence "as is usual in case of this kind" and that such a guarantee might be better within framework of any Southeast Asia organizations agreement.

4. Reference 2 paragraph 3c: Bidault suggested change words "after end of hostility" to "after reestablishment peace and within period to be determined in agreement with Government Vietnam."

5. Reference 3 paragraph 2: He suggested paragraph read "throughout duration collective action present French effort will be maintained account being taken of France's international obligations, requirements for metropolitan defense and its obligations toward countries in French Union and its protectorates." Bidault stated that such language would be most helpful in EDC debates since many EDC enemies claim France could not maintain forces both metropolitan France and Asia. I pointed out that some conditions in new draft were inherent, such as requirements for national defense. Said I would report his proposal to Department.

6. Reference 1 paragraph 7: Bidault stated that French Government could only consider submission of request for assistance to Parliament upon complete failure Geneva conference, otherwise government would fall. I replied understood Laniel was prepared lay agreement before Parliament and Cabinet after decision taken honorable armistice not possible Geneva. I pointed out this parliamentary approval essential because of long term basis our commitments and need to rely on fulfillment of conditions by any successor French Government. I continued he and Laniel should judge timing and my government would not press French to take any action which might bring on government crisis.

Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 320

Memorandum of Conversation, by the Special Adviser to the United States Delegation (Heath)<sup>1</sup>

TOP SECRET

GENEVA, June 5, 1954.

Participants: Frederic-Dupont, New French Minister for the Associated States.

Donald R. Heath, Ambassador to Vietnam and Cambodia.

At yesterday's session Mr. Frederic-Dupont, appointed the day before to be French Minister for the Associated States, with whom I became acquainted during his visit with a French Parliamentary Commission to Indochina two years ago, said he would like to talk with me. I saw him this morning. He is leaving for Paris this afternoon, returning here Monday and will be at the Monday conference session whether it deals with Korea or Indochina.

He said that while he had been interested in Indochina affairs for some years he had had no time since his appointment to brief himself on his new job. He had seen General Ely but only for three minutes and had come forthwith to Geneva. He started off by saying that he would speak with entire frankness although his ideas on the Indochina problem were not yet firm. He was a Frenchman but in these days of Communist menace he was not alone a Frenchman but a citizen of the free world. He believed thoroughly in the EDC and had had some slight success in converting colleagues to the necessity of prompt French ratification of the EDC treaty. He was firmly of the belief that any attempt to get along with Communists on the basis of peaceful negotiations would be a fatal futility unless such negotiations were backed up by force. Therefore should the free world decide that continuation of French war effort and sacrifices in Indochina was necessary he would go along repugnant though that course would be to present French public opinion.

On the other hand from long acquaintance with the Indochina situation he was afraid that whether at Geneva or on the field of battle some decision might be taken, as it so often had in the past in Indochina, to try for some small victory tomorrow without taking account of the possibility, that such decision might lead to a grave defeat at some future date.

It was conceivable, he said, that the Communists might back down and agree to French conditions as to the necessity of adequate neutral international control of an armistice, which would be a temporary victory for France but would be followed by Communist insistence on free elections, which by reason of its democratic tradition, France could not successfully oppose and which would result in a real victory for communism in Vietnam and a profound humiliation for France, the United States and the free world.

<sup>1</sup> Summary of conversation transmitted to the Department in telegram Secto 389, June 5. (396.1 GE/6-554)

The military situation was not good. The French had lost the fine corps of their Expeditionary Force at Dien Bien Phu. The Vietnamese national army was very shaky and the Vietminh were flushed with victory, fanatically disciplined and devoted. The French troops, of course, would fight with unimpaired morale since they were professional soldiers but it was not sure they could hold the Tonkin delta or even Hanoi.

The foregoing was evidently a prelude to his "provisional" opinion that the only solution was partition of Vietnam at the Col de Nuages just north of Hue which was, he argued, a defensible military line which would conserve the traditional capital of Hue, the center and the south which was much richer than Tonkin. He asked whether the United States attached great military importance to the holding of the Tonkin delta.

I replied that I understood our general military opinion considered the holding of Tonkin to be important to the point of being vital. I remarked that the abandonment of Tonkin would give the Vietminh—and the Chinese Communists—complete control of the Vietnamese population there. They could turn them rapidly into first class soldiers. I remarked that the Vietnamese government had taken a firm stand against partition of Vietnam and then went on to say that our military in Indochina and in Washington did not take a gloomy view of the French military position as a result of the loss of Dien Bien Phu. We very definitely thought something could be done about it. I said he undoubtedly knew we were exploring with the French and other countries the possibilities of strengthening the Franco-Vietnamese position. He said that he was not informed of any conversations with the French government so I forbore giving him any details, merely stating we were actively exploring with, I thought, prospects of success, the possibilities of adding to French-Vietnamese political and military assets. I also remarked that our experts were very dubious, to say the least, of the possibility of concluding any sure armistice in view of the difficulties of the terrain and certain Communist evasion and bad faith.

He observed that French public opinion had been greatly disheartened that neither France nor Great Britain had come to the aid of the French to save Dien Bien Phu. I said that there had been a last-minute approach to that end but it could hardly be expected that United States or other countries would react immediately and affirmatively to the unexpected idea of immediate military intervention. Until a few weeks ago there had been no question of the United States intervening militarily in Indochina except possibly as a result of an overt Chinese Communist invasion. Neither France nor any other country had wanted American military forces to engage in that struggle. Frederic-Dupont said the only thing he could say was that he hoped the United States would make up its mind quickly what they were willing to do towards saving Indochina. I remarked here that I personally thought that prompt ratification of EDC would tend to take off Communist heat on Indochina. Faced with a militarily United Western Europe the Soviets might feel less inclined to back Communist military ventures in South East Asia.

He then returned to his theme of partition. He doubted that the dominant families in Cochin China would object to that solution if the central and southern Vietnam could be guaranteed by France, the United States and other powers. He was, of course, entirely insistent that there be no partition of Laos or Cambodia. France public opinion would favor supporting the monarchs of those two countries but was highly disinclined to support Bao Dai, who was staying on in France instead of putting himself at the head of his army. The average Frenchmen who could not afford to leave the boulevards for his vacation was rather jealous of Bao Dai staying comfortably at Cannes, while Frenchmen were dying for him in Indochina. He heard that Bao Dai was now planning to take the "cure" at Evian. This would have a really disastrous effect on French public opinion. In the French officers corps there was hardly a family that did not have a relative who had been taken prisoner or killed at Dien Bien Phu. Nearly a third of the officers and non-commissioned officers corps of France was serving in Indochina and suffering heavy continuing casualties.

I said that in his single talk with Bao Dai, some two weeks ago, the head of our delegation, General Smith, had raised the question of Bao Dai returning to Vietnam but that Bao Dai said he could not return until the independence treaty had been signed and until he could see what the outcome would be in Geneva; until he was clear whether France would continue supporting him in keeping up the fight against the Vietminh. I said that as far as I knew there had been no insistence by the French government that Bao Dai return to Vietnam at this moment. I had heard from the Vietnamese Foreign Minister that Bao Dai was coming shortly to Annecy. The Foreign Minister had asked General Smith whether he had any message for Bao Dai. I had replied that we had no communication to make but General Smith hoped before long he might have another talk with Bao Dai. Frederic-Dupont said he favored the idea of such a talk in the hope that we would urge on Bao Dai the necessity of returning. He said he would write us a letter urging that General Smith talk with Bao Dai and persuade the latter to go back to his fatherland. He had very little hope of Bao Dai really doing anything very important although he was extremely intelligent, a very charming and rather frank person but he had been spoiled. Frederic-Dupont saw no clear signs of other leadership in Vietnam. He would like to find a Syngman Rhee. I observed that there probably was latent leadership in Vietnam. If France continued its military and financial support of Vietnam and we continued ours, together we might be able to insist successfully that Bao Dai comport himself as a Chief of a state in peril. At least we could make the try. Frederic-Dupont said he appreciated the talk and hoped it would be followed by others. He expects to see Ely and Salan over the weekend and Reynaud. He remarked it had been definitely determined that Salan should go as Ely's deputy but that Cogny would retain his command in the north. He asked our opinion of Cogny. I said we had a very high one. I forebore any comment on Salan.

---

396.1 GE/6-254 : Telegram

The Secretary of State to the United States Delegation<sup>1</sup>

TOP SECRET      NIACT

WASHINGTON, June 5, 1954—12:42 p. m.

Tedul 159. For Under Secretary from Secretary. Re Dulte 141.<sup>2</sup> I am in general accord subject to the following considerations:

1. In view of dubious future role of Bao Dai as indicated your second paragraph, doubt he should be made the recipient of any express or implied pledges from US.

2. Doubt that US should be so completely identified with France and Vietnam that our own independence of action and freedom to disassociate ourselves would seem to be impaired. I refer in this connection to last sentence of fifth paragraph about "coordination".

3. I have some concern that your proposed statements with reference to necessity Vietnam cooperation with French might be interpreted as asking Vietnam to take pressure off French for clarification of their independence and completion independence treaty.

4. We do not yet have any firm position as to what action we would take in relation to local authorities if French agreed to sell-out unacceptable to them. It would under these circumstances be most unlikely that we would openly intervene there, but we might want to encourage local resistance and help maintain some sort of a non-communist government, even if it were a government wholly or partially in exile. However, as you suggest, it is not at all clear that Bao Dai would be the best person for us to rely upon under these circumstances. This accentuates the desirability of avoiding any statement which he might regard as personal pledge to him.

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by the Secretary of State. Repeated to Paris as telegram 4428 and to Saigon as telegram 2507.

<sup>2</sup> Dated June 2, p. 1008.

5. I hope you can use conversation to draw him out, particularly on the two points of:

- a. what French can do to carry conviction in Indochina that the people are fighting for their own independence, and
- b. how a more effective native government can be established.

DULLES

---

396.1 GE/6-554 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

CONFIDENTIAL

GENEVA, June 5, 1954—8 p. m.

Secto 390. Repeated information Paris 390, Saigon 147, London 249, New Delhi 23. Following account Menon's visits to heads delegations Vietnam, Cambodia and Laos based on reports latter.

Very shortly after he had expressed surprise to press that Menon visited Viet Minh delegation and not delegations of legal governments of Associated States, Cambodian delegate was approached by Menon and interview took place June 2. Menon showed complete ignorance political conditions and status Cambodian independence. He was interested in establishment international control of introduction further troops and munitions into all three countries of Indochina following cessation of hostilities. Cambodian delegate said this unacceptable in special case of Cambodia. As for guarantee of an Indochina agreement that may be concluded, Cambodian delegate states Menon appears to favor four great powers as court of last appeal to resolve difficulties. He states that if they unable reach agreement reactions to be taken in case of serious violations of agreement, alternative will be world war. Cambodian delegate indicated Menon favorable to Indian participation in control of armistice.

Laotian delegate reported Menon contemplating possibility Viet Minh troops might be permitted remain in frontier area of Laos. Laotian delegate stated this unacceptable.

Vietnamese delegate indicated Menon completely ignorant elementary facts re Vietnam and added view Menon position favors Communists. Vietnam delegate says Indians must prove they are neutral and not merely neutralists.

On the whole, Associated States enthusiasm for India and for Menon extremely moderate. They were startled and alarmed at his ignorance of facts of life with which they are confronted.

SMITH

JUNE 6, 1954

396.1 GE/6-554 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of Defense

SECRET

GENEVA, June 5, 1954—3 p. m.

[Received June 6, 1954.]

Army Message Gento 50. Action Defense; repeated action USAR-MAAs London, Paris, Saigon and Department State. From Defense representative Geneva. For Hensel from Sullivan. Following is summary French-VN military talks with Viet Minh 4 June reported to Defense representative by member French delegation:

1. At four hour session Viet Minh referred to statement of Pham Van Dong at 25 May restricted session of delegations as basis upon which military talks should proceed, and suggested military representatives reach agreement thereon.

2. French representative took position that Dong proposal not acceptable basis for discussion since it dealt with political and economic subjects and only incidentally strategic ones. French representative maintained discussion should deal with concrete proposals and not with principles of nature those in Dong's statement. Referred again to Laniel proposal of 5 March as concrete suggestion and basis for further discussion. Invited Viet Minh to table concrete proposal of their own.

3. Viet Minh representative said situation had changed since 5 March; said French had suffered many reverses and many casualties, condemned Laniel proposal as "provocation", and said world opinion also condemned it. French representative responded that Viet Minh had also suffered heavily and that a battle lost is not a war lost as history of French nation testifies.

4. Viet Minh representative contended he could not discuss specific details without agreement on principles first.

5. Comment: No indications of progress in this meeting. French delegation contact expressed opinion that Viet Minh tactic of agreement on Dong principles would be dangerous since Communists could claim that French refusal to agree later to specific proposals allegedly in consonance with the principles demonstrated French bad faith. French still contend they will not fall into trap of beginning detailed talks in Indochina before agreement reached here on framework for talks in the field. French delegation contact noted that Viet Minh group consisted of only one military officer and is of opinion that Viet Minh may not be serious about reaching military agreements in Geneva, preferring that talks take place in field.

---

Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 320

The Coordinator of the United States Delegation (Johnson) to the Head of the Delegation (Smith)

TOP SECRET

GENEVA, June 6, 1954.

GENERAL SMITH: I have been thinking over your letter to the Secretary on Indo-China.<sup>1</sup>

I most emphatically agree with your sentence that it would take strong, direct and rapid action by the U.S. to reverse the adverse trend. Unless we take such action a result such as you set forth is the best we can hope for.

The major factor is the defeatism and lack of will to fight among the Vietnamese who are now in the down slope. Our intervention on even a limited scale might reverse the trend. However, I feel that there is a better than even chance that our intervention would eventually result in full scale hostilities with at least Communist China. If a formula could be found that would give the Vietnamese the psychological lift of our intervention without our actually being required to intervene it would be ideal. However, I fear it is an impossible ideal.

The only other possibility of reversing the trend is for a Vietnamese to appear able and willing to sound a loud clear trumpet call to turn his people around and start them up the slope. However, I see no such person or the probability of such a person appearing.

However, I do not agree that our intervention would have an "enormous adverse effect" on Asiatic public opinion because of direct association with militant colonialism. There would probably be some initially adverse reactions, but I believe they could be overcome by a clear declaration on our part of our policy with regard to Vietnamese independence. Adverse Asian reaction would rather arise from fear that we were precipitating World War III. If we succeeded in winning in Indo-China without bringing on World War III our position in Asia would be enormously enhanced. However, if World War III did result, Asia would blame us and turn against us.

U. A. JOHNSON

---

<sup>1</sup> For text of Under Secretary Smith's letter to Secretary Dulles, see telegram Dulte 157, June 7, p. 1054.

Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 320

The Special Adviser to the United States Delegation (Heath) to the Head of the Delegation (Smith)

TOP SECRET

GENEVA, June 6, 1954.

MY DEAR GENERAL: In addition to your vast military experience and insight you have for years now successfully dealt at first hand and at high level with international affairs.

Since the attached confidential letter<sup>1</sup> represents your considered judgment of the present situation and its possible solution, you as the boss of this delegation must, of course, send it.

I would hope, however, that you will modify it to the extent of admitting a possible alternative, a possible if not too likely loophole for a better way out of this mess.

That loophole consists of several big "ifs"—if military, congressional and public opinion can be rallied to the idea of American military intervention in Indochina, if we can persuade the Philippines and Thailand to at least token co-intervention, if Bidault's ideas prevail and the French Assembly agrees to keep up the fight, if with or without Bao Dai we can install a Vietnamese regime of honesty and will (perhaps under Ngo Dinh Diem) and if EDC is ratified presenting Russia with a militarily United Western Europe with German divisions at its back-door, perhaps China might persuade herself or be persuaded by Russia not to intervene overtly in Indochina even if the battle turned against the Vietminh, which indeed it could.

Before embarking on intervention with its risk of bringing not only China but the entire Communist world into war we should offer a peaceful alternative to world opinion. That alternative would be: a massive genuinely neutral, preferably United Nations, international control commission—disposing of say, two divisions—with its elements stationed in the Vietminh as well as the Vietnam zones, able to move at will within them and along the Chinese frontier, able to enforce disarmament of all irregular troops, able to prevent entry of fresh troops and matériel and, in preparation of UN supervised elections, able to ensure that political parties, press and radio of both sides could campaign freely in the territories of the other. National elections might be held, say, within one year after hostilities—and terrorism—had ceased. We would run the risk that elections would go against the Vietnam Government. I don't think that risk would ever develop because the Communists would not really accept such a spelled-out control.

---

<sup>1</sup> Reference to letter from Under Secretary Smith to Secretary Dulles. For text of letter, see telegram Dulles 157, June 7, p. 1054.

If the foregoing seems to you too unlikely an alternative I nevertheless venture to suggest two changes in your letter:

1. I personally believe the Communists would accept a partition line further north than the Col de Nuages which latter would give them a good 60 percent of the population and the territory. I believe they would accept northern Vietnam which would still give them Hanoi, the cultural capital, the hardiest breed of Vietnamese and nearly one-half of the Vietnam's population.

2. I personally would modify the phrase "the enormous adverse effect" partition would have on Asiatic opinion. I suggest that Formosa, Thailand, Philippines and even Burma would understand our intervention is not colonialist and that we might develop understanding in Ceylon, Pakistan and Turkey.

DRH

JUNE 7, 1954

Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 290

Memorandum of Conversation, by the Special Adviser to the United States Delegation (Heath)<sup>1</sup>

SECRET

GENEVA, June 7, 1954.

Participants: M. Roland de Margerie, French Delegation
Donald R. Heath, US Delegation
Edward Page, US Delegation

In conversation this morning the following points were brought out by de Margerie:

1. While Bidault in the last session had taken a strong stand that the mixed commission must be subordinate to the authority of the international commission, de Margerie is not sure that he would maintain this line for the following reasons: If France desired, after a cease fire, to bring U.S. matériel or U.S. personnel into UN for training of troops a too precise supervisory structure might make this impossible. He had therefore recommended to Bidault that any final plan—he was under no illusions, that any armistice could be drawn which could not be evaded by the Communists—should be "short and vague". He cited the incident of Abbe Sieyes saying to Napoleon that "a constitution must be short and clear" only to be interrupted by the latter stating "yes I agree that a constitution must be short and obscure".

2. He thought Chou En-lai had made a slight concession in agreeing that the international commission would have authority over the demilitarized zones between or along the periphery of the regroupment areas. There would probably be at least five demilitarized zones which would give the international commission considerable authority.

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by Heath and Page.

3. Bidault was now in favor of an Indochina plenary tomorrow for it would give him an opportunity to make a detailed statement on the French position prior to his statement in Parliament on Wednesday<sup>2</sup> which would be of a more general nature. Bidault's line in Tuesday's plenary would probably be to review the serious practical concise French proposals and the fact they had been met by vague impractical and unacceptable proposals from the Communists.

4. Bidault would let General Smith know whether he thought it advisable for the General to speak tomorrow. De Margerie thought it possible that Bidault might desire the General to reiterate the U.S. position of the composition of the international commission.

<sup>2</sup> June 9.

Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 319

*Memorandum by the Adviser to the United States Delegation
(Bonsal) to the Head of the Delegation (Smith)*

SECRET

GENEVA, June 7, 1954.

Subject: Indochina

I called on Ambassador Chauvel at 12:30 today at the latter's request.

Regarding the current military conversations, Chauvel said that absolutely no progress had been made. The Vietminh have insisted on trying to reach agreement regarding the general principles contained in their May 25 proposal whereas the French have wished to start from Laniel's proposals of March 5. Late Saturday, the French suggested that a good way to begin might be to establish the present military positions of the opposing sides. The French plan this afternoon to present their situation and see if this elicits anything specific from the other side. They are not optimistic because of the generally delaying tactics of the other side including insistence on speaking Vietnamese, citing from Communist newspapers, etc., etc.

On the matter of controls, Bidault has had a talk with Chou En-lai and Chauvel himself has seen Wang Ping-nam three times. The CPR position is firmly to the effect that the control commission must have two members having relations with the Vietminh. The fact that France's relations with India are less than cordial does not alter the Chinese Communists' position that India is one of our side's neutrals. Bidault is seeing Chou En-lai this evening and something may develop although so far the CPR position is one of firmly supporting the Soviet proposal on composition.

Bidault saw Molotov this morning with completely negative results. Chauvel described Molotov as having behaved like a "smiling log". Molotov suggested that perhaps one reason the military discussions were not making greater progress was because "someone is expected" i.e., the Vietminh Delegation is not yet complete. Molotov insisted on the Soviet proposal regarding composition and particularly the inclusion of states having diplomatic relations with the Vietminh.

Krishna Menon saw Bidault for an hour and a half yesterday. He also insisted that the control commission should include someone having relations with the Vietminh.

It is the French impression that Molotov's attitude since his return from Moscow has hardened to some extent. The French note that since Molotov's return from Moscow he has had no direct contact with Eden. The French also regret that Eden has been away this weekend and therefore no contacts have been possible during these critical three days.

Bidault will be prepared to make a speech tomorrow generally summarizing the French proposals and the various arguments which have been advanced in the course of the restricted sessions. Bidault is according to Chauvel satisfied that the plenary here will precede the speech he will make to the Assembly and that thus he can use the speech he made here in reporting to the Assembly.

Ambassador Chauvel stated at both the beginning and the end of his conversation with me that the French are very much concerned and annoyed at the lack of any progress. They are in the dark as to the enemy's military intentions, and are fully aware of the fact that between June 15 and June 20 General Giap will be ready to resume the offensive.

---

Conference files, lot 80 D 627, CF 316

*Memorandum by the Adviser to the United States Delegation
(Bonsal) to the Head of the Delegation (Smith)*<sup>1</sup>

TOP SECRET

GENEVA, June 7, 1954.

Subject: Implication of Probable Vietminh Offensive in Tonkin
Delta

The following factors seem pertinent to an appraisal of the Indochina situation:

1. Present French military dispositions and intentions, even if successfully carried out, present the Vietminh with an opportunity in the next few weeks to achieve an important increase in territory held by them in the Tonkin Delta. The loss of such places as Nam Dinh, Thai Binh and the two Catholic bishoprics would represent a serious further drop in prestige for the Franco-Vietnamese cause and will further depreciate the negotiating position of our side at Geneva.

<sup>1</sup> This memorandum was sent to Under Secretary Smith through Robertson and Heath. In a note attached to the source text Heath informed Smith and Robertson that "I agree that the analysis of the present situation is very good but I am not clear whether the action recommended in the final two paragraphs is practical." In a handwritten notation by Robertson on Heath's note, Robertson said "I don't agree that we should attempt a 'bluff'. It might be called."

2. The above represents the best we may hope for in the military-political situation over the next few weeks if the Vietminh resumes the offensive. If the French are again, as they have so often been in the past months, "surprised" at increased Vietminh power and are unable to meet that power, we may be faced with the loss of Hanoi and perhaps with a large scale military disaster if the French are unable to withdraw their forces to Haiphong.

3. A deteriorating military situation, whether it takes the form set forth in (1) or (2) above, coupled with French public and parliamentary anxiety for a cease fire, will make it increasingly difficult for the French negotiators to stand firm on the negotiating points which are vital if any part of Vietnam is to have a chance of being kept from Communist control. (These points are (a) regrouping zones which would permit if necessary a resumption of hostilities under conditions reasonably favorable for our side particularly if direct US intervention were contemplated, (b) a Neutral Nations Supervisory Commission which would have the will and the means to control the execution of the armistice terms, and (c) a UN or other guarantee in such form that the free world guarantors could not be hamstrung by the Communist guarantors.)

4. In the present military-political situation, there seems to be absolutely no indication of any significant improvement in Vietnamese political morale. Bao Dai has proved himself to be an even more inert and repulsive figure than we had earlier thought. So far as North Vietnam is concerned, Governor Tri is our only hope and his morale is pretty low at this time.

5. Our conversations with the French regarding conditions for possible US intervention are presumably progressing favorably. We can probably assume that, if the Geneva Conference is unsuccessful from the French point of view, the French will invite US intervention and that the other conditions for such intervention will prove workable. On the other hand, the possibility that the French will in fact agree to the breaking off of the Geneva discussions will diminish with the deterioration of the military situation in Indochina and the increased peril of the expeditionary corps. As the military situation gets worse, the trend toward peace at any price and away from the enlarging of the conflict will probably become accentuated. In any event, it would be most difficult to find, in the face of a rapidly deteriorating military situation in Indochina, the formula for a break at Geneva which would satisfy the requirements of both the French Assembly and the US Congress in the event that such a break were followed by a request to the Assembly and to the Congress for authorization for a US intervention in the war.

Our most recent information indicates that the bulk of the Vietminh forces will be ready for further offensive action on June 15. If such an offensive does begin, the following courses of action appear to be open to us :

(a) If we and the French were really and irrevocably determined on US intervention in order to prevent a Vietminh victory, we would simply, in view of the enemy's pursuit of his aggression, and in concert with the French take the necessary steps to withdraw from the Geneva Conference and we would submit the whole problem to our respective legislatures and to the UN and to our allies. It is quite obvious, however, that France is not in a position to take speedy effective action nor is it certain that the US could act speedily.

(b) Another possible course of action would be for the US, acting unilaterally following the resumption of the Vietminh offensive, to withdraw from the conference and to recover complete freedom of action. This might involve branding the Vietminh offensive as involving an overt Chinese Communist aggression. (You will recall that the Secretary early in April said that the Chinese were very close to such overt aggression.) We would then proceed as provided in NSC 5405<sup>2</sup> in the event of an overt Chinese aggression. This would be unsatisfactory because our military-political relations with the French would be uncoordinated, and because there is considerable doubt that our other allies would follow us.

(c) A third alternative would be for the US simply to withdraw from the conference and to disassociate itself from any deal which the French may be forced to make. Such a course would be extremely damaging to our prestige and would spell the end of the policy of collective security which we have endeavored to build. It would accelerate the turning over of Indochina to the Communists more than any other action we could take. We do not have a substitute partner in Indochina if the French bow out.

The consideration of these factors and of these alternatives leads me to pose the following questions: Is there anything which can be done within the current week (the critical date of June 15 is next Tuesday) to induce the enemy to abandon his apparent offensive intentions? Can it be made clear to Molotov and to Chou En-lai that if Giap intensifies his military action in the delta, we would be forced to withdraw from the Geneva Conference and to concert military measures to meet a changing military situation? Can we get the agreement of the French and British delegates?

Molotov and Chou En-lai would be informed perhaps by Eden acting for the French and ourselves that our readiness to negotiate for the restoration of peace in Indochina was predicated upon the situation as it existed when the conference opened. If that situation is to be changed we desire to recover full freedom of action to take necessary counter-measures. By means of this démarche, we would endeavor to impress in the most serious and convincing fashion upon Molotov and Chou En-lai the extreme danger to world peace of a further offensive in the Tonkin Delta. At the same time, we could authorize Eden or whoever represents us to express a realistic understanding of the situation in Vietnam and a willingness to accept an agreement for the cessation of hostilities and for a transitional period leading to general elections throughout Vietnam which would give the Vietminh leaders an opportunity through peaceful means to contest control of the country with non-Communist leadership. We should of course stress the firmness of our position regarding Laos and Cambodia. Molotov should be made to feel that on the military actions of Giap over the next ten days, the whole issue of peace or war may depend.

---

<sup>2</sup> For NSC 5405, "U.S. Objectives and Courses of Action With Respect to South-east Asia," Jan. 16, 1954, see volume XII.

The drawback to any approach to Molotov and Chou En-lai along the lines proposed above is of course the possibility that they might believe we were bluffing. This is a risk which we would have to take. We have to take it because, in the last analysis, we ourselves don't know whether we are bluffing or not, i.e., we can not be sure at this stage of the reaction of the American public to a further serious deterioration of the Franco-Vietnamese position in the Tonkin Delta followed by a Presidential appeal to Congress for the necessary authority to intervene militarily. Furthermore, we are uncertain regarding the reaction in France to further Vietminh military successes under either of the hypotheses set forth in numbered paragraphs 1 and 2 above. But the uncertainties in the situation should be made to work so far as possible to our advantage by being, from the enemy's point of view, as great as possible.

---

396.1 GE/6-754 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

TOP SECRET      PRIORITY

GENEVA, June 7, 1954—2 p. m.

Dulte 157. Personal for Secretary.<sup>1</sup>

Dear Foster: If you have not done so, please read our Secto 389 reporting Heath's first conversation with Frederic-DuPont.<sup>2</sup> As I told you privately, I have felt for some time that a solution somewhat like that visualized by DuPont is likely to be the best we will be able to get, and that we well may get something worse. The Viet Minh are obviously not in a hurry to settle military questions. Bidault said Saturday that so far they had absolutely refused to discuss cease-fire details, and had confined themselves to political polemics and rather truculent references to their victories and their growing military strength. I am afraid there is truth in the latter.

---

<sup>1</sup> For comments on the letter to the Secretary, see letters to Smith from Johnson and Heath, both dated June 6, pp. 1047 and 1048, respectively.

<sup>2</sup> Telegram Secto 389, June 5, not printed, contained a summary of a conversation between Heath and Frederic-DuPont. (396.1 GE/6-554) For a memorandum of this conversation, June 5, see p. 1041.

I realize that a solution like that mentioned by DuPont would not please our soldiers and would not be popular generally at home, and I know how much importance Radford has attached to the delta, but I know also that China has been after the Red River valley and the delta for years, and it seems to me that they now intend to have it, or at least the greater part. The Communists probably estimate that if Hanoi is surrounded the French cannot supply the defenders by air and feed the population too, and that the occasional supply column they might drive through would not be enough. I believe also that the Chinese Communists have considered and are willing to risk the chance of what we might do in Indochina. They probably would welcome the introduction of some US ground forces there because of the opportunity this would give them directly to intervene for the ostensible purpose of repelling US aggression and because of the initially adverse effect our participation would have on Asiatic public opinion for many reasons well-known to you. I believe it already has involved in the minds of Australia and New Zealand some of the thoughts of "supporting colonialism" judging by the apprehensive reaction of their representatives here to our military talks in Paris.

I realize we cannot associate ourselves with or guarantee anything that bears the appearance or carries the name of partition, or of division of the country, and of course if such a solution is reached by the military committee it will not be called "partition." If a solution is not reached, and that rather promptly, I fear that a deteriorating situation in Indochina may provide it. Even now it would, I believe, require powerful, direct and rapid action by the United States to reverse the adverse trend. Laos and Cambodia can probably be saved, although in the former there will most likely be a rather large political and military "no man's land" in the north and along the frontier. My thought is that here we should in the matter of Indochina continue only to play the role of helpful friend as indicated in your Tedul 146,<sup>3</sup> standing firm on the separate status of Laos and Cambodia but not opposing or obstructing any reasonable military compromise the French may be able to get, recognizing at the same time that it will be one that we don't like, and probably will not be able publicly to associate ourselves with. Signed Bedell.

SMITH

---

<sup>3</sup> Dated June 1, p. 994.

396.1 GE/6-754 : Telegram

The Secretary of State to the United States Delegation<sup>1</sup>

TOP SECRET PRIORITY WASHINGTON, June 7, 1954—5:28 p. m.

Tedul 169. I have your Dulte 157.<sup>2</sup> I share the views there expressed, emphasizing however your remark that we should seek to avoid formal identification with open partition or the creation of two states where one now exists.

Referring to your Secto 389<sup>3</sup> I feel that Heath has somewhat overstated the case, perhaps deliberately for morale reasons. Our military authorities do in fact take a rather gloomy view of military situation and the "explorations" designed to strengthen military and political position are pretty much at a standstill not by our election but because the French themselves have never yet really decided on whether they want the war to be "internationalized" on the conditions which long ago we laid down at Paris. Therefore Dupont's advice to us to make up our mind "quickly" is rather irrelevant. We made up our mind sometime ago with the qualification however that we reserve the right to review the situation if by the time the French acted the situation had deteriorated beyond salvage. The latter seems to be happening.

I have long felt and still feel that the French are not treating our proposal seriously but toying with it just enough to use it as a talking point at Geneva.

DULLES

---

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by the Secretary of State.

<sup>2</sup> Supra.

<sup>3</sup> See footnote 2, supra.

396.1 GE/6-754 : Telegram

The Secretary of State to the United States Delegation<sup>1</sup>

TOP SECRET WASHINGTON, June 7, 1954—6:27 p. m.

Tedul 171. Eyes only Ambassadors. Re Secto 389.<sup>2</sup> Defense Dept reports<sup>3</sup> that five-power military conference at its plenary session of June 4, under chairmanship General Valluy, amended and approved [Five-Power] Conference Study No. I: "Intelligence Survey of Military Situation in SEA Area."

---

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by Sturm of FE/PSA; cleared in substance by Admiral Radford. Repeated to Paris as telegram 4448 and to Saigon as telegram 2527.

<sup>2</sup> Not printed, but see footnote 2, p. 1054.

<sup>3</sup> In a memorandum dated June 5, entitled, "Five-Power Military Conference of June 1954; Summary of the Proceedings of 4 June." (751G.00/6-554)

In connection with review of intelligence survey, Gen Valluy presented his own evaluation military situation Tonkin Delta as follows:

1. If Tonkin is lost, military line will not be reestablished anywhere.
2. Anyone can find on map a line with tactical characteristics which theoretically should permit reestablishment, such as Laos bottleneck or eighteenth parallel, but Valluy said he could affirm there would be no forces to man this line.

3. Valluy said he was not speaking of French forces in this connection but meant to indicate that there were no southern Vietnamese who could oppose northern Vietnamese.

4. Ho Chi Minh's objective is Tonkin, to be attained either by negotiation at Geneva or by assault on Hanoi.

5. Ho Chi Minh wishes to entangle us in negotiations by admitting now, for first time, that there is a Communist northern state and a non-Communist southern state and saying that both might be incorporated in French Union.

6. What Ho Chi Minh seeks is Tonkin and its political capital Hanoi from which he was driven in 1946. He wishes obtain Tonkin either by negotiation (Valluy admitted "among military men" that Ho Chi Minh finds across negotiating table receptive French ears) or by military action. To prepare for such action, he is drawing out negotiations to gain time for his battle corps to be in position and ready, if action is called for.

7. In course of negotiating toward a ceasefire (which is demanded by French public opinion) concept of partition appears, as Ho Chi Minh wants occupy all Tonkin. If conditions are too hard and talks are broken off he will strive to obtain Tonkin by force. In such a military action his chances of success are good.

8. It has been said at this Conference that if Tonkin is lost we will fight in south. However French will not fight nor will Vietnam. To man line in south, conferees will have to provide own men. Moreover it will be an artificial line for defense of which Laos, Cambodia, and Thailand can do nothing.

9. Decisive point in military conference is this: if other conferees do not underwrite today's battle for Tonkin, tomorrow they will fight without French in Saigon and Bangkok. Valluy said he could affirm that if Tonkin were lost, no Vietnamese would fight against other Vietnamese, and sooner or later (probably sooner) whole of Vietnam will become Communist.

10. Valluy said he did not mean to dramatize but only to be realistic among soldiers. Truth cannot be disguised. Each of allies has share of responsibility and if battle for Tonkin is lost, allies will have to fight alone on actual main line of resistance much farther away.

Admiral Carney remarked that Gen Valluy's appraisal was of interest and important to all conferees and suggested it might be put in writing and appended to intelligence survey as representing unilateral views of one representative. End Defense Dept summary.

Foregoing for your own info only. Valluy was speaking in confidence and as an individual. Your comments requested.

DULLES

---

396.1 GE/6-454 : Telegram

The Secretary of State to the United States Delegation<sup>1</sup>

SECRET

WASHINGTON, June 7, 1954—7:34 p. m.

Tosec 368. Secretary believes it is of overriding importance to push on with action on Thailand appeal, and to avoid getting bogged down in argumentation about geographical scope of sub-commission activities. Nevertheless, it seems clear UK and French will not agree to move along in SC until we have reached understanding on this question. Secto 366<sup>2</sup> and Secto 371<sup>3</sup> indicate language included Tosec 229<sup>4</sup> and in Thai speech to SC June 3 should meet Eden's desire that resolution not specifically extend scope of POC beyond Thailand, while allowing actual observation to be extended later without further SC or GA action. However, French delegation in NY has firmly contended sub-commission must be restricted to Thailand alone while British were most concerned that there be no immediate request by Laos and Cambodia for observation.

Since we now desire quick action, suggest you meet with Eden, Prince Wan and Bidault to work out agreement which will permit delegations in NY to press matter in SC. Hope we could get their agreement next meeting of SC should be held preferably Friday and certainly not later than Monday or Tuesday, June 14 or 15. Possibly they would agree on text contained Tosec 229. If not, we would be interested to know what constructive suggestion they have. Soon as agreement on resolution reached we would want to have it introduced in SC, although we would hope next meeting could be scheduled even if text of resolution not yet firm. In this event next meeting would be limited to speech-making.

Foregoing discussed with Thai Ambassador here today. He most eager avoid delay in SC and feels strongly we should not give up our bargaining position by yielding on scope of UN observation at least at this time. He is notifying Prince Wan you may discuss matter with him.

DULLES

---

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by Popper of UNA/UNP. Repeated to USUN as telegram 626, to London as telegram 6632, to Paris as telegram 4454, and to Bangkok as telegram 2438.

<sup>2</sup> Dated June 3, not printed, but see footnote 2 to telegram Secto 371, p. 1030.

<sup>3</sup> Dated June 4, p. 1030.

<sup>4</sup> Dated May 21, p. 876.

396.1 GE/6-754

Memorandum of Conversation, by the Special Adviser to the United States Delegation (Page)<sup>1</sup>

TOP SECRET

GENEVA, June 7, 1954.

Participants: Mr. Molotov, Mr. Kuznetsov, Mr. Troyanovsky, General Smith, Assistant Secretary Robertson, and Mr. Page.

After an exchange of amenities, General Smith inquired whether it might not be useful to explore possible compromise solutions to the question regarding the composition of the Indochinese Supervisory Commission. He stated categorically and in no uncertain terms that his government could not accept the Soviet proposal that the Commission be composed of India, Pakistan, Czechoslovakia and Poland. Our experience with the NNSC in Korea proved that such a composition was absolutely unworkable.

He did not wish to get into an argument over "neutrals" as compared with "impartials"—he was primarily interested in finding nations to serve on the Commission which would make it operate efficiently and which would not bog down its activities. He had suggested that a group of impartial nations in association with India and Pakistan could be formed. Such a solution was not so favorable to the West as one might think, as it is clear that India, one of the few Asian powers which could provide supervisory military personnel, is not on our side but, in international matters, seemed more often more on the Soviet side.

The Colombo powers were rather impartial nations with direct interest in Southeast Asian affairs. Another possibility might be to let the Vietminh and Vietnam each choose a member for the Commission and that three European members, neutral and impartial such as Norway, for example, be asked to serve on the Commission.

Mr. Molotov replied that although the Czech and Polish membership could be re-examined, he could not agree to any membership not on a 50-50 basis, that is 50% Communist and 50% non-Communist. Furthermore, at least two of the members of the Commission must have diplomatic relations with the Vietminh. He was absolutely adamant on this question. At one point he even sarcastically suggested that NATO be given armistice supervisory powers in Indochina. He maintained that one must take into consideration the will of the Vietnam people, at least 50% of whom support Ho Chi Minh, that the French were too late in giving limited independence to Indochina and that this should be taken into account. He then strongly attacked Bao Dai "now vacationing in Cannes" whom he said was supported by the United States. General Smith said that  $\frac{1}{3}$  of the Vietnamese people supported Bao Dai,  $\frac{1}{3}$  supported Ho Chi Minh and " $\frac{2}{3}$ " were on the fence. Molotov replied that even if this didn't add up correctly it did not correspond to Soviet estimates. In any event he could not recede from the Soviet position that the composition of the Commission be on the 50-50 basis.

---

<sup>1</sup> Transmitted to the Department of State in telegram Dulte 160, June 9. (751G.00/6-954)

At about this time, Kuznetsov interjected that he had read reports that President Eisenhower had said that the US might intervene in Indochina with naval, air and marine forces. General Smith replied that such action was the last thing the US Government desired to take. Also, in designating areas for troop assembly, a hundred square miles of jungle was not worth making a crisis over that might involve serious results. The Vietminh were entitled to just consideration, but if their appetites were too great and if they over-reached themselves a crisis could ensue which, he inferred, might well lead to US armed intervention. It was the duty of the US and the USSR to reduce friction in the area, not to increase it, and that was why he was now seeking a compromise solution of the question of the composition of the Supervisory Commission which was of the utmost importance. Unless a reasonable solution of this question were found there were grave risks inherent in the situation in Southeast Asia and Mr. Molotov realized the consequences of this.

Mr. Molotov seemed completely unimpressed. He merely remarked that perhaps the Vietminh deserve more than we were willing to give them, that perhaps they were entitled to more than 50% of the spoils of war—even up to 75%. (General Smith strongly contested this claim.) In any event, he could not yield on the principle that the Commission be half Communist and half non-Communist.

Throughout the entire conversation Mr. Molotov was relaxed, yet absolutely unmovable, courteous, friendly, in excellent humor. (It was my [Page]<sup>2</sup> opinion that he was even more relaxed than during the Berlin Conference.)

General Smith terminated the conversation by remarking that if agreement at Geneva could not be reached on such a matter as the composition of the Supervisory Commission, how could agreement be reached on anything. It would be questioned whether there was any real value in holding international conferences with the Soviet Bloc.

It was agreed that no comments whatsoever would be made to the press on this evening's meeting.

---

<sup>2</sup> Brackets in the source text.

JUNE 8, 1954

396.1 GE/6-854 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET

GENEVA, June 8, 1954—9 a. m.

Secto 397. Repeated information Paris 395, London 253, Saigon 149. In conversation yesterday with Heath and Page,<sup>1</sup> De Margerie stated he not sure Bidault would maintain strong stand that joint committees of belligerents must be subordinate to authority of proposed international commission for control of Indochina armistice. Taking Communist evasion and noncompliance for granted, it is De Margerie's view that too precise supervisory structure might make it impossible for France, after a cease-fire, to bring United States matériel or United States personnel into Indochina for training of troops. De Margerie also thought that Chou En-lai had made slight concession in agreeing that international commission should have authority over demilitarized zones between or along periphery or regroupment areas. Since there would probably be at least five demilitarized zones this would give international commission considerable authority.

Chauvel in conversation with Bonsal made following points:

1. French very much concerned and annoyed at lack of any progress either in military talks or with reference composition and set up of proposed international control commission. French aware that between June 15 and June 20 Giap will be ready to resume offensive. French however in dark as to enemy intentions.

2. No progress at all has been made in military conversations here. Viet Minh wish to discuss principles contained in their May 25 proposal. French are anxious to get to concrete discussion actual regrouping areas. French suggested Saturday that exchange of views as to present military positions of opposing sides might be helpful in furnishing base from which discussion of regrouping zones could take off. French were planning make information on their position available to Viet Minh representatives yesterday.

3. Bidault has talked to Chou En-lai and Chauvel has seen Wang Ping-nan, Secretary General of Chinese Communist delegation, three times on matter of composition of international control commission. CPR position is firmly to effect control commission must have two members having relations with Viet Minh. India, in spite of India's current dispute with France over France's Indian possessions and in spite of India's unsympathetic attitude toward France's North African problems, is considered by CPR to be one of our side's neutrals. Bidault saw Chou En-lai yesterday evening and something may have developed further.

4. Bidault-Molotov talk yesterday morning was absolutely negative although Molotov was amiable like a "smiling log" in Chauvel's phrase.

---

<sup>1</sup> See memorandum of conversation, p. 1049.

Molotov insisted on earlier Soviet position regarding composition of control commission. He suggested possible delays in military conversations arose from fact Viet Minh delegation incomplete. French have impression Molotov's attitude since his return from Moscow June 1st has hardened. They noted that since his return he has had no direct contact with Eden. (Fuller account of conversation follows.<sup>2</sup>)

5. Krishna Menon saw Bidault for one and one-half hours yesterday. He too, insisted generally on Soviet view regarding composition of control commission, i.e., inclusion of country or countries having diplomatic relations with Viet Minh.

6. Bidault plans to make speech generally reiterating French proposals and argument as set forth during restricted sessions. He plans leave Geneva after plenary tomorrow in order to take part in Assembly debate. He is pleased that he will have opportunity of speaking plenary here before commenting before Assembly on progress of conference.

SMITH

<sup>2</sup> See telegram Secto 399, June 8, p. 1065.

Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 251 : Telegram

The Secretary of State to the United States Delegation<sup>1</sup>

SECRET

WASHINGTON, June 8, 1954—noon.

Tosec 371. Following is Canberra's 290, June 6, 10 pm.

"Limit Distribution. Suggest Department pass Geneva, London, Paris. Casey plans leave Sydney Monday night June 7 via Singapore, Bangkok thence New Delhi arriving Pan American 1:15 am June 10 thence Karachi, Geneva, later London, Washington.

Prime Minister at American Embassy Sunday June 6 said he had just received cable from Spender clarifying Secretary's views respecting possible de facto partition. Cabinet discussions Friday fourth covered:

(1) Australia does not underestimate seriousness events. Not dragging feet. Realizes importance making constructive suggestions.

(2) Feels US has not defined precisely enough (a) political or (b) military objectives of intervention. Believes staff talks will supply better basis for appraisal. Asks whether we contemplate (a) intervening and hold Viet Minh from further advance which would involve long garrison task or (b) complete defeat Viet Minh which would require massive campaign land forces, (c) bombing Chinese bases and what Cabinet believes would be general war with China.

Australia reports indicate Viet Minh and Vietnamese dislike French and possibly any vote would go to Ho Chi Minh not French. Would be fatal for US merely to support French Power.

<sup>1</sup> Repeated to London as telegram 6635 and to Paris as telegram 4455.

(3) Since immediate intervention at this stage could not be UN it presents two acute problems for Australia: (a) would be committing Australia to military operations outside UN, (b) also outside British Commonwealth, because Cabinet believes neither UK nor Canada nor South Africa nor any other member British Commonwealth disposed participate in intervention except Australia and New Zealand.

(4) Australia wants to aim at (a) putting block in way of Communist aggression in SEA and (b) reconciliation of UK and American policy, avoiding departure from unity.

Casey gathered impression UK, though thinking 'French have gone too far to be rescued', might have different view regarding defense of Thailand.

Therefore in effort to get UK and US views together, following should be considered: (a) Laos and Cambodia are different races from Vietnam. Viet Minh have no rights in Laos and Cambodia. Southern part of Vietnam contains export rice bowl and its protection of tremendous significance to British position in Malaya and to Japan as rice importer. Minds should be directed to having group of nations agree to give guarantee to territorial integrity Laos, Cambodia and Southern section of Vietnam for two reasons:

(a). Strategic importance in struggle against Communism.

(b). Guarantee of territorial integrity would not interfere with local self-government and might attract cooperation of India and Burma.

While disagreeing with Nehru, Prime Minister said no doubt of Nehru's importance in Asia. Nehru would violently challenge military intervention in Hanoi area as military colonialism and invasion. With Nehru's influence in Burma and Indonesia we might find we had hostile forces all round us, quite unlike situation in Korea.

Cabinet thinks Nehru should be asked to participate in territorial guarantee. Prime Minister personally pessimistic but says Casey does not despair of achieving that.

'Summing up' Prime Minister said:

(1). Australia would regard military intervention in Hanoi area now as precipitate and likely to involve very large forces and over-all war with China with question also of Russian repercussions. Hence, if Australia understands 'American proposal' they think it requires more frank exchange before Australia would think the proposal right.

(2). On other hand Australia thinks UK view may be much too restricted and if French left to themselves and completely evacuate Vietnam with result that Communists over-run down to southern extremities, this would expose Malaya to new form of attack. Cabinet also thinks UK underestimates significance of loss of export rice bowl area.

(3). Australia therefore will say to Nehru and Eden: 'While should not risk hasty intervention and rapid evacuation, we must face up to threat. A line must be drawn and guaranteed. Perhaps

French, with material assistance from US can hold their own position in Hanoi area.'

Prime Minister said if UK would join in any sort of territorial guarantee there would be no problem for Australia, but if it became question of entering war in which UK would be neutral, that, 'would of course involve the end of the British Commonwealth' and would be very difficult step, particularly for his administration which has consistently emphasized Commonwealth unity. He discounted necessity of such choice and said Casey 'would have a good go at Nehru and Eden'.

Prime Minister said several Cabinet members had raised question of his going personally to Geneva and that Prime Minister had replied that he could not do that immediately without its appearing as complete disavowal of Casey who had done good job, but he told Cabinet members he will hold himself in readiness in case situation develops so that he could be of assistance in London, Washington or elsewhere. He contemplates leaving for New Zealand tomorrow for vacation two weeks if events permit that long.

Will cable Bangkok, New Delhi and Karachi Casey's ETA those cities.

Signed Peaslee".

DULLES

751G.00/6-854 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of Defense

SECRET

GENEVA, June 8, 1954—12:50 p. m.

Army Message Gento 52. From Defense representative for Hensel from Sullivan, information USARMAs Paris, London and Saigon; repeated action Department State. Following is summary French-Vietnam military talks with Viet Minh 7 June reported to Defense representative by member French delegation:

1. French representative proposed both sides reach agreement on areas in which each has military superiority as basis for proceeding to discuss regrouping of forces. To this end suggested each side specify areas in which it claims superiority, and that disputed areas be subject to negotiation. As initial gesture, French then described area of delta (apparently that conforming to present dispositions) as one over which it claims military superiority of French Union forces. Invited Viet Minh similarly to specify areas of its own.

2. Viet Minh representative refused to accept area delimited by French representative stating Viet Minh held many localities within delta, and alleging in addition that sympathies population are with Viet Minh. French representative replied military representatives not concerned with sympathies population, only facts of military situation. Said Viet Minh should present areas it claimed in specific terms so talks could move forward.

3. Viet Minh representative agreed with French suggestion but did not say when he would make proposal re areas claimed by Viet Minh.

4. Comment: French delegation contact says military representative sees no use talking daily if Viet Minh refuse to state specific areas they claim. Impression is that French military representative would prefer, under such conditions, to meet only when Viet Minh have something concrete to offer.

---

396.1 GE/6-854 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET      PRIORITY

GENEVA, June 8, 1954—1 p. m.

Secto 398. Repeated information London 254, Paris 397, Bangkok 18, Usun 12. Reference Tosec 368.<sup>1</sup> Eden is not returning until just prior to Indochina plenary this afternoon, and Bidault is leaving for Paris immediately following the plenary. I believe I can obtain Bidault's agreement instruct Hoppenot to agree to language which will not specifically restrict POC operations to Thailand, and will make attempt do so before Bidault's departure today. However, in view of Eden's and Bidault's schedules, there will be no opportunity work out and agree on specific language prior to Friday.<sup>2</sup>

As I have previously said, I see grave dangers in negotiating this subject here and had hoped that further negotiations and drafting could be centered in New York and Washington.

SMITH

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated June 7, p. 1058.

<sup>2</sup> June 11.

---

396.1 GE/6-854 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET      PRIORITY

GENEVA, June 8, 1954—2 p. m.

Secto 399. Repeated information Moscow 109, Paris 398, London 255. Reference numbered paragraph 4 Secto 397 (repeated London 253, Paris 395, Saigon 149).<sup>1</sup> Following is more complete account Bidault's conversation with Molotov on Monday, June 7, made available to us by Bidault.

Bidault met with Molotov for about an hour. Discussion centered on composition and role of international control authority for Indochina settlement. Molotov was adamant on Soviet position that control commission must represent the two sides of the conflict and that members must have diplomatic relations with one or the other party. He insisted that India and Pakistan be considered as on the French side despite their problems with France which he described as secondary. If other Asiatic states were preferred that was acceptable but a unilateral proposal was not. He could not agree to an arrangement in which India had the decisive vote.

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated June 8, p. 1061.

Molotov contended that Bidault wished to contribute too many functions to the international control commission which in his view should have as its primary role the improvement of relations between the two parties.

To Bidault's complaints re the lack of progress military conversations Molotov replied with charge that French had made no concrete proposals. His parting shot was that there had been very little discussion so far of political questions and that these must be kept in mind as much as military ones.

In short the meeting was completely unproductive. We are informed Bidault feels Molotov taking tougher line since his return from Moscow.

SMITH

---

396.1 GE/6-854 : Telegram

The Ambassador in the United Kingdom (Aldrich) to the Department of State

SECRET

LONDON, June 8, 1954—3 p. m.

5588. Repeated information Geneva 132 for Under Secretary. Limit distribution. At meeting in Kirkpatrick's office today to which I brought Merchant and Butterworth and at which Sir Frank Roberts was present the following of immediate interest transpired.

Kirkpatrick indicated that Eden had reported to cabinet over weekend that due to vacillating tactics of the French the Communists had been so encouraged that he was now convinced that an agreement at Geneva was now most unlikely. Eden therefore believes attempt should be made to bring conference to close within the next week or 10 days but in a manner which will consolidate and increase the progress already made in convincing the Asiatic members of the Commonwealth in particular and the rest of the world in general that Communist intransigency was responsible for the failure at Geneva. In this connection Kirkpatrick said that Eden felt that considerable progress had been made with respect to Burmese opinions and intentions during the past few weeks and that Eden was not unhopeful of an attitude of semi-benevolent neutrality on the part of India with participation by Burma in a Southeast Asian arrangement. Kirkpatrick also went on to say that in prevailing circumstances Eden was now disposed to move more rapidly in formation of collective defense for Southeast Asia. The inference was that he would be prepared actively to start on this immediately following failure of conference.

ALDRICH

---

Editorial Note

At his news conference on June 8, Secretary of State Dulles, in reply to a question of his assessment of the Geneva Conference talks concerning Indochina to date, said :

“The primary responsibility in those negotiations is being carried, of course, by the French delegation in association with the delegations of the three Associated States of Indochina, Viet-Nam, Laos, and Cambodia.

“The United States is playing primarily the role of a friend which gives advice when it is asked for, and of course we have a very deep hope that the result will be one which will maintain the genuine independence of the entire area and bring about a cessation of the fighting.

“Whether that result is obtainable or not is of course problematic. It seems that the Communist forces in Indochina are intensifying their activities. They have done so ever since the proposal for peace in Indochina, which was taken at the Berlin Conference. There has been, I think, a deliberate dragging out of the negotiations at Geneva while the Communist military effort has been stepped up in Indochina itself. The fact that under these circumstances the Communists are dragging their feet on peace and intensifying their efforts for war is a commentary upon the general attitude of the Communists and gives a lie, I think, to their greatly professed love for peace.”

Asked what, in his view, was the best way to meet a situation where the Communists were intensifying war and dragging their feet on peace, the Secretary said :

“The United States has made a number of suggestions which all fit into a common and consistent pattern.

“The first suggestion of that order was, as I have recalled to you, the proposal that the President made over a year ago in his April 16 address when he proposed that there should be united action in relation to Indochina. That suggestion was not adopted, although, as I mentioned here, I think, in my last press conference, it was followed up in private negotiations by the United States Government.

“I renewed the same suggestion in my March 29, 1954, speech, and the position of the United States with respect to that matter still stands, subject, of course, to the possibility that a time may come when that particular suggestion is no longer a practical one. But it has been a practical one ever since President Eisenhower first made it, and I believe it is still a practical one.”

Asked whether the alternative, should the plan for united action not become practical, might imply the United States dealing with this situation singlehandedly or unilaterally, Dulles replied:

"No. The United States has no intention of dealing with the Indochina situation unilaterally, certainly not unless the whole nature of the aggression should change. . . . if there should be a resumption by Communist China of open armed aggression in that area or in any other area of the Far East that might create a new situation."

Asked how long he felt the United States and other nations should continue to sit at Geneva in a sincere effort to negotiate while the Communists dragged their feet at Geneva and intensified the war in Indochina, Secretary Dulles said:

"As I pointed out earlier, the primary responsibility in that respect has to be assumed by the countries that are carrying the principal burden of the fighting in the area, which on our side are France and Viet-Nam. They are recognized by us as having a primacy in this matter. It would be their decision in this respect which would be controlling. I would not want to attempt to establish what I thought should be their policy in this matter."

The Secretary of State was asked what the objectives of united action would be—would it mean intervention, the holding of a special line in Indochina, or some other objective? The Secretary replied:

"It would obviously have an objective. The objective would be to retain in friendly hands as much as possible of the Southeast Asian peninsular and island area. Now the practicability varies from time to time. What was practical a year ago is less practical today. The situation has, I am afraid, been deteriorating."

The Secretary was asked what progress had been made toward general acceptance of the united action idea. He replied:

"I would say that progress has been made only in this sense, that two of the conditions precedent have been advanced. Namely, considerable further progress, I think, has been made in clarifying the prospective status of the states of Viet-Nam, Laos, and Cambodia as regards their complete independence. And, also, the fact that on the application of Thailand the Security Council voted 10 to 1 to put that on its agenda, and to begin to get into the matter. That, again, is a movement on one of the fronts which we have felt to be indispensable in relation to united action. In those two respects some progress has been made."

The Secretary was asked about the progress of the Washington military staff talks and about parallel talks with Asian countries. He replied:

"We have had a series of talks the first of which I think took place here in Washington with the representatives of the Government of Thailand with reference to their military position and steps which might be taken to strengthen it. Then Secretary Wilson, when he was in Manila a few days ago, had a series of talks, himself and his military advisers, with the representatives of the Philippine General Staff.

"The talks that are going on here in Washington with the United Kingdom, France, Australia, and New Zealand are the same type of talks designed to gather together military information, to assess military possibilities so that if and when it is necessary to take political decisions there will be available at hand the military elements of the problem. I expect a further visit to this country of the Philippine Chief of Staff and possibly a similar visit from Thailand. We are trying to keep in as close touch as we can with the military position, as I say, because that has to be taken into account in reaching political decisions."

Asked about reports that the Administration might ask Congress to adopt some sort of resolution on the Indochina situation, Secretary Dulles replied:

"There is no present plan for going to Congress for any authority in this matter. As is well known, the general scheme which the United States has had for this area and which I have already described here, would, if it were implemented, probably require congressional action. But there has so far not been a sufficiently general acceptance of the program to make it, as a matter of practical politics, a question of going to Congress."

For the Secretary's complete remarks on the Korean and Indochina phases of the Geneva Conference, see the Department of State Bulletin, June 21, 1954, pages 947-949.

---

396.1 GE/6-854: Telegram

*Fifth Plenary Session on Indochina, Geneva, June 8, 1954, 3:03 p. m.:
The United States Delegation to the Department of State*<sup>1</sup>

CONFIDENTIAL      PRIORITY      GENEVA, June 8, 1954—midnight.

Secto 405. Repeated information Paris 404, London 260, Tokyo 118, Moscow 111, Phnom Penh, Vientiane. Department pass Defense, Tokyo pass CINCFE. Fifth Indochina plenary session Tuesday June 8 with Eden presiding opened with long well-balanced speech by Bidault reviewing progress so far in effort define points of agreement and problems still at issue. Bidault pointed out as result adoption French proposal May 17<sup>2</sup> give priority military aspects cease-fire, progress of conference was "not negligible". But desire French delegation take up cases Laos and Cambodia first, because simpler, frustrated by Communist insistence "peace indivisible" and in order facilitate progress conference French had agreed to discuss Vietnam first. Bidault emphasized, however, that although some progress made discussions Vietnam, cases of Laos and Cambodia still pending.

---

<sup>1</sup> A set of minutes of this meeting (US Verb Min/5) is in Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 277. The minutes indicate that the meeting convened at 3:03 p. m. and adjourned at 7:50 p. m. The minutes are also printed in Conférence de Genève, pp. 205-236. The speeches of Bidault, Molotov, and Eden, and the proposal made by the Cambodian Delegation are printed in Cmd. 9186, pp. 137-153. The speeches of Eden, Bidault, Tep Phan, Pham Van Dong, and Molotov, Indochina Documents IC/17, IC/18, IC/20, IC/21, and IC/22, respectively, and the Cambodian proposal, IC/19, of June 8-9, are in Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 279A.

Bidault then took up six points which he said would bring out those matters on which there was agreement and those on which divergent views had been expressed :

1. Principle of cessation of hostilities. All delegates agreed this principle which French delegate had proposed May 8. However, Communists wanted simultaneous cease-fire throughout Indochina and some delegates had expressed reservation on this.

2. Regroupment of regular units. After various proposals had been made Eden text was adopted on May 29.<sup>3</sup> French had observed at that time that regrouping applied only to Vietnam and that principle of unity of Vietnam could not be questioned. All delegates had agreed principle unity of Vietnam. Concrete results Eden proposal manifested in meeting at Geneva on June 2 of representatives High Commands both sides<sup>4</sup> and preparations going forward for on-the-spot meetings in Indochina. French delegate hoped these military discussions could proceed rapidly so that conference could examine concrete recommendations on map.

3. Irregular forces. Pointing out one-third Viet Minh forces in this category, Bidault stressed conference could not leave large part forces one party free; conference should study this problem when talks on zones had progressed sufficiently. Bidault felt Dong statement May 25<sup>5</sup> did not rule out possibility agreement this point.

4. Entry of troops and material into Vietnam after cessation of hostilities. Clauses in armistice agreement relating this subject should apply equally to both parties. Should also cover local war production. Without strict control of Vietnam's land and sea frontiers accord on supervision would be illusory and fraudulent. Agreement on this principle seems possible.

5. Prisoners of war and civilian internees. There is unanimous agreement on immediate liberation of POWs and civilian internees following cessation of hostilities.

6. Controls and guarantee. Bidault stressed following aspects this problem :

(a) Responsibilities International Neutral Control Commission should extend to all clauses of armistice.

<sup>2</sup> See telegrams Secto 240 and 241, May 17, pp. 831 and 833, respectively.

<sup>3</sup> See telegram Secto 349, May 29, p. 970.

<sup>4</sup> Reference to meeting between French and Vietnamese military representatives at Geneva.

<sup>5</sup> See telegram Secto 302, May 26, p. 920.

(b) Joint Commissions of two sides must be subordinated to International Commission; questions on which Joint Commissions cannot agree should be submitted to International Commission for decision by majority vote. Communist delegates insistence that essential responsibility for certain aspects of armistice be confined to Joint Commissions, which would not be subordinated to International Commission, represents serious divergence in views which must be surmounted.

(c) Composition of International Commission should be determined by criteria of objectivity, impartiality and effectiveness, any countries meeting these criteria satisfactory to French. An International Commission composed four neutrals chosen reflect equally views two sides would be impotent. Such content would guarantee no one.

(d) There must be authority to which International Commission reports. This organ would in turn look to guarantors of armistice, namely members Geneva conference. Bidault emphasized guarantee must not be paralyzed by any veto.

Bidault summed up "appreciable results" of conference as follows: (1) method of work chosen; (2) principle total cessation hostilities accepted, simultaneously throughout Indochina if possible; (3) principle regroupment zones Vietnam adopted and referred competent persons for study; (4) principle of setting up International Control Commission accepted.

Bidault cautioned however, that serious differences existed on essential points which cannot be exceeded without infringing essential principles. He specified three subjects which had not yet been examined or on which conclusions not yet reached: (1) Laos and Cambodia; (2) regroupment zones; and (3) methods of control.

Next speaker was Pham Van Dong who said he would like to compare various proposals made during conference. Claiming Vietnam proposals realistic, fair, rational, he attacked proposals other delegates as unilateral, incomplete, and negative. Describing Bidault's proposals as completely military, Dong stressed interdependence political and military problems, said even Bidault military proposals failed reflect real situation Indochina and thus not likely lead to agreement. Dong then attacked sarcastically proposals made by "Bao Dai delegate", singling out particularly proposals on incorporation Viet Minh Forces into Vietnamese Army and elections under UN supervision for government under aegis Bao Dai. He also attacked theses that there should be no control on introduction of arms into Cambodia and Laos.

Saying that "first result" of conference was acceptance resolution pertaining to contacts by representatives of High Commands in Geneva and Indochina, Dong accused French of offering nothing in military meetings which could lead to agreement and of stalling start of on-the-spot talks in Indochina. Dong ridiculed recent initialling of Vietnam independence treaty in Paris, saying it was simply fulfilling condition laid down by US for intervention in Indochina.

Dong then made several proposals, suggested conference discuss in "realistic fashion" proposals tabled by Chou En-lai. Invited French delegate expedite on-the-spot contacts of military representatives in Indochina. Invited conference to embark immediately on discussion of political questions such as recognition of Vietnam, general elections, and relations Indochina with France, including association of Vietnam with French Union.

Third speaker was Tep Phan, Cambodian delegate, who again drew attention to fact that Cambodia was victim of Viet Minh aggression and reiterated Cambodian demand for complete evacuation Viet Minh Forces. He then made four-point proposal. (See Secto 367.<sup>6</sup>)

Turning to task of International Control Commission, Tep Phan said its tasks different in Cambodia than Vietnam and outlined its control functions in Cambodia as follows: (1) evacuation of Viet Minh regular and irregular forces; (2) disarming of all armed elements not in the army or police forces; (3) liberation and exchange of POW's and civilian internees; (4) external activities endangering peace and security of Cambodia.

Phan emphasized his government could not accept any control over the entry of troops and war material into Cambodia, pointing out that unlike Vietnam there would be no armistice in Cambodia since all Viet Minh troops would be withdrawn. He assured Communist delegates Cambodian Army being trained for defense frontiers only and said his government prepared under certain conditions limit size of army in order not to pose threat to neighboring countries.

Cambodian delegate then discussed briefly questions composition International Control Commission, pointing out Korean experience demonstrated uselessness of Commission with composition suggested by Soviet delegate. He referred again to Cambodian proposal on composition of June 4<sup>7</sup> and suggested if no agreement could be reached on Commission of neutral countries control of armistice should be entrusted to UN.

Following recess, Molotov made long speech which included attacks on US, France and Associated States. Beginning with comments on insincerity some participant this conference which supposed to be concerned with restoration peace in Indochina, he then claimed US scheming on Southeast Asia military pact with colonial powers; pointed to military talks in Washington; accused US of ordering Thailand UN appeal in order prepare for UN intervention which really US.

<sup>6</sup> Dated June 3, p. 1014.

<sup>7</sup> See telegram Secto 379, June 4, p. 1031.

Molotov then stated that Indochina cease-fire must be enduring and therefore necessary take up political problems. Although priority military question agreed at beginning conference, it was now time to sum up and begin on political matters. He noted result of discussion of various proposals was some movement toward reconciliation, such as agreement simultaneous cease-fire, in spite some reservation, regroupment regular forces, and meeting of military representatives.

Also establish agreement in principle to Viet Minh proposal non-introduction foreign troops and arms after cease-fire. No doubt raised necessity Joint Commissions or international supervision. Guarantee of settlement by conference powers suggested by France received favorably by Soviet delegate. In discussing guarantees, Molotov, did not mention "collective".

Molotov also marked areas disagreement such as function and composition International Supervisory Commission, and noted "crude attempts discredit NNSC in Korea". Maintained Communist position of more important role for joint committees which should be responsible for all on-the-spot measures to ensure the cessation of hostilities.

Leading up to further comment on political questions, he praised national liberation movements in three states. Acknowledged differences in three such as three quarters of Vietnam in hands of movement while in Laos one-half of country not under control of "official agencies of the government". Cambodia "less" but developing. Ridiculed claims of Associated States to independence, pointing out no Asian power believes this true; that is why they have not recognized. Eight years of attempts to re-establish colonial regime has resulted in 100,000 French killed, wounded and cost of 2,000 billion francs and heavy defeats in spite US aid. War was not in national interest of France, but if French Government wished to end it there was now possibility peace with honor on both sides.

Molotov disliked dwelling on military matters and said restoration peace required settlement two basic political questions: (1) relationships between France and Indochina states, and (2) internal political matters. Since Viet Minh had made generous offer, including readiness to examine French Union membership, and French had claimed willingness to recognize independence of three states, should not be too difficult to reach agreement.

Then returned to attack Associated States Government quoting from US House Committee reports to prove Associated States lack independence. Commented Dien-Bien-Phu defended by foreigners who had nothing to do with France or Vietnam. Noted futile attempts to prove foreign elements with Viet Minh. Further proof lack of popular support for Bao Dai was failure to mobilization.

He devoted considerable comment to subject national elections in Vietnam and asked for French position. Ridiculed performance of Vietnamese in municipal elections and quoted western sources to effect Viet Minh would win if national elections held. Elections must be held in Vietnam under conditions freedom of activity for patriotic parties, groups and organs. However, elections should be preceded by withdrawal foreign troops, which requires military settlement at Geneva. He then enumerated three main political problems as: (1) establish Franco-Indochina relations on basis equality and freedom; (2) free elections in all three states for democratic government; (3) on-the-spot contacts in Indochina for contribution to political as well as military settlement.

Molotov concluded with repetition of call for free elections after foreign troops withdrawal, direct contact in Indochina, and then proposed parallel consideration by conference of political and military matters by means alternate meetings.

Eden then made strongest and most forceful statement thus far made by UK in conference (Secto 404) <sup>8</sup> during which he suggested five Colombo powers for Supervisory Commission.

Bidault returned with vigorous but dignified reproach to tone and line of Communist speeches this session. Disappointed by insistence on political question, since cessation hostilities was obviously beginning of any solutions. He referred to speech on Korea by Soviet delegate in Security Council Malik in June 1951 and quoted him as follows:

“The Soviet peoples believe that the first measure should be to introduce discussions between belligerents for the purpose of bringing about a cease-fire and an armistice, involving the withdrawal of the forces behind an agreed line”.

Said Viet Minh should not worry over lack of contacts Indochina since instructions had been given to French authorities to carry this out. Hoped duality these contacts Indochina and Geneva would not cause delays. Said that answer to Dong's remark that some people wanted international war was that simplest means preventing this was to end war. Made special reference to Molotov's attacks and noted lack of urbanity usually found in this eminent and experienced diplomat, and regretted that one of conference chairmen had resorted to partisan attack.

Dinh commented that truce on insults should be first order of business. Eden then called on US delegate.

---

<sup>8</sup> Dated June 8, p. 1077.

Under Secretary offered forgo his statement in view late hour if other remaining inscribed delegates willing do same. Molotov said he would like speak one minute. Under Secretary refused yield to Molotov and then made statement Secto 403.<sup>9</sup>

Molotov, obviously reacting to effective comments by Bidault, denied his speech insulting and said he was only recalling "certain bitter harsh facts".

Bidault replied facts must be respected but question is how facts are narrated.

Eden closed meeting by suggesting that remaining two inscribed speakers could speak at tomorrow's plenary. Meeting adjourned at 7:50.

Comment: Bidault last statement superb job of offsetting Molotov's obvious appeal to French opinion and turning tables on Communists by placing onus on them for failing achieve cease-fire because of intransigence and introduction extraneous issues as opposed reasonableness and conciliatory approach of French.

SMITH

---

<sup>9</sup> Infra.

---

396.1 GE/6-854 : Telegram

*Fifth Plenary Session on Indochina, Geneva, June 8, 3:03 p. m.:
The United States Delegation to the Department of State*

GENEVA, June 8, 1954.

Secto 403. Repeated information Paris 402, London 258, Saigon 151, Tokyo 116, Moscow, Vientiane, Phnom Penh unnumbered. Tokyo pass CINCFE. Department pass Defense. Following is text Undersecretary's statement at fifth Indochina plenary Tuesday, June 8: "At our previous meetings the United States delegation has stated from time to time its firm position with regard to the special nature of the problem existing in Laos and Cambodia. This position is as described this afternoon by M. Bidault as well as Mr. Eden and I will not enlarge on the subject except to say that the US associates itself with France and that the US delegation continues to maintain that peace would automatically be restored to Laos and Cambodia if the invading Viet Minh forces would withdraw.

Our object is to secure a real and lasting peace in Indochina. To do this we must be sure that there are adequate safeguards for any settlement which this conference may reach. My delegation has repeatedly, in our restricted session, stated the view that one essential element for safeguarding a settlement is the creation of an International Supervisory Commission whose composition and terms of reference would permit it to function effectively.

The composition of an International Supervisory Commission is a question of such importance that I have suggested that it be taken up in private conversations among the members of this conference. I still believe that we might move forward more rapidly if this point could be settled in private discussions. I think it will be helpful, however, again to make clear the principle upon which I feel certain we must proceed in arriving at the membership of an effective International Commission.

In one word that principle is impartiality. An impartial commission, as Mr. Eden pointed out, if endowed with adequate authority, can safeguard a settlement. A partial, or divided commission, will obstruct or prevent achievement of the real and lasting peace which must be our common objective. We must therefore search for impartial membership on a Supervisory Commission.

Mr. Molotov has suggested a four country commission to consist of India, Pakistan, Poland and Czechoslovakia. Two of these states, Poland and Czechoslovakia, are the same two Communist countries that have exercised their power of veto to frustrate the effective operation of the Neutral Nations Supervisory Commission in Korea. Last Saturday, in our meeting on Korea, it was necessary for me to point out the unhappy experience which we have had [with?] this Korean commission. I described how the truly impartial members of this commission, Sweden and Switzerland, have been forced repeatedly to protest against the continued arbitrary refusals of the Communist countries to permit the carrying out of the obligations of the commission. My statements have been made a matter of public record in our Korean meeting. I will not repeat them here because the facts have been clearly demonstrated.

Mr. Molotov's proposal is that a Supervisory Commission should be established under arrangements exactly like those in Korea, where the Communist States, by exerting a veto over the activities of the commission have completely blocked effective performance of the obligations of the commission. This is obviously an unsatisfactory and unacceptable proposal. We must not repeat a mistake which has not only served to obstruct the carrying out of an international agreement, but has also placed two truly impartial nations in the intolerable situation of being innocent parties to such obstruction.

Mr. Molotov did propose, however, that India and Pakistan should be requested to serve as two of the members of a Supervisory Commission. As I have already said in our restricted sessions, I believe this is indeed a helpful proposal and one that merits serious considerations. It has seemed to me for a long time that India and Pakistan, in association with other actually impartial states, might provide a basis for a satisfactory and really effective International Supervisory Commission. It is for that reason that I welcome with satisfaction the proposal that the delegate of the United Kingdom has just made, and for that reason believe it should be given our very careful consideration.

SMITH

---

396.1 GE/6-854 : Telegram

*Fifth Plenary Session on Indochina, Geneva, June 8, 3:03 p. m. :
The United States Delegation to the Department of State*

GENEVA, June 8, 1954.

Secto 404. Repeated information Paris 403, Saigon 152, London 259, Moscow 110, Tokyo 117 Phnom Penh Vientiane un. Department pass Defense. Tokyo pass CINCFE. Following is text Eden statement fifth Indochina plenary Tuesday, June 8:

Gentlemen, next speaker to have his name down is your chairman who would ask your indulgence if he makes few observations at this point.

More than three weeks have gone by since we last discussed Indochina in plenary session and I think that public opinion everywhere will expect to hear what we have achieved during that time. My colleagues will no doubt agree we have made some progress, even if this has been slow but differences on main problems before us are still formidable and unless we can resolve them we shall have failed in our task.

An important step forward was our agreement on May 29. The representatives of the two military commands in Vietnam should discuss the terms of a cessation of hostilities in that country. These talks have now begun here in Geneva. It is to be hoped that these military exchanges will soon bear fruit in shape of agreed recommendations to conference but these talks concern only Vietnam. The conference has yet to come to grips with separate and distinct problems of Laos and Cambodia.

I think we can all agree that cessation of hostilities should be simultaneous throughout Indochina. It is arrangements, not timing, that need to be different in Laos and Cambodia. In Vietnam arrangements to be worked out must inevitably be complicated, in Laos and Cambodia we have to deal with formidable but entirely distinct problem of Viet Minh invasion. I cannot regard these aggressive acts, some of which have taken place since this conference was announced at Berlin, as acts of peace. Nor are they merely symptoms of internal troubles. Therefore, no one should be surprised that they cause deep concern far beyond confines of states concerned.

If foreign troops are withdrawn from those two countries, peoples of Laos and Cambodia can be left to work out their own destiny safeguarded by international supervision from interference from beyond their borders. In this connection I note that the representative of Cambodia has told us today that Cambodia has no intention of allowing military bases to be established on her territory which might threaten peace of Indochina and Cambodia is willing, under appropriate conditions, to limit her own forces to those needed for defense of her territory.

Now I come to another crucial issue, international supervision. We are all agreed this must form an essential part of arrangements arrived at for the restoration of peace in Indochina. This all-important problem, which is common to all three states of Indochina is now central issue before conference.

It has, I think, been accepted that in Vietnam there shall be joint committees of two belligerents in addition to international supervision. These joint committees could probably render some useful service, provided that it was clearly understood that their functions were mainly technical and clearly subordinate to authority of an international supervisory commission.

After eight years of bitter fighting, even with the best will in the world, we must expect there will be differences between two sides comprising the joint committees. It's therefore essential to provide for an international supervisory commission endowed with power to resolve these differences and to insure the proper execution of all provisions of the agreement for cessation of hostilities.

Here I should like to make a suggestion, which is, I submit, practical. Over a month ago Prime Ministers of Ceylon, Burma, India, Indonesia and Pakistan met at Colombo and discussed among other things problems of Indochina. Communiqué they issued after their discussion has, I think been of real value to our deliberations here. I should like to suggest that Asian powers represented at Colombo Conference are admirably qualified to assume responsibilities of supervising whatever arrangements are reached by this conference. These five countries meet essential requirements of impartiality. They have recognized neither Viet Minh nor Associated States. We are bound to agree that, as Asian countries, they have particular concern in restoration of peace in Indochina and possess first-hand knowledge of kind of problems confronting us there. Moreover, they are probably close enough to be able to provide and organize without undue difficulty the large staff of qualified observers which will be needed.

Finally, there could be no danger of a deadlock on an international supervisory commission consisting of a panel of these five powers acting by majority of vote. This danger would, however, clearly arise if supervisory commission were to consist of an even number of states—half Communist and half non-Communist—as has been suggested by Mr. Molotov.

When we have solved problems of the authority and composition of proposed international supervisory commission, it will be necessary to study in detail its functions and structure. We shall also have to examine more fully question of guarantee by members of this conference of arrangements reached. Any such guarantees must be so designed as to insure that no one power has a veto over action considered necessary to secure observance of our agreements.

To sum up, therefore, the following are immediate tasks: first, it is necessary for military representatives of the two commands to submit agreed recommendations to conference for its consideration. Meanwhile, we have two urgent tasks, first, to reach agreements on composition and powers of the special problems of Laos and Cambodia. Until we have done these things, conference cannot be held to have made any decisive contribution to reestablishment of peace in Indochina.

SMITH

---

Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 316

Memorandum by the Special Adviser to the United States Delegation (Sullivan) to the Head of the Delegation (Smith)

SECRET

GENEVA, June 8, 1954.

Subject: USARMA Saigon Estimate of Indochina Situation

1. In OARMA CM 295-54 (attached) <sup>1</sup> USARMA Saigon comments upon a Department of the Army estimate of the situation contending the following:

a. Disagrees with Department of the Army that "French will be able to hold Delta throughout rainy season and that no major VM assault is likely" stating his view continues VM will attack on or after 20 June and will dislodge French Union forces from most of the Delta.

---

<sup>1</sup> Not attached to source text.

b. States VM will attack for following reasons :

(1) No other logical reason rapid redeployment VM battle corps from Dien Bien Phu.

(2) VM riding victory wave will seek to capitalize on same.

(3) French Union forces in midst major reorganization under new inexperienced (in Indochina) CINC are at low point defensively, moralewise and organizationally but "will gather strength from this summer onward".

(4) VM has altered codes, an SOP before former attacks.

(5) Aid to VM negotiators at Geneva.

c. Believes Delta cannot be held for following :

(1) Hanoi vulnerable to encirclement and cannot be maintained thereafter.

(2) Hanoi airfield subject to arty interdiction after VM have penetrated 15 miles.

(3) Loss of Hanoi would lead to loss western Delta.

(4) VM can take Phu Ly (SW quadrant) area with troops already deployed there by sustained attack.

(5) Will use mass infiltration and strangulation technique rather than mass assault, which French failed to counter at Dien Bien Phu.

2. Comment: While above statements are largely correct, the following should also be taken into consideration.

a. While some French sources themselves have reiterated identical statements as above, it is considered that French have a higher combat capability than indicated above. French will have following advantages :

(1) Shortened lines creating internal lines for communications and maneuver and greater mobile reserves than heretofore.

(2) Superior firepower. VM will have no arty field day as afforded by concentrated target and superior observation at Dien Bien Phu.

(3) Ability to maneuver. VM have never taken a battalion-sized position until Dien Bien Phu and then probably because French freedom of movement was so restricted as to limit effectiveness of counterattacks.

Admittedly, much depends upon the French attitude psychologically in entering this battle. If led to believe their position is hopeless strategically, they will be less effective. If encouraged and supported by their own command and allies, French Union forces can hold a substantial portion of the Delta and inflict intolerable casualties on the Viet Minh.

C. A. SULLIVAN
Defense Representative

396.1 GE/6-854 : Telegram

The Secretary of State to the United States Delegation<sup>1</sup>SECRET
PRIORITY

WASHINGTON, June 8, 1954—7:54 p. m.

Tosec 378. Reference Secto 398<sup>2</sup> and Tosec 368.<sup>3</sup> Latter somewhat over-emphasized my views.

Appreciate heavy burden which would be laid on you if you had to negotiate specific language of draft resolution on UN observation for Thailand with Eden and Bidault, in addition your other activities. Therefore, suggest you limit your efforts to seeking agreement Eden and Bidault to principle of not absolutely restricting POC operations to Thailand and have them instruct their UN delegations accordingly. Precise language of resolution would then be worked out in detail in New York. If this goes beyond what you can conveniently undertake, let me know and then forget it.

We are still eager to obtain agreement on earliest resumption of SC proceedings.

DULLES

---

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by the Secretary of State and by Popper of UNA/UNP. Repeated to London as telegram 6658, to Paris as telegram 4468, to Bangkok as telegram 2452, and to USUN as telegram 630.

<sup>2</sup> Dated June 8, p. 1065.

<sup>3</sup> Dated June 7, p. 1058.

396.1 GE/6-654 : Telegram

The Secretary of State to the United States Delegation<sup>1</sup>TOP SECRET
PRIORITY

WASHINGTON, June 8, 1954—9:19 p. m.

Tedul 175. Re Dulte 156.<sup>2</sup> Numbered paragraph 1 reftel. We would be interested any specific ideas Bidault might propose with view simplifying request to other nations, so long they meet basic condition that US will not intervene alone. Until we have full agreement, at least in principle, with French on conditions US military participation there would be no actual negotiations with other interested nations. So far we have kept them generally informed concerning current discussions in Paris and have obtained their tentative views. We would seek firm views once French authoritatively tell us they want to internationalize the Indochina War. Meanwhile, UK views are well known and soundings indicate almost certainly New Zealand and probably Australia would not participate without UK. Our soundings indicate Thailand and Philippines would most likely come along.

---

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by Tyler and Fisher of EUR/WE. Repeated to Paris as telegram 4470.

<sup>2</sup> Dated June 6, p. 1039.

Numbered paragraph 3. We agree undesirable President should make formal pledge unilaterally and refer you paragraph 2 Deptel 4272, repeated Geneva Tosec 269,<sup>3</sup> which stressed joint character any such pledge. President would necessarily deal with independence question in any request to Congress for authorization use US forces for combat in Indochina.

Numbered paragraph 4. While we would agree substitution words "after re-establishment peace" for "after end of hostilities" we feel our phrasing for rest sentence definitely preferable to that proposed by Bidault. His text carries overtone France retaining right decide timing first and then getting Vietnamese Government to agree after, which precisely type implication we consider it necessary avoid if independence of Viet Nam to be crystal clear.

Numbered paragraph 5. We feel Bidault's proposed text for paragraph 2 of Deptel 4286, repeated Geneva Tedul 133,<sup>4</sup> conflicts with assurance sought by our text. While Bidault's language might be helpful for EDC debate it provides loopholes for abusive interpretation justifying later claims right withdrawal on one or other of counts listed. When occasion offers suggest you point out to Bidault that we could not commit forces and US prestige in situation when there would be any question concerning premature French withdrawal their forces.

Numbered paragraph 6. After full agreement reached on all conditions and French Government has reached decision it wishes request US intervention, US must have opportunity at that time make its own decision whether prevailing circumstances warrant implementation of formal steps leading to US military participation. We cannot grant French an indefinite option on us without regard to intervening deterioration. Only after these decisions taken would we expect Laniel submit agreement and request for internationalization to Parliament for endorsement and ratification; also he must not prejudice our liberty of decision by approaching Parliament in such way that we would appear be morally committed intervene prior to our decision.<sup>5</sup>

DULLES

---

<sup>3</sup> Dated May 26; for text, see volume XIII.

<sup>4</sup> Dated May 27, not printed, but see footnote 3, p. 1039.

<sup>5</sup> Under Secretary Smith informed the Department of State in telegram Dulte 166, June 10, that he would "be unable discuss referenced telegram [Tedul 175] with French until early next week since understand Bidault will probably not return until then. Department may wish instruct Embassy Paris take questions up with Bidault or De Margerie who with Bidault in Paris." (396.1 GE/6-1054)

JUNE 9, 1954

751G.00/6-954 : Telegram

Smith-Eden Meeting, Geneva, June 9, Morning: The United States Delegation to the Department of State

TOP SECRET

NIACT

GENEVA, June 9, 1954—10 p. m.

Dulte 164. Eyes only Secretary. I had a long talk with Eden this morning. He said that we are clearly coming to end here on Indochina. Three major issues have emerged on which we cannot compromise and on which Communists show no intention of receding. These are (1) separate treatment of Laos and Cambodia, which are clearly victims of Viet Minh aggression; (2) status and powers of impartial international supervisory authority; and (3) composition of international supervisory authority.

He is convinced that we can get no further on these issues and should break within next few days. While he feels no useful negotiating purpose would be served, he is inclined to think that for public opinion it would be desirable that he privately see Molotov once more before a break in order to make clear to Molotov firmness our position and obtain Communist position. He is hopeful of forcing Molotov into public rejection Colombo powers for supervisory organization. This will have very beneficial effects in south and southeast Asia. I pointed out, and he agreed, that French situation is such that we would probably have to leave the French and Viet Minh military officers here talking about zones in Vietnam.

Immediately following break he feels Cambodia and Laos should put their cases to the UN entirely divorced from Thailand request. (I gathered that he was thinking of something more than just a POC.) He thinks it highly important that they move rapidly after the conference is wound up, but equally important until that time there be no hints or press leaks whatever that such action is contemplated. He feels that if properly handled and appeals are spontaneous on their part, with no implication of US-UK initiative or prodding, they will receive general Asian support. I pointed out, and he agreed, that France might oppose but we should go ahead anyway. In meanwhile he feels very strongly we must not now complicate matter by insisting on broadening Thailand appeal to Laos and Cambodia. He rightly points out that language in Security Council draft resolution is largely academic, as it will in any event be vetoed. Resolution can be written any way that appears desirable at the time matter comes before General Assembly. He said he would send instructions to Dixon to try to work out with Lodge some language that would meet his point, while not necessarily precluding POC operations outside Thailand. I am sending separate telegram repeated to USUN replying to your Tosec 378<sup>1</sup> giving only latter part this paragraph.

Eden said he had not yet put to cabinet his ideas with regard to UN appeal by Cambodia and Laos, and therefore asked that the matter be treated with strictest secrecy.

Eden also said he was considering recommendation reduce strength of Commonwealth division in Korea by about half or one brigade in order to reinforce Malaya. If things eased up in Egypt, he was also hopeful that forces could be spared from there for Malaya. I told him that in view of more critical situation in southeast Asia and our ability within the armistice to train and equip ROK forces as replacements, I thought we would have no objection.

Clear that Eden now considers negotiations here have failed. Believe he is prepared to move ahead quickly in southeast Asia coalition which would guarantee Cambodia and most of Laos under umbrella of some UN action with respect to those two countries. He expects active cooperation from Burma, and hopes for benevolent neutrality from India. He apparently does not feel much can be salvaged in Vietnam.

As you know, Bidault is not here and we will not know where French stand until Assembly debate completed, if then. If French continue negotiations, point will probably arrive shortly when deteriorating military situation will force them accept simple cease-fire in attempt temporarily salvage something. Therefore one question we may shortly face is what we and UK do if France insists on continuing negotiations somewhat longer. It is one thing to withdraw if France negotiates an agreement with which we cannot publicly associate ourselves, and another to withdraw prior to that time.

Eden's tactics recommend themselves very strongly to me.

Chauvel spoke to me after the above was dictated. In Bidault's absence he and others have been considering recommending to Bidault that France and three Associated States together make appeal to UN. He had reports from Valluy, part of which he read to me. He is obviously convinced that things will go badly in Delta. I made no comment except to suggest that Laos and Cambodia commanded a certain sympathy in Asia and Middle East which France plus Vietnam did not. I asked him categorically if France wanted to internationalize on conditions we had tabled some time ago, saying neither you nor I knew where France stood. He replied that he did not know: that "Bidault still hoped to get something here".

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated June 8, p. 1081.

I would appreciate your thoughts and guidance.<sup>2</sup>

With respect Korea, Eden indicated he would probably speak next plenary (which we plan for Friday or Saturday). He would not be adverse to making this last session on Korea. However, not all of sixteen are yet prepared to do this. I do not know whether we will be able get them lined up. If not, one more plenary may be necessary.

SMITH

---

<sup>2</sup> See telegrams 1 and 07, both dated June 10, pp. 1117 and 1119, respectively, for comments by Acting Secretary Murphy to Secretary Dulles on telegram Dulte 164 and for Murphy's reply to Smith.

---

396.1 GE/6-954 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

TOP SECRET

GENEVA, June 9, 1954—11 a. m.

Dulte 161. Repeated information Saigon 155, Paris 406. Eyes only Ambassadors. Re Tedul 171.<sup>1</sup> My personal message to you (Dulte 157<sup>2</sup>) is a fair general commentary on General Valluy's estimate of South-east Asia situation, and I think it might be of some use to our Chiefs of Staff if you made it available to them together with the following specific comments on the numbered paragraphs of Valluy's estimate:

1. I would modify his statement that if Tonkin is lost military line will not be reestablished anywhere to read "probably, will not be re-established." The unqualified "not", and "anywhere" prejudices history and takes in too much territory.

2. I agree with two as a correct evaluation of the present situation, but to the concluding phrase "there would be no forces to man this line" I would add "unless other nations furnished them".

3. Heath would agree that at present, there are "no southern Vietnamese who could oppose northern Vietnamese". I am unable to estimate.

4, 5, 6, 7 and 8. I agree thoroughly with this evaluation, except that we could, if we would, create ability of Thailand, Laos and Cambodia to assist.

9. Heath would agree with nine but would qualify statement that no Vietnamese would fight against other Vietnamese by saying that they would not fight effectively or long unless backed up by strong foreign forces. I am unable to estimate.

SMITH

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated June 7, p. 1056.

<sup>2</sup> Dated June 7, p. 1054.

396.1 GE/6-954 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

TOP SECRET

GENEVA, June 9, 1954—3 p. m.

Dulte 162. Personal for Secretary from Under Secretary.

1. Your Tedul 169.<sup>1</sup> I agree with what you say about French, and you are right in thinking that Heath overstated our confidence deliberately for morale reasons. However, there is this to be said for French. I think they are as confused about our real intentions as we are about theirs. We make strong statements, and then qualify them, and I am sure French believe that air and naval support alone will not prevent ultimate loss of Delta with its almost inevitable consequences of a rapidly deteriorating political and military situation.

2. Bidault was unable to keep an appointment he requested with me before leaving for Paris yesterday because of protracted plenary session, but De Margerie told us that Bidault was alarmed by report from General Valluy of his talk with Radford that latter would give no assurance that American marines would be furnished in case "internationalization" of the Indochina conflict were agreed upon but had suggested that ROK divisions be sent instead. De Margerie stated emphatically that a substitution of Korean troops for American marines would be utterly unsatisfactory as destroying belief and confidence that Americans would really participate in defense of Indochina.

3. Bidault was also concerned by Valluy's report that Radford had said no firm decision had yet been taken on sending American training mission. De Margerie said that it was certainly possible within, say, two weeks there might be a cease-fire and it would thereafter be impossible for an American training mission to enter Vietnam. Bidault hoped for an accelerated decision on this point. The date of June 15 keeps coming up, although the French avoid any definite explanation.

4. Bidault was worried that there was no clear understanding as to American counter-action in case of a sudden and unprotected mass attack by Chinese aircraft. De Margerie pointed out that the French had absolutely no anti-aircraft or other defense against such an occurrence. He said, however, that French were somewhat less urgent on this point in view of American intelligence reports to Valluy that there was no evidence that from South China or Hainan airfields such air attack could be mounted in the immediate future.

5. Bidault had also noted that understanding had not yet been reached as to the organization of the command and the division of duties.

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated June 7, p. 1056.

6. I conveyed your feelings, as given me in Tedul 169, rather strongly to French, representing them as my own and that of Department, but of course the reply, at least by implication, is always to suggest considerations given in first paragraph of this message.

SMITH

---

396.1 GE/6-954 : Telegram

Sixth Plenary Session on Indochina, Geneva, June 9, 3:05 p. m. : The United States Delegation to the Department of State<sup>1</sup>

CONFIDENTIAL

GENEVA, June 9, 1954—midnight.

Secto 413. Repeated information Paris 410, Saigon 157, London 263, Tokyo 131, Moscow 113, Phnom Penh, Vientiane. Department pass Defense. Tokyo pass CINCFE. Sixth Indochina Plenary session, Wednesday, June 9, with Molotov presiding: Dinh (Vietnam) opened session with statement subdued in tone and ironic at Molotov's expense. He said he would not reply to Viet Minh's insults of their brethren but took issue with Molotov's false statement. He thanked Molotov for interest in independence of his country and referred well-known Soviet liberation of other small nations as evidence their action toward Eastern European countries since Yalta. He told Molotov that while Vietnam army has not yet had time to develop fully, soldiers fighting for their country should not be insulted. Dinh reminded conference of firm stand his delegation took which led to unanimous agreement by conference there should not [be] partition of Vietnam and rejected Viet Minh proposals as in fact proposing partition which would give them power to perpetuate themselves in their area.

Dinh came out strongly for international supervision of elections, as well as international supervision of implementation of armistice, which he said should be by UN. He rejected Soviet concept of Commission of India, Pakistan, Czechoslovakia, Poland pointing out that none of them had recognized Vietnam. UN would be impartial and neutral and most appropriate for armistice supervision. He recalled Soviet proposal December 24, 1948 for SC armistice commission in Indonesia. He also rejected Viet Minh concept that joint commission was effective, citing Vietnam experience in 1946 to show joint commission never worked in practice.

---

<sup>1</sup> A set of minutes of this meeting (US Verb Min/6) is in Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 277. The minutes indicate that the meeting convened at 3:05 p. m. and adjourned at 7:15 p. m. The minutes are also printed in Conférence de Genève, pp. 237-264. The speeches by Phoui Sananikone and Chou En-lai are printed in Cmd. 9186, pp. 153-165. The speeches of Phoui Sananikone, Nguyen Quoc Dinh, and Chou En-lai. Indochina Documents IC/23, IC/24, and IC/25, respectively, June 9-10, are in Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 279A.

Phoui Sananikone (Laos) followed with résumé his government's position, stressed difference between situation Laos, Cambodia on one hand and Vietnam on other and repeated withdrawal of foreign invading forces would in fact result in cessation of hostilities. He said his Government's position is based on three points: (1) Laos is independent; (2) it has a democracy, united national government; and (3) there is no civil strife but only invasion of Viet Minh forces. He referred to tyranny and atrocities by invaders who pretend to champion liberty.

Turning to issues under discussion in relation to Vietnam, he said supervision must be effective and impartial which requires international neutral organ. Laos would prefer that it be UN which is most appropriate. If agreement cannot be reached on UN supervision they are prepared to examine other possibilities, e.g., Asian countries such as Pakistan, Thailand, India, Ceylon and Philippines.

Following recess, Chou En-lai spoke, opening with statement that while some progress made this had been considerably short of expectations. He proceeded to summarize his delegation's views, starting with quotation of his May 27 6-point proposal (Secto 326<sup>2</sup>), and elaborating on each point. He emphasized the following with reference numbered paragraphs of proposal:

(1) Cease-fire must be simultaneous in Vietnam, Cambodia and Laos, even if procedurally at conference countries might be considered successively.

(2) Disposition of forces following cease-fire should apply to entire territory of Indochina, although since situation not entirely alike measures for settlement probably not same. He rejected idea that Communist forces in Cambodia and Laos should be evacuated, insisting they were local forces and therefore could not be removed from country. Chou En-lai also called for contacts between commanders in Indochina as well as in Geneva.

(3) It was essential to stop completely introduction of military personnel and material, which must include arms and personnel of United States. So far as supervision is concerned, Korean armistice agreement may be used for reference. Prohibition on such reinforcement must apply to all three Indochina states. As in Korean armistice agreement, supervision should be divided between joint commission and neutral nations supervisory commission with terms of reference like case in Korean armistice. Reference to composition of commission, he rejected argument that Communist states like Poland and Czechoslovakia cannot be neutral and said if Communist countries cannot, neither can capitalistic states, and it would be impossible to find any neutrals. Definition of neutrals he said should be that contained in Korean armistice agreement. If Communist states are barred from neutral nations' body, it will be impossible to reach agreement on composition.

---

<sup>2</sup> Dated May 27, p. 947.

As to relationship between neutral nations supervisory commission and joint commission, neither should be subordinate to other, but both should have parallel and supplementary functions as in Korean armistice agreement.

Commission must operate by unanimity rule and not by majority. He rejected Smith criticism of NNSC into UN, saying it has been very effective, examining entry of over 2 million military personnel and over 7,000 US aircraft. Commission he said should not be prejudiced in favoring either side and must reflect views of both sides. He admitted there were disagreements in NNSC, but maintained this safeguarded Korean armistice agreement. If Poles and Czechoslovaks barred investigation of false US charges that PWs retained by Communists, Swiss and Swedish prevent investigation of US forcible retention and transfer to Taiwan of thousands of Chinese PWs. Indeed he said NNRC, which worked by majority, disregarded Poles and Czechoslovak views and has resulted in deadlock on forcible US retention of Communist PWs which still unresolved. NNSC on other hand has not taken action contrary to views of either parties and has therefore succeeded.

(4) Neutral nations supervisory commission should be responsible to countries providing international guarantees for peace in Indochina.

(5) UN supervision which has been proposed is unacceptable. Conference has nothing to do with UN and recent efforts to place Indochina question on UN agenda to step up intervention in Indochinese war makes it still less appropriate for UN to assume responsibility for supervising Indochinese armistice. Guarantees instead should be by participating states of conference who should agree to carry on consultation and adopt collective instead of individual measures in event of violation.

(6) View of experience re Dien Bien Phu personnel, agreement on exchange of PWs and interned civilians should present no problem. After cease-fire throughout Indochina, PW question should be submitted for discussion in Geneva and in Indochina.

Chou En-lai concluded with attack on US efforts to extend war in Indochina, and prevent Geneva Conference from reaching agreement. He also attacked "war faction in France" which was seeking American intervention and enlarged aid and has adopted dilatory tactics at conference. Chou En-lai also charged us with intensifying activities to organize SEA bloc, thereby continuing to locate tensions in Far East and to threaten peace and security of Asia throughout the world. Recent treaties between French Government and Bao Dai running contrary to true independence for Vietnamese people also not conducive to early restoration of peace.

Finally, Chou En-lai said that military issues and political issues are interrelated and cannot be completely separated. On this point, he said Korean experience has shown that these issues must be treated together since political conference pursuant to Article 6 proof Korean armistice agreement never took place and Geneva Conference has produced no results so far and these political and military questions should be considered by conference along parallel lines and in rotation as suggested by Molotov.

Meeting concluded with Smith statement contained in Secto 412.<sup>3</sup> It was agreed to meet again in plenary Thursday, June 10.

Comment: Chou En-lai statement revealed no hint of concession and contained flat statements that it would be impossible to obtain agreement except on Communist terms, particularly re composition of neutral nations supervisory commission, its relation to mixed changes and unanimity provision in its operation. Believed it will harden UK and French positions.

SMITH

---

<sup>3</sup> Infra.

396.1 GE/6-954: Telegram

Sixth Plenary Session on Indochina, Geneva, June 9, 3:05 p. m.: The United States Delegation to the Department of State

NIACT

GENEVA, June 9, 1954.

Secto 412. Repeated information Paris 409, London 262, Saigon 156, Tokyo 120, Moscow unnumbered. Department pass Defense. Under Secretary's statement at sixth Indochina plenary Wednesday, June 9:

"Mr. Chairman, Fellow Delegates, as I listened yesterday to Mr. Molotov's statement, and to that of Mr. Chou En-lai today, I felt a disappointment—shared, I am sure, by other delegations—at their unconstructive character. I had hoped for some definite response to our efforts toward compromise on basic issues. Since this has not been forthcoming and since we have had only a reiteration of accepted formulas which have been given us on a number of previous occasions, I feel that it is necessary now for me to comment on the charges reiterated on several occasions by Mr. Molotov and more intemperately repeated by Mr. Dong and Mr. Chou En-lai of aggressive designs and imperialistic intentions and deliberate deceptions and obstructions on the part of the US and of our friends and allies.

These charges are part of a familiar pattern. I'm quite sure that Mr. Molotov, and probably Mr. Chou En-lai, do not themselves actually believe that they will be taken seriously, except possibly in those countries where the instrumentalities of government are devoted to the suppression of the distribution of accurate and unbiased information.

I would assume, therefore, that Mr. Molotov was not actually speaking to us, but rather the regimented audience in Europe and Asia which accepts the Cominform line. I believe, therefore, that it is sufficient for me, in reply, to say that the record of my country during and since the second world war is well known to the whole free world. We are quite willing to have our present and our future intentions judged from this record and I am sure that the confidence of our associates will not be diminished, and that of less fortunate people, if they were permitted to examine the record, would be restored.

We sometimes overlook the fact that we know a great deal, also, about the record of the Soviet Union during this same period and, in judging the present and future intentions of the Communist states and in assessing the validity of their proposals, I suggest we can learn more from reviewing this record than from such statements as those which our Communist colleagues have permitted themselves to make. For example, when Mr. Molotov and Mr. Chou En-lai speak of the national liberation movements of the peoples of Asia, I am at once moved to recall what Mr. Molotov and the government he has so long represented have actually done to affect the national aspirations of various smaller nations.

I would therefore remind you all of the mutual assistance treaties which the Soviet Union made in 1939 with Estonia, Latvia, and Lithuania. On October 31, 1939, Mr. Molotov, as reported in the Soviet press, said of these treaties that they in no way imply any interference on the part of the Soviet Union in the affairs of Estonia, Latvia or Lithuania . . . on the contrary all of these pacts of mutual assistance strictly stipulate the inviolability of the sovereignty of the signatory states and the principle of noninterference in each other's affairs . . . we stand for the scrupulous and punctilious observance of the pacts on the basis of complete reciprocity, and we declare that all the nonsensical talk about the Sovietization of the Baltic countries is only to the interest of our common enemies and of all anti-Soviet provocateurs.

The fate which overtook Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania very soon after this verbally admirable statement by our eminent colleague is well known to all of us.

Have any of my colleagues forgotten the pact between the Soviet Union and Nazi Germany dated August 23, 1939. Probably at one time Mr. Molotov considered this pact a diplomatic achievement, but I'm sure he must later have shared with the rest of us the bitter conviction that it paved the way first for the Nazi victories of the early years of World War II and then for the Nazi assault on the Soviet Union which cost the grave, long-suffering and wholly admirable Russian people so many millions of lives and such wide-spread destruction.

I have examined this pact and particularly the secret annex thereto, which has since been revealed, and I remain deeply impressed by the following words from the second numbered paragraph of this annex to which Mr. Molotov appended his signature on August 23, 1939.

They read as follows:

'The question of whether the interests of both parties make desirable the maintenance of an independent Polish state and that such state should be bounded can only be definitely determined in the course of further political developments. In any event, both governments will resolve this question by means of friendly agreement.'

No attempts to justify this international immorality on the ground of exigencies existing at the time can possibly be acceptable and read in the light of this paragraph, the history of Eastern Europe between 1939 when Poland was destroyed and 1948 when Czechoslovakia lost her proud place as a free nation becomes unmistakably clear. The national aspirations of small, weak countries are to be subject to what is called the 'interests' of large aggressive powers with designs of world domination. What took place in Poland, Latvia, Lithuania, Estonia, Hungary, Rumania, Bulgaria, Albania and Czechoslovakia constitutes in each case a chapter in the Soviet record.

It now begins to appear that one of the next chapters in this record may reveal an intention to subordinate the national aspirations of the people of Indochina to what has been termed the 'interest of both parties' as they may be represented by the treaty relationship between the Soviet Union and Communist China.

I should like at this point to bring to your attention another interesting quotation which will be familiar to Mr. Chou En-lai: 'Truce is the military counterpart of the political tactic of coalition govt. It is the means to an end, not the ultimate objective'. In the words our colleague, the Foreign Minister of Communist China, gave to the familiar military truce a meaning entirely new in the history of war. That meaning was spelled out in a war of aggression in Korea and the same concept hangs over the battlefields of Indochina and it will be understood that it is for this reason, among others, that the majority of us have insisted on definite understandings regarding some of the vital issues that we are considering in our effort to bring peace in Southeast Asia.

Our objective and our hope are peace and security. Mr. Molotov himself will recall that at our first formal conference in Moscow in 1946 I stated that the vital question in the mind of the entire free world was, 'how much further is the Soviet Union going to go'.

I said also at that time that if the aggressive expansionism, which the Soviet Union had already demonstrated, were to continue, the free world, purely in self-defense, would if necessary draw closer together.

The repressive effect of Soviet armed might was not so soon felt in South or Southeast Asia as it was in Eastern Europe. Consequently, therefore, we saw, since the end of the last war, the peoples of this area make giant strides in attaining independence and the control of their own destinies. Burma, Ceylon, India, Indonesia, Pakistan, and the Philippines have taken their place in the family of free nations. These developments have been viewed with the greatest satisfaction by the people of my country.

Cambodia, Laos and Vietnam have more recently joined the other free South and Southeast Asian nations in the achievement of independence, and it is our sincere hope that they will attain peace and security based on a true respect for the national aspirations of their peoples. Those national aspirations should not be subordinated as has occurred in the case of the unfortunate nations mentioned at the beginning of this statement, to the interests of a large aggressive power or powers.

The Soviet Union today is the great Asian imperial power, holding vast colonial territories in the Caucasus and Central Asia. The solicitude I have heard expressed by Mr. Molotov of the people of Southeast Asia apparently does not extend toward the Armenians, the Kazakhs, Mongols, and I think it might be worth the while of all my colleagues to recall the circumstances under which the former small independent state of Tanatuva disappeared completely from the map.

I might say also to Mr. Pham Van Dong that accusations against the use of aggressive intentions and imperialist designs come rather strangely from his lips when we recall that the troops of the Viet Minh have invaded the peaceful countries of Cambodia and Laos, and have spread death and destruction there.

But, Mr. Chairman, and gentlemen, I intensely dislike these charges and countercharges. I have, so far, refrained from replying myself because of the really serious and important business facing this conference.

Having now recorded my testimony with regard to the matter of imperialism, I should like to return to consideration of the specific proposals before us. At this moment we are still confronted with three important issues which have been debated at length at a number of meetings and without result. The first of these is, as I and others of my colleagues said yesterday afternoon, the special nature of the problem existing in Laos and Cambodia.

I believe that both Mr. Eden and Mr. Bidault unanswerably demonstrated the necessity of separate treatment for those two countries where peace would automatically be restored by the withdrawal of the invading Viet Minh force.

The second issue is that of the powers of the international supervisory commission for Vietnam. This commission must, obviously have the authority and facilities to settle any problems or differences which cannot be adjusted by the joint commissions of the belligerents, and, logically, therefore, its decisions must be binding on those joint commissions.

The third vital issue is the composition of the international supervisory commission. As I and others of us said before, a commission containing states unable to meet the test of impartiality e.g. that is, a commission, the counterpart of that set up in Korea, on which Communist state members have been able by veto to prevent effective supervision, is obviously an unsatisfactory and an unacceptable proposal. Yesterday the representative of the UK proposed the Colombo powers. I welcomed that proposal. This afternoon the representative of Vietnam proposed the UN. That would be acceptable.

Both are reasonable proposals. The proposal of the Soviet Union from my point of view, and I think from that of the majority of my colleagues, is not reasonable.

I am obliged to state that the Soviet, the Chinese Communists, and the Viet Minh Delegations have, so far, shown no signs of willingness to resolve these issues on any reasonable basis which could be acceptable to this conference, or which would inspire and insure the return of peace to Indochina. I hope that I am wrong, but the negative results of our last meeting seems to support this conclusion.

I thank you, Mr. Chairman."

SMITH

---

396.1 GE/6-954: Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State<sup>1</sup>

CONFIDENTIAL

GENEVA, June 9, 1954—5 p. m.

Secto 408. From Suydam for McCardle. There follow pertinent excerpts Under Secretary's briefing of American press this morning (full text pouch mail): "the Secretary had quite a press conference (yesterday) and we have just gotten the pertinent points of it here. I presume that it has been or is being made available to you.

. . . (he said), among other things, that the attitude of the Communists at Geneva and in stepping up the war in Indochina, as he put it, 'gives the lie to their greatly professed love of peace'.

---

<sup>1</sup> Transmitted in two sections. Ellipses in this document are in the source text.

As an example of their professed efforts to diminish international tensions, I think it is worth while that you take another good close look at what Mr. Molotov said yesterday. It really represented him at his cleverest. He didn't address himself to substance at all. It was very apparent, as soon as he had gotten into his speech, that his purpose was to undermine as much as possible the position of M. Bidault in the debates which were scheduled to start today. He took a blast at French foreign policy and at French military policy, and he had a few words to say about M. Bidault's philosophy. He was pretty brutal about the losses of Dien Bien Phu, and he enlarged in considerable detail on the cost of the war to France. Then he really cast all amenities to the wind, and so did his colleagues, because they then began to refer to the Vietnamese Government, which as you recall has been officially recognized by a great many nations, as the Bao Dai Government and the representative of the Bao Dai Government—a clever buildup. . . .

In my opinion, Mr. Molotov's attitude has stiffened considerably since his return from Moscow. Whether the Moscow visit itself contributed to that, I do not know. A certain indication of a willingness to cooperate, and possibly play the part of the slightly left-of-center middleman—as between the two extreme positions which some people might say are represented by Communist China and the US—has vanished.

There is a great deal more evidence of rigidity and aggressiveness. . . .

Our attitude in connection with the Indochina phase of the discussion has been that of a friendly collaborator; we do not attempt, and have not attempted, to exert any particular leadership, giving advice where we thought it was desirable and supporting reasonable suggestions as they were made.

The Communist position in demanding international—or, as they call it, 'neutral'—supervision of the ceasefire in Indochina, the counter part of the so-called Neutral Nations Supervisory Commission in Korea, we have had to reject. We have also had to maintain and reaffirm and re-reaffirm our position with regard to the special character of the problems existing in Laos and Cambodia. Mr. Eden made a very strong statement on it yesterday himself, recording unmistakably the British policy, which is identical with our own. He proposed a counter-suggestion to that of Mr. Molotov, that impartial international supervision might be provided by the Colombo powers, reminding the conference that the prime ministers at Colombo had passed resolutions and issued a communiqué which had been of some help, and at least by implication had suggested a very great interest. I thought, and I think others did, that that suggestion is worth very serious consideration.

Question: General, are you aware that the Chinese Delegation's spokesman rejected it last night at the press conference?

Answer: No, I am not; but if so, it seems to me to indicate an even greater degree of intransigence than I had anticipated.

Q: He seemed to think, General, that Pakistan was not neutral, having a military agreement with the US. Nevertheless, he continued to accept the two of them as part of the Molotov formula.

A: I see. We sometimes think that India is not too entirely neutral in our direction. But some sort of a consortium of nations based on an India-Pakistan axis has always recommended itself to me as a possibility. I know that the Secretary feels that, insofar as possible, our Asiatic friends should exercise policy functions in their own backyard. . . .

Q: Then, you endorsed Mr. Eden's proposal . . . ?

A: I welcomed Mr. Eden's proposal without endorsing it and, said that it deserved very serious consideration; and I also said that I had thought for some time, as I previously stated in our restricted conference, that some sort of a consortium of nations, of impartial nations, might be found using as the base the India-Pakistan suggestion of Mr. Molotov.

Q: What is your feeling, General, about having one Communist country also on the commission?

A: If the commission were otherwise well organized and if it did not operate on a basis, the good old Communist basis of unanimity, such that refusal of one member might nullify or veto every action of the group, I should think it might be acceptable . . . in other words, if there is not a built-in veto. We have had a lot of experience with that.

Q: General, about this seeming stiffening of Mr. Molotov's attitude since his return from Moscow . . . it seemed to me that Mr. Molotov didn't say anything yesterday in the way of a position relative to Laos and Cambodia, any other thing that they didn't say in their first speech here. What, in the interim, indicated a lessening or softening of their position?

A: This is just my personal impression.

Q: Well, didn't Molotov at the beginning, General, indicate a willingness to consider the military aspect of the problem?

A: Yes.

Q: Separately, or give it priority?

A: Yes.

Q: Whereas yesterday he backed away from it?

A: Yes. He said first that he would consider the military aspects of the problem. Then at various times during the closed sessions he indicated very clearly that he recognized the special considerations applying to Laos and Cambodia. He specifically stated on at least one occasion that there was no thought whatever of partitioning anywhere in the area. Now he has, at least by implication, backed away from the really vital question of solving the military problems. And his associates have now proposed, as I recall it, alternating military and political sessions.

Q: General Smith, since we have in our role of friendly advisers only taken two positions, but have taken them quite definitely, in regard to the separation of Laos and Cambodia from Vietnam, and in regard to the need to have a truly impartial non-veto international commission—

A: Non-built-in veto, yes.

Q: —and since the Russians now in their [garbled group] what appears to be a very thoroughly thought out statement of policy, have definitely turned down those two typings[?] on which we have stood, is there any possibility of an agreement in which we can participate?

A: Not unless they modify their position. Ours is a reasonable and moderate one, we think. The bargaining stage on Indochina I do not believe is over. On the other hand, events in Indochina themselves are certainly going to influence, have more influence on, what agreement is reached than debates around the conference table at Geneva. . . .

Q: General, in view of Mr. Molotov's new aggressiveness, do you think there is any chance of (your) being more articulate in these plenary sessions? Yesterday he attacked our efforts to build up a Southeast Asia security organization. Are we going to keep still to the end of the conference on issues of that sort?

A: Well, occasionally the spirit moves me to speak. I did yesterday. . . .

Q: General, is there any chance of this conference breaking up pretty shortly?

A: I do not think these things should be prolonged indefinitely when it becomes apparent that there is no equitable solution in sight. Take the Korea phase, for example. The Secretary said yesterday that the talks about Korea are pretty close to the end of their useful life. My own view is that when we reach a point where it becomes clear that the mission of the conference is not likely to be accomplished, or the mission of one phase of the conference is not likely to be accomplished, that phase should not be permitted to drag on in order to permit the Commies to use the conference as a platform for propaganda, and to obfuscate the major issues. We have two very important and very clear-cut issues with respect to Korea. The first is the status and the authority of the UN in its role of repelling aggression and in uniting Korea; and the second is the possibility of arriving at a formula which would produce actually free, uncoerced, and honest elections both in the North and in the South. And since the formula which the Commies insist on is quite incapable of producing anything but completely rigged and coerced elections in areas in which they control, and since they have gone even further and said that the franchise in North Korea at least would be exercised by everybody on the spot, regardless of nationality, which would include all the Chinese and any Russians that happened to be there, and various other odds and ends, it does not seem to be a solution which is susceptible of producing any results, and certainly not one that we could accept. Therefore, I should dislike very much to see that phase of the conference degenerate into a propaganda medium for our Commie associates.

Q: What is the outlook, General, on the Korean situation? What is likely to happen? You said the other day you were ready to rest our case at the bar of world opinion. Do the other delegates here share your opinion?

A: I think that most of them do, yes. Of course, Mr. Chou En-lai has reserved the right to reply to some of the things that I said. He may want another plenary session. We would certainly want one because we have Mr. Molotov's proposal which, if read just by itself by people who still held the illusion that 'neutral' means the same to us as it does to the Commies, might have some effect . . . (but) if you read his speech, which accompanied the presentation of that proposal, you will note that he was absolutely adamant in insisting that that composition must be the same as that of the neutral nations supervisory commission of Korea . . . the Swiss and the Swedes have had a complete snootful of it, and I don't blame them.

Q: What about Indochina, after you get thru this series of plenary sessions? Do you think you will go back into restricted sessions again on this?

A: I do not know. Mr. Molotov asked to go into open sessions because, he said, the closed sessions were not actually closed, and because the information always leaked out, and, since it leaked out from various sources and in various distorted forms, it was far better if we had our discussions in open sessions. . . .

Q: General Smith, do you have any idea of how these conversations on Indochina could ever be broken off? . . .

A: All I can say about that is that we started the one seeming step toward progress that was made, which was the beginning of what you might call talks by military experts on both sides. As far as I can ascertain, nothing has been accomplished. The Commie side has refused to discuss actual details and has restricted itself more or less to political polemics. In other words, it seems that we are just as far from getting down on the map the staff officers idea of concentration areas for the regular troops involved as we were at the beginning. That has a certain ominous significance to me. I would not like to enlarge on why, however.

Q: Then, can one take it to be our feeling now that it is going to be extremely difficult to break up the conference on any pretext?

A: Well, whether the Indochina phase would really break up or not is problematical. You must remember at Panmunjom we went there for three weeks and we stayed there twenty-seven months . . . that doesn't mean that I will be here twenty-seven months.

I have had some interesting minor items in some of our press summaries, and, without intending to be critical, there are certain errors of fact . . . for example, these constant reiterations about a split here between the British and the US delegates are not justified. I read one comment, I believe, that when the closed session on Korea was called off that the US del was highly irritated; well, that is not a fact. The US del was thoroughly satisfied. We saw no reason for a closed session on Korea after the speeches made at the previous plenary. . . .

(As) to the possibility that the Korean phase might last a long time further, as a result of Mr. Molotov's new proposals: . . . they do not say one single thing that has not been proposed before, although they say it differently, and they sugar-coat the unpalatable morsel by the phrase 'composition to be examined later' . . . I do not think that the majority of the other fifteen are ready to chop it right off (here). As a matter of fact, I personally now want to see some others speak to the point of Mr. Molotov's proposal. I have spoken my piece, and I dare say that others will.

Q: Has there been a change in our position from the beginning of this conference, when it was my definite impression that we wanted to get a clear-cut decision here as to whether the Russians and the Red Chinese were going to talk business, and, if not to cut the thing short and go home, and take what measures had to be taken to stop Commie expansion in Southeast Asia? Was that a mistaken impression, or do we wish to get a clear-cut decision and stop muddling the mind of the public?

A: We always want a clear-cut decision, and we always want it quickly. That is a national characteristic, and I must say that I share it to the full; but it isn't always possible to get it as quickly or as cleanly cut as we ourselves would like because we work with a group of allies, each of whom has its own public opinion to consider, and many of whom are more convinced than we that there are possibilities in somewhat prolonged negotiation. We should take that into consideration. We cannot always do what we like ourselves, neither can our allies. We have to arrive both tactically and in matters of policy at a sort of a compromise; that's almost inevitable, both as to timing and as to procedure.

Q: And as to principle?

A: Well, I do not think there is any great difference in principle. I have not encountered that. Such differences in opinion as I have encountered here have related primarily to timing and to procedure, and I would like to say this to you, completely off the record, please, as my own estimate now after several weeks here: If I had to total up the score, I would say events have demonstrated that in some cases we have been right, and in some cases some of our associates have been right, and I think that they would admit that as quickly as I am prepared to admit the other."

SMITH

751G.00/6-954 : Telegram

The Secretary of State to the United States Delegation<sup>1</sup>

TOP SECRET
PRIORITY

WASHINGTON, June 9, 1954—5 : 52 p. m.

Tedul 178. Eyes only for Ambassadors. Ambassador Bonnet came to see Secretary Dulles Wednesday afternoon and raised question of participation of US Marines Indochina. He said he had received telegram from Maurice Schumann expressing excitement and dismay at information from Valluy that Radford had said there was no question of utilization Marines Indochina. Ambassador said this conflicted with what French Govt had hitherto understood to be intentions US Govt this respect. He further stated suggestion made by Radford to Valluy that three Korean divisions might be used in Indochina was unacceptable.

Secretary said US position had been clear from start and that we were not willing to make commitment ahead of time which French could use for internal political maneuvering or negotiating at Geneva and which would represent a kind of permanent option on US intervention if it suited their purpose. A month ago, French had been explicitly informed conditions which must be met and fulfilled by them before President took decision whether to go to Congress and ask for authority use American armed forces in relation Indochina. Among these conditions was need for French and Associated States to request US and certain other interested countries to come in. We were still in dark as to what French intentions really were.

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by Tyler of EUR/WE. Repeated to Paris as telegram 4476, to Saigon as telegram 2551, and to London as telegram 6684.

Secretary said he felt French desire obtain firm commitment from us on which they could draw was understandable, but equally understandable in circumstances is our determination not to give them such blank check. Secretary confirmed US position as stated by Dillon (4766 from Paris<sup>2</sup>) that use of Marines would not be excluded provided an agreed operational plan required their presence. He said it was useless and illusory to attempt to obtain from us at this time a commitment more specific on this point than that which we had already given.

With regard to what we would do in event act of open aggression by Chinese, Secretary read relevant extracts (last four paragraphs of section Roman four) from his Los Angeles speech which is being separately transmitted.<sup>3</sup>

Bonnet expressed surprise that we considered that French Govt had not made up its mind with regard to internationalization of Indochina war and said he considered request had already been made by French. Secretary pointed out that our offer on basis certain specific conditions had been made a month ago in context of situation at that time, which confirmed and made precise much earlier representations. Since then things had changed rapidly and would doubtless continue to change. For this reason delay was regrettable, and further delay would not improve situation with regard to any role we might consider playing.<sup>4</sup>

DULLES

---

<sup>2</sup> Dated June 9; for text, see volume XIII.

<sup>3</sup> For the text of the speech delivered by the Secretary of State at Los Angeles on June 11, see Department of State Bulletin, June 28, 1954, pp. 971-973.

<sup>4</sup> Under Secretary Smith replied in telegram Dulte 165, June 10, as follows: "I pointed out to Bidault several days ago and again yesterday to Chauvel that before any US forces could be engaged in Indochina a resolution authorizing the President to take such action must be passed by Congress; that before such a resolution could be passed certain conditions must be fulfilled, such as, for example, association of other states in intervention, request for assistance by France, et cetera. I explained that should such a resolution be passed participation of Marines would not be excluded since Marines were part of Navy." (751G.00/6-1054)

---

396.1 GE/6-954: Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of Defense<sup>1</sup>

SECRET

GENEVA, June 9, 1954—7 p. m.

Army Message Gento 53. Action Department of Defense and State Department; information USARMA's Paris, London and Saigon.

---

<sup>1</sup> Transmitted in two sections. Section two could not be located.

From US Defense representative Geneva. For Hensel from Sullivan. Following is summary French-VN military talks with Viet Minh 8 June reported to Defense representative by member French del:

1. Viet Minh representative was not prepared to specify areas in North Vietnam over which Viet Minh claim military superiority, as requested by French at previous days session, and urged French representative to give such information for all of Vietnam.

2. French representative acceded and described limits of all areas in Vietnam over which French claim their forces hold military superiority (French del contact reported that areas so described by French representative presented "optimistic" picture from their point of view and included territory which, in some cases, is "rotten" with Viet Minh infiltration. We will attempt to secure detailed information tomorrow on areas described).

3. Bulk of session devoted to lengthy exchanges of opposing views on validity French claims, each side using different criteria to determine what constitutes military supremacy over an area. Viet Minh representative stated he would present Viet Minh claims but did not say when.

4. French representative proposed text of joint telegram of instructions to be sent by both sides to their military commanders in Indochina, directing commanders to appoint liaison officers to make contact with view to meeting of delegations in the field. Meeting place for liaison officers suggested as one of the three places used in exchange of wounded POWs. French representative further proposed text of joint communiqué to be issued by military representatives Geneva, announcing this action. Viet Minh stated they would consider proposal and reply next meeting.

5. Comments:

(a) French del contact states French representative does not plan to engage in further dispute with Viet Minh over validity French area claims until Viet Minh describe areas over which they claim military superiority.

(b) Further stated French representative proposal for joint telegram to commanders designed to counter expected Viet Minh charge that French have not lived up to 29 May agreement to establish contact "on the spot". Viet Minh charge to this effect in fact was made by Dong (Viet Minh del) in 8 June Indochina Plenary (French del contact has said that military delegation is being assembled in Indochina, prepared to establish contact with Viet Minh when orders received to do so.) Bidault stated in reply to Dong that necessary instructions have been issued. Presumably this referred to preparatory arrangements only since authorization to meet with Viet Minh representatives in field apparently not issued.

(c) French del contact says his delegation feels orders for representatives opposing sides to meet in field must be in form of joint instructions arising from agreement reached at Geneva. Otherwise, attempts by commanders in field to make contacts under separate orders from their governments could create impression that new French Union Commander, General Ely, has been sent Indochina in role of supplicant for armistice.

---

751G.00/6-954 : Telegram

The Secretary of State to the United States Delegation<sup>1</sup>

TOP SECRET

WASHINGTON, June 9, 1954—7:56 p. m.

Tedul 180. Eyes only for the Under Secretary from the Secretary.

1. In relation to Dulte 162<sup>2</sup> you should explain that in our opinion the French confusion is due to the fact that they have allowed themselves to be confused by other than official statements of the U.S. Government position. This position was clearly set out, notably in Deptel 4023 to Paris, repeated Geneva Tedul 54,<sup>3</sup> and we have since clearly adhered to it subject to our clarification expressed in Deptel 4117 to Paris, repeated Geneva Tedul 78<sup>4</sup> to the effect that we could not allow the French to have a continuing option on the situation, and we have to take into account that with the passage of time and the increasing deterioration of the situation, what was possible at the time of our original proposal could become impossible.

As far as military talks are concerned, these do not involve political decisions which will be taken by the President. There could be military divergencies about the part which the different elements of the armed forces would play in the event that there was intervention. This sort of thing is normal among allies. Of course, if on the basis of collective action, we should get into the war, we would be in it all the way, and would do whatever seemed necessary to win the war. The question of what disposition of various forces would best serve this purpose is something that could only be determined at the time and in light of the situation as it developed, including the reaction if any, of the Chinese

---

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by the Secretary of State. Repeated to Paris eyes only for the Ambassador as telegram 4487.

In telegram Tedul 188, June 11, Acting Secretary of State Murphy informed Smith that Tedul 180 had been "personally dictated by Secretary and sent just before his departure. He had in mind our posture if we had to disengage." (110.11 DU/6-1154)

The Secretary of State was absent from the Department from June 9-12 to deliver speeches in several western U.S. cities.

<sup>2</sup> Dated June 9, p. 1086.

<sup>3</sup> Dated May 11; for text, see volume XIII.

<sup>4</sup> Dated May 17; for text, see ibid.

Communists who may themselves have a determining influence in this matter. On high authority we have told the French that if we participate we would expect our participation to be principally in the form of air and sea power but that this would not exclude the possibility of some land (marines) participation within the framework of agreed over-all military strategy. We cannot do more than that at this time and so indicated to Bonnet (Tedul 178<sup>5</sup>).

2. There is another important problem about which we must be thinking. This is how we shall avoid commitment to a settlement which would be quite contrary to our principles. Assume that the Soviet will want the eventual settlement to be "guaranteed" in some way by the principal powers, including the United States. This guarantee would presumably be designed to preclude any efforts on the part of the U.S. at the liberation of the peoples who were subject to captivity. This, on a small scale, would be what we have refused on many occasions to do in relation to Europe, where we have said we would never make a statement which would give the stamp of approval to the captivity of Eastern European peoples. We believe that a "guarantee" which committed the United States to sustain Communist domination of the peoples of Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia, or at least many of them would be unacceptable as cutting across our basic principles for dealing with the Communist world. We believe also it would be deeply resented by the American people and the Congress.

It occurs to us that one step to attenuate what might seem to be an abrupt position which could be interpreted as designed to sabotage the conference would be for you to show our basic instructions to you to Eden and Bidault so that they cannot claim to be taken by surprise if we subsequently adopt a program of disengagement from the result.<sup>6</sup> There might similarly be utility in showing them to Molotov. Before you show them to anyone (if you have not already done so), we would wish consider advisability modifications in light developments. Would appreciate your comments on this.

One thing we fear is that the Soviets might put up a proposal which would salvage a little something for the French, at least in form and make this contingent upon a guarantee by the U.S. If this guarantee was refused then our refusal would be cited by the Communists as an excuse for denying the French even the minimum of face-saving otherwise provided. If we fall into this trap, which is not easy to avoid, then that could be used to create strong anti-American feeling in France with very serious repercussions on our NATO alliance and EDC.

<sup>5</sup> Dated June 9, p. 1100.

<sup>6</sup> In telegram Tedul 177, June 9, Secretary Dulles asked Under Secretary Smith if he had "shown or read your formal instructions (Tosec 138) to any of your colleagues?" (110.11 DU/6-954) Smith replied in Dulte 168, June 10, that "formal instructions (Tosec 138) communicated to British and French colleagues." (110.11 DU/6-1054) In an additional reply, Dulte 177, June 13, Smith reported that his instructions "were discussed with Eden and Bidault in general terms which would not preclude their modification if desired. From my position they seem satisfactory and I have no changes to suggest." (110.11 DU/6-1354) For telegram Tosec 138, May 12, see p. 778.

We are giving these matters our careful consideration and suggest that you do the same and let us know if you have any inspiration. I would particularly like your comments on the various possibilities you may see for disengaging ourselves from any unsatisfactory settlement.

DULLES

---

396.1 GE/6-954 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET

GENEVA, June 9, 1954—10 p. m.

Secto 410. Repeated information London 261, Paris 408, Bangkok 20, USUN New York 14. Department pass USUN New York. I spoke to Eden this morning along lines Tosec 378.<sup>1</sup> He feels very strongly we must not complicate present situation in Geneva by insisting upon broadening Thailand appeal to Laos and Cambodia. He points out language Security Council draft resolution largely academic, as it will in any event be vetoed. Resolution can be written any way that appears desirable at time matter comes before General Assembly.

He will send instructions Dixon to try to work out with Lodge some language that would meet his point while not necessarily precluding POC operations outside Thailand.

Have not yet been able to see Prince Wan.

SMITH

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated June 8, p. 1081.

JUNE 10, 1954

396.1 GE/6-1054 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of Defense

SECRET

GENEVA, June 10, 1954—1 a. m.

Army Message Gento 54. Action Defense; repeated information USARMAs Paris, Saigon, London and Department State. From Defense representative Geneva. To Office Secretary of Defense, Washington for Hensel, State Department from Sullivan. Following is summary French-VN military talks with Viet Minh 9 June reported to Defense representative by member French delegation :

1. Viet Minh representative presented description areas in North Vietnam over which Viet Minh claim military superiority. French representative noted he had presented his position regarding areas throughout all Vietnam and insisted Viet Minh do same before discussions proceed to reconciliation conflicting positions. Viet Minh representative agreed.

2. Re Delta area, Viet Minh representative acknowledged French Union forces control only Hanoi and Haiphong proper, that all other parts Delta in contested status.

3. Comment: French del contact promised copy map showing areas claimed by both sides as soon as drawn up.

---

396.1 GE/6-1154 : Telegram

Smith-Dinh Meeting, Geneva, June 10, Morning: The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET

GENEVA, June 11, 1954—noon.

Secto 422. Repeated information Saigon 161, Paris 417. Vietnam Foreign Minister Dinh called yesterday morning to deliver a "message" from Bao Dai. The "message" was that Bao Dai felt that definite military measures should be undertaken without delay, for the accelerated formation and expansion on an autonomous basis of the Vietnamese National Army. His dilemma was that if he undertook such measures now he would be accused of war-mongering and of thwarting the efforts at Geneva to find a peaceful solution of the Vietnamese conflict. It would be difficult to launch such measures until he knew what the outcome of the Geneva Conference would be.

I replied that I saw no dilemma to hinder Bao Dai's taking such action while the Geneva Conference was still in progress. I fully agreed that the Vietnam National Army must have its own identity and felt sure that the French would agree to it but that was something that Bao Dai, as Commander-in-Chief of Vietnamese Forces, should take up personally with Pleven and perhaps Laniel. It would be well for him also to talk with Bidault. I remarked that O'Daniel had a plan for training four light divisions as a starter and when they were formed they could take the place in the lines of the Vietnamese battalions now integrated into the French Command. The latter could then be withdrawn and later be formed into divisions. I realized their lack of higher officers. They would have to use French staff officers at this stage and, of course, the National Army would be under the French High Command. Dinh said Bao Dai had instructed Buu Loc to take this matter up with Pleven but Buu Loc had had to return to Saigon before doing so.

I went on to say as a general proposition that when military crises occurred, the Commander-in-Chief should be on the ground. As I understood it, Bao Dai was Commander-in-Chief of the National Army just as our President, by constitutional right, was CIC of American armed forces.

Dinh said he understood no final decision had been taken on General O'Daniel's plan for a training mission and program for the Vietnam National Army. I agreed that final decision had not been taken but suggested that Bao Dai should take that matter up in his talk with Pleven. I said the fact that the independence treaty with France had only been initialed but not formally signed by the latter placed Vietnam and ourselves in a difficult situation. We felt the treaty should be signed and that Bao Dai should insist on the advantage to France and Vietnam of having the convention signed without further delay.

I said that I would be glad to talk again with Bao Dai if the latter so desired, and Dinh said he would urge him to come to the Geneva area.

Dinh raised the question of possibility of an early cease-fire which might be accompanied by a prohibition on arrivals of fresh troops and matériel. Such a provision would prevent the sending of an American training mission and equipment which the Vietnamese Army would require. I replied that a cease-fire on such lines might present certain but not insuperable difficulties. If a cease-fire were agreed upon it might be somewhat on the lines of the Korean arrangement which provided for the gradual withdrawal of foreign troops but allowed for their replacement by newly formed native divisions which would be entitled to bring in the necessary equipment.

After our talk, Heath asked Dinh the reason for the delay in concluding the negotiations for the supplementary financial, economic and cultural accords in Paris. Dinh replied that there had been some "foot dragging" on both sides but the delay was mainly due to the inexperience of the Vietnamese negotiators. Dinh said that if he and Dac Khe were not tied down in Geneva they could return to Paris and he thought, conclude the supplementary agreements within a week.

396.1 GE/6-1054

Prince Wan-Robertson-Bonsal Meeting, Geneva, June 10, 10:30 a. m.: Memorandum of Conversation, by the Adviser to the United States Delegation (Bonsal)<sup>1</sup>

SECRET

GENEVA, June 10, 1954.

Participants: Prince Wan, Leader of Thailand Delegation
Walter S. Robertson
Philip W. Bonsal

Subject: (a) Status of Thai application to UN;
(b) Plans for Korean Conference.

Mr. Robertson called on Prince Wan at 10:30 a. m. in order to discuss the status of the Thai application to the UN and particularly the date of the next Security Council meeting and the wording of the resolution to be presented. Mr. Robertson described to Prince Wan our recent talks with Chauvel and with Eden (see Sectos 398 and 410<sup>2</sup>).

Prince Wan expressed agreement that the meeting of the Security Council should not be delayed beyond Monday or Tuesday (June 15 or 16) and that the wording of the resolution should not be such as to preclude the proposed Peace Observation Commission from entering countries other than Thailand should this prove desirable at a later date and should the countries in question, (particularly Laos and Cambodia) extend an invitation to the Commission. Prince Wan was also in full agreement that Laos and Cambodia should, for the present, take no action with regard to or even notice of the Thai application to the UN. This would not, however, preclude Laos from following the example of Cambodia in placing before the UN the facts regarding the invasion of which Laos is currently the victim.

With reference to Korea, Mr. Robertson urged Prince Wan to make a statement at tomorrow's plenary. Although Prince Wan had been planning to make his statement at the next plenary after the one on June 11th, he agreed to take Mr. Robertson's suggestion. Prince Wan expressed agreement with Mr. Robertson regarding the importance of terminating the Korean phase of the conference without delay and of making clear that the termination results from an inability to agree on the UN issue and on the issue of truly free elections.

<sup>1</sup>The U.S. Delegation informed the Department of this discussion in telegram Secto 417, June 10, indicating that Prince Wan "fully agrees on desirability early Security Council meeting (not later than June 15 or 16) as well as view that wording of resolution should not preclude proposed POC from entering countries other than Thailand." (396.1 GE/6-1054)

<sup>2</sup>Telegram Secto 398, dated June 8, p. 1065; telegram Secto 410, dated June 9, p. 1105.

Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 285

*Memorandum by the Adviser to the United States Delegation
(Bonsal) to the Head of the Delegation (Smith)*

SECRET

GENEVA, June 10, 1954.

Subject: Meeting of the Six this morning.

1. M. Chauvel informed us that no one has so far indicated a desire to speak at the plenary this afternoon. Mr. Eden is ready with some remarks commenting on Chou En-lai's speech to the general effect that it represents in fact a step backward from points of agreement previously reached. The Cambodians are ready to make a few remarks on their particular problem. It was generally agreed of course that Mr. Molotov, Mr. Chou En-lai and Mr. Dong would probably have something to say although they have not yet indicated their intention to do so.

2. With regard to future plans, M. Chauvel indicated the desirability of proposing that the conference return to restricted sessions for the purpose of continuing the discussions of unagreed points relative to military matters and also of giving special attention to the problems of Cambodia and Laos. Mr. Eden will take this idea under advisement and may propose it this afternoon.

3. It was brought out that the Six are in full agreement that we should reject, at the present stage of our discussion of the conditions for a cessation of hostilities, any proposal for an early discussion of political questions.

---

Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 312

Memorandum by the Special Adviser to the United States Delegation (Reinhardt) to the Coordinator of the Delegation (Johnson)<sup>1</sup>

OFFICIAL USE ONLY

GENEVA, June 10, 1954.

Subject: Kingsbury Smith-Zhukov Conversation

Kingsbury Smith (INS) dined last night with Zhukov of Pravda. Smith gave me the following fill-in on their conversation:

1. Soviet attitude. When asked why Molotov had returned from Moscow with an apparently tougher line, Zhukov said that this was because the French were obviously stalling and trying to sabotage the Conference. For example, in the military talks, the only proposal which the French had put forward was the old Laniel proposal of

---

<sup>1</sup> Summary of discussion transmitted to the Department in telegram Secto 423, June 11. (396.1 GE/6-1154)

Heath in a note to Under Secretary Smith, attached to the source text, indicated that "you will find of interest the attached report."

March 5. This was obviously ridiculous because the situation had changed materially since that time.

2. Viet Minh proposal. Zhukov said that as a counterproposal, the Viet Minh would shortly put forward a plan to the military committee which would entail their retaining all of the Red River Delta except the Hanoi-Haiphong area. This proposal would be followed by one for the balance of Viet Nam. He gave the impression that the proposal which he described as generous would call in effect for a withdrawal of the French to the coastal regions where they would retain a sort of Hong Kong type of foothold. When Kingsbury Smith commented that this seemed to imply that the Viet Minh would retain all of the interior, Zhukov said that this could not be avoided under any circumstances.

3. Communist veto or unanimity principle. When asked whether the Communist side would freeze on the issue of retaining the veto power in any international control organization, or whether some kind of compromise might be possible, Zhukov said he thought that the unanimity rule might not have to apply in all cases. Certainly it would in such a matter as intervention by the guarantor states but he felt that the Conference by defining the various contingencies could establish same in which a two-thirds or even a simple majority vote might be acceptable.

4. General Smith's stay. Zhukov inquired more than once whether General Smith was going home shortly and seemed to show concern on this score. Kingsbury Smith replied that he of course did not know but would assume that the General would not stay on indefinitely in Geneva if no progress were made at the Conference. Zhukov said it was important to keep the Conference going. Molotov was confident that agreement could be reached at the Conference but it would take time. Zhukov said that no progress was likely until after the French governmental crisis had been brought to an end nor were serious negotiations possible until Bidault became convinced that the US was not going to intervene in Indochina.

5. General Smith dinner for Molotov. Zhukov asked whether General Smith had liked his dinner with Molotov and stressed its length. Kingsbury Smith replied that he didn't know and commented to me that it was quite evident that Zhukov would have been very interested to get a reply to this question.

6. European conference. When asked whether there was anything behind the rumors that the Soviet government would like to call another conference on European questions in the near future, Zhukov replied that they felt such a conference would not be useful until the current Asiatic problems had been settled.

7. Trade relations. Zhukov stated that one should attach great importance to the forthcoming visit of Chinese trade delegates to the United Kingdom. He said his government felt it was a shame that the US did not send businessmen to the Soviet Union.

---

751G.00/6-1054 : Telegram

The Chargé at Saigon (McClintock) to the Department of State

TOP SECRET

SAIGON, June 10, 1954—2 p. m.

2714. Repeated information Paris 967, Geneva 214. Paris for Ambassador. Geneva for Under Secretary. General Valluy's appreciation of the situation as set out Department telegram 2527, sent Geneva Tedul 171, repeated Paris 4448<sup>1</sup> is exceedingly good—in fact almost too good. Although there are one or two points to which we might take exception from purely military aspect, I desire to confine my comment to political connotations of Valluy's statement. I have impression that under instructions he made this very concise evaluation less with military considerations in mind than with political objectives in view. I think that Valluy was looking as much at the French Parliament as he was at the Tonkin delta when he made his speech. General Ely has twice in my presence stated that his keenest desire is for United States to enter this war. Only yesterday his Chief of Staff, Colonel Brohan, repeated this comment. My belief is that purpose of Valluy statement was either to bring us and, if possible, other five powers into conflict here or, failing that, to prepare excuse before history for an impending armistice which French would then request of Viet Minh.

McCLINTOCK

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated June 7, p. 1056.

---

396.1 GE/6-1054 : Telegram

*Seventh Plenary Session on Indochina, Geneva, June 10, 3:03 p. m.:
The United States Delegation to the Department of State*<sup>1</sup>

CONFIDENTIAL

GENEVA, June 10, 1954—11 p. m.

Secto 420. Repeated information Paris 416, Saigon 160, London 267, Tokyo 125, Phnom Penh 7, Vientiane 4, Moscow 115. Tokyo pass

---

<sup>1</sup> A set of minutes of this meeting (US Verb Min/7) is in Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 277. The minutes indicate that the meeting convened at 3:03 p. m. and adjourned at 7 p. m. The minutes are also printed in Conférence de Genève, pp. 265-290. The speeches of Eden and Molotov and an extract of Smith's speech are printed in Cmd. 9186, pp. 165-168. The speeches of Tep Phan, Eden, Pham Van Dong, and Molotov, Indochina Documents IC/26, IC/27, IC/28, and IC/29, respectively, June 10-12, are in Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 279A.

CINCFE. Department pass Defense. Seventh Indochina plenary Thursday, June 10, which Eden chaired opened with statement by Eden, as head UK delegation, in which he continued strong line taken in June 9 plenary. For text see Secto 419.<sup>2</sup>

Cambodian delegate was next speaker. In effort set record straight after distortions re Cambodia made by Communist delegates, Cambodian delegate reaffirmed his previous statements re separate nature of Cambodian problem, independence and sovereignty of Cambodia, and fact problem was solely one of armed invasion by Viet Minh. He attributed failure of Colombo powers to recognize Cambodia to their lack of knowledge of situation and expressed hope they would recognize Cambodia as soon as they become acquainted with treaties recently concluded with France. Saying that political problem as regards Cambodia does not exist and that nothing stands in way of conference examining military problem there, he proposed that conference devote its next meeting to Cambodian question, examining four-point proposal he introduced June 8. Endorsed Eden's remarks re Cambodia.

Dong, Viet Minh delegate, followed with very long, intemperate, discursive tirade attacking Cambodia, Laos and "Bao Dai regime", French colonialism and foreign imperialism in familiar Communist language. Dong concluded with statement in support of proposal made at earlier session by Molotov and seconded by Chou that French and Viet Minh should begin separate discussions of political questions simultaneously with the military talks now in progress.

After recess Cambodian delegate replied briefly to inaccurate statements made by Pham Van Dong re Cambodia and reserved right reply in more detail later.

Next speaker was Molotov, who in medium-length speech including little, if any, substance, accused both France and US of being responsible for delay in achieving peace in Indochina, said only Viet Minh was for free elections in Vietnam, etc. In repeating previous charges that governments of Associated States were not independent Molotov again referred to "numerous" official US statements urging France to grant them greater degree of independence. Molotov also replied briefly and rather weakly to statements United States delegate made June 9 re Soviet policy toward smaller nations, asked for US statement of policy toward efforts achieve peaceful settlement in Indochina and once more emphasized inter-connection political and military elements in Indochinese solution. He stated that conference would be performing its duty if it prevented any attempts to enlarge war in Indochina. Molotov concluded speech with cloudy remark (probably intended as rebuke to Eden) that if Eden's statement of today had contributed to efforts restore peace in Indochina, it would have been contribution to work of conference.

---

<sup>2</sup> Infra.

The Laotian delegate spoke next and in short, dignified and effective statement said that much had been said about the situation that exists in Laos. He asserted that Laos is an independent country and has nothing more to desire in this connection. He referred to Dong's allegation that Laotian independence exists only on paper and that country is dominated by French. Since Dong has his own ideas about this question, the Laotian delegate suggested that the conference set up a commission to go to Laos to determine whose version of Laotian independence is correct and proposed that Dong go along and learn more about a country he does not know.

The Vietnamese delegate then took the floor and deplored that differences of opinion had to be aired between children of same nation while an atrocious war was in progress. He then spoke briefly to refute Molotov's earlier statement that only the Viet Minh propose free general elections in Vietnam. He said this was in error for the Vietnamese delegate also proposed free elections with the significant difference that such elections should be accompanied by international supervision whereas the Viet Minh proposal included no such supervision. He concluded by making reference to the treaty initialed between France and Vietnam, stating that Vietnamese were proud of it and that it served the people well.

General Smith then made following statement :

"I must correct my friend Mr. Molotov in the interest of accuracy. The United States delegation at this conference has repeatedly stated that it accepts and recognizes the independence and sovereignty of the states of Laos, Cambodia and Vietnam. The US maintains a senior diplomatic representative with these independent states, who is here presently. The US delegation has also stated repeatedly that to enable Laos and Cambodia completely to enjoy their sovereignty and independence in peace, it is only necessary for the invading forces of Viet Minh to withdraw from their territories. Admittedly, the problem of restoration of peace in the state of Vietnam presents greater problems, but they are not involved with matters of the sovereignty and independence of that state, which as I said, we fully recognize.

"With regard to our different opinions on matters of history, I leave the judgment to our colleagues. The policy of the US with regard to the establishment of peace in Indochina, about which Mr. Molotov asks is, on basic issues identical with that outlined at the beginning of our session by the representative of the United Kingdom, with which statement the US delegation associates itself completely."

Prior to adjournment, Eden noted that there will be a Korea plenary tomorrow and that the two chairmen would arrange for the next session on Indochina.

Comments:

Eden's remarks to effect that in crossing Laotian and Cambodian borders Viet Minh forces had crossed frontier between Chinese and Indian cultures is of interest as possibly reflecting Nehru's views.

Communist speeches today probably intended for effect on French political situation as well as strictly stalling purposes. Member French delegation interpreted them as attempt put French delegation in position of having to defend Bao Dai (who is very unpopular with certain sections French population) publicly and thus leaving Communists free to charge that failure of conference to make progress is due to French Government's support of "rotten Bao Dai regime".

SMITH

396.1 GE/6-1054 : Telegram

*Seventh Plenary Session on Indochina, Geneva, June 10, 3:03 p. m.:
The United States Delegation to the Department of State*

GENEVA, June 10, 1954.

Secto 419. Department pass Defense; Tokyo for CINCFE. Repeated information Paris 415, Moscow 11, Saigon 159, London 266, Tokyo 124, Phnom Penh 6, Vientiane 3. Following is verbatim text Eden statement made in Indochina plenary 10 June.<sup>1</sup>

"The last 2 days of public discussion have certainly clarified our differences. I fear that they have also deepened them. I say this with infinite regret, but it is our stern duty to face realities. As a result of the progress we have admittedly made on questions of procedure, our work now seems to me to fall into 3 main chapters. Let us see where we are in each.

We are agreed that the cessation of hostilities should be simultaneous, and we have also accepted that its examination should begin with Vietnam. Representatives of the 2 commands are now meeting. We are all glad of this. We hope that we may now learn the outcome of their discussions.

Next comes the issue of supervision. We are all agreed that some form of international supervision is necessary. We are not agreed as to how to make it effective and impartial.

Let us first consider the membership of the international commission. I have stated the proposals of HMG on this. We do not think any the worse [of] them because they have been ignored by certain delegations. We stand by them. I repeat that I have proposed this group of 5 Asian powers because they are truly impartial. I am convinced that a group of 4 powers, 2 supporting the views of either side, can only lead to deadlock. My reason for refusing to accept such a proposal is not ideological. It is simply that it wouldn't work.

<sup>1</sup> In telegram Dulte 170, June 11, the U.S. Delegation informed the Department of State that "Eden is planning to see Molotov tomorrow regard to Indochina. I understand he plans reiterate position he took speech at plenary yesterday and attempt obtain from Molotov some indication of where Molotov thinks conference goes from here." (110.11 DU/6-1154)

As to the working of such a commission as we propose, it will clearly be the desire of the impartial powers, if they be chosen, to try to reach agreement among themselves on every issue that comes before them. But if they fail to do so, they must have the right to decide by a majority. There can be no power of veto. May I remind our critics on this point that to insist on unanimity is to declare that you have no confidence in impartiality. The international commission must, therefore, be truly impartial, and must have the power to decide by majority. We, for our part, are firmly convinced that the representation of India and Pakistan, Ceylon, Burma and Indonesia would form a just and impartial commission.

Now what of the relations of this international commission with the mixed committees representative of the 2 commands? There is no dispute that the latter could do useful work in Vietnam. On the other hand, it has been admitted that even with the best will in the world, the 2 sides cannot be expected after 8 years of war to agree on every point. The warning of the representative of the State of Vietnam about the experiences of 1946 should not be forgotten by the conference.

No one, therefore, attempts to deny that there will be differences, and they may well be frequent. How are they to be resolved? This is surely where the international commission will have its part to play. No doubt it will always seek to reconcile these differences. But it will not always succeed. In the event of failure, the international commission must have the authority to decide. There is no other way.

The conference has a clear choice, and we should face it. Either we can set up a commission which is as impartial as we can make it, and give it the necessary authority and the power to take its decisions by a majority if need be, each of us trusting in its good faith, or we can at each phase interpose a veto, as some delegations proposed. According to them, this veto might first be used in the mixed committees themselves. It could next be used in the international commission. It might even be used once again if in the last resort a question was referred to representatives of this conference. This issue of effective and impartial international supervision seems to me to be crucial. I am sorry to have to record that after the debate of the last 2 days we are in my judgment further apart than ever upon it.

I come now to the third of the main issues which I wish to discuss—the future of Laos and Cambodia. There is no dispute that it is our duty to examine measures to restore peace in Laos and Cambodia, as in Vietnam; there is dispute as to what those measures should be. Reference has been made here to the existence of resistance armies in Laos and Cambodia, and to the fact that there are 2 belligerent sides in all 3 states—Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia. This does not accord with the information which we have from our representatives on the spot. I think it my duty to give this in all good faith to the conference.

Laos was first invaded by regular Viet Minh forces in April 1953. These forces came from northern Vietnam. They advanced to within 12 miles of the capital before they were defeated and driven back to the frontier area in northeastern Laos, where they have since remained.

In December, 1953, a further invasion took place. Regular Viet Minh troops advanced from the Vietnam border into central Laos. They were again driven back. But there are still many Viet Minh troops in the border areas of Laos. These are regular battalions belonging to Viet Minh divisions with their headquarters in Vietnam. Some of them have heavy weapons, including artillery and anti-aircraft guns. These regular Viet Minh units cannot be described as resistance movements.

On April 17, the Laotian Government formally notified HMG and other friendly governments of the violation of their frontiers by the Viet Minh. On December 25, the Laotian Prime Minister appealed to world opinion against renewed aggression by regular units of the Viet Minh corps of battle.

Cambodia was invaded in April 1954. This was on the eve of this conference, and several weeks after we had agreed in Berlin to meet here to discuss the restoration of peace in Indochina. Once again the invaders were regular Viet Minh troops who crossed the border from Vietnam. They did not come to fight the French. These foreign invaders have in fact merely terrorized and battered on the people of Cambodia. They hold no centre of any importance. On April 23 of this year, a formal protest by the Cambodian Government against Viet Minh invasion was delivered to the Secretary General of the United Nations.

The Laotian and Cambodian delegates have already told us the history of the resistance movements in their countries. No one denies that there have been such movements in the past. But with unimportant exceptions, the former members of these movements have now rallied to the support of the legitimate governments of Laos and Cambodia. Armed resistance now derives overwhelmingly from the Viet Minh. It is only since this conference was announced that even Communist spokesmen have pretended anything else.

Viet Minh aggression is not the only factor that distinguishes the problems of Laos and Cambodia from those of Vietnam. In race, religion, language and culture, the peoples of these 2 countries are fundamentally different from those of Vietnam. The Viet Minh invaders not only crossed a political boundary, they crossed the frontier that divides the 2 great cultures of Asia—the Indian and the Chinese. The Viet Minh delegate attempted to excuse this action by saying that there were Vietnamese minorities in Laos and Cambodia. That is true, but it no more justifies Viet Minh invasion of Laos and Cambodia than it justified Hitler's invasion of Czechoslovakia. It is also true that in recent years, the 3 different peoples of Indochina were united under French rule. That is no reason why they should now be united against their wishes under the rule of the Viet Minh.

To sum up, I repeat that there are now 3 chapters to our work. Military talks between representatives of the 2 commands are proceeding. As I have said, we await a report upon these. In respect, however, to the arrangements for supervision, and the future of Laos and Cambodia, the divergencies are at present wide and deep. Unless we can narrow them now without further delay, we shall have failed in our task. We have exhausted every expedient of procedure which we could devise to assist us in our work. We all know now what the differences are.

We have no choice but to resolve them or to admit our failure. For our part, the United Kingdom delegation is still willing to attempt to resolve them, here or in restricted session, or by any other method which our colleagues may prefer. But if the positions remain as they are today, then it is our clear duty to say so [to] the world, and to admit that we have failed.”

SMITH

110.11 DU/6-1054 : Telegram

The Secretary of State to the Department of State

TOP SECRET

SAN FRANCISCO, June 10, 1954—6 p. m.

LIMITED DISTRIBUTION

1. The following my comments on Under Secretary's Dulte 164 repeated as Number 2 from Department.<sup>1</sup>

1. I agree that Geneva is getting us nowhere on Indochina except backwards. The pendency of negotiations leads to delaying vital decisions on our side while the Communists pursue actively and vigorously their program of action in Indochina. I had hoped that we too might have had a program of action while Geneva was going on, but this the British rejected. The sooner the British get into a mood where we can seriously talk with them about collective action the better off we shall be. I agree with the issues he names but I could not agree that they are necessarily the only public issues on which we would break. For example, I feel that there has been a general lack of good faith and a use of Geneva as a cover to promote Communist aggression.

2. I have no particular opinion about Eden seeing Molotov again. Also I am quite sure that this action in that respect will not be influenced by either your opinion or mine. I concede that there is some advantage in getting a better understanding by India and Burma provided this is not at the expense of alienating Korea, Formosa, the Philippines and Thailand. I know that the British look upon the former as their particular friends and the latter as our friends. But apart from this difference, the latter group are willing and able to fight and that is an element which I fear is conspicuously lacking in the former group.

<sup>1</sup> Dated June 9, p. 1083. The Secretary's comments were repeated to Under Secretary Smith in Geneva as telegram Tedul 185, June 11. (790.5/6-1154)

In telegram Tedul 183, June 10, Acting Secretary of State Murphy informed Smith that he had "forwarded your Dulte 164 to the Secretary and he is thinking about it. I doubt that any substantive comments can be forthcoming before his return Saturday [June 12] when we will know outcome French confidence vote, but we will of course send you comments just as soon as we can." (751G.00/6-954)

3. I hesitate to make a firm decision now about Cambodia and Laos until we know what will be the policy toward Vietnam. A program for Laos and Cambodia, excluding Vietnam, will almost surely be interpreted in Vietnam and elsewhere as its total abandonment, and until we see no alternative to such abandonment, I would not want to promote it by UN action on behalf of Cambodia and Laos alone.

4. With reference to the Thai application, I agree that it should not expressly include neighboring ARMAs, but also I agree that it should not expressly exclude POC operations outside of Thailand.

5. With reference to Commonwealth withdrawal from Korea, this is partly a military problem, but even more a political and psychological problem. We are going to have a hard time restraining Rhee from open military action following the termination of the Korean phase of the Geneva Conference. Until we have lived through the immediate crisis which I think will follow the termination of Korean talks in Geneva I would prefer to avoid adding any elements which he can seize on as a further excuse for independent action.

6. I do not agree that nothing can be salvaged from Vietnam. That very largely depends upon the UK itself. I feel confident that the Communists are prepared to stop wherever we are prepared to stand. However, that stand must be a united one to be effective, and the one element so far conspicuously lacking in that unity is the UK.

7. On the question of what we and UK do if France insists on continuing negotiations after we believe they have collapsed, I believe answer would be to reduce our delegations in stature. I believe, for example, you should then return, perhaps leaving Robertson in charge, and that there should be corresponding action by UK. If this happened and then we began the united-front talks which we had planned for early April, that in my opinion would prevent French continuance at Geneva from thwarting all our plans.

8. As regards internationalization, it should be made clear to the French that our offer does not indefinitely lie on the table to be picked up by them one minute before midnight. As we instructed Dillon to tell Laniel, our offer was made in the light of conditions at the time, and conditions could so deteriorate that no point intervention could be successful. The French cannot permit Geneva to be dragged out indefinitely while the situation in Indochina deteriorates and then at same time at sometime in July expect our position to be precisely as it was in April. I believe we should begin to think of putting a time limit on our intervention offer.

110.11 DU/6-1054 : Telegram

The Acting Secretary of State to the Secretary of State, at Seattle<sup>1</sup>

TOP SECRET

WASHINGTON, June 10, 1054—7:18 p. m.

07. For the Secretary from Murphy. Re our telephone conversation this afternoon.<sup>2</sup> The evolution in Eden's thinking (assuming it is supported by British Cabinet) as set forth in Dulte 164<sup>3</sup> could be very significant and radically change our tactical possibilities both in Geneva and indeed with respect to Southeast Asia. I think generally we would agree with Eden's analysis and with Bedell's comments thereon. In his comments Bedell has pointed out some very knotty questions. One is what we and the U.K. (on the assumption that the U.K. will go along with Eden's views) should do if France insists on continuing the negotiations when the U.K. and ourselves feel that the time to break has come. If we act with the British, other Europeans may go along with us and although the French can be expected to react strongly, at least the full brunt of the blame will not rest uniquely on the U.S.

I do not think that we should send any reply to Dulte 164 until after your return on Saturday when we should know the outcome of the French Assembly's vote of confidence. If the Laniel Government falls, we will obviously be faced with a different situation. But in any event Dulte 164 raises such important basic issues that I do not think we should rush a reply until we have assessed carefully the possibilities and the corresponding tactics. This I believe we will only be able really to do following your return and in light of the French Assembly vote.

In the meantime, we shall try our best to have some thoughts to go over with you on Saturday.

MURPHY

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by MacArthur.<sup>2</sup> Memorandum of telephone conversation between Secretary Dulles and Murphy, June 10, 12:15 p. m., not printed. (Eisenhower Library, Dulles papers)<sup>3</sup> Dated June 9, p. 1083.

JUNE 11, 1954

Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 303

Memorandum by the Special Adviser to the United States Delegation (Page) to the Coordinator of the Delegation (Johnson)

TOP SECRET

GENEVA, June 11, 1954.

I saw Laloy this morning. He stated that he had not yet seen Mr. Bidault who had just returned and who was going back to Paris this evening. Bidault will attend the Korean Plenary this afternoon and I suggested that it might be a good idea if he and the General could get together for a few minutes during the intermission.

It seems that the French delegation took a very dim view of yesterday's Plenary and believed it represented even a further hardening of Communist position. What seems to distress them the most is the Communist proposal, made by Dong and strongly supported by Molotov, that bilateral political talks be carried on between the French and the Vietminhese parallel with the military talks. He felt that this proposal might also be an attempt to influence French public opinion, for if turned down by Bidault, segments of French foreign opinion would say that Bidault was not taking every opportunity to arrive at a peace in Indochina and was still backing up Bao Dai. So far as Laloy was aware, the French would continue to adhere to their position that a cease-fire must be agreed upon before political discussions were initiated. He had no other views on the Indochinese phase of the Conference or of the termination of the Conference saying that so much depended upon action in Paris tomorrow. He was inclined to think that the French Government would fall, but that a new government could be formed without Laniel and Pleven, "the two enemies of the people," possibly headed by Faure.

---

751G.00/6-1154 : Telegram

The Chargé in India (Mills) to the Department of State

SECRET

NEW DELHI, June 11, 1954—3 p. m.

1804. Repeated information Geneva 27, London 340. Acting UK HICOM Middleton gave me following strictly confidential report on Nehru-Casey meetings yesterday June 10. Casey reportedly told Nehru that Australia had a special relationship with US through ANZUS which was very important to his country because of geographic situation but in no sense made Australia a satellite of US. Nehru indicated understanding. Casey then said Hanoi could only hold out for few weeks, fate of Vietnam as a whole in jeopardy, and essential that Laos and Cambodia be treated separately from Vietnam. Nehru indicated no objection to this proposition. Casey then brought up proposal that Colombo conference countries serve on supervisory commission. Nehru became evasive and stated he could not comment on this because no invitation had been extended. Casey reportedly gained impression current Nehru policy unclear but apparently intent on "dis-aligning" India from any halfway agreement to take responsibility in Indochina. Sudden departure of Krishna Menon from Geneva may mean Indians realize Geneva about to fold up and Menon and India wish to avoid any connection with this development.

Pillai, as well as Nehru, appears to Middleton to be rapidly back-tracking. On arrival of Casey at airport June 10, Pillai told Middleton he hoped latter had not reported to London on his purely personal and preliminary views re Colombo countries as cease-fire supervisors. He had indicated many days ago that idea was an interesting one, although in subsequent discussion he had questioned having Pakistan on such a commission since its neutrality could be considered doubtful. Apparently this attitude towards Pakistan had also been raised by Menon in Geneva. Later yesterday, June 10, Middleton found Pillai had clammed up completely.

Comment: Middleton asked me to use his comments with care since it is embarrassing when he receives cables telling him he has talked too freely with American Embassy.

I saw Middleton today after he had met with Casey and Canadian and Australian HICOM's, and his comments probably represent consensus their views. Nehru's evasive comment on Colombo countries as supervisors obviously was begging the question as special correspondents at Geneva in stories published in New Delhi press yesterday and today have shifted abruptly from eulogies of Eden to attacking him as having given way to US pressures. Middleton considers this abrupt change probably result of "guidance" by Krishna Menon. If Indochina discussions at Geneva now end in failure, it more than likely that blame will be attributed to West by Indian press.

MILLS

---

396.1 GE/6-1154: Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET

GENEVA, June 11, 1954—9 p. m.

Secto 425. Repeated information Paris 420, Saigon 163. A delegation of North Vietnamese nationalists, after a three days pow-wow with Bao Dai, have been here in Geneva for two days and are returning next week to Vietnam. The group consists of Le Toan, Pham Huu Chuong, Tran Trungdung, Nguyen Thuc, Nguyen Tienny, Le Quang Luat. Foreign Minister Dinh had me to dinner with them last night.

The apparent leader of the group was Le Toan but the most active and voluble was Dr. Chuong.

In talking with them last night I told them I thought the elements necessary to improve the cause of Vietnam would be formal signature of the independence treaty, more autonomy or separate identity for the Vietnamese national army (on which the group was insistent) and leadership.

Chuong, accompanied by Hy, called on Heath this morning. Chuong said that Bao Dai had finally agreed to set up in the immediate future, a new government of national unity and under "honest and dedicated" prime minister whose name, however, Chuong did not divulge. He will perhaps be Ngo Dinh Diem. Chuong said that Bao Dai was less interested in signing the treaties than in obtaining agreement from the French that the Vietnamese command would enjoy a definite consultative voice in French military planning and decisions. Chuong said a written proposal for such an arrangement had been tentatively presented by the Vietnamese military but had been rejected by the French high command. Chuong said Bao Dai would not return to Vietnam until he had such an agreement. Heath replied that we could not comment on the proposal until we saw a copy of it but he was of the opinion that the French would not reject any reasonable proposal. If Bao Dai felt strongly about it why did not he go immediately to Paris and take it up with Plevin? Heath went on to say that he understood consultative arrangements between the Vietnamese and French staffs were already in existence adding that formal arrangements were less important than having Vietnamese defense teams with the necessary will and the military knowledge to insure a hearing by the French high command. He added that after Bao Dai's presentation of his request to Plevin he saw every reason why Bao Dai should return promptly his Vietnam.

Chuong then outlined a project of his group which was the formation of an underground guerrilla force which would infiltrate present Viet Minh territory and operate a stay-behind resistance in any new territory acquired by the Viet Minh. He asked whether American arms and equipment would be available to such a group. He was told no reply could be made in advance of a definite Vietnamese Government request and convincing plan for such operations.

Heath said he had, of course, no criticism to make of the present government or any suggestions about government changes but it was clear that immediate effective and determined governmental performance was vitally necessary in Vietnam. Certainly one element in the hesitancy of friendly nations towards extending assistance to Vietnam was their doubt that there existed an effective cohesive movement determined to fight for the territorial integrity of that country. There was no time to be lost in proving to world opinion that such a movement did exist in Vietnam.

110.11 DU/6-1154 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET

GENEVA, June 11, 1954—10 p. m.

Dulte 172. Repeated information Saigon 162, Paris 419. Re Tedul 159<sup>1</sup> and Secto 422.<sup>2</sup> In view of the deteriorating situation in Indochina and Frederic-Du Pont's statement, with which I agree, that Bao Dai's staying on in France intensifies highly adverse French opinion of him (Secto 389, June 5<sup>3</sup>), I believe if Bao Dai does not come to Annecy or Evian in the immediate future where I can talk with him personally, that Heath might see him in Cannes.<sup>4</sup>

While I would raise the question of a consultative-constituent assembly suggested in Tedul 110, May 22<sup>5</sup> and would draw him out, as suggested in Tedul 159, as to what the French could do to establish conviction in the Vietnamese people to fight for independence and how a more effective government can be established, my main theme would be to impress on him the necessity of his immediate return to his country to see that necessary political and military reform measures were undertaken with maximum determination.

I would expect him to press for assurance that America would back his government with arms and financial aid whether or not the French stayed in. In this case I would remind him of the important aid which Vietnam had received and is receiving and our continuing efforts to promote united action in the area, but I would definitely refuse to give him any assurance that his government will be backed by US.<sup>6</sup> I would remind him, however, of what you said when his Foreign Minister called on you, "that any nation determined to fight on to preserve its independence would find friends and allies but would find none if there was no will to continue the struggle". (Dulte 50, May 4<sup>7</sup>).

SMITH

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated June 5, p. 1044.

<sup>2</sup> Dated June 11, p. 1106.

<sup>3</sup> Telegram Secto 389, not printed, transmitted a report on a meeting of Heath and Frederic-Dupont. For a memorandum of that conversation, see p. 1041.

<sup>4</sup> The Department of State instructed the U.S. Delegation in telegram Tedul 190, June 12 as follows: "During present French governmental crisis, and pending a decision as to what we may be able to do in Indochina, I think it just as well that you should not seek an interview with Bao Dai. If he should ask to see you, however, we shall consider together at that time what you could most appropriately say to him." (110.11 DU/6-1154)

<sup>5</sup> Ante, p. 892.

<sup>6</sup> At his news conference of June 10, President Eisenhower indicated that he did not intend to request special authority to take action in Indochina from Congress before it recessed for the summer. For the record of the news conference, see Public Papers of the Presidents of the United States: Dwight D. Eisenhower, 1954, pp. 545-554.

<sup>7</sup> Ante, p. 666.

JUNE 12, 1954

110.11 DU/6-1354 : Telegram

Smith-Eden Meeting, Geneva, June 12, Morning: The United States Delegation to the Department of State<sup>1</sup>

SECRET      PRIORITY

GENEVA, June 13, 1954—noon.

Dulte 176. Repeated information Moscow 119, London 273, Paris 425. Limit distribution. Eden came to see me immediately following his talk with Molotov yesterday morning on Indochina. Eden said Molotov agreed with his analysis of the three fundamental issues facing the conference: That is; (1) separate treatment of Laos and Cambodia, (2) functions and powers impartial supervisory organization, (3) composition impartial supervisory organization.

With respect to the first, in reply to Eden's statement that the Vietminh invaders must withdraw, Molotov suggested that "we go on thinking about it". Molotov then went on to suggest that some "neutral formula" be found under which military staff talks on Laos and Cambodia could be gotten under way. Although neither Molotov nor British mentioned or discussed any specific form of words, Eden gained impression that Molotov had in mind a proposal to general effect that "military talks be held between the staffs in order to deal with disposition of forces in Laos and Cambodia with view to preparing a cessation of hostilities". Eden pointed out very doubtful such a formula would accomplish anything, as Laos and Cambodia would immediately demand formula be interpreted as calling for withdrawal of Vietminh forces, and Vietminh would make opposite interpretation. Eden said he thought it important any formula arrived at make specific that military staff discussions would be with regard withdrawal Vietminh forces but could obtain no commitment from Molotov along this line. Eden stated he was not sure whether Molotov's apparent attempt to find formula get separate staff talks going Laos and Cambodia was a face-saving gesture to cover Vietminh withdrawal or stalling device, but was inclined toward latter view. However, felt he must pass on to us, as well as France, Laos and Cambodia. He was to see them yesterday afternoon. Both of us felt they would also reject. In this event, he plans again see Molotov, probably today (he said he hoped for last time) and pass rejection on to him.

On political side Molotov stated they wanted elections in all three of the Associated States. Eden said he recalled that Laotians had expressed willingness hold elections under UN supervision following withdrawal Vietminh forces, but apparently not much discussion on this point.

<sup>1</sup> For a further report on this meeting, see telegram Dulte 178, June 13, p. 1130.

Respect composition and operation supervisory commission, Molotov said that he was not necessarily opposed to having majority decisions some questions, but remained firm on 50-50 composition. He rejected Eden's suggestion of each side adding one to the five Colombo powers. Molotov suggested conference might begin examination categories of questions upon which majority vote and unanimous vote of supervisory organization would be required. Eden rejected pointing out impracticability and lack of real distinction between majority and unanimous vote with 50-50 composition. Eden said Molotov mentioned published reports India would refuse to serve with Pakistan. (Eden said to us with some bitterness this reflected Menon's activities.)

Molotov asked Eden for another Indochina plenary Monday suggesting might return to restricted sessions after that. Eden demurred, pointing out futility of sessions under present conditions, but Molotov was insistent. I said if session held would plan to make statement. We discussed without conclusion having Laos and Cambodia at Monday's session<sup>2</sup> indicate that as they had been unable to obtain any results at conference, were bringing their case before UN.

SMITH

---

<sup>2</sup> June 14.

---

Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 252 : Telegram

The Secretary of State to the United States Delegation<sup>1</sup>

SECRET

WASHINGTON, June 12, 1954—1 p. m.

Tosec 406. It seems clear from Canberra's 290 rptd Tosec 371,<sup>2</sup> other messages from Peaslee and talks here with Spencer that Australians are convinced of the need for developing collective arrangements for Southeast Asia area. With recent development in Eden's position, it should be easier for Australia and New Zealand to assist in carrying project forward and I am sure Casey's return to Geneva will give you opportunity to enlist his aid. I understand he plans return home via Washington and in your discretion tell him I am delighted he plans stop in Washington and will look forward to opportunity of good discussions with him. Suggest to him that he let me know his plans as soon as they are firm.

DULLES

---

<sup>1</sup> Repeated to Canberra as telegram 246.

<sup>2</sup> Dated June 8. p. 1062.

396.1 GE/6-1254 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

TOP SECRET

GENEVA, June 12, 1954—1 p. m.

Dulte 173. Repeated information Paris 422, Moscow 118, London 271. Limit distribution. Last evening Bidault informed me French officer had contacted alone Viet Minh officer who said Viet Minh would demand Tonkin, and would be disposed to be "generous" in the south. He continued he did not like present military situation in delta where Viet Minh much stronger and thinking aloud wondered whether it might not be wiser to give up entire area through negotiation than lose it militarily once it had been determined French could not hold out. Thus it might be possible evacuate French and Vietnamese forces. Said in any event he would consult French military authority.

I outlined to him Zhukov's remarks to Kingsbury-Smith (reference Secto 423, repeated information Paris 418, Moscow 116, London 268),<sup>1</sup> saying that Zhukov was sometimes rather reliable but that I doubted Viet Minh would offer Hanoi and Haiphong, although this might be their final selling price for most of interior.

SMITH

---

<sup>1</sup> Telegram Secto 423, June 11, not printed, transmitted a summary of the Zhukov-Kingsbury Smith conversation to the Department. (396.1 GE/6-1154) For a memorandum of the conversation, dated June 10, see p. 1109.

751G.00/6-1254 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

TOP SECRET

GENEVA, June 12, 1954—2 p. m.

Dulte 174. Pass Defense. Reference Tosec 392.<sup>1</sup> I note with concern decision to withhold US commitment regarding US training Vietnamese troops. I fully appreciate desirability concluding complete agreement with French on overall operational plan for US participation in Indochina conflict. However, irrespective of such agreement, I sincerely hope and strongly recommend that decision regarding US training mission will be reconsidered for following reasons:

(a) Negotiations at Geneva on Indochina reaching a stage where any indication of US support has effect of strengthening the French position. Decision on training Vietnamese troops would have particularly desirable effect, since it is positive action which can readily be taken during course of conference.

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated June 10; see volume XIII.

(b) French military discussions with Viet Minh at Geneva have made no appreciable progress. French military representatives have indicated on several occasions to Defense representatives at Geneva necessity of action by the US. Commitment of training mission would even without commitment US intervention, lend support to French military in their negotiations at Geneva.

(c) As I have pointed out, if there is a settlement at Geneva under present conditions it will probably result in partition of Indochina, no matter what it is called. This would result in loss of part of Vietnam. How much of Vietnam is actually lost may depend on our decisions in connection with helping to create and train a Vietnamese national defense force. Action would have to be taken, even if this undesirable type of settlement should be made, to strengthen Vietnamese forces to defend remainder of area. In my view US training mission under these conditions would still be desirable.

(d) Thursday night at Vietnamese dinner I had discussion with group of nationalist Vietnamese leaders who were formerly associated with the Viet Minh. They are sure to attempt to persuade Vietnamese to continue the struggle and have indicated their willingness to lend all possible support. As conditions they have mentioned specifically conclusion of a treaty and establishment of a national Vietnamese army. They further indicated that, as undesirable as it would be, partition would be better than a coalition government with the Viet Minh which would inevitably lead to Communist control of all of Vietnam. I have no way of estimating the determination and strength of these Vietnamese leaders; however, believe it an encouraging sign. US action on training Vietnamese forces would assist in bolstering resistance among Vietnamese as well as French to unsatisfactory settlement.

(e) Inasmuch as we have long discussed possibility of training of Vietnamese forces, prior to any discussion of intervention, consider that it would logically be handled separately from question of US military participation in Indochina conflict.

If the decision not to train Vietnamese forces apart from an overall operational plan stands, I strongly recommend that every effort be made to expedite conclusion of final agreement with French if situation in Indochina is not to deteriorate to a point where the entire area is in danger of falling to the Communists.

Since drafting the above message I have seen Dillon's 4812<sup>2</sup> in which I fully concur.

SMITH

---

<sup>2</sup> In telegram 4812 from Paris, June 11, Ambassador Dillon recommended that if the United States was no longer interested in helping with the training of the Vietnamese army except in the framework of united military action in Indochina, the United States should promptly inform the French in order to avoid future misunderstanding. (751G.00/6-1154) For the full text of telegram 4812, see volume XIII.

110.11 DU/6-1254 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET

GENEVA, June 12, 1954—4 p. m.

Dulte 175. Repeated information Paris 423. Gromyko told me yesterday Communists could not accept Colombo Powers for Indo-chinese Supervisory Commission. He asked what was "minimum" US position. I reaffirmed that US could not accept "50-50" composition, that Laos and Cambodia must be treated separately, and that we could not associate ourselves with any form of capitulation on principle in Indochina.

SMITH

---

Editorial Note

On June 12, the government of Joseph Laniel was defeated in the National Assembly on the issue of Indochina by a vote of 306 to 293. The government resigned the following day. In despatch 3373 from Paris, June 30, the Embassy transmitted a detailed analysis of the debates leading to the fall of the Laniel government. (751G.00/6-3054)

On June 17, Pierre Mendès-France was elected Premier of France by the National Assembly. The vote was 419 to 47 with a large number of abstentions. In his statement of policy delivered prior to the vote, Mendès-France undertook to resign if he were unable to obtain a cease-fire in Indochina on reasonable terms by July 20.

Mendès-France formally took office on June 18. He also assumed the position of Minister for Foreign Affairs.

JUNE 13, 1954

Conference files, lot 60 D 627. CF 322

Memorandum by Richard V. Hennes to the Head of the United States Delegation (Smith)

CONFIDENTIAL

[GENEVA,] June 13, 1954.

GENERAL SMITH: The London Times article directly charges the Secretary with accusing Mr. Eden of going back on his agreement prior to the Geneva Conference. The fact that this article was sent to you in one copy and that another copy was then given our messenger delivering the text of the Secretary's speech, indicates a considerable degree of British concern. Although about one-third of the article is devoted to the Secretary's reference to Stimson,<sup>1</sup> which was the burden of Mr. Eden's complaint, it seems likely that Eden's real concern is at his being publicly charged with breaking faith.

<sup>1</sup> Henry L. Stimson, Secretary of State, 1929-1933.

The Stimson argument has been going on for years. Most reputable diplomatic historians in the US and UK have concluded that neither the US nor Great Britain was willing to stop the Japanese in Manchuria in 1931-32. This conclusion is closer to the British position than to the one expressed by the Secretary. The latter has had some currency in journalistic circles in the US.

With regard to the section impugning Eden's reliability, which was changed by the Secretary at your request, I would guess that the British had intercepted somewhere along the line the original text and were positive of the meaning and therefore reacted to it rather than to the modified language. A comparison of the two versions is attached.

I suggest that you might tell Mr. Eden that we too have a public opinion problem, that considerable segments of our population are firmly convinced that we were duped into two world wars by evil foreigners, and that collective security may be made more acceptable to these isolationist elements if it is presented with a made-in-America tag. By depicting the foreigner as reluctant and, in particular, by "twisting the lion's tail," we have a far better chance of bringing our isolationists along in a united action.

You might wish to refer to your personal knowledge of mid-Western sentiment if you use this rationalization.

RVH

[Attachment]

Original Text

The British and French governments said that they were ready to take part with the other countries principally concerned in an examination of the possibilities of establishing a collective defense. But the British government subsequently concluded that any such examination should await the results of the Geneva conference. The French also were still hesitant on "internationalization".

Delivered Text

I went to Europe in this mission and it seemed that there was agreement on our proposal. But when we moved to translate that proposal into reality, some of the parties held back because they had concluded that any steps to create a united defense should await the results of the Geneva conference.

Original Text

The morale of the French and national forces is strained under the impact of mounting enemy power on their front and political vacillation at their rear.

Delivered Text

The French and national forces feel the strain of mounting enemy power on their front and of political uncertainty at their rear.

---

790.5/6-1354 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

TOP SECRET      PRIORITY

GENEVA, June 13, 1954—2 p. m.

Dulte 178. During Eden's visit yesterday I read to him suitably expurgated extracts your Tedul 185,<sup>1</sup> emphasizing particularly the importance of collective action and the time already lost without serious talks. I said this represented the strong view of the President and yourself, and that while I realized sensitive position of Britain re own public opinion India and Burma, et cetera, I was sure that in this matter we had been right from beginning. Eden repeated that Churchill "would not send troops to Vietnam". I said that if French could hold Hanoi-Haiphong area, or Haiphong and an enclave along coast, we should decide where to draw line on which we take our stand in south of Vietnam and elsewhere in SEA. If the military talks in Washington were making any progress they should at least have the alternatives ready for consideration and decision at the time of the PMs visit.

I then spoke of the political and psychological factors re withdrawal part of UK forces from Korea and critical nature of period after Geneva. Eden said there was nothing imminent on this and they intended to leave it for discussion in Washington.

New subject. I have just had long talk with Casey and conveyed message your Tosec 406.<sup>2</sup> He plans to return via Washington and will let you know. He is convinced of necessity of collective guarantees on Cambodia, Laos, and what can be saved of Vietnam. Also convinced that there must be, as he put it "teeth in those" guarantees. He had expressed these views strongly to Nehru, saying that he hoped that same group Asiatic and European nations that gave the guarantees would provide the teeth, and that India and Pakistan would associate themselves with such a group. Nehru did not reject this, and had apparently discussed it later and at length with Pillai and Mrs. Pandit, who were present at dinner that evening where discussion continued. Casey felt that when he left, Nehru was favorable, but that the influence of Menon, with whom he talked last night, would continue to be bad.

SMITH

---

<sup>1</sup> Telegram 1 from the Secretary of State to the Department of State, June 10, repeated to Geneva as Tedul 185, June 11, p. 1117.

<sup>2</sup> Dated June 12, p. 1125.

751G.00/6-1354 : Telegram

The Ambassador in France (Dillon) to the Department of State

TOP SECRET

PARIS, June 13, 1954—2 p. m.

4832. Sent Geneva 389 repeated information Department 4832. We took up with De Margerie June 12 contents Tedul 175 to Geneva.<sup>1</sup> He had no specific comments on particular points raised but he had following general observations to make :

1. He could not help but feel that there was a growing "discrepancy" between the context of these secret negotiations of conditions for U.S. intervention in Indochina and recent public statement by highest American officials which the French could only interpret as meaning that there was less and less disposition in Washington to intervene militarily. It was becoming increasingly obscure as to what and when the U.S. intended or was prepared to do. The points raised in Tedul 175 he considered reflected this constantly increasing tendency on our part toward more caution, more conditions and more qualifications.

2. Margerie expressed opinion that Admiral Radford's suggestion to Valluy about possible use ROK units in Indochina was most disturbing and again reflected U.S. intention to withhold direct American military intervention.<sup>2</sup> He considered any such plan as extremely dangerous, not only because it might break uneasy Korean truce arrangements but would provide tailor-made excuse for open Chinese intervention in Indochina, should Peking so decide. He added that the formula that "Asians should fight Asians" was an extremely dangerous one and concluded by saying that any threat or plan to use ROK units in Indochina was a "false deterrent" and the formula for extension of the war with the loss of any Asian support.

3. Margerie stated that Lippman's analysis which appeared in Paris Herald Tribune June 11 entitled "The Best of a Bad Job" had found wide acceptance in France.

4. Bidault, Margerie thought, would almost certainly remain on as Foreign Minister, no matter who succeeded Laniel. Washington must realize, however, that Bidault would return to Geneva with virtually no cards whatsoever in his hands to obtain a cease-fire and an honorable armistice arrangement with the Communist side. The logic of this situation is that Bidault will now be compelled to go much further with the Vietminh than he has ever been prepared to go. In short all along the only real deterrent to the Russians, Chinese and Vietminh has been the fear of possible, probable and serious U.S. intervention. If this card is now virtually withdrawn from the play, as it now appears to be, or its presence and validity discounted by the opposition, there is very little left for the French to do except to bargain for the best terms obtainable which are now almost certain to be extremely bad for France and the West.

5. Margerie stated that Bidault had all along been in favor of the U.S. taking over training responsibilities for the Vietnamese National Army but could not understand why nothing apparently was being done about this since General Ely had indicated some weeks ago his acquiescence. Margerie said that unless we got our training personnel in soon a cease-fire arrangement would probably freeze the situation in such a way that it would be impossible for us to introduce additional personnel at a later date.

<sup>1</sup> Dated June 8, p. 1081.

<sup>2</sup> See telegram Tedul 178, June 9, p. 1100.

Margerie commented that we should consider the foregoing comments to be his own and not necessarily reflecting precisely the views of Bidault or how his chief would express them at this time.

As set forth in Embtel 4780 June 9,<sup>3</sup> in his speech before the National Assembly on Wednesday, Bidault nowhere mentioned the U.S. or its role in Indochina or at Geneva, and we got the impression from Margerie that Bidault's feeling toward the U.S. is becoming increasingly bitter, primarily for the reasons outlined in paragraph 1.

DILLON

---

<sup>3</sup> Not printed.

---

396.1 GE/6-1454 : Telegram

Smith-Eden-Chauvel Meeting, Geneva, June 13, Evening: The United States Delegation to the Department of State

TOP SECRET

NIAC

GENEVA, June 14, 1954—10 a. m.

Dulte 179. Repeated information London 275, Paris 426, Moscow 120. Limit distribution. I met with Eden and Chauvel Sunday evening.

Eden reported he had informed Laotian and Cambodian delegations Molotov's suggestion for military talks with those countries (Dulte 176<sup>1</sup>) and that both had replied could not consider agreeing such talks unless it was clear they would be about withdrawal of Viet Minh troops. Cambodia had no objections to a plenary or restricted session on Laos and Cambodia, provided it was clearly understood they would not modify their attitude.

Eden also reported that Laotians have asked his advice on whether they should appeal to UN and Cambodians had indicated if they failed to get satisfaction at this conference they could take their case elsewhere. Eden said he considered it necessary give both delegations clear indication his views. He proposed tell both of them that having failed secure at Geneva withdrawal of Viet Minh forces, if they thought it right take their case to UN on ground their territories had been invaded, they could count on UK approval and support. However, ground would need preparing here, possibly by asking for early meeting on Laos and Cambodia to discuss Mr. Molotov's suggestion, and if at meeting it became apparent no further progress toward settlement, Laos and Cambodia delegations might if they wish announce at meeting or soon thereafter intention take case to UN.

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated June 13, p. 1124.

Eden indicated he was thinking in terms Laos and Cambodia bringing their case to UN as aggression, moving first to Security Council and then immediately to General Assembly under Part A Uniting for Peace Resolution, stating that "If we mean to draw a line, this is the way we might do it".

Eden also stressed view that if conference drags on and Viet Minh take advantage situation switch troops for major invasion of Laos and Cambodia, we would bear heavy responsibility if we had discouraged them from proceeding to UN. He also said he strongly felt we were losing by staying on any longer; the time had come to recess the conference while French-Viet Minh military talks continued. If anything developed from those talks which should be reported to conference, it could be reconvened.

Chauvel professed ignorance of Bidault's thinking, repeating French view on getting POC into Cambodia and Laos through Thai appeal. He made obscure statement to effect that in "underground military talks" with Viet Minh which are going on simultaneously with military staff talks, Viet Minh had said there was no chance getting anything on Vietnam if French position on Laos and Cambodia maintained. He said in these talks French had feeling that the Chinese were pushing Viet Minh move into Laos and Cambodia and that Viet Minh were not in control that situation. Stated he felt question Laos and Cambodia appeal to UN only one of timing and that effort should first be made get military talks going on satisfactory basis for Laos and Cambodia, and if this failed those two countries should go ahead with appeal to UN.

I said that I did not see why appeal by Laos and Cambodia under Part A Uniting for Peace Resolution should interfere with action on Thai appeal—they could both go along together. However Thai appeal should be pressed as both would take about same time. I raised question of what effect separate appeal by Laos would have on writing off Vietnam. Eden and Chauvel both thought that there was basic difference between situation in Laos and Cambodia and that in Vietnam both with respect to actual conditions on the spot and with respect to conference, that appeal by Laos and Cambodia would not have harmful effects on Vietnam; that is, Laos and Cambodia were clearly victims external aggression and with respect to conference military talks were going on re Vietnam, whereas no basis for military talks on Laos and Cambodia had been found.

I fully agreed that things should be wound up here as quickly as possible so that we can get ahead on serious talks on collective action as only real means of improving situation. I said important decisions must be made, and this cannot be done while unprofitable debate is going on here. Only if the Communists believe we are going to do something is there likely to be improvement in present situation, and the sooner we got ahead on this, the better.

Eden said that if the Cambodian and Laotian delegations agreed, he would see Molotov Monday morning and suggest an early meeting on Laos and Cambodia, while warning Molotov that there is no change in the basic position on our side.

Eden said in deference to French views, he would not yet inform Laos and Cambodia they could count on UK approval and support, but would otherwise talk to them along lines set forth second paragraph this message.

During course conversation Chauvel said it was obvious that "official" military staff talks will not and cannot get anywhere; (in characteristic Chauvel fashion) he has hopes that the very secret "underground" military talks which are going on simultaneously might get some place (Dulte 173<sup>2</sup>). He is anxious that at least official military talks continue to provide cover for secret talks. Chauvel said he was going to phone Bidault and urge he return to Geneva Monday.

[Here follows a paragraph which dealt with Korea; for text, see page 371.]

SMITH

---

<sup>2</sup> Dated June 12, p. 1126.

JUNE 14, 1954

396.1 GE/6-1454 : Telegram

Heath-Dac Khe-Bonsal Meeting, Geneva, June 14, Morning: The United States Delegation to the Department of State

TOP SECRET

GENEVA, June 14, 1954—8 p. m.

Secto 437. Repeated information Paris 430, Saigon 164. Dac Khe, Vietnam Minister of Democratization and Deputy Chief of Geneva delegation, talked to Ambassador Heath and Bonsal this morning.

In Dac Khe's view, there was a course of action which could save Vietnam from complete takeover by the Communists. That would be for Bao Dai to return immediately to Vietnam to be with his troops and to back up a new government presided by Ngo Dinh Diem, in a campaign of official austerity, honesty of pitiless severity against past and present governmental grafters. That was the first step. The next step must, in Dac Khe's view, be a program of real agrarian reform and social betterment for the peasant  $\frac{9}{10}$ ths of the population. The American economic aid program should be revised to serve exclusively needs of the agricultural population. A third step, which Dac Khe personally favored, was creation of a consultative assembly of limited legislative powers but inclusion the right to legislate on the budget.

A major reason that Viet Minh had made progress was general disbelief in the various Bao Dai governments to date. If elections were held at present, Viet Minh would win it. If really free supervised elections were held six months from now, neither the Viet Minh nor Bao Dai would gain a majority. But this situation could be changed substantially for the better in a matter of days or weeks. The new regime should arrest and send to Poulo Condor, the grafters, of which the government has already a list, preferably shooting the 4 or 5 most guilty.

There would be time successfully to initiate these reform measures Dac Khe thought. In spite of French desires for a cease-fire, it would be almost impossible for the French to arrive at a negotiated cease-fire in the immediate future in view of Viet Minh intransigence and Vietnamese resistance to such a move.

Bao Dai's stock had fallen in Vietnam since 1949, Dac Khe said, but so had Ho Chi Minh's. Bao Dai had retained, however, a residual prestige which could be improved.

Dac Khe said that while Bao Dai lacked character, he, nevertheless, could be persuaded to undertake the decisive action necessary, but only the United States seconded by France could "persuade" Bao Dai to go into action.

There had to be plain talk of a firmness that neither France nor the United States had yet used with Bao Dai. It would be a most disagreeable interview for both sides because the past failings of Bao Dai and his governments would have to be frankly reviewed. Dac Khe suggested that Bao Dai would accept Heath's criticism and recommendations because of his belief in the latter's friendship.

Heath and Bonsal listened to all this without comment. When Dac Khe said, however, that Bao Dai would probably insist on assurance of American backing if he took the action requested, Heath remarked that some weeks ago when Bao Dai said he would insist on autonomy for Vietnam national army, Dac Khe had said to him that was a request to be made from the field of battle and not from Cannes or Paris. Heath asked why the same observation would not apply for a request for foreign backing; viz., if Bao Dai and his regime showed improved performance and action on the ground, then would be the time to ask their friends for support. Dac Khe agreed.

Returning to Diem, Dac Khe said he would be an excellent man to lead off in exterminating corruption but would not be good in rallying the peasants. Diem was essentially a mandarin of the ideal type described by Confucius. Diem's criticism of Bao Dai's regimes was that there were too many mandarins of the bad type. Diem was an honest mystic of an age that had passed. Diem did not believe in agrarian reform except of an administrative mandarin type. He did not believe in a popular assembly. Both these measures, particularly the first, in Dac Khe's opinion, were absolutely necessary. The latter personally favored calling a selected peasant congress to determine the general lines of an agrarian reform. A strong government could guide the deliberations of such a congress and not let it get out of hand as did the "national congress" of last October.

SMITH

---

396.1 GE/6-1454 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET      PRIORITY

GENEVA, June 14, 1954—10 a. m.

Dulte 180. Eyes only and personal for Secretary from Under Secretary. From his own statements and from other evidence Eden intends to pack up and depart Thursday at latest, taking most of his delegation with him. He will probably leave one or two officers as observers. Bidault will be here from time to time but will probably leave Chauvel in charge while military talks are going on. As indicated in my Dulte 179,<sup>1</sup> French pin their hopes on what Chauvel referred to as the "underground" conversations, which are presumably proceeding under cover of the military talks, and think that while these are going on Vietnam will not make all-out attack on Hanoi. I would think that Molotov will leave about the time Eden does, if we have by then brought things to a head, and I believe we also should depart about the last of this week, leaving a State officer, a military officer, and a stenographer, as observation and reporting group.

Think it is vital to get breaking off issues brought out and Foreign Ministers to go if we are to begin serious talks on collective action, particularly while Churchill is in US and also while Casey is there. I hope five power staff talks have produced some realistic, coordinated estimates which might form the basis of collective action discussions.

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated June 14, p. 1132.

If things go here as we hope, and if general timing is as indicated above, request your approval to proceed accordingly.<sup>2</sup>

SMITH

---

<sup>2</sup> In a memorandum by the Secretary of State of a meeting with the President, June 14, Dulles wrote that he had "reported briefly on the Indochina situation and on conditions in Geneva, and I read to the President Dulte 180 reporting Smith's prospective return coincidentally with Eden's return. The President agreed on such return." (Eisenhower Library, Dulles papers, Meetings with the President)

In telegram Tedul 200, June 14, the Department informed the Under Secretary that "On assumption situation develops along lines in Dulte 180 we are giving thought to who should remain behind after you leave Geneva. We agree your view that a State officer, military officer and stenographer would be suitable and are thinking of Bonsal." (396.1 GE/6-1454)

---

396.1 GE/6-1454 : Telegram

*Thirteenth Restricted Session on Indochina, Geneva, June 14, 3 p. m.:
The United States Delegation to the Department of State*<sup>1</sup>

CONFIDENTIAL

GENEVA, June 14, 1954—midnight.

Secto 440. Repeated information Paris 432, London 280, Saigon 166, Tokyo 134, Moscow 122, Phnom Penh, Vientiane unnumbered. Department pass Defense. Tokyo pass CINCFE. Thirteenth restricted session, Monday, June 14. Molotov presiding.

Molotov reviewed proposals which have been made during past weeks re joint committee of belligerents and international supervisory commission in connection with implementation agreement on cessation of hostilities in Indochina. He recalled paragraph eight of DRV May 10 proposal and paragraph four of French proposal of May 8, as well as Soviet proposal May 14. Latter proposal included provision for a supervisory commission composed of neutral countries. On May 31, USSR proposed composition to include India, Poland, Czechoslovakia and Pakistan.

Molotov repeated already stated views on Communist side to effect joint commissions of belligerents should work parallel to and not be subordinate to international commission. He recalled Soviet discussion on this matter June 8. He stressed thesis that implementation of armistice agreements is primarily duty of two sides in war. He stated that if either side is determined not to carry out the agreement, no international commission could insure its being carried out.

---

<sup>1</sup> A set of minutes of this session (IC Restricted/13) is in Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 278. The minutes indicate that the meeting convened at 3 p. m. and adjourned at 7:15 p. m. The minutes are also printed in Conférence de Genève, pp. 291-299. The proposal made by the Soviet Delegation, Indochina Document IC/30, June 14, is in Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 279A.

A brief summary of the meeting was transmitted to the Department in telegram Secto 439, June 14. (396.1 GE/6-1454)

On matter of method by which international commission may reach decisions, Molotov for first time advanced that since international commission would be dealing with questions of varying importance, unanimity rule need not be applied to all matters. In certain cases a majority vote would be sufficient with chairman having deciding vote (at end of meeting Molotov stated India should be chairman).

Molotov then submitted detailed proposal transmitted separately via pouch (see Secto 442<sup>2</sup>). Molotov concluded that Soviet delegation believes these proposals take into consideration remarks made by other delegations during discussion this subject and should therefore, facilitate agreement.

USDel (verbatim text transmitted in Secto 441<sup>3</sup>), after referring to importance of two questions brought up by Molotov, namely, authority of international supervisory commission and composition thereof, turned to question of special situation in Laos and Cambodia. He stressed previously stated views regarding independence, constitutional character of these governments and fact that two countries victims of foreign invasion. He concluded with proposal that next restricted session be devoted to problem of restoring peace in Laos and Cambodia.

USDel expressed regret that Molotov continued insist on parallel nature of international supervisory commission and mixed commissions. He made point that submission by former belligerents to authority of a truly impartial international agency would be an essential text of good faith of parties. He also stressed necessity for international commission to be able, in fact, to reach decisions. He again rejected Soviet proposal of India, Poland, Czechoslovakia and Pakistan. He repeated his general acceptance of either Colombo powers or UN selected commission.

French delegation (Chauvel) stated he unable make comparison Molotov's June 8 discussion with present proposal. He criticized most recent Soviet proposal stating that distribution of functions between joint commission and international commission seemed to involve duplication and overlapping. He referred to French June 4 proposals with particular emphasis on fact international commission to be complex, large-scale affair with ample facilities. He questioned whether Molotov's proposal met this point. He added that relationship between international commission and joint commissions as proposed by Molotov, i.e., parallel relationship, appeared to him unsatisfactory. He noted that in Molotov's proposal joint commissions not obliged to recognize or accept decisions of international commission but can refer those decisions back to international commission. There is, of course, further reference to guarantor powers who would act as sort of super arbiters. This generally unsatisfactory since basis of true control should be body with real power. He referred to old French saying that Roland's mare was most beautiful horse in world, but unfortunately, was dead.

---

<sup>2</sup> Dated June 14, p. 1143.

<sup>3</sup> Infra.

Chauvel then referred to composition of international commission. He characterized Molotov proposal as in effect providing that international commission would have equivalent composition to joint commission since members would represent parties. He said that it should be possible to find a commission made up of true neutrals. He added that Bidault had agreed to the UK proposal re the Colombo powers and French delegation maintains open mind re any proposal involving truce impartiality.

Chauvel expressed himself as being puzzled at Molotov's proposal as to procedure in reaching decisions by the international commission. He said distinction between subjects which can be decided by majority and those to be decided by unanimity not clear. He suggested a list of subjects might be drawn up to make this issue more precise. He expressed fear that requirement of unanimity is provided in those cases which are most important and which therefore are very ones requiring most rapid decision.

Chauvel agreed fully with US delegations position re Laos and Cambodia. He said French Government also through its representatives and agents in those countries could endorse facts and conclusions advanced by Laotian and Cambodian delegations. He added that French delegation has not opposed international control in Laos and Cambodia but has merely said that since military situation there different from that in Vietnam, international control would be applied to different subject matter. Chauvel endorsed US delegation suggestion for early meeting on Laos and Cambodia.

Following recess Chou En-lai, after commenting on the artificial deadlock created by certain delegations made detailed statement in support of Molotov's proposal. He ended by referring to question of Khmer and Pathet-Lao and saying that his delegation was prepared to put forward views on this subject at future meetings.

Dong then stated that for his delegation joint commission was the armistice commission. He referred to previous comments which had cited precedent of 1946 as proof inability such mixed commission to function properly and asserted that state of mind of those who signed 1946 agreements well known to him since he had participated in Fontainebleau meeting. In interim, eight years had passed and many things had happened. Armies had gotten to know each other and at Geneva conference Viet Minh had made proposals which were generally recognized as reasonable. This had had influence on members of French Expeditionary Corps and from those officers and men taken at Dien Bien Phu Viet Minh knew of their deep desire for peace. These were no longer the men of 1946, and as far as his side was concerned, their desire for peace was indubitable. The Viet Minh army and people would respond as a single man when the order was given for them to respect the armistice. All this led to inevitable conclusion that one could trust the people who would compose joint commission. He was in complete accord with the Soviet proposal.

On subject of Khmer and Pathet-Lao he insisted that basic fact of situation was existence of liberation movement in each country. His delegation was ready to discuss problem on this basis.

He then recalled that on June 10, he had said that three fundamental issues divided the conference: (1) membership of supervisory commission; (2) its authority; and (3) fate of Laos and Cambodia. Despite Molotov's efforts today to deal with technical aspects of commission's function he nevertheless felt that principal differences remain unresolved. Military discussions now in progress was solid achievement and one must await results. He supported US suggestion that day be devoted to Laos and Cambodia but if no progress were made he doubted whether any good purpose served by conference continuing to debate unresolved questions. He suggested that conference might suspend its meetings until military committee could report on its work. He was not asking for an immediate reply from his colleagues but thought they might think it over.

Cambodian delegation pointed out Soviet proposal dealt only with Vietnam. Because of special position of Cambodia he was in full accord with US proposal that next session study Cambodian problem.

Molotov wished to make two supplementary observations re his today's proposal. He thought chairmanship of commission could be settled in usual way and that first named member of commission could be chairman and could have the deciding vote on questions where majority rule accepted. This formula would give India chairmanship. Up to now no objections had been raised re this country. He reiterated that any subordination of joint commission to international supervisory commission would be incorrect since this would imply that joint commission should act on orders of international commission. Presumably such orders could only be enforced by force of arms and would mean that international military forces would have to be introduced into Indochina. Such introduction would be contrary to objective of establishing peace in Indochina. Therefore he insisted to want subordination meant not to want peace. Although he did not consider information on Laos and Cambodia provided by UK and US reflected sufficient objectivity and his delegation's views were well known he nevertheless had no objection to consideration of this subject at subsequent meeting but would hope such consideration would not preclude consideration of important questions discussed today.

Next restricted meeting Wednesday, June 16.

SMITH

---

396.1 GE/6-1454 : Telegram

Thirteenth Restricted Session on Indochina, Geneva, June 14, 3 p. m.:
The United States Delegation to the Department of State

CONFIDENTIAL

GENEVA, June 14, 1954—midnight.

Secto 441. Repeated information Paris 433, Saigon 167, London 281, Tokyo 135, Moscow 123, Phnom Penh, Vientiane unnumbered. Tokyo for CINCFE. Department pass Defense. Following is verbatim text General Smith's statement made in Indochina restricted session Monday 14 June:

"Mr. Molotov outlined very clearly some of the fundamental questions on which we have not been able to agree. I listened to him with great attention and will examine his proposals with care. I must say, however, that I heard nothing said which truly disposes of the fundamental issues before us. We are still in disagreement as we were before regarding the mandate of the international supervisory commission, regarding the relation between the proposed joint commissions and the international commission, and with regard to the composition of the international commission. We have already stated that agreement on these points is essential if our conference is to succeed.

I should like later to comment on the two most important issues listed by Mr. Molotov with regard to the international supervisory commission and the joint commissions. I should like at this time to remind my colleagues that there is a third question before us, the special situation in Laos and Cambodia.

On the question of Laos and Cambodia, it is my opinion that the statements at our meetings by the delegations of those countries have been clear, accurate and altogether in accordance with the facts. The information given by the delegate of the UK confirms that already available to the US delegation. I would like to point out that the US has been represented by diplomatic missions in Cambodia and Laos as well as in Vietnam since 1950. The US delegation at this conference includes several members who have been and still are assigned to these missions. Other members of this delegation have visited Cambodia and Laos one or more times during the past year or two. They have traveled widely in these two countries; they have talked to people in the cities and in the villages; they have seen with their own eyes the situation as it has developed and they are thoroughly familiar with this situation. American representatives were in these two countries during their last elections in 1951 and were deeply impressed by the conduct of these elections and by the demonstration of the rapid development of effective democratic institutions in the short period since the constitutions of the two countries came into effect.

I must, therefore, reiterate as a fact what has already been said here, that whatever armed opposition to the legal governments of Cambodia and Laos exists is provided by the military forces of the Viet Minh and the Communist political cadres under the protection of its army.

I accept as a fact and repeat as such the statement of the Cambodian delegate on June 8 that the common denominator of the three wars in Indochina is the presence in each country of Viet Minh troops.

It should be apparent to us all that the problems of Cambodia and Laos could be solved in a single day if the Viet Minh were willing to withdraw its invading regular and irregular troops. A political problem does not exist, as we know both from experience and from the statements by the delegates of Cambodia and Laos before this conference.

The delegation of Cambodia submitted a proposal to our meeting of June 8. This proposal is reasonable and logical in concept and it should be simple in execution.

The delegation of Laos submitted a proposal on May 10 which seemed to us to fit every requirement of the situation. In the opinion of the US delegation, these proposals could be rejected only by those having no interest in the restoration of peace to the two countries. It seems to me that if we have any hope that our conference may make any positive contribution to the restoration of peace in Indochina, we might devote our next restricted session to the problem of how to restore peace to Laos and Cambodia.

As to the next fundamental question clearly at issue between us, that of the authority of an international supervisory commission, it seems to us that there is very little to add to the clear and persuasive statements already made on this subject by Mr. Eden and M. Bidault. As far as this delegate is concerned, these statements demonstrated to us that the international supervisory authority must have competence and power to settle any problems or differences which may arise in the joint commissions of the belligerents and that the decisions of the supervisory authority must be binding on the joint commissions. It is, therefore, with great regret that I heard Mr. Molotov reject any possible subordination and insist on parallel action of the two bodies.

There is, however, one important point that I think the Communist delegates should carefully consider. The Communist delegates have said that observance of an armistice depends upon the good faith of the belligerent parties; that cessation hostilities will not be permanent if the two contending parties are not prepared to cooperate in carrying out the agreement. This is a perfectly valid argument. Good faith on both sides is an essential element of a successful armistice. I accept it. But reasonable men will recognize that the passions aroused by eight years of bitter warfare do not easily or rapidly subside; that given the best of will on both sides there will be differences which cannot, as has already been said, be readily adjusted, and that it is absolutely necessary that there be impartial authority with the power to arbitrate the differences which will arise. Good faith in entering into an armistice must, therefore, be expressed by willingness voluntarily to submit to the authority of an impartial international agency in the carrying out of an armistice. It is the willingness to submit questions to impartial authority, as well as the intent to stop shooting, which will demonstrate whether or not the contending parties have that good faith which the Communist delegates rightly say is an indispensable ingredient of a peaceful settlement.

The third vital matter on which we are in disagreement is that the composition of the international supervisory commission is closely related to the question of its necessary authority and most of us are convinced that the commission must have authority over the joint commissions and since its decisions must be binding on them, it is obvious that the commission must have both the capacity to arrive at decisions and the impartial character which will win for it the confidence of all the parties to the agreement including all the participants of this conference. If the commission is so divided that it cannot reach decisions, it will be impotent in settling differences. If the commission is not recognized to be impartial its decisions will not readily be accepted by the parties to the agreement.

It seems essential to us, therefore, that the commission be an impartial one, and that it be so constituted that it can reach decisions. I regret that Mr. Molotov reaffirmed his previous proposal of a four-country commission of Poland, Czechoslovakia, India and Pakistan. This proposal does not seem to meet either these two criteria for the simple reason as stated by Mr. Eden that it just would not work.

It did not seem to me, as I listened to Mr. Molotov, that the attempt which he made to differentiate between certain matters which could be settled through a majority vote with the chairman casting the deciding vote and other matters which would require unanimity for decision would do anything more than further to complicate an already complex problem.

I have said before that I welcomed the proposal of the UK for a commission composed of the Colombo powers. I have also said that I believed the proposal of the representative of Vietnam that the duties of the commission be entrusted to the United Nations was also a reasonable suggestion. Either of these proposals would provide a commission which could be impartial and which had the capacity for making decisions. I should again like to point out to our Communist colleagues that the good faith which they have stated is important in carrying out an armistice should extend to providing reasonable prospects for success of such an armistice. An impartial and workable supervisory commission is a final essential element of such a successful settlement."

SMITH

---

396.1 GE/6-1454 : Telegram

*Thirteenth Restricted Session on Indochina, Geneva, June 14, 3 p. m. :
The United States Delegation to the Department of State*

CONFIDENTIAL

GENEVA, June 14, 1954—midnight.

Secto 442. Repeated information Paris, London, Moscow, Saigon, Tokyo unnumbered. Department pass Defense. Tokyo pass CINCFE.

Saigon pass Phnom Penh and Vientiane. Following is text of Soviet proposal presented at Restricted Session on Indochina, Monday, June 14:

I. Mixed Commission (Military Armistice Commission)

Composition

1. The Mixed Commission (Military Armistice Commission) shall consist of an equal number of representatives of the Commands of both sides. The senior members of the Mixed Commission shall hold the rank of General. The Mixed Commission shall create mixed inspection teams (the number to be agreed by both sides) with an equal number of members from both sides.

Functions and powers

2. It shall be the duty of the Mixed Commission to exercise control over the implementation of the terms of the Agreement on the Cessation of Hostilities, the principal of which shall be:

- a. Control over the strict fulfillment of the plan for the establishment of zones and regrouping of the armed forces of the sides;
- b. Control over ensuring a simultaneous, general and complete ceasefire.
- c. Settlement by negotiations of all questions connected with violations of the terms of the Agreement on the Cessation of Hostilities.

3. The Mixed Commission and the Neutral Nations Commission shall act in parallel and one Commission shall not be subordinated to the other. To ensure effective implementation of the Agreement on the Cessation of Hostilities both Commissions shall act in conformity with the assignment of functions and in cooperation on the basis of the powers provided for in the Agreement on the Cessation of Hostilities.

II. Neutral Nations Observation Commission

Composition

4. The Neutral Nations Commission for the Observation (nablyudenie) of Carrying out the Terms of the Agreement on the Cessation of Hostilities in Indochina shall be formed of the representatives of the following nations. . . .

The term "neutral nations", as used here, shall refer to those states the armed forces of which did not participate in hostilities in Indochina.

The Commission shall consist of an equal number of representatives appointed by each of the above-mentioned neutral nations.

It shall create inspection teams composed of an equal number of officers appointed by the neutral nations.

Functions and powers

5. The task of the Neutral Nations Commission shall be to carry out surveillance (nadzor), observation, inspection and investigation connected with the implementation of the terms of the Agreement on the Cessation of Hostilities. The principal of these shall be:

- a. Observation of the carrying out by both sides of the provisions establishing the military demarcation line and the demilitarized zones on the basis of the Agreement on the Cessation of Hostilities;

b. Observation of the regrouping of troops carried out in setting up the zones;

c. Observation of the repatriation by both sides of the prisoners-of-war and civil internees;

d. Investigation and establishment of the facts of violations of the Agreement on the Cessation of Hostilities in the demilitarized zones at the request of the Mixed Commission or one of its sides as well as submitting proposals regarding their elimination.

e. Observation at specified naval or air ports and points on land of the cessation of introduction into Indochina from outside of new contingents of armed forces and military personnel, as well as of all types of armaments, ammunition and military equipment.

f. Recommendations concerning possible amendments and addenda to the provisions of the Agreement on the Cessation of Hostilities to provide the most effective carrying out of the Agreement.

The Neutral Nations Commission shall carry out its functions by means of the respective inspection teams stationed at the points specified in the Agreement on the Cessation of Hostilities.

General provisions

6. Neutral Nations Commission for the Observation of the Carrying out of the Terms of the Cessation of Hostilities shall adopt decisions by agreement among the members of the Commission. The Commission shall inform the Mixed Commission of its decisions and the Mixed Commission shall adopt in this connection appropriate measures or refer the question back to the Neutral Nations Commission for re-examination. If an examination of this sort does not yield positive results the Neutral Nations Commission shall immediately inform the Mixed Commission and the States-guarantors of the fact.

In case differences of opinion arise in the Neutral Nations Commission during the consideration of one or another problem regarding the implementation of the provisions of the Agreement on the Cessation of Hostilities, the Commission as a whole or its separate members shall pass on to the Mixed Commission, as well as to the States-guarantors information pertaining to the problem under consideration including information concerning the attitudes of the State-members of the Commission.

If the sides in the Mixed Commission are unable to settle differences on subject under consideration the States-guarantors shall take appropriate measures to prevent violations of the agreement of the threat of such violation.

7. Be it resolved that the questions on which decisions can be taken if there exists no difference of opinion in the Commission shall be the following:

a. Questions connected with violation of provisions of the agreement or the arising of a threat of such violation which could lead to the re-opening of hostilities (including violation of land and sea borders as well as of air space by the armed forces of the sides;

b. Questions concerning amendments and addenda to the provisions of the Agreement on the Cessation of Hostilities.

8. Questions which can be decided by simple majority shall be the following:

a. Questions connected with the carrying out by the Commission of its functions of ensuring that fresh armed forces (land, air and naval) armaments of all kinds (assembled or dismantled), ammunition as well as various types of military equipment are not introduced into Indochina from outside;

b. Questions connected with the investigation of statements by the Mixed Commission or by one of the sides regarding violations of the Agreement on the Cessation of Hostilities;

c. Other questions within the terms of reference of the Neutral Nations Commission.

If in the examination of the above-mentioned questions votes are equally divided, the vote of the Chairman shall be decisive.

9. The Neutral Nations Commission shall immediately carry out investigation beyond the limits of points established in the Agreement on the Cessation of Hostilities in agreement with the Commander of the side in question.

10. The Neutral Nations Commission shall determine the rules for its operation in accordance with the present decision.

III. International Guarantees

11. The carrying out of the Agreement on the Cessation of Hostilities shall be guaranteed by the States-participants in the Geneva Conference.

12. In the event that the Mixed Commission and Neutral Nations Observation Commission are not able to take appropriate measures to prevent violation or the threat of violation of the Agreement on the Cessation of Hostilities in Indochina and in the event of the appearance because of this of a threat of reopening of hostilities the States which are parties to the agreement on guarantees shall convene a conference for consultation with the aim of taking collective action to ensure the implementation of the agreement.<sup>1</sup>

SMITH

396.1 GE/6-1454 : Telegram

The Secretary of State to the United States Delegation<sup>1</sup>

TOP SECRET

WASHINGTON, June 14, 1954—8:50 p. m.

Tedul 196. Re Dulte 179<sup>2</sup> and 180.<sup>3</sup>

1. It is our view that final adjournment of Conference is in our best interest provided this can be done without creating an impression in

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by the Secretary of State.

<sup>2</sup> Dated June 14, p. 1132.

<sup>3</sup> Dated June 14, p. 1136.

France at this critical moment that France has been deserted by US and UK and therefore has no choice but capitulation on Indochina to Communists at Geneva and possibly accommodation with the Soviets in Europe. Because of this, if the French want to keep the Conference at least nominally alive, we would go along with the idea of recess and the maintenance of the small observation group as you propose in Geneva. We trust that the developments at Geneva will have been such as to satisfy the British insistence that they did not want to discuss collective action until either Geneva was over or at least the results of Geneva were known. I would assume that the departure of Eden would be evidence that there was no adequate reason for further delaying collective talks on SEA defense.

2. Re paragraph 1 above we assume any recess would only relate to the Indochina phase of Conference and the Korean phase would be closed out as indicated last para Dulte 179 and Secto 435.<sup>4</sup>

3. We believe that you should leave Geneva no later than Eden.

4. Assume that you will as soon as appropriate opportunity offers talk with Bidault as well as Eden about these matters.

DULLES

---

<sup>4</sup> Dated June 14, p. 371.

---

751G.00/6-1254 : Telegram

The Secretary of State to the United States Delegation<sup>1</sup>

TOP SECRET      PRIORITY      WASHINGTON, June 14, 1954—8:55 p. m.

Tedul 197. Re Dulte 174.<sup>2</sup> Department is giving this thorough consideration with Defense. My personal opinion is that we should try to carry situation along with avoidance of either formal refusal now train Vietnamese and also without anything like a massive commitment of some two to three thousand MAAG personnel which under present conditions could not but carry strong political overtones and might raise Congressional complications.

With reference to your last paragraph suggestion on "expedite conclusion of final agreement with French" this is quite impossible so long as French have not made up their mind whether or not they want to internationalize war and now are further from internationalizing it than ever before. They want, and in effect have, an option on our intervention but they do not want to exercise it and the date of expiry of our option is fast running out.

DULLES

---

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by the Secretary of State.

<sup>2</sup> Dated June 12, p. 1126.

396.1 GE/6-1454 : Telegram

The Secretary of State to the United States Delegation<sup>1</sup>

TOP SECRET

WASHINGTON, June 14, 1954—8:55 p. m.

Tedul 198. It seems clear that apart from official French-Viet Minh military talks, there are parallel conversations going on both between individuals from each side (Dulte 173<sup>2</sup>), and other probably important talks mentioned Dulte 179<sup>3</sup> which, in spite fact they are called "underground military talks", may have considerable substantive political significance.

We would not wish be in position where this subterranean negotiation between French and Viet Minh might have result our being suddenly faced with terms proposed settlement which we would not feel able accept and from which we might have to dissociate ourselves.

We therefore attach great importance to ascertaining scope and character current Franco-Viet Minh talks other than official military discussions, and we would like leave it to you find out by whatever means you consider appropriate as much as possible about them. We would of course hope to be kept informed by French on continuing basis.

DULLES

---

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by Tyler of EUR/WE. Repeated to Paris as telegram 4580 and to Saigon as telegram 2601.

<sup>2</sup> Dated June 12, p. 1126.

<sup>3</sup> Dated June 14, p. 1132.

JUNE 15, 1954

396.1 GE/6-1554 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET

GENEVA, June 15, 1954—10 a. m.

Dulte 181. Eyes only Secretary from Under Secretary. Reference Tedul 200.<sup>1</sup> I had also intended recommending Bonsal and Colonel Dwan. Please do what you can to insure that military officer is Dwan<sup>2</sup> . . . .

---

<sup>1</sup> Summarized in footnote 2, p. 1137.

<sup>2</sup> In telegram Tedul 201, June 15, the Secretary informed Under Secretary Smith that "Admiral Davis agrees that if small observer group is left at Geneva, Colonel Dwan will remain with Bonsal."

In the same telegram the Secretary said he doubted "desirability of your remaining since US has been the country which from the beginning has taken the dimmest view of Geneva Conference and I would not like to see us the last to leave. I hope you can get some rest before your return here where you will be subjected to much Congressional questioning but I hope your rest could be dissociated from Geneva Conference—perhaps based on your physically moving elsewhere." (396.1 GE/6-1554)

Believe Korean phase will close out today generally as we planned. Recess would only relate to Indochina phase, as assumed in Tedul 196.<sup>3</sup>

I would remain several days after Eden, if he follows his present plan, but would attend no meetings. Have already discussed these matters with him and in general way with Bidault before his departure. Do not know if Bidault intends to return.

SMITH

---

<sup>3</sup> Dated June 14, p. 1146.

---

Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 322

Memorandum by the Adviser to the United States Delegation (Bonsal) to the Special Adviser to the Delegation (Heath)<sup>1</sup>

SECRET

[GENEVA,] June 15, 1954.

I saw Jacques Roux at lunch today.

1. Roux believes that Mr. Molotov's proposal yesterday, in addition to the rather vague "concession" regarding a majority vote on the NNSC, indicates the possibility of a further concession regarding composition. Roux believes that the Communists would be willing to eliminate either Poland or Czechoslovakia, probably Czechoslovakia, and accept instead a European neutral such as Norway. Roux himself would like if possible to get Canada as the fourth member in place of Czechoslovakia.

2. Roux believes that the Vietminh are definitely seeking partition at this time, at least on a military basis. He supports this view by citing the original Vietminh proposal for exchanges of territory and by referring to the fact that Molotov's proposal yesterday refers to the demarcation line rather than to several demarcation lines as would be the case if several zones were contemplated.

3. Roux wonders whether it is not time to refer the questions regarding the whole subject of controls to a committee of delegates of the principals to the conference who could perhaps reach certain agreements to be referred back to the conference. I said that I did not think that until we had made more progress on the matter of fundamental principles to which we adhere in regard to this matter that it would be particularly useful to have those principles discussed at a lower level. I said that I thought such a proposal would merely play into the evident Communist desire to prolong the conference without reaching decisions.

---

<sup>1</sup> In a note from Heath to Smith, June 16, attached to the source text, Heath wrote: "Mr. Robertson suggested that you read this because it may provide clues on future Soviet conference tactics. He particularly recommends you read the final paragraph."

4. Mr. Roux wondered whether the time had not come to convey to the Communists and specifically to Mr. Molotov a "discreet warning" that our side is only disposed to continue talking at Geneva on the basis that the situation in the field does not change. Such a warning would be unspecific, i.e., it would not involve any spelling out of how, where or when our side would react to further Vietminh aggressive moves. I said that I thought this idea was worth looking into. I added that we should certainly not be put into a position of conferring at Geneva and doing nothing else while the Communists improve their position in the field.

5. Roux had nothing to say regarding current military conversations or regarding any other possible Franco-Vietminh contacts. He said, however, that he was convinced on the basis of information derived by the Vietnamese Delegation from Vietnamese fence-sitters who have been in contact with the Vietminh that the latter are indeed anxious for a cessation of hostilities (on their own terms) and that they fear the development of Chinese control over their actions, present and future. (This analysis does not seem particularly sound to me—at any rate I doubt whether Vietminh actions and dispositions are determined in accordance with this sort of consideration.) Roux indicated that while present Vietminh troop dispositions both north and south of the delta indicate the possibility of military plan to cut the Hanoi-Haiphong line there is no certainty that such is their intention at this time.

6. I gathered later from Maurice Ferro who is off to Paris this afternoon that the Communist journalists at the Maison de la Presse are spreading the report that after the Secretary's speeches of last week, there is absolutely no prospect of any imminent US armed intervention in Indochina and that the Communists therefore have to worry only about the French expeditionary corps resistance to their further advance. It is being said that until after the November elections the US will not move in Indochina regardless of what happens there.

---

751G.00/6-1654 : Telegram

Heath-Offroy Meeting, Geneva, June 15, Evening: The United States Delegation to the Department of State

TOP SECRET

GENEVA, June 16, 1954—noon.

Dulte 184. Repeated information Paris 441. Eyes only Ambassador. Heath last night saw Offroy, French Ambassador Thailand, whom Bidault had appointed to "watch over" the talks in Geneva between representatives of the Viet Minh and Franco-Vietnamese Commands. Offroy expressed a personal preference that the terms of reference of these talks be expanded to include discussion of such political problems as would undoubtedly arise in any practical plan for cessation of hostilities.

He went on to say, speaking personally, he thought a mistake had been made in not drawing the Viet Minh out on their proposal of May 25.<sup>1</sup> Discussion of that proposal would lead, he thought, to the Viet Minh unveiling their real proposal, which was one of partition.

He rather hesitantly advanced the idea that partition might be the only practical solution unless "internationalization" of the war occurred promptly. He personally thought that neither a new government nor the Assembly at this time would consider taking up the "option" of American interventions, as outlined in the Secretary's Los Angeles speech of June 11.<sup>2</sup> The Assembly would want to hear first a final Viet Minh proposal. In its present mood the Assembly would accept such a proposal if it were at all reasonable. If, however, the Viet Minh took an extreme, intransigent stand then American intervention might be requested.

There was another circumstance, Offroy thought in which the Assembly and government might ask American aid. If the Viet Minh attacked Hanoi and it seemed the latter would fall there would be two possible reactions in France. One would be insistence on a cease-fire on almost any conditions. The other reaction of public opinion might be one of anger and determination to carry on the fight, asking American intervention. He, Offroy, would not venture to predict which of these alternative reactions would occur. He was afraid if the latter occurred that the US would decline intervene on a last-minute call for help on the grounds that it would then be too late to save Hanoi. Heath made no comment on this observation.

Offroy objected to Eden's proposal that the conference adjourn pending a report from the military representatives of the two commands. He thought it extremely important that at least a skeleton conference sit while those talks were still in progress in order to hear reports on developments in those conversations and to provide guidance for the military representatives. He assumed that such conference delegates as remained in Geneva would not meet daily but would reconvene instantly as occasion required.

---

<sup>1</sup> Made at the Sixth Restricted Session, May 25. See telegram Secto 302, May 26, p. 920.

<sup>2</sup> For the text of the speech delivered by the Secretary at Los Angeles on June 11, see Department of State Bulletin, June 28, 1954, pp. 971-973.

In conclusion, Offroy reiterated he had expressed personal views and asked his name not be divulged in connection therewith.

SMITH

751G.00/6-1554 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

TOP SECRET      PRIORITY

GENEVA, June 15, 1954—10 p. m.

Dulte 183. Eyes only Secretary from Under Secretary. Your Tedul 197.<sup>1</sup> Fully concur in your personal opinion that we should at this time try to carry situation along, avoiding either formal refusal to train Vietnamese or massive commitment of additional personnel to MAAG. Depending on development of SEA situation, could we not if appropriate moment occurs, proceed with beginning of O'Daniel plan<sup>2</sup> in small way, say the start of one Vietnamese division, without material increase in MAAG? Realize that decision on timing, and extent of action, would depend on what happens to Vietnam Government as well as the field.

My Dulte 174<sup>3</sup> was written after my last hurried talk with Bidault, during which I got impression that principal sticking point on final agreement with French would be our insistence on unqualified assurance that "France will not itself withdraw from the battle until it is won". Bidault indicated that this implied too much to the French people. I asked Bidault at that time to see Dillon as soon as he could, get clearly in mind present state of military discussions, and give his definite and minimum position. Since then, of course, I have asked Chauvel categorically if French do or do not want to internationalize, and as I told you he replied that "he did not know", and that "Bidault still expected to get something here".

Your conclusion regarding present French position re internationalization is certainly correct. It might change, however, and it may be that we should not close the door too soon, even though it could be opened again. British attitude after Geneva will have important bearing on our overall plans for the area. Incidentally, Casey has given me a copy of Chiefs of Staff report as result of five-power conference.<sup>4</sup> He is very disappointed, as is Eden, at mediocre results; i.e.,

<sup>1</sup> Dated June 14, p. 1147.

<sup>2</sup> For documentation on General O'Daniel's proposals, see volume XIII.

<sup>3</sup> Dated June 12, p. 1126.

<sup>4</sup> For extracts of the "Report of the Five-Power Military Conference of June 3-11, 1954," June 11, see volume XII.

a jump from the delta to the Kra peninsula with no consideration of intermediate positions or alternatives.

SMITH

---

396.1 GE/6-1554 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET

GENEVA, June 15, 1954—10 p. m.

Secto 448. Repeated information Paris 437, Saigon 169, London 286. Limit distribution. Molotov asked to see Eden this morning re Soviet proposals yesterday regarding Indochina.

Re composition: Molotov suggested possible addition Indonesia to four countries already proposed by Communists. He said Indonesia was Colombo power and had indicated interest in problem by sending representative Geneva to discuss matters with Soviet and other delegations. Eden said Burma better addition since it was limitrophe country. Molotov agreed Burma interested party but said if limitrophe country added someone might propose Thailand which was unacceptable. Eden had impression Molotov's opposition to Burma not absolute.

Re supervision: Molotov stressed importance mixed commission not subordinate to international commission. Did not see how this could work in practice unless international commission would bring in large army and he was opposed to that.

Eden replied that there must be provision for resolving cases where mixed committee unable reach agreement. This could be done only by international commission on the spot with authority to arbitrate, give rulings, and reach decisions by majority vote on all subjects with which authorized to deal.

Molotov replied his latest proposal provided for majority vote on number questions and only reserved for unanimous decision questions liable lead to reopening of hostilities or related to amendments to the agreement. Eden asked how international commission would decide whether a question was one for decision by majority or unanimous vote. Molotov said only serious cases would require unanimity. He did not deny that difficulties would arise over determination of what constituted serious cases and finally suggested this question might be discussed further. Eden agreed and added it would be less difficult to settle questions re supervision if the military talks on Vietnam had reached conclusion and we knew what sort of military agreement was to be supervised. Molotov agreed it would be great advance if military agreement reached and that this might also facilitate discussion supervisory arrangements.

In answer Eden's question, Molotov said no military contacts made yesterday since French colonel in Paris.

Molotov told Eden he would "suggest something" tomorrow re Laos and Cambodia. Eden got word to Chinese today that UK absolutely firm on Laos and Cambodia.

New subject: Chauvel wishes establish nine-nation group to work on technical aspects control in order avoid appearance French being left alone to deal with Viet Minh. Chinese made similar suggestion to French Deputy Secretary-General this morning.

SMITH

JUNE 16, 1954

396.1 GE/6-1654 : Telegram

Smith-Chauvel Meeting, Geneva, June 16, Morning: The United States Delegation to the Department of State

TOP SECRET

PRIORITY

GENEVA, June 16, 1954—6 p. m.

Dulte 187. Repeated information Paris 443. Paris eyes only Ambassador. Reference Tedul 198 repeated information Paris 4850 Saigon 2601.<sup>1</sup> Chauvel informed me this morning that in Franco-Viet Minh "underground military talks" (conducted by Colonel de Brebisson on French side) Viet Minh had demanded all of Tonkin and entire delta area including Hanoi (to become Headquarters Viet Minh Army) and Haiphong be turned over to Viet Minh. French without agreeing had implied that if anything like this settlement were made, French would demand free hand in south, indicating area south of line starting approximately 18 parallel on Laotian border and running southeast approximately to Badon (this line marked somewhat indefinitely on map in Chauvel's office), French had also indicated necessity for enclave and port in delta area, implying temporary tenure for troop withdrawal. Chauvel indicated Ely felt he could not defend delta area and better have French forces therein by negotiations than lose them in battle. French raised question evacuation their troops, French citizens, and Vietnam Catholics from Tonkin area but had received no reply from Viet Minh. Chauvel also stated French had made clear that Laos and Cambodia were not involved in this proposed settlement. No mention was made regrouping Viet Minh forces south this line. Last conversation three days ago and nothing has developed since. Chauvel continued that Vietnamese had no knowledge this proposal and if acceptable to French it would be most difficult to sell it to them, which might be necessary within next few days. He implied that Ambassador Heath might be of real service this connection.

<sup>1</sup> Dated June 14, p. 1148.

I informed Chauvel of Zhukov-Kingsbury Smith conversation (Secto 423 repeated Paris 418<sup>2</sup>) emphasizing advisability French retaining foothold in north preferably Haiphong-Hanoi area, but at least Haiphong. This, with possibly, small compensating enclave for Viet Minh south of line, would avoid appearance of outright partition. Chauvel was somewhat dubious whether this would be possible but thought that maybe foothold on delta coast at Hon Gay, where there are important French coal interests, might be retained. I told Chauvel that we did not wish be suddenly placed in position where these secret negotiations might have result of our being abruptly confronted with agreement or proposed settlement which we would not feel able accept and from which we might have to disassociate ourselves, and stressed need our being informed on continuing basis of conversations. Suggested Colonel Dwan be liaison officer this respect. Chauvel agreed entirely.

SMITH

---

<sup>2</sup> For a memorandum of conversation of this discussion, see p. 1109. Summary of conversation transmitted to the Department of State in telegram Secto 423, June 11. (396.1 GE/6-1154)

---

Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 285

Memorandum by the Special Adviser to the United States Delegation (Heath) to the Head of the Delegation (Smith)

SECRET

GENEVA, June 16, 1954.

Subject: Meeting of the Six this morning.

1. Bidault is returning to Geneva this afternoon at about 5:00 and remaining through tomorrow morning. He will not be present at this afternoon's session. He will, however, wish to see Mr. Molotov and the heads of the five friendly delegations.

2. Chauvel stated French most anxious to avoid giving the impression that the windup of the Korean phase is a precedent for a similar windup of the Indochina phase. He recognized, however, that the heads of some of the delegations might have to return home. After referring to recent discussions regarding the control problem and particularly to Eden's proposal of June 2nd regarding reference of the French proposal of that date to a technical committee and after referring to Molotov's proposal of June 14, Chauvel said that perhaps the time had come to refer this whole matter to a committee made up of representatives of the nine delegations who would study it. Chauvel tabled a paper on this subject (translation attached).<sup>1</sup> Chauvel said that he was thinking of presenting this proposal this afternoon. The Cambodian Delegation took a strong position against the introduction of any proposal that would tend to relate to the particular case of Laos and Cambodia. He furthermore criticized Chauvel's proposal as putting Laos and Cambodia in the same class as Vietnam. I stated that I would have to refer the matter back to the head of my delegation but that it seemed to me there was considerable question as to timing and that we were perhaps not ready for the committee at this stage. The Vietnamese delegate also stated that he thought Chauvel's proposal would be premature. He added that reference should be made in the terms of reference of the proposed committee to the "authority" from which the control organism would depend (i.e., the guarantors). (Later Offroy made it very clear that what the French wish to avoid is any departure from the conference of the leading figures without leaving representatives of the nine delegations apparently engaged in useful work. Offroy referred to the Eden proposal of a recess pending a report from the military conversations and said that the French wished to avoid any complete recess.)

3. With regard to the specific matter of Laos and Cambodia which is to be discussed this afternoon, it was agreed that the Cambodians and Laotians in that order would present their cases. The Cambodians have already made a specific proposal (June 8), the Laotians will make a similar one this afternoon. The French do not plan to make their statement in support of the Laotians and Cambodians until after hearing from the Communists. (The British representative indicated that Molotov had told Eden that the Soviets would have some suggestions to make.) I indicated that we would speak but I did not state at what point. (Chauvel at one point suggested the possibility of military talks on Laos and Cambodia but did not develop his thinking.)

4. It was suggested that it would be good tactics to avoid strong statements on our side until after we had heard from the Communists.

5. The Cambodians will again stress their willingness to make commitments regarding the nonintroduction of foreign troops into Cambodia and the restriction of the Cambodian military establishment to what is required for Cambodian defense.

6. Ambassador Offroy told me that he saw no objection to the mention in your remarks of specific Vietminh units which have invaded Laos and Cambodia.

---

<sup>1</sup> Not attached to the source text.

396.1 GE/6-1754 : Telegram

*Fourteenth Restricted Session on Indochina, Geneva, June 16, 3 p. m. :
The United States Delegation to the Department of State*<sup>1</sup>

CONFIDENTIAL

GENEVA, June 17, 1954—1 a. m.

Secto 461. Repeated information Paris 448, London 296, Saigon 174, Tokyo 145, Moscow 132, Phnom Penh, Vientiane unnumbered. Tokyo pass CINCFE. Department pass Defense. Fourteenth restricted session, Wednesday, June 16.

Eden presiding.

Cambodian delegate referred to his June 8 proposal (Secto 367)<sup>2</sup> and recalled essential principle of evacuation Viet Minh troops from Cambodia. He rehearsed fact of invasion by regular troops in April 1954. In describing functions of international commission in Cambodia he said first task would be concerned with evacuation regular and irregular Viet Minh troops, second with its exchange and release of prisoners of war and civilian internees, and third with the prevention of all foreign activities prejudicial to peace in Cambodia.

Cambodian delegate made point he had accepted simultaneity of cessation of hostilities in all three states and also meeting of military representatives in Geneva and on the spot. He also stressed Cambodian readiness to make commitment that Cambodia will not admit foreign troops or permit foreign bases on her territory or make increases in her military establishment beyond requirements of efficient national defense.

Cambodian delegate again denied existence of so-called resistance movement. He reiterated independence of Cambodia and repeated earlier statements re loyalty to King, elections and constitutional processes. He stressed Cambodia's lack of desire to intervene in affairs of neighbors.

Cambodian delegate concluded with following statements: "Let Cambodia not be reproached tomorrow for seeking to defend itself by no matter what means when justice has been refused her and everything has been done to prevent her from living in a state of neutrality, freedom and peace at home."

---

<sup>1</sup> A set of minutes of this session (IC Restricted/14) is in Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 278. The minutes indicate that the meeting convened at 3 p. m. and adjourned at 7:30 p. m. The minutes are also printed in Conférence de Genève, pp. 300-310. The speech by Tep Phan, Indochina Document IC/32, June 16, and proposals made by Laos, the Viet Minh, and the People's Republic of China, Indochina Documents IC/31, IC/33, and IC/35, respectively, June 16-17, are in Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 279A. A proposal made by the French Delegation, June 16, is in Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 283.

A brief summary of the meeting was transmitted to the Department of State in telegram Secto 462, June 17. (396.1 GE/6-1754)

<sup>2</sup> Dated June 3, p. 1014.

The Laotian delegate took generally similar line. He stressed national unity of Laotian people, democratic conditions and complete independence. He referred to presence of Viet Minh invaders known to all objective observers. He submitted a six-point proposal involving (1) evacuation Viet Minh regular and irregular troops; (2) concentration of French Union troops at bases established in Franco-Laotian agreements; (3) disarmament of remaining irregular troops with departure of Vietnamese citizens and granting of all civic rights to Laotians; (4) freeing of prisoners of war and civil internees; (5) a system of international control to be applied also to supervising the frontiers; and (6) a meeting of representatives of the military commands at Geneva, these representatives to create, if they so desire, special military committees to coordinate troop movements on the spot. (Text transmitted in Secto 457.<sup>3</sup>)

Chou En-lai then referred to his proposal of May 27 (Secto 326<sup>4</sup>) and to agreement of May 31 based on Eden proposal (Secto 347<sup>5</sup>). He recalled that he had stated on several occasions that conditions not same in each of three countries of Indochina; there are differences between all three although they cannot be disassociated in clear-cut manner. He then expressed following views:

First, in accordance with May 29 agreement, there must be early and simultaneous cessation of hostilities throughout Indochina. Examination of situation in Laos and Cambodia must necessarily proceed on this principle.

Second, [garbled group] in the agreement of May 29, representatives of the two commands should now examine the situation in Laos and Cambodia so far as the disposition of forces at the time of the cessation of hostilities is concerned.<sup>6</sup> Chou En-lai pointed out that the representatives of the two commands have been meeting with regard to Vietnam since June 2 and that they should now study both in Geneva and on the spot the disposition of forces in Laos and Cambodia. This study must take into account (a) that opposing native forces in Laos and Cambodia include the armies under resistance governments in the two countries, and (b) that all foreign forces must be withdrawn in accordance with the DRV proposal of May 10.

Third, from date of cessation of hostilities there must be prevention of introduction into Indochina from outside of all kinds of military personnel and material. This principle must apply to Laos and Cambodia also. Chou En-lai stated he had noted with understanding Cam-

<sup>3</sup> Infra.

<sup>4</sup> Dated May 27, p. 947.

<sup>5</sup> Dated May 29, p. 975.

<sup>6</sup> The actual text of Chou En-lai's remarks, taken from the verbatim minutes of the session, was as follows: "Second, the agreement on May 29 provides that representatives of the two commands should study the disposition of forces to be made upon the cessation of hostilities, beginning with the question of regrouping areas in Vietnam. Now we should examine the problem of bringing about an armistice in Laos and Cambodia on the basis of this principle, as already agreed upon."

bodian's statement of June 8 recalling Cambodian requirements of arms for defense. This would apply also to Laos. This question requires further consideration. At same time Chou En-lai made clear that if peace is to be restored in Indochina, no foreign country must be permitted to establish bases in the territory of any of the three countries of Indochina after the armistice.

Fourth, the principle of international supervision applicable to Laos and Cambodia seems to be generally accepted. However, special conditions there are to be taken into account in applying international supervision.

Fifth, there seems to be no problem involved in the release and exchange of prisoners of war and civil internees.

Sixth, there should be no persecution of persons having collaborated with either party during the war.

Chou En-lai then submitted proposal transmitted as Secto 458.<sup>7</sup>

DRV delegate then spoke at some length on necessity recognizing importance national liberation movements Laos and Cambodia; he maintained movements, based on past history and glories these countries, had been active for many years subsequent to French conquest and colonization. Even after France had entrenched itself in Indochina people continued fight for independence. After defeat Japanese occupation Viet Minh, Khmer, and Pathet-Lao Republic formed. French tried to break down these resistance movements with arms and then endeavored entice them with pseudo-independence and democratic reforms. Aim US interventionists was to take over from French colonialists. DRV representatives respected and saluted these liberation movements and wished to do everything possible to help them. He refuted "tendentious" assertions that there were external influences (Viet Minh) in Laos and Cambodia. When imperialism and colonialism exists resistance comes from within and could not be imposed artificially from without. He then added that he supported Chinese resolution and expressed hope that negotiations in Geneva and on spot would take place.

DRV delegate then referred to his May 10 proposals and said question restoring peace Vietnam necessitated discussion political and military issues. Military discussions have shown some progress here at Geneva and time had come to take up political matters. For this reason, he submitted proposal transmitted as Secto 459.<sup>8</sup>

French delegate (Chauvel) expressed pleasure that DRV delegate had not objected to Chinese proposals. He would later comment on DRV proposals but wished now limit his remarks to Laos and Cambodia. Communists appeared concerned re bases these countries. Proposals made by Laotian and Cambodian delegates should give assurances on this score. When Viet Minh troops withdrawn no foreign troops would remain Laos and Cambodia. The Cambodians had said that if there were no danger of aggression there would be no appeal for foreign troops. What more guarantees do Communists desire? Re Laos, France had agreement with military commitments. When Viet Minh troops withdrawn French troops would be reduced to very minimum needed to maintain security and would be subject international control. France ready accept these controls. If proposals Laos and Cambodia accepted adequate guarantees would exist in military fields.

---

<sup>7</sup> Dated June 17, p. 1162.

<sup>8</sup> Dated June 17, p. 1163.

Re statements made by Communist side concerning resistance movement, French delegate felt that Laos and Cambodia statement had given satisfactory answer. If hostilities cease, free elections would be held these countries with neutral commission to supervise them. Khmer and Pathet-Lao people would have same civic rights and could take their place in society. French delegate associated acceptance Laos and Cambodia proposals which he believed would bring peace and security to area. He continued that he had listened with care and read with interest Chinese proposal which contained many useful elements. He would comment on them at later date. He surprised to hear today DRV proposal, it being his understanding that subject Laos and Cambodia would be discussed this meeting. He felt tabling this proposal was endeavor to mix up everything. He was not critical of proposal itself but wished to take things up in methodical order.

US delegate, though inscribed to speak, stated thought it better to limit remarks to few words in view lateness hour. He said he listened with interest to Chinese statement which seemed to him restrained and reasonable. He could not say same thing regarding DRV statement which was not reasonable or restrained. He proposed that conference return to subject Laos and Cambodia. In closing, he remarked that at first glance there appeared to be certain points in Chinese proposal which might be agreed to and others which seemed to him similar to points proposed by Laotian and Cambodian delegates.

Soviet delegate pointed out that conference in considering restoration peace in Indochina gave immediate attention cease-fire Vietnam which was main theater operations. However, entire area had many similar characteristics and he could not agree that situation Vietnam different from Laos and Cambodia although latter two had certain peculiarities which must be taken into account. All three states struggling for freedom and independence. He believed re-establishment peace all three Associated States could not but be related to desire those people for peace, liberty, and freedom. In examining question restoration peace Laos and Cambodia certain difficulties had arisen. Conference had heard representatives from only one of the belligerents and had not heard from the resistance movements. Soviet delegate considered Cambodian proposal of June 8 as one-sided and cited paragraph two as example. Same thing could be said of today's Laotian proposal. He believed Chinese proposal covered all main questions and took into account desires of representatives Laos and Cambodia. It might form basis for decision this conference. DRV proposals took into account measures, if not taken, would mean no cease-fire Laos and Cambodia. If accepted cease-fire could be agreed upon. He therefore supported DRV proposal.

Soviet delegate then referred to his proposal June 14 regarding composition, functions neutral commission and mixed commissions. He continued that he would like to meet desires other delegates and therefore suggested that international neutral commission be composed of five, not four members, and that Indonesia, for example, be added. India would have chairmanship and other members would be Poland, Czechoslovakia, Pakistan. Another variant might be a more restricted international commission composed of India (chairmanship), Poland, and Indonesia or "some other Asiatic power". He thought agreement might be reached on one these proposals. He again endorsed his June 14 proposal adding Soviet delegate considered entirely unacceptable suggestion that mixed commission be subordinate to international commission.

Vietnam delegate stated he felt Laos and Cambodia proposals most reasonable on which he would speak at later date. He noted conference had agreed deal first with military questions Vietnam and he felt that much confusion would be caused by discussing military and political questions at same time. More reasonable complete military talks then enter political field. He still supported his May 13 proposals and when political discussions were initiated he would make his views known thereon. He maintained DRV statements regarding independence Vietnam had no basis whatsoever and pointed out he had communicated to conference treaties of independence recently initiated Paris. He again maintained that elections Vietnam should be under supervision United Nations.

UK delegate started to close meeting stating discussion had been important and many proposals tabled. He suggested that this might be studied carefully and views exchanged. French delegate interjected with statement he wished to submit still another proposal on procedures re controls (see Secto 460).<sup>9</sup> UK closed meeting with suggestion that all proposals be studied carefully and delegates meet Friday, June 18, to discuss them.

SMITH

---

<sup>9</sup> Dated June 17, p. 1164.

396.1 GE/6-1654 : Telegram

*Fourteenth Restricted Session on Indochina, Geneva, June 16, 3 p. m. :
The United States Delegation to the Department of State*

CONFIDENTIAL

GENEVA, June 16, 1954—midnight.

Secto 457. Repeated information Paris 444, Saigon 170, London 292, Tokyo 141, Moscow 128, Phnom Penh, Vientiane unnumbered. Tokyo pass CINCFE. Department pass Defense. Following is text of Laotian proposal presented at restricted session on Indochina Wednesday, June 16:

"1. On the date of the cessation of hostilities, the regular and irregular VietMinh troops will be withdrawn from Laotian territories.

2. The French Union forces will return to the bases specifically provided in the agreements existing between the Kingdom of Laos and the French Republic. Those forces which are not considered by Laos as necessary for its security will leave country.

3. Remaining irregular elements will be disarmed. The Vietnamese components thereof will return to Vietnamese territory.

The Laotian nationals, after having presented themselves to the regular Laotian authorities, will recover without reservations the rights enjoyed by all Laotian citizens and particularly the right to be voters and candidates to the National assembly. They will enjoy the legislative provisions already applied to the members of the former Lao-Issari movement which contemplate particularly their right to join or to be reincorporated into the civil service or into the national army.

4. The two parties will proceed to the total liberation of prisoners of war and civil internees.

5. An international control will be established to supervise the execution of the different points of the above agreement and especially of the troop movements contemplated in Articles 1 and 2.

It will also be applied to the supervision of the integrity of the frontiers.

6. Representatives of the military commands will meet at once in Geneva in order to study the conditions of execution of points one and two. They will be able to propose the creation of ad hoc military committees whose purpose will be to coordinate on-the-spot troop movements in any given region. They will as soon as possible submit the result of their labors to the conference."

SMITH

396.1 GE/6-1754 : Telegram

*Fourteenth Restricted Session on Indochina, Geneva, June 16, 3 p. m. :
The United States Delegation to the Department of State*

CONFIDENTIAL

GENEVA, June 17, 1954—1 a. m.

Secto 458. Repeated information Paris 445, London 293, Tokyo 142, Saigon 171, Phnom Penh, Vientiane unnumbered, Moscow 129. Department pass Defense; Tokyo pass CINCFE. The following is text of proposal submitted by Chou En-lai at restricted meeting on Indochina, Wednesday, June 16:

"The countries participating in the Geneva conference are agreed on the following:

"1. The cessation of hostilities will be declared simultaneously in Laos and Cambodia at the same time as in Vietnam.

"2. Representatives of the commands of the two belligerent parties will begin direct negotiations at Geneva and on the spot on the subject of the cessation of hostilities in Laos and Cambodia.

"3. After the cessation of hostilities there will not be introduced from abroad into Laos and Cambodia new troops and military personnel, army, navy and air, as well as all kinds of arms and munitions. The question of the quantity and the category of arms necessary for self defense which may be brought in will be the object of separate negotiations.

"4. The competence of the International Control Commission will extend over Laos and Cambodia, taking into account the special situations of these two countries.

"5. After agreement between the commands, prisoners of war and civil internees will be liberated or exchanged.

"6. Persons having collaborated with the opposing party during the war must not be the object of prosecution."

SMITH

---

396.1 GE/6-1754 : Telegram

*Fourteenth Restricted Session on Indochina, Geneva, June 16, 3 p. m. :
The United States Delegation to the Department of State*

CONFIDENTIAL

GENEVA, June 17, 1954—1 a. m.

Secto 459. Repeated information Paris 446, London 294, Tokyo 143, Saigon 172, Moscow 130, Phnom Penh, Vientiane unnumbered. Tokyo for CINCFE. Department pass Defense. Following is text of proposal submitted by Pham Van Dong at restricted Indochina meeting Wednesday, June 16:

"The participants of the Geneva Conference are agreed on the following:

1. In the interests of establishing a stable peace in Indochina political questions must be settled on a basis of respect for the principle of complete and real sovereignty and national independence of Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia.

2. In order to restore the unity of Vietnam and to create a single government in Vietnam there must be carried out in the shortest possible time after the cessation of hostilities free general elections by secret ballot throughout the territory of Vietnam.

In order to create appropriate conditions which will assure the organization of the above-mentioned elections, the following must be recognized as necessary:

a. Withdrawal from the territory of Vietnam of all foreign troops before the organization of the elections;

b. The international supervision of the organization of the free general elections in Vietnam by the international supervisory commission composed of . . .

3. An undertaking by the belligerent parties not to prosecute the persons who collaborated with the opposing party during the war.

4. Establishment of economic and cultural relations between France and the Democratic Republic of Vietnam on a basis of equality and of mutual interests.

5. Undertaking by each of the three states of Vietnam, Cambodia and Laos to respect the independence, the unity and internal regime of the other states.

6. Other political questions concerning Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia must be settled at a later time in the interests of consolidating peace and the guarantee of democratic rights and national interests of the peoples of Indochina."

SMITH

396.1 GE/6-1754 : Telegram

*Fourteenth Restricted Session on Indochina, Geneva, June 16, 3 p. m. :
The United States Delegation to the Department of State*

CONFIDENTIAL

GENEVA, June 17, 1954—1 a. m.

Sectó 460. Repeated information Paris 447, London 295, Tokyo 144, Saigon 173, Moscow 131, Phnom Penh, Vientiane unnumbered. Tokyo for CINCFE. Department pass Defense. Following is translation of proposal French delegate mentioned at restricted Indochina meeting Wednesday, June 16, and which will be distributed to 9 delegations June 17 for discussion June 18.<sup>1</sup>

"A committee, composed of representatives of the 9 delegations of the conference, will gather as soon as possible in order to study, on the base of the proposals which have been made by the various delegates, the technical conditions (modalities) of the control over agreements on the cessation of hostilities in Vietnam, in Cambodia and in Laos.

The committee will submit its recommendations to the conference as soon as possible—and in case of differences the points of divergence—on the various aspects of the problem for each of the three countries. It will study particularly questions relative to the structure, organization and the competence of the control commissions."

SMITH

<sup>1</sup> This proposal, Indochina Document IC/34, June 17, together with a communication from the French Delegation pertaining to the proposal, is in Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 279A.

396.1 GE/6-1754 : Telegram

*Fourteenth Restricted Session on Indochina, Geneva, June 16, 3 p. m. :
The United States Delegation to the Department of State*

TOP SECRET

GENEVA, June 17, 1954—1 p. m.

Dulte 190. Repeated information Paris 450. Paris limit distribution. Yesterday at recess Molotov asked me what I thought of the Chinese proposals on Laos and Cambodia. I said they seemed reasonable but they did not provide for withdrawal of Viet Minh troops. If this were provided for, and satisfactory control commission agreed upon, they would deserve careful consideration. Molotov said he would propose adding a fifth state, possibly Indonesia, to his original slate of India, Pakistan, Poland and Czechoslovakia, with India as chairman. I said Indonesia was new country and still a little unstable.

I would suggest Philippines or Thailand, both democratic countries. Molotov said they were "a little too democratic", but that Burma might be considered. I said that Burma had long frontier with her powerful neighbor, China, and would be very sensitive to pressure. Molotov said that on more restricted basis it might be possible to consider India as chairman, with either Poland or Czechoslovakia and "an Asian state" making third. This he did in fact propose at end of session.

I said that I would not speak against the Chinese proposals at this time and that if China's principal preoccupation, as I had heard, was that United States not establish military bases in Laos or Cambodia, there should be no concern about that, as the United States had no desire or intention to do so as long as these two states were adequately equipped to defend themselves and their security guaranteed.

This conversation should be considered with that of Eden and Chou En-lai reported in my following Secto 463.<sup>1</sup>

SMITH

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated June 17, p. 1170.

396.1 GE/6-1654 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

TOP SECRET PRIORITY

GENEVA, June 16, 1954—3 p. m.

Dulte 186. Eyes only Secretary from Under Secretary. Eden departs tomorrow, taking most of his personal staff. Lord Reading, Minister of State, remains in charge, supported by good professional FSO, Colonel Monckton and about half of present technical and communications staff. Eden does not wish further to downgrade British representation while Molotov remains and in deference to the French. He estimates Reading will stay on for week or ten days.

Chauvel will remain in charge for French, who wish to retain nine power representation during military-technical negotiations on sub-ministerial level. Colonel Brabizon [Brebisson] is carrying on "underground" military talks. Chauvel expects decision may be arrived at within week or ten days. (See my Dulte 187 which follows.<sup>1</sup>)

Subject your approval,<sup>2</sup> I will leave on Saturday,<sup>3</sup> with Robertson, Phleger, and major part of our delegation. However, I believe we should not down-grade our representation too far during the next ten days or two weeks. I recommend :

a. That Ambassador Johnson remain in charge here as long as Reading and Molotov stay.

b. That Johnson be supported by Bonsal, Colonel Dwan, and minimum clerical and code personnel.

c. That Bonsal and Dwan remain after Johnson leaves, until end of military-technical staff talks.

As indicated in my Dulte 187, French expect difficult period when Viet Nameese are brought into picture and confronted with solution of "truncated" Viet Nam. I have made it clear to Chauvel that we must be kept informed on very secret basis, and that we cannot be confronted with sudden decision. French also know that we probably will not publicly associate ourselves with or publicly support such decision. Chauvel has promised that Brabizon [Brebisson] will keep Colonel Dwan informed.

SMITH

<sup>1</sup> Dated June 16, p. 1154.

<sup>2</sup> In telegram Tedul 204 to Geneva, June 16, drafted by the Secretary of State, the Secretary said "Agree" with reference to Dulte 186. (396.1 GE/6-1654)

<sup>3</sup> June 19.

751G.00/6-1654 : Telegram

The Secretary of State to the United States Delegation<sup>1</sup>

TOP SECRET      PRIORITY
LIMIT DISTRIBUTION

WASHINGTON, June 16, 1954—8 p. m.

Tedul 208. For Under Secretary and Ambassador. Bonnet has just left after reading a long message from Bidault, the substance of which was that the French no longer felt that US was committed to intervention on the conditions stated in our May 11 basic cable to Paris<sup>2</sup> and that this left them in a very difficult negotiating position at Geneva.

I said that it was quite true that the French could not have a continuing option to call US into war at some future undetermined date and under conditions which could not now be foreseen. On the other hand if and when there was a French Government which had the confidence of the Assembly and if it should then decide that it could not conclude an honorable armistice and that it was thus necessary to continue the struggle, the US would be prepared promptly to respond and that response would probably be along the lines of our May 11 telegram unless in the meantime the situation had further deteriorated to a point where the making of a stand in Indochina had become impracticable or so burdensome as to be out of proportion to the results obtainable.

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by the Secretary of State. Repeated to Paris as telegram 4624.

<sup>2</sup> Telegram 4023 to Paris, May 11; see volume XIII.

I said that I regretted not being able to make a response that would be more satisfactory to Bidault but that I could not conceive that it would be expected that the US would give a third power the option to put it into war at times and under conditions wholly of the other's choosing.

I suggest that Under Secretary or Ambassador (whoever sees Bidault first) should summarize foregoing to Bidault as am not confident that Bonnet who was in highly emotional state will adequately report.<sup>3</sup>

DULLES

---

<sup>3</sup> For a memorandum of the conversation between Secretary Dulles and Ambassador Bonnet, June 16, see volume XIII.

---

110.11 DU/6-1754 : Telegram

Smith-Bidault Meeting, Geneva, June 16, Evening: The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET

GENEVA, June 17, 1954—1 p. m.

Dulte 192. Eyes only Secretary from Under Secretary. At dinner last night Bidault, much the worse for wear, showed me a strong and unpleasant telegram he had sent to Bonnet for delivery to you and referred to in your Tedul 208.<sup>1</sup> I said that as I was his guest I would refrain from discussing unpleasant things till I saw him today. My guess is that Bonnet did not deliver this in original form, but in any event you should know and make allowances for fact that much of the basis of Bidault's pique is his disappointment in not being included in invitation to Churchill and Eden. He said one French paper had proclaimed this as "the end of France as a great power." Bidault is very tense and fatigued. He ate nothing at dinner and was in bad shape at the end. I am seeing him at noon today and will convey substance of Tedul 208. Congratulate you on your restraint. A lot of it is going to be needed during next few weeks.

SMITH

---

<sup>1</sup> Supra.

751G.00/6-1654 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of Defense

SECRET

GENEVA, June 16, 1954.

Army Message Gento 58. Action Defense, information USARMA Paris, USARMA Saigon, USARMA London, State Department. From Defense representative for Hensel from Sullivan. Following is summary French-Vietnamese military talks with Viet Minh 14 June reported to Defense representative by member French delegation :

1. Maps exchanged 11 June by both sides (see Gento 57<sup>1</sup>) compared and found to be widely divergent regarding areas over which each claims military superiority. Substantially Viet Minh position is that French hold only population centers. (Maps being reproduced by French delegation, copies promised US delegation when available.) No discussion thus far of possible regroupment areas.

2. Principal topic of discussion was preparation of paper setting forth summary of results of all meetings to date. Viet Minh representative tabled his version which French representative found unacceptable. Chief point of disagreement was Viet Minh assertion that French had put forward Laniel proposal of 5 March<sup>2</sup> on take it or leave it basis, and that Viet Minh had rejected it. French representative stated his reference to Laniel proposal intended merely as starting point for military discussions, that he expressed willingness to modify it, and that therefore, it was not subject to acceptance or rejection. Another point of disagreement in Viet Minh draft was statement of French position regarding Dong proposals of 25 May, advanced by Viet Minh representative at 4 June meeting. French representative found Viet Minh expression of reasons for French disagreement with Dong proposals inaccurate. French representative is redrafting paper and will present his version to Viet Minh 15 June. Presumably next meeting will be devoted to further discussion of maps and draft summary of progress to date.

Comment :

(a) French delegation contact, in response to direct question, flatly stated there were no military talks with Viet Minh going on in Geneva other than those herein reported ;

(b) Further informed Defense representatives that instructions were issued to General Ely to have a liaison officer at Dinh Cau 14 June during POW exchange available to make contact with Viet Minh liaison officer and discuss time and place for meeting of representatives military commanders in field. Viet Minh were informed in advance. French delegation has no information yet whether contact was made.

<sup>1</sup> Not printed.

<sup>2</sup> For outline of the Laniel proposal, see telegram 3240 from Paris. Mar. 6. p. 485.

JUNE 17, 1954

Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 322

Memorandum by the Adviser to the United States Delegation (Keppel) to the Coordinator of the Delegation (Johnson)

SECRET

[GENEVA,] June 17, 1954.

Subject: Recent Resumption of "Negotiating" Attitude by Communists

In evaluating the meaning of the conciliatory gestures which the Communist side made yesterday in the Indochina discussions, I think that we should not overlook the influence which Eden's sudden change of stance and the announcement of the forthcoming Churchill-Eisenhower conversations may have had on the Communists and, in particular, on the Soviets.

I personally am inclined to believe that the harshness of the position which Molotov took in the Indochinese discussions after his return from Moscow was probably primarily intended for its effect on the French political crisis and reflected real fear that EDC might after all go through if action were not taken fast. (As indicated in our memorandum of June 11 to General Smith,<sup>1</sup> his harsh line probably also reflected an estimate that we were not likely to intervene to save the Delta.) The manner in which Molotov went about contributing to the fall of the Laniel Government had, I believe, a wholly unexpected violent effect on Eden which must have been interpreted by the Soviets as implying that the progress which had been made toward getting the UK into a neutral role had been jeopardized. The announcement of the forthcoming Churchill-Eisenhower talks coming on top of Eden's change of position must have seemed to the Soviets like an alarming indication that the U.S. and British might agree on a practical policy to defend at least Laos and Cambodia if not also southern Vietnam.

In the light of this and in view of the fact that the Communists did not yesterday commit themselves publicly to anything of real significance, I think that we should be clear in our own minds that their performance might have been intended primarily as a tactical maneuver to forestall the serious consequences which might come out of the Churchill-Eisenhower talks. (The Communist performance probably also reflected a desire to repair damage done recently to their relations with Nehru.) It is, of course, probable that the Communists would accept a neutralized Laos and Cambodia if they got a relatively free hand in Vietnam and if by the neutralization of Laos and Cambodia our efforts to organize collective defense in Southeast Asia could be blocked.

<sup>1</sup> Not printed.

396.1 GE/6-1754 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET      NIACT

GENEVA, June 17, 1954—1 p. m.

Dulte 189. Eyes only Secretary from Under Secretary. Because of possibilities mentioned in last paragraph Dulte 186,<sup>1</sup> Robertson, Phleger and I believe and recommend that it would be desirable for Heath also to remain Geneva for a while after we leave. This for morale effect on Laotian and Cambodian delegations, as well as on Vietnamese. These little people are likely to feel that they are being deserted in what for them is crisis if Heath leaves now. Actual length of his stay would depend on situation as estimated by Johnson and decided by you. Do not think it would be more than ten days. Request your approval.

Also urgently request your opinion whether I should stop en route for call or lunch with Churchill. He has sent me three invitations for weekends, two by personal phone calls, and he phoned again last night implying that he thought Eden had interfered. I took this as a joke, but Eden said it was not, and urged me to stop in London. I would prefer not to do so, both on considerations of personal convenience which can be disregarded, and also British press, and I do not want to be quoted there before having made whatever report is required at home. Associates here think I should do so.

Just had report Eden probably will not leave today.

SMITH

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated June 16, p. 1165.

396.1 GE/6-1754 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET      PRIORITY

GENEVA, June 17, 1954—1 p. m.

Secto 463. Repeated information London 297, Saigon 175, priority Paris 451. Limit distribution. Chou En-lai asked to see Eden yesterday making reference to Caccia's call on Chinese in which Caccia had reiterated firmness of position on Laos and Cambodia (unnumbered paragraph 7, Secto 448<sup>1</sup>).

Eden said that Chou was obviously shaken over conclusion Korean conference, particularly rejection his final resolution, which he interpreted as slamming door any possibility Chinese participation any further Korean discussions. Said that "he could not stand" another rebuff of his efforts at conciliation and was concerned over Indochina situation. Eden said that with respect Korean situation he had replied Chou had thrown curved ball at conference, particularly at US, by his resolution, and that the US obviously could not agree to perpetuating Geneva Conference set up. It did not mean that China would necessarily be excluded from any further consideration Korean problem.

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated June 15, p. 1153.

Chou indicated he understood UK position respect Laos and Cambodia and its relation to the British position in Malaya. Said Chinese did not desire anything in Laos and Cambodia and were willing recognize "Kingdoms of Cambodia and Laos". Major Chinese worry is that US is attempting establish bases in Laos and Cambodia. China willing see Laos and Cambodia maintain relationship with France. Eden said Chou's major worry seemed to be US intentions that area and conviction we were attempting establish bases for assault on China. Chou said that he was willing see Laos and Cambodia independent states "in same manner as India and Burma".

Eden urged Chou to say to French directly whatever he had to say on Indochina, as French had major responsibility there.

SMITH

396.1 GE/6-1754 : Telegram

The Secretary of State to the United States Delegation<sup>1</sup>

SECRET NIACT

WASHINGTON, June 17, 1954—3 : 52 p. m.

Tedul 211. From Secretary. Re Secto 460.<sup>2</sup> I seriously doubt wisdom of US participation as member of Committee of Nine, which is really not a committee at all since nine is total membership of Conference. This it seems to me would put our Delegation in position of having to participate in making of decisions which ought not be made so far as US is concerned, except after consultation with Dept and perhaps even on those terms we would not want to share in making these decisions.

I have frequently pointed out, notably in last press conference, that US continuing presence Geneva would be subject to recognizing primacy of French and Associated States and only with view to being helpful in quasi-advisory or observer capacity.

Could not membership of Committee be reduced by elimination for example of US, UK, and Soviet Union, and perhaps Communist China, with understanding that such a subcommittee would report back, at which time definitive US position could be made known. Presumably US Del would be kept informed by French and Associated

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by the Secretary of State. Repeated to Paris as telegram 4636 and to Saigon as telegram 2636.

<sup>2</sup> Dated June 17, p. 1164.

States but we would avoid official participation in day by day Committee discussions which would mold decisions from which we might find it awkward subsequently to disassociate ourselves.

DULLES

396.1 GE/6-1654 : Telegram

The Secretary of State to the United States Delegation<sup>1</sup>

TOP SECRET PRIORITY WASHINGTON, June 17, 1954—3:54 p. m.

Tedul 212. From your Dulte 187<sup>2</sup> it is evident that "underground military talks", even more than conference proceedings, are pointing toward de facto partition under conditions such that Communist take-over of all Vietnam looms ahead clearly.

Chauvel's mention of difficulty of "selling" Vietminh proposal to Vietnamese and his doubt that Hanoi-Haiphong area can be held indicate to us that French may end by accepting any Vietminh proposition which offers hope of extricating Expeditionary Corps. In this connection we note failure of Vietminh thus far to react to French question regarding evacuation French troops and citizens and Vietnamese Catholics.

There can of course be no question of US participation in any attempt to "sell" a partition to non-Communist Vietnamese.

DULLES

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by Sturm of FE/PSA.

<sup>2</sup> Dated June 16, p. 1154.

Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 286

Memorandum of Conversation, by the Adviser to the United States Delegation (Bonsal)

SECRET

GENEVA, June 17, 1954.

Participants: Prince Wan, Leader of Thailand Delegation
The Under Secretary
Philip W. Bonsal

Subject: Thailand application to the Security Council.

Prince Wan called on General Smith at 4:00 p. m. He stated that he is satisfied with the present draft of the resolution which will be submitted to the Security Council in connection with Thailand's application. The Security Council meets tomorrow, June 18. It is probable that there will be no vote until Tuesday, June 22.

Prince Wan stated that he was leaving for Bern on June 23 and planned to leave Switzerland on June 26. He will proceed either to Bangkok or to New York depending on whether there is to be a special session of the General Assembly.

Prince Wan speculated on whether Malik, the representative of Lebanon on the Security Council, would vote affirmatively on the Thai resolution. He recalled that last year Malik had expressed himself generally as being in favor of the Thai policy in this regard. (Later this evening, Prince Wan telephoned to say that he had been informed by Ambassador Sarasin that Malik will vote for the Thai resolution.)<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Following the submission of the Thai appeal on May 29, the Security Council considered this question at its 672d, 673d, and 674th meetings, June 3, 16, and 18, respectively. On June 18 the draft resolution was put to the vote at the request of the U.S. Representative. It received 9 votes in favor, 1 against (Soviet Union), and 1 abstention (Lebanon). Since the vote against was that of a permanent member, the draft resolution was not adopted.

On July 7 the Minister for Foreign Affairs of Thailand sent a letter to the Secretary-General stating that since the Security Council had rejected the request for observers, his government was now obliged to have recourse to the General Assembly. He requested that an item entitled "Request of Thailand for observation under the Peace Observation Commission" be placed on the agenda of the eighth session of the General Assembly. On Aug. 20 the Thai Foreign Minister informed the Secretary-General that he had been instructed by his government not to press for a resumed session of the General Assembly. No further request was received to place the question on the agenda of the ninth regular session.

For information on the submission of the Thai appeal to the United Nations Security Council, see United Nations, Official Records of the Security Council, Ninth Year, 672d, 673d, and 674th Meetings; United Nations, Yearbook of the United Nations, 1954, pp. 60-61; and U.S. Department of State, US Participation in the UN: Report by the President to the Congress for the Year 1954, pp. 54-56. Voluminous unpublished material exists on the Thai appeal in the following files of the Department of State: 320.2 AB; 330; 396.1 GE; 751G.00; and in the IO files—master files of the Reference and Documents Section of the Bureau of International Organization Affairs.

396.1 GE/6-1754: Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

TOP SECRET

GENEVA, June 17, 1954—5 p. m.

Dulte 193. Repeated information London 298, Paris 452, Saigon 176. London, Paris and Saigon eyes only Ambassadors. Reference Secto 463, repeated information London 297, Paris 451, Saigon 175.<sup>1</sup> Dennis Allen (UK) gave Johnson this morning additional details on conversation with Chou En-lai. Chou stated that in case Cambodia resistance forces were small and all that was necessary was a political settlement by the present royal government with them "which could easily be obtained." In case of Laos, the resistance forces were larger, and it would be necessary recognize this fact by formation of regrouping areas along the border with Vietnam and China. The task in both states was twofold: The removal of foreign forces and dealing with the problem of domestic resistance movements. The military staff should get down to this task.

<sup>1</sup> Dated June 17, p. 1170.

In reply to Eden's query as to whether it would not be difficult obtain Viet Minh admission Viet Minh forces were in Laos and Cambodia, Chou stated it would "not be difficult" to get Viet Minh to agree to withdrawal their forces from those two states in context with withdrawal all foreign forces. Chou made no direct reply to Eden's reference to French-Laotian treaty on French bases in Laos. Eden expressed personal view that Chou wants settlement, but has some doubt with regard to degree of control he exercises over Viet Minh.

In long talk with Bidault this morning (first direct contact between Chinese and French) Chou substantially repeated what he told Eden yesterday (in conversation with Bidault, Chou referred to Viet Minh forces in Laos and Cambodia as "volunteers"). Bidault had also seen Molotov this morning and reported that both Molotov and Chou are obviously greatly concerned over any break-up Indochina conference in pattern of Korean conference as well as of lowering level conference below level of Foreign Ministers. Bidault said they clearly want to keep the conference going. Bidault and I agree (Eden did not comment) that it was important we do nothing dispel Chou's worries over US bases in Laos and Cambodia.

I also expressed personal opinion that important Laos and Cambodia move ahead as quickly and as vigorously as possible with appeal to UN. Eden and Bidault agreed, Eden adding that important Vietnam not get mixed up with Laos and Cambodia cases UN.

Chauvel showed me handwritten note from Ely, in his political capacity, urging against attempting hold any enclave in delta and recommending straight partition formula. I could not resist expressing contempt for such an easy "sellout" of last remaining foothold in north and said we could under no circumstances publicly associate ourselves with such a solution

SMITH

---

396.1 GE/6-1754 : Telegram

The Secretary of State to the United States Delegation<sup>1</sup>

TOP SECRET      NIACT      WASHINGTON, June 17, 1954—7:44 p. m.

Tedul 215. For Under Secretary and Ambassador from Secretary. Reference Sectos 458, 459, 461, 463 and Dulte 190.<sup>2</sup> Chou

<sup>1</sup>Drafted by the Secretary of State, Sturm of FE/PSA, and Gullion of S/P. Repeated to Paris as telegram 4649.

<sup>2</sup>All dated June 17, pp. 1162, 1163, 1157, 1170, and 1165, respectively.

En-lai's proposal concerning Laos and Cambodia (Secto 458) seems to us discouraging in that it marks little advance over his proposal of May 27 (Secto 326<sup>3</sup>), except that it acknowledges our insistence on separate identities of three Associated States. Following particulars seem open to serious objection.

1. New proposals would still have the enemy represented by a phony Khmer and Pathet Lao command and appear designed in effect to perpetuate Vietminh presence in Laos and Cambodia.

2. Secto 458 fails to make any provision for withdrawal of Vietminh forces from Laos and Cambodia. Its wording would tend to provide sanction for Vietminh troops now in the two countries to remain there in support of any Khmer or Pathet Lao troops which could be mustered. Moreover no foreign troops could be admitted to Laos and Cambodia to defend the countries, as part of united action in the area, or train their armies, nor could the latter be provided with the means to fight.

3. Paragraph 4 in later proposal admits the concept of an international control commission and makes no mention of the joint committee of military representatives which all Communist proposals regarding a cessation of hostilities have hitherto described as bearing the real responsibility for implementing any armistice.

4. Broadly speaking, think important that neither we nor other friendly delegations give any impression of agreement which would exclude possibility bringing Laos and Cambodia into some collective security system in Southeast Asia or if this should be done making the military arrangements implicit in any such relationship.

I was interested in reaction you were able to draw from Molotov on composition of control Commission. I doubt we can get Thailand or Philippines, let alone both, on it. Our position of India, Pakistan, Ceylon, Burma and Indonesia seems the one we should stick on.

DULLES

---

<sup>3</sup> Dated May 27, p. 947.

JUNE 18, 1954

396.1 GE/6-1854

Memorandum by the Adviser to the United States Delegation (Bonsal) to the Deputy United States Representative (Robertson)

SECRET

GENEVA, June 18, 1954.

Subject: Meeting of the Six this morning.

1. Chauvel reported on Bidault's talk yesterday with Chou En-lai. Chou En-lai apparently agrees to recognize the Royal Governments in both countries and, with regard to Cambodia, to recognize that the handling of the Khmer movement is a question of internal politics only. With regard to Laos, Chou still insists on regrouping zones in northern Laos, along the Chinese and Vietnamese frontiers, for the Pathet Lao. Chou's position is that the Vietminh in the countries are "volunteers", the withdrawal of which could be worked out by military staff conversations.

2. The Cambodians and Laotians will talk this afternoon with reference to the formal Chinese Communist proposal. They will ask for certain clarifications regarding the parties concerned and the terms of reference of the military talks. If these clarifications seem satisfactory, they will then make a definite proposal for military conversations. The Cambodians insist that these conversations take place in Cambodia and not at Geneva. The Cambodians and Laotians will speak separately with the idea that perhaps this afternoon we can reach agreement on military conversations for both Laos and Cambodia. (With regard to the military conversations, the Cambodian position is that because of the fluid military situation in Cambodia and because of the danger that the Vietminh might send some alleged Khmer resitants to Geneva they prefer conversations on the spot. The Laotians expressed themselves strongly against any regrouping zones in Laos.) The military conversations could result in recommendations which would be reported back to the Conference so that these recommendations could be correlated and coordinated with the other work of the Conference including the military settlement in Vietnam.

3. Chauvel spoke about the future work of the Conference and the desirability of providing for continuity after the departure of Eden and General Smith. He said the Chinese Communists believe they lost a good deal of face because of the method by which the Korean phase was terminated. Chauvel indicated that he probably would not discuss his proposal for a nine-delegation committee this afternoon although he left this open.

4. Chauvel may present a French proposal for the conditions of international control in Laos and Cambodia.

---

751G.00/6-1854 : Telegram

Johnson-Chauvel Meeting, Geneva, June 18, Morning: The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET      PRIORITY

GENEVA, June 18, 1954—3 p. m.

Dulte 195. Repeated information Paris 455, Saigon 177. Paris eyes only Ambassador; Saigon eyes only Ambassador. Johnson saw Chauvel this morning and discussed with him conference situation in light Tedul 211.<sup>1</sup> Johnson stated seemed to us that such fundamental questions as composition, voting procedures and authority of international control commission should be dealt with in conference rather than by committee. If conference reached decision on fundamental principles, working out of details could be done by committee of experts of principally interested parties in same pattern as present Franco-Viet Minh military conversations.

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated June 17, p. 1171.

Chauvel said this would be agreeable except that question of authority, which he termed "relationship between international commission and joint committees" could be dealt with by technical committee, thus implying France not prepared to maintain principle of subordination joint committees to international commission. As French have already circulated proposal contained Secto 460<sup>2</sup> through secretariat, it was agreed we would make suggestion along foregoing lines at today's restricted meeting. Chauvel said they did not yet have any further indication as to what attitude Chinese would take on French proposal entirely clear from conversation with Chauvel that his main interest is in keeping some conference activity of nine going and that if regardless of level representation we prepared continue some conference meetings would probably meet French point of view. Appears French proposal made on assumption that there would be complete recess of conference with departure of Smith and Eden.

Chauvel made reference to his conversation with Smith yesterday (Dulte 193—last paragraph),<sup>3</sup> making inquiry as to exactly what we had in mind. Johnson in reply read to him paragraphs 5, 6 and 7 basic instructions (Tosec 138)<sup>4</sup> stating that French willingness surrender even minimum enclave in north of Haiphong would so clearly contravene the principles which the US considered essential as to require our public dissociation with such a solution.

In reply to Chauvel's questions, Johnson made it clear we were speaking only of public disassociation from such a settlement. The US had in the past and of course would continue working with and supporting France in every possible way and wherever we could. Chauvel indicated full understanding our position. He said they had come to conclusion that what he termed any "leopard spot" solution was entirely impracticable and unenforceable. From standpoint of future it would be much better to retain a reasonably defensible line in Vietnam behind which there would be no enclaves of Viet Minh and do all possible behind that line to build up effective Vietnamese Government and defense. They had no intention of "any immediate surrender

---

<sup>2</sup> Dated June 17, p. 1164.

<sup>3</sup> Dated June 17, p. 1173.

<sup>4</sup> Dated May 12, p. 778.

of Haiphong" which in any event must remain under their control for a considerable period for purely military reasons to effect evacuation of French Union Forces from the north. However, if, as appeared likely, choice was giving Viet Minh an enclave in south in exchange for French enclave in Haiphong, they thought it preferable to give up Haiphong. He said no French parliament would approve conditions which the US had laid down for its intervention, and French had no choice but made the best deal they could, obtaining as strong position as possible in south. Chauvel understood fully we would probably not be able to publicly associate ourselves with such a solution, but he hoped that when it came time to put it to the Vietnamese the US would consider it possible very discreetly to let the Vietnamese know that we considered it best that could be obtained under the circumstances and our public disassociation would not operate so as to encourage Vietnamese opposition. Johnson replied he did not see how it would be possible for us to do this, and in any event he would of course have to see what the solution was. Chauvel said that such a solution as partition should come as no surprise to the Vietnamese as Buu Loc had sometime ago indicated to DeJean there had been conversations between Vietnamese and Viet Minh in which Viet Minh had made it clear that only two alternatives were coalition government or partition. Chauvel said Ngo Dinh and Diem are very unrealistic, unreasonable, and would probably prove to be "difficulte".

Chauvel said the line French had in mind had been made available to US defense representatives at some five-power talks, but was vague about time and place. He referred to it as "line of the chalk cliffs", which he said was defensible position running from the sea across Vietnam and Laos to the Mekong. Understand this is a line roughly 19 parallel running from vicinity of Dong Hoi to Thakhek. Replying to query, Chauvel said French Union Forces removed from the north would be deployed along that line.

Chauvel said all indications were Mendes-France would succeed in forming government next day or two and would probably himself assume Foreign Minister post. Said he had been in touch with Mendes-France and had sent emissary to Paris this morning to brief him on situation in Geneva. Chauvel said was anxious to show complete continuity of French effort here in Geneva and hoped there could be another restricted meeting tomorrow. Chauvel said, "Under-ground military talks" last night had been completely unproductive, Viet Minh obviously taking strong line in view of French Government situation.

751G.00/6-1754 : Telegram

The Secretary of State to the United States Delegation<sup>1</sup>

TOP SECRET      PRIORITY      WASHINGTON, June 18, 1954—1:04 p. m.

Tedul 217. Dulte 193.<sup>2</sup> It has for a long time been our basic policy to see the UN more actively concern itself with the situation in Indochina as a whole and also in relation to Thailand. It seems that if Laos and Cambodia act alone, particularly under Chapter VII this might be construed as a writing off of Vietnam and care would be required in this connection. We note, however, that 157 from Phnom Penh<sup>3</sup> indicates intention only to seek peace observation commission not Chapter VII action.

In view of the critical nature of the situation we are not disposed to attempt to use pressure to prevent what any one of these governments thinks may be necessary to its own survival. This would be to assume excessive responsibility. We can, however, exert care lest the action of one should unfortunately injure the other.

DULLES

---

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by the Secretary of State. Repeated to USUN as telegram 653, to Bangkok as telegram 2528, to Saigon as telegram 2649, to Phnom Penh (from Saigon) as telegram 78, to London as telegram 6938, and to Paris as telegram 4668.

<sup>2</sup> Dated June 17, p. 1173.

<sup>3</sup> June 17, not printed; the message contained a report on a Cambodian request for a peace observation commission. (751G.00/6-1754)

396.1 GE/6-1854 : Telegram

*Fifteenth Restricted Session on Indochina, Geneva, June 18, 3 p. m.:
The United States Delegation to the Department of State*<sup>1</sup>

CONFIDENTIAL

GENEVA, June 18, 1954—midnight.

Secto 472. Repeated information Paris 459, London 304, Saigon 180, Tokyo 150, Moscow 135, Phnom Penh and Vientiane unnumbered. Department pass Defense. Tokyo pass CINCFE. Fifteenth restricted session, Friday, June 18, Molotov presiding.

In General Smith's absence, Robertson made statement (Secto 470<sup>2</sup>) supporting proposals made June 8 by Cambodian delegate (Secto 367<sup>3</sup>) and June 16 by Laotian delegate (Secto 457<sup>4</sup>). He

---

<sup>1</sup> A set of minutes of this session (IC Restricted/15) is in Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 279. The minutes indicate that the meeting convened at 3 p. m. and adjourned at 7:20 p. m. The minutes are also printed in Conférence de Genève, pp. 311-322. The speech by Tep Phan, Indochina Document IC/37, June 18, and the proposals by Cambodia and Laos, Indochina Documents IC/36 and IC/38, respectively, June 18, are in Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 279A.

<sup>2</sup> Infra.

<sup>3</sup> Dated June 3, p. 1014.

<sup>4</sup> Dated June 16, p. 1162.

stated Chinese Communists proposal (Secto 458<sup>5</sup>) seemed to make provision for local Communists to remain in Laos and Cambodia and was lacking in precision and definiteness. He stated US delegate therefore unable accept Chinese Communist proposal. He spoke of large number positively identified Viet Minh units in Laos and Cambodia.

Cambodia delegate then commented on Chou En-lai's June 16 proposal. He said he was not opposed to simultaneous cease-fire throughout Indochina if it could be rapidly reached. Otherwise cease-fire in Cambodia might precede other cease-fire since it can be accomplished by withdrawal of all regular and irregular foreign forces. Cambodian delegate reiterated commitment that after such withdrawal, Cambodia would admit no more foreign troops. He stressed, however, Cambodia cannot accept re-grouping zones for existing foreign troops i.e. Viet Minh in Cambodia.

With regard to negotiations by the representatives of belligerents, Cambodian delegate said purpose, location and participants must be settled. As to purpose, he said military representatives must deal primarily with elimination of foreign forces including period of time, facilities to be given Viet Minh command to fulfill commitments and road and river routes to be used. Military representatives must have precise terms of reference.

With regard participants, Cambodian delegate said there would be representatives of Royal Cambodian Command on one hand and Viet Minh Command on the other.

As to location, Cambodian delegate recalled Viet Minh proposal that discussions for Vietnam be on spot and said this would be appropriate in case of Cambodia. He pointed out extremely fluid military situation in Cambodia with highly mobile Viet Minh invaders. He therefore did not consider meeting of military representatives in Geneva practical or useful. He reiterated paragraphs 2 (a) and (b) and 3 of Cambodia proposal of June 8 (Secto 367) as spelling out terms of reference of military representatives.

Turning to paragraph 3 of Chinese Communist proposal re non-introduction from abroad of new troops and military personnel, Cambodian delegate expressed appreciation. Chou En-lai's understanding that new country requires to organize its defense structure. He said however, in addition to arms and munitions, new army needs experts and instructors.

With regard to 4th paragraph of Chinese Communists proposal on international control Cambodian delegate indicated acceptance of such control either by true neutrals or by UN, stating that it must be on spot and ready to function at time of cessation hostilities in order to control (1) withdrawal of foreign forces, (2) freeing of prisoners of war and civilian internees, and (3) any external activity capable of troubling peace and security of Cambodia. Cambodian delegate expressed view there would be no difficulty with 5th and 6th paragraph of Chou's proposal dealing with liberation and exchange of prisoners of war and civilian internees and with non-persecution of persons having collaborated with opposing party.

---

<sup>5</sup> Dated June 17. p. 1162.

Cambodian delegate took strong issue with Viet Minh statement supporting so-called resistance government. He added Chou En-lai's proposal not far off some points from Cambodian position and expressed satisfaction at spirit of conciliation shown by Chinese.

Cambodian delegate then submitted specific proposal (Secto 471<sup>6</sup>) covering meeting of military representatives to achieve purposes outlined above.

Chou En-lai then spoke. He stated Mr. Robertson's statement was obviously different from General Smith's statement other day. He expressed understanding of duty Robertson has to perform i.e. the creation of controversy and of instigating controversy. For himself, he would put emphasis on conciliation and attempt to reach agreement in principle. He added, however, that as Robertson well knew, if Robertson insisted on challenging him, he would meet challenge and there would be endless discussion in this conference "we are not strangers to each other".

Chou En-lai then took up situation in Laos and Cambodia stating that in both countries there were resistance forces led by resistance governments and that there were also foreign troops some of which have been withdrawn. Agreement should be reached for complete withdrawal of foreign troops in Laos and Cambodia as well as in Vietnam.

Chou En-lai reiterated need for meeting of military representatives. Re international supervision he said that UN cannot be considered. He added international control should extend to Laos and Cambodia taking into account special conditions there. He urged early effort both within and without conference to agree on composition of neutral committee, stating that after agreement on composition decision can be reached on other points re control. He expressed himself favorably re French proposal for a committee of [nine] delegates to discuss this point (Secto 460<sup>7</sup>). He considered this proposal an alternative to discussion within the conference itself.

Chou En-lai reiterated stand be simultaneity of cessation of hostilities.

---

<sup>6</sup> Dated June 18, p. 1186.

<sup>7</sup> Dated June 17, p. 1164.

Chou En-lai then turned DRV proposal of June 16 re political considerations (Secto 459<sup>8</sup>) and expressed full support. He stated true peace can be consolidated only when political problems are solved. He proposed that conference set date for discussion of political problems on basis DRV 6-point proposal June 16.

Laos delegate then stated Chinese Communists proposal of June 16 seemed to him to present acceptable basis for development discussion. He recalled his reservations on simultaneity of cessation hostilities but he said none of Chinese Communists points presented insuperable problem but that some required precision.

Laos delegate then made proposal (Secto 459) for meeting of representatives of the two commands in Geneva and on spot to study withdrawal of Viet Minh troops from Laos and of French Union troops to peace time bases in Laos. The representatives are to submit recommendations to conference as soon as possible. Meanwhile conference can continue to examine other problems relating to peace in Laos and especially to international control.

After the recess Mr. Robertson asked for the floor and made the following statement :

“I categorically reject Mr. Chou En-lai’s insinuations.

There is nothing contradictory in the statement I have just made with the position taken by General Smith at our last meeting. General Smith stated that Mr. Chou En-lai’s proposal deserved our respectful attention. The US delegation has carefully considered the proposal and I have stated the conclusions reached. We have listened with careful attention to the statements made by the Cambodian and Laotian delegates. They pointed out, as I did, the lack of precision and definiteness in some aspects of the Chinese proposal and its failure to provide for the withdrawal of the Viet Minh forces. For these reasons the US delegation believes that the Laotian and Cambodian proposals provide a more desirable basis for negotiation”.

Pham Van Dong (Viet Minh) spoke next and supported Chinese proposal of 16 June (Secto 458) which, he said, should be used as basis for further debate and which springs from principles presented in Chinese proposal of 27 May (Secto 326<sup>9</sup>). His delegation, he said, supports these principles and Chinese proposal concerning Laos and Cambodia.

He then made following remarks :

1. Principle of simultaneous cease-fire in three states should be accepted.

2. Disposition of forces of both sides after cease-fire should pertain to local forces including forces of resistance movements in Laos and Cambodia which, he said, exist in fact.

<sup>8</sup> Dated June 17, p. 1163.

<sup>9</sup> Dated May 27, p. 947.

3. With respect to withdrawal of foreign forces he said there have been Viet Minh volunteers in Laos and Cambodia and that these have been withdrawn but that if today there are such forces they will be withdrawn.

4. No foreign country should establish military bases in Indochina.

5. Representatives of military commands should engage in negotiations in Geneva and on the spot re cease-fire in Laos and Cambodia.

Dong then devoted some time to discussion of resistance movements in Laos and Cambodia, stressed that they were organized in companies and battalions, and that the existence of these forces must be recognized by all parties. He attacked Laotian and Cambodian delegates for denying existence of such forces and hoped these delegates would yield to reason. Concluded by charging that information about Viet Minh units mentioned by Robertson in opening statement was as fallacious as allegation that Chinese units participated in battle of Dien Bien Phu which, he said, has been denied by French High Command.

Chauvel (France) spoke next and referred to Chinese statement and proposal 16 June as reasonable and moderate, and as containing elements which could be acceptable although terminology appeared subject differing interpretation. He then commented on following points of Chinese proposal (Secto 458) :

1. Re paragraph 3: Clarification necessary since, while text does not prohibit certain categories of armament necessary to defense, its purpose appears to be otherwise.

2. Re paragraph 4: While French delegate agrees international control should be applied to Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia, it is not clear whether one or three commissions intended.

3. Re paragraph 2: This main difficulty Chinese proposal believe all agree negotiation between representatives commands of belligerent parties necessary, but who are those commands? This not clear since in statement introducing proposal Chou En-lai drew distinction in speaking of disposition of forces between local troops and foreign troops.

Chauvel remarked that Chinese text offers prospect for making progress and added parenthetically, in obvious reference to French delegate, conference should resolve these questions since composition some delegates might soon be changed.

Taking up question withdrawal foreign forces Chauvel emphasized need for clear definition identity of belligerent commands. For example, in Cambodia since no French forces are there, who would establish contact in the field. Suggested Command of Royal Cambodian Forces would have to discuss problem with Viet Minh since latter would be command that had to receive troops withdrawn. Similarly in Laos there is French-Laotian command and on other hand

Viet Minh Command which would be responsible for receiving foreign troops withdrawn. At this point Chauvel injected comment that French High Command could confirm US information re Viet Minh units in Laos and Cambodia.

In concluding Chauvel referred to three drafts now before conference—Chinese proposal 16 June, and Cambodia and Laos proposals of today. Suggested that if these looked at side by side they would not be conflicting although Laotian and Cambodian drafts reduced in scope and more precise. He then suggested that all delegates work on three proposals overnight and attempt to formulate by tomorrow version acceptable to all.

Molotov then took floor as Soviet delegate and noted that during debate last few days certain rapprochement of views has appeared on Laotian and Cambodian questions as would be seen from reaction to Chinese proposal 16 June. He believed all had impression Chinese draft constituted step forward and contained number of positive proposals on which position several delegates could be brought closer together. Re to common ground that now appeared to exist re Laos and Cambodia Molotov noted today's statement by US delegate which caused him to ask if US delegate felt there was danger in possibility of agreement being found. He stated we should work to overcome difficulties and not fear that agreement constituted danger to anyone. Pursuing this point further he noted that comparisons were made between statements of US delegate at last and at today's meeting. He noted that US delegate now appeared to have different attitude re Chinese proposal, and that Robertson appeared so interested in refuting existence these differences that no comment seemed necessary. However, he asserted, such differences exist. US delegate, he continued, at last meeting characterized Chinese proposal as "reasonable and moderate," and today its views are of different nature. He noted particularly that representatives of countries directly concerned, particularly Laos, thought Chinese proposals could be acceptable basis for discussion but "Robertson won't hear of that". Fact that Cambodian delegate did not refuse to consider Chinese proposal he said, further gives reason to believe three proposals not so irreconcilable as to make impossible chance of bringing them together.

Molotov then devoted some time to supporting assertion that national liberation movements exist in Laos and Cambodia.

In concluding Molotov referred to adoption by conference on 29 May of resolution <sup>10</sup> that military talks begin between two commands in Vietnam and suggested similar decision re Laos and Cambodia be adopted. He recognized that clarification would be needed as to who would conduct such military talks but that this would not be difficult to settle.

---

<sup>10</sup> Text of the resolution reported to the Department of State in telegram Secto 347, May 29. p. 795.

Eden spoke last briefly in support of Chauvel's suggestion that all delegates consider three texts (Chinese, Laos, and Cambodian), in effort to reconcile them between now and next meeting as practical basis to go on.

Molotov stated he saw no objection to this suggestion since it appeared to be reformulation of French delegate's proposal. Molotov then adjourned meeting to be reconvened 19 June.

SMITH

396.1 GE/6-1854 : Telegram

*Fifteenth Restricted Session on Indochina, Geneva, June 18, 3 p. m. :
The United States Delegation to the Department of State*

CONFIDENTIAL

GENEVA, June 18, 1954—midnight.

Secto 470. Repeated information Paris 457, London 302, Saigon 178, Tokyo 148, Phnom Penh, Vientiane unnumbered, Moscow 133. Tokyo for CINCFE. Department pass Defense. Following is text of statement by Robertson at fifteenth Indochina restricted session Friday June 18:

"Proposals on how to settle the problems of Cambodia and Laos have been put forward by the representatives of Cambodia and Laos on June 8 and June 16, and by the Chinese Communist delegation on June 16. The US delegation has given these proposals careful consideration.

The proposals of the Cambodian and Laotian delegations are clear, simple and forthright. They both provide for what is obviously the essential element of a just settlement—the withdrawal of Viet Minh forces from the two countries.

The Chinese Communist proposal, on the other hand, is not clear on the question of the withdrawal of Viet Minh forces from Laos and Cambodia and further seems to contemplate that local Communist forces not in those countries, but that some provision should be made for them in any settlement. For these and for the reason that other provisions lack precision and definiteness, we are unable to accept the Chinese Communist proposal.

I do not believe that we will ever find a more appropriate time for good faith to be manifested than during our talks this afternoon. The head of the Viet Minh delegation, as well as the leader of the Soviet delegation, has expressed his confidence that this good faith exists. If we are to accept these protestations, if we wish the world to give any credence to these assertions, we must have a concrete demonstration before we can make progress toward an agreement in which that element plays a part. I can think of no better demonstration than for the Viet Minh to admit the presence of its regular and irregular military units in Cambodia and Laos and to agree to their prompt withdrawal.

It is not possible in fact to deny that these troops are in Cambodia and Laos. A number of these units have been positively identified. Among them, according to recent information, are troops of the Viet Minh 325th Division which normally operates in Central Vietnam and the 304th Division which had previously operated in the area south of the Red River Delta. These units include the 436th Battalion of the 101st Infantry Regiment either in Cambodia or withdrawn from Cambodia to Laos, three battalions of the 66th Infantry Regiment in Laos, one battalion of the 101st Infantry Regiment in Laos, and two battalions of the 18th Infantry Regiment in Laos. Previous unit identifications include what was probably the entire 308th Infantry Division which invaded northern Laos in January and February this year, but was later withdrawn to take part in the battle at Dien Bien Phu. The units I have just named do not complete the list of invading units, but they should be sufficient to indicate the magnitude of this aggression.

Mr. Pham Van Dong, in his speech of May 12, admitted the presence in Cambodia and Laos of armed Vietnamese, but claimed that they were residents of those two countries who had taken up arms against the legal governments in support of what he is pleased to call the Pathet Lao and Khmer 'resistance governments'. This admission represents some progress, but what he failed to admit was that these armed Vietnamese are under the orders of and totally allied with the Viet Minh forces across the border in Vietnam.

It is now time to return to reality for an honest discussion of what may be done to end the hostilities in Cambodia and Laos. Fortunately, the path to be followed has been clearly marked in the proposals of the Cambodian and the Laos delegations. The US delegation does not see any justification for further delay in working out a simple and effective solution based on these proposals."

SMITH

---

396.1 GE/6-1854 : Telegram

*Fifteenth Restricted Session on Indochina, Geneva, June 18, 3 p. m. :
The United States Delegation to the Department of State*

CONFIDENTIAL

GENEVA, June 18, 1954—midnight.

Secto 471. Repeated information Paris 458, London 303, Saigon 179, Tokyo 14, Moscow 134, Phnom Penh, Vientiane unnumbered. Tokyo pass CINCFE. Department pass Defense. Following are translations of texts of Cambodian and Laotian proposals submitted at fifteenth restricted Indochina meeting Friday, June 18 :

A. Cambodian

"The representatives of the Cambodian and Viet Minh commands will meet on the spot, that is to say in Cambodia, with the mission :

- "1. Of studying the methods of evacuation of foreign forces, regular and irregular.

"2. Of studying the methods of liberation or exchange of prisoners of war and civil internees.

"3. To submit, in the shortest possible time, their recommendations to the decision of the conference."

B. Laotian

"Toward a cessation of hostilities in Laos:

"1. The representatives of the two commands will meet as soon as possible at Geneva and contacts will be established immediately on the spot.

"2. The representatives of the two commands will study the problems relative to the withdrawal of Viet Minh forces from Laotian territory and of those of the French Union to their peacetime bases.

"3. They will submit their recommendations to the conference as soon as possible."

SMITH

---

Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 320 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET      NIACT

GENEVA, June 18, 1954—6 p. m.

Dulte 197. Eyes only Secretary from Under Secretary. Ambassador Dillon has telephoned suggesting that on my return I touch down Paris and see Mendes-France at airport on condition that he is invested, which Dillon expects today or tomorrow.<sup>1</sup> Dillon says that Mendes-France urgently desires to see me. Because of French reaction to Churchill visit<sup>2</sup> and for other reasons, I will do this, unless I hear from you to contrary.<sup>3</sup> Plan to leave here Sunday afternoon.

SMITH

---

<sup>1</sup> Memoranda from Johnson to Smith, June 18 and 19, concerning Ambassador Dillon's call and a possible meeting between Under Secretary Smith and Premier Mendès-France are in Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 320.

<sup>2</sup> For documentation on Prime Minister Churchill's visit to Washington, June 25-29, see volume VI.

<sup>3</sup> The Department's reply was contained in telegram Tedul 218, June 18, infra.

---

110.12 SM/6-1854 : Telegram

The Secretary of State to the United States Delegation<sup>1</sup>

TOP SECRET      NIACT

WASHINGTON, June 18, 1954—4:42 p. m.

Tedul 218. Eyes only for Under Secretary and Ambassador from Secretary. Ur Dulte 197.<sup>2</sup> This poses difficult problem. On one hand we do not want to discourage Mendes France initial effort at what may be policy of cooperation with US nor do we wish to do anything to make more unhappy French feeling arising out of Churchill-Eden visit. On the other hand we here are in process rethinking our entire position regarding Indochina in light developments at Geneva and Paris. We need your contribution and hence no firm position will be reached until your return.

---

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by the Secretary of State. Repeated to Paris as telegram 4671.

<sup>2</sup> Supra.

On balance we believe advisable you accept Mendes France invitation although we would prefer you to take extra time which would be involved in calling briefly on him rather than having him come to airport to see you which carries a certain emergency and feverish character which is inappropriate to our desire to make a calm fresh start covering whole gamut of our problems with French including EDC.

It seems that if you call on him you could better regulate time and character of visit and explain it as a courtesy call—an explanation which hardly fits into a hurried airport meeting.

If you do see Mendes France hope you will find it practicable principally to gather his intentions without any explicit or implicit commitment of our own.<sup>3</sup>

As far as substance is concerned believe President's letter to Coty gives guidance and that it will be well to keep within 4 corners of that letter.<sup>4</sup>

DULLES

---

<sup>3</sup> Under Secretary Smith replied in telegram Dulles 198, June 19, that he agreed "completely with procedure you suggest [in Tedul 218] re Mendes-France and will keep plane departure flexible enough to act accordingly. Will also remain within substance of President's letter." (396.1 GE/6-1954) The Department of State replied in Tedul 223, June 19, that "If Mendes-France still desires see you despite absence Assembly approval his Cabinet and if Dillon concurs, we believe it would still be appropriate for you pay courtesy call in Paris on Mendes-France en route home." (396.1 GE/6-1954)

Smith met for an hour and a quarter with Mendès-France on June 20 at the Quai d'Orsay in Paris. In telegram 4944 from Paris, June 20, Ambassador Dillon reported that the Under Secretary and the Premier discussed various matters pertaining to Indochina and to the Geneva Conference, in particular negotiations at Geneva between France and the Viet Minh. The Under Secretary emphasized the importance of the French Delegation in Geneva keeping in touch with the U.S. Delegation regarding any negotiations with the Viet Minh "so that we would not be suddenly faced with a solution from which we would have to publicly disassociate ourselves." With reference to an agreement with the Viet Minh, Mendès-France indicated that he expected to have considerable difficulty with the Vietnamese. He said the Vietnamese representatives would "place great weight on any advice they might get from the United States and he hoped that the United States would be able to help France by discreetly letting the Vietnamese representatives know that they would be wise to accept the French agreement with the Viet Minh as the best agreement obtainable." Ambassador Dillon reported that the Under Secretary did not commit himself in any way on this subject. (751G.00/6-2054) For the full text of telegram 4944, see volume XIII.

<sup>4</sup> President Eisenhower's letter to President Coty, June 16, and the reply by President Coty, June 23, are printed in Public Papers of the Presidents of the United States: Dwight D. Eisenhower, 1954, pp. 583-584.

396.1 GE/6-1854 : Telegram

The Secretary of State to the United States Delegation<sup>1</sup>

SECRET      PRIORITY      WASHINGTON, June 18, 1954—8:43 p. m.

Tedul 221. Under Secretary from Secretary. Limit distribution. In view of events subsequent to Tosec 138 May 12<sup>2</sup> and prospective return yourself with others of Delegation, believe basic instructions should be regarded as withdrawn and replaced by direction to those who will continue on at Geneva to take no substantive positions except pursuant to specific instructions which may be given from time to time. If you concur, please advise Johnson accordingly.

DULLES

---

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by the Secretary of State.

<sup>2</sup> Ante, p. 778.

396.1 GE/6-1954 : Telegram

Smith-Molotov Meeting, Geneva, June 18, Evening: The United States Delegation to the Department of State<sup>1</sup>

TOP SECRET

GENEVA, June 19, 1954—midnight.

Dulte 202. Repeated information Moscow 138. Moscow eyes only Ambassador. I saw Molotov at his villa yesterday evening at my request to inform him of my departure, and because I felt time had come to sound a note of warning. Talk lasted more than hour and a half. Molotov asked what I thought would be best thing to do with conference, to adjourn it temporarily or to keep it going. I replied as far as we concerned should be kept going while there was hope of reaching reasonable settlement, but that there was no use referring to "committees" matters of major policy which must be decided by conference as a whole. Before my departure I felt it would be desirable to exchange views, in order that mistakes of the past should not be repeated as the result of misunderstanding of our respective positions. With regard to Korean phase, I had only to say that in reserving our position re final Chinese proposal had not implied to exclude Communist China from future discussions on Korean question. As matter of fact, China was belligerent there against UN and for practical reasons would have to be party to settlement.

Regarding Indochinese phase Molotov said he had impression US avoided reaching solution and cited in this regard Robertson objection in yesterday's restricted session to acceptance Chou's proposal on Laos and Cambodia. I said that while proposal might be satisfactory in some respects it made no mention of Viet Minh withdrawal or of adequate supervision. So long as regular Viet Minh forces remained in Laos and Cambodia we could not help but view situation in very serious light. Molotov cited Pham Van Dong's remarks regarding withdrawal Viet Minh "volunteers" and emphasized importance of beginning direct negotiations regarding Laos and Cambodia of type now taking place regarding Vietnam. I regretted that I was not at all convinced that Pham Van Dong really meant what he said. His statements sounded well enough, but his written proposals did not bear them out.

---

<sup>1</sup> Message transmitted in two sections.

I said I wanted to make our position on Laos and Cambodia entirely clear. In addition to regular Viet Minh forces in these countries, which I enumerated, there were some dissident elements in Laos and a much smaller number in Cambodia. If regular Viet Minh forces were withdrawn, elections could be held, with guarantees that individuals would not be discriminated against as regards their electoral rights for having supported either side. Dissidents would be able to vote for any candidates they choose, Communists included. However, while Viet Minh forces remained in these countries, there could be no peace nor could free elections be held.

In private conversations with Mr. Eden and others, Communist delegates, in particular Chou En-lai, had taken an apparently reasonable view on Laos and Cambodia, but that here again, when we came to the point of trying to get open agreement on specific points we were unable to do so. I specifically mentioned Chou En-lai's statements to Eden in which he said that China would have no objections to recognizing the Kingdoms of Laos and Cambodia or to these states having forces and arms sufficient to maintain security, or their remaining in French Union so long as they were not used as military bases by the United States.<sup>2</sup> We could not disagree with any of this, although if we kept out the Chinese would have to keep out, and these small states would have to be allowed to join with their neighbors in whatever regional security arrangements would best protect their integrity without constituting a threat to any one else. Chou En-lai might be anxious about possibility of US bases in Laos and Cambodia. We wanted on our part to be sure that these countries were not handed over to the Chinese. Molotov said that while he did not know about what attitude Chinese might have on other questions in future, he could assure me that Chinese attitude on this particular question was not at all unreasonable, and that there was nothing in it which would give rise to conflicts. He added, however, that if we continued to take a one-sided view and insist on one-sided solutions, he must "in all frankness say that this would not succeed". There were, he said, some differences of view between us on Laos and Cambodia, especially in regard to our refusal to recognize resistance movements; point he wanted to make, however, was that basis for reaching agreement was present and that agreement could be reached so long as neither side "adopted one-sided views or put forward extreme pretensions". This, he said, could only lead to other side's doing same.

---

<sup>2</sup> Conversation reported in telegram Secto 463, June 17, p. 1170.

Resistance movements existed, in Laos and Cambodia, Molotov asserted. About 50 percent of the territory of Laos was not under the control of official government. It was true that much smaller resistance movement existed in Cambodia. He said that in fact conditions in all three Indochinese countries were different—large resistance movement controlling three-quarters of territory in Vietnam, substantial movement in Laos controlling, as he had indicated, about half territory, and much smaller movement in Cambodia. I said, with regard to two latter countries, solution was simple. Withdraw invading Viet Minh forces and let dissident elements elect Communist representatives to general assemblies if they wished. But the elections must be actually "free". Regarding Vietnam, I said we recognized relative strength of the Viet Minh but they were demanding too much. It seems Viet Minh demanded all Delta, including both Hanoi and Haiphong. The French were our allies, and we took grave view of this extreme pressure. Molotov said that if French were to have something in south and something in north, and probably in center as well, this would add up to three-fourths of country or better, which was wholly unreasonable. He said there was old Russian proverb that if you try to chase two rabbits at once you are apt to miss both of them, and added that in this case wanting something in north and in south was like chasing two rabbits. If French were to give way to Viet Minh in north, they would gain territory probably greater in extent in south in recompense. I said appearance of "partition" was repugnant to us, and that as far as proverb about rabbits went, I felt that Viet Minh were chasing two rabbits in wanting both Hanoi and Haiphong. Viet Minh demands for all the Delta, or efforts take it all by force prior to reaching political solution through elections, was serious matter in view of my government. Molotov disagreed, stating that present French position in area was due only to Viet Minh restraint, and that two cities did not even have normal communications between each other. In regard to US aversion to partition, he said that this problem could easily be solved by holding elections at once, which would decide "one way or the other".

He repeated that important thing in reaching agreement on any of these questions relating to Indochina was to be realistic about actual facts, and to avoid putting out one-sided views or extreme pretensions.

If French were encouraged to disregard actual situation and to ask for too much, he said, one could only expect conflict to continue. (He made it clear that he considered US as party likely to do the encouraging.) I replied that US was not one of principals to Indochinese dispute and did not cast deciding vote, to which Molotov remarked "maybe so, but you have veto, that word I hear you use so often" and went on to say that among other delegations present at conference there seemed to be real willingness to reach agreement. Agreement had in fact he added very nearly been reached, although he hoped I would realize this was not information for publication. (This remark, obviously, referred to private French-Viet Minh military conversations which I have mentioned.) I said I must emphasize my government held serious views on issues involved in Indochina situation, more serious, perhaps, than did some of other governments represented at conference. I hoped he would give consideration to this, and assist in overcoming some of the deep-rooted suspicions of Asiatic participants, which became apparent every time we tried to reconcile formal proposals.

Comment: Throughout conversation Molotov maintained friendly and mild tone evident in all informal conversations. He is completely sure of himself and of his position. What he had to say regarding Delta, Laos and Cambodia confirms Communist intentions to play all the cards they hold. His avoidance of endorsing Chou's remarks to Eden concerning Laos and Cambodia indicated that simple withdrawal of Viet Minh forces from these countries was not acceptable and that some form of de facto partition was intended in Laos, at least. His remarks seemed to indicate that Communists have eye on as much as half of country. This conversation, together with the inflexible position which Molotov took during his last conversation with me regarding the composition of a neutral nation or supervisory commission for Indochina, as well as his speech on Tuesday, June 8, and all subsequent speeches on the Communist side, which took firm positions on points the Communists know to be unacceptable to Eden, Bidault and me, are highly significant. The recent emphasis by all three Communist spokesmen that France should carry on direct political as well as direct military negotiations with Viet Minh show their interest in having a convenient way of holding out for greater gains in their direct negotiations with the French as well as within the framework of the conference.

Molotov in effect told France in his June 8 speech that her position and that of the government she was supporting in Indochina were hopeless and that she had best face up to facts and capitulate in direct negotiations with the Viet Minh. His speech, of course, was in large part intended to assist in the destruction of the French Government for the implications that that would have on the European as well as on the Asiatic scene. Nevertheless, his harsh and even insulting language seemed to reflect the confident, nearly triumphant mood in which he has been lately. It would be misleading to ascribe the harder line which Molotov brought back with him from Moscow entirely to Soviet tactical considerations in regard to the French Government crisis. While the Soviets may think that the blocking of EDC through the destruction of the French Government would reduce future threats to them in Europe, the fact remains that the Indochina conflict potentially involves a much more immediate threat of general war.

It is probable that initial Soviet tactics were to forestall US intervention in the Delta by some kind of a compromise formula involving Hanoi and Haiphong if it appeared that such intervention were imminent. The recent raising of the ante in the negotiations here by the Communist side probably reflects an estimate on their part that our intervention is improbable and that they are safe to go ahead there, keeping, of course, a sharp eye out for indications of change in our attitude.

While the Communist position on Laos and Cambodia remains more flexible than their position in regard to the Delta, they will get all they can in Laos now. In the whole area the determining factor for the Communists will continue to be their estimate of the likelihood of US or joint intervention and nothing short of a conviction on their part that this intervention will take place will stop them from going ahead with their plans for taking all of it eventually, through military conquest, French capitulation, or infiltration.

Realize much of above is repetitious, but it will serve as final summary.

SMITH

JUNE 19, 1954

751G.00/6-1954 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of Defense

SECRET

GENEVA, June 19, 1954.

Army Message Gento 62. To Department of State and OSD for action, repeated information USARMA Paris, USARMA Saigon, USARMA London. For Hensel from Sullivan Defense. Following is summary French-Vietnam military talks with Viet Minh 17 June reported to Defense representative by member French delegation :

1. Both sides reached agreement on draft summary of discussions to date. No decision yet when or if summary will be presented to delegates.

2. Discussions continued on areas over which each side claims controls.

3. Comment:

a. French delegate contact said talks "marking time" with French-Vietnam side awaiting instructions in light change in governments both countries.

b. Viet Minh in Indochina have not contacted French liaison officer re military talks in field. French delegate representatives now believe Viet Minh hoped to trap French into making public a unilateral request for armistice talks in field thus making French appear to be supplicants, but since that propaganda gambit failed Viet Minh now less anxious to make contact.

c. In view preoccupation to date military committee with delineation of areas controlled by opposing forces, Defense representative queried French representative whether decision by French to suspend transfer of southern zone Delta to Vietnamese (OARMA Saigon MC 275-54) was designed to minimize Viet Minh claim thereto. French delegate contact not aware of change in plan, but insisted that areas Viet Minh claim to control do not appear related to areas where Vietnamese as distinguished from French colonial units are located.

---

751G.00/6-1954: Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of Defense

SECRET

GENEVA, June 19, 1954.

Army Message Gento 64. To State & OSD for action; info USARMA Paris, USARMA Saigon, USARMA London. For Hensel from Sullivan. Following is summary French-Vietnam military talks with Viet Minh 18 June reported to Defense representative by member French delegation:

1. Meeting lasted 20 minutes and was devoted to signing joint summary of meetings to date. Talks still marking time while French and Vietnam representatives "await instructions" from their new governments.

2. Comment: (a) French delegate contact appeared to expect principal delegates can reach agreement soon on military talks in Laos and Cambodia. French delegate is discussing this question with Laos and Cambodian delegates in effort to reach common position. French delegate contact said Cambodians prefer not to have French representative on their side in military talks, but he believes they will agree to accept a French officer as advisor to Cambodian chiefs of delegation. (b) Next meeting 21 June.

751G.00/6-1954 : Telegram

Johnson-Chauvel Meeting, Geneva, June 19, Morning: The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET PRIORITY

GENEVA, June 19, 1954—2 p. m.

Dulte 200. Repeated information Paris 462, Saigon 182. Paris and Saigon limit distribution. Chauvel asked to see Johnson this morning saying that he wished to tell him what French Del had in mind for today's meeting.

Chauvel opened by saying most confidentially he was very anxious to "tie things up" as thoroughly as possible before Mendès-France came into office. Said French press reported Mendès-France was coming to Geneva Wednesday and Chauvel was trying prevent him as probably nobody here to talk to except Dong.

Chauvel then gave Johnson copy of the following French proposal on Laos (together with identical one on Cambodia except for change in name). Said he had discussed this last evening with Eden, also discussing it this morning with Chinese, Soviets, Laos and Cambodia.

"With a view to facilitating the rapid and simultaneous cessation of hostilities in Indochina, the following is proposed :

(a) The representatives of the two commands will meet immediately at Geneva and contacts will likewise be established on the spot;

(b) They will study at the outset the question of the withdrawal of foreign troops in Laos, taking into consideration the observations and proposals by the various Dels at the conference;

(c) They will transmit as soon as possible to the conference their conclusions and their recommendations."

He said that in discussions with Chinese and Viet Minh French had made it clear that insofar as Cambodian side was concerned Cambodian Command would carry on discussion but French officer might be on staff (Cambodia has not yet agreed to this) and on other side Command must be Viet Minh although if Viet Minh representative insisted on having Khmer Issarek member on staff, of course it could not be prevented. In case of Laos Command, on our side would be French while on other side it must be Viet Minh as in case of Cambodia but if Viet Minh had rather have Laos member of staff could not be prevented. However, in each case must be clearly understood principal representative would be Viet Minh.

Johnson expressed concern Commands not specifically named stating we considered it as minimum essential that Viet Minh Command be named and we would have to state our views on this. Chauvel stated that, just as in case of Eden's proposal on Vietnamese conversations, he assumed that as mentioned in paragraph (b) of proposal each Del would make various observations on the proposal which would be taken into account. Johnson said after stating our observations we would take same position we took re Eden's proposal on Vietnam, that is, we had grave reservations but if others agreed we would not obstruct.

With respect Laos, Chauvel stated they were studying possibility of having international supervisory command acting as a fact-finding group with respect to widely divergent claims on areas held by insurgents and government.

With regard French proposal 9-nation committee (Secto 560 [460])<sup>1</sup> Chauvel said French were considering general proposal to effect that if occasion arose, conference could establish appropriate technical committees. No reference will be made to size or composition of committees. Johnson said we would, of course, have no objection to this as a general proposition, it being understood that any such committees would be in the pattern of Franco-Viet Minh military talks that is normally composed of the principally interested parties.

Chauvel said they were anxious that meeting this afternoon not be repetition of previous time-wasting discussions; therefore, hoped not have meeting until general informal agreement reached on text proposals Cambodia and Laos. If agreement not reached this morning, would ask meeting be postponed to 5 p. m. or so in order give additional time informal discussion. Eden has obtained Molotov's agreement to this.

SMITH

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated June 17, p. 1164.

396.1 GE/6-1954

Memorandum of Conversation, by the Special Adviser to the United States Delegation (Heath)

CONFIDENTIAL

GENEVA, June 19, 1954.

Participants: General Smith, Under Secretary of State
 Mr. Robertson, Assistant Secretary of State
 Mr. Heath, Ambassador to Cambodia and Vietnam
 Nguyen Quoc Dinh, Vietnamese Foreign Minister and Chief of Delegation to Geneva Conference

At noon today the Under Secretary, accompanied by Assistant Secretary Robertson and Ambassador Heath, called on Dinh at the latter's residence. The Under Secretary explained it would be necessary for him to return to the States tomorrow but he would leave Ambassadors Johnson and Heath to represent the United States who would maintain association with and support of the Vietnamese and the other two delegations from Indochina. The Under Secretary said that it was possible that Secretary Dulles might have to make a trip abroad towards the end of the month, in which case, the Under Secretary could not return promptly to Geneva since it was necessary that either the Secretary or himself always be present in Washington. The Under Secretary said that after two weeks or so either the Secretary, himself or possibly Deputy Under Secretary Murphy might return to Geneva.

The Under Secretary said he wished to take this occasion to assure Foreign Minister Dinh of his great pleasure in having been associated with him at this conference. The support which the American Delegation had so far given to the Vietnamese Delegation would be continued to the extent possible. Dinh replied that he himself had planned to call on the Under Secretary to take leave of him since along with the rest of his government, he had offered his resignation to Bao Dai. He would continue on provisionally in charge of the delegation until the new Prime Minister, Ngo Dinh Diem, named his successor. He planned to return to university life. The Under Secretary hoped that the new government would continue to avail itself of the services of Mr. Dinh and other capable men and expressed the hope they would be associated again in international gatherings.

Dinh replied that he and his delegation were exceedingly grateful for the unfailing support of the American Delegation and the Under Secretary's assurance that support would be extended in the future. He recalled in conversation a few days ago the Under Secretary had stated that if there were national determination in Vietnam the assistance of other nations could be provided. Mr. Dinh felt that the new government would reveal and develop the national determination of Vietnam. He went on to say that the conduct of the Vietnamese Delegation at this conference had been difficult. For while the government of Vietnam had principle on its side it did not have force behind it. The Under Secretary stated that unfortunately this conference had demonstrated as had so often been demonstrated in the past that, in negotiating with the Communists there was no chance of success unless the other parties had force and determination behind them—the only factors which the Communists respected. Dinh said that as a professor of diplomatic history who had carefully studied Soviet-American relations he thought that all American representatives were of the same mind as the Under Secretary that force and determination were the only things the Communists respected. The Under Secretary recalled Stalin's remark to Hopkins and Averell Harriman who in a war-time negotiation had raised the question of the attitude of the Pope evoking Stalin's contemptuous question, "how many divisions does he have".

Dinh said that he would not hide the fact that there was disquietude in Vietnam over the advent of Mendes France to the French premiership. He thought it was highly imprudent for Mendes France to announce that he was going to negotiate a peace by July 20 or resign.<sup>1</sup> That statement put Mendes France in the weak position of a supplicant to the Communist states. Dinh, however, went on to say that perhaps the line of Mendes France might work out all right in the end provided he did not capitulate [to] the Communists. There were still leaders and forces in France against capitulation to the Communists in Indochina and if Mendes France showed that honest effort to negotiate honest agreement had failed, then those forces would be encouraged to insist France take a stronger line.

The Under Secretary said he expected to see Mendes France tomorrow afternoon. While he would be very circumspect in what he said he felt that he would be able to make him understand that the people of the United States would never associate themselves with an abject surrender or capitulation to Communist demands in Indochina. Dinh thanked him for that assurance and said he hoped that Mr. Eden would give similar warning to Mendes France.

In conclusion Dinh said that in spite of the situation he thought there were still forces in France and Vietnam, which with the help of other free nations would enable us to get "around the cape" in this difficult passage in which the free world found itself. He hoped before long he would be able to make a trip to the States and visit some American universities. The Under Secretary and Mr. Robertson said they would be personally delighted to welcome him if he visited the States.

---

<sup>1</sup> See the editorial note, p. 1128.

---

396.1 GE/6-1954 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

TOP SECRET

GENEVA, June 19, 1954—noon.

Dulte 199. Re Tedul 221<sup>1</sup> and 222.<sup>2</sup> I suggest that instead of withdrawing basic instructions they be amended as of this date to effect that those who continue at Geneva shall take no substantive positions except pursuant to specific instructions which may be given from time to time. Suggest this has advantage of showing continuity of policy approved by President at same time giving additional protection that no substantive position will hereafter be taken except pursuant to specific instructions. Believe your supplement to Tedul 221 does not affect suggestion made above.<sup>3</sup>

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated June 18, p. 1189.

<sup>2</sup> Telegram Tedul 222, June 18, read: "Supplementing Tedul 221, five-power staff report suggesting Thakhek-Donghoi line, coupled with rapid Delta deterioration, is leading us to reexamine possible de facto partition Vietnam." (396.1 GE/6-1854)

SMITH

---

<sup>3</sup> Acting Secretary Murphy in telegram Tedul 224, June 19, replied to Under Secretary Smith (with reference to telegram Dulte 199) as follows: "As Secretary will not be available until June 22 your message will be brought to his attention then. Decision in Tedul 221 taken by him personally." (396.1 GE/6-1954) Ambassador Johnson, Head of the Delegation upon Smith's departure for the United States on June 20, replied in Secto 486, June 20, with reference to Tedul 221 and Dulte 199 that "after discussion with Under Secretary, I propose unless otherwise instructed support as desirable substantive positions thus far taken by USDEL with respect to composition and functions international control commissions. It is likely next few meetings will be devoted this subject." (396.1 GE/6-2054)

---

751G.00/6-1954 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

TOP SECRET      PRIORITY

GENEVA, June 19, 1954—2 p. m.

Dulte 201. Personal for Secretary from Under Secretary. Your Tedul 217.<sup>1</sup> Believe policy outlined in last paragraph is correct. In connection probable appeal by Laos and Cambodia, however, believe following possibilities deserve attention:

The attitude and sympathies of several Southeast Asian nations, particularly India and Burma, very different toward Laos and Cambodia than toward Vietnam plus French. If Laotian-Cambodian appeal came to issue in General Assembly would guess from what I have heard here from Menon and others that least India might do would be take position of benevolent neutrality, whereas Pakistan, Burma, and probably Indonesia would be inclined to support. Middle Eastern states would also probably be disposed to support, whereas on Thailand (possibly) and on an association of Vietnam and France (probably) they might be disposed to pay their debt to Russia by actively opposing.

Judging by the way things are developing here, I cannot help but be pessimistic about Vietnam solution, and in this connection see my following report of conversation last night with Molotov.

Feel sure that without exerting pressure on either government to act, and with exercise of care lest action of one group should injure the other, we can still have two strings to our bow, and I foresee that this may be advantageous to us.

SMITH

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated June 18, p. 1179.

396.1 GE/6-2054 : Telegram

Sixteenth Restricted Session on Indochina, Geneva, June 19, 6:45 p. m.: The United States Delegation to the Department of State<sup>1</sup>

CONFIDENTIAL

GENEVA, June 20, 1954—2 a. m.

Secto 480. Repeated information Paris 466, London 307, Saigon 185, Tokyo 153, Moscow 139, Phnom Penh, Vientiane unnumbered. Tokyo for CINCFE. Department pass Defense. Sixteenth restricted session, Saturday, June 19, Eden presiding.

Chauvel recalled that it had been agreed yesterday that an attempt would be made, on basis Laotian, Cambodian (Secto 471<sup>2</sup>) and Communist Chinese (Secto 458<sup>3</sup>) proposals to present to conference a new text. He added that as result of exchanges of views between delegations, subject text was now available which he hoped had general agreement of all delegations and would permit military talks with respect to situation in Laos and Cambodia to begin without delay. Chauvel then read following text:

“With a view to facilitating simultaneous and rapid cessation of hostilities in Indochina, it is proposed that:

(a) The representatives of commands of two sides shall meet immediately in Geneva or on spot;

(b) They shall study questions relating to cessation of hostilities, on territories of Cambodia and Laos, beginning with question concerning withdrawal of all foreign armed forces, due regard being had to observations and proposals presented by various delegations at conference;

(c) They shall report as soon as possible to conference their conclusions and recommendations.”

Molotov stated Chauvel proposal was not same as that submitted earlier to Soviet delegation in that in paragraph b after “foreign armed forces” Soviet text contains “and foreign military personnel”. Soviet delegation clearly under impression this had been agreed.

Chauvel admitted error due to fact text had been shopped around all day. Said he had no objection inclusion Molotov’s words which he thought covered by observations he made yesterday to general effect that any French troops or military personnel in Laos or Cambodia are there on basis agreements with sovereign governments concerned and that French rely on their judgment in matter.

<sup>1</sup> A set of minutes of this session (IC Restricted/16) is in Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 279. The minutes indicate that the meeting convened at 6:45 p. m. and adjourned at 9 p. m. The minutes are also printed in Conférence de Genève, pp. 323-327. The French proposal, Indochina Document IC/39, June 21, is in Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 279A.

<sup>2</sup> Dated June 18, p. 1186.

<sup>3</sup> Dated June 17, p. 1162.

Chou En-lai expressed agreement to French proposal with additional Molotov amendment.

Cambodian delegate then rehearsed position his delegation. He accepted French proposal so far as purpose of military talks is concerned on understanding principal purpose withdrawal foreign troops from Cambodia. He agreed to location of talks. With regard to parties to talks, he said they should be Cambodia on one hand and Viet Minh on other. He described complete military independence of Cambodian Government. He said that he could not compromise on fact that parties to military talks would be Cambodia and Viet Minh, adding that if any delegations had idea of getting in other representatives, Cambodian delegate thinks it would not be useful to adopt present text. He referred again, in connection with Molotov amendment, to Cambodia's need to bring in instructors and experts for young Cambodian Army and spoke of understanding attitude of Chou En-lai. He stated his delegation would be ready to negotiate on conditions for introduction this type military personnel.

Laotian delegate agreed with French text. Regarding simultaneous cease-fire, he expressed hope this could be achieved but that cessation hostilities in Laos as soon as possible would not thereby be prejudiced. He stated withdrawal of foreign troops from Laos would be decisive step toward durable peace. He recalled French Union bonds and presence in Laos of French troops in numbers and at places provided by treaty and also provision of French experts to train National Army in accordance with freely negotiated conventions. These arrangements are necessary for security of Laos.

US delegate made statement set forth in Secto 479.<sup>4</sup>

Eden stated that it should be clearly understood that any recommendations by military representatives would be brought before conference which would accept, reject or amend them as provided in paragraph (c) of French proposal.

Molotov confirmed understanding his amendment accepted. He said that obviously there were divergent views on many subjects but that purpose was to find something acceptable to all. He said that questions such as those of French officers serving in National Armies of Laos and Cambodia should be clarified in forthcoming military talks, not before. He reminded conference that Chou En-lai had submitted proposals covering matters not already covered by current French proposal on which discussion not completed. He stated Soviet belief that these matters upon which he did not enlarge would also be included in military talks.

---

<sup>4</sup> Infra.

US delegate asked Molotov to be patient with him as only received French proposal ten minutes ago. He wished to know if Molotov differentiated between officers and non-commissioned of French forces and other foreign troops in Laos and Cambodia. He stated on this point he associated himself with views of Laos and Cambodia. He added that in view of Eden's statement regarding reference of military recommendations to conference he would not oppose French proposal but wished all to take note of what he had said.

DRV delegate then spoke generally favorably of Laotian statement although it calls for certain reservations. He said Cambodian remarks ignored certain realities, rejected certain essential points (not specified) of Chinese Communist resolution, appeared not inspired by spirit of conciliation and understanding and, through reservations reduced French proposal to something very unilateral and unrealistic. He said US delegate unilateral and unrealistic. He concluded approving French proposal with Soviet amendment and insisting upon wording of paragraph b thereof (he seemed to imply that military representatives could consider other questions relating to cessation of hostilities in Laos and Cambodia beyond withdrawal of foreign armed forces, etc.)

Chauvel pointed out his modest proposal did not pretend to settle all outstanding problems. He stated military representatives would not infringe upon sovereign authority of conference which remains supreme in settling divergencies and making decisions on report of military representatives.

Eden stated that conference would note observations made as being included in those covered by paragraph b of French proposal as modified. He asked whether French proposal could now be considered as accepted by conference as terms of reference for meeting of representatives of commands of both sides.

US delegate stated that he accepted French text as originally proposed, i.e., without Molotov amendment, and that he did not reject the amended text subject to reservations he had formulated.

After a brief recess, Eden submitted text of communiqué in which he included agreed text of French proposal, statement conference would continue in session and request that representatives of commands dealing with Laos and Cambodia submit interim or final report within 21 days. It was also agreed that next meeting be held June 22. (Secto 478 contains full text of communiqué as finally approved.<sup>5</sup>) Eden said first task of conference next week would be to consider question of international supervision or control.

---

<sup>5</sup> Dated June 19, p. 1204.

Comment:

(1) US delegate questioned French, Laotian and Cambodian delegates regarding mechanism for establishing military contacts. They have no ideas.

(2) US delegate questioned Chauvel regarding fact French proposal does not specify that representatives of commands of two sides are Laos and Viet Minh and Cambodia and Viet Minh. Chauvel stated that he had oral agreement on this point from Soviet and Communist Chinese delegates who stated they had secured similar agreement from Viet Minh. We are worried about this point. We are convinced, however, that Cambodians and Laotians will refuse to meet with overt representatives of resistance movement.

(3) Chauvel's tactics apparently aimed at keeping Mendes-France from coming to Geneva in order to talk to Dong and possibly Chou En-lai and others regarding unsettled problems. Agreement on military talks for Laos and Cambodia apparently regarded by Chauvel as a step forward which will make Mendes-France less anxious to hasten here.

SMITH

396.1 GE/6-1954: Telegram

Sixteenth Restricted Session on Indochina, Geneva, June 19, 6:45 p. m.: The United States Delegation to the Department of State

CONFIDENTIAL

PRIORITY

GENEVA, June 19, 1954—midnight.

Secto 479. Paris priority 465, London 306, Tokyo 152, Saigon 184, Moscow 137. Department pass Defense; Tokyo pass CINCFE; Saigon pass Phnom Penh and Vientiane. Following is text Under Secretary's statement 16th Indochina restricted session, Saturday, June 19:

"I refer to the last phrase of paragraph (b) of the French proposal to the effect that due regard is to be had 'to the observations and proposals presented by the various delegations at the Conference'. The position of my delegation on the question of Laos and Cambodia is perfectly clear, and has been repeatedly stated to this Conference. The problems of Laos and Cambodia, as has been so ably demonstrated by the representatives of those two countries, arise primarily in our view from an invasion of their territory by Viet Minh forces. It seems to us their problems can be simply resolved by the withdrawal from their territories of these Viet Minh forces. If military staff talks are to be held, it is clear that they should be held between the Cambodian and the Viet Minh commands in the case of Cambodia, and the Franco-Laotian and Viet Minh commands in the case of Laos, and that they should be devoted primarily to the question of the withdrawal of Viet Minh forces from Cambodia and Laos.

"The United States delegation has certain misgivings regarding the formula proposed as to whether it clearly provides for staff talks which will follow the principles which I have just stated. It has the gravest doubts regarding the Molotov amendment. I sincerely hope my associates realize what they are being asked to agree to. The small Cambodian and Laotian forces have a few French officers and non-commissioned officers. If they are deprived of these, their capacity for self defense is materially reduced. The United States delegation considers that in the same way as any other sovereign state, the States of Laos and Cambodia should be free to request and obtain technical assistance and advice, and certainly from the French Union of which they are members.

"I am not prepared to say, however, that the formula necessarily conflicts with these principles. I would assume that the military representatives will, in fact, produce recommendations which will provide for the withdrawal of Viet Minh forces from Laos and Cambodia. On this assumption and upon the understanding that these proposals are acceptable to all of the other delegations participating in this Conference, the United States will not oppose convening of the military representatives as originally proposed by France. My delegation, of course, reserves its right to decide for itself whether the solutions ultimately proposed by the military representatives are consistent with the positions which we have previously taken and which have been set forth by the delegates of Laos and Cambodia. These we support."

SMITH

---

396.1 GE/6-1954 : Telegram

Sixteenth Restricted Session on Indochina, Geneva, June 19, 6:45 p. m.: The United States Delegation to the Department of State

PRIORITY

GENEVA, June 19, 1954.

Secto 478. Paris priority 464, London 305, Moscow 136, Tokyo 151. Saigon priority 183, Phnom Penh, Vientiane unnumbered. Department pass Defense. Tokyo pass CINCFE. For press backstop.

Following text communiqué 16th restricted Indochina meeting Saturday June 19:

"The nine delegations continued in restricted session their examination of the problem of restoring peace in Indochina.

Agreement was reached upon the following text relating to the cessation of hostilities in Cambodia and Laos:

With a view to facilitating the simultaneous and rapid cessation of hostilities in Indochina, it is proposed that:

(a) The representatives of the commands of the two sides shall meet immediately in Geneva or on the spot.

(b) They shall study the questions relating to the cessation of hostilities, on the territories of Cambodia and Laos, beginning with the question concerning the withdrawal of all foreign armed forces and of foreign military personnel, due regard being had to the observations and proposals presented by the various delegations at the conference.

(e) They shall report as soon as possible to the conference their conclusions and recommendations.

It was further agreed that the conference would continue in session. The representatives of the commands dealing with Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia, were asked to submit an interim final report to the conference within 21 days.

The next meeting of the conference will be held June 22."

SMITH

JUNE 20, 1954

396.1 GE/6-2054

Memorandum of Conversation, by the Special Adviser to the United States Delegation (Heath)

SECRET

GENEVA, June 20, 1954.

Participants: Walter Bedell Smith, Under Secretary of State
Donald R. Heath, Ambassador to Cambodia and Vietnam
H. E. Tep Phann, Foreign Minister and Chief of Cambodian Delegation
H. E. Son Sann, Former President of the National Assembly, Former Minister
H. E. Sam Sary, Former Minister

The Under Secretary made a good-bye call on the Cambodian Foreign Minister this morning.<sup>1</sup> Tep Phann explained the purposes of his reservation to Molotov's amendment to the French proposal whereby not only foreign armed forces should leave Cambodian and Laotian territory in the event of an armistice but all foreign military personnel as well. He said Cambodia not only desired to keep French military instructors and advisers to build up its army to defense strength but would like to get other foreign military advisers, particularly American instructors. Cambodia was aware of the remarkable record of the Americans in building up the South Korean army. The Under Secretary said it was a record of which we were proud. In a space of three years we had provided South Korean Government with 20 first-class divisions equal and in some cases perhaps even superior to the American divisions stationed in Korea.

The Under Secretary mentioned an unconfirmed report received this morning that India was preparing to recognize Laos and Cambodia, which he hoped would prove true. Tep Phann said they had talked with Krishna Menon when the latter was in Geneva and found him extremely uninformed about Cambodia and the development of its complete independence. He had no knowledge of India's intention regarding recognition. He had also talked with Vice President Garcia of the Philippine Delegation but found him also uninformed on Cambodia and dubious of the reality of Cambodian independence. The Under Secretary said that he was shortly calling on Garcia and would urge that the Philippines accord recognition to Cambodia and the other associated states.

<sup>1</sup> Under Secretary Smith departed Geneva for Paris and Washington on the afternoon of June 20. Ambassador U. Alexis Johnson became Head of the U.S. Delegation.

The Under Secretary then referred to a long talk he had with Molotov two days ago. He had gathered from that talk that the Communists were inclined to accept Cambodian conditions and not ask for either temporary or permanent division of its territory. In case of Laos, however, the Under Secretary feared that the Communists were going to press for a sizeable slice of Laotian soil. He suggested that Cambodia should support Laos against such demands. The Cambodian Foreign Minister did not reply directly to this suggestion and pointed out there was some difference in the situation of Cambodia and Laos since the Cambodians exercised the high military command whereas the command in Laos was still in French hands. He went on to say that he was very skeptical of any results from the staff talks fearing that instead of the Vietminh command presenting itself for these talks the Vietminh would put forward representatives of the phony "free Cambodian" government. Tep Phann said that in this case the Cambodian government would refuse to start staff talks. The Under Secretary said he approved that stand but it would probably be impossible to keep the Vietminh command from adding a "free Cambodian" to the staff talks of the delegation on the pretext that he was a military officer.

The Under Secretary said that the more conciliatory attitude of the Communist delegations towards Cambodia's proposals gave him some concern. Obviously the Communist tactic was to work toward a solution of the problem of Cambodia to prevent that country from making an appeal to the United Nations an eventuality which the Communists feared. Also the Communists feared to put forward too harsh terms to Cambodia and Laos because of the sympathy for these two countries entertained in India and in Burma. The Communists were not disposed to irritate India because although militarily weak, India enjoyed great moral stature and influence in Asia.

At the end of the interview Son Sann put forward a request that the United States furnish a training mission and arms to build up the Cambodian defense force. The Under Secretary said he felt the United States would be disposed to consider such a request.

JUNE 21, 1954

396.1 GE/6-2154

*Memorandum of Conversation, by the Adviser to the United States
Delegation (Bonsal)*

SECRET

GENEVA, June 21, 1954.

Participants: Mr. Tep Phan, Cambodian Foreign Minister
Mr. Sam Sary, Member of Cambodian Delegation
Mr. Son Sann, Member of Cambodian Delegation
Mr. Philip W. Bonsal, U.S. Delegation

Subject: Military Conversations between Cambodia and Vietminh

I called on the Cambodian Delegation this morning in place of Ambassador Heath who had had to leave for Paris.

Mr. Tep Phan told me that Mr. Chou En-lai had called him in yesterday and had expressed the wish of the Chinese Government to be helpful in getting the Cambodians into contact with the Vietminh for the purpose of proceeding with the military talks to which the conference agreed at its June 19 session. Mr. Tep Phan is awaiting instructions from his government regarding the personnel of the Cambodian representation, the point at which a meeting might take place and other details. It appears that Chou En-lai has invited the Cambodians to have dinner with him tonight. Mr. Tep Phan understands there is a possibility that some Vietminh representatives may also be there. He asked me for my advice as to whether he should go. I replied that this was a decision which he would of course wish to take himself. I said that personally it seemed to me that there must obviously be official contacts between the Vietminh and Cambodia but that it seemed asking a great deal, under the circumstances, to ask the Cambodians to mingle socially with the Vietminh who are active, unprovoked, invaders of Cambodia and killers of Cambodian people.

Mr. Tep Phan is worried about the future attitudes of the Communists with regard to his country. We agreed that the resolution accepted on June 19 was susceptible of two interpretations. It might be a general document which would permit the Communists to reassert various unacceptable points of view regarding the so-called resistance movements and their right to occupy certain areas in Cambodia. On the other hand, the terms were sufficiently general so that the other side could abandon their intentions regarding resistance movements without any further spelling out of this matter. If they do indeed intend to abandon that position it is obvious that it would be easier for them to do so without a specific admission of intent. We agreed that the position on this should very rapidly be clarified.

Mr. Tep Phan told me that he expected to divide his time between Geneva and Paris. He said that he was most anxious to secure certain arms for the Cambodian army and that he was rather discouraged at the difficulties he had encountered. He said for instance that there was an order for 500 rifles to be supplied from the Saint Etienne factory which had been pending for six or seven months and which Mr. Tep Phan hopes to activate in the course of his next trip to France.

Mr. Tep Phan asked me about the possibility of getting arms from the US. I said that I was not up to date with regard to the details of such conversations as there have been on this matter. I said that I was aware of the fact that General O'Daniel and Mr. McClintock had been in Phnom Penh recently and had had some discussions with the Cambodian authorities. I said in this connection that if in fact the relatively favorable dispositions, which some people believe the Communists have now adopted with regard to Cambodia, are to find expression, it would seem advisable to make the path for such expression relatively smooth. I repeated that we should very shortly ascertain their real intentions.

Mr. Tep Phan agreed to keep the US Delegation closely informed of all developments.

---

396.1 GE/6-2154 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET      PRIORITY

GENEVA, June 21, 1954—1 p. m.

Secto 488. Repeated information Paris 473, Saigon 189. Roux of French delegation has indicated to us that French thinking as to organization future work of conference involves delegating [delegation] to a committee of the conference of task of making recommendations re "technical aspects" of supervision and control of armistice. Reading informs us French delegation is preparing paper endeavoring to make distinction between technical aspects which would be province of committee and political aspects which conference would continue to work on.

I have stated to Reading and plan to inform Chauvel this afternoon that, although US delegation will give careful study to any suggestion made, it continues to be our view that certain fundamental matters of principle must be agreed to before profitable discussions at technical level and [can] take place. These fundamental matters, in addition to that of composition, include the authority, structure and capacity of the International Commission in relation to the mixed commissions. (See in this connection Tedul 211<sup>1</sup> and Dulte 195.<sup>2</sup>)

As soon as French paper is available, we will telegraph text with recommendations. French objective of course is to keep conference as alive as possible and to give impression of continued progress or at least of activity. If they can get agreement of six non-Communist delegations, they would plan present proposal described above at tomorrow's conference session.

JOHNSON

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated June 17, p. 1171.

<sup>2</sup> Dated June 18, p. 1176.

---

396.1 GE/6-2154 : Telegram

Johnson-Chauvel Meeting, Geneva, June 21, Afternoon: The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET      PRIORITY

GENEVA, June 21, 1954—9 p. m.

Secto 498. Repeated information Paris 479, Saigon 193. Limit distribution. I saw Chauvel this afternoon following his return from Paris. He felt General Smith's talk with Mendes-France had been most useful. He said he had had long private conversation with Mendes-France, and he was very encouraged at his attitude on Indochina, although Mendes-France's ignorance of actual situation was still very great.

With respect Mendes-France-Chou meeting, Chauvel said Mendes-France had proposed meeting on outskirts Paris, and Chou had refused meeting any place in France but stated he still wished very much see Mendes-France, would postpone his departure two days if necessary, and would meet any place in Switzerland. Mendes-France has proposed meeting at Bern on Wednesday, but as of this evening Chou's reply not yet received.<sup>1</sup>

Under instructions Mendes-France, Chauvel attempting arrange secret meeting this evening with Pham Van Dong in which he will say on behalf Mendes-France that there are limits beyond which France cannot go in settlement, and any settlement must be such that US will not feel obligated "reject it". Chauvel will urge Viet Minh move ahead in "underground military talks", in which Chauvel says there has been no progress whatever during past week.

---

<sup>1</sup> In telegram 4999 June 22, from Paris, Ambassador Dillon reported: "Mendes-France has just telephoned Ambassador to say he was leaving 11 tonight for Bern to see Chou En-lai. He also said vague approaches had been made to him to see leader of Viet Minh delegation while there but he had declined offer. Said he would give Ambassador report when he returned." (651.93/6-2254)

Chauvel said Chou's conversation with Cambodians and Laotians (Secto 495<sup>2</sup>) bore out his "most optimistic interpretation" of Chou's conversation with Eden and Bidault.

He said he had renewed his request that DeJean come to Geneva as quickly as possible to assist him, and hoped this would be approved shortly.

He said Mendes-France was anxious that conference reconvene on foreign minister level as soon as possible. Chauvel had pointed out to him that this was dependent upon progress military staff talks. In meanwhile, Chauvel believed conference meetings need not be held more than 2 or 3 times a week.

He discussed with me tactics for tomorrow's meeting, which will be subject separate message.

JOHNSON

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated June 21, p. 1211.

---

396.1 GE/6-2154 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET NIACT

GENEVA, June 21, 1954—8 p. m.

Secto 496. Repeated information Paris 478, Saigon 192. Re Secto 488 repeated Paris 473, Saigon 189.<sup>1</sup> Chauvel has just given me following proposal which he may submit at meeting tomorrow and at same time withdraw proposal contained Secto 460: <sup>2</sup>

"The conference may constitute, each time that the need is felt, an 'ad hoc commission' of which the composition will be fixed according to the subject under consideration. The ad hoc commissions will take up their studies within the framework of directives given by the conference, and on the basis of the proposals and statements of the delegations. They will submit, in the shortest time possible, their recommendations to the conference, and in case of divergency, the explanation of the contradictory views."

I intend, in the absence of contrary instruction from the Department to go along with the above proposal at the meeting tomorrow. It appears to me consistent with working method conference has already adopted and with my understanding of first paragraph Tedul 211.<sup>3</sup> He is primarily interested in giving impression of conference activity.

JOHNSON

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated June 21, p. 1208.

<sup>2</sup> Dated June 17, p. 1164.

<sup>3</sup> Dated June 17, p. 1171.

751G.00/6-2154 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET NIACT

GENEVA, June 21, 1954—9 p. m.

Secto 497. Chauvel today gave me the following French proposal on Cambodia and Laos which he said represented an attempt to eliminate from the Chinese proposal those points which erroneously indicated agreement had been reached where none had, and to turn it into a formal agenda on Cambodia and Laos, although frankly I am not entirely clear what he has in mind. It is possible he will bring this forward at meeting of six tomorrow morning, and I would appreciate any comments the Department may have. I will reserve my position pending instructions.<sup>1</sup>

“Following the Conference debates on Cambodia and Laos, and taking into account the observations made and the proposals presented to the Conference, the latter will study the following problems:

1. Cessation of hostilities in Cambodia and Laos. Simultaneous with the cessation of hostilities in Vietnam.
2. Examination of the recommendations transmitted by the representatives of the commanders in chief on the withdrawal of foreign troops from Cambodia and Laos (cf., resolutions of June 19).
3. Prohibitions on the introduction, after the cessation of hostilities, of new troops as well as arms and munitions into Cambodia and Laos, with reservations concerning the needs of the national armies in order to assure the defense of the two countries.
4. International control system in Cambodia and Laos.
5. Liberation of prisoners of war and civil internees.
6. Protection of persons having collaborated with the opposing side during the war.”

JOHNSON

<sup>1</sup>The Department of State in telegram Tosec 454, June 21, informed the U.S. Delegation that the points raised in telegrams Secto 496, June 21, supra, and Secto 497 “will be discussed with Secretary who returns tomorrow and appropriate instructions forwarded. Believe you should reserve your position on both proposals meanwhile.” (751G.00/6-2154)

In telegram Tosec 460, June 22, the Department instructed the U.S. Delegation, with reference to Secto 497, that “it would appear that Chauvel is now attempting to substitute Chou En-lai’s six-point proposal with minor modifications for proposal adopted by Conference after long debate at restricted session June 19. We must insist on retention of text of proposal as previously adopted.” (751G.00/6-2154)

751G.00/6-2154 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET

GENEVA, June 21, 1954—9 p. m.

Secto 495. Repeated information Paris 477, London 315, Tokyo 154, Saigon 101, Moscow 141, Vientiane and Phnom Penh unnumbered.

Department pass Defense. Tokyo for CINCFE. Lao Foreign Minister Phoui Sanankone [Sananikone] and Orot Souphanouvong [Souvanavong] called on Bonsal today to report conversation with Chou En-lai at noon. Chou apparently turned on all his charm and made visible impression. Chou indicated understanding attitude toward (1) possibility that cease-fire could take place in Laos before Vietnam; (2) maintenance French bases and French military training mission under Franco-Lao military accord; and (3) withdrawal Viet Minh troops. Concerning latter, he claimed few left in Laos. He gave Phoui impression that Viet Minh could be totally withdrawn from even Sam Neua province. Chou said Prince Souphanouvong had no ambitions for Laos throne, only interested in "peace, independence and democracy". He discussed with Phoui possibility of meeting between Souphanouvong and Prime Minister Souvanna Phouma. Although Phoui stated interview would have to be on basis submission of former and not involve recognition of Pathet Lao group, he was evidently interested in further exploration this possibility and appreciative of Chou's willingness to facilitate matter.

Lao and Cambodian delegates have accepted Chou's invitation to dine with him this evening; Pham Van Dong is also to be a guest. After Phoui left [Bonsal's?] office, Orot described Chou as "snake charmer" and indicated some concern that Phoui's sincere approach might be abused. Also stated that Chou several times mentioned his opposition to establishment US bases in Laos.

JOHNSON

---

751.13/6-2254 : Telegram

Dillon-Mendès-France Meeting, Paris, June 21, 10 p. m.: The Ambassador in France (Dillon) to the Department of State

TOP SECRET      NIACT

PARIS, June 22, 1954—10 a. m.

4980. Repeated information priority London 1205, Geneva 433. London, Geneva, eyes only Ambassadors. Limit distribution. Mendes-France asked me to come to see him last night and I saw him at his apartment at 10 p. m. He said that he wished to bring me up-to-date regarding his proposed meeting with Chou En-lai. He said that the French delegation had informed the Chinese that Mendes would not come to Geneva but that he would like to see Chou and proposed a meeting in France somewhere between Paris and Geneva. Chou replied that while he had no objection to leaving Geneva in order to meet Mendes he could not of course under any circumstances enter French territory as France did not recognize Communist China. He therefore renewed his proposal that the meeting take place at Geneva. After some further negotiation the following arrangement was accepted in principle by Chou. Mendes told me that all the delegation chiefs including Bedell Smith, Eden and Molotov had at one time or another visited Bern to pay their respects to the President of Switzerland and to thank him for having made available the facilities of Geneva. Bidault had not been able to make this visit because of the crisis although he had desired to do so. Accordingly Mendes tentatively planning to go to Bern on Wednesday and make his visit to the Swiss President. Later Wednesday he will meet Chou at the French Embassy in Bern. Chauvel left for Geneva last night and is seeing the head of the Chinese delegation this morning to firm up this arrangement.

Mendes then said he had been quite embarrassed by a UP press leak Monday from Washington indicating that he might meet Chou. This had brought him a series of telephone calls from French press as well as from members of his own Cabinet who were uninformed. He said he had refused to comment to the French press or to his Cabinet and had had to postpone the Cabinet meeting scheduled for this morning to this afternoon so that he would be [in] a position to give factual information to his Ministers. He also said that he had scheduled a second meeting with Diem for early this afternoon at which he had intended to tell Diem of his plan to meet with Chou. Mendes said that unfortunately now Diem would probably read about the meeting in the press. Mendes then said that it was his desire to keep the US fully and currently informed of his actions through me, and he expressed the hope that in the future the Department of State would show more discretion in preserving his confidences.<sup>1</sup>

DILLON

---

<sup>1</sup> In reply to Mendès-France's implication that the Department of State had been responsible for the leak of his proposed meeting with Chou En-lai, the Department in telegram 4752 to Paris, June 22, informed Ambassador Dillon that a careful check throughout the Department "revealed no Dept source any press leak on this subject. Matter taken up on confidential basis with UP who informs that first story this subject was from Geneva June 21 attributed to 'high diplomatic French source', which stated Mendès-France trying arrange secret meeting with Chou. No stories Washington dateline this subject. You should further explain to Mendès-France that this is by no means first time Dept has been accused of French leaks and we hope that in future instances his first step will be to ascertain facts." (751.13/6-2254)

JUNE 22, 1954

751G.00/6-2254 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET PRIORITY

GENEVA, June 22, 1954—2 p. m.

Secto 499. Repeated information Paris 481, London 317, Tokyo 155, Saigon 194, Moscow 142, Phnom Penh, Vientiane unnumbered. Re

Secto 495, repeated Paris 477, London 315, Moscow 141, Tokyo 154, Saigon 19 [101].<sup>1</sup> As indicated reference telegram Chou En-lai last night entertained Cambodian, Laotian and Viet Minh delegates at dinner. Accounts given us by Laotians and Cambodians indicate dinner was excellent with numerous toasts to peace and friendship followed by movies and by conversations.

Cambodians were favorably impressed at Dong's attitude toward Cambodia. He accepted principle of withdrawal of Viet Minh "volunteers". He said aspirations of minorities in resistance movements should, however, be taken into account. He expressed satisfaction at Cambodian intention of granting general amnesty following cessation of hostilities. He admitted great popularity of King Norodom Sihanouk in Cambodia. He expressed satisfaction with agreements for transfers of power from France to Cambodia which Cambodians showed him and with which he apparently unfamiliar. He expressed understanding of Cambodian requirements for self-defense while claiming his main worry was possibility of American bases in Cambodia.

Conversation with Laotian delegate followed generally similar course. Chou En-lai evinced sympathetic interest in Laotian territorial integrity and independence. According to Ourot, "he almost promised us the protection of 600-million Chinese". Dong stated he accepted Franco-Laotian military agreements including continued existence of French Union bases on Laotian territory. He expressed concern at the possibility of American bases and of agreements between Laos and the US for defense. Dong accepted principle of withdrawal of Viet Minh volunteers and pointed to fact most of them had already departed and that operations are at low ebb (Laotian reports confirm this).

With regard to resistance movements in Laos, Dong's attitude was different from that followed with regard to Cambodia. He suggested meeting between Souvanna Phouma (Prime Minister) and his brother Prince Souphanouvong, the resistance leader. Dong said he would like to talk further with Laotian delegate on this subject. (Comment: It is quite evident that Dong regards Laotian resistance movement as more valuable asset than Cambodian resistance movement.)

According to our informants, there was no mention at this meeting of possible establishment of relations between Communist Chinese and Laos and Cambodia.

Comment: It seems clear that Viet Minh with Communist Chinese support will endeavor to secure at price of conciliatory friendly attitude they are adopting toward Laos and Cambodia involving withdrawal of Viet Minh and cessation of hostilities in those countries, a commitment or understanding which would in effect neutralize these two countries or at least prevent them from participating in Southeast Asian defense organization. Since participation depends not only on their willingness to participate but also on US willingness to make specific commitments for defense of Laos and Cambodia, US delegation would appreciate urgently instructions as to attitude we should advise Laotians and Cambodians to adopt. We are suggesting, of course, that they, while protesting their peaceful intentions and their complete sovereignty and independence make no commitments which would prejudice their ability to enter into collective security arrangements with other countries.

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated June 21, p. 1211.

JOHNSON

396.1 GE/6-2254 : Telegram

Seventeenth Restricted Session on Indochina, Geneva, June 22, 3 p. m.: The United States Delegation to the Department of State<sup>1</sup>

CONFIDENTIAL

GENEVA, June 22, 1954—midnight.

Secto 504. Moscow 144 repeated information Paris 486, Saigon 199, London 319, Tokyo 158, Phnom Penh, Vientiane. Department pass Defense. Tokyo pass CINCFE. Seventeenth Indochina restricted session on Tuesday June 22, with Novikov (USSR) presiding. Chauvel opened by raising question international control for Cambodia and Laos. Referred to list of questions prepared for discussion (Secto 497<sup>2</sup>) but decided withhold them pending implementation decision June 19 on military talks.

Denying Communist allegations that French believed international control should apply only Vietnam, Chauvel stated international supervision in Cambodia and Laos should apply to:

1. Evacuation of foreign troops;
2. Liberation prisoners of war and civil internees;
3. Guarantee of territorial integrity and concentration of remaining French troops (in Laos) to agreed bases;
4. Control over entry of arms necessary for national armies to assure defense.

Structure of international control would resemble that for Vietnam. Central commissions situated in country capitals and units in countryside and frontier areas with necessary material support and ability make investigations on request or on own initiative. Commissions could ask for creation joint commissions. Should be on spot to function from moment cessation hostilities.

<sup>1</sup> A set of minutes of this session (IC Restricted/17) is in Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 279. The minutes indicate that the meeting convened at 3 p. m. and adjourned at 7:20 p. m. The minutes are also printed in Conférence de Genève, pp. 328-338. Message transmitted in two sections.

<sup>2</sup> Dated June 21, p. 1211.

Chauvel emphasized majority decision by commission. It would report to guarantors (conference powers) failure to obey decisions or anything threatening renewal hostilities.

Composition should be similar but not necessarily same as for Vietnam. Entire problem in practical aspects can be studied as whole for three states, but differences in function and structure should be noted. After certain fundamental issues agreed, French delegation would submit proposal for discussion. Raised question of turning over technical aspects for expert study, but conference should continue consideration special problems Cambodia and Laos.

Next China (Li Ko-neng) noted various views on international control, expressed belief sincere negotiation could resolve differences. He recalled various Communist statements this subject and particularly Molotov June 14 proposal (Secto 442<sup>3</sup>), which he suggested as basis discussion. He supported proposal and amendment of June 16 (Secto 461<sup>4</sup>) providing for five or three-power commission, including Indonesia, with India as chairman. Acknowledged special conditions Cambodia and Laos. Then emphasized that since two parties primarily responsible for successful cease-fire the joint commissions should be chiefly responsible for control. Hoped for rapid accomplishment of definition terms of reference and relations between joint and international commissions.

USDel followed with statement Secto 503.<sup>5</sup>

UK (Lord Reading) took floor to express hope and belief that Chinese were right, that differences could be settled, but noted several awkward problems. Although conciliatory and almost apologetic in words and manner, he then effectively attacked Molotov proposal. Referring frequently his agreement with USDel criticism, he pointed out ineffectiveness of subordination international commission to joint bodies. Frankly had to ask Soviet delegation for real reason behind this unworkable scheme.

Reading again supported Colombo powers and then turned to question majority or unanimous decisions by international commission. Said Molotov proposal would invite breakdown at critical moments while arguing whether any given incident required joint or unanimous decision.

---

<sup>3</sup> Dated June 14, p. 1143.

<sup>4</sup> Dated June 17, p. 1157.

<sup>5</sup> Infra.

He hoped drafters Soviet proposal would not object to amendments other delegations thought necessary. He ended with reference to Chou En-lai statement that decisions difficult without exact knowledge of what is to be supervised. Hoped therefore positions could be kept flexible pending submission reports by military representatives.

Dong (VM) spoke after recess and referred to study commission proposed by French delegate on subject of control. Dong proposed conference should adopt following principles to assist committee:

1. Correct interpretation of armistice rests with belligerent parties.
2. Joint commission should not be subordinate to "neutral armistice supervisory commission" (Dong reiterated familiar arguments that neutral commission should have no right to impose decisions on joint commission, that it is not possible to give neutral commission power of decision without providing it with coercive means to implement its decisions, and that differences should be referred to conference powers.)
3. Soviet proposal of June 14 re powers, functions and rules of procedure for a neutral commission should be used as basis for discussion and linked to question of composition neutral commission as suggested by Soviet delegate on June 16.

Cambodian delegate (Sam Sary) then took floor and stated that his delegate shared views expressed by Chauvel, but believed joint commission for Cambodia should be different from those for Vietnam and Laos although composition could be same and commissions could cooperate with each other. In referring to Communist Chinese suggestion that Soviet proposal be used as basis for discussion, Cambodian delegate said he did not reject everything in Soviet proposal although it applied only to Vietnam. He stated that since conference has recognized separate problem of Cambodia and Laos, conference should apply same approach to problem of control in Laos and Cambodia as distinguished from Vietnam. In concluding Cambodian delegate said the same remarks apply to the statement made earlier by Dong regarding question of composition of commission.

Vietnam delegate (Buu Kinh) referred to earlier expression views of his delegate June 9 on question of control, said line of reasoning guided by adherence to two principles: Impartiality and efficiency of control commission. These he reaffirmed while noting that the Soviet proposal lacked them. He then emphasized that role of joint commission should be limited to execution and implementation, and that one side cannot be both judge and party at interest, situation which would be inherent if joint commission were dominant over neutral commission. Concluded by saying that control body must be independent of both sides and that United Nations Organization best possible one to guarantee impartiality, efficiency and technical ability to carry out task.

Chauvel (France) then spoke extemporaneously noting that conference had before it "abundant crop of proposals", referred to valid questions posed today by US delegate and noted statement of UK delegate which, he said, conformed to his own views that difficulties arise from role of unanimity as his three years experience in United Nations Security Council testified. Referring to Cambodian intervention Chauvel said he saw no conflict between his and Cambodian views, stating that there was definite advantage in having central control commission for each country adding that he did not contemplate joint control system as in case of Vietnam, but rather liaison parties to supervise certain practical matters on a temporary basis (Chauvel remarks at this point were rather vague).

In course of further somewhat diffuse remarks Chauvel made following points: Some safeguards to insure carrying out of armistice terms necessary since unlikely two belligerent parties will work together following hostilities in spirit of complete cooperation; joint control commission should be charged with implementation of agreement as distinguished from role of mediation and control which must be provided by higher and neutral body when difficulties arise; speaking of relations between joint and neutral commissions question of which is subordinate not helpful since it is not necessary to set up tribunals but rather bodies suited for specific tasks they have to perform; conference should discuss what subjects would be suitable for each of these two commissions; i.e., in Vietnam question of regrouping of forces would be one for joint commission whereas control of entry of arms and equipment would be matter for neutral commission.

In concluding Chauvel suggested that conference set up committee of experts from each delegation to examine and compare various proposals on control put forward to date, and advise conference of results of this examination. Committee would not necessarily exist for duration of conference but would report every 2 or 3 days concerning questions raised from one meeting to another.

Laotian delegate (Ourot Souvainavong [Souphanouvong]) then somewhat confusingly proposed that the two chairmen, following traditional procedure, meet to reach decision on French suggestion concerning committee of experts.

Lord Reading (UK) asked for the floor and stated that although he was willing to discuss anything with his co-chairman he felt that in the past such discussions pertained to procedural rather than substantive subjects, and expressed the view that there were too many differences of opinion to hope that two chairmen could reach solution. (None of delegates subsequently referred to Chauvel's suggestion.)

Novikov (USSR) speaking as Soviet delegate, contributed nothing new by touching on following points: Soviet, PRC and DRV Democrats consider United Nations unacceptable in control function; Colombo powers "truly neutral" but are not only neutral states in world; Soviet delegate has shown spirit of conciliation by proposing commission composed of 4 countries, then by suggesting chairman have decisive vote on number of questions, and then by proposing commission be reduced to 3 countries or raised to 5; if two sides in Indochina want to maintain peace it will be maintained, and no commission can thwart resolve of one side to resume hostilities; decisions of neutral commission should not be imposed on joint commission; no one has answered question how to make joint commission submit to decisions of neutral commission; USDel has gone so far as to propose that international commission have organs on territories of both sides thereby infringing sovereignty "both Vietnam and DRV", and raising question US motives; one commission should be set up for all Indochina rather than one for each of three countries.

In concluding Novikov remarked that Kuznetsov (Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister) would arrive Geneva tomorrow, will study all proposals and may wish make statement.

Since no more speakers inscribed Novikov read usual communiqué asking delegates when next meeting should be set. After short round of discussion it was decided to set June 24 as date of next meeting with understanding that after consultation of co-chairmen meeting might be postponed.

JOHNSON

---

396.1 GE/6-2254: Telegram

*Seventeenth Restricted Session on Indochina, Geneva, June 22, 3 p. m.:
The United States Delegation to the Department of State*

CONFIDENTIAL

GENEVA, June 22, 1954—10 p. m.

Secto 503. Repeated information Paris 48, Saigon 198, London 318, Tokyo 157, Moscow 143, Phnom Penh, Vientiane unnumbered. Department pass Defense; Tokyo pass CINCFE. Following is text my statement in 17th Indochina restricted session Tuesday, June 22:

Both the delegates of France and the People's Republic of China have spoken of the task now confronting this conference with respect to the question of international control. Mr. Chauvel has I believe given us a most useful analysis of the task we face in this regard.

As Mr. Li has noted, on June 14 Mr. Molotov made a rather extensive statement on the subject of International and Joint Commission control over the provisions of an armistice agreement in the three states and submitted a proposal on this question. He later developed his ideas on that same day and on June 16. I would like in a spirit of helpfulness to address myself to some of the questions raised by this proposal and its explanation, and to refer to some of the principles which my delegation feels must be accepted with regard to each of the three states if this control is to be effective.

I regret I must first note the small degree of progress which seems to have been achieved. Mr. Molotov did accept that certain categories of decisions by the International Supervisory body could be taken by majority vote. I regret that he stopped there and thereby placed such limits on the capacity of the Commission to take executive and rapid decisions. If unanimity were to be applied, and I quote from Mr. Molotov's proposal, to "questions connected with violation of provisions of the agreement or the arising of a threat of such violation which could lead to the re-opening of hostilities", it is obvious that on matters of the gravest importance the Commission could be paralyzed just at the time when rapid and effective decisions were most needed.

However, this progress is slight when we consider the major questions which are still unresolved. I refer particularly to the questions of composition of the International Supervisory Commission, the authority of this Commission, and the relation of Joint Commissions to the International Commission.

The position of my delegation has been made clear several times on the question of composition of the International Commission. I can only reiterate that I consider either the United Nations as mentioned by several delegations or the Colombo powers as proposed by Mr. Eden as meeting the criterion of impartiality upon which this Commission must be founded. The views of the USDel are well known on the question of the inclusion of countries of the Communist bloc. These views are amply supported by the records, the neutral nations Supervisory Commission in Korea which there is no need for me to repeat at this time.

I turn to the question of the authority of the International Commissions. The provisions of Mr. Molotov's proposal which are concerned with the functions and powers of the International Supervisory Commission, particularly when read in conjunction with the remainder of his proposal, would give us a Commission which the USDel feels not only lacked the real power of decision but which also lacked any substantive field in which to operate. I understand that the term in the Russian language used by Mr. Molotov in describing the Commission is correctly translated into English as "observation" rather than "supervisory". Indeed, "observation" describes more accurately the functions proposed by Mr. Molotov for this Commission, and it is on this principle that we find our greatest divergence of view.

A further weakness in the functions assigned to the International Commission by the Soviet proposal is in the proposal's failure to spell out clearly that the Commission should have free access to the entire country in which it is operating and that this access should not be conditional upon an invitation by one or both of the opposing sides. This access should be facilitated, as M. Chauvel has pointed out, by providing the Commission with adequate means of transportation and communication as well as with sufficient personnel to carry out any missions which it considers appropriate to its functions.

The Soviet and other Communist delegations desire the acceptance of a powerless and unworkable body which would have no authority in relation to the two belligerent sides or to the Joint Commissions made up of representatives of these two sides. We, to the contrary, insist on a truly impartial International Commission in a position of authority over the parties to the armistice and over any Joint Commissions which it might be necessary to create.

I noted with interest Mr. Molotov's statement on June 14 that to insist on subordination of the Joint Commissions to the International Commission would mean that we do not want to re-establish peace in Indochina. I find that statement somewhat difficult to understand as it seems to me that the premise bears no relation to the conclusion. It is the belief of our delegation that the best means of maintaining a cessation of hostilities would be to give the necessary powers to the International Commission, including full authority over the Joint Commissions.

In summary, the United States delegation desires to see the creation of an impartial and effective International Supervisory Commission, endowed with real authority to supervise and control the provisions of the agreements with respect to each of the three states and provided with the personnel and material means which will permit it to carry out its mandate.

I have, Mr. Chairman, put forward this analysis in the hope that by pointing up what seems to our delegation the fundamental principles in this regard which still must be resolved, we can expedite the resolution of these problems.

JOHNSON

---

396.1 GE/6-2154 : Telegram

The Secretary of State to the United States Delegation <sup>1</sup>

SECRET      PRIORITY

WASHINGTON, June 22, 1954—7:26 p. m.

Tosec 461. Proposal reported Secto 496 <sup>2</sup> is consistent with working methods adopted by conference but as indicated in Tedul 211 <sup>3</sup> we do not wish participate in work of committees which may take decisions from which it might be awkward for us later to dissociate ourselves.

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by Sturm of FE/PSA.

<sup>2</sup> Dated June 21, p. 1210.

<sup>3</sup> Dated June 17, p. 1171.

Suggest you reiterate to Chauvel that we would not be prepared accept membership in any "ad hoc commissions" which in our view should be constituted only of principals.

DULLES

---

396.1 GE/6-2254 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

TOP SECRET

PRIORITY

GENEVA, June 22, 1954—9 p. m.

Secto 501. Rptd information Paris 483, Saigon 196. Paris eyes only Ambassador, Saigon eyes only. Department limit distribution. Chauvel told me this afternoon that Chou En-lai-Mendes-France meeting had been arranged for tomorrow at Bern "under cover" courtesy visit by Mendes-France to Bern. However, announcement will probably be made this evening that he will also see Chou En-lai.

There was opportunity only to obtain brief account Chauvel's meeting with Dong today. Chauvel said that Dong stated agreement on Vietnam could be reached within ten days in "underground military talks", and Chauvel added it would take another five days "to sell" the Vietnamese.<sup>1</sup> I asked him what this portended as far as Hanoi-Haiphong perimeter was concerned and received vague answer to effect was making attempt to hold on to that area "for time being" on grounds of military necessity and that with passage of time lots of things could happen.

JOHNSON

---

<sup>1</sup> In telegram Secto 506, June 23, the U.S. Delegation instructed the Department of State to "Correct second sentence paragraph Secto 501 to read as follows: 'Chauvel said that Dong stated agreement on Vietnam could be reached within ten days in "underground military talks" (which Chauvel expects to be resumed Thursday) and Dong expected it would take another five days "to sell" the Vietnamese.'" (396.1 GE/6-2354)

---

751G.00/6-2254 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET

GENEVA, June 22, 1954—9 p. m.

Secto 502. Repeated information Paris 484, Saigon 197. Learning Heath was in Paris yesterday, the Vietnamese Defense Minister, Quat, asked to see him. Quat said there had been some "feelers" for him to remain in Ngo Dinh Diem's cabinet. Before making up his mind, he wanted to be certain of Ngo Dinh Diem's policy. He said that too many of Ngo Dinh Diem's supporters were neutralists of the Indian school; that neutralism was no answer to the Communist attempts to take over Vietnam.

Quat said he expected to see General Ely today. He was greatly alarmed over the French plan of drawing in their lines to encompass what they called the "useful delta" which meant a rather narrow parallelogram from Hanoi to Haiphong. When this idea had originally been broached the French said they would ask the Vietnamese National Army to defend the provinces to the west of the parallelogram, notably the two Catholic provinces of Phat Diem and Bui Chu. Quat had accepted this proposition provided the French would agree to give artillery and aviation support and group mobile in case of a large-scale Viet Minh attack. The French agreed. Now, however, the French said they could furnish neither artillery, aviation or group mobile and the Vietnamese Army lacking such support could not hope to withstand a determined Viet Minh attack. Quat said it was of the utmost importance that an attempt be made to hold these western and southern delta provinces since they were the source of manpower for the national army. He could not hope to build up the national army to the desired strength during 1954 without recruits from the north delta. With all due regard to the southern Vietnamese the best and most willing recruits were only to be found in the north.

Quat went on to say that while one must not underestimate the gravity of the military situation of the Franco-Vietnamese forces, one should not forget the Viet Minh were having their difficulties also and were desirous of peace in which they could consolidate their positions. He asserted that Viet Minh had had very great recruiting difficulties at the time they were increasing their attack on Dien Bien Phu and from the regions around Nim Dinh and Nam Dinh the Viet Minh had gotten only 15 and 20 percent of the recruits they had planned to conscript.

JOHNSON

JUNE 23, 1954

Editorial Note

At 8:30 a. m. on June 23, in Washington, Under Secretary Smith conducted a briefing on the Geneva Conference for the President and a bipartisan Congressional delegation of 13 Senators and 17 Representatives, including the Congressional leadership of both parties. He said the United States position toward the Indochina phase of the Conference was different from that toward the Korean phase. The United States was not a principal or a belligerent and therefore had to remain aloof and be somewhat restrained. He said that Secretary of State Dulles "a long time ago had told Bidault that if Indochina were put on the Geneva agenda, violent communist fighting would break out in Indochina. This had happened." Smith said that the United Kingdom "had been anxious to play a major role at Geneva as a peace maker, carrying the Asian members of the Commonwealth along, but not involving commitment of British forces."

Under Secretary Smith indicated that "during the Geneva Conference, the decline in morale and effectiyeness of the Vietnamese army and the fall of the Laniel Government in France had compelled the US to re-evaluate its position." He said that the "original US position was that enemy forces should be evacuated from Laos and Cambodia, because they had been invaded and should be treated differently from Vietnam, which was in a state of civil war; that whatever fair settlement was arrived at for Vietnam, we wanted an impartial and effective International Supervisory Commission, and not one with two built-in Communist vetoes. These positions became the central issues of the Indochina phase. On the latter issue, when the British finally proposed the International Advisory Commission, to be composed of the Colombo Powers and the Soviets rejected this proposal, the Soviets incurred Asian ill-will."

Smith summarized the developments at Geneva and indicated that throughout the United States had "continued to hold to its basic views, but as the US is not a principal or a belligerent, it has not the power to determine the decision."

Smith predicted a "continuance of French political weakness, a continuance of UK desire to avoid conflict in the Far East, a continuance of the Communist firmness of position, and a belief that the Communists would probably move to the following position, which the French, UK, and Associated States would accept:

"1. A partition of Vietnam, or some intermediate step looking toward partition.

"2. Communist control of about one-half to one-third of Laos.

"3. No Communist control in Cambodia.

"4. An ineffective International Supervisory Commission.

"5. The arrangement to be subject to revision in the future at such time as the Communists might decide."

For the complete text of Smith's remarks and those of the Secretary of State who was also in attendance, see memorandum by the Special Assistant to the President for National Security Affairs (Cutler), June 23, volume XIII.

396.1 GE/6-2354 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET

GENEVA, June 23, 1954—10 a. m.

Secto 505. Repeated information Paris 487, Saigon 200. Dac Khe, Deputy Chief of Vietnam delegation, told Heath that he saw both Ngo Dinh Diem and Bao Dai in Paris over the week end. He had urged Ngo Dinh Diem to appoint a new chief of the delegation with least possible delay to which Diem agreed.

He found Bao Dai "very anxious" over the situation and the possibility of the loss of the northern Delta as a result of French-Viet Minh agreement. Dac Khe said he told His Majesty the only way to ensure that French not surrender north would be for Bao Dai to return forthwith to Vietnam and to take up residence in Hanoi. Bao Dai made no reply to this suggestion.

Dac Khe was extremely worried over the Chinese "concession" to Laos and Cambodia looking towards the "neutralization" of the two countries. Dac Khe said that China was a large cat which was suggesting that the two mice, Laos and Cambodia, be neutralized. But who would ensure the neutrality of the cat?

Dac Khe feared that an agreement acceptable to Laos and Cambodia would be reached shortly which would prevent those countries from carrying their case to the United Nations and this would greatly handicap chances of an eventual appeal of Vietnam to the UN.

Khe felt sure that Vietnam must eventually withdraw from conference. The question was when?

JOHNSON

396.1 GE/6-2254 : Telegram

The Secretary of State to the United States Delegation<sup>1</sup>

TOP SECRET

PRIORITY

WASHINGTON, June 23, 1954—11:20 a. m.

Tosec 464. Limit distribution. Ref Secto 501.<sup>2</sup> Chauvel's evasiveness re "underground military talks" is contrary our understanding with him and Mendes-France that we were to be kept fully informed.

Suggest Johnson take earliest appropriate occasion remind Chauvel this understanding and to add that our continued presence at Geneva can be useful only to the degree that we are in fact kept fully informed.

Ambassador Dillon should make similar representations Mendes-France.

DULLES

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by Sturm of FE/PSA. Sent to Paris as telegram 4756 and repeated to Saigon as telegram 2698.

<sup>2</sup> Dated June 22, p. 1222.

751G.00/6-2254 : Telegram

The Secretary of State to the United States Delegation<sup>1</sup>

SECRET

PRIORITY

WASHINGTON, June 23, 1954—2: 22 p. m.

Tosec 465. Secto 499.<sup>2</sup> While of course unable now make specific commitment for defense Laos and Cambodia believe you could usefully say to representatives those countries Geneva we most favorably impressed with consistency and firmness position they maintained at conference to date.

Our view continues be Laos and Cambodia victims of foreign aggression and withdrawal Vietminh troops from those countries is only problem regarding them which concerns Geneva Conference.

Continue encourage Laotians and Cambodians to proclaim their peaceful intentions but warn them against making any commitments to Communist bloc which might compromise their present defenses or hinder their participation in defense arrangements which may be made hereafter.

Laotians should be warned particularly against striking any bargain with Prince Souphanouvong which might lead to coalition.<sup>3</sup>

DULLES

---

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by Sturm of FE/PSA. Repeated to Paris as telegram 4761, to London as telegram 7041, to Tokyo as telegram 2844, to Moscow as telegram 797, to Phnom Penh as telegram 80, to Vientiane as telegram 31, and to Saigon as telegram 2699.

<sup>2</sup> Dated June 22, p. 1213.

<sup>3</sup> The U.S. Delegation in telegram Secto 524, June 25, reported that "we expressed to [Ourot] Souvannavong [Laotian Minister to Washington] the observations suggested in Tosec 465, June 23. To our particular warning against striking any bargain with Prince Souphanouvong which might lead to coalition, the Minister said he was afraid the Laotian Premier, Prince Souvanna Phouma, was not well briefed [on] Communism and dangers of entering into coalition arrangements with Communists." (396.1 GE/6-2554)

---

Editorial Note

In a memorandum to the Secretary of State, June 23, Under Secretary Smith indicated that "the question of our present or eventual disassociation from Geneva Conference decisions and the reduction of our participation to a quasi-advisory or observer capacity" raised some very important policy considerations. He felt that any settlement reached at Geneva would "establish a new balance between Communist power of aggression and free world power of resistance." He said it was "the objective of U.S. foreign policy to make that equilibrium as favorable as possible to our side, to minimize the possibility of further defeats in this area, and to localize the present one as far as possible." Smith thought that any settlement coming out of the Conference would "reflect the inability of our side, notably France, Viet Nam, and the U.S., to reach an acceptable basis for continuing the fight to hold the Tonkin Delta against a Communist advance" and asked if the United States would "guarantee that settlement, or do we disassociate ourselves from it?" He felt that the United States had no other choice than to accept reluctantly "the general results of the military defeat which is the dominant theme of the present phase of the Conference" and that "it should be our endeavor . . . not only to obtain through diplomatic united action as good a settlement as possible, but also to see to it, by participation in the guaranteeing of the settlement, that the other side is not tempted by the weakness and disunity of the opposition to violate the settlement reached." (396.1 GE/6-2354)

For the complete text of the memorandum, see volume XIII.

---

751G.00/6-2354 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET      PRIORITY

GENEVA, June 23, 1954—7 p. m.

Secto 510. Repeated information Paris 489, Saigon 202, Phnom Penh 8. Re Secto 499.<sup>1</sup> Tep Phann, Cambodian Foreign Minister, Sam Sary and Son Sann, members of the Cambodian delegation, talked with Heath today.

They expect to see Pham Van Dong shortly, probably today and anticipate the latter will meet their demands for withdrawal of Viet Minh troops from Cambodia but on condition that (1) Cambodia solemnly engage not to permit foreign bases on its soil; (2) nor any foreign military personnel for training or other purposes and (3) accept a severely limited arms import program for Cambodian defense forces, in short the "neutralization" of Cambodia. Tep Phann said that his inclination was to refuse these conditions and hold out for unconditional withdrawal of Viet Minh forces. He and other members of the delegation had no illusions as to the value of a Viet Minh or a Chinese Communist guarantee of Cambodia's neutral status and/or of a Communist convention of non-aggression. He felt certain if Cambodia accepted such an arrangement the Viet Minh would promptly start new efforts of subversion and infiltration, probably followed before very long by another invasion overt or covert.

Before taking such a stand, Cambodia would need to be assured of continuing adequate American arms aid and a training mission, French or American. They would want to know what were the prospects of forming a Southeast Asian Mutual Defense Pact and whether it might involve Cambodia's providing a military base.

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated June 22, p. 1213.

Heath said that the delegation was without instructions to discuss the matter or to give the assurances and information requested. He reminded Tep Phann, however, that during the past three years the bulk of the arms and equipment of the Cambodian army had been furnished gratis by the United States and deliveries were still going on. He remarked that as far as he knew no detailed new request for American arms aid had been presented by the Cambodian Government and suggested that it would be very difficult to decide now just what kind of military program and equipment Cambodia would need until one could see how the conference was going. The delegation would, however, immediately report the Cambodian delegations request to Washington. Meanwhile, he personally recommended the Cambodian delegation should refrain from making any precise engagements which would tie their hands. He remarked the sudden Communist change of conciliatory attitude toward Cambodian position had, inter alia, very likely been motivated by Communist desire to forestall Cambodian appeal to the United Nations under Chapter 7 of the Charter and also to prevent Cambodian participation in a possible Southeast SEA defense pact.

Comment. I believe that if we were to give some general assurance to Cambodia and its delegation here that the United States would provide arms aid directly and would consider providing a training mission, providing the French do not offer one, Cambodia might, at least for a time, hold fast to its demands for unconditional withdrawal of Viet Minh forces. If the Communists refused unconditional acceptance of Cambodia's position, Cambodia might then decide to appeal to the Security Council.

Please instruct urgently.<sup>2</sup>

JOHNSON

---

<sup>2</sup> The Department of State replied in telegram Tosec 479, June 25, p. 1246.

---

396.1 GE/6-2354 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET      PRIORITY

GENEVA, June 23, 1954—7 p. m.

Secto 511. Limit distribution. With reference my Secto 512<sup>1</sup> it seems to me situation is clearly moving rapidly toward Franco-Viet Minh agreement on respective zones of occupation under cease-fire, with almost complete lack of agreement on supervision. When agreement on zones reached, French pressures for effecting cease-fire are likely be so strong as to force virtual French capitulation to Communist views on supervision.

---

<sup>1</sup> Infra.

Must recognize Communist proposals on supervision very closely parallel those in effect in Korea, and French likely take view that they cannot prolong fighting obtain better terms than UNC agreed to in Korea in spite of differing situations. I am concerned over this situation and believe we should do all possible during this interregnum to forestall it, as well as not give French any grounds for accusing us of having prevented progress.

I therefore believe that we should generally be flexible on technical and procedural suggestions of French while reiterating and maintaining our position on basic substantive principles.

I think it very important that French have ready for use at an appropriate time a fully developed draft agreement on control so they are not at last minute maneuvered into position of being forced to work from a detailed Communist draft. I plan to discuss this with Chauvel tomorrow and attempt make arrangements for Colonel Dwan establish close liaison with French experts so as obtain clearer insight into French thinking and give us opportunity make suggestions.

Would appreciate any suggestions Department may have concerning other lines of action we might take.<sup>2</sup>

JOHNSON

---

<sup>2</sup> The Department of State in telegram Tosec 485, June 25, repeated to Paris as telegram 4828, replied as follows: "Agree with your analysis and reaffirm belief control commission should be provided by UN or alternatively by Colombo Powers. You should reiterate this to Chauvel and on every appropriate occasion warn him against any agreement which would place Communist satellite state on control commission. Agree French should have draft agreement prepared preferably along lines consistent with our position. However we should not participate in preparing draft." (396.1 GE/6-2354)

---

396.1 GE/6-2354 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET

PRIORITY

GENEVA, June 23, 1954—7 p. m.

Secto 512. Reference Tosec 460.<sup>1</sup> At yesterday's restricted meeting Chauvel alluded to paper transmitted Secto 497,<sup>2</sup> but stated he would withhold this "pending implementation June 19 decision on military talks". Have no reason believe Chauvel attempting substitute this paper for June 19 conference decision. My understanding is Chauvel merely attempting draw up a form of agenda to provide framework for conference discussion while paying some lip service to Chinese proposal. It does not seem to me his paper endeavors to register any conference agreement on topics mentioned as did Chinese Communist proposal June 16 which we will of course continue oppose. I see no objection going along with Chauvel on this, and would appreciate Department's approval.

---

<sup>1</sup> Not printed, but see footnote 1, p. 1211.

<sup>2</sup> Dated June 21, ibid.

Yesterday's meeting Chauvel also alluded to his proposal for "ad hoc commissions" (Secto 496<sup>3</sup>) but did not table any proposal (reference Tosec 461<sup>4</sup>). However he did orally suggest the possibility of committee of nine, the sole purpose of which would be assemble "abundant crop of proposals" before conference on matters of control together with observations made by various delegations this subject and present sort of summary working documents, which would facilitate further discussions.

In view Chauvel absence at Bern today, have not been able discuss matter further with him, but Bonsal saw Roux this morning and reiterated our reluctance approve establishment of subcommittees in absence clear terms of reference reflecting agreement on principles achieved at conference itself. Bonsal suggested task Chauvel had in mind might better be performed by one delegation and presented as working document to conference. Roux said would discuss with Chauvel having small group representatives of few principally interested delegations perform task. Roux stressed French thought is not create any form permanent subcommittee, but rather assign group experts task which would be accomplished between regular meeting of conference by ad hoc experts, which would then be dissolved.

From my previous conversations with him, I believe Chauvel's motivation to be: (1) He has available junior staff member highly competent control matters who cannot directly participate regular restricted sessions but who could represent French delegation at lower level committee; (2) Chauvel himself is unfamiliar with large amount of material which various delegations have submitted and genuinely believes an agreed analysis presentation of material would be helpful; (3) Chauvel believes appointment ad hoc commission perform more or less specific task would give impression of activity and progress which not produced by repetitious discussions at restricted sessions.

I see little utility but no particular objection to such ad hoc committee if insisted upon by France. While as practical matter smaller group of "principally interested delegations" would probably be able work more effectively, if we did not participate danger that elements of control which we consider important might be dropped in committee report. Therefore am inclined believe on balance preferable we participate if clearly understood committee job collating and recording only, and not decision-making.

<sup>3</sup> Dated June 21, p. 1210.

<sup>4</sup> Dated June 22, p. 1221.

Please instruct.<sup>5</sup>

I am not clear on whether Chauvel will continue push for "committee of experts" on more substantive aspects control, but in view his anxiety get his junior staff expert work on this subject believe it likely he would do so. I strongly feel referral to committee in absence of agreement on essential principles very dangerous and will continue oppose.

JOHNSON

---

<sup>5</sup>The Department of State replied in telegram Tosec 478, June 24, p. 1238.

---

751G.00/6-2354 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET

GENEVA, June 23, 1954—9 p. m.

Secto 513. Repeated information Paris 590, Saigon 203, Phnom Penh 9. Following Heath's conversation with Cambodian Foreign Minister reported Secto 510,<sup>1</sup> Heath received letter from Foreign Minister of which following is rough translation :<sup>2</sup>

"Following our talk this morning, I have the honor again to express to you the concern of my government for the present and future security of Cambodia, a concern which is justified by the insufficiency of means at its disposal up to this time to provide for that security. Although lacking necessary means at present to oppose the pressure of the common enemy, Cambodia is resolved to participate in any system for the defense of world freedom.

Thus Cambodia would be tempted to refuse the proposals of the People's Republic of China and the Viet Minh concerning prevention of the introduction of military personnel, or of arms, of the establishment of foreign bases, etc., and to devote itself to maintaining the principles for its complete sovereignty after the withdrawal of the invading troops. However, if Cambodia were not able to hope to receive assistance in personnel, armament, etc., in other words, if the conditions asked of us for the withdrawal of Viet Minh troops were in fact to be fulfilled, this refusal on our part to accept those conditions would lack any reasonable basis and would allow it to be believed that Cambodia does not wish the restoration of peace and does not even think of taking advantage of its refusal, if only during the transitory period, in order to organize itself internally and possibly to reshape its policy.

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated June 23, p. 1227.

<sup>2</sup> A copy of the letter, in French, is in Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 302.

In these conditions, I ask Your Excellency kindly to contemplate the possibility of letting me know to what extent Cambodia might hope for future assistance from the United States of America for the defense of its security. This would permit me to define the position of my delegation at the time of forthcoming bilateral conversations with the Viet Minh.

As soon as I have precise assurances from the Government of the United States of America, my delegation will firmly defend its position without fear of letting escape the chances of peace temporary or illusory though it may be, offered by the Communist delegations."

JOHNSON

751G.00/6-2354 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET

GENEVA, June 23, 1954—9 p. m.

Secto 514. Repeated information Saigon 204, Paris 491, Vientiane 5. Laotian delegation met with Pham Van Dong, Viet Minh delegate, alone this afternoon in garden of Chinese delegation's villa.

Dong was very "amiable". He seemed to agree that Viet Minh forces should be withdrawn and disposed to admit that French keep treaty military bases. He also admitted to continuation of French cadres and training missions but said French military personnel must be reduced to minimum figures which would be agreed upon in talks between representatives of the Franco-Vietnamese and Viet Minh commands scheduled to begin in Geneva about June 26. Dong asked very insistently whether there was any military pact with the United States. The Laotians answered negatively not considering the Military Assistance Agreement of 1950 (pentalateral) to fall in that category. Laotian delegate agreed to ask Laotian Premier, Souvanna Phouma, to meet with his half brother (Souphanavong, leader of the Free Lao Movement) in the immediate future. Dong then suggested, without insistence, that Laotian Government might give some government jobs to members of the "Free Lao Movement" thus creating a government of "national union". In the next elections, the latter could present their candidacies for the Laotian Assembly. Then Dong mentioned vaguely that some sort of a "temporary arrangement" might be made for administration of those regions where the Free Lao Movement Military Forces were located. This suggestion worries the Laotian delegation.

After the talk with Dong, Ourot Souvannavong, Laotian Minister to Washington, had a talk with Tran Cong Tuong, member and translator on Viet Minh delegation. They had attended school together in Saigon. Tuong referred to the execution of a former fellow-schoolmate saying that the latter had been a non-Communist nationalist member of Viet Minh and no obstacle could stop the Communist domination of movement. Tuong also said that he was certain the Laotian Government would find that the Laotian Resistance Movement was much stronger and better implanted than was believed in Vientiane.

Ourot Souvannavong agreed to our suggestion that it would be well for the Laotian delegation to make no major commitments to the Viet Minh until they saw where the latter's proposals were leading. He said he would keep the American delegation fully and promptly informed of developments.

JOHNSON

JUNE 24, 1954

751G.00/6-2454 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET      PRIORITY

GENEVA, June 24, 1954—1 p. m.

Secto 517. Repeated information Paris 493, London 321, Saigon 206. Following account of Mendes-France-Chou En-lai interview yesterday at Bern was given Bonsal by Roux who was present. Chauvel who returned to Paris with Mendes-France, plans to furnish written summary to US and British Ambassadors Paris this morning.

Mendes-France had with him Chauvel, Roux, Col. Guillerma and an interpreter. Chou En-lai was accompanied by Li Ko Nung [Li Ke-nung] (Vice Minister of Foreign Affairs), by Director of European Affairs and two others plus an interpreter. Conversation cordial in tone. There was no mention at any time of Franco-Chinese relations or of recognition by France of Chinese Communist Government. Chou En-lai carefully avoided giving impression he considered new French policy in making and he referred several times to earlier interviews with Bidault.

Chou En-lai stated military aspects must be disposed of before other aspects can be taken up. A cessation of hostilities is primary goal. Chou En-lai hopes Ministers can return to Geneva as soon as possible to pass on recommendations of military representatives for all three countries.

With regard to Laos and Cambodia, although Chou En-lai stated there would have to be regrouping areas for national resistance forces, he said this could be handled by international commissions and that in any case governing thought should be that of reestablishing unity of Laos and Cambodia. If those countries truly support their present royal governments, that is their affair. A suitable place in national life must however be found for resistance elements.

Chou En-lai referred to dinner he had given for delegates of Laos, Cambodia and Viet Minh, stating that they had all spoken French.

He spoke sympathetically of French Union. He added that there could be no American bases in Laos and Cambodia but was not violent on this point. There was no specific discussion of present French Union bases. Chou En-lai said that Chinese attitude on these matters would not be altered by threats to which Chinese would not yield. At same time he emphasized reasonable nature of Chinese position.

With regard to Vietnam, Chou En-lai stated that just as Laos and Cambodia had established contact with Viet Minh, there should be similar contacts between Vietnam and Viet Minh Government. He suggested that French authorities could persuade Vietnamese Government to engage in these contacts. He criticized Bao Dai's position on this subject as having been too intransigent.

Mendes-France then said that in order to be able to influence Vietnamese, French must know what Viet Minh have in mind in connection with military settlement. He said he was seeing General Ely June 24 and would see that French military delegates have precise instructions. Chou En-lai rejoined that he was glad to hear this and that he would try to see that Viet Minh also have instructions. He repeated that within period of three weeks provided by conference resolution, there must be progress which will permit Ministers to return to Geneva.

Chou En-lai made no reply to Mendes-France remarks that Viet Minh claims in military field seemed excessive.

With re to military regrouping of zones, there was no specific exchange of ideas. There was no mention of status of Tonkin for example.

With re to problem of international control, Chou En-lai took position that this could not really be settled until after agreed military dispositions become apparent. It will then become clear just what the task of control will be.

Roux informed us that Mendes-France is seeing Ngo Dinh Diem this morning and will presumably report to him on conversations. French here are doing likewise with Laotian, Cambodian and Vietnamese delegates.

JOHNSON

---

396.1 GE/6-2454 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

TOP SECRET      PRIORITY

GENEVA, June 24, 1954—2 p. m.

Secto 516. Repeated information Paris 492, Saigon 205, Phnom Penh unnumbered. Re Sectos 510<sup>1</sup> and 513,<sup>2</sup> June 23. Suggest Heath might be authorized orally to state to Cambodian Foreign Minister that the US is at present disposed to increase the deliveries of equipment for Cambodian regular forces which have been provided under terms of the Pentalateral Convention of 1950. It is also at present disposed to provide some military equipment for local defense units (auto defense). The kind and amount of military equipment to be provided would be discussed in the first instance by Cambodian defense authorities with the Chief of Military Assistance Advisory Group established under the authority of the Pentalateral Convention. Whether US military equipment would be furnished directly to Cambodian forces or as at present through the French High Command in accordance with terms of the convention would be decided later. In this connection it has been the view of the MAAG that the development of the Cambodian defense forces to date has not yet provided a logistic branch sufficient to meet the requirements of American legislation and regulations re reception, transportation, maintenance and inspection of military equipment furnished.

<sup>1</sup> Ante, p. 1227

<sup>2</sup> Ante, p. 1231

It is noted that France has heretofore also provided both equipment and budgetary support for the Royal Khmer Army and is presumably prepared to continue such assistance. As regards military advisory, technical and training personnel it is noted France is also contributing such personnel and it is our understanding is prepared to continue to do so.

It is noted, however, that the Cambodian delegation, in the restricted session of the Geneva Conference on June 19 stated, "the Cambodian delegation would be ready, as proposed by the Chinese delegation, to engage in special negotiations on the question of the introduction of certain personnel into our territory"; and on June 4 stated, "it might also be agreed, in connection with the control of the withdrawal of Viet Minh forces, that the relevant control authority would see to it that what is imported into Cambodia in the way of equipment, cadres, etc., would be elements strictly necessary for the Cambodian National Army for its own defense."

We note these statements with some concern as possibly indicating that the size, character and equipment and the members [numbers] of foreign technical and training personnel for the Cambodian Armed Forces would be negotiated with member states of the Geneva Conference and determined by such negotiations.

In conclusion the Foreign Minister might be informed, in compliance with Tosec 465, June 23,<sup>3</sup> that in the past we have been most favorably impressed with consistency and firmness of position maintained at conference, that withdrawal Viet Minh troops in Cambodia is only problem regarding them which concerns the Geneva Conference and we feel we must warn the Cambodian delegation against making any commitments to Communist bloc which might compromise present defense or hinder participation in future defense arrangements.

---

<sup>3</sup> Ante, p. 1226.

JOHNSON

396.1 GE/6-2454

Memorandum of Conversation, by the Acting Director of the Office of Philippine and Southeast Asian Affairs (Day)

CONFIDENTIAL

[WASHINGTON,] June 24, 1954.

Subject: Geneva Conference

Participants: His Excellency Nong Kimny, Ambassador of Cambodia

Mr. Everett Drumright, FE

Mr. Henry B. Day, PSA

Nong Kimny had just returned by air from Geneva via Paris. He called to resume contact with the Department. He expressed appreciation of the support which the U.S. Delegation had given the Cambodian Delegation at Geneva.

Mr. Drumright exchanged current items of information with the Ambassador mentioning in particular the talks which Chou and Pham Van Dong had been having with the Lao and Cambodian delegates. These had taken place after Nong Kimny left Geneva. Mr. Drumright referred to the possibility that the Communists might agree to withdrawal of Viet Minh troops from Cambodia provided Cambodia agreed not to permit foreign bases on its soil or any foreign military personnel and to receive only very limited supplies of arms. Mr. Drumright informed the Ambassador that the Department had just received a message concerning a note from the Cambodian Foreign Minister to Mr. Heath at Geneva which (a) pointed out that it would be unreasonable for Cambodia to refuse to accept conditions which the Communists asked if Cambodia could not expect to receive assistance in personnel and armament and therefore the conditions were in fact to be fulfilled and (b) asked to what extent Cambodia might hope for help from the U.S. in maintaining its security. The Ambassador said this note was fully consistent with the position Cambodia had taken from the beginning.

The Ambassador said that when he left Geneva at the end of the Korean phase he thought the Indochina phase would also come to a quick close. It was only then that the Communists adopted a more conciliatory tone and made overtures to Laos and Cambodia.

The Ambassador said he wished to make clear that his Government was determined to resist Communist encroachment but that Cambodia's resources were insufficient to enable it to withstand Communist pressures alone. His Government attaches great importance to action on regional defense and favors conclusion on agreement or pact as soon as possible. The second matter he wished to say was that his Government considers it important to learn the results of the Churchill-Eden visit.<sup>1</sup> He had the impression that the UK Government desires to postpone action on regional defense and fears that the British may wish to postpone action indefinitely. The Cambodian Government would not mind postponement for two or three weeks if that is the duration of the life of the Geneva Conference but is strongly opposed to letting the matter die. The Ambassador recognized that the British might want some sort of Locarno-type pact. Whatever resulted it would be essential to have some sort of collective guarantee. With regard to action in the UN, the Ambassador said that the way had already been paved and that he was fully prepared to take further action in the UN.

The Ambassador referred to Menon's visit to Geneva. Menon's ideas seemed vague and cloudy. Until just before Menon had left Geneva he had called on all of the delegations at the conference except those of the countries principally concerned, namely, Viet-Nam, Laos and Cambodia. The Cambodian Delegation issued a communiqué pointing this out after which Menon announced that he would call on the delegations of the Associated States before leaving Geneva. Menon did call on Tep Phann, the Cambodian Foreign Minister, but nothing came of it. The possibility of recognition did not come up.

Nong Kimny expressed the belief that military talks between the Cambodian and Viet Minh Commands should take place in Cambodia, that the Cambodians would not discuss anything with the so-called free Khmers. He understood that there were two representatives of this movement behind the scenes at Geneva. The Ambassador was surprised that Defense Minister Tioulong had planned to go to Geneva for military talks.

With regard to the plans of the King of Cambodia, the Ambassador thinks that the present time is not good for such a long trip as the King proposes. He himself was to have accompanied the King on the trip but persuaded his Government that it was more important to return to duty in Washington. The King has a definite commitment to visit Thailand but may give up for the present his plan to visit other countries.

---

<sup>1</sup> For documentation on Prime Minister Churchill's visit, June 25-29, 1954, see volume vi.

396.1 GE/6-2354 : Telegram

The Secretary of State to the United States Delegation<sup>1</sup>

SECRET

WASHINGTON, June 24, 1954—7:33 p. m.

Tosec 478. Reference Secto 512.<sup>2</sup> Our position remains that in Tosec 461.<sup>3</sup>

The imminence of a settlement between Mendes-France and the Communists, which in some form will probably be brought before a revived conference for its approval, emphasizes the importance of adhering to these instructions. Otherwise we may be involved in committee work leading to the making of decisions which we might be obliged publicly to disavow.

We should avoid being drawn into the French effort to give conference semblance of vitality by means of a series of committee operations.

FYI Our thinking at present is that our role at Geneva should soon be restricted to that of observer, and now that Lord Reading has departed, you should leave in a few days. Bonsal could continue as chief observer in accord with terms of Tedul 211.<sup>4</sup> Let us have your views.<sup>5</sup>

DUILLES

---

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by Sturm of FE/PSA.

<sup>2</sup> Dated June 23, p. 1229.

<sup>3</sup> Dated June 22, p. 1221.

<sup>4</sup> Dated June 17, p. 1171.

<sup>5</sup> The delegation's reply was contained in telegram Secto 528, June 25, p. 1249.

751G.00/6-2454 : Telegram

The Ambassador in France (Dillon) to the Department of State

TOP SECRET PRIORITY

PARIS, June 24, 1954—9 p. m.

5037. Repeated information Saigon 630, Geneva priority 444. Limit distribution. Re Deptel 4756.<sup>1</sup> As a result of conversations with Chauvel and Parodi this afternoon I feel that Department is unduly concerned regarding Chauvel's supposed evasiveness on underground military talks. After he had told me about Mendes talk with Chou, he said that he was going to Geneva to try and reactivate the military talks and he volunteered to keep Johnson fully informed.

In answer to direct question he said there had been no further secret military talks since the departure from Geneva of the Undersecretary. Regarding details of the military settlement I asked Chauvel what the French thinking was and he replied that it was now clear that the French could have a clean-cut division of the country. They would try their best to maintain an enclave some sort in the north. The difficulty in this lies in the fact that they do not wish under any circumstances to allow the Viet Minh a similar enclave in the south. Chauvel said he had been discussing this very matter with Ely today and their first preoccupation is that the territory which they will retain in the south must be absolutely clear of Viet Minh troops and influence. They will try their best in addition to obtain some sort of enclave in the Delta but they are not sure whether or not they will be successful. Comment: From talking with Chauvel I get clear impression that French will not break off negotiations over the question of an enclave in the north. In other words, if Viet Minh delegation continues to hold absolutely firm for a division of the country the French will eventually accept.

---

<sup>1</sup> Telegram 4756 to Paris, also sent to Geneva as telegram Tosec 464, June 23, p. 1225.

Chauvel said that he realized US wish that everything be done to avoid a situation that looked like partition. He said that this would be done by indicating clearly that settlement was merely an armistice and that Vietnam would continue to be considered as one country and would eventually be reunited under one government after free elections had taken place at some indeterminate time in the future.

I emphasized to Chauvel necessity of keeping in close touch with Johnson and he was in full agreement. I think his lack of clarity in his last talk with Johnson was simply due to the fact that he had no new information and was not himself certain at that time as to what the French position would be.

DILLON

---

751G.00/6-2454 : Telegram

The Ambassador in France (Dillon) to the Department of State

TOP SECRET      PRIORITY

PARIS, June 24, 1954—10 p. m.

5035. Repeated information Geneva 443. Limit distribution. Since Mendes was tied up in National Assembly today, he asked me to see Parodi and Chauvel regarding his talk with Chou. Chauvel did all the talking and described the meeting as follows:

He said that Mendes opened the meeting telling Chou that he had been glad to agree to Chou's idea of a meeting and that he was interested to hear anything Chou had to say. Chou then spoke very fully and most of the time at the meeting, which lasted a little over two hours, was taken up by Chou's statements and the necessary translations.

Chou in general followed the same line as he previously had taken with Eden and Bidault, with certain important exceptions, which Chauvel considered to represent a considerable advance over Chou's previous position.

Chou started by talking about Laos and Cambodia. He said that the immediate problem was to obtain the withdrawal of all foreign forces including Viet Minh from the entire territory of both countries. He said that then the governments of the two countries should arrange political settlements within their own countries based on the will of the majority of the people. Chou said that while there should be no persecution of minorities, he had no objection to the two countries retaining their monarchical form of government if they so desired. The one thing upon which he insisted was that there should be no US bases in either Laos and [or] Cambodia. He stated that he saw no objection to Laos and Cambodia remaining with the French Union, provided they so desired.

The talk then turned to Vietnam where Chauvel considered important advances in Chou's position were revealed. Chou said that he recognized that there were now two governments in the territory of Vietnam, the Viet Minh Government and the Vietnamese Government. According to Chauvel, this was the first time that Chou had recognized the valid existence of the Vietnamese Government.

Chou then said that the settlement in Vietnam should be reached in two stages. First, an armistice which should be reached as soon as possible, and second, peace, which would obviously take longer to achieve. Chauvel said that Chou clearly accepted, and for the first time, the French thesis that there should be two phases; first military and second political to the eventual settlement of Vietnam. Regarding military settlement, Chou said that there should be regroupment of troops in large zones in order to stop the fighting. Chou said that he was ready to discuss the division of zones if Mendes so desired. Mendes answered that he was not yet prepared for such a detailed discussion and said he preferred that it be handled by the delegations at Geneva. Therefore, there was no discussion in detail regarding the make-up of the eventual zones.

Regarding the final political settlement, Chou said this should be reached by direct negotiations between the two governments in Vietnam, i.e., the Vietnamese Government and the Viet Minh Government. Chou further said that France might be able to help in these negotiations. He added that he saw no reason why the eventually united state of Vietnam should not remain within the French Union.

Mendes at this point said that since the war had been going on for 8 years and passions were high, it would take a long time before elections could be held as the people must be given a full opportunity to cool off and calm down. Chou made no objection to this statement by Mendes and did not press for early elections.

Mendes then told Chou that negotiations with the Viet Minh for reasons not very clear to the French had been at a practical standstill for the past week or ten days and he suggested that a word from Chou to the leader of the Viet Minh delegation might be helpful in speeding things up which seemed to be Chou's desire as well as Mendes'. Chou agreed to intervene with the Viet Minh and ask them to speed up negotiations.

The conversation never touched on any subject other than Indochina. According to Chauvel, no other item of Far Eastern policy was touched upon, nor was Europe nor the UN or possible recognition of China by France ever mentioned.

Chauvel is returning to Geneva tonight and will see the head of the Viet Minh delegation tomorrow in an attempt to get the military talks under way again.

DILLON

JUNE 25, 1954

396.1 GE/6-2554 : Telegram

Johnson-Chauvel Meeting, Geneva, June 25, Morning: The United States Delegation to the Department of State

TOP SECRET PRIORITY

GENEVA, June 25, 1954—2 p. m.

Secto 522. Repeated information Paris 501, Saigon 211. Department—limit distribution. Paris and Saigon eyes only Ambassador and Chargé. I saw Chauvel this morning following his return from Paris. He said Dong, whom he was also going to see this morning, was very insistent on seeing Mendes-France. He also said that in talks at Bern, Chou had suggested meeting "soon" between Mendes-France and Dong. He was going to tell Dong that meeting between Dong and Mendes-France at this time would be unwise, as among other things it would make things more difficult with US and Vietnam. He was going to urge Dong that they get ahead in conversations either at his level or with Colonel Brebisson.

Following are other points I gathered from conversation :

(1) Dong has been very insistent that US, as well as Vietnamese, not be informed of secret Franco-Viet Minh conversations. (Dong's idea apparently is that full Franco-Viet Minh agreement will be sprung on US and Vietnam, who will take about a week to decide to acquiesce.) Chauvel has told Dong we are not being informed, but said he will of course in fact continue keep us informed. Therefore requested information this regard be closely held US Government.

(2) Chauvel is using US as lever in conversations with Dong by insisting that France must be able obtain US acquiescence to arrangements.

(3) French position will be: (a) attempt obtain some supervised neutralization of Bishoprics in north which will protect the anti-Communist population against the Viet Minh; (b) agree to give up Hanoi in exchange for complete Viet Minh evacuation of the south; (c) retain an enclave around Haiphong (French continue lay great stress on not permitting any Viet Minh enclave in south and necessity for exchanging something in north to achieve this).

In accordance with Tosec 478<sup>1</sup> (on which I will comment later today<sup>2</sup>) made clear to Chauvel we will not participate work of committees in absence of agreement on principles. He expressed great disappointment, saying there would be no point committee if we did not participate.

Chauvel promised set up orderly arrangement so we kept fully and currently informed secret talks through Brebisson or Cheysson and Colonel Dwan.

In response to my question as to whether French had done any work on draft agreement on control, he replied in negative and accepted my offer for Colonel Dwan make available to French experts our experience in Korea on this subject.

JOHNSON

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated June 24, p. 1238.

<sup>2</sup> See telegram Secto 528, June 25, p. 1249.

---

396.1 GE/6-2554 : Telegram

*Eighteenth Restricted Session on Indochina, Geneva, June 25, 3 p. m. :
The United States Delegation to the Department of State*<sup>1</sup>

CONFIDENTIAL

GENEVA, June 25, 1954—9 p. m.

Secto 529. Repeated information Paris 506, Saigon 217, London 327, Tokyo 161, Moscow 147, Phnom Penh, Vientiane unnumbered. Tokyo for CINCFE. Department pass Defense. Eighteenth Indochina Restricted Session on Friday, June 25, with Lamb (UK) presiding.

Cambodian delegate (Sam Sary) spoke first briefly and reiterated Cambodian position that control commission for Cambodia and Laos should be different from that for Vietnam even though its composition could be same. He stressed that his position was based on practical considerations since if there were but one commission for all of Indochina with its headquarters, for example, in Hanoi, contacts with its subcommittees would be difficult.

---

<sup>1</sup> A set of minutes of this session (IC Restricted/18) is in Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 279. The minutes indicate that the meeting convened at 3 p. m. and adjourned at 6:30 p. m. The minutes are also printed in Conférence de Genève, pp. 339-346.

Chauvel (France) spoke next on the subject of relations between the joint and neutral commissions. Rather than speaking on whether joint commission should be subordinate to neutral commission, he thought it would be possible to consider these two bodies as operating side by side but in different fields, and that conference should try to decide upon what kinds of activity each should perform. He referred to Dong's (Viet Minh) statement that effective implementation of armistice agreement depended upon the two sides, this being the case, certain provisions of armistice would apply to each side separately, and certain other provisions, i.e., regrouping of forces, would require joint action. In its tasks the two sides must be helped by some control system, he said.

The task of the control body, he continued, should be to supervise implementation of agreement, either on its own initiative or on request of two sides, to make recommendation when differences occur regarding implementation, and thus to play mediatory role. Control body, he explained, should be link between implementation of armistice provisions and guarantee of agreement itself.

Chauvel then asked rhetorical question, would it be possible define different tasks for each commission? The control commission, he suggested, should act in cases of disagreement between two sides or violation armistice provisions by one side. He made analogy herewith contract between two parties which often has arbitration clause, and when both parties sign they accept principles and consequences of arbitration.

Chauvel next referred to what some delegates referred to as compulsory character of decisions of neutral body. Some delegates, he said, contend implementation armistice agreement would depend goodwill both sides. Even if this were so, he said, there might be disagreements on interpretation. Here decision of neutral body would be necessary. French delegation does not believe it necessary for neutral body to have forces at its disposal. If one side refuses decisions of neutral body then this is case for guarantor powers.

Pursuing this point further, Chauvel said it would be useful to determine what kinds of situations would be decided by neutral body. He thought in ordinary cases neutral body could make recommendations by a majority vote but that in serious cases, such as those threatening peace and security, then neutral commission could refer matter to guarantor powers. Such report could be made unanimously or with majority and minority reports. If one side refused to implement commission's recommendation, "one would not appeal to the police", but report of such refusal would be sent to guarantor powers. These remarks, Chauvel stressed, were just illustrative in effort to find areas within which joint and neutral commissions would function.

In conclusion, Chauvel stated that, since both commissions would have different tasks they should function in different locations, details of which could be specially examined. He referred to Cambodian delegate's idea that there should be separate commission for Cambodia and said that in his view there should be central body in each of three countries, but that tasks would apply to whole area, and that there might be a coordinating body.

Kuznetsov (USSR) then asked for the floor and referred to the large number of proposals on questions of functions and composition control commission emphasizing that the conference has expressed many points of view. He charged some delegates with being unwilling to help find common point of view, with putting obstacles in the way of a solution, and with distorting Soviet proposals. He referred to Soviet proposals as thoughtful, detailed, and helpful and wanted to make certain remarks in light of attacks on them made by other delegates.

Principle behind Soviet proposal, he said, was to facilitate establishment contact between both belligerent sides regarding all questions including supervision implementation of armistice. Soviet delegate, he contended, thinks both sides should be "full masters of their internal affairs", and that other states should not interfere in these affairs but should help two sides and render assistance only when necessary. This why Soviet delegate proposed that mixed commission not be subordinate to international commission.

Some delegates, he continued, either misunderstood or distorted Soviet proposal and assumed Soviet delegate meant that two commissions should have same functions. On contrary, Soviet delegate believes commissions should work along parallel lines on basis cooperation, but should not perform same tasks. Conference should determine principles concerning what tasks would be performed by each commission. Soviet proposals, he insisted, conformed to principle laid down by conference to effect that two sides be permitted to work out conditions of cessation hostilities.

Kuznetsov then cited the successful operation military armistice commission in Korea as proof that mixed commission not subordinate to neutral commission was practical, and accused US delegate of attempting to make Korean example look bad. The NNSC does not issue orders to MAC but cooperation exists and hostilities have been stopped for a year, he said.

He then referred to proposal of French delegate at last meeting that ad hoc commission be set up composed of experts to examine various proposals and prepare recommendations for conference. Soviet delegate, he said, agrees with this in principle, and is ready to examine a program of work for this committee. However, he said, conference should think overall proposals and recommendations before it and divide them according to their importance and according to those on which conference agrees and on which conference disagrees. If conference submitted all questions to subcommittee, he thought, this could be considered as constituting an unnecessary delay. Procedure other than that suggested by French delegate should, therefore, be considered.

Kuznetsov then made suggestion that heads of delegations meet in more restricted sessions with a few experts and interpreters, taking Soviet proposal on control as basis for discussion. He did not want to insist on immediate reply, but thought this would be step forward to facilitate recommendations to Ministers "who should return to Geneva".

In concluding, Kuznetsov referred to today's statement by Chauvel, said it deserved attention, and asked Chauvel if he could have written texts. Chauvel nodded affirmatively.

After recess, Li Ke-nung spoke on armistice control system. He declared French proposal for comparing various proposals on this subject "was helpful". He supported, however, proposal by Kuznetsov for more restricted meeting to determine what work should be referred to committee of experts. Li also supported fully Kuznetsov's statements on control system.

Li then launched into discussion of various issues involved in control system taking as his text Molotov's proposals of June 14 and 16. He made following principal points:

1. Conference has in effect agreed with points 1 and 4 of Molotov's proposal of June 14, since all delegations agree that there should be two types of commissions—joint and international—that joint commission should be composed of equal representatives from two commands and that international commission should be composed of representatives of neutral powers. In latter connection, he referred to proposal that Colombo powers constitute international commission and agreed that these powers are neutral. He pointed out that three of five powers proposed for commission by Soviets were Colombo powers.

2. Concerning powers and functions of commissions, Li stated that Bidault statement of June 2 agreed in principle with point 5 of Molotov's proposal of June 14 concerning the functions of the neutral nations commission. Li noted Chauvel's statement of June 22 to effect that one commission need not be "subordinate" to other, that there should be division of functions, and that functions of two commissions should be spelled out. Li pointed out that Molotov's proposal of June 14 has many points of agreement in this respect with views expressed by Bidault.

3. Concerning voting on international commission, Li asserted Molotov's proposal of June 14 took into account views of some delegations that voting should be by majority vote. Li argued, however, that on issues vital to one side or other decision should not be one-sided but must be unanimous. He stated that points 7 and 8 of Molotov's proposal provided basis for agreement on voting.

4. Concerning international guarantees, Li stated all delegations agreed guarantees desirable and that conference powers should be guarantors. He claimed conference should be able to agree on Molotov's points 11 and 12. Proposal by chairman that next meeting be Tuesday June 29 accepted.

JOHNSON

396.1 GE/6-2554 : Telegram

*Eighteenth Restricted Session on Indochina, Geneva, June 25, 3 p. m. :
The United States Delegation to the Department of State*

SECRET

GENEVA, June 25, 1954—8 p. m.

Secto 526. Repeated information Paris 503, Saigon 214. At recess today's restricted session, Chauvel expressed extreme disappointment over Kuznetsov's turn-down of Chauvel's proposal for small meetings of experts from certain delegations to study various proposals on armistice measures and controls and Chauvel's other suggestion that ad hoc committees be formed from time to time to study specific armistice problems. Chauvel disagreed with Kuznetsov's proposal that the 9 delegation chiefs meet to discuss control measures with fewer experts present than at recent sessions: A sort of a restricted session.

Chauvel thought at next session he would present a detailed paper on functions and powers of the control measures in answer to the Russian proposal of June 14 which is the only detailed paper on the subject to date.

JOHNSON

751G.00/6-2554 : Telegram

The Secretary of State to the United States Delegation<sup>1</sup>

SECRET

PRIORITY

WASHINGTON, June 25, 1954—5:56 p. m.

Tosec 479. Reference Secto 510<sup>2</sup> and 513.<sup>3</sup> Preliminary oral reply should be made to Cambodian Foreign Minister along lines stated below. He may be informed that formal reply to his letter will be made promptly when Washington has had opportunity for full consideration.

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by Sturm of FE/PSA and Gullion of S/P. Repeated to Paris as telegram 4810, to Saigon as telegram 2721, and to Phnom Penh as telegram 81.

<sup>2</sup> Dated June 23, p. 1227.

<sup>3</sup> Dated June 23, p. 1231.

1. We hope Cambodians will continue to press for withdrawal of Vietminh forces from Cambodia.

2. Our view is Cambodians should insist during negotiations that Cambodia is member of French Union and accordingly French military personnel are not to be considered foreign. Suggest they continue reaffirm their right as sovereign government to employ anyone they wish.

3. We would be willing furnish military training mission if French did not do so.

4. We would be willing continue furnish arms and equipment on request Cambodian Government.

5. You should also inform Cambodians that we are impressed and heartened by their clear understanding of the Communist motives and their rejection of them. Such steadfastness is the quality which must characterize any effective collective resistance to the further spread of Communist aggression. With reference to their queries about the SEA pact you should say that we are convinced of its utility in the present situation and are doing our best to bring it into being by obtaining the necessary support in the free world. We cannot yet say what precise form it would take, what facilities it would require, or what its scope would be, but we would hope that Cambodia would be a part of it.

You should also refer to Cambodian statements mentioned in Secto 516<sup>4</sup> and indicate that we would expect that no restrictions would be accepted which made it difficult or impossible for us to aid Cambodia in future.

We shall comment later on Secto 516, which should not enter into your discussion with Cambodians at this time, except as above noted.

DULLES

---

<sup>4</sup> Dated June 24, p. 1234.

---

396.1 GE/6-2554 : Telegram

The Secretary of State to the United States Delegation<sup>1</sup>

TOP SECRET

WASHINGTON, June 25, 1954—6 : 20 p. m.

LIMIT DISTRIBUTION

Tosec 480. Tedul 221<sup>2</sup> and 222,<sup>3</sup> Dulte 199.<sup>4</sup> Basic instructions transmitted Tosec 138<sup>5</sup> were intended provide guidance for fully operative USDel. As such they were approved by President and Congressional

---

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by Sturm of FE/PSA.

<sup>2</sup> Dated June 18, p. 1189.

<sup>3</sup> For text of message, see footnote 2, p. 1198.

<sup>4</sup> Dated June 19, ibid.

<sup>5</sup> Dated May 12, p. 778.

Committees at a time when it appeared settlement Indochina conflict acceptable to US might conceivably be reached.

Since delegation has now been reduced in size and concept its role revised to include only advisory or observer functions (Tedul 211<sup>6</sup>) it appears to us desirable alter its terms of reference accordingly and so to advise Congressional Committees. Additionally, developments at Geneva and in Indochina since date basic instructions have made possibility acceptable settlement appear so remote that we prefer now to revert to ad hoc basis in order render positions we shall take fully responsive to realities as we see them not only at Geneva but also in US and Indochina.

In consequence basic instructions are now withdrawn. Matters of substance should be referred Department with request for instructions each instance.

DULLES

---

<sup>6</sup> Dated June 17, p. 1171.

---

396.1 GE/6-2554 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

TOP SECRET

GENEVA, June 25, 1954—8 p. m.

Secto 527. Repeated information Saigon 216, Paris 505, Phnom Penh, Vientiane unnumbered. Chauvel saw Dong this morning. According to Chauvel, Dong was very "agreeable" and anxious to reach agreement with the least possible delay. Chauvel spoke of the necessity of retaining Haiphong enclave and the question of protection for the inhabitants of the Bishoprics of Phat Diem and Bui Chu as well as leaving line as far north as possible. Dong replied that these should not present too much difficulty.

Chauvel told Dong he did not himself wish to deal with purely military questions. Those should be left to French and Viet Minh military representatives. Chauvel explained that he was not personally familiar with Indochina nor was he a military expert and accordingly thought that his conversations with Dong should be only on political and larger questions. Dong agreed.

Dong was insistent on an early interview with Mendes-France, but when Chauvel explained that it would be "extremely imprudent" for Mendes-France to see Dong, either secretly or openly, at this time, Dong said that he would defer to Chauvel's judgment. Chauvel told Dong that when their talks reached agreement and the ministers returned to Geneva, Dong could then see Mendes-France.

Dong said that the Laotians were not difficult to deal with but the Cambodians most decidedly were. Dong asked whether France had any objection to Viet Minh negotiations with the Cambodians alone in Geneva with no French representative present. Chauvel assured him there was no objection (however, there will be a Frenchman on Cambodian staff of talks in Cambodia). Dong told Chauvel that the French military representative in the Franco-Laotian-Viet Minh talks was "difficult".

Kuznetzov, whom Chauvel had not previously known, called on Chauvel this morning. Chauvel said Kuznetzov was very friendly and hoped Chauvel would dine with him soon. In their talk Kuznetzov seemed "flexible" on question controls, but Chauvel agreed there was no evidence flexibility in Kuznetzov's speech in today's restricted session which merely repeated rigidly the old Soviet position on the powers and functions of the control commissions.

Chauvel expects to see Kuznetzov and will suggest that Sir Leo Lamb, acting British delegate and co-chairman, also talk with him and endeavor to get the Soviets to abate their terms on controls. Chauvel stated that the French still insist on effective control of armistice terms.

JOHNSON

---

396.1 GE/6-2554 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

TOP SECRET      PRIORITY

GENEVA, June 25, 1954—9 p. m.

Secto 528. Limit distribution. Reference last paragraph Tosec 478.<sup>1</sup> My understanding is that original thought was conference would go into complete recess pending results military talks, or displacement Geneva by developments elsewhere, and under this condition observation and reporting group only would be left under Bonsal (Dulte 180<sup>2</sup> and Tedul 196<sup>3</sup>). In meanwhile, I would remain here as long as Lord Reading and Molotov stayed (Dulte 186<sup>4</sup> and Tedul 204<sup>5</sup>). Subsequently, in discussions here leading up to statement in June 19 communiqué that "conference would continue in session" together with chairman's (Eden) statement just before adoption communiqué that "first task of conference would be consider question international supervision or control" (Secto 480<sup>6</sup>) and our acquiescence thereto, it seems to me we have agreed to continuation conference at lower level pending results military talks.

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated June 24, p. 1238.

<sup>2</sup> Dated June 14, p. 1136.

<sup>3</sup> Dated June 14, p. 1146.

<sup>4</sup> Dated June 16, p. 1165.

<sup>5</sup> For text of message. see footnote 2 to telegram Dulte 186, p. 1166.

<sup>6</sup> Dated June 20, p. 1200.

With UK represented by Ambassador (Lamb) and USSR by Deputy Foreign Minister (Kuznetsov), reduction our representative below ambassador level together with Bonsal being restricted to role of observer will be interpreted by all as first step toward complete disassociation, and by French in particular as contrary to understanding as of June 19.

Therefore, seems to me that question is whether events since June 19 have been such as cause us reconsider our acquiescence in continuation conference and thus withdraw to role observer.

In this connection from my conversation with Chauvel this morning (Secto 522<sup>7</sup>), as well as previous conversations, I believe that he and Mendes-France estimate that we will in the end acquiesce in type of "regrouping areas" in Vietnam he has outlined to us. If our considered decision is that we will not do so, should they not be told this now and told that in absence of any change of policy on their part we are immediately disassociating ourselves?

This would be said by Dillon directly to Mendes-France and by me to Chauvel.

I am unable to assess what effect would be on French and believe Department may want to obtain Dillon's view on this. On one hand, it may stiffen France, which might attempt somewhat correct its policy when faced with break with US. On other hand, in view of pledges he has made, Mendes-France might feel there would be no use even trying obtain US acquiescence and, therefore, capitulate even further.

Insofar as Associated States are concerned, any disassociation would have to be carefully handled so as not leave them with any even temporary impression we are abandoning them to French policy with which they would have no choice but to acquiesce. Unless we are able immediately to assure them we are prepared enter into truly significant politico-military-economic relationships with them, I do not see how this could be done.

My own frank view is that while I appreciate but cannot assess other considerations, our continued participation on a critical and reserved basis would serve, at this precise stage, to act as restraining influence upon French and bolstering influence upon Associated States and thereby assist in salvaging as much as possible from a most unhappy situation. If we, with or without our allies, are prepared to take immediate and concrete action to prevent an unacceptable settlement, I see much merit in immediate disassociation. If we are not, then I think we should not at least for time being, withdraw our influence from the conference unless we estimate withdrawal or threat thereof will in itself produce favorable change in French policy.

Alternatively, I could withdraw leaving Bonsal as US representative who would continue participate in meetings. There is no middle position between observer role and participant. If observer role chosen, it must be made clear to all other participants as there constantly arise situations in which silence can only be interpreted as assent.<sup>8</sup>

---

<sup>7</sup> Dated June 25, p. 1241.

JOHNSON

---

<sup>8</sup> See footnote 4, p. 1271.

JUNE 26, 1954

396.1 GE/6-2654 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

CONFIDENTIAL

GENEVA, June 26, 1954—1 p. m.

Secto 530. Repeated information Paris 508, London 328, Hong Kong 30, Moscow 148. Course past few days several knowledgeable American correspondents talked with Savage (press officer) re increasingly independent role taken by Chou En-lai during conference. Correspondents, include such well-versed observers Communist affairs as Ed Stevens (Christian Science Monitor), Ed Korry (UP), and Joe Fromm (US News & World Report).

They cite evidence of Chinese Communist efforts strike independent role as follows: Chou made first conciliatory gestures toward Laos and Cambodia, not Molotov; Chou acted as host recent Geneva dinner attended by Laos, Cambodia and Viet Minh representatives; during later stages conference, Chinese Communists appear taken over active leadership Viet Minh cause although several Viet Minh leaders spent considerable time Moscow on way Geneva; no Soviet representation seen at June 23 Mendes-France-Chou Bern parley; finally current all-Asian discussion between Chou and Nehru.

Consensus these correspondents Chou been making obvious efforts forge own foreign policy in Far East and establish at Geneva strong international position for Communist China. They believe these efforts viewed with significant discomfiture by Soviets.

I do not entirely share these views but pass them on as of possible interest.

JOHNSON

396.1 GE/6-2654 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET PRIORITY

GENEVA, June 26, 1954—1 p. m.

Secto 531. Repeated information Paris 509, Saigon 218, Phnom Penh 12. Re Tosec 479, repeated Paris 4810, Saigon 2721, Phnom Penh

81.<sup>1</sup> Preliminary oral reply conveyed today by Ambassador Heath to Cambodian Foreign Minister in accordance with Tosec 479. He expressed general satisfaction and agreement. With reference to longer term, he indicated Cambodian attitude regarding French Union would depend largely on French attitude. "If they continue to treat us like children, we will not stay in the Union."

Heath endeavored to make point that Cambodia as injured party insisting on withdrawal Viet Minh troops, should not put itself in position of making concessions to Viet Minh such as agreements regarding future Cambodian defense dispositions.

Ambassador Heath recalled that Cambodian delegation has unilaterally indicated its nonaggressive intentions, its determination to take appropriate steps, including foreign military personnel and matériel, to build up Cambodian national army to point required for self-defense and has indicated that it would be willing to report to International Commission regarding such measures. The evaluation of those measures in view of conditions for durable armistice would be province of International Commission.

Foreign Minister advised us that Cambodian mission for bilateral military conversations will depart Saigon June 27 and will consist of Tiou Long, two regular Cambodian officers and Dap Chuon, Puth Chay and Chantarangsei, latter three being leaders of former resistance bands who have rallied to Royal Government. Foreign Minister stated that he did not envisage presence of any French officer at conversations even in observer status although he recognized there would have to be some sort of liaison so that withdrawal of Viet Minh troops from Cambodia could be coordinated with whatever dispositions are made for the regrouping of Viet Minh troops in Vietnam.

JOHNSON

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated June 25, p. 1246.

---

396.1 GE/6-2654 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

TOP SECRET

GENEVA, June 26, 1954—5 p. m.

Secto 534. Department pass Saigon if desired; repeated information Paris 511. Following is Ambassador Heath's account of his farewell call on Chauvel today:

"Chauvel asked me to say in Washington that from his own recent consultations with Mendes-France, he was certain that it was not the latter's intention to 'evacuate' Indochina but to make a viable settlement which France would support. While Dong had not definitely accepted the idea of the Haiphong enclave and some sort of protective arrangement over the bishoprics of Phat Diem and Bui Chu, he had expressed no hostility to the idea nor had he suggested any counter territorial concession for the Viet Minh in the south. With a foot-hold in the north and holding the south and part of the center, the Vietnamese would have the foundation on which to build a solid durable state with the possibility of regaining complete control of national territory from Viet Minh provided it developed the necessary political dynamism and capacity. The latter was the great question mark. Certainly the regime had so far failed to show energetic capacity and it was the general impression in Paris that Ngo Dinh Diem did not have the necessary qualities to unite his country. The latter's speech on arrival in Saigon had not impressed the French Government.

"It would be the task of France cooperatively aided by the United States to try to build a solid state structure in the new Vietnam. Chauvel went on to say that he had not been favorably impressed by the Ministry of Associated States and did not think its personnel had the necessary drive and imagination to undertake successfully such a task. In any case it would be a mistake to send an ex-colonial official to Vietnam. La Chambre, the new Minister of Associated States, seemed to be a very good and intelligent chap but entirely new to the problem.

"Chauvel thought it was of the utmost importance that Ely be seconded immediately by an outstanding diplomatic counselor. He had urged on Mendes-France and hoped I would urge on La Chambre, if I saw him, the advantage of sending Georges-Picot, now at UN, at once to Indochina. The latter knew Indochina and was excellent at dealing with Asiatic peoples. Chauvel's other candidate for the job, Baudet, former French Ambassador to Yugoslavia, was no longer available since Mendes-France had taken him to be his Director of Cabinet. When I told Chauvel that I expected to see Bao Dai before leaving for Washington, he shrugged his shoulders over the political shortcomings of His Majesty but made no suggestions as to what might be said to the latter. He said he would appreciate, however, if I would pass on anything important Bao Dai said to me through Dillon in Paris.

"Chauvel said it was altogether possible in eight or ten days that, in their secret talks, the French would arrive at tentative agreement with the Viet Minh. He hoped that this agreement would be one that the United States might accept. It would be, however, difficult to sell to the Vietnamese who might unrealistically and irresponsibly oppose it. He had hoped that I would stay on at Geneva to help explain to the Associated States delegations, if a reasonable solution were found, that they should accept it and go on from there to build up their national strength. I made no comment on this or his other statements beyond observing that from my acquaintance the situation, the military position of France in Indochina was not as weak as was thought in many quarters.

"Chauvel said he regretted that the new government was opposed to DeJean coming to Geneva as advisor which Bidault had opposed, except possibly towards the end of the conference."

JUNE 27, 1954

396.1 GE/6-2754: Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

CONFIDENTIAL

GENEVA, June 27, 1954—4 p. m.

Secto 536. Repeated information Saigon 221, Paris 513. From Heath. Ex-Premier, Tran Van Huu, has been in Geneva the last three days. He is planning to remain in Europe for at least a month and, I would guess, much longer if situation Vietnam seems insecure.

After talking with Huu, his position as a southern Vietnam separatist seemed quite clear. The possibility of partition of Vietnam and specifically possible entire loss of Tonkin appeared not unduly to afflict him.

He is as consistently anti-Bao Dai as ever and said it would be impossible to build up a viable state if latter continued as monarch. While recognizing his honesty he is dubious about Ngo Dinh Diem's chances of success. He insists that without delay a National Assembly must be formed according to suggestion he had made two years ago, which was that 45 percent of members be elected and 55 percent be designated by Chief of State. He insists that elections could be held now. He justifies having majority of members appointed by pointing out that under Confucianist tradition which still prevails in Vietnam, best elements would be unwilling to campaign for office. That, he asserts was shown in municipal and communal elections of last year. Prominent men in villages generally refused to run for office, and it was younger and less responsible elements who campaigned. He claimed that later when villages were attacked or infiltrated by Viet Minh newly-elected counselors usually gave in or ran away.

JOHNSON

JUNE 28, 1954

Editorial Note

On June 28, at the conclusion of their meetings in Washington, President Eisenhower and Prime Minister Churchill of the United Kingdom issued a statement touching on a number of subjects of mutual and world interest. The portion of this statement which related to Southeast Asia read:

"We discussed Southeast Asia and, in particular, examined the situation which would arise from the conclusion of an agreement on Indochina. We also considered the situation which would follow from failure to reach such an agreement.

"We will press forward with plans for collective defense to meet either eventuality.

"We are both convinced that if at Geneva the French Government is confronted with demands which prevent an acceptable agreement regarding Indochina, the international situation will be seriously aggravated."

For the full text of this statement and the documentation on the visit of Prime Minister Churchill to the United States, see volume VI. The text of the statement is also printed in American Foreign Policy, 1950-1955: Basic Documents, volume I, pages 1705-1706, from which the above extract is taken.

---

396.1 GE/6-2854 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET      PRIORITY

GENEVA, June 28, 1954—4 p. m.

Secto 538. Repeated information Paris 515, Saigon 222, London 329. Limit distribution. Paris for eyes only Ambassador; Saigon eyes only Chargé; London eyes only Ambassador. Chauvel this morning told me he had had further discussions with Kuznetsov when returning his call Saturday and also with Chinese Communists re control problem but nothing concrete had developed. Chauvel has impression Soviets are maintaining lead in matter of international control while Chinese Communists maintaining initiative re military conversations. Chauvel is asking Offroy (French Ambassador in Thailand and former diplomatic counselor in Saigon) to work on USSR June 14 proposal (Secto 442<sup>1</sup>) with view to preparing commentary which Chauvel may make at tomorrow's restricted meeting. (In this connection I again noted Colonel Dwan's knowledge of Korean armistice details and pitfalls could be made available to Offroy if desires.)

I took occasion to stress point made into Section [Tosec] 485<sup>2</sup> re our views on inclusion Communist satellite state on control commission. Lamb (UK representative who was present for part of my talk with Chauvel) seemed support this point of view. We were generally agreed re Colombo powers but I have impression Chauvel estimates at least one Communist power may in end have to be accepted by France. Fact French, as one of belligerents, willing to submit to control of purely Asian group whereas other side demanded inclusion one or more European satellites of USSR evidence French good faith and gives good talking point on this issue. I urged "impartial" be used in referring control commission rather than Communist terminology of "neutral".

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated June 14, p. 1143.

<sup>2</sup> Dated June 25; see footnote 2 to telegram Secto 511, p. 1229.

Chauvel is currently considering informally setting up without reference to conference a group of three (France, UK and USSR) at expert level to consider and compare current proposals on control as well as negotiate ad referendum on this subject. Chauvel said Lamb somewhat reticent on this proposal and Chauvel is asking Paris to instruct French Embassy in London to urge it on Foreign Office. Chauvel very concerned existing wide differences on control and is trying to push toward agreement on details at least to point of refining issues for quick decision by ministers when they reconvene to consider reports of military conversations.

Chauvel reports military talks with Viet Minh on Saturday were unsatisfactory. Viet Minh allegedly worried about change in French Government and wishes assurance Chauvel, Brebisson and others fully qualified to speak for new government. Chauvel says he has reported this to Paris and expects following Cabinet meeting this afternoon, "it will be taken care of" but result, according to Chauvel is loss of two days in military talks. Further complicating factor is absence authorized representatives of new Vietnamese Government.

Re recently opened military discussions between belligerents in field, Chauvel stated that until talks here have made further progress he unable to see what can be achieved in field other than establishment of contact and necessary facilities.

JOHNSON

---

751G.5 MSP/6-1254 : Telegram

The Secretary of State to the Embassy in France<sup>1</sup>

SECRET      PRIORITY

WASHINGTON, June 28, 1954—7 p. m.

4853. Re Deptel 4852 repeated Geneva Tosec 489 and Saigon 2746.<sup>2</sup> In concert with your U.K. colleague you should when further instructed by Department make parallel communication following reply to French aide-mémoire set forth reftel. This reply has been cleared by Eden and we expect Churchill's concurrence tomorrow morning.

( In drafting this reply below we had in mind that it should tend stiffen French position so that they would not accept terms which we would be unwilling respect. (FYI U.K. sending a similar message Jebb but is informing him that he may orally add that HMG would be willing if French Government desires to give diplomatic support to

---

<sup>1</sup> Repeated to London as telegram 7147, to Saigon as telegram 2748, and to Geneva as telegram Tosec 490.

French Government in order secure an agreement on lines set forth joint instruction below. This we are unwilling to do as we informed British. End FYI.)

Begin verbatim text. The U.S. Government/HMG have taken note of the French Government's communication. They appreciate being informed of this expression of the French Government's position in the current negotiations for an armistice agreement on Indo-China. The U.S. Government/HMG would be willing to respect an agreement which:

1. Preserves the integrity and independence of Laos and Cambodia and assures the withdrawal of Viet Minh forces therefrom;
2. Preserves at least the southern half of Vietnam, and if possible an enclave in the delta; in this connection we would be unwilling to see the line of division of responsibility drawn further south than a line running generally west from Donghoi;
3. Does not impose on Laos, Cambodia or retained Vietnam any restrictions materially impairing their capacity to maintain stable non-Communist regimes; and especially restrictions impairing their right to maintain adequate forces for internal security, to import arms and to employ foreign advisers;
4. Does not contain political provisions which would risk loss of the retained area to Communist control;
5. Does not exclude the possibility of the ultimate unification of Vietnam by peaceful means;
6. Provides for the peaceful and humane transfer, under international supervision, of those people desiring to be moved from one zone to another of Vietnam;
7. Provides effective machinery for international supervision of the agreement. End text.

DULLES

751G.00/6-2854 : Telegram

The Secretary of State to the Embassy in France<sup>1</sup>

TOP SECRET

WASHINGTON, June 28, 1954—7:10 p. m.

4852. Following is translation aide-mémoire delivered by Bonnet to Secretary and Eden June 26. Text coordinated US-UK reply contained next following message.<sup>2</sup>

"The coming weeks will be of decisive importance insofar as Indochina is concerned. Following his conversation with Mr. Chou En-lai, the head of the French Government has instructed M. Chauvel to approach M. Pham Van Dong with a view to carrying on with him directly negotiations to ascertain whether a basis can be found, in his opinion, for a territorial settlement in Vietnam or not.

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by McBride of EUR/WE. Repeated to London as telegram 7146, to Saigon as telegram 2746, and to Geneva as telegram Tosec 489.

<sup>2</sup> Supra.

"The objective of the French Government is to arrive at a regrouping which will assure the State of Vietnam a territory as solid as possible, and without the de facto division which will result being too cut up. That is the reason why the French Government will insist on maintaining Haiphong as long as possible and on obtaining the neutralization of the bishoprics of Bui Chu and Phat Diem.

"It is difficult to predict the result of this negotiation in which the French authorities must face two sorts of difficulties: on the one hand it will be most difficult to obtain concessions from the Viet Minh in the north; and on the other hand the negotiations risk causing, if the agreement is concluded, dangerous reactions by the Vietnamese Government whose citizens are serving at the present time under the orders of the French command, comprising a major proportion thereof.

"The French Prime Minister feels that the allied American and British Governments should be as well informed as possible of these possibilities. M. Mendes-France wishes especially to call the attention of these two Governments to the following aspects of the situation:

"(1) If the Viet Minh appears disposed to negotiate, it is for a series of reasons among which figure without doubt the fear of a spreading of the conflict, a spreading which nothing at the present time would lead us to expect, but which the general world situation does not permit us to exclude. Although the fear of such an extension of the conflict may have a determining influence on the decisions of our adversaries, the French Government realizes that precise declarations on this subject are not possible at this time. But it considers it would be very useful if the final communiqué of the Anglo-American talks in Washington could state in some fashion or other that, if it is not possible to reach a reasonable settlement at the Geneva Conference, a serious aggravation of international relations would result.<sup>3</sup>

"(2) The problem which is posed with regard to Vietnam is different. It is to be feared that any solution providing for an indefinite period a division of the country will cause a violent and unreasoning reaction on the part of the Vietnamese patriots. While this reaction may be in a large measure inevitable, every effort should nevertheless be made to canalize this reaction in a direction in conformity with the interests of Vietnam, France and their allies.

"To this end it appears highly desirable to the Prime Minister of France to obtain the assurance of the United States Government that nothing will be done by the latter which might even implicitly encourage such a reaction. Under present circumstances such action could lead to no result but to ruin any hope of seeing Vietnam consolidate herself in such a fashion as to create in the face of the Viet Minh an authentically national and independent force. It is for this reason that the French Government strongly hopes it can count on the United States at the proper moment to intervene with the Vietnamese to counsel upon them wisdom and self-control and to dissuade them from refusing an agreement which, if it is reached, is dictated not by the spirit of abandoning them, but on the contrary by the desire to save in Indochina all that can possibly be saved, and to give the Vietnamese state, under peaceful conditions, opportunities which have not always been possible heretofore because of the war."

<sup>3</sup> See the editorial note, p. 1254.

DULLES

JUNE 29, 1954

396.1 GE/6-2954 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET PRIORITY

GENEVA, June 29, 1954—noon.

Secto 540. Repeated information Paris 516, London 331, Saigon 223. Tosec 489<sup>1</sup> and 490.<sup>2</sup> USDel notes that numbered paragraph 3 in US-UK communication states that agreement must not impose on "retained Vietnam" restrictions on importation of arms.<sup>3</sup> It has been generally understood at conference that one of functions of International Control Commission would be prevention of importation of reinforcing troops and arms after cessation of hostilities and during period of international control. Only contemplated exception has been in case of Cambodia and Laos where modest importations for self-defense purposes have been envisaged. French delegation has made point at different times of need to supervise closely frontier between Vietnam and China in order to prevent strengthening Viet Minh forces. So far as "retained Vietnam" is concerned, it seems doubtful that French will be able to obtain any provisions for unrestricted arms importation which would not be equally applicable in case of Viet Minh area. Would appreciate clarification.

JOHNSON

---

<sup>1</sup> Telegram Tosec 489 to Geneva sent as telegram 4852 to Paris, June 28, supra.

<sup>2</sup> Telegram Tosec 490 to Geneva sent as telegram 4853 to Paris, June 28, p. 1256.

<sup>3</sup> The Department of State in telegram Tosec 500, June 30, referring to telegram Secto 540, informed the U.S. Delegation that "Numbered paragraph three of US-UK communication is intended refer to maintenance of defenses adequate to preserve internal security in Associated States. We have in mind difficulty you mention re Vietminh area." (396.1 GE/6-2954)

---

396.1 GE/6-2954 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET

GENEVA, June 29, 1954—2 p. m.

Secto 541. Repeated information Paris 517, London 332, Saigon 224, Moscow 149. Roux reports that at Kuznetsov dinner for Chauvel last night, Russians appeared anxious be "helpful" on control problems, but no concrete suggestions or discussion developed. He said Russians appear genuinely puzzled by attitude US and USDel here, stating they not know what US wanted. (Roux said this was good thing.)

French gained impression while Soviet insistent on inclusion Poland or Czechoslovakia and India under 3-nation composition, would be willing substitute for Indonesia non-Asian country more "neutral" on France's side.

JOHNSON

---

Editorial Note

On June 29 President Eisenhower and Prime Minister Churchill of the United Kingdom issued the following declaration on common principles of Anglo-American policy:

"As we terminate our conversations on subjects of mutual and world interest, we again declare that:

"(1) In intimate comradeship, we will continue our united efforts to secure world peace based upon the principles of the Atlantic Charter, which we reaffirm.

"(2) We, together and individually, continue to hold out the hand of friendship to any and all nations, which by solemn pledge and confirming deeds show themselves desirous of participating in a just and fair peace.

"(3) We uphold the principle of self-government and will earnestly strive by every peaceful means to secure the independence of all countries whose peoples desire and are capable of sustaining an independent existence. We welcome the processes of development, where still needed, that lead toward that goal. As regards formerly sovereign states now in bondage, we will not be a party to any arrangement or treaty which would confirm or prolong their unwilling subordination. In the case of nations now divided against their will, we shall continue to seek to achieve unity through free elections supervised by the United Nations to insure they are conducted fairly.

"(4) We believe that the cause of world peace would be advanced by general and drastic reduction under effective safeguards of world armaments of all classes and kinds. It will be our persevering resolve to promote conditions in which the prodigious nuclear forces now in human hands can be used to enrich and not to destroy mankind.

"(5) We will continue our support of the United Nations and of existing international organizations that have been established in the spirit of the Charter for common protection and security. We urge the establishment and maintenance of such associations of appropriate nations as will best, in their respective regions, preserve the peace and the independence of the peoples living there. When desired by the peoples of the affected countries we are ready to render appropriate and feasible assistance to such associations.

“(6) We shall, with our friends, develop and maintain the spiritual, economic and military strength necessary to pursue these purposes effectively. In pursuit of this purpose we will seek every means of promoting the fuller and freer interchange among us of goods and services which will benefit all participants.”

The text of this declaration is printed in American Foreign Policy, 1950-1955: Basic Documents, volume I, page 1707, from which the above text is taken. For documentation on Prime Minister Churchill's visit to the United States, see volume VI.

---

396.1 GE/6-2954 : Telegram

Nineteenth Restricted Session on Indochina, Geneva, June 29, 1954, 3 p. m.: The United States Delegation to the Department of State<sup>1</sup>

CONFIDENTIAL

GENEVA, June 29, 1954—midnight.

Secto 545. Repeated information Paris 520, London 334, Saigon 227, Tokyo 164, Moscow 151, Vientiane, Phnom Penh unnumbered. Tokyo for CINCFE. Department pass Defense. Nineteenth Indochina Restricted Session Tuesday, June 29, with Kuznetsov in Chair.

Qam [Pham] Van Dong (Viet Minh) opened with reference Soviet suggestion first meeting that after certain agreement on principles armistice control question could be referred to committee. Dong then, without contributing any new ideas, proceeding to comparison Soviet June 14 proposal and French (Chauvel) statement June 25 to show wide area agreement. He stated “object” of control was terms armistice agreement. Noted that military talks making progress but political questions barely started; although he did not pursue this question he seemed to indicate necessity embodying political terms in agreement.

Basing claims on French statements of June 2 and June 25 and Soviet June 14 proposal; Dong concluded no disagreement in principle on:

- (1) Regroupment,
- (2) Establishment demarcation lines,
- (3) Establishment demilitarized zones,
- (4) Liberation prisoners and civil internees, and
- (5) Prohibition on introduction arms and troops after armistice.

Dong noted detail of Soviet proposal and stated it was good basis for discussion, although certain precisions and additions necessary. For example, question of duration of control not yet considered. Certain aspects such as regroupment of forces and exchange of prisoners would require control only until accomplishment, but with other aspects, such as prohibition of introduction of arms, control would not terminate automatically. How long this control to be maintained, for example, until final peace treaty or new agreement, should be considered.

---

<sup>1</sup> A set of minutes of this session (IC Restricted/19) are in Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 279. The minutes indicate that the session convened at 3 p. m. and adjourned at 5:45 p. m. The minutes are also printed in Conférence de Genève, pp. 347-355.

Dong described guiding principles of control as efficiency and impartiality but there were other aspects. Communist delegates had stressed necessity for respecting sovereignty of three states. This question most important in connection control. Efficiency of control mechanism must not impair sovereignty of states or rights of people. Control bodies with compulsory authority might become foreign administrations detracting from this sovereignty.

Dong again referred indivisibility of peace in Indochina. This must apply to control of armistice since violation in one state could seriously affect other two.

On question organization of control, Dong claimed following areas agreement Soviet and French proposals:

1. All recognized necessity joint and international commissions operating parallel manner and in different fields. Although Chauvel statement June 25 and Soviet proposal close, agreement still remains on functions and relationship. Basically, responsibility of carrying out agreement up to both sides, this must be recognized. Sides will settle differences between themselves. Therefore, joint committees should be responsible for control and implementation. In case of differences would refer problem to international commission but this unlikely since both sides have equal interest in success of agreement.

Functions of international commission on other hand would comprise supervision and particularly of non-introduction [of new troops and equipment into Indochina, to] <sup>2</sup> note violations and communicate to both sides, and to make suggestions to amendments to agreement.

2. Between joint and international commissions, Dong stated, no question of subordination, rather coordination and different tasks. He noted Soviet proposal this effect and Chauvel statement June 25 that commissions would begin "juxtaposition".

3. On question of unanimous or majority decisions by international commission, he reiterated Communist insistence that decisions not be of unilateral (i.e., majority) character. He again quoted Chauvel statement June 25 to show that in serious cases international commission might submit majority and minority reports to guarantor states but they would not have force of unanimous reports.

4. With reference control for Cambodia [and Laos] he noted all agreed necessary. Reserved position on Cambodian proposal for separate commissions for each of three states. He thought Chauvel's suggestion three control bodies with additional coordinating body not too far from Communist position.

---

<sup>2</sup> These and following words in brackets supplied from the verbatim record of the Nineteenth Restricted Session.

Dong finally stated belief conference now has basic factors with which to reach agreement in principle on control, and questions could now be referred to committee as proposed by Soviet delegate.

US delegate then made statement Secto 542.<sup>3</sup>

Chauvel followed with preliminary comment on Dong's statement. He asked for copy for more thorough study and noted several problems or deficiencies in Dong's speech :

1. To avoid confusion, term "control" should probably not be used with reference to the joint commission but rather terms such as "execution" and "implementation". "Control" is more relevant to international aspects of problem.

2. Dong's analysis omitted reference to mediation or arbitration by international control body. Even though that body may have only few occasions to act, it must have power to make compulsory recommendations.

3. Dong said that control machinery must respect national sovereignty. This is very well in normal peace time but we are dealing with abnormal situation.

Concerning Johnson's statement on Korean experience, Chauvel agreed conference must benefit by this and other experience, but observed all experiences not absolutely comparable. Chauvel then made somewhat cryptic remark about guarantees of settlement, saying this is complicated problem on which some data may still be lacking. He suggested this problem might well be reserved for return of heads of delegations.

In closing, Chauvel remarked French delegation now engaged on work on entire control question and welcomes suggestions from other delegates.

After recess, Cambodian delegate, Sam Sary, spoke briefly. He endorsed French proposal for establishment of committee of experts and agreed with Soviet recommendation that conference provide experts with a list of questions. He saw no need, however, for more restricted conference sessions to formulate such questions, as Soviets had proposed.

Cambodian delegate then made following points concerning supervision of armistice :

1. Each Indochinese state should have separate international control commission. He agreed with French suggestion that coordination between three commissions could be achieved by special body, but hoped that such body would act solely in liaison capacity and have no authority over country commissions. Liaison body could, he suggested, work through secretariats of three country commissions.

---

<sup>3</sup> Infra.

2. In Cambodia, joint commission representing belligerent sides would be needed only for a short period of withdrawal of foreign troops.

3. International control commission should be set up under aegis of UN and composed of really neutral states. It is hard for Cambodia to believe Poland and Czechoslovakia [are neutral], since they have [recognized] DRV and not Cambodia.

Conference agreed next restricted session would be July 2.

JOHNSON

396.1 GE/6-2954 : Telegram

Nineteenth Restricted Session on Indochina, Geneva, June 29, 1954, 3 p. m.: The United States Delegation to the Department of State

CONFIDENTIAL

GENEVA, June 29, 1954—8 p. m.

Secto 542. Repeated information Paris 18, London 333, Moscow 150, Saigon 225, Tokyo 163, Vientiane, Phnom Penh unnumbered. Tokyo for CINCFE. Department pass Defense. Following is text my statement, 19th Indochina restricted session, Tuesday, June 29, 1954:

I listened with interest to Mr. Pham Van Dong's statement and I have carefully studied further the Soviet proposal of June 14. With some minor differences this proposal seems very similar to the control Korean organization under Korean armistice agreement.

Also at our last meeting the delegate of the Soviet Union again made reference to the military armistice commission and the neutral nations supervisory commission in Korea and spoke of them in flattering terms. He described the work of these commissions in a manner apparently designed to have us believe that the supervisory commission now operating in Korea could be used as an example for this conference in our efforts to work out an effective control system for a cease-fire in Indochina.

I wish that I could agree with the Soviet representative's statement that, and I use his words, "the Korean example is a good one". The fact is that the NNSC system of control in Korea does not work. This can be demonstrated very simply: There is no effective supervision in North Korea. This is not just the conclusion of the US but, as the US delegation has frequently pointed out, that of the representatives in Korea of Sweden and Switzerland, two countries whose complete impartiality and objectivity is accepted by the majority of the delegates at this table.

I mention this because I think it important that we learn the lessons which can be drawn from the Korean experience and to profit by them.

What lessons can we learn from the Korean experience?

First of all it is absolutely essential that all members of a supervisory commission be truly impartial.

Another lesson of our experience with control machinery in Korea is that the supervisory commission must be able to make its decisions by majority vote. The fact that the neutral nations supervisory commission in Korea consists of four members, two of whom are not impartial, obviously is responsible for the state of deadlock of the commission there; but even if an odd number of nations were to compose the commission, such as five or three, the probability of deadlock, especially on important issues, would be no less great if one member could veto the decisions of the rest. The solution is not to suggest that the supervisory commission operate according to majority vote on some issues and by unanimity on others, since the "other issues" are obviously the important ones and those on which deadlock would be most harmful to the maintenance of peace.

A third lesson of the experience with control in Korea is that the two belligerent sides, represented in the military armistice commission, have not been able to work out their differences between themselves. I will not dwell here on why this has been so. Irrespective of why the military armistice commission in Korea has been unable to correct the situation of inadequate supervision, we must recognize that some provision must be made to resolve differences between the two parties when they occur. In Korea the neutral nations supervisory commission has not performed and cannot perform this function. The lesson we have learned is that both sides must invest in an impartial body the authority to render decisions when agreement between the sides cannot be reached. As Ambassador Chauvel so effectively pointed out last Friday, both sides can demonstrate their good faith in a real sense by accepting the mediatory role of a truly impartial body.

As the US delegation has frequently stated, it believes that if the entirely reasonable proposal that the UN carry out this role is not accepted, the five countries of India, Pakistan, Indonesia, Burma and Ceylon should be acceptable to all parties genuinely interested in restoring and maintaining peace in Indochina.

JOHNSON

396.1 GE/6-2954 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET

GENEVA, June 29, 1954—8 p. m.

Secto 544. Repeated information Paris 519, Saigon 226. Paris and Saigon eyes only. Department limit distribution. Chauvel told me this afternoon that no progress whatever in military talks with Viet Minh and does not expect any progress for several days. He felt they were trying little war of nerves on French and advised Paris he felt it important that French "stand firm".

UK have received report from UN and Swiss Security officers Molotov is due return Geneva July 8.

At recess, Kuznetsov referred to press reports I was being withdrawn from Geneva, saying he thought it "important" I not leave. I jocularly told him not to necessarily believe everything he reads in the press, but noted I had been absent from Prague since March.

JOHNSON

JUNE 30, 1954

396.1 GE/6-3054 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

CONFIDENTIAL      PRIORITY      GENEVA, June 30, 1954—11 a. m.

Secto 547. Repeated information Moscow 152. Kuznetsov has invited me and several members USDel to lunch tomorrow and I have accepted.<sup>1</sup> I intend avoid substantive discussion insofar as possible, listening to whatever he has to say, and as necessary reiterating our substantive positions. However if Department desires I make any specific points, would appreciate instructions.<sup>2</sup>

JOHNSON

---

<sup>1</sup> For an account of the Johnson-Kuznetsov meeting, July 1, see telegram Secto 550, July 1, p. 1268.

<sup>2</sup> The Department of State in telegram Tosec 501, June 30, replied as follows: "Suggest that as appropriate you stress with Kuznetsov our position on international control commission: i.e., UN or Colombo powers." (396.1 GE/6-3054)

JULY 1, 1954

396.1 GE/7-154 : Telegram

Johnson-Chauvel Meeting, Geneva, July 1, Morning: The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET      PRIORITY      GENEVA, July 1, 1954—1 p. m.

Secto 549. Repeated information Paris 2, London 2, Saigon 1. Limit distribution. Paris eyes only Ambassador. London eyes only Ambassador. Saigon eyes only McClintock. Chauvel called me this morning to tell me that he is going to Bern for 24 hours. His talks with Dong remain at standstill. He wishes to avoid impression of eagerness or anxiety on French side. He will return in time for restricted session tomorrow. He will then request meeting with Dong either tomorrow night or Saturday morning for ostensible purpose of discussing international control. At that meeting he plans to tell Dong that military demarcation line somewhat north of Dong Hoi (he referred to US-UK aide-mémoire quoted Tosec 490)<sup>1</sup> would have international acceptance in sense that France's friends at conference would respect it, implication being that this line, as military demarcation line, would avoid risk of international intervention to which Viet Minh are sensitive although, in Chauvel's view, less so than their Soviet and Chinese Communist backers. He intends make clear there is no room for bargaining on that line.

---

<sup>1</sup> Telegram Tosec 490 to Geneva sent as telegram 4853 to Paris, June 28, p. 1256.

Chauvel does not expect Viet Minh to move very promptly. Although they may come to decision regarding military demarcation line early next week, probability is that they will await return of Ministers.

In reply to my question, Chauvel stated there had been no discussion as yet with Dong regarding evacuation of civilian population desiring to leave areas which will be under Viet Minh control following armistice. I stressed importance of this.

Chauvel stated that rapidity with which French High Command had withdrawn from southern part of delta had given impression of weakness which had not been helpful to him in his negotiations with Dong. He stated that no reply had yet been received from Dong re proposed neutralization of Catholic bishoprics or conditions under which French would remain in Haiphong although he stated Dong had made no objection on latter point. Chauvel hopes to make retention of Haiphong at least as "permanent" as military demarcation line.

Chauvel stated that as soon as agreement on demarcation line is reached, actual drafting of armistice agreement should be relatively simple. I cautioned him on basis of our Korean experience re difficulty and complexity of translating agreements in principle with Communists into workable documents.

I re-emphasized to Chauvel our position re composition of international supervisory commission with particular reference to rejection of Communist membership. He stated that Viet Minh had agreed to freedom of movement in their border areas for international control teams supervising non-importation of reinforcing troops and arms.

Chauvel stated he had impression there might be division of views within Viet Minh delegation with Dong following Communist line of consolidating gains already achieved and avoiding risk of international intervention and extension of conflict while other elements following purely nationalist line wish to exploit further existing military and political situation which they believe highly favorable to them even at risk of provoking international intervention.

Chauvel also told me that at his suggestion DeJean is proceeding to Cannes within a day or two to visit Bao Dai generally to inform him re present state of negotiations with Viet Minh and do whatever may be possible to have Bao Dai take a realistic view of the situation and use his influence accordingly. Chauvel states new Prime Minister, Ngo Dinh Diem, highly unfamiliar with facts of life in Vietnam and generally "unrealistic" in his approach to situation.

Chauvel expressed concern at weakness of British delegate indicating that Lamb only comes to Geneva for meetings and that next member of British delegation, Tahourdin, although able cannot perform “go-between” role with Soviets which Chauvel thinks important. Massigili has discussed the matter with Reading but had not received definite reply.

Chauvel said Offroy had been discussing control matters with Novikov but apparently no positive results yet reached.

French delegation being strengthened by LaTournelle who is arriving this afternoon.

JOHNSON

---

396.1 GE/7-154 : Telegram

Johnson-Kuznetsov Meeting, Geneva, July 1, Afternoon: The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET      PRIORITY

GENEVA, July 1, 1954—9 p. m.

Secto 550. Repeated information Paris 4, Saigon 2, Moscow 1. Paris eyes only Ambassador; Saigon eyes only McClintock; Moscow eyes only Ambassador. Department limit distribution. Following lunch today, Kuznetsov initiated discussion and set forth at length Soviet views regarding composition and authority international commission. (Novikov and Larischev were also present but took no part in substantive conversation. Bonsal, Getz and Yager accompanied me.) Conversation was completely friendly and frank in tone.

On composition, he expressed incomprehension at US opposition to such Communist powers as Poland and Czechoslovakia. He said commission must include powers acceptable to Viet Minh and made clear Soviets will continue insist on inclusion Communist element. He said Colombo powers did not meet this definition although Viet Minh willing to accept some of them. He particularly pushed Molotov's three-power proposal (India, Poland or Czechoslovakia and Indonesia “or some other Asiatic state”), as a reasonable compromise.

I replied as forcefully as possible stressing firmness our position on composition and making clear that I was not only expressing views US Government but strong personal convictions based upon my intimate experience with Korean armistice. I pointed out that disregarding controversial question of ideology, evident close coordination between Chinese and North Koreans on one hand Poles and Czechs on other, the latter in no case ever finding even most minor flaw in Chinese and North Korean performance while Swedes and Swiss had not hesitated call their shots against UNC when they felt it justified. I pointed out conclusions on unworkability Korean system not only that of US but of Swedes and Swiss. I also pointed out composition must not only be acceptable Viet Minh side and stressed reasonableness of Colombo powers, none of which could be characterized as partisans of France or expected act as such, none of which had recognized either Vietnam or Viet Minh and all of which were Asiatic states.

On subject role of international commission, Kuznetsov stated Chauvel had made considerable step forward in direction meeting Viet Minh requirements in that he had abandoned thesis joint commissions composed of belligerents should be "subordinate" to international commission. According to him, sticking point now is insistence that decisions of international commission should be mandatory so far as belligerents concerned.

Kuznetsov stated this unacceptable and proposed that international commission make "recommendations", either by unanimous or majority vote depending on cases, and that, if these unacceptable to either side, matter be referred to guarantors. I stressed impracticability as would introduce delay and controversy precisely in cases where urgent clear-cut decisions and action vital if cessation hostilities to be preserved and revival of war to be avoided. I added, for purpose of debate, that since Kuznetsov had said French had made considerable step forward in narrowing gap on this point, it was now up to other side to take similar step. I expressed hope that good faith with which parties approach armistice would reduce controversy and violations to minimum but stressed importance that, as evidence of such good faith, parties should beforehand agree to abide by decisions or, if Kuznetsov preferred the term, recommendations of international commission.

I also pointed out impracticability attempting separate those issues upon which majority and unanimous votes would be required. No matter how carefully prior definition carried out commission would probably be tied up in hopeless procedural wrangle on which category any given case fell just at time decisions most urgently needed. Also stressed that category of cases for which Soviets envisaged unanimous decisions was just the category in which it would be most important commission be able act quickly without being blocked by requirement for unanimous decision. Important point was not perfection of decision from standpoint both sides but ability quickly reach decision when most needed. In reply, Kuznetsov said this would mean that views of only part of commission would be imposed on one side and this unacceptable. He said neither side should be subject to "commands" of commission.

I avoided discussion of role of guarantor states.

Kuznetsov alleged we had rejected Molotov's June 14 proposal without adequate analysis and study on purely political grounds. I denied this and said that our interest was solely in direction of assisting in finding practical and effective system international supervision.

I feel conversation should be of some usefulness in additionally impressing Soviets with firmness our positions as well, I hope in some small degree, with their logical basis. However, I am under no illusions as to effectiveness our logic in shaking their Communist convictions (and instructions). As was to be expected, on his part Kuznetsov showed no slightest sign of ability or willingness to shift from any present Soviet positions.

JOHNSON

751G.00/6-3054 : Telegram

The Secretary of State to the Embassy in France<sup>1</sup>

TOP SECRET

WASHINGTON, July 1, 1954—5:35 p. m.

LIMIT DISTRIBUTION

8. Re Embtel 5117.<sup>2</sup>

1. Partition line taken from Five Power Conference report and Dong-Hoi used as point of reference to avoid confusion between two systems, French and English, of parallels. Actual line thought of forms triangular promontory with apex at about 20th parallel (French system).

2. Implication paragraph on timing elections due to use of expression "final settlement and troop withdrawal" is that Mendes-France thinking of withdrawing entire French Expeditionary Corps from all of Viet Nam within next six months. "Withdrawal", on other hand, could mean deployment into agreed regroupment areas. Does Mendes seek agreement allowing reassembly in retained Viet Nam those Expeditionary Troops withdrawn from Tonkin and indefinite maintenance in retained Viet Nam of French forces now stationed there or are French prepared agree withdraw from all Viet Nam all French forces within matter of months? This requires full and urgent clarification.

3. Dillon with Mendes and Johnson with Chauvel should urgently seek such clarification.

DULLES

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by Fisher of EUR/WE. Repeated to Saigon as telegram 15 and to Geneva as telegram Tosec 506.

<sup>2</sup> In telegram 5117 from Paris, June 30, Ambassador Dillon reported on a discussion between British Ambassador to France Sir Gladwyn Jebb and Premier Mendès-France on June 30. Ambassador Jebb indicated Mendès-France had confirmed that negotiations with the Viet Minh at Geneva were stalled. He said Mendès-France was perplexed by a reference in a British note to a "line running generally west from Dong Hoi" as possible partition line for while Dong Hoi is approximately at 17.5 degrees French had been holding out for 18th parallel in face Viet Minh wanting 13th." On the question of elections, Ambassador Jebb quoted Mendès-France "as stating that the Viet Minh wanted them to be held in six months but that the French were taking the position that they should be delayed for a year after final settlement and withdrawal of troops had been achieved. This, as presently envisaged, would mean a year and half to two years from now." (751G.00/6-3054)

396.1 GE/7-154 : Telegram

The Secretary of State to the United States Delegation<sup>1</sup>

TOP SECRET

WASHINGTON, July 1, 1954—5:50 p. m.

Tosec 507. Eyes only Johnson. Reference Tosecs 478,<sup>2</sup> 480<sup>3</sup> and 495.<sup>4</sup> In withdrawing basic instructions, and in instructing you not take part in work of any ad hoc commission, we did not mean to imply you should cease exert all possible influence on French to resist communist bloc efforts impose Indochina agreement from which we might feel obliged dissociate ourselves.

In particular, we desire you continue urge French delegation stand firm on question international control commission (UN or Colombo powers) and other conditions listed numbered paragraphs Tosec 490.<sup>5</sup>

DULLES

---

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by Sturm of FE/PSA.

<sup>2</sup> Dated June 24. p. 1238.

<sup>3</sup> Dated June 25. p. 1247.

<sup>4</sup> In telegram Tosec 495. June 30, the Department of State informed Johnson that "in light French aide-mémoire (Tosec 489), joint United States-United Kingdom reply thereto which now approved, and decision set up United States-United Kingdom study group (Deptel 1154 to Geneva [not printed]), approve your continuing as head USDel on present basis until further notice." (Conference files, lot 60 D 627. CF 253)

<sup>5</sup> Tosec 490 to Geneva sent as telegram 4853 to Paris, June 28. p. 1256.

JULY 2, 1954

396.1 GE/7-254 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

CONFIDENTIAL

GENEVA, July 2, 1954—1 p. m.

Secto 552. Repeated information Paris 05, Saigon 03. Tran Van Do has called on US Delegation to state he is personal representative of Ngo Dinh Diem and is taking charge Vietnamese Delegation here.<sup>1</sup> His status will be regularized when Diem forms his cabinet. Do is generally critical of previous Vietnamese political and military efforts and of French attitude toward those efforts. He is aware that before present Government can expect to enlist greater measure of outside support, it must prove that it has internal strength and support. He is also aware of extremely short time at Diem's disposal. Do informed

---

<sup>1</sup> The Embassy in Saigon reported in telegram 79, July 6, that "Tran Van Do has been named Foreign Minister new Vietnamese Government." Embassy reported that Do's "views on political scene in Vietnam have usually been interesting but always pessimistic. He has been fence sitter and regarded as intellectual and talker rather than doer." Embassy said he was "believed to have been friend for considerable time of brother of President Diem, Ngo Dinh Luyen, and to share his views." (751G.02/7-654)

US that Vietminh here has refused any contact with Vietnamese Delegation (Do is known only to members US Delegation here as plausible fence-sitter; any information available to Paris and Saigon re his present status would be appreciated).

JOHNSON

396.1 GE/7-254 : Telegram

*Twentieth Restricted Session on Indochina, Geneva, July 2, 3 p. m.:
The United States Delegation to the Department of State*<sup>1</sup>

CONFIDENTIAL

GENEVA, July 2, 1954—8 p. m.

Secto 554. Repeated information Paris 7, London 5, Saigon 5, Tokyo 2, Moscow 2, Vientiane, Phnom Penh unnumbered. Tokyo pass CINCFE. Department pass Defense. Twentieth Indochina restricted session, Friday, July 2 Lamb (UK) chairman.

Lamb observed that as result of last four meetings conference has clear idea of remaining tasks. Hoped today further progress would be made especially concerning relations between joint commission and international supervisory commission but need much goodwill in order reach satisfactory conclusion.

Chauvel (France) followed saying he too believed we are on path where agreement may be foreseen but he not yet ready offer more precise definitions or specific solutions. Most can be now said is we seeking distinguish problems of joint aspect of control and neutral aspect of control. This broaches delicate problem of way decisions to be taken in important cases.

Chauvel stated he has in back of mind possible way to solve voting problem but not ready set it forth. Said would not make positive contribution to debate today.

Kuznetsov (USSR) then made following comment on control.

1. Relationship between joint and international commissions.

Said on June 14, Soviets attempted define duties both commissions and relationship between them. Relation would not be that of subordination but each would carry on autonomously. Certain delegates have resisted this idea. French apparently do not insist upon subordination concept and other delegations also now appear not to do so. This testifies to certain rapprochement. We should then be able agree on draft on principle that two commissions work side by side without one being subordinate. There is also not serious difference of opinion concerning definition of functions and duties of these bodies and we should be able reach agreement.

<sup>1</sup> A set of minutes of this session (IC Restricted/20) is in Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 279. The minutes indicate that the session convened at 3 p. m. and adjourned at 5:40 p.m. The minutes are also printed in Conférence de Genève, pp. 356-361.

2. Procedure for implementation of recommendations of international supervisory commission.

Some have expressed opinion armed forces will be needed to implement recommendations. We against this since would mean in effect occupation Vietnam, violation of sovereignty, and could restart war. Now apparently none of delegations proposes international commission have armed forces. No need stress binding nature of recommendations. Asked delegations, especially French, re-examine this question.

3. Decisions of the international supervisory commission.

French have proposed that supervisory commissions in addition to making recommendations, should make reports which if not unanimous could be made in form of majority and minority reports. Soviets proposed decisions be made not by majority vote, but by agreement of all members. Seems French position remains same as before but desirable receive from French clarifications this point.

4. Composition of international supervisory commission.

Kuznetsov dwelled on June 29 US statement which he claimed attempted discredit NNSC and "reiterated outworn, long-since refuted arguments". Many documents distributed among delegates. If difficulties exist in NNSC that explained by fact US not only has not assisted commission but puts obstacles in way. Important thing is American command must stop obstructionist policy concerning NNSC. US considers as impartial only those countries which act as US desires.

In summary, Kuznetsov saw rapprochement concerning questions.

(1) Inter-relationship of two commissions; (2) lack of need of armed forces at disposal supervisory commission. On other hand, we are far apart on composition neutral supervisory commission and on method of resolving disagreements arising in commissions.

Chauvel then spoke again pointing out that Kuznetsov stated conference could today take "decision". We cannot take decisions as such. This is question of terminology. Cannot now say anything final on important question procedure of neutral control commission. We need to know what is to be controlled, need terms of reference and how body will act. Suppose neutral body would have to take decisions and would have to do something in case of disagreement. Could we not conceive this aspect from angle of law which is compulsory itself or if sides delegate to body powers of arbitration presume they will accept that arbitration. Goodwill is best guarantee for implementation of armistice agreement and must function with respect both bodies. Perfect machinery may become clogged. Question of what to do in case serious disagreement is not simple matter. At this point we do not seek specific formula so much as correct description on case. Not ready now make proposal but may be at next meeting.

During his intervention Chauvel, in obvious reference to Kuznetsov's attempt to indicate closeness of agreement between French and Soviet positions on relation of international and joint commissions, made statement to effect he could not necessarily be bound by impromptu remarks during course of debate.

After the recess, Lamb (UK) spoke briefly, and said that fact UK delegate had not intervened does not mean UK delegate subscribes to view that question of subordination in relation between mixed and international commissions is not a serious one. UK delegation reserves its position on this. What UK delegate wants, he said, is system that works best. UK delegate has not changed its view that international commission must have mandatory power in order to expedite decision. He concluded by saying UK delegation is studying various proposals and has not adopted any particular viewpoint.

Buu King [Kinh] (Vietnam) spoke next noting that after weeks on debate differences are still profound. His delegation, he said, considered principles of efficiency and impartiality fundamental to system of control. He then referred to comments of other delegates that control system should be compatible with principle of national independence, and pointed out that it is not same for country to accept limitation of its sovereignty for benefit of another state as it is to do so in interests of peace. He referred to cases in international law where sovereignty is limited in interests of peace, and cited 26 September 1953 Vishinsky speech in UNGA in which latter said international control should be applied to control of atomic energy.

Turning to subjects of composition and functions of neutral commission and its relation to joint commission, he asked if Soviet proposal would result in selection truly impartial countries. He subscribed to Eden's speech in Commons 21 June 1954 in which Eden said neutral commission composed of two Communist and two neutral would not work. He then asked whether neutral commission as proposed by Soviet delegation would be efficient and concluded that if unanimity rule were applied to important questions commission could be paralyzed by one state. As far as giving joint commission control responsibility, he said his delegation warned against this in light of sad memories of 1946. To assume mutual good faith is an illusion and a danger. After eight years of fighting difficult to imagine both sides will cease to distrust each other. Therefore, his delegation, he said, cannot accept parallel relation between commissions, and supports UK view on this point. In conclusion, he stated that only an international body can perform control function, and that a UN agency would be the best.

There being no further speakers, session adjourned at 1740, and will resume on 6 July.

JOHNSON

---

396.1 GE/7-154 : Telegram

The Secretary of State to the United States Delegation<sup>1</sup>

SECRET

WASHINGTON, July 2, 1954—4:09 p. m.

Tosec 511. Reference Sectos 517,<sup>2</sup> 544<sup>3</sup> and 549.<sup>4</sup> Have you any further specific information re thinking of various delegations about possible resumption of conference at ministerial level?<sup>5</sup>

DULLES

---

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by Sturm of FE/PSA. Repeated to Paris as telegram 29, to London as telegram 37, and to Saigon as telegram 26.

<sup>2</sup> Dated June 24, p. 1233.

<sup>3</sup> Dated June 29, p. 1265.

<sup>4</sup> Dated July 1, p. 1266.

<sup>5</sup> The U.S. Delegation's reply is contained in telegram Secto 556, July 3, p. 1280.

---

751G.00/7-254 : Telegram

The Secretary of State to the Embassy in France<sup>1</sup>

TOP SECRET

WASHINGTON, July 2, 1954—7:34 p. m.

39. ReDeptel 4852, June 28; Saigon 2746; Geneva 489.<sup>2</sup> It seems to me that new Vietnamese Prime Minister Ngo Dinh Diem, who has reputation of uncompromising nationalist, is quite in the dark about developments critically affecting country he is trying to lead. We fear that if results of French negotiations with Communists are revealed to him as a fait accompli, the very reaction French wish to avoid will result.

You should therefore indicate our concern to the French and ascertain their own intentions with respect to consulting him or minimizing his resentment and their views with respect to plans and prospects for maintaining order in South Vietnam.

DULLES

---

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by Gullion of S/P and by Sturm of FE. Repeated to Saigon as telegram 31 and to Geneva as telegram 9.

<sup>2</sup> Dated June 28, p. 1257.

751G.00/7-254 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

TOP SECRET      PRIORITY

GENEVA, July 2, 1954—9 p. m.

Secto 553. Repeated information Paris 6, Saigon 4. Department limit distribution. Paris eyes only Ambassador; Saigon eyes only Chargé. Reference Tosec 506, sent Paris 8, repeated Saigon 15.<sup>1</sup> Have discussed subject second paragraph reference telegram with Chauvel who stated current negotiations with Viet Minh are concerned with question regrouping forces of both belligerents in Vietnam and that from French point of view this involves movement troops both sides in accordance demarcation line and other arrangements. Question of withdrawal from Indochina of French Union troops not within scope of present military or "underground" conversations and not contemplated.

With respect newspaper accounts unmolested French military withdrawal (Tosec 503),<sup>2</sup> Chauvel states categorically there was no Franco-Viet Minh agreement or understanding on this subject. French movements reflect decisions taken last May 14 at National Defense Council in Paris for purpose insuring safety expeditionary corps by concentrating forces in positions where they will be able successfully resist enemy attack. He states withdrawal caught Viet Minh by surprise and probably for this reason movement accomplished largely without molestation.

Colonel Brebisson gave Bonsal same information that Chauvel gave me.

Chauvel stated UK delegate Lamb has now received instructions from Foreign Office to arrange for member his delegation work informally with members French and Soviet delegations in order to attempt make progress on matters of control. Lamb confirmed this.

In reply to my query Chauvel assured me French view basic control principles same as ours and that he would inform me of any substantive changes therein.

Chauvel reiterated his intention of discussing demarcation line with Dong this evening or tomorrow morning along lines set forth Secto 549.<sup>3</sup> Chauvel stated Viet Minh had been asking for line running northwest from Tuy Hoa (about 13th parallel) to Pleiku and thence west to Cambodian border.

JOHNSON

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated July 1, p. 1270.

<sup>2</sup> Not printed.

<sup>3</sup> Dated July 1, p. 1266.

JULY 3, 1954

396.1 GE/7-354 : Telegram

Bonsal-Do Meeting, Geneva, July 3, Morning: The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET

GENEVA, July 3, 1954—4 p. m.

Secto 555. Repeated information Paris 8, Saigon 6. Tran Van Do (Secto 552<sup>1</sup>) called on Bonsal this morning. He expressed view French negotiating with Viet Minh without adequately informing or consulting Vietnamese Government. He is endeavoring to see Chauvel but latter has been "too busy" to give him early appointment.

Do said withdrawal from south delta serious blow to new Vietnamese Government. Do claims that new French Minister of Associated States had assured Diem before latter's departure for Saigon that no important decisions would be taken by French without at least advance notification to Diem. Although making allowances for need for secrecy in operation of this nature, Do believes commitment was not kept.

Do inquired as to possibility of expression of US moral and material support for new Vietnamese Government. Bonsal replied since this government had not yet even been formed and since little is known regarding its intentions, capacities and possibilities, it would presumably be difficult for US Government to consider any specific action in regard to it at this time. Do was also told that discussions of this subject should take place in Saigon and Washington rather than Geneva. He was reminded that US had in past wholeheartedly in moral and material fashion supported French and Vietnamese efforts to defeat Communists in Vietnam. Do's reaction was cordial and understanding.

Do stated his belief that French have decided to give up Tonkin without further fight and to endeavor to hold Cochinchina where majority of their material interests are located. He expressed view they count on international guarantee to help achieve this end. He continues to view French actions and intentions as though colonial era still alive. Bonsal reiterated well known US attitude regarding complete independence of Associated States.

JOHNSON

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated July 2, p. 1271.

751G.00/7-354 : Telegram

Bonsal-Chauvel Meeting, Geneva, July 3, Afternoon: The United States Delegation to the Department of State

TOP SECRET

PRIORITY

GENEVA, July 3, 1954—8 p. m.

Secto 557. Repeated information Paris 10, Saigon 8. Limit distribution. Paris eyes only Ambassador. Saigon eyes only Chargé. In Johnson's absence, Chauvel this afternoon, informed Bonsal regarding his talk with Kuznetsov last night and with Dong this morning.

Chauvel raised with Kuznetsov pending questions on control. He found Kuznetsov adamant on necessity of inclusion Communist power and rejection thesis Communists can not be neutral. Kuznetsov added that Colombo powers are after all sworn to influence of London which in turn is influenced by Washington. Upshot of talk on this point was that matter of composition might be set aside for present and left for Ministers to settle when they return. Concerning acceptance by parties of decisions or recommendations of international commission, Chauvel stressed importance of establishing "rule of law" accepted beforehand by both sides. Chauvel had impression Kuznetsov not unmoved by his arguments this point, although he gave no indication of change in Soviet position.

On military questions, Chauvel made clear to Kuznetsov that these are held up because Viet Minh have made unacceptable proposal of demarcation line along thirteenth parallel (about Tuy Hoa). On other hand, Chauvel stated French have proposed line acceptable not only to French, but one which French have reason to believe would be acceptable to conference as a whole, and thus would avert risk of internationalization of conflict. Kuznetsov replied that difficulty arises from fact that three provinces south of Faifo have been held for many years by Viet Minh (area in question would appear to run from just south of Faifo and include provinces of Quang Ngai, Qui Nhon and perhaps all or part of Song Cau; Department will recall in this connection, recent violent Viet Minh attack against French forces withdrawing from Anke which is in this general area). Kuznetsov suggested French and Viet Minh might examine area between fourteenth and eighteenth parallel and exchange views as to specific areas of particular interest to each party. Chauvel stated this could not be considered and repeated position regarding line French have already offered.

Chauvel's talk with Dong took place this morning at residence of Chinese Communist delegation. There was an exchange of views about control and particularly regarding prior agreement to accept decisions or recommendations of international commission. Dong stated that he would consider this further. He is aware that French, British and Soviet delegations are working on specific proposals (Secto 553<sup>1</sup>).

Chauvel reports that he spoke most firmly to Dong regarding military discussions. He said French have accepted Viet Minh proposal that Viet Minh receive Tonkin area, including Capital, but that further Viet Minh proposal for demarcation line is unacceptable. Chauvel reiterated in strongest terms fact that French proposal for demarcation line just north of Dong Hoi would be acceptable to conference and would thus eliminate danger of extension of war. (Chauvel stated to Bonsal that of course French would have to hold Haiphong and adjacent zones for considerable period.)

Dong raised question of Viet Minh troops and sympathizers in area south of Faifo. Chauvel stated he assumed regular troops would be evacuated and others would return to their villages. He said that presumably there would be no objection to any persons desiring to do so removing to Viet Minh controlled territory. (Bonsal expressed interest and emphasized United States view this subject as set forth paragraphs of aide-mémoire contained Department telegram 4853.)<sup>2</sup>

Dong endeavored to raise question of eventual political settlement, but Chauvel stated that in present discussions must be limited to military matters and reaching of armistice. He stressed purpose of present conversation is to make arrangements for removal from Tonkin of 300,000 Franco-Vietnamese troops. He said that French have no aggressive military intentions, although obviously it is essential for French to reinforce their position both by regrouping their forces in delta and by measures agreed on in Paris in order to insure so far as possible, security of their troops. (He told Bonsal he did not believe either French or Viet Minh would take aggressive military action under present circumstances.)

Alluding to political matters, Chauvel took occasion to point out to Dong that elections have not yet been held in Communist China and that Dong would probably agree on need for considerable period of pacification and reconstruction before elections would be held. Dong made no comment.

Chauvel read Bonsal passages from letter he had received from Mendes-France indicating that French negotiators should avoid appearance of overeagerness to reach settlement. Deadline date of July 20 which Mendes-France has set himself<sup>3</sup> is not so pressing as to induce French to accept Viet Minh proposal of thirteenth parallel.

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated July 2, p. 1276.

<sup>2</sup> Dated June 28, p. 1256.

<sup>3</sup> French Premier Mendès-France made the announcement in the National Assembly on June 17; see the editorial note, p. 1128.

In view Department telegram 9,<sup>4</sup> Bonsal drew Chauvel's attention to presence here of new Vietnamese representative Tran Van Do and to latter's interest in seeing Chauvel. (Chauvel apparently not fully informed by his subordinates on this score.)

JOHNSON

---

<sup>4</sup> Department of State telegram 9 to Geneva, July 2, sent as telegram 39 to Paris, p. 1275.

---

396.1 GE/7-354 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET

GENEVA, July 3, 1954—8 p. m.

Secto 556. Repeated information Paris 9, London 6, Saigon 7. Tosec 511.<sup>1</sup> Thinking here appears to be generally that, if military representatives come up with substantive reports within 21-day period, Ministers will meet soon thereafter. Report that Molotov will return about July 8 fairly wide-spread. Chauvel today read Bonsal passage from letter he had received from Mendes-France to effect latter anticipated meeting in Geneva at ministerial level about July 12 or later with final showdown about July 19 (expiration of period Mendes-France has given himself to secure solution).

Chauvel himself believes that Ministers will have to take final decisions re demarcation line and re outstanding points of difference re control. He thus apparently envisages meeting of Ministers here before reaching of final decisions on agreement and notably before disposition of some of points contained in US-UK aide-mémoire.

Press has asked us whether Secretary or Under Secretary planning return.<sup>2</sup>

JOHNSON

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated July 2, p. 1275.

<sup>2</sup> On this question, see telegram 101 to London, July 7, p. 1294.

JULY 4, 1954

PSA files, lot 58 D 207, "Vietnam Correspondence"

Ambassador Donald R. Heath to the Special Adviser to the United States Delegation (Bonsal)

PERSONAL AND SECRET

PARIS, July 4, 1954.

DEAR PHIL: It was good to hear your voice this morning. I had intended phoning you as soon as I had reached the Embassy, but you beat me to it.

As I indicated over the phone, I have little or nothing definite to report as a result of my brief Washington consultation. I am nevertheless glad I took the trip.

I was in Washington only a little over forty-eight hours. The first man I saw was of course Henry Day, who was kindness itself, but who is not intimately concerned with the Indo-Chinese situation. The one person in your outfit who is concerned and is very intimately concerned is Paul Sturm, who sees the Secretary and Robertson and his small committee at least once a day. Sturm is tired and about as baffled as everyone else at the Department at this precise juncture. I also saw Charlie Stelle and Ed Gullion. The latter made the statement, and I think it is correct, that all the people below the Secretary and Under Secretary are unanimous that we should intervene or rather make up our mind to intervene now with or without the French. The place and manner of intervention varies. Bob Bowie got off a memorandum to the Secretary on June 25 (written by Stelle)<sup>1</sup> in which he remarked that in case of a settlement along the Dong Hoi line that we send in some troops in southern Viet Nam as well as train the Viet Nameese Army.

My first talk was with Walter Robertson who expressed his usual sentiments against the British attempts to promote a settlement in Indo-China at any price and referred to Eden's influence over B.<sup>2</sup> Walter was rather despairing about the possibility of doing anything in the situation. I may say that I urged that you be put in charge of the delegation. The next day Walter had an attack of ulcers and didn't return to the Department before I left.

I had a long talk with Doug MacArthur but inconclusive. As I recall it, his conclusion was that the administration was going to be blamed for whatever happened there whether we disassociated ourselves or joined in to get the best solution possible.

I also had a long talk with Bob Murphy and urged on him as indeed I did on everybody that we use all the influence and pressure we could on Mendes-France to insist the French bargain for at least a foothold in the Northern delta. Both he and the Secretary doubted that we could do anything to persuade Mendes-France to which my answer was that we could at least try. I also felt that the Communist Chinese wanted a ceasefire as badly as the French and would be disposed to force the Viet Minh to accept at least provisionally the Haiphong enclave. Bob said that the Secretary's conditional offer of American intervention on the lines of his Los Angeles speech must still remain open for a time because while the French have no intention of accepting it they would blame us if we withdrew it. When I saw the Secretary, he criticized the British for efforts to conclude peace at any price, referred to his offer of our intervention on terms which he said were thoroughly reasonable, expressed his disbelief that we were being kept really informed of the secret negotiations and expressed doubt that Mendes-France could be persuaded to adopt a strong line. I saw the President who said he had been thinking back whether there was anything that he might have done to have persuaded the French to internationalize the Indo-Chinese War. He said he had been endeavoring to persuade the French to do so since 1950. He wondered if he had talked to more people whether he might not have succeeded. He remarked that Bidault had been the one person who had seen the necessity of such action. Bidault had become converted to this idea at the Bermuda Conference.

---

<sup>1</sup> "United States Policy on Indochina," June 25, printed in volume XIII.

<sup>2</sup> Reference to "B" is presumably to Walter Bedell Smith.

I finally had a talk with Radford a short while before leaving Washington. Radford told me that one afternoon last spring the Government was almost decided to intervene with aviation to save Dien Bien Phu. Radford said he was convinced that throwing in our aviation would have saved Dien Bien Phu and our whole position in Southeast Asia would have been much stronger. His idea is that after intervening to save that fortress we could have withdrawn our aviation. He said unfortunately, however, the attitude of Washington toward our intervention was "conventional".

All in all at least on the high levels the attitude was one of pessimism and not knowing what to do. Much sympathy was expressed to me over my task on my return to Saigon. There was no expression of hope or belief that I might do something. To all and sundry I said we will just do the best we can down there and we hope we could find someone or some group with whom we could build something solid. I insisted to everybody the necessity of keeping a foothold in the North remarking the French would have to keep Haiphong at least for a time in order to evacuate their forces.

Over the phone I indicated to [sic] my last talk with Bao Dai was "unsatisfactory". That is the understatement of the week. He has no intention of going back there. I am sure that he is not a well man but that is no excuse for his cowardliness at this crucial moment in his country's history. Nevertheless, I don't think we should talk about his defection and eventual replacement now. We need to keep up at least a facade of Government until we find someone to take over.

Affectionate best to Margaret and yourself from us both,

DON

JULY 5, 1954

Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 308

Memorandum by the Adviser to the United States Delegation (Dwan) to the Head of the Delegation (Johnson)

TOP SECRET

[GENEVA,] July 5, 1954.

Subject: Report of Five Power Military Conference, June 1954.<sup>1</sup>

Following is a summary of the conclusions of the Five Power Military Conference for your information:

The Present Situation

1. The retention of the Tonkin Delta is of the greatest importance to the defense of Southeast Asia as a whole. At the present time, the military situation in the Delta is critical. The Viet Minh are in a position to launch a strong offensive at any time from mid-June and by September will be able to undertake a fully coordinated offensive. Between now and September they will undoubtedly exert heavy pressure and, if by then, no reinforcements have been received a severe Franco-Vietnamese reverse is probable. This may well lead to a serious defection of Vietnamese troops.

Forces Required to Stabilize the Situation in the Delta

2. The stabilization of the situation and establishment of a secure base in the Delta would require outside assistance on the order of three well trained and equipped divisions and about three hundred aircraft. Owing to the limited capacity of the airfields in Indochina these aircraft would have to be provided initially by a carrier task force, supported by appropriate naval units and from air forces based outside Indochina. Minesweepers may also be required.

3. The movement and concentration of these forces will take time and a decision to reinforce the Delta must be made immediately if adequate forces are to be ready to meet the large scale Viet Minh offensive expected in September 1954.

4. The Delta will remain vulnerable until the whole of Tonkin has been secured and the Viet Minh Regular Army in Indochina has been destroyed. There can be, therefore, no guarantee that further reinforcements will not be required later. The size will depend on a number of factors including the extent of the recovery of morale throughout Indochina, the growth in size and effectiveness of the Vietnamese forces; the extent to which French Union Forces, now necessarily dispersed on police duties throughout the country, can be concentrated; and the reaction of Communist China.

---

<sup>1</sup> For documentation on the five-power talks, see volume XII.

5. The arrival of reinforcements from the Free Nations, other than France, would be an important factor in the restoration of Vietnamese confidence. In the opinion of the French General Staff the psychological impact of those reinforcements would be enhanced if they were drawn from the Western Powers.

Situation Should the Delta be Lost

6. Should the Delta fall to the Viet Minh, consideration must be given to the holding of a line of recovery further south. Due to the nature of the terrain and the forces which might be available to hold it such a position is not readily to be found. The line Thakhek-Dong Hoi offers the best possibilities although it is subject to a number of limitations. It would require a force of the order of four divisions with supporting air forces to hold it, together with the forces necessary to secure complete control of southern Indochina. Provision too, would have to be made for ensuring the security of the flank resting on the Thai border. The maintenance of this force would require development of the existing logistic facilities.

7. Under present conditions the French Union Forces in Southern Indochina are fully occupied with internal security duties and could make no contribution to the holding of this position. Therefore, unless adequate forces were extricated from the Delta, the success of this operation would depend on the timely arrival of the necessary reinforcements from outside Indochina.

War With China

8. The danger of Chinese Communist intervention will increase with the approach of Allied forces, other than Vietnamese forces, to the Chinese border. From the start provision must be made to meet such intervention.

9. Should war with China be precipitated by Chinese Communist aggression in Southeast Asia, air attack should be launched immediately aimed at military targets. In the selection of these targets political considerations cannot be ignored. To achieve a maximum and lasting effect nuclear as well as conventional weapons should be used from the outset. A blockade against China should also be established.

10. It is unlikely that the land forces immediately available would be sufficient to hold the Chinese advance but a recovery line in Indochina and defensive positions in Thailand and in Burma should be considered as a means of inflicting the maximum delay on the enemy and winning the support of those peoples. The lack of natural defensive positions and the inadequacy of forces likely to be available would limit what could be achieved.

11. The final stop-line should be a defensive position on the Kra Isthmus, the essential communications being controlled by air and naval forces based on the Philippines, Malaya and Ceylon. Intermediate operations should not be allowed to prejudice the ability to hold this final position.

Global War

12. Any war with China involves some risk of war with Russia although no agreement was reached at this Conference as to whether the risk was probable or merely problematical. This is an important factor to be considered when deciding to commit forces to a war with China since such a committal must not be allowed to destroy the balance necessary for the implementation of allied global strategy.

13. In the event of Global War, the overall strategy of the Allies should be generally defensive in Southeast Asia utilizing the offensive capabilities of naval and air forces as practicable. Elsewhere in the Far East the possibilities for offensive action should be exploited.

Measures to improve Internal Security in Southeast Asia

14. The maintenance of internal security in Southeast Asia depends largely on our ability to enlist the determined support of the leaders and people of the free Southeast Asian countries in the fight against Communism. This is a political problem but if it can be solved there are certain military measures which can be taken to increase their stability and develop their strength.

15. From the military viewpoint, a vital factor in the maintenance of internal security is the existence of strong, reliable, well trained and well equipped forces including police. Therefore, the Allies should be prepared to aid in developing these forces and their ability to operate. Such action would contribute not only to internal security but also to the general defense of Southeast Asia. These measures should not be considered in isolation, but with political and economic factors, which, applied together, will contribute greatly to welfare and stability.

Military problems of a Cease-fire in Indochina

16. Both the local situation in Indochina and previous experience of truce or armistice between free and Communist nations was taken into account. The conditions which would be the soundest and which would prevent a cease-fire in Indochina developing quickly into a more serious situation were set down only from the military point of view.

17. Any cease-fire agreement should provide for the retention by the French Union Forces of the Hanoi-Haiphong area, the communications between those two places and at least the area south of the line Thakhek-Dong Hoi.

18. There must be a guarantee by nations other than those directly involved that they will intervene if the agreement is broken and neutral observers with freedom of movement must be provided to detect and establish violations where they occur.

General Conclusions

19. Throughout the studies the Principal Military Representatives have been much impressed by the fact that the military measures required to enable resistance to further Communist aggression or infiltration in Southeast Asia to be effective call for firm solidarity between the Five Powers represented at this Conference. The Principal Military Representatives would also call special attention to the critical nature of the present situation in Tonkin and the urgency of decisions on the immediate problems that it presents.

JULY 6, 1954

751G.00/7-654 : Telegram

Johnson-Chauvel Meeting, Geneva, July 6, Morning: The United States Delegation to the Department of State

TOP SECRET      PRIORITY

GENEVA, July 6, 1954—7 p. m.

Secto 560. Repeated information Paris 12, Saigon 10. Limit distribution. Paris eyes only Ambassador. Saigon eyes only Ambassador. This morning Chauvel expressed to me serious concern re reports he had had from Bonnet of two statements by Secretary and one by Under Secretary to effect US not being adequately informed. He asserted with much emphasis that he had and would continue keep me fully and frankly informed. My own belief is that Chauvel has not deliberately withheld information.

Chauvel had seen Dong this morning. On question of demarcation lines, Dong again referred to status of populations sympathizing with Viet Minh who would be left south of demarcation line proposed by French. He said this question would be easier for him if he could get some general political assurances regarding eventual status these people. Chauvel said Dong indicated that with such assurances he might be able to accept Dong Hoi line.

In reply to Dong Chauvel stated that such assurances would have to be very general. They might refer to such matters as eventual unity, territorial integrity, democratic conditions, etc.

Chauvel told Dong that any attempt to go further into detail on political matters would result in prolonged discussion and delay in achieving the armistice which all desire.

Chauvel suggested to Dong that it might be advantageous to have the agreement on the armistice purely one between the commands of each side and not between governments. This would obviate immediate problem of securing consent of Vietnamese Government. Agreement would, of course, have to include certain questions not purely military. The agreement could then be submitted to the conference. Perhaps conference might then make a general statement of political principles which would be included in a final declaration by conference. Dong agreed with this general approach. He referred to his own statement of May 12 in which he had advocated that agreements regarding cessation of hostilities should be bilateral.

Chauvel stated that in his talk with Dong he referred to fact military conversations not moving well. He wondered whether it might not be possible to supplement them with some conversations between civilians on certain subjects not purely military. Dong agreed and Chauvel designated Offroy while Dong indicated that Tran Cong Tuong (Vice Minister of Justice in Viet Minh Cabinet and member Viet Minh delegation here—he was also in Fountainebleau Conference in 1946) would be his representative.

Chauvel told me French delegation is working on draft of paper on control system which will be submitted to British and Russian delegations and of which he will give us a copy as soon as completed. Although his position remains that parties should agree accept decisions or recommendations of international commission, he is somewhat skeptical on how system will work in practice on major questions. He stated that decisions could be by majority or unanimous vote, but that in case of majority decisions on major questions implementation would obviously be difficult. He pointed out that eventual recourse to guaranteeing powers, i.e., conference powers will obviously not work in event serious disagreement. He stated that it will be necessary in this case "for us to work out something among ourselves".

Chauvel told us that he is leaving for Paris tomorrow to see Mendes-France in order to get his instructions. He indicated that Mendes-France has been in touch with London regarding future plans for conference. He has impression from Massigli that Reading or Caccia will be returning here shortly and that Eden is expected about 12th, (Lamb subsequently told me he has no information on Eden's plans and knows nothing about Reading or Caccia returning in advance of Eden).

Mendes-France himself may come here between 10th and 12th, probably not before Eden. The Chinese Communist representative apparently indicated to Chauvel that Chou En-lai's return is expected, but gave no details. Molotov is apparently still due about 8th, although Soviets have not directly said anything on this.

I again raised matter Haiphong enclave by asking Chauvel if any recent Viet Minh reaction on this. Chauvel said that Dong had given no definite indication regarding maintenance French enclave there. Chauvel said French would in any event obviously have to remain there for some time to come. In reply my further question, he said that French military do not attach great importance to retention of Haiphong from military point of view.

I also again raised with Chauvel question of anti-Communist civilian population in zones evacuated by French under any agreement. Chauvel said he expected Offroy to take this up with Dong's representative. Such matters as amnesty for alleged political offenses could also be discussed. Chauvel stated that problem of forcible repatriation of prisoners had not risen and that he did not expect that it would.

I asked Chauvel regarding liaison with Vietnamese. He replied he was handling this through members of his staff and was avoiding direct contact with Vietnamese in order not to have to answer their questions.

JOHNSON

---

396.1 GE/7-654 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET

GENEVA, July 6, 1954—1 p. m.

Secto 559. Repeated information Paris 11, Saigon 9. Dac Khe, Minister of Democratization in Buu Loc Cabinet and member Vietnamese delegation here has expressed following views to Bonsal :

(1) Continued duration Geneva Conference is sapping will to fight and morale of Franco-Vietnamese forces. Prolongation of conference will be increasingly damaging.

(2) Mendes-France and other French leaders are not keeping Vietnamese informed of their plans and of their negotiations with Viet Minh. If presented with unacceptable terms for ending of conflict, Vietnamese will walk out of conference. (Dac Khe did not define terms he would consider unacceptable; he is aware of probability French willing give up entire Tonkin delta.)

(3) Dac Khe is hopeful but not confident that Diem, for whom he has admiration and respect, will be able to rally Vietnamese people. However, he insists on essentiality of true independence, i.e., rapid conclusion of current negotiations and establishment without delay of truly autonomous Vietnamese Army. In common with many other Vietnamese, Dac Khe holds that while development Vietnamese National Army and related forces has been satisfactory from quantitative standpoint, fact French High Command has regarded Vietnamese

Armed Forces merely as source of manpower to be used piecemeal as required and has not permitted that army to operate as integrated fighting force (coordinated of course by Unified Command) has had disastrous effect on morale of Vietnamese forces.

(4) Dac Khe is critical of Bao Dai's behavior and admits Bao Dai is physically and morally depressed. Nevertheless he holds that it would be major error to press for Bao Dai's resignation at this time. Resignation would result in removal symbol of unity and tradition which is still valuable asset.

(5) Dac Khe expressed confidence inhabitants of recently evacuated provinces (he himself is native of Phuly though absent many years) and particularly Catholics would give Viet Minh much trouble. He believed guerrilla networks were in existence.

(6) Dac Khe anxious and perplexed regarding US attitude toward Vietnam. He hopes new government will justify continued US support. He believes US backing major asset and one which Communists truly respect and therefore one whose strength or weakness will have important bearing on terms of settlement if one is reached here or on possibility of continuing struggle if no settlement is reached.

JOHNSON

---

396.1 GE/7-654 : Telegram

*Twenty-first Restricted Session on Indochina, Geneva, July 6, 3 p. m. :
The United States Delegation to the Department of State*<sup>1</sup>

CONFIDENTIAL

GENEVA, July 6, 1954—7 p. m.

Secto 561. Repeated information Paris 13, London 7, Saigon 11, Tokyo 3, Moscow 3, Vientiane, Phnom Penh unnumbered. Department pass Defense; Tokyo pass CINCFE. Twenty-first Indochina restricted session, Tuesday, July 6, Kuznetsov presiding.

Li Ko-nung opened meeting with review of Communist position on armistice supervision. He read his support of the Soviet and DRV statements on this question and also noted that the French statements deserve attention. He stated that views of various delegates were drawing closer but that some gaps still needed to be bridged. In alleged effort to further negotiations, Li made following principal points:

1. Although some delegates have not expressed their views, agreement apparently reached on principle that Joint and Neutral Commissions will work side by side and that one will not be subordinate to other.

---

<sup>1</sup> A set of minutes of this session (IC Restricted/21) is in Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 279. The minutes indicate that the session convened at 3 p. m. and adjourned at 5 p. m. The minutes are also printed in Conférence de Genève, pp. 362-367. The comments by Sam Sary on the introduction of military supplies and personnel, Indochina Document IC/40, July 6, is in Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 279A.

2. On functions and powers of two commissions, Soviet proposal of June 14 and French statement of June 25 are similar and should provide basis for agreed position.

3. It is not necessary in terms of reference of Neutral Commission to stress compulsory nature of Commission's recommendations. If sides have good faith, they will pay serious attention to recommendations of Neutral Commission. Compulsory recommendations will not provide any additional protection for armistice, but merely lead to interference in internal affairs of states of Indochina.

4. On voting procedure of Neutral Commission, French statement of June 25 distinguished between method of handling important questions and that for other questions. Discussion on this problem should continue on basis of Soviet proposal for [of] June 14.

5. On composition of Neutral Commission, constructive Soviet proposals can provide basis for agreement. Proposal that UN supervise armistice deliberately obstructs progress of conference.

6. On armistice supervision in Laos and Cambodia, Li argued since problems of peace in these countries are component parts of total Indochina problems, unified Neutral Commission should be established for all Indochina. Differing conditions in the three states of Indochina could be taken into account in administering armistice.

7. Statement by US delegate on June 29 distorted Korean armistice experience and demonstrated unconstructive attitude.

8. More restricted session, as proposed by Soviet delegate, to consider various proposals on armistice supervision and to refer to experts points agreed in principle should be adopted.

Chauvel spoke next. He stated French delegate is continuing work on comprehensive draft of control problem. He therefore preferred not to go into various issues involved but to wait until work finished.

He then turned to new subject and observed that point 3 in Chinese Communist's proposal of June 16 had not yet been discussed. He asked Chinese Communist delegate what was meant by statement that "The question of the amount and the type of arms that may be introduced into Laos and Cambodia for requirements of self defense shall be the subject of separate negotiations."

Sam Sary (Cambodia) followed with reminder that Cambodian delegate had several times restated opposition to Van in introduction arms and military personnel following cease-fire. Made points that after armistice Cambodia will not reduce its right and freedom to strengthen army for legitimate defense of kingdom; that if fear existed that arms would transit Cambodia for Vietnam international control could be set upon Cambodia-Vietnam border; that it ridiculous to believe country of 5 million, even armed to teeth, could menace countries of several tens or hundreds of millions population. Repeated willingness Cambodia, under certain conditions, make commitment introduction arms and personnel would remain compatible with defense needs.

Sam Sary pointed out Chinese Communist proposal of June 16 recognized need for import of arms following armistice but failed mention requirements foreign experts and instructors. He noted other Asian countries, independent longer than Cambodia, still required assistance its personnel in military establishments. Since Cambodia needed both arms and personnel two questions should not be separated.

If separate negotiations this subject, as proposed by Chinese Communists did take place, following principles should govern: Cambodian sovereignty must be recognized and Cambodia must be able organize defense without interferences; insofar as security Cambodia not imperiled, Cambodia would give assurances defensive character its defense organization and would not menace neighbors.

Cambodia ready participate in such negotiations but must know how organized, when, between what parties, and whether results to be incorporated in general armistice agreement or in separate convention. Ended by inviting views other delegates, particularly Chinese Communists.

Laotian delegate, Kam Phan Panya, endorsed statement of Cambodian delegate and drew attention to certain points particularly applicable to Laos. He stated that Laos has vast area along difficult borders and young army. As a result Laos has requested and received French assistance. Under Laotian-French agreements, French Union troops would be stationed in Laos even in peacetimes for defensive purposes. Maintenance of these bases is for the time being essential to defense of Laos. Assistance of French officers and technicians necessary to raise Laotian army to proper level of defensive efficiency. Any lack in proportion between the size of the French training mission and task of such mission could easily be detected.

He pointed out that sparse population and geography were such that Laos could not be threat to neighbors. In closing, he stated technical military data on Laos, including relations with French, would be placed before military subcommittee.

Next restricted session scheduled for Friday, July 9.

JOHNSON

---

396.1 GE/7-654 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET

GENEVA, July 6, 1954—7 p. m.

Secto 563. Repeated information Paris 14, London 8, Saigon 12. I had long talk today with Lamb (UKDel) and have impression he is not being kept very well informed by London. My principal purpose in seeing him was to attempt assure UK would stiffen and support French in trilateral discussions with Soviets on control organization. I referred to paragraph 7 US-UK note to French (Tosec 490<sup>1</sup>) and told him I had feeling when such discussions undertaken French might be inclined be somewhat too "flexible" on some aspects mechanics control organization in face of complete inflexibility on Communist side. I thought this particularly dangerous in absence any agreement on composition. In absence any indication Communists prepared to agree satisfactory composition, particularly important there not at this time be any weakening our position on basic principles control.

Lamb indicated general agreement.

Bonsal will see Tahourdin (UKDel, who will work directly with French) and Offroy tomorrow on same subject.

JOHNSON

---

<sup>1</sup> Telegram Tosec 490 to Geneva sent as telegram 4853 to Paris, June 28, p. 1256.

---

Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 323

Memorandum by the Adviser to the United States Delegation (Dwan) to the Head of the Delegation (Johnson)

CONFIDENTIAL

[GENEVA,] July 6, 1954.

Subject: Talking Point on Joint Commission

In the many exchanges at the Conference on the subject of the joint and international commissions everyone talks about the joint commission as if it could have inherent authority in its own right. I think there is a point to be made about the character of the joint commission, regardless of whether it is parallel to the international commission or whether it accepts decisions of the latter, that might help clarify and support our position.

The joint commission will consist of representatives of the military commanders of both sides. The representatives can only reflect the wishes of the two autonomous commanders. Bringing the representatives together in a commission does not produce a body capable of performing a command function. Only the two commanders, separately, have authority over their respective armed forces. They do not invest in the joint commission, composed of their representatives, command authority over the forces of both sides, as to do so would be to give representatives command authority over the commanders themselves.

Thus the real function of the joint commission can be no more than a coordinating or liaison role. Only the commanders of both sides can actually carry out the terms of an armistice agreement. To assume that this job can be performed by the joint commission is not realistic. The joint commission can at best only coordinate the implementation of the agreement by the two commanders.

It seems to me to be important that this fact is made clear, because it refutes the idea that the joint commission can reach "decisions" and therefore "control" (as the Soviet proposal states) the implementation of the agreement. The joint commission cannot possibly have powers of control, since representatives do not give orders to their principals.

Therefore, it is not a question of choosing which of the two commissions should have control authority. The question is whether there is to be an international body with control authority, or whether there is to be none and no control at all. If this point can be convincingly established it might be easier to argue the necessity for an international control body.

A realistic description of the various elements in a cease-fire situation might be:

Commanders of both sides—	implement terms of agreement
Joint commission	—coordinates implementation
International commission	—supervises and controls implementation

It might be useful to make this point in conversations with the French and others, and include it in our critique of the Soviet 14 June proposal.

J. E. D.

JULY 7, 1954

396.1 GE/7-754 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

CONFIDENTIAL

PRIORITY

GENEVA, July 7, 1954—10 a. m.

Secto 564. Re Secto 561.<sup>1</sup> At next session July 9, I plan to make short statement on question of introduction of arms and military personnel into Laos and Cambodia after cessation of hostilities. Unless instructed to contrary, I will reiterate points made by Under Secretary at session of June 19, and support positions taken by Cambodian and Laotian delegates on July 8.<sup>2</sup>

JOHNSON

<sup>1</sup> Dated July 6, p. 1289.

<sup>2</sup> In telegram Tosec 520, July 7, the Department of State replied that it concurred with Ambassador Johnson's decision. (396.1 GE/7-754)

751G.00/7-754 : Telegram

The Secretary of State to the Embassy in the United Kingdom<sup>1</sup>

TOP SECRET      NIACT

WASHINGTON, July 7, 1954—10:14 a. m.

101. Eyes only Aldrich and Dillon from Secretary. Please deliver following personal message to Eden :

“Dear Anthony: We have an inquiry from Mendes-France as to whether or not Bedell or I will return to Geneva and if so when. He apparently contemplates a reunion at the ministerial level July 12. I understand he is making a similar inquiry of you.

It is my present feeling that it would be better if neither Bedell nor I went back. As you know, it would not be feasible for us to be parties to a settlement which fell below the seven point paper which we drew up together in Washington and gave the French through our Ambassadors. Our position in that respect is perhaps a little different from your own. In any event, I fear that the French, whether or not Bedell or I are there, will take a solution considerably worse than this and in that event our high-level presence at Geneva might prove an embarrassment to all concerned. In view, however, of our joint efforts for this area, I wanted to let you know of our present thinking and I would welcome quickly knowing how you yourself visualize this matter working out. Sincerely yours, Foster.”

DULLES

---

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by the Secretary of State. Repeated to Paris as telegram 68.

396.1 GE/7-754 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET      PRIORITY

GENEVA, July 7, 1954—6 p. m.

Secto 568. Repeated information Paris 16, London 10, Saigon 13. Secto 563 repeated Paris 14, London 8, Saigon 12.<sup>1</sup> Following summarizes results Bonsal conversations today with Tahourdin (UKDel) and Offroy (French Del) principally regarding subject of international control. Bonsal stressed US views on composition, authority, voting, and scope and mobility of commission.

Tahourdin stated that proposed tripartite conversations (France, UK, USSR as envisaged in Secto 549<sup>2</sup> and Secto 560<sup>3</sup>) have not as yet been initiated. French have made no specific approach to UKDel as yet. UKDel here has no authority to make any change in previously assumed positions regarding control organization.

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated July 6, p. 1291.

<sup>2</sup> Dated July 1, p. 1266.

<sup>3</sup> Dated July 6, p. 1286.

Lamb dined with Kuznetsov last night. Later discussed question of voting procedure of commission from "practical" point of view indicating that in fact parties would not implement decision handed down by other than unanimous vote on matters of real importance and that hence question of whether voting be unanimous or by majority largely academic. Lamb had impression Kuznetsov earnestly seeking agreement this point. Conversation resulted in no progress. Tahourdin volunteered personal view that solution of question of Chinese position international commission might be reached if our side would accept one Communist insisting at same time on inclusion, in addition to selected Colombo powers, "one proper neutral" presumably from Western Europe. He said that we should of course maintain insistence on vote by majority on all matters and on prior acceptance by parties of authority of commission.

Offroy informed Bonsal that French Del paper regarding control mechanism has been completed and approved by Foreign Office legal adviser Gros. Chauvel intends to take it to Paris this afternoon for Mendes-France approval. Offroy stated that he would get us copy of paper as soon as possible and that plan was to submit it as basis for discussion to UK and USSR delegations. He emphasized paper does not reflect final position and he added it does not go into matter of composition which Offroy regards as question to be decided by Ministers. It provides for acceptance by parties of majority decisions of commission on less important questions while at same time providing that in case of important violations or threats to peace, commission must reach unanimous agreement or refer majority and minority opinions to guarantors, i.e., Geneva powers.

Offroy had talk recently with Novikov who expressed adamant position on inclusion at least one Communist power on control commission and on necessity for unanimous decision on really important cases.

Offroy's personal philosophy on this matter on international control is that control cannot hope, under circumstances, to be effective in itself. Nor does he envisage that whatever guarantee arrangement Geneva powers may be able to set up will produce practical action. It is his thought, however, that presence of international commission some of whose members will be in position to make trustworthy reports on developments plus probability that majority of guaranteeing powers will approve these reports will be of greatest importance in mobilizing free world public opinion for whatever action may be necessary to stop further Communist advances in Southeast Asia. He cites Korean precedent.

Offroy contemplates a settlement which would leave Laos, Cambodia and part of Vietnam on this side of the "bamboo curtain". At same time, interested powers (US, UK, France, Australia, New Zealand, Thailand, Philippines and possibly others) would set up SEA defense pact. This pact would become operative in event violation of Geneva arrangements for Indochina. Offroy does not contemplate that "combined Vietnam", Laos and Cambodia would participate directly in pact although they would be guarantors of Geneva arrangements.

Offroy's view of military situation in Tonkin delta colors his thinking on this whole subject. He believes that in absence of truce or of very substantial reinforcements in the order of three divisions, French will be obliged, in addition to current withdrawal from south delta which was militarily essential, to evacuate Hanoi before end of September and retreat to Haiphong redoubt. He is convinced defeat at Dien Bien Phu radically altered balance of military strength in North Vietnam and that Franco-Vietnamese attempt to hold more than Haiphong redoubt this fall against assault of which enemy fully capable would result in major disaster because enemy would cut lifeline between Hanoi and Haiphong.

As Department is aware Offroy has spent two years in Saigon as Diplomatic Adviser to High Commissioner and was recently named Ambassador to Thailand. He was in Indochina in May and had many contacts with French military leaders. He states that his views reflect current French military thinking. He is unfamiliar with and skeptical of capacities new Vietnamese political leaders.

Offroy convinced Ministers must settle demarcation line in Vietnam, status of Laos and Cambodia, composition and powers of international control commission and other topics although possibly agreements will be reached through private bilateral or trilateral conversations rather than at conference table. Durability of any basic agreements reached will depend on degree to which US and other free world powers effectively guarantee such agreements through willingness to take action in event of violations.

JOHNSON

---

396.1 GE/7-754: Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET      PRIORITY

GENEVA, July 7, 1954—7 p. m.

Secto 569. Repeated information Paris 17. Reference last sentence paragraph 5 Secto 568,<sup>1</sup> Offroy's statement to Bonsal on voting procedure international commission contained French draft paper.

As Department aware, I have repeatedly set forth to Chauvel (as well as in restricted sessions) our views on this and other questions concerning control, and Bonsal repeated them to Offroy this afternoon.

---

<sup>1</sup> Supra.

French will give us opportunity see paper before presenting it to Soviets. In view paragraph 7 US-UK note to French (Tosec 490<sup>2</sup>) I would appreciate Department's instructions as to whether it desires I make further representations to Chauvel on this point, which is intimately tied up with policy US may adopt with regard to guaranteeing any agreement which may be reached.

JOHNSON

---

<sup>2</sup> Telegram Tosec 490 to Geneva sent as telegram 4853 to Paris, June 28, p. 1256.

---

751G.00/7-754

Memorandum of Conversation, by the Acting Director of the Office of Philippine and Southeast Asian Affairs (Day)

CONFIDENTIAL

[WASHINGTON,] July 7, 1954.

Subject: Comments of Lao Minister on Return from Geneva Conference

Participants: The Honorable Ourot R. Souvannavong, Minister of Laos

PSA—Messrs. Day and Hoey

The Minister of Laos, who has been on the Lao Delegation at Geneva, said he had left Geneva on July 1. He said he might be called to Vientiane for consultations soon. The Lao Defense Minister took his place on the delegation.

He said that before he left Geneva military talks had begun between Lao and Viet Minh representatives at Geneva. Each side had held to its position and in the absence of any agreement there have been two postponements of further meetings. The Lao representative insisted that the only question for discussion was withdrawal of the Viet Minh from Laos. The Viet Minh side insisted on the principle of regroupment with a zone for Pathet Lao forces. No specific demarcation lines were discussed.

There have been some informal talks between the Lao Delegation and the Viet Minh Delegation aside from the military talks. His delegation first met Dong and two other Viet Minh delegates at the dinner which Chou gave for the Cambodian, Lao and Viet Minh. The atmosphere at this dinner was friendly with Chou assuming an extremely cordial attitude. Chou inquired whether there were any proposals for the US to establish military bases in Laos. He was informed that there were none but that Laos had treaty arrangements with France under which French troops were stationed in Laos for training and defense. Chou seemed to accept this as entirely agreeable. In direct conversations between the Lao and Viet Minh delegates, the Viet Minh urged that two or three representatives of Pathet Lao be included in the government to prepare for elections. The Lao pointed out that there would be elections next year in the normal course of events at which time any person wishing to be a candidate could present himself. At one time Chou wanted to help arrange a meeting between the dissident Prince Souphanavong and his half-brother Prince Souvanna Phouma, the Prime Minister. Nothing came of this. The Lao Government has had no information for some time of any activity on the part of Souphanavong or any so-called Pathet Lao forces.

Regarding the recent incident involving military trainees near Vientiane Ourot said that Prince Petsarath, who has been in exile in Thailand, had been given permission to re-enter Laos to visit his family. However, he actually came to recruit forces for Souphanavong. He expected to move these from the Vientiane area to another part of Laos by way of Thailand. The plan failed.

Ourot said that he was with his Prime Minister when Menon called on him. He was impressed by Menon's lack of information regarding Laos.

Ourot said there was a Pathet Lao representative among the Communist delegates. One of the Lao Delegation recognized the individual. Ourot found three Viet Minh representatives who were former friends of his in student days. Ourot found them all well indoctrinated. One in particular made Ourot appreciate this by referring to Communism as an evincible force that would crush all obstacles. Ourot has the impression that the Communist delegates at Geneva all acted as victors. Their attitude of triumph was of course most noticeable after the battle of Dien Bien Phu.

---

396.1 GE/7-854 : Telegram

Bonsal-Do Meeting, Geneva, July 7, Evening: The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET

GENEVA, July 8, 1954—noon.

Secto 571. Repeated information Paris 20, Saigon 14. Bonsal and Dwan dined last night with Tran Van Do, new Vietnamese Foreign Minister, at latter's invitation. Also present were Ngo Dinh Luyen (brother of Prime Minister) who is here on brief visit Nguyen Huu Chau, a family connection of Ngo Dinh Diem's, newly-arrived member of Vietnamese delegation here; Le Quang Trieu, Vietnamese Military Attaché, Washington, and Dac Khe, member of former Vietnamese Government.

Vietnamese, with Ngo Dinh Luyen doing most of talking, made many bitter intemperate statements regarding French of which following fair sample:

1. French refused to allow Vietnamese to defend recently-evacuated areas of south delta and particularly bishoprics. "If French don't want to fight any more themselves, they might at least make it possible for us to fight." (There was no attempt to make any analysis of capacities of Vietnamese forces which would have opposed Viet Minh in this area.) Marshal de Lattre's action in dissolving Catholic militia three years ago was severely criticized.

2. French failed to notify Vietnamese beforehand of their intentions in delta or to explore with Vietnamese possible alternative courses of action.

3. French have consistently failed and still fail to understand that creation of effective Vietnamese fighting force depends upon autonomy of that force under own leadership and its use as integrated whole rather than as mere manpower reserve for French High Command. Necessity for Unified Command recognized.

4. French are not keeping Vietnamese informed of current negotiations. Ngo Dinh Luyen has not seen Mendes-France for many days and interviews with Guy La Chambre have proved unilluminating.

5. There is reason to believe French plan to revive "Republic of Cochinchina" and thus to retain for themselves richest part of Vietnam leaving remainder to Communists [. No?] evidence whatever was given on this score.

6. French still refuse official signature of treaties of independence and association and completion of negotiations on supplementary conventions (economic, cultural, military, et cetera).

In reply to all this, Bonsal could only suggest importance of establishing and maintaining closest contact between Vietnamese delegation here and other friendly delegations including particularly French delegation. He expressed skepticism regarding some of points made above. He pointed out that for eight years French and Vietnamese have been fighting Communists in Vietnam and that for past four years US material and moral support to both French and Vietnamese in this struggle has been substantial. He added expression of hope for future and belief that fact Vietnamese Government now being taken over by new men who had not previously been involved in struggle might produce important new political assets and revitalize forces fighting against Communist domination.

General effect of conversation was depressing. None of Vietnamese give impression of ability to exercise leadership or to conceive of or to carry out practical enterprises. Dac Khe suggestion regarding importance of maintaining covert relationships with friendly elements in Catholic bishoprics and even of arranging to parachute arms and supplies to them was closest Vietnamese came to focusing on realities of present situation.

Luyen reported Bao Dai's state of health precarious.

Chau told us that in South Vietnam relations between Vietnamese and Viet Minh troops, at points where French are absent, are relatively good. Viet Minh do not tend to attack posts manned only by Vietnamese.

Dac Khe stated recent AP story attributed to Vietnamese sources here regarding military demarcation line at sixteenth parallel with enclaves for Franco-Vietnamese to north and for Viet Minh to south of line had in reality come from Viet Minh.

JOHNSON

JULY 8, 1954

396.1 GE/7-854 : Telegram

Johnson-Offroy Meeting, Geneva, July 8, Morning: The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET

PRIORITY

GENEVA, July 8, 1954—6 p. m.

Secto 574. Repeated information Paris 23, Saigon 15. Offroy called on Bonsal and me this morning. He described his talk with Tuong Viet Minh delegate (see 6th paragraph Secto 560).<sup>1</sup> With reference Dong's position on Viet Minh sympathizers south of Dong Hoi line (paragraph 2, Secto 560) French position is that while cease-fire agreement to be signed by the two commands could include provisions for free movement of populations from one regrouping area to the other, as well as arrangements for repatriation of prisoners, etc., this agreement should not include any specific reference to a date for the withdrawal of "foreign troops" from Vietnam or to a date for elections. At most, French would agree that in final declaration of Geneva Conference some general statement be made re territorial integrity of Vietnam, provisions for eventual unity and desirability of democratic processes. Tuong has not yet replied to this statement of position. I urged on Offroy importance including in cease-fire agreement arrangements for movement anti-Communist civilian population from evacuated zones so that responsibility for implementation would be clearly fixed and subject to supervision of international commission.

Offroy furnished us with copy of working paper prepared by French Del with regard to system of controls. He said besides ourselves copies were only being given UK and USSR for their comments. Translation contained Secto 575.<sup>2</sup> Offroy reiterated views contained Secto 568<sup>3</sup> re this matter, stated was only "working paper" and French did not consider it binding on them.

<sup>1</sup> Dated July 6, p. 1286.

<sup>2</sup> Dated July 8, p. 1305.

<sup>3</sup> Dated July 7, p. 1294.

While fully understanding our views, he clearly contemplates that agreement with Communists on composition will only be reached if Soviet satellite included. He contemplates that the others would be one or more Asian "neutrals" such as India and a Western country such as Canada or Belgium. He also is convinced that Communists will insist on "veto" on major questions. I expressed concern that French paper does not provide for majority decision in all cases, stating that if contrary to our views French contemplate acquiescing in inclusion Soviet satellite, majority principle is of even greater importance. In reply he stated that with strong possibility that an Asian "neutral" such as India would have decisive vote under majority rule in any Commission, he felt it of equal importance that Western Power on the Commission friendly to our side also be able to exercise a veto on major matters.

We discussed with Offroy present state of Franco-Vietnamese relations and desirability, in our view, that French should take steps to establish close relations with new Vietnamese Del. Bonsal described in general terms his talk with Vietnamese yesterday. (Secto 571<sup>4</sup>). Offroy expressed some reluctance in view his inability answer questions re current French conversations with Viet Minh plus his rather pessimistic view of possibility of having current Vietnamese Government officials take realistic and helpful view of situation. He suggested perhaps USDel should undertake this task. It is his view that if Vietnamese could be assured that part of Vietnam which will remain under their control after armistice agreement will receive wholehearted support in political, economic and military fields from France and US and other free world powers, their attitude might be improved. We replied that we did not believe it practical at this stage for USDel to be source of information re situation in which French have leadership and are playing major role. Offroy stated he would consider matter further. We hope we made some impression on him.

I raised with Offroy what French contemplated course of events with regard conference would be on Saturday when report of military representatives is due to be made, but he had no views on subject. He said that when he returns, Chauvel might have some views and would communicate with me. He expects Mendes-France on Sunday.<sup>5</sup> He asked whether we have heard if anyone would be coming from the US.

JOHNSON

---

<sup>4</sup> Supra.

<sup>5</sup> July 11.

396.1 GE/7-854

The British Minister (Scott) to the Under Secretary of State (Smith)

SECRET

WASHINGTON, July 8, 1954.

DEAR GENERAL SMITH: This is the text of the telegram from the Foreign Office which I showed you yesterday:—

“The French Ambassador told me today that the French Prime Minister hoped that I would get to Geneva by July 12 at latest. He added that the French Prime Minister would like to see me personally before the Conference reopens.

Meanwhile the Soviet Ambassador has informed me that Molotov is already on his way, that he hopes to have two or three days' holiday after arrival in Geneva, but would be ready for the Conference to re-open after that.

When I discussed plans with Bedell Smith in Washington he said that he might pass through London on his way to Geneva. From the newspapers I have seen rumours that he may not after all be returning to Geneva. I sincerely hope that this is not so and I shall be glad if you will tell him that we shall greatly look forward to seeing him on his way to Geneva if he can manage that. You should also say that I have it in mind to stop in Paris on my way to Geneva on Monday, July 12 in response to the French Prime Minister's suggestion for a conversation between us two.

It will be helpful to me to know as soon as possible what Bedell Smith decides.”

Yours sincerely,

R. H. SCOTT

396.1 GE/7-854 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

CONFIDENTIAL

GENEVA, July 8, 1954—5 p. m.

Secto 573. Repeated information Paris 22, Bonn 6. 2 members US Delegation had lunch today with Dr. Martin Fischer, Senior West German Observer for Geneva Conference. Fischer had just returned from Bonn where he had reported to Chancellor, Foreign Minister, and other officials in Conference. He stated officials in Bonn are very interested in Conference, particularly as it may indirectly influence prospects for EDC. He referred to, but did not endorse, press speculation that French may trade EDC for favorable Indochina settlement. In this context, he reported that a few days ago, when he, Chancellor, and Foreign Minister appeared before Foreign Affairs Committee of Bundestag, member of Committee asked why victorious Viet Minh troops had not pressed their advantage and driven French out of Tonkin. Foreign Minister replied that he also would like answer to this question.

JOHNSON

---

Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 323

Memorandum of Conversation, by the Special Adviser to the United States Delegation (Bonsal)

SECRET

GENEVA, July 8, 1954.

Participants: Phoui Sananikone, Laotian Foreign Minister
Philip W. Bonsal

Subject: Problems of Laos at the Geneva Conference

Mr. Phoui came in at his request. He stated that recent reports from Vientiane as well as a conversation which he had had two or three days ago in Paris with the Crown Prince made him fear that perhaps the position of the Laotian Delegation in Geneva had been misunderstood. He was afraid that there had been reports to the effect that the Laotian Delegation here was disposed to compromise with the Communists and to accept claims for Laotian territory through the medium of regrouping zones.

Mr. Phoui then rehearsed the attitude of his delegation and pointed out that he had assumed from the first the position that peace in Laos would be restored after the foreign invaders withdrew and that the so-called resistance forces constituted a purely internal problem which could be solved through Laotian political mechanisms. He recalled that he had turned down a Vietminh proposal that the Laotian Government should be enlarged to include some of these resistance elements. He commented that even if the government were to make an agreement of this nature, the freely elected Laotian Assembly would probably refuse its approval.

I told Mr. Phoui that I had been aware of the strong position which he and his delegation had taken and that I thought it was in every way the correct one and one which should be maintained.

Mr. Phoui went on to tell me that the Crown Prince is very much worried about rumors to the effect that the French are abandoning the fight in Tonkin. The Crown Prince fears that a similar abandonment may take place in the case of Laos. Mr. Phoui asked me for my views on this possibility and also asked as to the possibility that Laos would find someone else, presumably the US, to protect her in the event the French abandoned her. I said that while the situation in Tonkin is militarily critical and difficult, I did not believe that one could argue by analogy with Tonkin in order to reach conclusions about Laos. I said that it seemed to me most improbable that the French would, so long as the Laotian Government desired to continue the relationship, go back on their treaty obligations to defend Laos. I added that I was without authority to give him any indication as to what our attitude would be in this most unlikely event. I pointed, however, to our general policy of support for Laos and for other free nations when threatened with aggression.

Mr. Phoui stated that there is currently a point of difference between the French and the Laotian military representatives here. In considering the matter of separation of opposing native forces in Laos, the French view is that it might be desirable to concentrate all these forces in one area. On the other hand Mr. Phoui believes that it would be well to leave them in the half dozen provinces where they are since, if they are concentrated, they might be able to exercise a dominating influence in a given province with the result that that province might be permanently lost to the central administration. On the other hand, according to Mr. Phoui, if these forces are left dispersed as they are at present they will be unable, after the departure of their Vietminh supporters, to exercise any important influence. Mr. Phoui asked me for my view. In reply, I said that I could not express an opinion on the subject other than to reiterate to him my confidence in his judgment on this and other matters.

---

751G.00/7-854 : Telegram

The Ambassador in the United Kingdom (Aldrich) to the Department of State

TOP SECRET      PRIORITY

LONDON, July 8, 1954—6 p. m.

124. Eyes only Secretary. Re Deptel 101.<sup>1</sup> I saw Eden this afternoon. He will answer your message soonest.<sup>2</sup> Meanwhile he asked me to say he is going to Geneva Monday,<sup>3</sup> and will meet Mendes-France. Mendes-France wished him to come Paris over week-end but he is unable to do this. Eden will support French at Geneva in attempt to get most favorable possible settlement. He has no information or idea how matter may work out because Russians have not disclosed their hand and he is sure they will not do so until meetings take place in Geneva.

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated July 7, p. 1294.

<sup>2</sup> On July 8, Ambassador Makins transmitted to Secretary Dulles a message from Foreign Secretary Eden in which Eden indicated that he hoped "very much that you or Bedell will be able to return to Geneva early next week." The Foreign Secretary said that "one cannot yet be sure how things will work out because the Communists will certainly not show their hand until the final stages of the negotiations have been reached." (611.93/7-854)

<sup>3</sup> July 12.

Weakness of French position is of course fact that election would undoubtedly result in all Viet Minh going Communist and therefore division of country in all probability best solution. It is impossible to foresee how this trump card may be played by Communists. Eden does not think it would be fair to you to expect you to attend Geneva Conference this juncture but thinks it would be very helpful to him and the French if Bedell could be there and hopes that if Bedell comes he will stop in London on way.

Comment: I am sure Eden is extremely anxious to have Bedell present because of Bedell's intimate knowledge of personalities involved at Geneva and of manner in which situation has developed.

ALDRICH

396.1 GE/7-854 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State<sup>1</sup>

SECRET      PRIORITY

GENEVA, July 8, 1954—7 p. m.

Secto 575. Repeated information Paris 25, Saigon 17. Department pass Defense. With reference Secto 574<sup>2</sup> following is translation of text of working paper on control in Vietnam prepared by French delegation under date July 7. Similar paper will be prepared for Laos and Cambodia.

“1. The sides assume responsibility for the implementation of the agreement on the cessation of hostilities.

2. The control of this implementation is to be assured by an international commission.

3. In order to facilitate, in accordance with the conditions set forth below, the implementation of those clauses which imply joint action by the two sides, there is set up a joint commission in Vietnam.

4. The joint commission is to be composed of an equal number of representatives of the commanders of the two sides.

5. The heads of the delegations on the joint commission will have the rank of general.

The joint commission will create joint groups the number of which will be agreed between the sides. The joint groups are to be composed of an equal number of officers of the two sides. The stationing of these groups on the demarcation lines between the regrouping zones is to be fixed by the sides, taking into account the authority of the joint commission.

6. The joint commission is to assure the implementation of the following provisions of the agreement on the cessation of hostilities:

(a) The cease-fire, which is to be simultaneous and general in Vietnam for the whole of the regular and irregular armed forces of the two sides.

<sup>1</sup> Telegram transmitted to the Department of State in two sections.

<sup>2</sup> Dated July 8, p. 1300.

- (b) The regrouping of the armed forces of the two sides.
- (c) Respect for the lines of demarcation between the regrouping zones and demilitarized sectors.

The commission is to help the sides in the implementation of the said clauses; it is to insure liaison between the sides for the preparation and for the placing in effect of plans for the application of these clauses; it is to endeavor to resolve the difficulties which may arise between the sides in the implementation of these clauses.

7. There is created an international commission charged with the control of the application of the provisions of the agreement on the cessation of hostilities in Vietnam. It is to be composed of representatives of the following states: (Blank) it is to be presided over by the representative of (blank) it will have its headquarters at (blank).

8. The international commission is to create fixed and mobile inspection teams consisting of a number of officers designated by each of the states mentioned above.

The fixed teams are to be stationed at the following points: . . . These points may be later modified at the request of the joint commission or at the request of one of the sides or at the request of the international commission itself by means of an agreement between the international commission and the command of the side concerned.

The action zones of the mobile teams will be the areas neighboring on the land and sea frontiers of Vietnam, the lines of demarcation between the regrouping zones, and the demilitarized zones. Within the limits of these zones, the teams will have the right of free movement and will receive from the local civil and military authorities all the facilities they may need to accomplish their missions (such as the furnishing of personnel, the making available of the necessary documents for control purposes, the summoning of witnesses necessary for investigations, the protection of the security and of the freedom of movement of the inspection teams, etc.). They will have at their disposal modern means of transport, observation and communication which may be useful to them outside of the action zones defined above.

Mobile teams will be able, in agreement with the command of the side concerned, to engage in other movements within the framework of the missions entrusted to them by this agreement.

9. The international commission is charged with supervising the implementation by the sides of the provisions of the agreement. For this purpose, it is to carry out missions of control, observation, inspection and investigation related to the application of the provisions of the agreement on the cessation of hostilities and it must especially:

- (a) Control the movement of the armed forces of the two sides carried out within the framework of the regrouping plan.

- (b) Watch over the demarcation lines between the regrouping zones as well as the demilitarized zones.

- (c) Control the operations involved in the freeing of prisoners of war and civilian internees.

- (d) In the ports and airports as well as on all the frontiers of Vietnam, watch over the application of the clauses of the agreement on the cessation of hostilities having to do with the introduction into the country of armed forces of military personnel, and of all types of armament, munitions and war matériel.

10. The International Commission is to proceed through the inspection teams which have been mentioned above, and as rapidly as possible, either on its own initiative or at the request of the Joint Commission or at the request of one of the sides, to carry out investigations which may be necessary, on the basis of documents and on the ground.

11. The inspection teams are to transmit to the International Commission the results of their control, of their investigations, and of their observations; in addition, they are to make whatever special reports they may deem necessary or which the Commission may ask them for. In case of disagreement within the team, the conclusions of each of the members are to be transmitted to the Commission.

12. If an inspection team has not been able to settle an incident or if it believes that there has been a serious violation or a threat of such a violation, the International Commission is to be informed; it is to study the reports and the conclusions of the inspection teams and to inform the sides regarding the measures which must be taken in order to settle the incident or to make the violation cease or to do away with the threat of violation.

13. When the Joint Commission does not succeed in reaching an agreement regarding the interpretation of a provision or the evaluation of a fact, the International Commission arbitrates the disagreement. Its conclusions are to be sent directly to the sides and are to be communicated to the Joint Commission.

14. The recommendations and the arbitral decisions of the International Commission are to be adopted or rendered by a majority vote, subject to the provisions of Article 15 below. In case of a tie vote, the vote of the chairman is decisive. The International Commission may formulate recommendations regarding amendments and additions which it would be desirable to make to the provisions of the agreement on the cessation of hostilities in Vietnam in order to insure a more efficacious application of the said agreement. These recommendations are to be adopted by unanimous vote.

15. When questions are involved which relate to violations or to threats of violations which may result in a resumption of hostilities i.e.:

(a) The refusal by the armed forces of one side to proceed with the movements provided in the regrouping.

(b) The violation by the armed forces of one side of the regrouping zones or of the territorial waters or of the air space of the other side.

(c) Blank

The decisions of the International Commission must be adopted by unanimous vote. If unanimity is not achieved, the majority conclusions are to be communicated to the sides which must take them into consideration.

16. If one of the sides refuses to apply a recommendation or an arbitral decision of the International Commission, the latter informs the guarantors.

If the International Commission has not succeeded in reaching a unanimous conclusion in the cases provided for in Article 15, it will transmit to the guarantors a majority report and one or several minority reports.

The International Commission is to inform the guarantors of any obstacle which may arise to the carrying out of its activities.

17. The International Control Commission is to be on the spot from the moment of the cessation of hostilities in Indochina in order to be able to carry out the tasks provided in Article 9.

18. The International Control Commission in Vietnam is to act in close cooperation with the International Control Commissions in Cambodia and in Laos. An organism of coordination of the activities of the three Commissions is to be created through an agreement between them.

19. The International Control Commission for Vietnam may, after consulting with the International Control Commissions for Cambodia and Laos, formulate recommendations regarding the gradual reduction of its activities, taking into account developments in Vietnam. These recommendations are to be adopted by unanimity."

Comments USDel follow.<sup>3</sup>

JOHNSON

---

<sup>3</sup> Comments on French paper contained in telegram Secto 577. July 9, p. 1311.

396.1 GE/7-854: Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET

GENEVA, July 8, 1954—7 p. m.

Secto 576. Repeated information Paris 24, Saigon 16. Latournelle of French delegation today told Bonsal that he is informed that some weeks ago, Burmese Prime Minister<sup>1</sup> sent note to Nehru expressing grave concern at Chinese Communist activities on Burmese border and at Chinese Communist-supported Viet Minh invasions of Laos and Cambodia. Nehru passed this communication on to Chou En-lai at Geneva presumably through Menon with indication that Nehru shared Burmese concern.

According to Latournelle, Chou En-lai's anxiety to allay this concern for present through personal discussions New Delhi and Rangoon was a major reason his visit these capitals.

---

<sup>1</sup> U Nu.

Latournelle believes on basis of above Communists will eventually accept for present firm positions of Laotian and Cambodian governments regarding withdrawal Viet Minh invaders and absence of "regrouping zones" for alleged Laotian and Cambodian resistance forces.

JOHNSON

---

751G.00/7-854 : Telegram

The Department of State to the Embassy in France<sup>1</sup>

SECRET

WASHINGTON, July 8, 1954—7:08 p. m.

84. Our willingness make public statement we will respect agreement Indochina predicated assumption Associated States and in particular Viet Nam would agree terms settlement.

We believe Mendes-France should be under no illusion that observance seven points (Deptel 4853<sup>2</sup>) would of itself suffice without agreement Associated States and request you make sure he understands this.

DULLES

---

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by Tyler of EUR/WE. Repeated to Geneva as Tosec 525, to Saigon as telegram 84, and to London as telegram 149.

<sup>2</sup> Dated June 28. p. 1256.

---

611.51/7-854 : Telegram

The Secretary of State to the Embassy in France<sup>1</sup>

TOP SECRET      PRIORITY      WASHINGTON, July 8, 1954—7:24 p. m.

85. For Dillon, Aldrich and Johnson. I think it is probably true that if we had put together all of the bits of information given at various times and at various political and military levels at Paris, Geneva, Washington, Saigon and Hanoi, the result would have been a reasonably clear picture of French military intentions as now revealed. I have never harbored any thought of any willful concealment. Also I have always conceded that the French were clearly within their rights in making their own plans. I have repeatedly said at press conferences that we recognize that the French had the primary position in Indochina and that our role was that of a friendly observer who wanted to help if and when our help was wanted.

---

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by the Secretary of State. Repeated to London as telegram 151 and to Geneva as telegram Tosec 526.

I do feel that there is a certain lack of any intimacy which is perhaps due to the fact that we have not in the past worked closely with the personalities of the present Government who have been plunged into an immense and engrossing task. In this respect they have our sympathy and I hope that you will try to remove any impression of carping criticism on our part.

We are quite prepared to agree that France has been overextended in relation to Indochina and we are not quarrelling with present French policy designed to limit its commitments more nearly within the bounds of its strength.

Our present intentions to leave representation at Geneva at the present level of Ambassador Johnson is primarily because we do not want to be the cause of any avoidable embarrassment by what might be a spectacular disassociation of the United States from France. Whatever France may be determined to do, we accept as within its prerogatives. We only regret that we cannot agree to associate ourselves in advance with an end result which we cannot foresee. Equally, we do not want to be in a position of seeming to obstruct an end result which from the French national standpoint seems imperative to its parliament and people.

Since starting to dictate this, I have received through Bonnet a message from Mendes-France strongly urging that either Bedell Smith or I should come back. This apparently based on my today's press conference statement that neither of us had any present plans for returning.

I told Bonnet the substance of the preceding paragraphs to the effect that while we would be only too happy to contribute to a united front, we could not do so without knowing on what position that front was based. If there were a position which France was able to define and state that she would not accept anything else, then we would be able to judge whether or not that afforded the foundation for a united front. At the moment, it seems to me that there is less danger of doing irreparable injury to Franco-American relations if we avoid getting into a position at Geneva which might require a disassociation under spectacular conditions which would be deeply resented by the French as an effort on our part to block at the last minute a peace which they ardently desire.

We have not yet taken any irrevocable decision and even if no one from here comes over for the 12th, we would be standing by here under circumstances such that if developments at Geneva seem to indicate that our presence there would serve a really constructive purpose one or the other of us could get to Geneva overnight.

Unless you perceive objection, I would like you to explain orally my position to Mendes-France, making clear that we are motivated by our estimate that in the end our presence at Geneva, even though initially it seemed an asset, might subsequently prove a liability to Franco-American relations.

DULLES

Code Room:—Please note

For London only

Please show Eden portion of this cable which follows first two paragraphs. Portion begins "We are quite prepared, etc."<sup>2</sup>

---

<sup>2</sup> A letter of July 9 from British Ambassador Makins to the Secretary of State read: "I have now had a further telegram from Anthony Eden saying that he is glad that your decision that neither you nor Bedell Smith should go to Geneva for the present is not final." Makins' letter indicated that Eden felt it was important that in the difficult "concluding stages of the negotiations we should go out of our way to show an united front to the Communists, and he very much hopes that it will be possible for either you or Bedell Smith to go to Geneva soon." (Presidential correspondence, lot 66 D 204)

JULY 9, 1954

396.1 GE/7-954 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET      PRIORITY

GENEVA, July 9, 1954—1 p. m.

Secto 577. Department pass Defense; repeated information Paris 26, Saigon 18. In commenting on working paper prepared by French delegation on control of cessation of hostilities in Vietnam (Secto 575<sup>1</sup>), Department will wish to bear in mind general development of French thinking on this subject during past few weeks. Joint Commissions of belligerents are no longer envisaged as they were in original French proposals of June 2 and 4 as merely working instruments of International Commission. Importance of contemplated role of Joint Commissions has greatly increased. Concept of subordination has been totally abandoned although French continue to maintain obligatory nature of certain types of decisions and recommendations of International Commission. Any thought that International Commission would have physical means of acting as an enforcing agency has been abandoned. Soviet view on need for unanimous decisions on important questions has been accepted by French.

It should also be noted that until terms of agreement for cessation of hostilities are known, it is difficult to comment on significance of certain points in French working paper. For example, what will be demarcation line or lines? Are demilitarized sectors envisaged other than those separating two sides?

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated July 8, p. 1305.

Following comments are on numbered articles of French working paper:

Articles 1-3: Division of responsibility considered appropriate (two sides have responsibility for implementation of agreement; International Commission for control; and Joint Commission for facilitating joint implementation).

Articles 4 and 5: No comment.

Article 6: Except for word "assure" in first sentence, paragraph assigns to Joint Commission proper role of "help" to two sides, "liaison" between them, and "endeavor to resolve" difficulties. This in keeping with character of Joint Commission as we visualize it, since it would be body of representatives with function of coordinating implementation by two sides. However, word "assure" (French assurer) may have connotation of control, and thus tend to blur division of responsibility between Joint and International Commissions.

Article 6(B): We believe special provision should be made for either evacuating or disarming irregular forces of one side located in re-grouping area to be assigned other side.

Article 7: No comment.

Article 8: Re second paragraph: Appears undesirable that points at which fixed teams are stationed could be modified "at the request of one of the sides" even with agreement between International Commission and command of side concerned. Since locations of fixed teams are initially to be decided by agreement between both sides, both sides should agree to changes. Also not clear which side would be "side concerned" (French: la partie interessee). It could be side on whose territory point is located, or other side, since latter would be "concerned" if a team were moved from important check point to insignificant point.

Re fourth paragraph: Since mobile teams can move in areas outside of action zones defined in third paragraph only in agreement with command of side concerned, mobile teams could be blocked from inspecting, for example, airfields and local arms manufacturing plants that might be situated outside action zones.

Wording of paragraph has effect of excluding from sphere within which mobile teams can inspect on their own initiative these two significant activities which, if uncontrolled, could permit Viet Minh to increase their military capability. We believe, therefore, definition of action zones should be reconsidered. Also we believe two sides should be specifically charged with furnishing to international teams transport, observation and communication facilities as well as logistic support without precluding introduction such facilities by members International Commission.

Article 9: Omitted from subjects to be controlled are local arms and ammunition manufacturing plants which, if not subjected to control, could increase Viet Minh military capability. Re sub-paragraph (D), not clear whether airports outside action zones mentioned in Article 8 would be subject to control. We note no control envisaged on recruitment or development further native forces.

Article 10: This article places no geographical limitations on movement of inspection teams of International Commission on its own initiative. However, paragraph 3, Article 8, requires mobile teams to have agreement of command of side concerned to move outside action zones. Presumably Article 8 would govern since purpose of making distinction between action zones and other areas would be defeated if, under Article 10, inspection teams could move freely merely on initiative of International Commission. This apparent conflict, if not corrected, could produce different interpretations in International Commission, and seriously hamper effective control.

Article 11: No comment.

Article 12: The authority of inspection teams to "settle an incident" is nowhere spelled out. The obligation of the sides to carry out recommendations of the International Commission is not as clearly stated as would be desirable.

Article 13: No comment.

Article 14: Re second paragraph: Not clear whether recommendations of International Commission on amendments and additions to agreement would be binding on the sides. If this is intention, consider this provision undesirable. Two sides should not be obliged to accept amendments. Amendments should be made upon agreement of both sides in same manner as for basic agreement itself. If intention is that recommendations should not be binding, paragraph should so specify.

Article 15: Consider all questions, particularly serious ones specified in sub-paragraphs (A) and (B), should be decided by majority vote. Veto protects transgressor and impedes corrective action.

Article 16: The merits of this paragraph cannot be judged until the conference has made further progress in matter of role, obligations and commitments of guarantors.

Articles 17-19: No comment.

We are informally discussing foregoing comments with Offroy, French delegate, and will report further.

JOHNSON

---

751G.00/7-954 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of Defense

SECRET

GENEVA, July 9, 1954—2 p. m.

Defense Message Gento 76. Sent OSD Washington DC, repeated information USARMA Saigon, State Department. For Sullivan from Dwan. Discussion with members Vietnam delegation 7 July reported in Secto 571,<sup>1</sup> produced remarks which throw some light on general outlook of leaders of new government on military problem now confronting Vietnam. Awareness of this outlook should be useful in future US contacts with Vietnamese officials on military subjects.

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated July 8, p. 1298.

Outlook of Vietnamese representatives here appears colored above all by their extreme bitterness toward French and by intense desire for "real independence" of Vietnam. These factors, both with high emotional content, appear to obscure their grasp of some of facts of military situation, and are likely to influence their judgment about what will be best military policy for Vietnam.

For example, Dac Khe, with apparent concurrence of his colleagues, flatly disagreed with French assertion that recent withdrawal French Union forces from southern part of delta was dictated by military necessity, and said French motives were political, looking toward extrication French Expeditionary Corps from delta and purchase of cease-fire at any price. Irrespective of whether or not withdrawal was dictated by military necessity as French claim, it is significant to note that Dac Khe and Ngo Dinh Luyen said their point borne out by fact Vietnamese Government pleaded with French to leave Vietnamese forces for defense southern delta under Vietnamese command even if French Expeditionary Corps were withdrawn; or alternatively to leave arms with people to permit them to defend area. French refused. From this Vietnamese concluded sacrifice of southern provinces not necessary, implying that since will of Vietnamese forces and people to fight on existed it was simply matter of leaving arms with them. Apparently not considered were factors such as capability of Vietnamese alone to resist attack, necessity for combat and logistic support provided by French, necessity for integrated defense plan for all delta, and effect on whole defense position of weakness of one part.

Nguyen Huu Chau said with feeling that if French did not have resolve to carry on war they should not stand in way of Vietnamese doing so on their own with autonomous army under Vietnamese command. Although this reflects admirable spirit, it comes at somewhat belated stage when talk of going separate ways clearly unrealistic in light of present crisis faced by French Union forces even when operating in concert.

If above is fair sample of thinking of new government leaders, it reflects a rather primitive concept of military facts of life which, if not modified, is likely to make continued Vietnamese collaboration with French in carrying out common military efforts even more strained.

Above comments submitted for such use as they may be in contacts between US and Vietnamese officials on military subjects.

396.1 GE/7-954 : Telegram

Twenty-second Restricted Session on Indochina, Geneva, July 9, 3 p. m.: The United States Delegation to the Department of State<sup>1</sup>

CONFIDENTIAL

GENEVA, July 9, 1954—10 p. m.

Secto 580. Repeated information Paris 30, London 12, Saigon 21, Tokyo 5, Moscow 6, Vientiane, Phnom Penh unnumbered. Tokyo pass CINCFE. Department pass Defense. Twenty-second Indochina restricted session Friday, July 9, Lamb (UK) presiding.

US delegate spoke first. Text in Secto 579.<sup>2</sup>

Li Ko-nung (PRC) spoke next referring to comments of French, Cambodian and Laos delegates 6 July on subject nonintroduction of troops and arms into Laos and Cambodia after cessation hostilities. Referring to question that above delegates raised concerning requirements for self-defense, Li said he would like to make three points in response :

1. Problem of what was necessary for self-defense should be considered separately, and quantity of military personnel, arms and ammunition introduced should be limited to requirements of self-defense. In this connection Li was pleased to note that Laos and Cambodian delegates on 6 July reaffirmed their assurances that arms to be introduced would be limited to requirements of self-defense.

2. Question of limitation on introduction military personnel and arms should be discussed together with question of prohibition of foreign bases. On this point Li noted 8 June statement of Cambodian delegate that it would not allow foreign bases to be established in Cambodia and concluded that neither Laos or Cambodia have views contrary to his on this question.

3. Referring to question of need for foreign experts and technicians in Laos and Cambodia, Li said relation of these countries to French Union required that this subject be studied and that it should be discussed along with question of withdrawal of foreign forces.

Referring to meetings between military representatives pursuant to conference agreement on 19 June, Li said question of military arms and equipment necessary for self-defense of Laos and Cambodia should be discussed by representatives of two commands who, after reaching certain measure of agreement, could submit recommendations to conference. He expressed hope military representatives would proceed on basis three above principles.

<sup>1</sup> A set of minutes of this session (IC Restricted/22) is in Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 279. The minutes indicate that the session convened at 3 p. m. and adjourned at 6:15 p. m. The minutes are also printed in Conférence de Genève, pp. 368-375. The observations made by Pham Van Dong on the question of supervision, Indochina Document IC/41, July 10, are in Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 279A. This message was transmitted to the Department of State in two sections.

<sup>2</sup> Infra.

Dong (Viet Minh) then took floor to speak on general question of control, noting that statements of Soviet, PRC, and French delegates at last session showed area of agreement on which conference could agree.

Dong said views of delegates quite close on following subjects:

1. All recognized need for two categories of control (joint and neutral commissions).
2. All agreed that relation between these organs should not be on basis subordination but rather coordination.
3. All more or less agreed that since neutral commission would have no forces its decisions could not be imposed on the parties, and if one party protested, problem should be referred to guarantor powers.
4. All agreed decisions of neutral commission should be taken by unanimous vote on important questions such as renewal of hostilities and amendment of agreement, and that certain others could be taken by majority vote.
5. All agree that organization of control should cover all of Indochina, although special situations in Laos and Cambodia would be taken into account.

On question of organization of control, Dong made following comments:

1. Regarding the objects of control, following military questions should be included: simultaneous and complete cease-fire; demarcation line between regroupment zones; separation of belligerent forces and transfer of belligerent troops to regroupment areas; withdrawal of foreign forces; prohibition of introduction of arms and military personnel; prohibition of foreign military bases, and exchange of POWs and civilian internees. All these, he said, are measures which should be implemented at same time as cease-fire.

2. Regarding the function of control body, Dong pointed out that implementation of agreement depended on action of two sides, that to be effective, control of implementation should be grounded on knowledge of prevailing conditions, and that supervision should be in the hands of those who are competent, that is, representatives of two sides in joint commission. Subjects enumerated in previous paragraph fall within competence joint commission, except for prohibition of introduction arms and military personnel and prohibition of foreign military bases. These latter two are within competence of neutral body. Distribution of tasks between two commissions can be determined by differing nature of roles. Joint commission implements, negotiates disputes, recommends to sides. In cases of disagreement, question is referred to neutral commission for advice and examination. Neutral commission supervises implementation of agreement, particularly concerning prohibition on introduction troops and establishment foreign bases; it makes inquiries, and recommends to sides. If one side contests ruling, issue goes to guarantor states. In short, joint commission supervises implementation of agreement and negotiates differences; neutral commission supervises and conciliates, while supreme arbiters are guarantor powers.

All above remarks concerning organization of control, Dong said, are valid for all of Indochina. Joint commissions should be set up in each of three states with one general neutral commission which would have sub-commissions in each state. Special conditions, particularly in Cambodia, should be taken into account, notably regarding withdrawal of foreign troops and nonintroduction arms and military personnel from outside. Nevertheless basic principle of control for all three states of Indochina is not altered.

In concluding, Dong said considerable progress made by conference on question of supervision, and that "objects of control" being dealt with by military experts. He hoped military talks would soon reach satisfactory result and that committees could report in reasonable time.

Chauvel (France), speaking from notes, noted statements of Laotian and Cambodian delegates at last meeting in which they expressed concern over need for maintaining means of defense. He said French Government fully aware of this need, and recognized that if French troops have been in these two countries it was because national elements were not able to meet task. Real problem, he said, was necessity to give these states capability of exercising their sovereignty. In this connection he noted that ideas of US delegate expressed in Ambassador Johnson's opening statement coincided with concession French Government on this point.

Turning to statement of PRC delegate, Chauvel said he was not sure he agreed with PRC view that question of introduction arms and military personnel into Laos and Cambodia should be discussed by military experts since he felt this was not issue merely to be worked out by Laos and Cambodia with Viet Minh but was matter of interest all delegates in conference.

Chauvel then referred to Dong's statement, and warned conference against temptation, now that Ministers are about to meet, of reaching general agreements on various subjects when detailed issues are yet unresolved. It would be confusing, he said, to say we agreed in areas where in fact there is no agreement. He went on to note that Dong incorrectly said all delegations agreed that there should be single armistice agreement for all Indochina. French delegation, he asserted, never said that. Rather it said just the contrary and he believed conference shared its view. On 19 June, he said, conference appeared to favor not one single commission but three to deal with problems in three states. Similarly a single text of an agreement cannot apply to all three countries. French delegation, he said, favors three agreements, one for each country.

Sam Sary (Cambodia) spoke next and said statement of PRC delegate concerning nonintroduction arms into Laos and Cambodia not far from his own lines of thinking, particularly remark on defensive goals such arms should have. He went on to make following points:

1. Re foreign bases in Cambodia, statement of Cambodian delegate on 8 June that it did not intend to authorize foreign bases intended to apply only if Cambodia not threatened. However, if Cambodian security were imperiled, Cambodia intends, he said, to keep its legitimate right to defend itself by all means.

2. Re foreign instructors and technicians, he referred to present situation in which there are French instructors whom Cambodia continues to wish to avail itself of. However, he said, negotiation on this subject should properly be carried out in framework of conference, not with invader (meaning Viet Minh) who would be interested in limiting means of defense of its victim.

3. Re limitation on introduction arms and military personnel, principle of limitation, he said, applies only to quantity and should not be detrimental to sufficient defense of independence of country. Cambodia must be able to choose origin and quality of equipment and military personnel needed to maintain its sovereign independence.

In concluding, Sam Sary said his delegation fully shared reservations expressed today by French delegate on question control in Laos and Cambodia.

Although no delegates indicated intention to speak further, and in spite of general feeling that meeting should adjourn, Kuznetsov suggested session take short break and resume to discuss question of next meeting in light of early arrival Foreign Ministers.

After break Kuznetsov expressed support of Soviet delegation for Chinese proposals re introduction of arms after cease-fire. Said as is known, in point order of conference decisions June 29, work of conference should begin with question of withdrawal of foreign forces and military personnel. It is obvious this agreement meant provide cessation hostilities and thus provide that no foreign troops or foreign arms be admitted into the two countries. Taking into consideration peculiarities of situation in Laos and Cambodia, Chinese proposals provided for certain arms be admitted from outside but amount should be discussed separately. It will be difficult decide this question but Chinese suggestion deserves special mention. Majority delegates appear agree amount of arms should be limited to amount necessary for self-defense. It also necessary provide that introduction arms not create situation menacing neighboring countries. Many participants this conference expressed this idea and not without foundation, for there are not a few examples where territory of sovereign states used to create great stores of armaments menacing neighbors. Countries allowing this in fact lose their sovereignty. We consider that anybody undertaking this discussion should proceed on principle that introduction of armament be limited to self-defense.

During past three weeks delegates have tried hard reach rapprochement on question of control and supervision over cessation of hostilities. In particular, France has made no small effort in this respect. We have made step forward and have basis from which can move further. Important we not place artificial obstacles in way. We are now at stage where can pass from speech making to definition of certain formulas.

Lamb then stated co-chairman and he felt they could not very well fix date of next meeting since several delegations will be represented by Ministers.

Usual communiqué issued leaving date for next meeting open.

JOHNSON

---

396.1 GE/7-954 : Telegram

Twenty-second Restricted Session on Indochina, Geneva, July 9, 3 p. m.: The United States Delegation to the Department of State

CONFIDENTIAL

GENEVA, July 9, 1954—9 p. m.

Secto 579. Repeated information Saigon 20, Paris 29, London 11, Tokyo 4, Moscow 5, Phnom Penh and Vientiane unnumbered. Department pass Defense. Tokyo for CINCFE. Following is text my statement at 22nd restricted Indochina session Friday, July 9:

“Mr. Chairman, in continuation of our discussion at the last meeting, I desire briefly to comment on the statements made at that meeting by the Dels of Cambodia and Laos on the important subject of the defense of their countries.

As the US and other Dels have stated on several occasions, the problem of restoring peace in Laos and Cambodia is solely one of ending a foreign invasion. It seems to the US delegate unthinkable that these sovereign states should be forced to divest themselves of their right of self-defense as the price of obtaining the withdrawal of foreign aggressive forces. I cannot seriously believe that anyone could regard Cambodia and Laos as potential threats to the peace and security of their neighbors. All possible doubt on this score has long since been removed by the declarations made before this conference.

The proposal made by Mr. Chou En-lai on June 16 appears to have paid at least some lip service to the right of Laos and Cambodia to import arms for their self-defense. However, as the Del of Cambodia pointed out at our last session, that proposal does not seem to have recognized the right of Laos and Cambodia to seek foreign technical assistance and to employ foreign military advisers whenever necessary to the proper development of their defense forces. As General Smith said on June 19, ‘The small Cambodian and Laotian forces have a few French officers and noncommissioned officers. If they are deprived of these, their capacity for self-defense is materially reduced. The USDel considers that in the same way as any other sovereign state, the states of Laos and Cambodia should be free to request and to obtain technical assistance and advice.'

The position of the Chinese Communist Del on the military facilities established in Laos under agreements between the governments of Laos and France also requires clarification. The purely defensive nature of these facilities has been made clear by the Dels of Laos and France. Moreover, since both Laos and France are members of the French Union these facilities are clearly not 'foreign' bases in the sense that that term has been used by several Dels.

The Chinese Communist Del has proposed that separate negotiations be held on the question of the amount and type of arms that may be introduced into Laos and Cambodia for self-defense after the cessation of hostilities. At our last session, a number of questions were raised concerning this proposal. The Del of Cambodia, supported by the Del of Laos, also set forth certain principles which should be recognized if the proposed separate negotiations are in fact undertaken. These principles are entirely reasonable and indeed essential from the point of view of the future security of these small countries, which are even now being forced to defend themselves against attacks originating outside their borders. As the head of the Cambodian Del made clear on an earlier occasion, the representatives of these two countries would be gravely derelict in their duty to their peoples were they to deliver them with hands and feet tied, defenseless to foreign aggressors. Indeed, after all the statements we have heard on the necessity for respecting national rights and sovereignty, I find it strange that we find ourselves in the position of discussing limitations on the most fundamental aspects of the sovereignty of these two countries.

I hope that the responses to the questions raised at our last meeting will lead to a concrete recognition of the sovereign rights and the defensive requirements of Laos and Cambodia."

JOHNSON

---

Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 323

Memorandum of Conversation, by the Special Adviser to the United States Delegation (Bonsal)

SECRET

GENEVA, July 9, 1954.

Participants: Major Mathieu, Member Franco-Laotian Delegation for Military Talks with Vietminh
Philip W. Bonsal

Subject: Cessation of Hostilities in Laos

I saw Major Mathieu briefly during the interval at today's restricted session. He expressed general optimism regarding the outlook for the military talks with the Vietminh on the situation in Laos. From the military point of view, the problem would probably be solved by having the so-called Laotian resistants, once the Vietminh invaders have withdrawn, integrated into the Royal Laotian army. In Major Mathieu's opinion, this can be done without great danger since there are only some 1500 men involved.

From the political point of view, the problem is more complicated. The Laotian Government's position is that it is willing to grant complete amnesty to those who have borne arms against the government and to permit these people the full exercise of their political rights as Laotian citizens at the next elections. According to Major Mathieu, however, something more is required to meet the need of the Vietminh for some sort of face-saving device which will permit them to climb down from their former exaggerated position with regard to the Pathet Lao.

Major Mathieu stated that what is now being considered is the possibility of constituting a committee some of whose members would be Ministers of the Laotian Government and others representatives of the Pathet Lao. The mission of this committee would be to study the political situation and to make recommendations for over-all political pacification of the country. In view of the well-known Laotian temperament, Major Mathieu believes that such a committee would promote harmony in a framework of security for the present government.

I said that I was glad that there was no question of a coalition government or of giving the Pathet Lao elements any authority in any area of Laos. I referred briefly to the well-known talent of Communists for infiltration and subversion. I said that off hand it seemed to me that if the committee which Major Mathieu discussed is to be constituted, it would be better if the representatives on the Laotian side could be well below the rank of Ministers. There would thus be avoided any appearance that the Laotian Government was treating the Pathet Lao movement as an equal. I said that perhaps the Laotian governmental side might be made up of some members of the Laotian National Assembly and that it should be understood that the function of the committee would be merely to make some recommendations which would be submitted to the Laotian Government for its consideration but which would have no binding character whatever. Major Mathieu said he thought well of this idea.

---

751G.00/7-954 : Telegram

Johnson-Chauvel Meeting, Geneva, July 9, Afternoon: The United States Delegation to the Department of State

TOP SECRET      PRIORITY

GENEVA, July 9, 1954—9 p. m.

Secto 578. Repeated information Paris 28, Saigon 19. Limit distribution. Paris eyes only Ambassador. Saigon eyes only Ambassador.

I called on Chauvel following restricted meeting today. He has just returned from Paris. His impression is that Mendes-France position unchanged and that he does not intend make further concessions to secure agreement with Communists. Mendes-France anticipates active week of discussions followed possibly by last minute agreement on evening July 19. Mendes-France arrives here tomorrow afternoon. He will see Molotov tomorrow evening.

Chauvel dined last night with Communist Chinese. Li Ko-nung and Chang Wen-tien, Vice Minister for Foreign Affairs and Ambassador to USSR who has just returned here, were present. Atmosphere was "very cordial". Chauvel informed Chinese that military discussions with Viet Minh not going well and that latter had made both for Vietnam and for Laos unacceptable proposals wholly out of harmony with what Chauvel had understood Chou En-lai's position to be. Chinese expressed surprise but did not go into details of situation. He told Chauvel that Chou En-lai would probably return here early next week saying it takes three to four days to fly here from Peking depending on weather. Vice Minister stated Chou En-lai had had "very good meeting" with Ho Chi Minh and results "would be helpful to French". Vice Minister has spent last two weeks in Moscow and Chauvel believes Communist Chinese and Soviet positions regarding problem have been coordinated, with Chinese views on Asian problems being given major weight.

There was an "underground" meeting between French Colonel Brebisson and Viet Minh military representative yesterday. At this meeting Viet Minh made two proposals (1) A demarcation line about 40 kilometers north of Tuyhoa line and (2) "neutralization" of delta in order to permit total evacuation of French Expeditionary Corps in three months period. French representative stated both these proposals wholly unacceptable and not even worthy of discussion. He refused to set date for next meeting.

Chauvel saw Molotov this morning. Molotov expressed interest in being informed of progress of conference. Chauvel gave him general review touching particularly on question of demarcation line, attitude of extreme intransigence being adopted by Viet Minh in military talks and problem of international controls. Molotov expressed interest but claimed unfamiliarity with details. Chauvel suggested desirability of contact between French military representatives and members of Soviet delegation in order that Soviet delegation might be fully informed of difficulties being encountered and of attitudes adopted by Viet Minh. Later in day Soviet delegation got in touch with French delegation and these contacts will be set up. Molotov stated that he had seen Chauvel's working paper (Secto 575<sup>1</sup>) and that while there were points requiring clarification and further study he thought it was a useful contribution.

Chauvel has impression both Russians and Chinese give Viet Minh fairly free hand to see how far they can go but that when they find Viet Minh demands have gone beyond limit which French can be expected to accept, they intervene. Chauvel made point to Molotov that any agreement reached must be acceptable not only to Franco-Vietnamese side and to Viet Minh but also to other conference members. He is hopeful that, as he says occurred previously, Chinese-Russian moderating influence will now be brought to bear on Viet Minh. Chauvel expressed confidence that if he were negotiating only with Russians and Chinese, he could almost certainly achieve a settlement in line with provisions of US-UK aide-mémoire.

Chauvel told me that he is having his staff prepare drafts of an armistice agreement and related documents so as to be ready in case ministers reach agreements on major matters. He stated that information we had furnished regarding Korean armistice was most useful to them and was much appreciated.

JOHNSON

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated July 8, p. 1305.

JULY 10, 1954

751G.00/7-1054 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

TOP SECRET      PRIORITY

GENEVA, July 10, 1954—1 p. m.

Secto 581. In keeping with Tosec 526,<sup>1</sup> I assume that Department desires I maintain a generally passive attitude in conference meeting and in relations with other delegations, acting in role of "friendly observer who wants to help if and when our help is wanted".

US-UK note to France (Tosec 490<sup>2</sup>) should provide sufficient guidance on US policy for most questions which will arise.

Real negotiating will take place at ministerial level outside of conference, and I will endeavor do maximum keep Department promptly informed thereon.

It is not clear to what extent there may be conference meetings, but as it is likely that developments will be rapid during course of next week, probable that urgent questions will arise as to attitudes we will take as long as we participate when matters presented to conference.

---

<sup>1</sup> Telegram Tosec 526 to Geneva was sent as telegram 85 to Paris, July 8, p. 1309.

<sup>2</sup> Telegram Tosec 490 to Geneva was sent as telegram 4853 to Paris, June 28, p. 1256.

While any conference action which involves a commitment by the US would clearly require a reservation of US position pending instructions, uniformly to adopt such an attitude with respect other questions will be regarded by French and others as an obstructive and delaying tactic. I have in mind possibility of procedural and substantive issues on which Ministers here have reached agreement and where action might not be entirely to our liking but would not involve commitments by US. As example, something along lines French proposal on controls (Secto 575) <sup>3</sup> might be presented for conference agreement as basis for drafting detailed agreement by committee experts. In such a situation I would not in conference oppose position taken by France but would merely state, where appropriate, US has some doubts on adequacy or clarity of document but will not obstruct action agreed upon by other participants in conference.

When consistent with the positions set forth in US-UK note to French (Tosec 490), I would propose briefly support in conference substantive positions taken by French or others on our side when it would appear appropriate and useful.

I would appreciate the Department's comments and instructions.

In event some one or all of Associated States take position of open opposition to France in conference session, possibly even to extent of walking out, I would appreciate Department's thinking regarding US attitude.

JOHNSON

---

<sup>3</sup> Dated July 8, p. 1305.

---

396.1 GE/7-754 : Telegram

The Secretary of State to the United States Delegation <sup>1</sup>

SECRET

WASHINGTON, July 10, 1954—5:42 p. m.

Tosec 529. Reference Secto 569.<sup>2</sup> Amb Johnson should reiterate to Chauvel and Amb Dillon or Ambassador Johnson to Mendes our views on international control which are closely tied to attitude we shall adopt re any Geneva agreement.

In this connection it should be stressed our attitude will depend not only on adherence to seven points of US-UK note, but also on acceptance or non-acceptance of any agreement by Associated States (ref Deptel 84 to Paris <sup>3</sup>). For this reason it is indispensable that French face up to problem of advising Vietnamese of Geneva develop-

---

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by Sturm of FE/PSA and Gullion of S/P. Repeated to Paris as telegram 124, to Saigon as telegram 121, and to London as telegram 190.

<sup>2</sup> Dated July 7, p. 1296.

<sup>3</sup> Dated July 8, p. 1309.

ments and prospects in order avoid dangerous reactions mentioned Deptel 39<sup>4</sup> to Paris.

Saigon's 85<sup>5</sup> indicates Ngo Dinh Diem is still uninformed re French intentions and has not accepted implications military situation. We are struck by his statement that "ceasefire must not lead to partition which could only lead to preparation for more deadly war", and his appeal that southern provinces of delta be restored.

Ambassador Dillon should again stress to Mendes (or in his absence to de Beaumont) acuteness this problem as it appears to us, and advise him that unless French themselves take initiative in preparing Diem for a Geneva agreement in line with US-UK seven points, we fear strongly adverse Vietnamese reactions may compromise possibility of establishing any line in Vietnam.

FYI For our part, we believe we must place our own relations with Diem on basis both more realistic and confidential if we are to play useful role in Vietnam at this time or in future. We would wish, of course, not to embarrass French thereby and would hope that their own consultations with Diem might have provided background against which review of our relations with Vietnam and statement of our policy in present circumstances would be appropriate. We believe such a step would contribute and in fact be indispensable to purposes set forth in French Aide-Mémoire of June 26 (Deptel 4852 to Paris<sup>6</sup>). We propose Diem be given information based on our reply to Aide-Mémoire (Deptel 4853 to Paris<sup>7</sup>), although neither Aide-Mémoire nor our reply should be mentioned to him. End FYI.

French should be informed by Embassy Paris and British by Embassy London that we are conveying this information in general terms to Diem, primarily in effort relieve pressures which appear dangerous to us and prejudicial to establishment of any free world strength in Vietnam.

Ambassador Heath should see Diem soonest and convey to him oral message from Secretary in following sense: <sup>8</sup>

"As you assume your high office I want you to know that thoughts of American people, President Eisenhower and myself are with you and with your country in its difficult ordeal.

"Your wisdom, strength and record of devotion to cause of genuine independence are well known to us and we are confident that they will be put to service of Vietnam.

<sup>4</sup> Dated July 2, p. 1275.

<sup>5</sup> Not printed.

<sup>6</sup> Dated June 28, p. 1257.

<sup>7</sup> Dated June 28, p. 1256.

<sup>8</sup> Ambassador Heath conveyed the Secretary's message to Diem on July 12. For Heath's report, see telegram 150, July 12, from Saigon, p. 1339.

"We know that struggle in Indochina is one for liberty against despotism and that you represent the spirit of resistance to a menace which threatens entire free world.

"US has, as you know, taken up arms against this Communist imperialism as one of the United Nations in Korea. We have also contributed of our resources and those skills we possess in other threatened areas, not least in Vietnam. US remains prepared support countries everywhere seeking maintain their freedom against godless Communist menace.

"During past year as new plans of French Union High Command developed, we sought to assure ourselves that those plans offered prospect of military success and would accompany and foster early completion of independence, and development of national armies, in Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia.

"Unfortunately this program was not fulfilled and military situation in Vietnam deteriorated.

"Meanwhile US had acquiesced in suggestion of its associates in free world that fullest trial should be made at Geneva of resources of negotiation. Communists during this period in no wise abated their aggression in Vietnam. Other negotiations with Viet Minh and Chinese Communists, to which US is not a party, have also taken place.

"If as a result of such negotiations or of military operations there should now result any cease-fire line tending to divide Vietnam, we would be unwilling to consider it as final. We would lend our best efforts to assist patriotic Vietnamese in building up strength in that part of Vietnam remaining outside Communist occupation. At the same time, it must be recognized that the necessary conditions for intervention by our own forces in North Vietnam have not been realized and are unlikely to be in the future.

"As you know, President Eisenhower and I have recently concluded a series of conferences with British Prime Minister Churchill and Foreign Secretary Eden. At these conferences we made clear our strong opposition to any settlement which might be made on terms leading to permanent division of your country. We and British agreed, and so informed French, that although temporary division of country might be required to effect regrouping of opposing military forces, we could not exclude prospect of ultimate peaceful reunification. In any such regrouping, we informed French, we felt strongly provision must be made for humane movements of populations.

"We believed French might be encouraged to resist possible agreements of more undesirable character if they were advised what kind of provisional agreement we and British might be prepared to respect, even though we were not prepared accept it as desirable or final. Accordingly we and British informed French we would 'respect' an agreement which :

"1. Preserves at least the southern half of Vietnam :

"2. Does not impose on free Vietnam any restrictions materially impairing its capacity to maintain a stable non-Communist regime, and especially does not impose restrictions impairing its right to maintain adequate forces for internal security, to import arms and to employ foreign advisers :

- “3. Does not contain political provisions which would risk loss of the retained area to Communist control;
- “4. Does not exclude the possibility of the ultimate reunification of Vietnam by peaceful means;
- “5. Provides for peaceful and humane transfer, under international supervision, of those people desiring to be moved from one zone to another of Vietnam; and
- “6. Provides effective machinery for international supervision of the agreement.

“While we recognize that settlement along these lines imposes hardships on Vietnam, we fear that deteriorating military situation and separate negotiations in progress with Viet Minh and Chinese Communists could lead to something still worse. It is our hope that views we have expressed to French may bear fruit in form of stronger resolve on their part.

“Finally permit me say how much I sympathize with sufferings of Vietnam and its people. I am glad that one who had dedicated his life and prayers to its service is now at hand to give comfort and guidance.”

DULLES

396.1 GE/7-1054: Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET

GENEVA, July 10, 1954—6 p. m.

Secto 583. Repeated information Paris 31, Saigon 22. Pass Defense. Bonsal and Dwan talked to Offroy (French delegate) today and presented comments on French delegation working paper on control of cessation of hostilities in Vietnam along lines Secto 577.<sup>1</sup> Offroy said he had written basic paper but that it had been somewhat modified in course of staffing. He took notes on comments and seemed particularly persuaded by several points, although overall effect remains to be seen. He has also had comments from UK and Soviet delegates.

Offroy acknowledged that word “assure” in first sentence Article 6 has connotation of enforcement, although he did not say whether he would suggest amendment. Re Article 6(B) Offroy fully agreed special provision should be made for either evacuating or disarming irregular forces as a practical matter. He also appeared to be persuaded by suggestion that locations of fixed teams covered in Article 8 should be subject to relocation only if both sides agreed. Re fourth paragraph of Article 8, he said intention of wording here not to restrict right of mobile teams to proceed to necessary points of inspection, including airports, but merely to require as practical matter that their movement to such points be coordinated with command of side in which they operated. He said French Union side would want to regulate movement of mobile teams in its own area outside of action zones in reciprocal fashion. Re Article 9, he seemed to agree that some provision might be made for control of local arms and ammunition manufacturing plants.

<sup>1</sup> Dated July 9, p. 1311.

Concerning two fundamental questions of binding authority of [garbled group] international commission (Article 12) and voting procedure (Article 15), Offroy said his original draft specifically stated that decisions of international commission would be binding on the sides but that this was modified so draft now makes decisions of international commission binding only implicitly. Here he cited wording Article 12. Reason for modification, he said, was that since this was particularly critical issue, Soviets might find it more difficult to accept if point were emphasized by being flatly stated. We pointed out that if Soviets were not prepared to accept this point it would be well to find it out before cease-fire, and emphasized strongly we felt this point should be positively stated. Concerning majority vote on minor subjects and unanimous vote on major ones, Offroy said French delegation believes Soviets will never accept principle of majority vote on all issues. Furthermore, French believe that veto provision will safeguard their interests as well in the event international commission is so composed that Asian state, perhaps India, unsympathetic with French role in Indochina, is placed in role on commission of swinging balance. Furthermore as practical matter international commission itself cannot take any effective action to stop a serious violation of agreement if one side willfully intends to break it, and that various questions must in any case be dealt with by states willing to guarantee conditions after cessation of hostilities; regarding Article 14 Offroy said not intention of French draft that recommendations of international commission concerning amendments to agreement should be binding on sides, and seemed to agree that clarification of wording would be desirable. Re Article 16, Bonsal explained we reserved comment on this Article since question of guarantees still not sufficiently developed by conference.

In response to question about what French envisage would be "demilitarized section" referred to in Article 6(C), Offroy said French initially had in mind Catholic bishoprics of Bui Chiu and Phat Diem in southern part of delta (from which forces of two sides would withdraw leaving police functions to Catholic militia) and zones separating troops of both sides along demarcation line and around one or more enclaves. Since withdrawals in delta, Offroy believes it is now less likely Viet Minh will accept demilitarization of bishoprics, but French will try get agreement on this.

396.1 GE/7-1054 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

TOP SECRET      PRIORITY

GENEVA, July 10, 1954—7 p. m.

Secto 584. Repeated information Paris 33. Department limit distribution. Paris eyes only Ambassador. Chauvel today called in Bonsal to ask latest developments regarding United States representation at Conference next week. Bonsal replied that he was familiar with message regarding Secretary's position transmitted yesterday by Joyce to Mendes (Tosec 526) <sup>1</sup> and with press accounts to effect that further representations had been made by Bonnet. Bonsal stated he had no information as to Secretary's reaction to these further representations.

Chauvel then stated with great earnestness that he believed it would be "most dangerous" if United States delegation not headed by either Secretary or General Smith. He recalled that his whole effort over past three weeks in dealing with Viet Minh, Soviets and Communist Chinese had been predicated on possibility of attaining at least military settlement which would have international sanction. He said that chance of reasonable settlement along lines United States-United Kingdom aide-mémoire <sup>2</sup> depends entirely on judgment of Communists as to United States attitude. If Communists believe United States dissociating itself from negotiation, they will push their demands much further. Chauvel recalled that Molotov raised question of United States representation with Chauvel at their conversation yesterday and stated, when Chauvel indicated he had no information on subject, "we will have to go ahead anyhow". Chauvel concluded with earnest reiteration of importance that either Secretary or Smith be here. He attaches greatest value even to "silent presence" of Secretary or Smith in order to achieve settlement short of loss entire area in fairly near future.

Chauvel reported that de Jean had found Bao Dai quite amenable to military settlement along lines Dong Hoi demarcation line. Bao Dai most interested in possibility of French and United States military and economic assistance to reduced Vietnam which would result from military settlement.

Chauvel reported that Brebisson today briefed two Soviet officers regarding military negotiations with Viet Minh. This was in accordance with suggestion Chauvel had made to Molotov (Secto 578 <sup>3</sup>). Brebisson had impression Soviet officers wholly unfamiliar with situation. Chauvel hopeful that result will be helpful in sense of Soviet-Chinese Communist influence to restrain exaggerated Viet Minh demands.

JOHNSON

<sup>1</sup> Telegram Tosec 526 to Geneva was sent as telegram 85 to Paris, July 8, p. 1309.

<sup>2</sup> For text, see telegram 4853 to Paris. June 28, p. 1256.

<sup>3</sup> Dated July 9, p. 1321.

611.51/7-1054 : Telegram

The Secretary of State to the Embassy in France<sup>1</sup>

TOP SECRET      NIACT      WASHINGTON, July 10, 1954—10:25 p. m.

127. For Ambassador from Secretary. Limit distribution. Following is personal message from Secretary Dulles to Mendes-France which is to be delivered by Ambassador Dillon to Mendes-France in person as promptly as possible as instructed by separate cable.<sup>2</sup>

Begin text: My dear Mr. President: President Eisenhower (who has been kept closely informed) and I have been greatly moved by your earnest request that I or General Bedell Smith should return next week to Geneva for what may be the conclusion of the Indochina phase of the Conference. I can assure you that our attitude in this respect is dictated by a desire to find the course which will best preserve the traditional friendship and cooperation of our countries and which will promote the goals of justice and human welfare and dignity to which our two nations have been traditionally dedicated. We also attach great value to preserving the united front of France, Great Britain and the United States which has during this postwar period so importantly served all three of us in our dealings with the Communists.

What now concerns us is that we are very doubtful as to whether there is a united front in relation to Indochina, and we do not believe that the mere fact that the high representatives of the three nations physically reappear together at Geneva will serve as a substitute for a clear agreement on a joint position which includes agreement as to what will happen if that position is not accepted by the Communists. We fear that unless there is the reality of such a united front, the events at Geneva will expose differences under conditions which will only serve to accentuate them with consequent strain upon the relations between our two countries greater than if the US does not reappear at Geneva in the person of General Smith or myself.

Beginning early last April the US worked intensively with the French Government and with that of Great Britain in an effort to create a common position of strength. This did not prove possible. The reasons were understandable, and derived from fundamental causes which still subsist and influence the possibility of achieving at the present time a genuine "united front".

During the talks of Prime Minister Churchill and Foreign Secretary Eden with President Eisenhower and me, an effort was made to find a common position which might be acceptable to the two of us and, we hoped, to the French Government. This was expressed in the seven-point memorandum of which you are aware. I believe that this represented a constructive contribution. However, I do not yet feel that there is a united position in the sense that the three of us would be prepared to stand firmly on this as a minimum acceptable solution and to see the negotiations break off and the warfare resume if this position was not accepted by the Communist side. We doubt very much that the Communists will in fact accept this seven-point position unless they realize that the alternative is some common action upon which we have all agreed. So far, there is no such alternative.

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by the Secretary of State. Repeated to London as telegram 195 and to Geneva as telegram 21.

For a discussion between the Secretary of State and the President concerning this message to Mendès-France, see volume XIII.

<sup>2</sup> Telegram 128 to Paris, July 10, infra.

Under these circumstances, we greatly fear that the seven points which constitute a minimum as far as the US is concerned will constitute merely an optimum solution so far as your Government and perhaps the UK are concerned, and that an armistice might be concluded on terms substantially less favorable than those we could respect.

We gather that there is already considerable French thinking in terms of the acceptability of departures from certain of the seven points. For example:

Allowing Communist forces to remain in Northern Laos; accepting a Vietnam line of military demarcation considerably south of Dong-hoi; neutralizing and demilitarizing Laos, Cambodia and Vietnam so as to impair their capacity to maintain stable, non-Communist regimes; accepting elections so early and so ill-prepared and ill-supervised as to risk the loss of the entire area to Communism; accepting international supervision by a body which cannot be effective because it includes a Communist state which has veto power.

These are but illustrations of a whittling-away process, each stroke of which may in itself seem unessential, but which cumulatively could produce a result quite different from that envisaged by the seven points. Also, of course, there is the danger that the same unacceptable result might come about through the Communist habit of using words in a double sense and destroying the significance of good principles with multiplying implementations.

We do not for a moment question the right of the French Government to exercise its own judgment in all of these respects. Indeed, we recognize that the issues for France are so vital that the French Government has a duty to exercise its own judgment. I have from the beginning recognized the preponderant interest of your Government as representing the nation which has borne for so many years the burden of a cruel and costly war. However, my Government equally has the duty not to endorse a solution which would seem to us to impair seriously certain principles which the US believes must, as far as it is concerned, be kept unimpaired, if our own struggle against Communism is to be successfully pursued. At the same time, we do not wish to put ourselves in the position where we would seem to be passing moral judgment upon French action or disassociating ourselves from the settlement at a moment and under circumstances which might be unnecessarily dramatic.

It is also to be considered that if our conduct creates a certain uncertainty in the minds of the Communists, this might strengthen your hand more than our presence at Geneva in a form which would expose probably to the world, and certainly to the Communists themselves, differences which the Communists would exploit to the discomfiture of all three of us.

Under all these circumstances, it seems to us that the interests of both of our countries are best served by continuing for the time being the present type of US representation at Geneva. This consists of able and responsible persons who are in close contact with the President and me.

If circumstances should alter so that it appeared that our common interests would be better served if higher ranking officials became our representatives, then we would be alert to act accordingly.

It is because I am fully aware of the serious and solemn nature of the moment that I have gone into the matter at this considerable length. It is possible that by the first of the week, the Communist position will be sufficiently disclosed so that some of the answers to the foregoing queries can be foreseen. This might clarify in one sense or another the thinking of us all.

In this connection, let me emphasize that it is our ardent hope that circumstances might become such that consistently with the foregoing either General Bedell Smith or I can personally come to Geneva and stand beside you. End text.

DULLES

---

611.51/7-1054 : Telegram

The Secretary of State to the Embassy in France<sup>1</sup>

TOP SECRET

NIACT

WASHINGTON, July 10, 1954—10:33 p. m.

128. For Ambassador from Secretary. Limit distribution. In separate telegram I am sending you a message from me to Mendes-France,<sup>2</sup> which you should deliver to him in person in Geneva at the earliest possible moment. I think that in this connection you should not limit yourself merely to delivering the message, but that you should discuss the subject matter with him so as to be sure he gets the real flavor and import of what we are trying to explain. In this connection, please express the profound personal sympathy which the President and I have for the position of Mendes-France and our admiration for the courageous way in which he is tackling almost insurmountable problems. Also, emphasize that if we seem to differ from him as to whether Ambassador Johnson or General Smith or I am at Geneva, this is a difference of tactic which ought not to be exaggerated.

After having seen and delivered the message to Mendes-France as above, please then give a copy to Eden.

Because of your distinctive relationship to Mendes-France as Ambassador to France, we leave it to your discretion as to whether or not Johnson accompanies you. However, when you see Eden, you should have Johnson with you.

---

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by the Secretary of State. Repeated to Geneva as telegram 22 and to London as telegram 196.

<sup>2</sup> Telegram 127 to Paris, July 10, supra.

In this connection, please give Eden the following:

Begin text: Dear Anthony: Beedle and I greatly appreciate your messages. We are at the moment unable to decide in favor of either of us coming to Geneva for reasons which are set out in the lengthy exposition to Mendes-France, which I am making, and of which you will be getting at once a copy. I hope that even if you do not agree wholeheartedly with our reasoning, you will understand our point of view. It is a tough decision for us, either way. With warm regards, Foster. End text.

DULLES

JULY 11, 1954

Eisenhower Library, Hagerty papers

Hagerty Diary, Sunday, July 11, 1954

[WASHINGTON, undated.]

I dropped down to see the President at ten o'clock after church to see if there was anything further he wanted me to do. He had nothing in particular that he wanted me to do with reference to the change of plans, but we did have an opportunity to talk about the international situation and the upcoming Geneva Conference. He told me that he had been giving considerable thought to our discussion of several days ago and had reached the point in thinking it over where he thought it was necessary to have Foster Dulles fly to Paris to confer with Mendes-France and Eden on the entire situation. He told me at that time that Dulles would announce on Monday that he was leaving for Paris Monday evening<sup>1</sup> and that if Dulles did reach an agreement, we could support with the French and British, Dulles would also have Bedell Smith go back to Geneva. "All in all it is going to be a tough situation, but I think you are dead right in urging us to have a high level American representative at Geneva. Otherwise, the stories from

---

<sup>1</sup> The log of the President's daily appointments for Monday, July 12, indicates that he held an off-the-record meeting with Secretary Dulles at 9:40 a. m. (Eisenhower Library, Eisenhower records, Daily Appointments) Thereafter, Dulles called MacArthur from the White House instructing him to make arrangements through the United States Delegation at Geneva for the Secretary to meet with Premier Mendès-France in Paris on the evening of July 13. Mendès-France was not to be led to believe that Dulles would be going on to Geneva. (Eisenhower Library, Eisenhower papers, Whitman file) MacArthur immediately called Ambassador Johnson at Geneva. (Eisenhower Library, Dulles papers, "Korea-Geneva 1954") At 12:55 p. m. Dulles received a call from Johnson indicating that Mendès-France would be pleased to meet with Dulles in Paris the following evening. The Secretary so informed the President. (Eisenhower Library, Dulles papers, Telephone Conversations)

For President Eisenhower's recollection of these events, see Mandate for Change, pp. 369-370. For the statement issued by Secretary Dulles prior to his departure for Paris on the evening of July 12, see the editorial note, p. 1342.

Geneva will be entirely colored by Red propoganda and also by propoganda of our allies, particularly the French, who will then blame us for everything that goes wrong.”

---

396.1 GE/7-1154 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET

GENEVA, July 11, 1954—noon.

Secto 586. Repeated information Paris 6, Saigon 23. In course of conversation yesterday, Bonsal asked Chauvel how he envisaged negotiation of political settlement following achievement of cessation of hostilities. Chauvel replied that French delegation would insist on maintaining separation between military and political problems. In the declaration which conference may issue at time of agreement on cessation of hostilities, Chauvel envisages only general references to political principles (territorial integrity, unity, democratic processes, et cetera). Question of negotiating political settlement would be entrusted by conference to parties with request that they report back to conference at a later date. He did not make clear who parties would be or what role French would expect to play in negotiation between Democratic Republic of Vietnam on one hand and on other State of Vietnam, an independent member of French Union. We will explore this matter further and would appreciate any views Department may wish to express.

JOHNSON

---

396.1 GE/7-1154 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET

GENEVA, July 11, 1954—7 p. m.

Secto 589. Repeated information Paris 39, Saigon 24, London 16. Reference first paragraph Tosec 529, repeated information Paris 124, Saigon 121, London 190.<sup>1</sup> I today reiterated to Chauvel great importance we attach to effective international control and its full equality, along with other six points in United States-United Kingdom note. I stated that I was concerned at considerable gap developing between French and United States thinking on this subject. I said that I had fully reported development French thinking this regard and reasons underlying it, but had no indication it had, or would, cause any changes in views United States Government on essential principles.

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated July 10, p. 1324.

Chauvel said he fully understood United States views, but that French were increasingly of opinion that too rigid and too effective controls would operate to their disadvantage by limiting their freedom of action. I said I could understand this point, but that question would be which side would make most use of freedom of action.

Chauvel said that at Mendes-France dinner with Molotov last night, discussion centered entirely around "lines", Molotov pointing out strength of Viet Minh in three provinces south of Faifo and French bringing up importance to them of road communications into Laos which apparently led Molotov to suggest possibility of what Chauvel termed "tiger stripe" arrangement, which was rejected by French.

Mendes-France suggested to Molotov that there not be any conference meetings for next two or three days pending results of private talks to be held during that period. Molotov said he was agreeable, but would consult with others.

Mendes-France is seeing Dong this afternoon and is lunching with Eden tomorrow.

JOHNSON

---

751G.00/7-1154 : Telegram

The Ambassador in France (Dillon) to the Department of State

TOP SECRET      PRIORITY

PARIS, July 11, 1954—9 p. m.

133. Repeated information Geneva 20, Saigon 12, London 34. Limit distribution. For Secretary from Ambassador Dillon. During conversation with Mendes at Geneva, I informed him of contents of Deptel 84<sup>1</sup> and of our feeling that Vietnam Government should be kept more fully informed by French. I told him that we felt time had now come for Vietnam to be informed of general lines of seven point program. Mendes said he would consider informing Vietnamese after discussing matter with his advisors during afternoon. He said he had originally felt it preferable not to inform them until he could assure them that US was prepared to guarantee them against further aggression or subversion.

He then spoke at length of necessity for a clear-cut US guarantee that would protect Associated States in the event that the Communists did not honor the spirit of any agreement that might be reached at Geneva. Without such a guarantee he said that a settlement would not be worth the paper it was written on. Mendes asked me to inquire as to whether if a settlement within seven point framework was obtained, Secretary would then be willing to come to Geneva to close conference and to work out necessary guarantees to protect Associated States.

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated July 8, p. 1309.

He then discussed in some detail the situation which would arise if no settlement was reached at Geneva. He said the sending of conscripts to Indochina would then be debated on July 22 and 23. If the National Assembly approved, the first division would leave on July 25 and the second division about 10 days later. It would take a month to reach Indochina and three more weeks to get troops ready for action. Therefore the first division of conscripts would not be ready in Indochina until about September 15.

This schedule for reinforcements would be known to Viet Minh and the result would undoubtedly be a massive Viet Minh assault during August prior to arrival of new troops.

Mendes said he doubted if French alone could successfully resist such an assault. He said that French Government would officially inform US of these facts at end of July if no cease-fire reached.

I reminded him of US requirements for action on our part, and he said he could not foretell how French Parliament might react. They might react strongly and request US help to continue the war or they might have what he termed a "nervous breakdown" and push for capitulation at any price to save expeditionary corps.

If no cease-fire, Mendes will resign, but in view of the above, I feel it is possible that if no cease-fire is reached the French Government which will succeed Mendes may appeal for US armed help, and may meet all US terms. Not possible to estimate timing of such an appeal but it could occur during August when US Congress no longer in session.

DILLON

---

751G.00/7-1154 : Telegram

The Ambassador in France (Dillon) to the Department of State

TOP SECRET      PRIORITY

PARIS, July 11, 1954—9 p. m.

134. Repeated information Geneva 21, London 35. Limit distribution. For Secretary from Ambassador. I delivered Secretary's message Department telegram 127<sup>1</sup> to Mendes in Geneva after lunch Sunday. At same time, I gave him personal message contained in first paragraph Department telegram 128.<sup>2</sup> In view Eden's absence (Secto 585<sup>3</sup>), I did not see him. Johnson will deliver message to Eden tomorrow, if Aldrich has not already done so.

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated July 10, p. 1330.

<sup>2</sup> Dated July 10, p. 1332.

<sup>3</sup> Telegram Secto 585, July 11, contained a report from Geneva that Eden was not due to arrive until the following day. (Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 260)

Mendes was very touched by personal message in Department telegram 128 and twice asked me to be sure and thank Secretary on his behalf for this thought.

Regarding Department telegram 127, Mendes expressed extreme disappointment and gave concern at United States decision not to be represented at Ministerial level. He divided his remarks into two categories, first, the effect of our decision on Conference itself, and second, the overall effect of our decision on world affairs.

Regarding first category, Mendes stated that our absence made French bargaining position far weaker. He stated that if Secretary was present, France would not accept anything at Conference that was unacceptable to United States. As he put it in his own words, presence of Secretary would give United States in effect a veto power on decisions of Conference. He felt it particularly important that we have someone at Geneva who could take strong personal position with Molotov, if and when necessary, and without having to refer to Washington for instructions. Mendes also feels that United States absence at Ministerial level will lead Communists to increase their pressure and be more demanding in order to deepen the obvious rift between the Western powers. He said France had not as yet departed from the Seven Point United States-United Kingdom position and he did not make any commitment to hold to these points during coming week, except for statement regarding United States veto power if Secretary present.

On the overall effect of our decision, Mendes pointed out that this will be first time since the war that United States not represented at equal level with other powers in an important conference. He said he felt certain that Europe would interpret United States absence as first step in return to a policy of isolationism. This he felt, would have catastrophic effects not only in Far East, but also in Europe and would be great cold war victory for Communism. According to Mendes, we would in effect be saying "do your best, you have our sympathy, but result is no real concern to us".

I tried hard to dissuade Mendes from this viewpoint, but without much success. His statement regarding United States veto power if Secretary present, led me to point out that there must also be an agreed alternative if Conference failed. Mendes promptly replied that only alternative to cease-fire at Geneva would be internationalization of war with United States military forces coming promptly to assistance of French. This aspect of our talk being covered more fully in separate telegram, being repeated to Saigon.<sup>4</sup>

---

<sup>4</sup> Telegram 133, supra.

Finally, Mendes asked if there was anything he could do specifically to create a situation that would make it possible for Secretary to come to Geneva. He asked me to pass this question on to Washington. In this connection, he specifically questioned sixth paragraph of Secretary's letter, and said he knew of no French thinking along such lines, except possibly on subject of international supervision. He wondered where United States had got the ideas expressed in this paragraph.

While I was talking with Mendes, Johnson talked with Chauvel and showed him a copy of Secretary's letter. Chauvel showed Johnson a cable from Bonnet which indicated that Bonnet may have given Secretary the impression that French were considering retreating from Seven Point program.

Chauvel and Johnson joined us at end of our talk, and Johnson and I suggested that if Mendes developed any concrete ideas which would help meet United States fears, it would be helpful if he put them into a reply to Secretary's letter. While Mendes was non-committal as to a formal reply, I rather expect he will make one. In closing, Mendes said he would keep in close touch with Johnson. During talk, Mendes made it clear that while presence of Under Secretary at Geneva would be most helpful, he very much hoped that Secretary himself could come.

DILLON

JULY 12, 1954

611.51H/7-1254 : Telegram

The Secretary of State to the United States Delegation<sup>1</sup>

TOP SECRET

WASHINGTON, July 12, 1954—1: 18 p. m.

Tosec 532. Cambodian Ambassador called on Secretary July 10 stating he would depart twelfth to return Geneva. Before leaving he wished assure U.S. his government would continue maintain firm position against Communist efforts demilitarize or neutralize Cambodia. Assurances U.S. support would be most useful his government. A written reply to his Foreign Minister's letter to Heath June 23 would strengthen Cambodian resolve.

Secretary replied time did not permit written response prior Ambassador's departure. However he hoped progress made in U.S.-U.K. bilateral talks now going on would permit formal reply during course Geneva Conference. We are continuing work toward collective security and hoped Cambodia would be party to such arrangement. We hoped Cambodia would preserve right inherent in Cambodian independence.

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by Hoey of FE/PSA. Repeated to Saigon as telegram 138, to Paris as telegram 134, and to Phnom Penh as telegram 5.

make whatever arrangements it saw fit for outside military and economic aid. This is prerogative independent country.

Ambassador asked view U.S. as to possible Cambodian request for UN action should Geneva Conference fail. Secretary replied this hypothetical question but as matter principle U.S. would not oppose such move. However manner and timing such act should be carefully studied and we would be glad consult if circumstances led toward such development.

Ambassador asked about control organization. Secretary replied this is most difficult problem. Hard to see how membership Communist power on control organization could do anything but assist Communist cause. One thing Communists understand is military strength. That is why we are working toward collective security. Cambodia should be in position militarily oppose internal Communist efforts since such likely.

Ambassador thanked Secretary for helpful advice and concluded his government would continue stand firm against Communist effort subvert Cambodia. Secretary assured Ambassador firm U.S. support and suggested close liaison U.S. delegation Geneva.

DULLES

---

396.1 GE/7-1254 : Telegram

The Ambassador at Saigon (Heath) to the Department of State

SECRET

SAIGON, July 12, 1954—5 p. m.

150. Repeated information Paris 62, Geneva 29, Hanoi unnumbered. I conveyed to Diem this morning oral message from Secretary transmitted in Department's 121, July 10, sent Geneva Tosec 529.<sup>1</sup> He was appreciative of message but obviously disappointed it did not provide for France keeping up fight and American intervention in case Viet Minh refused his minimum requirements of retention of Hanoi-Haiphong parallelogram plus return to Vietnamese administration of south delta provinces, particularly bishoprics of Phat Diem and Bui Chu. Nevertheless, he was heartened to note that America and Britain were opposed to any restrictions on Vietnam's maintaining adequate forces for internal security, to import arms and to employ foreign advisers. He was however somewhat worried about phrase "adequate for internal security." In normal circumstances Vietnam could get along with a relatively small army to maintain internal order. Under present circumstances of Communist infiltration and threat, Vietnam would need a much larger, stronger army than she now possesses.

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated July 10, p. 1324.

He asked me urgently to have Secretary's message repeated by US Geneva delegation to Foreign Minister Do.<sup>2</sup> He said he could of course telegraph latter but he very much feared French had "broken" Vietnamese code. As regards scheme of trading "regroupment zones" for Viet Minh in south in return for Viet Minh agreement to allow Vietnamese Government to retain Hanoi and southern provinces in Tonkin delta, he said that on reconsideration only southern regroupment zones they could afford militarily, economically, and politically to leave to Viet Minh would be Plane des Jones and southwest corner of Vietnam around Ha Tien (cf. Embtel 115<sup>3</sup>). He had telegraphed his Foreign Minister in Geneva and urged him to be "persuasive" in convincing Mendes-France of necessity of retention of Hanoi and south Tonkin delta provinces.

In conclusion Diem said that his government was gravely handicapped by opposition of Binh Xuyen, Cao Daists, and Hoa Haos, but he believed he would be able to overcome or nullify this opposition. His government was in terribly difficult situation but he was convinced he would succeed.

HEATH

---

<sup>2</sup>The Department of State in telegram Tosec 533, July 12, instructed the U.S. Delegation to "convey orally to Foreign Minister Do gist Secretary's message to Prime Minister Diem." (396.1 GE/7-1254) The instruction was carried out on July 13; see telegram Secto 596, July 13, p. 1347.

<sup>3</sup>Telegram 115 from Saigon, July 9, not printed. (601.51G11/7-954)

---

396.1 GE/7-1254 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET

GENEVA, July 12, 1954.

Secto 591. Repeated information Paris 40, Saigon 25. Saigon pass Phnom Penh 1. Department pass Defense. Following points were made by member Cambodian military mission and delegate Son Sann in separate conversations with members USDel today:

1. Scheduled third meeting today of Cambodia-Viet Minh military cancelled by Viet Minh. Latter have not only declined to name alternative date, but in previous two meetings have refused to discuss seriously question of withdrawal Viet Minh troops. As result unproductive second meeting July 10, Cambodian delegation convinced Viet Minh avoiding agreement for moment and that some unspecified political contact may be necessary before progress can be made. In response to direct Cambodian demand for withdrawal invading forces. Viet Minh insist linking this question with demand that French cadres and experts with Cambodian Army be removed. Cambodians have replied that sovereign state has right to ask for and select origin of necessary advisers. Viet Minh continually seeking inject political questions which General Tioulong refuses to discuss.

2. Son Sann, who is leaving Geneva for Phnom Penh on July fourteenth, confirmed status military talks, and stated Cambodia had made all possible concessions to Viet Minh; it is now latter's move.

3. Son Sann raised question letter from Tep Phan (Secto 513<sup>1</sup>) asking US commitment for future assistance. Acknowledging preliminary oral reply to [of] Ambassador Heath (Secto 531<sup>2</sup>), and expressing appreciation that this a delicate subject, he stated Cambodian delegation would like written response. Department's views this matter requested.

4. Son Sann states Nong Kimny rejoining delegation thirteenth or fourteenth.

JOHNSON

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated June 23, p. 1231.

<sup>2</sup> Dated June 26, p. 1251.

---

396.1 GE/7-1254 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET

GENEVA, July 12, 1954—7 p. m.

Secto 592. Repeated information Paris 41, Saigon 26. Although we have not yet had full briefing from French, we gather following items regarding Mendes-France activities today:

(1) Mendes-France saw Dong yesterday and will see him again this afternoon. Yesterday's talk devoted to what Folin, Mendes-France's Chef de Cabinet, described as "exchange of charm" plus firm insistence by Mendes-France on Dong Hoi line. Although Dong attitude on this negative, he did not close door.

(2) Mendes-France told me that Menon had called on him. He had discussed various possibilities regarding demarcation lines. Mendes-France had insisted on necessity of eighteenth parallel.

(3) Mendes-France saw Vietnamese Foreign Minister Tran Van Do this afternoon.

USDel is giving dinner for Vietnamese delegation this evening and will report their reaction. I plan to discuss situation with Do along lines Secretary's message to Diem contained Tosec 529.<sup>1</sup>

JOHNSON

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated July 10, p. 1324.

396.1 GE/7-1254: Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET

GENEVA, July 12, 1954—9 p. m.

Secto 593. Repeated information Paris 42, Saigon 27. Saigon pass Vientiane 1. Department pass Defense. USDel member talked today with Kamphan Panya of Lao delegation. Kamphan says that French-Lao military talks with Viet Minh are at impasse over Viet Minh insistence Lao Government recognize and negotiate with Pathet Lao authorities, while Lao representatives refuse discuss this political question.

Kamphan feels that Viet Minh are in no hurry reach agreement at this point, but fears that some package deal between French and Communists may develop at last moment which may fall considerably short of firm Lao position taken to present. He asked what US position would be if Mendes-France presented Lao with arrangement of this sort, since Laos alone would not be in position resist. He was told US has and will continue to support Lao position at conference, but we consider unlikely French would take such step without consultation with Laos and US. Kamphan said Laos hopes to be covered and participate in eventual Southeast Asia security pact, and that traditional ties with Thailand lead country to seek friendships to West rather than East.

Returning to military aspects, Kamphan said French have suggested that Lao accept Viet Minh proposal Pathet Lao regroupment areas within Laos. Viet Minh have insisted that Vietnamese from Laos be permitted to remain in country, while expressing willingness to withdraw "volunteers" from outside.

Kamphan says Lao Government is divided on position to be taken in negotiations. Some support present position delegation that rebel ethnic Lao with Viet Minh may be reintegrated in national life; other members believe that "reconciliation" Pathet Lao and Royal Government is necessary. He indicated latter faction motivated by fear that stronger position will not be backed up by France and US.

JOHNSON

---

Editorial Note

In connection with Secretary of State Dulles' trip to Paris for meetings with Premier Mendès-France and Foreign Secretary Eden on July 13 and 14, the Department of State released the following press release (380) on July 12:

"I am leaving by plane for Paris, where I shall confer tomorrow afternoon and evening with the French Prime Minister, Mr. Mendès-

France, and with Mr. Eden, the British Foreign Secretary. This trip follows an exchange of views which took place at Geneva yesterday between the U.S. Ambassador to France, Mr. Dillon, and the French Prime Minister, and an invitation which I received this morning from the French Prime Minister. With President Eisenhower's warm approval I have gladly accepted this invitation.

"This trip will demonstrate anew the deep concern which the United States takes in developments in both Indochina and in Europe and our earnest desire to assure such coordinated action by France, Great Britain, and the United States as will best promote the attainment of those goals which we share together with free nations generally.

"As regards Indochina, while our long-term interests are identical, there is superimposed upon France and the Associated States a special set of primary interests due to the cruel and costly war now in its eighth year which the Communists have waged against France and Viet-Nam and latterly against Laos and Cambodia. The United States is not itself a belligerent in Indochina, and it is not clear that the interests which we hold in common with France and Viet-Nam, Laos, and Cambodia will necessarily be best served by identical action in all respects. Therefore, my trip to Paris is without prejudice to the previously expressed position that neither I nor Under Secretary Smith have at the present time any plans for going to Geneva, where the United States is presently maintaining contact with developments through Ambassador U. Alexis Johnson and his associates.

"My trip does show, I hope, that I wish to leave no stone unturned in seeking to find the course which will best serve the traditional friendship and cooperation of France and the United States and which will promote the goals of human justice, welfare, and dignity to which our nations have always been dedicated.

"We also attach great value to preserving the united front of France, Great Britain, and the United States which during this postwar period has so importantly served all three of us in our dealings with the Communists."

---

396.1 GE/7-1354 : Telegram

Johnson-Do Meeting, Geneva, July 12, Evening: The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET

GENEVA, July 13, 1954—2 p. m.

Secto 594. Repeated information Paris 43, Saigon 28. USDel at dinner last night entertained Vietnamese Foreign Minister Tran Van Do and his brother Tran Van Chuong, Minister of State, who also carries title Ambassador-at-large. According to Chuong, latter title is provisional to permit his visit Washington pending formalities obtaining agreement his formal assignment Ambassador to US. His intended departure for US tomorrow postponed when he learned of Secretary's trip, and he hopes to see Secretary in Paris today.

Tran Van Do is progressing toward acceptance necessity of settlement considerably short hopes and desires his government. We had factual discussion of problems involved in assigning zones, in which I emphasized such arrangement considered by us as temporary pending eventual reunification of country and also interest of US to continue economic and military support of Vietnam. He stressed, with strong and emotional support from Chuong, necessity retaining Hanoi-Haiphong enclave which is not only cradle of Vietnamese race but produces only Vietnamese willing actively to fight for independence.

Long discussion, principally by Chuong, took place on failure French to grant real independence to Vietnam.

Chuong claimed that even formal signature treaties independence and association insufficient without economic, cultural and other conventions. Unless this effected, neither French military effort nor US aid will give Vietnam Government needed popular support. In spite of repeated attempts to draw out both Do and Chuong on immediate problems of redressing political and military situation in Vietnam and program of new government for next few weeks, they insisted on returning to question of total independence. Customary indictment French record in Indochina, particularly since 1945, climaxed by Chuong statement that he would prefer living in days of undisguised colonialism to false independence of last few years.

In spite of tendency to indulge in overdrawn and strongly biased polemics, Chuong is engaging man with pleasant manner.

Do is seeing Pham Van Dong this morning; in my absence Bonsal will see Do this afternoon convey Secretary's message to Ngo Dinh Diem (Tosec 533<sup>1</sup>) and sound him out on results contact with Dong.

Chuong and Do say Bao Dai really ill with kidney complaint and will take cure at Vittel.

JOHNSON

---

<sup>1</sup> Not printed, but see footnote 2, p. 1340.

JULY 13, 1954

396.1 GE/7-1354 : Telegram

Johnson-Menon Meeting, Geneva, July 13, Morning: The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET

GENEVA, July 13, 1954—2 p. m.

Secto 595. Repeated information Paris 44, New Delhi 1. Krishna Menon asked to call on me this morning. He opened by asking how I felt the conference was going, to which I replied "badly". I said that I was personally discouraged at the lack of any progress. At various times senior Communist representative had indicated to French and others what appeared to be a certain amount of reasonableness and any action. When the technicians got together there had not been the slightest shift in Communist positions and no progress whatever had been made during the period following departure of ministers.

He said he understood French were insisting on a line in vicinity of 18th Parallel and the Communists were talking about a line in vicinity of 14th Parallel. I said I heard that the Communists had even mentioned something along 13th Parallel.

In reply to his question, I said that I was entirely satisfied that there was no room for compromise in French position on 18th Parallel. It was not bargaining position on part of French and they had our full support. He said if "all other things were settled" it should be possible to arrive at some compromise formula, to which I replied that this was not the type of situation which was susceptible to further compromise. The French position made military sense and I was satisfied they were not going to get themselves into position of splitting Parallels. He said that although we probably did not realize it, India had in past brought strong pressure upon Communists and that if he could be of help in future, he was willing to try; there being a vague implication that India might support present French position. He said he supposed "neutralization" of some of area between 18th and 14th Parallels might theoretically be desirable, but did not feel it would be practicable. In any event if this were done India would probably have to do the major part of it and had no desire take on such a job. I agreed that "neutral" administration of any considerable area of the country was impracticable.

In reply to his query as to what I thought were other major questions, I said Laos, Cambodia and control organization. He said there would be no problem about getting "every Viet Minh soldier" out of Laos and Cambodia, but some method must be found of "saving the Communists face" on resistance movements. I said this seemed ridiculous as every one knew that indigenous resistance movements were very small and unimportant, and it seemed to me just as logical to insist on recognizing the Ukrainian national movement in the Soviet Union as so-called resistance movements in Laos and Cambodia. He said Laos already expressed willingness to hold elections and felt something like this might take care of it. I pointed out that both Laos and Cambodia have in past, and I presumed would in the future, hold elections. He avoided discussion of control organization.

He talked at some length on Viet Minh, who while undoubtedly Communist, were also nationalists and seriously desired maintain relationship with French. He said that they would not be puppets of Moscow or the Chinese and that in normal course of events they would constitute a more or less "neutral" group such as India, although they would be oriented towards Communists while India is oriented toward west.

In course of some discussion of Chinese Communist attitudes, I took advantage of opportunity to outline my discussion with Chinese Communists with regard to Americans in China, lack of results thus far, and my discouragement with regard thereto in spite of gestures we had made. He said he thought Nehru may have said something about this to Chou En-lai, but did not follow up subject further.

He said he hoped see me when I returned from Paris<sup>1</sup> and left for an appointment with Molotov.

JOHNSON

---

<sup>1</sup> The U.S. Delegation reported to the Department of State in telegram 41 from Geneva, July 13, that Ambassador Johnson had "left Geneva for Paris 14:38 today on special plane with Mendes-France and Eden." (Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 299)

---

396.1 GE/7-1354 : Telegram

Bonsal-Boris Meeting, July 13, Afternoon: The United States Delegation to the Department of State

TOP SECRET      PRIORITY

GENEVA, July 13, 1954—9 p. m.

Secto 598. Repeated information Paris 48. Limit distribution. Eyes only for Dillon and Johnson. Boris, who is Mendes-France special assistant, this afternoon referred to French draft of proposed declaration to be issued by conference as part of its final proceedings (unofficial translation contained Secto 597<sup>1</sup>). Boris stated this draft had been or was being made available today to all conference delegates for their comments and suggestions. French consider it working document at this stage. Boris expressed regret at delay in getting us copy.

Boris summarized briefly Mendes-France's recent conversation with Dong. He said that Dong had agreed that date of elections could not be fixed at this time but that it should be result of negotiations between State of Vietnam and Democratic Republic of Vietnam at later date. Boris described this as important achievement "since it is to our interest to delay elections as long as possible".

On matter of demarcation line, Boris stated that Dong today made a concession in sense of moving line up from 13th to 14th parallel. Concession which presumably will be described in detail by Mendes-France to Secretary is regarded as wholly insufficient and Dong has been so informed. Mendes-France has reiterated importance of 18th parallel (Dong Hoi).

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated July 13, p. 1355.

Boris intimated that current French thinking is to effect there should be no enclaves on either side of demarcation line. A proposal to preserve Haiphong and coal mines was examined by French military experts and rejected.

Boris stated that Chou En-lai in his recent talk with Mendes-France indicated desire to be helpful but spoke in very general terms. On 2 occasions during conversation, Chou En-lai attacked US attitude and influence. According to Boris, Mendes-France cut him off short both times, stressing Franco-American solidarity.

BONSAL

---

396.1 GE/7-1354 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET

GENEVA, July 13, 1954—8 p. m.

Secto 596. Repeated information Paris 46, Saigon 29. Tosec 533.<sup>1</sup> I conveyed substance Secretary's message to Diem to Tran Van Do. He expressed appreciation. I also informed French here that I had done so in general terms. Boris informs me Chauvel had long talk with Do today and French now feel Do up to date regarding negotiations between French and Viet Minh.

In reply to question on results his talks this morning with Pham Van Dong, Do stated little accomplished from viewpoint progress or determining exactly what Viet Minh envisage as terms of agreement. He described at some length atmosphere of talk which he said was on basis of equals and in serious vein. He believes Viet Minh worried over genuine nationalist character Ngo Dinh Diem Government and its potential popular appeal. He also thinks Viet Minh extremely worried by thought of US intervention and concerned that Diem backed by US.

Do agreed with thought that assets our side this juncture include Vietnamese political leadership, Vietnamese military potential and French Union Expeditionary Corps and that misunderstandings and bickerings must be avoided at this serious juncture if our side is to get best results out of these assets and to induce maximum possible free world support and confidence. He talked moderately and with understanding of probability of settlement which would be difficult but unavoidable. I had distinct impression that he is beginning to face situation with considerable realism and courage.

BONSAL

---

<sup>1</sup> See footnote 2, p. 1340.

Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 324

*Memorandum of Conversation, by the Head of the United States
Delegation (Johnson)*<sup>1</sup>

SECRET

PARIS, July 13, 1954—8:30 p. m.

Participants:

The Secretary	Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden
Ambassador Dillon	Sir Harold Caccia
Mr. MacArthur	Sir Gladwyn Jebb
Mr. Phleger	Sir Anthony Rumbold
Ambassador Johnson
Prime Minister Mendes-France
M. Latournelle
M. Parodi
M. de Folin

Following dinner Mendes-France explained to Eden and the Secretary present state of negotiations with respect to regroupment areas in Vietnam. He had a map showing the various proposals and counter-proposals in detail and the areas occupied by the French and the Vietminh respectively. He said the original French proposal from which they had not deviated was for a line along a defensive ridge somewhat north of Donghoi in the vicinity of the 18th parallel (all parallels in accordance US system). He said this line was somewhat north of the Donghoi Thakhek line set forth in the seven points of the US-UK memorandum.<sup>2</sup> He said the original Vietminh proposal was for somewhat "S" shaped line in the vicinity of the 13th parallel. They had then moved to a line in the vicinity of the 14th parallel.

Yesterday after they had heard the Secretary was meeting with Mendes-France and Eden in Paris, Dong had made a proposal to Mendes roughly along the 16th parallel, the line being just to the south of the French air and naval base at Tourane. Mendes ascribed this relatively major shift in the Vietminh position as attributable to Vietminh knowledge of the Secretary's meeting with himself and Eden. Mendes stated that French had flatly rejected this proposal and could never agree to Vietminh control of the naval and air base at Tourane, the important center of Hue and the vital road to Laos. He said that with

<sup>1</sup> This meeting took place at the Hotel Matignon, Paris, at 8:30 p. m.

For background information on the circumstances of the Secretary's trip to Paris and his discussions with Mendès-France and Eden see the entry from James Hagerly's diary, July 11, p. 1333.

The meeting described here was preceded by a conversation between Secretary Dulles and Premier Mendès-France from 7:30 to 8:30 at the residence of Ambassador Dillon. For a text of this discussion, which dealt largely with European matters, see volume VI.

<sup>2</sup> Text of the memorandum was contained in telegram 4853 to Paris, June 28, p. 1256.

respect to the road to Laos Molotov had suggested that the French could have the right of access to Laos along the road, apparently something along the lines of the corridor to Berlin. Mendes said that the road was narrow, mountainous, with many culverts and bridges and that French must have full control of the area both sides of the road, as Communist performance on any corridor arrangement could not be anticipated and stray individuals could blow bridges and culverts making the road unuseable.

He indicated that the French would be prepared to drop their line some small distance south, possibly to the Donghoi Thakhek line or slightly south thereof.

The French map had an enclave drawn around the Haiphong area but there was no discussion of this.

With respect to Laos, Mendes-France stated that Communists now admitted to the existence of Vietminh forces which would be withdrawn, but had insisted upon some temporary regroupment areas for the indigenous resistance forces pending their integration into Laotian forces. He said the Communists recognized the unity of Laos under its present government. He stated that the indigenous resistance forces were unimportant, totalling about 25 hundred men and that the Laotians were confident they could handle this problem. However, on the military level the Vietminh had come forth with a regroupment proposal for a line running the entire length of Laos connecting up with their original ("S" shaped) 13th parallel line in Vietnam. He said that the French military experts had shown Vietminh proposal to the Soviet military experts and the latter had characterized it as absurd. Mendes appeared to feel there was no serious problem with respect to Laos, except that of the two French bases which he said consisted of small air strips, some stores of ammunition garrisons totalling about 2000 French Union forces. He said the bases were entirely without military interest to the French and from the French standpoint they had no desire to maintain them. However, Laotians placed high value on them and had asked they be retained and he thought the Laotians would be able to work out something on this with the Vietminh.

Mendes said that Communists had recognized and seemed willing to agree to French military instructors and technical assistance to the armed forces of Laos and Cambodia as opposed to French garrisons being stationed there. He said the Communists were entirely unwilling to see any US military personnel stationed there in any capacity whatever and were extremely sensitive on the subject of US bases in those countries. The Secretary disclaimed any intention or desire for the US to establish military bases of any kind in those countries and stressed the importance of being able to assist those countries to maintain adequate defense forces and contribute to their economic development. In view of the traditional Communist charge that US bases were being established wherever we have had even an economic aid program, and the US legislative requirement that US personnel have some role in the administration of US economic aid, he expressed the fear that what the Communists were really attempting to do was to keep all US personnel, both civilian and military, out of these areas. He made it clear that the US would be willing to assist these countries but we were not willing or able to simply turn money over to them to spend as they saw fit.

Mendes-France and Eden both indicated that their understanding was that the Communists were opposing US military bases in the traditional sense of the term. The Secretary expressed the strong view that it was of vital importance not to agree to any terms which would inhibit the ability of Laos and Cambodia and retained Vietnam to obtain economic and military assistance from the free world.

There was no specific discussion of Cambodia. Mendes-France apparently did not take much interest in Cambodia. He said they had 99.5% full independence and they apparently wanted to stay in the French Union and that was all right with him.

In response to the Secretary's questions concerning the Communist position on political settlement, Mendes stated that Dong had first insisted on elections within six months after the cessation of hostilities and had also insisted that French troops must be evacuated before the holding of elections. Mendes-France stated that he had pointed out the inconsistency of this position and that Dong had now agreed that the question of the date for elections should be left for determination by the two governments in Vietnam. He said Dong was preparing a draft of some sort of general declaration in this regard. He said that the Communists were entirely willing to see Vietnam remain in the French Union and the Secretary pointed out that Communists would probably be very glad to see three Communist members in the French Union. Mendes replied that there was no danger of three, only of one, i.e. Vietnam and that he was well aware of this possibility and was considering handling it by some statement to the effect that the conditions for membership of a united Vietnam in the French Union would be determined by subsequent agreement.

There was a brief discussion about the International Control Commission for Indochina being discussed at Geneva. Mendes-France said he might eventually have to accept a Communist member on such a commission but he would not agree to the Communists having veto power.

Following presentation by Mendes, the Secretary went into a detailed, careful and reasoned exposition of his viewpoint on US representation at Geneva. He said that it was clear that the main Soviet Communist objective was Europe and that if they could disrupt allied unity with respect to Europe, preventing ratification of EDC and reconciliation between France and Germany, the major objective would be accomplished. For the USSR, the Far East was essentially a secondary objective, but they would exploit the situation in the Far East to the maximum so as to prevent allied unity, particularly so as to cause a split between the US and France. The US and France were united by deep ties of common interest and sentiment and he desired to do everything possible to maintain those ties and prevent disunity developing. His interest was in doing whatever was best to achieve this objective.

With respect to Geneva he was very concerned over the situation if there was high level representation there. There were two major possibilities.

1. The Communists would make proposals conditional upon US association and guarantee in such a form that they knew could not be accepted by the US. The Communists probably knew very well just how far the US was able to go. If, as would be necessary, the US refused to associate itself with and did not approve such guarantees, in the eyes of French public opinion US would be responsible for failure of France to achieve peace in Indochina. This would place an intolerable strain upon US-French relations.

2. On the other hand, the French might well come to the point that they would say they did not feel they could resist making a poor settlement with the Communists unless the US would join with them in the fight on brief notice if they turned down the Communist terms. The US several months ago had stated the conditions under which it would join in action to defend Indochina on the basis of united action. Since then, the military situation had deteriorated very substantially, and the conditions under which we were then willing to join in collective action were no longer the same. If the French, as a condition for not making a bad agreement at Geneva, should ask us to give them a commitment to join with them in Indochina in a matter of days, this we would not be able to do. Neither the Secretary nor the President could make such a commitment. Whereas three months ago he was confident that Congressional approval for military action in Indochina could have been obtained under the conditions set forth to the French, he was not confident that this now could be done. If there were high level representation at Geneva, this problem would be much more acute, and therefore after long and careful thought and full discussion with the President, the conclusion had been reached that the long-term interests of US-French relations would be best served by neither the Secretary nor the Under Secretary returning to Geneva.

Mendes-France replied that as the US was in any event represented at Geneva, the problems mentioned by the Secretary were not avoided. The US could still be faced with the same dilemmas. He felt very strongly that the Communists feared that the Secretary would come to Geneva and that his failure to come would be interpreted by the Communists as indicating a rift in allied relationships which could be exploited by them. The Secretary's presence would without question assure that the Communists would agree to much more reasonable terms than if he were absent. Eden strongly supported Mendes-France. Eden said that he felt it would be possible to obtain a settlement within the framework of the seven points but that it would be a very tough negotiation, the balance might well be on a knife-edge. The Secretary's or Under Secretary's presence could well be the factor which would tip the balance in favor of our side.

The Secretary then explained carefully against the background of US public opinion and political situation the difficulties of the US Government associating itself with any agreement which would appear to guarantee to the Communists the fruits of their aggression. He said that Vietnam, Laos, and Cambodia, were clearly not going to be happy with any settlement the French would be able to reach and were already asking for our help. Mendes replied that these countries were strongly divided and that while asking for our help they were also all talking with Dong in Geneva. The Secretary earnestly explained that we wanted to help any way we could, that the US did not want to see the war continue in Indochina. While if the war did continue it could well turn into a situation that would engulf all of our countries in war, from a military standpoint we felt that commitment of a major part of our own and our allies' military force to combat the "third team" of the Communists, would be a colossal military error. Whereas three months ago it appeared the situation might have been retrieved with the addition of some naval and air power together with a small commitment of ground forces, that time had now passed. We full well realize the realities of the situation which the French face. We will not reproach them for what they find it necessary to do. We recognize their primary responsibility. However, the US Government could not be in a position of seeming to approve the sale of Cambodia, Laos, and Vietnam into Communist captivity. The memories of Yalta in the United States were very fresh. The US Government cannot be associated with a settlement which would be portrayed in the US as a second Yalta. The very fact that the US had agreed even to the holding of the Geneva Conference had been unreasonably portrayed as a major diplomatic defeat for the US and the fact that the President and the Secretary even agreed to the Conference has been a political liability.

Mr. Eden expressed the view that the important thing was to get the best possible settlement, then make it clear that if the Communists broke it, everybody would be lined up against them. He hoped that not only the US, UK, and France would be able to take such a position together, but that it would be possible to obtain wide agreement thereon in South Asia. This would be a very important gain. The Secretary again expressed the view that if the Communists maneuver the situation so that it appears that the US is the only obstacle to a settlement, it would so strain relations between the allies that EDC would be killed and the Communists would accomplish their major objective in Europe. He did not want to expose himself to that risk. He said that he was prepared to say publicly and in writing that he was 100% behind the present French demands in Indochina, and wondered if this might help the French. Mendes-France again reiterated that the risks for the US are exactly the same whether high-level representation is present or not at Geneva and without the Secretary's presence the efficacy of US support of France is not the same.

Mendes-France then referred to the seven points, stating that he will do all he can to obtain a settlement within their framework, that if the Secretary were there he could help in this regard. If he is not there, he, Mendes-France, is satisfied the result would not be as good and his absence would weaken the French. The Secretary replied that the real question is what we do if Geneva fails. Perhaps the French negotiating position would be strengthened if it could portray to the Communists the US as the "wicked partner" in the background. Eden reacted very strongly to this, saying that he under no circumstances would be prepared to portray the US to the Communists as the "bogeyman", the UK, US, and France are allies and he simply would not place himself in such a position. The Secretary suggested that this aspect might be implicit rather than explicit, to which Eden replied that Communists take advantage of every possible opportunity to try to get the British to say that the US is what is preventing peace, that the US is the only country that does not want peace. He absolutely refuses to be trapped into any such statement because he knows it is not true.

Mendes-France then stated that if France desired to obtain peace at any price, it would be much easier to do if the US were not there. However, this was most emphatically not the French position. France will do its best to get a settlement within the framework of the seven points, but if the US is not there at a high level, this will be much more difficult. There are definite limits beyond which France will not go. If there is no agreement by July 20, the war will continue, with intensification. The Communists well know that France will send reinforcements. The danger of the enlargement of the war will be great. However, reinforcements cannot arrive there until September. Therefore, he is convinced that if there is no settlement by July 20 the Vietminh will immediately launch a big offensive. It will be impossible to hold Hanoi. Haiphong can be held only if there is naval and air support. There might be a question of whether the US could help if that situation arises. He wants to do all possible to obtain such a settlement by obtaining a cease-fire and obtaining it on the best possible terms. The best terms can be assured if the Secretary is there.

Mendes-France said that if there were big differences between the US and France, he could understand the US not being there, but this was not the case. The Secretary replied that the French might have to give in to very onerous Communist terms and he would fully understand that it might well be necessary for France to make peace terms which the US could not approve. He would not want to place himself in the position of having publicly to denounce the terms. He would not want France to say that it will stand on the seven points only if the US will fight as an alternative. Mendes-France replied that he would not ask this "for the time being" and said that if France does not stick to the substance of the seven points whether the Secretary is in Geneva or Washington, he would probably have to disavow the settlement, and he understood this fact. He was not prepared to say that on some points of detail the present French position might not compromise but he had no thought of compromise of any of the points on which, in the Secretary's letter to him of July 11th,<sup>3</sup> the Secretary indicated he understood the French positions were shifting. He said with great earnestness that if a US Minister comes to Geneva and France signs something which the US feels it necessary to disavow, he would take the responsibility. He then solemnly said that in his official capacity "I ask you to come and help us." The Secretary stated that he fully appreciated the weight of the Prime Minister's request, he would defer his reply.

There was then some discussion of the type of statement the US could make with regard to any settlement at Geneva within the framework of the seven points, in which Mendes-France said that all France asked was that the US make a unilateral statement that it will take action if the Communists break any settlement that is reached. Mendes-France suggested something along the lines that the US would "view with grave concern any action from any country which will endanger the maintenance of peace in Indochina". The Secretary said that a unilateral declaration something along these lines would present no problem.

---

<sup>3</sup>Text of this message was in telegram 127 to Paris, July 10, p. 1330.

At the close (approximately 12:30 a. m.) the Secretary expressed his great appreciation for such a frank talk, which he felt was long overdue, and it was agreed that another meeting would be held July 14 at 11:30 a. m. at the Quai d'Orsay.

---

396.1 GE/7-1354 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

TOP SECRET

NIACT

GENEVA, July 13, 1954—9 p. m.

Secto 597. Sent Paris niact 47. Following is unofficial translation of draft declaration prepared by French delegation and circulated informally today and yesterday to other delegations for their comments and suggestions (Secto 598<sup>1</sup>). Declaration would be issued by conference as part of its final proceedings.

"The conference takes note of the agreements which end the hostilities in Cambodia, Laos, and Vietnam and which organize the international control of the implementation of the provisions of these agreements.

"The conference is happy to see peace reestablished in Cambodia and Laos, which countries having recovered their territorial integrity henceforth will be able to assume, without hinderance, in full independence and sovereignty, their role in the peaceful community of nations.

"The conference notes the statements made by the Governments of Cambodia and Laos concerning their intention to proceed to free general elections with a secret ballot and to adopt measures permitting all citizens to take their place in the national community. The conference also takes note of the statements of these governments by which they undertake to limit their armed forces strictly to the level required by the needs of the defense of their territory.

"The conference declares that the agreement concerning Vietnam has as its essential goal the settlement of military questions in order to put an end to hostilities but does not prejudge the solution of other problems related to the definitive restoration of peace in Vietnam.

"The conference declares that a settlement of these problems must be made on the basis of respect for the principles of independence of the unity and of the territorial integrity of Vietnam. This settlement will have to permit the Vietnamese people to enjoy the fundamental liberties guaranteed by democratic institutions formed following free elections by secret ballot which will take place under international control, when, in the opinion of the competent representative authorities, the restoration of peace in the country has made sufficient progress and all the necessary conditions will be present in order to permit free expression of the national will. The provisions of the agreements on the cessation of hostilities which are meant to assure the protection of persons and of possessions will have to be applied in the most strict manner and particularly to permit each person, in Vietnam, to decide freely the zone in which he wishes to live.

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated July 13, p. 1346.

"In their relations with Cambodia, Laos, and Vietnam, each member of the Geneva conference undertakes to respect the independence, the unity, and the integrity of the states concerned and to refrain from any interference in their internal affairs.

"The conference takes note of the statements by the Government of the French Republic on its resolve to conform to the decisions of the representative authorities in the three states concerning the presence of its troops in the territory of these states.

"The members of the conference agree to consult among themselves on any question which is submitted to them by the International Control Commissions in order to study the measures which might appear necessary to assure respect for the agreements on cessation of hostilities in Indochina."

BONSAL

---

396.1 GE/7-1354 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET      PRIORITY

GENEVA, July 13, 1954—10 p. m.

Secto 599. Repeated information priority Paris 49. French delegate today furnished me with draft of clause to be included in agreement on cessation of hostilities in Vietnam covering guarantees for individuals and communities against political reprisals, the right of choice for civilian populations and the protection of foreign property and persons. This draft has not yet been cleared by Foreign Office legal expert Gros but it has been shown to Viet Minh though text not supplied them. Viet Minh reaction was that some such clause might be included in agreement on cessation of hostilities but suggestion was made that there also be included a clause desired by the Viet Minh and providing for free exchange of goods between proposed regrouping zones. (According to French delegate, this clause would be of economic importance to Viet Minh.)

Unofficial translation follows:

"The two sides conscious of the need for sparing the populations concerned further trials, will each of them take the necessary measures so that, in the areas where the regroupings contemplated by this agreement will take place,

(A) There will be assured the protection and the safety of French and foreign nationals (ressortissants) residing in these areas as well as of Vietnamese who have collaborated with the other parties and in order that these different categories of citizens may be effectively guaranteed against any reprisals, any arbitrary political and administrative action and any discriminatory measures.

(B) That a right of choice be recognized, during a certain period, to all Vietnamese desiring to fix their domicile in another region of Vietnam and that their transfer there be freely assured.

(C) That all facilities be granted to Frenchmen and to foreigners desiring to break up their present establishment or temporarily to quit the region of Vietnam where they reside."

French delegate would welcome our comments on above working text.

BONSAI

396.1 GE/7-1354 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET      PRIORITY

GENEVA, July 13, 1954—10 p. m.

Secto 600. Repeated information Paris 50. Attention Ambassador Johnson. Offroy and Cheysson, French delegate, this evening gave me French working paper re international control in Laos and Cambodia to supplement paper recently furnished us on Vietnam (Secto 575<sup>1</sup>) unofficial translation and comments will be furnished shortly.

Offroy also supplied us with outline of agreements for cessation of hostilities in Vietnam, Cambodia and Laos. These agreements are to be between military commands of Viet Minh on one hand in all three countries, and on other hand Franco-Vietnamese command, Cambodian command and Franco-Laotian command respectively. (There is apparently hope that this will make things easier for Vietnamese Government). The outline of the agreement for the cessation of hostilities in Vietnam may be translated as follows:

"First; the cease-fire:

Disengagement of Franco-Vietnamese and Viet Minh units and minor regroupings to follow the cease-fire.

This is to be signed as soon as completed, to be published at once, and to be placed in effect (under the control of the joint commission.)

Second; supplementary provisions:

A. Military provisions.

Definition of regrouping zones and of demilitarized sectors.

Regrouping of the armed forces of the two sides in accordance with a precise plan of transfers.

Nonreinforcing of the potential of the opposing forces liberation of prisoners and civilian internees.

Air and sea communications. (Circulation)

B. Political and administrative provisions.

Administration of the regrouping zones

Conditions (modalities) of the transfer of zones

<sup>1</sup> Dated July 8, p. 1305.

Guarantee for individuals and communities against political reprisal

Right of option for civilian populations

Movement of populations which wish to take refuge with the adverse side

Protection of property and persons

C. Provisions re the control of the agreements. (See working paper of July 7.)”

Working paper of July 7 is that contained in Secto 575.

It will be noted that this outline apparently provides for cease-fire prior to availability on spot of international control mechanism. With regard to administration of territories to be transferred, Cheysson tells me French have accepted Viet Minh proposal of May 25 to effect that “a territory depending from one party, which is transferred to the other party following the plan of delimitation of zones, shall continue to be administered by the first party until the day when all of its troops which are to be transferred shall have left the territory in order to free the zone for the other party.”

Outline for Cambodia and Laos is similar except that provisions are made for the evacuation of foreign troops rather than regrouping and for the movement of populations which desire to seek refuge in Vietnam. In the case of Laos, French Union forces are to withdraw to specified installations. In addition it is contemplated that the Laotian and Cambodian Governments will make declarations re the importation of war material needed for self-defense purposes and re French instructors and technicians.

It is my understanding that neither of these outlines have as yet been distributed to other delegations, although I am not certain on this point.

USDel will make comments as soon as possible following further discussion with French Del. Meanwhile would welcome urgent comments from recipients this message.

BONSAL

JULY 14, 1954

396.1 GE/7-1454 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET PRIORITY

GENEVA, July 14, 1954—11 a. m.

Secto 601. Repeated information Paris 52, priority Saigon 31. Re Secto 599, repeated information Paris 49, Saigon 30<sup>1</sup> concerning Viet Minh proposal that agreement on cessation of hostilities include clause providing for free exchange of goods between regrouping zones, delegation agrees with French judgment that this clause would be of economic importance to Viet Minh. Also, delegation believes clause would probably work to political advantage of Viet Minh through facilitating Communist infiltration and subversion in non-Communist zones.

<sup>1</sup> Dated July 13, p. 1356.

Request comments Saigon and guidance Department concerning attitude delegation should adopt toward Viet Minh proposal.<sup>2</sup>

BONSAL

---

<sup>2</sup> The Department's reply was contained in telegram Tosec 550, July 16, p. 1393.

The Embassy at Saigon responded in telegram 194 to the Department (repeated to Geneva as telegram 38), July 15, that it concurred in the "delegation's estimate as expressed latter telegram [Secto 601]. However, in a country such as this where corruption and contraband are almost of a professional standard, we believe that too much importance should not be attached to wording of the agreement since ways in any event will be found by Viet Minh and interested persons on Vietnamese side to evade the engagement." (396.1 GE/7-1554) For additional comments on this question, see telegram 218 from Saigon, July 17, p. 1423.

---

Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 324

*Memorandum of Conversation, by the Head of the United States
Delegation (Johnson)*<sup>1</sup>

SECRET

PARIS, July 14, 1954.

Participants:

The Secretary	M. Mendes-France
Ambassador Dillon	M. Parodi
Mr. MacArthur	M. Guerin de Beaumont
Mr. Phleger	M. Latournelle
Mr. McCardle	M. de Margerie
Ambassador Johnson	M. Folin
Mr. Eden
Sir Harold Caccia
Sir Gladwyn Jebb
Sir Anthony Rumbold

The meeting was very informal, with at times discussions going on between the Secretary and Mendes-France, the Secretary and Eden, and all three.

The Secretary first discussed with Mendes-France a letter to be addressed by Mendes-France to the Secretary confirming the discussions and undertakings that had been reached. Mendes-France agreed with the conclusion of a draft presented by the Secretary but indicated that he desired more fully to include the French position.<sup>2</sup>

---

<sup>1</sup> This meeting took place at the Quai d'Orsay from 11:30 a. m. to 1:30 p. m.

There was also a discussion of a joint French-US position paper of which the Secretary showed Mendes-France a draft.<sup>3</sup> The discussion of this paper centered principally around respective positions with regard to bringing the matter of Indochina to the UN if there was no agreement at Geneva, and French intentions and policies concerning the independence of the Associated States. During this discussion the Secretary pointed out the dilemma with which France faced any US efforts to be of assistance. On the one hand, the French claimed that Indochina was an internal affair which could not be brought before the UN, and on the other hand, wanted assistance from the outside. The US could not be in the position of assisting a French colonial war in Indochina. Mendes-France replied that the Indochina affair was at the beginning a colonial war, but outside influences were more and more coming into the situation and it was no longer an entirely internal affair. However, with respect to bringing the matter to the UN, France had to consider the situation if trouble broke out in another French territory and the precedent that would be established if the matter of Indochina were brought to the UN.

With respect to the American draft of the position paper, to the effect that France reaffirms its intention to reaffirm genuine independence to the Associated States and would not forcibly prevent any of the States from withdrawing from the French Union, Mendes stated that France had many times expressed its intention with respect to the independence of the Associated States, and in addition there was no problem with respect to Laos and Cambodia with which treaties were completed and in effect.

With respect to forcibly preventing their withdrawal, he pointed out the constitution of the French Union did not make any positive provision for secession therefrom, and it was therefore beyond his constitutional power to make any such statement.

Mr. Eden stated that he thought the question of Vietnamese independence was very fundamental in the present situation and the Vietnamese had said to him that unless the question of their independence was resolved, there would be no hope of holding any part of retained Vietnam. The Secretary also expressed the view that there was no chance of holding Vietnam unless they were granted real independence. Mendes-France said the question is what is to be done if there is a cease-fire. Neither the separate authorities in the north nor in the south would have the right to speak in the name of all the country.

<sup>2</sup> The U.S. draft has not been located; for the text of the letter from Mendès-France to Dulles, July 14, see p. 1365.

<sup>3</sup> The U.S. draft has not been located; for the final approved text of the U.S.-France position paper, July 14, see p. 1363.

Only a future unified government would be able to do that. However, he fully recognized the importance of developing a strong nationalist government in the south of Vietnam even if in the beginning this gives rise to difficulties for France.

Mendes said he fully realized the urgency of doing something in this regard both in the civilian and military fields and that France must take political and psychological measures which will give the Vietnamese in the retained portion of Vietnam prestige and popularity and they would also need outside aid. It was extremely important that Vietnamese in this area be able to present themselves as representing a truly national movement.

It was decided that a working group would redraft the proposed letter and the joint position paper.

There was then discussion regarding whether General Smith's health would permit his presiding at Geneva.<sup>4</sup> However, Mendes expressed the view that the important thing was not the exact date General Smith was able to arrive, but that they be able now to say that he was coming. The Secretary said that if General Smith was not able to come, it might be possible for him to return for a two or three-day period, but he explained that the situation in Congress with national and foreign aid and other legislation of importance to the area made it imperative that he be in Washington and also that he fully explain to Congressional leaders the results of the conversations held here.

Mendes said that the cease-fire act "has to be done by Tuesday".<sup>5</sup> That is when the date upon which the cease-fire was to go into effect must be published. After that the Conference can go on as long as it likes with regard to technical matters. If he deviates in any way from his determination that this be done by Tuesday, it will mean that the French will be involved in another Panmunjom. The Secretary pointed out that "technical matters" could be of very great importance.

The discussion was recessed until 3 p. m.<sup>6</sup>

---

<sup>4</sup> See the editorial note, p. 1381.

<sup>5</sup> July 20.

<sup>6</sup> Following this meeting, Secretary Dulles called President Eisenhower to inform him that agreements had been reached which would require Under Secretary Smith to return to Geneva. The President gave his approval. (Eisenhower Library, Eisenhower papers, Whitman file)

---

751G.00/7-1454

Memorandum of Conversation, by the Secretary of State

SECRET

PARIS, July 14, 1954.

During the course of the discussions at the Embassy this afternoon, Ambassador Johnson suggested to Secretary Dulles that he felt that Mr. Mendes-France and Mr. Eden might not fully comprehend the position of the US with reference to "guaranteeing" a settlement which would turn over much of Vietnam to the Communists. Thereupon, Secretary Dulles drew Mr. Mendes-France and Mr. Eden aside with him and said he wished to make it crystal clear that the US could never join in any guarantee to the Communists of the fruits of their aggression. The US did accept it as a fact that certain people became the victims of Communist aggression, and it was not prepared itself to go to war or to encourage others to go to war to rectify the situation. However, this was not the same as to say the US would become an ally of the Communists if there were a breach of the agreement by non-Communists.

It would be compatible with the foregoing that the US should make a unilateral declaration to the effect that in accordance with its obligations under the UN Charter, it would not resort to force to upset an agreement if it were arrived at, and it would seek to bring others to act correspondingly. Also the US could agree with others to react with force to Communist aggression in violation of the agreement. This, however, would have to be conditional upon Senate ratification of the treaty and/or Congressional approval of belligerency.

Mr. Mendes-France and Mr. Eden expressed their understanding of the US position. Mr. Eden stated that he hoped that the UK and others, including many South Asian countries, would be able to associate themselves with a declaration by the US against the use of force to overturn the Geneva agreements.

Ambassador Johnson and Mr. MacArthur were present during the above conversation.

[Annex]

PARIS TALKS, JULY 13-14, 1954

COMMUNIQUÉ

We have had intimate and frank discussions. These have resulted in a clear understanding of our respective positions in relation to Indochina.

The United States Secretary of State, Mr. John Foster Dulles, explained fully the attitude of his Government toward the Indochinese phase of the Geneva Conference and the limitations which that government desired to observe as not itself having a primary responsibility in the Indochina war.

The French Premier and Foreign Minister, M. Pierre Mendes-France, expressed the view with which Mr. Anthony Eden, the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs for the United Kingdom, associated himself, that it would nevertheless serve the interests of France and of the Associated States, and of the peace and freedom of the area, if the United States, without departing from the principles which Mr. Dulles expressed, were once again to be represented at Geneva at the ministerial level.

Accordingly, President Eisenhower and Secretary Dulles are requesting the United States Under Secretary of State, General Walter Bedell Smith, to return to Geneva at an early date.

---

751G.00/7-1454

France-United States Position Paper<sup>1</sup>

CLASSIFIED

1. France and the Associated States of Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia are recognized to be those which, on the non-Communist side, are primarily interested in the Indochina phase of the Geneva Conference.

The United States is interested primarily as a friendly nation which desires to assist, where desired, in arriving at a just settlement, but it will not seek, or be expected, to impose its views in any way upon those primarily interested.

2. The attached seven points constitute a result which France believes to be obtainable by negotiation at Geneva and which would be acceptable to France and, France believes, to the Associated States. The United States, while recognizing the right of those primarily interested to accept different terms, will itself be prepared to respect terms conforming to the attached. The United States will not be asked or expected by France to respect terms which in its opinion differ materially from the attached, and it may publicly disassociate itself from such differing terms.

3. If the settlement is one which the United States is prepared to "respect" its position will be expressed unilaterally or in association only with non-Communist states in terms which apply to the situation the principles of non-use of forces which are embodied in Article 2(4) and (6) of the Charter of the United Nations.

4. The United States is prepared to seek, with other interested nations, a collective defense association designed to preserve, against direct and indirect aggression, the integrity of the non-Communist areas of Southeast Asia following any settlement.

---

<sup>1</sup> This paper was approved by Secretary Dulles and Premier Mendès-France at Paris on July 14. The text was transmitted to Washington in telegram 179 from Paris, July 14. (751G.00/7-1454)

5. If there is no settlement, the United States and French governments will consult together on the measures to be taken. This will not preclude the United States, if it so desires, bringing the matter before the United Nations as involving a threat to peace as dealt with by Chapter VII of the Charter of the United Nations.

6. France reaffirms the principle of independence for the Associated States in equal and voluntary association as members of the French Union.

JULY 14, 1954.

MENDES-FRANCE

JOHN FOSTER DULLES

Annex

MEMORANDUM OF POINTS REFERRED TO IN PARAGRAPH 2 OF THE FRANCE-UNITED STATES POSITION PAPER

An agreement which :

1. preserves the integrity and independence of Laos and Cambodia and assures the withdrawal of Vietminh forces therefrom ;

2. in connection with the line of military demarcation, preserves at least the southern half of Vietnam and if possible an enclave in the Delta ; in this connection we would be unwilling to see the line of division of responsibility drawn further south than a line running generally west from Dong Hoi ;

3. does not impose on Laos, Cambodia or retained Vietnam any restrictions materially impairing their capacity to maintain stable non-Communist regimes ; and especially restrictions impairing their right to maintain adequate forces for internal security, to import arms and to employ foreign advisers ;

4. does not contain political provisions which would risk loss of the retained area to Communist control ;

5. does not exclude the possibility of the ultimate unification of the Vietnam by peaceful means ;

6. provides for the peaceful and humane transfer, under international supervision, of those people desiring to be moved from one zone to another of Vietnam ; and

7. provides effective machinery for international supervision of the agreement.

JULY 14, 1954.

JOHN FOSTER DULLES

MENDES-FRANCE

Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 324

The French Prime Minister (Mendès-France) to the Secretary of State<sup>1</sup>

[PARIS,] July 14, 1954.

DEAR MR. SECRETARY: Following our frank and friendly conversation of last evening,<sup>2</sup> I believe I understand fully the position of the United States with regard to the negotiations at Geneva concerning Indochina.

If I interpret your views correctly, you recognize fully the primary right of France, the Associated States of Vietnam, Laos, and Cambodia, to decide the conditions for the settlement of a war in which they are the only belligerents on the non-Communist side. You wish to aid us through your good offices in obtaining a just and honorable settlement which will take into account the needs of the interested peoples. However, you are not prepared to participate with the Communist countries in any settlement which might appear to retain for them the benefits of aggression or the domination of non-willing peoples. In any case, if a settlement should be arrived at between the parties holding the primary responsibility, you would agree to indicate that you would comply with the principles which are contained in Article 2 (4) and (6) of the United Nations Charter and you would consider any violation of the settlement by the Communist regimes as being of grave concern.

It being your belief that the continuation of the war would involve a serious risk of an extension of the conflict, both as concerns the combat areas and the belligerent countries, the question of the participation of the United States would be guided by the terms defined in the fourth paragraph of the letter addressed on July [June] 16, 1954, by President Eisenhower to President Coty.<sup>3</sup>

You have indicated to me that you would fear, in the present state of negotiations, that the sending by the United States to Geneva of representatives chosen at a high level and bearing instructions from President Eisenhower to adhere to the principles noted above, could cause a situation capable of giving rise in France, under the most regrettable circumstances, to a feeling that our two countries are divided and that it might risk affecting seriously their good relations which are so important to the whole free world.

<sup>1</sup> Unofficial translation of French text. Transmitted to the Department of State in telegram 179 from Paris, July 14. (751G.00/7-1454)

<sup>2</sup> For memorandum of conversation, July 13, see p. 1348.

<sup>3</sup> The text of President Eisenhower's letter to French President Coty, June 16, is printed in Public Papers of the Presidents of the United States: Dwight D. Eisenhower, 1954, pp. 583-584. The text of the fourth paragraph of the President's letter is printed in volume XIII.

I have noted your hesitation to come to Geneva in the fear of having eventually to disassociate yourself from an agreement, or certain of its terms, which you might not be able to respect. This appears to me to be understandable, but in my opinion it does not respond to the situation. In effect, I have every reason to think that your absence would be precisely interpreted as demonstrating, before the fact, that you disapproved of the conference and of everything which might be accomplished. Not only would those who are against us find therein the confirmation of the ill will which they attribute to your government concerning the re-establishment of peace in Indochina; but many others would read in it a sure sign of a division of the western powers. Finally, the negotiations would thus be deprived of the element of balance indispensable to the seeking of a solution as recommended in the memorandum of June 30.<sup>4</sup>

I consider thus that such an absence would produce an effect diametrically opposed to the intentions which you have expressed and which I have cited above. In a situation as difficult as this only the unity of the western diplomatic front, supported by the immense potential which we have in common, can bring about the very military and strategic unity which we should seek eventually to establish in that part of the world.

It is in this spirit that the French Government envisages, aside from the assurances which the conference itself could furnish, the establishment of a collective guarantee by virtue of which the signatories would declare themselves prepared to intervene if, in Indochina, one of the three states was a victim of aggression.

I am fully conscious of the position of the government of the United States and I have noted with care the consequences which it might imply; but for the reasons which I have just enumerated, I have the profound conviction that the common interests of our two countries and of the three Associated States would be effectively defended only if you yourself, or the Under-Secretary should represent in person your government at Geneva.

If the situation should nevertheless evolve in a manner which would confirm your fears, I engage myself, on behalf of France, to make known publicly the conditions under which you have acceded to my request.

I do not wish to end this letter without telling you how much I have appreciated during the meeting, certainly fruitful for the future of Franco-American relations, the way in which you have been able to join firmness and sureness of your political views to a broad understanding of the positions of your friends.

<sup>4</sup>Text of the U.S.-U.K. communication is in telegram 4853 to Paris. June 28.
The text was delivered to the French on June 30.

Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 324

The Secretary of State to the French Prime Minister (Mendès-France)<sup>1</sup>

PARIS, July 14, 1954.

MY DEAR MR. PRESIDENT: I have received your letter of July 14<sup>2</sup> with reference to participation by the United States in the final stages of the Indochina phase of the Geneva Conference.

In the light of what you say and after consultation with President Eisenhower, I am glad to be able to inform you that the President is asking the Under Secretary of State, General Walter Bedell Smith, to prepare to return at his earliest convenience to Geneva to share in the work of the Conference on the basis of the understanding which we have arrived at.

I greatly appreciate the opportunity which we have had to confer together, and I believe that it has added a new chapter to the honorable and precious tradition of Franco-American cooperation.

Sincerely yours,

JOHN FOSTER DULLES

---

<sup>1</sup> Text transmitted to the Department of State in telegram 179 from Paris. July 14. (751G.00/7-1454) Copies of the Dulles-Mendès-France correspondence were provided to Foreign Secretary Eden who acknowledged receipt by letter of July 14. (Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 324)

<sup>2</sup> Supra.

---

396.1 GE/7-1454 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

TOP SECRET      PRIORITY

GENEVA, July 14, 1954—noon.

Secto 603. Repeated information priority Paris 54. Limit distribution. Eyes only Dillon and Johnson. Cheysson of French delegation told me this morning that when Dong was given draft declaration (Secto 597<sup>1</sup>) prepared by French delegate, his first reaction was to insist that the conference should also take note of the fact that Democratic Republic of Vietnam has stated its intention of examining the question of membership in the French Union and of engaging in discussions with the French with a view to resuming economic and cultural relations (Viet Minh May 10th proposals<sup>2</sup>). French rejoined that this would hardly appear to be suitable question for inclusion in final declaration designed to record some measure of conference approval or acceptance of definite items. Cheysson added that if Dong insists, some satisfactory language of a general character might be found to cover this point, "but of course we do not want them in the French Union".

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated July 13, p. 1355.

<sup>2</sup> For the report of the Second Plenary Session on Indochina, May 10, see telegram Secto 162, May 10, p. 753.

BONSAL

---

396.1 GE/7-1454 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

TOP SECRET      PRIORITY

GENEVA, July 14, 1954—noon.

Secto 604. Repeated information priority Paris 55. Limit distribution. Eyes only Dillon and Johnson. With reference Secto 598,<sup>1</sup> Cheysson of French delegation today gave me somewhat more detailed account of yesterday's meetings between Mendes-France and Chou En-lai and between Mendes-France and Dong.

Although I am sure Mendes-France himself has already given Secretary this information, am transmitting Cheysson's account and his comments as of possible interest.

Yesterday morning Chou En-lai told Mendes-France that present difference of demarcation line must be settled and that it was up to both sides to make concessions with Viet Minh making the major concession. Mendes-France repeated that French position on Dong Hoi line was firm.

Later Mendes-France received Dong and they had lengthy discussion of line. Finally Dong stated he was ready to go as far as 16th parallel (this runs just south of Tourane). Mendes-France stated this was unacceptable and that French position remained at or about the 18th parallel. Mendes-France stated that it was essential for Franco-Vietnamese to maintain positions at Tourane and Hue and also to maintain control of the road running from Quang Tri to Savannakhet in Laos. This latter objective would involve retention of considerable area north of road.

Dong rejoined that it would be possible to find a settlement giving Franco-Vietnamese side Tourane and making some special arrangements (neutralization?) for Hue and the road. Mendes-France refused to consider these ideas and reiterated position that line must be in Dong Hoi area.

Cheysson is struck by fact that Dong made important although insufficient concession a week before probable end of conference and by the further fact that Communists, in making this concession, gave up the strong position they had hitherto adopted regarding the necessity for the Viet Minh to maintain and control the three provinces south of Faifo which they have ruled uninterruptedly since 1946. Cheysson believes further concessions may be expected from Communists.

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated July 13, p. 1346.

BONSAL

---

396.1 GE/7-1454 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State<sup>1</sup>

SECRET      PRIORITY

GENEVA, July 14, 1954—2 p. m.

Secto 605. Repeated information Paris 56, Saigon 33. Pass Defense. Following is unofficial translation text of French delegation working paper<sup>2</sup> on control in Cambodia and Laos similar to one on Vietnam reported in Secto 575:<sup>3</sup>

"1. Responsibility for implementation of the agreement on the cessation of hostilities is assumed by the sides.

"2. An International Commission is charged with control of the application of the provisions of the agreement on the cessation of hostilities in (Cambodia) (Laos); it is composed of representatives of the following States: (blank). It is presided over by the representative of (blank). It has its headquarters at (blank).

"3. The International Commission will create inspection teams, fixed and mobile, composed of an equal number of officers designated by each of the above States.

The fixed teams will be stationed at the following points: (blank); these points can later be modified by agreement between the Government of (Cambodia) (Laos) and the International Commission.

The action zones of the mobile teams will be the areas bordering on the land frontiers (and sea frontiers of Cambodia) (of Laos); within the limit of their zones of action they will have the right of free movement and will receive from the local civil and military authorities all the facilities they may need to accomplish their missions (furnishing of personnel, making available of the necessary documents for control purposes, the summoning of witnesses for investigations, protection of the security and of the freedom of movement of the inspection teams, etc.). They will have at their disposal modern means of transport, observation and communication which may be useful to them.

"4. The International Commission is charged with supervising the implementation by the sides of the provisions of the agreement. For this purpose, it is to carry out missions of control, observation, in-

---

<sup>1</sup> Telegram transmitted to the Department of State in two sections.

<sup>2</sup> Dated July 8.

<sup>3</sup> Dated July 8, p. 1305.

spection and investigation related to the application of the provisions of the agreement on the cessation of hostilities and it must especially :

(a) Control the withdrawal of foreign forces according to the provisions of the agreement on the cessation of hostilities.

(b) See that the frontiers of (Cambodia) (Laos) are respected.

(c) Control the operations involved in the freeing of prisoners of war and civilian internees.

(d) In ports and airports, as well as on all frontiers of (Cambodia) (Laos), watch over the implementation of the clauses of the agreement on the cessation of hostilities having to do with the introduction into the country of armed forces, of military personnel and of all types of armament, munitions and war matériel.

(e) (For Laos only) watch over the implementation of the clauses of the agreement on the cessation of hostilities having to do with the reliefs (releves) of personnel, and the supply of the security forces of the French Union maintained in Laos.

Joint groups are created to facilitate the implementation of the clauses having to do with the withdrawal of foreign forces. They will assist the sides in the implementation of said clauses, and assure liaison between them in order to put the withdrawal plans into effect, in compliance with the provisions of the agreement on the cessation of hostilities. They will follow these troops in their movements and will be dissolved following completion of the implementation of the withdrawal plans.

"6. [sic] The joint groups are composed of an equal number of representatives of the Commands of the interested sides.

"7. The International Commission is to proceed, through the inspection teams which have been mentioned above, and as rapidly as possible, either on its own initiative or at the request of a joint group or of one of the sides, to carry out investigations which may be necessary on the basis of documents and on the ground.

"8. The inspection teams are to transmit to the International Commission the results of their control, of their investigations, and of their observations; in addition, they are to make whatever special reports they may deem necessary or which the Commission may ask them for. In case of disagreement within the teams, the conclusions of each of the members are to be transmitted to the Commission.

"9. If an inspection team has not been able to settle an incident or if it believes that there has been a violation or threat of a serious violation, the International Commission is to be informed. It is to study the reports and the conclusions of the inspection teams and to inform the sides regarding the measures which must be taken in order to settle the incident, to make the violation cease or to do away with the threat of violation.

"10. The recommendations of the International Commission are to be adopted by majority vote, subject to the provisions of Article 11. In case of a tie vote, that of the chairman is decisive.

The International Commission may formulate recommendations regarding amendments and additions which it would be desirable to make to the provisions of the agreement for the cessation of hostilities in (Cambodia) (Laos) in order to insure a more efficacious application of said agreement. These recommendations are to be adopted by unanimous vote.

"11. When questions are involved which relate to violations or to threats of violations which may result in resumption of hostilities, i.e.:

(a) The refusal by foreign armed forces to proceed with the movements provided for in the withdrawal plan.

(b) The violation or threat of violation by foreign armed forces of the integrity of the country.

(c) (Blank).

The decisions of the International Commission must be adopted by unanimous vote. If unanimity is not achieved, the majority conclusions are to be communicated to the sides which must take them into consideration.

"12. If one of the sides refuses to apply recommendation or an arbitral decision of the International Commission, the latter informs the guarantors.

If the International Commission has not succeeded in reaching unanimous conclusion in the cases provided for in Article 11, it will transmit to the guarantors a majority report and one or several minority reports.

The International Commission is to inform the guarantors of any obstacle which may arise to the carrying out of its activities.

"13. The International Control Commission is to be on the spot from the moment of the cessation of hostilities in Indochina in order to be able to carry out the tasks provided for in Article 4.

"14. The International Control Commission in (Cambodia) (Laos) is to act in close cooperation with the International Control Commissions in Vietnam and (Laos) (Cambodia). An organism of coordination of the activities of the three Commissions is to be created through an agreement between them.

"15. The International Control Commission in (Cambodia) (Laos) may, after consulting with the International Control Commissions for Vietnam and for (Laos) (Cambodia), formulate recommendations regarding the gradual reduction of its activities, taking into account developments in (Cambodia) (Laos). These recommendations are to be adopted by unanimity."

BONSAL

396.1 GE/7-1454: Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET PRIORITY

GENEVA, July 14, 1954—4 p. m.

Secto 606. Repeated information priority Paris 57. Re Secto 600, repeated information Paris 50.<sup>1</sup> Unofficial translation follows of outlines of cease-fire agreements for Cambodia and Laos supplied yesterday by French delegation:

“Agreement concerning cease-fire in Cambodia.First, cease-fire:

Disengagement of Cambodian and Viet Minh Armed Forces and minor regroupment following cease-fire.

This is to be signed as soon as completed, to be published at once, and to be put into effect (with the cooperation of joint groups).

Second, supplementary provision:A. Military provisions.

Plan for evacuation of foreign forces and liberation of prisoners and civilian internees.

B. Other provisions.

Guarantees for individuals and communities against reprisals and protection of property and persons.

Right of option for foreign civil populations.

Movement of populations which wish to take refuge in Vietnam.

Third, provisions regarding control of agreements:

(See working paper July 8<sup>2</sup>)

Declaration of Cambodian Government:

Relative to importations of necessary foreign matériel by Cambodian Army in order to assure defense of Kingdom.

And relative to French instructors and technicians maintained at the disposition of the Cambodian Army.

Agreement concerning cease-fire in Laos.First, cease-fire:

Disengagement of Franco-Lao and Viet Minh units and minor regroupment following cease-fire.

This is to be signed as soon as completed, to be published at once and to be put into effect (with the cooperation of joint groups).

Second, supplementary provisions:A. Military provisions.

Plan for evacuation of Viet Minh forces.

Withdrawal (reilin) of French forces into limited military installations.

System of relief (releve) and supply of French forces stationed in the military installations.

Liberation of prisoners and civilian internees.

<sup>1</sup> Dated July 13, p. 1357.

<sup>2</sup> Transmitted in telegram Secto 605, July 14, supra.

B. Other provisions.

Guarantees for individuals and communities against reprisals.

Protection of property and persons.

Right of option of foreign civilian populations.

Movement of populations which wish to take refuge in Vietnam.

Third, provisions regarding control of agreements :

(See working paper of July 8)

Declaration of Laotian Government :

(Same as declaration of Cambodian Government.)”

Working paper July 8 transmitted Secto 605.

BONSAL

396.1 GE/7-1454 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET PRIORITY

GENEVA, July 14, 1954—8 p. m.

Secto 607. Repeated information priority Paris 58, Saigon 34. Offroy, French delegate, states that Do has received strong telegram from Diem urging that Hanoi, Haiphong and the Bishoprics be retained for Vietnam in current negotiations regarding military regroupings. In consequence, Offroy tells us Do is planning to issue rather strong public statement designed to give impression of serious divergences between France and Vietnam. Offroy states Do believes this approach would be good tactics although not entirely realistic. Offroy fears result may be to exacerbate anti-French sentiment in Vietnam and perhaps cause difficulties there, although he recognizes possibility that appearance of serious difficulties between France and Vietnam may help negotiating position vis-à-vis Viet Minh.

BONSAL

396.1 GE/7-1454 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

TOP SECRET PRIORITY

GENEVA, July 14, 1954—8 p. m.

Secto 608. Repeated information Paris 59. Limit distribution. Eyes only Dillon. Offroy informs us that in course of conversation between members of French Delegation and Wang Ping-nan, Secretary General of Chinese Communist Delegation, latter referred to discussions between Dong and Mendes-France re demarcation line (Secto 604<sup>1</sup>). Wang Ping-nan stated that French should make some further concession and implied that Viet Minh would be prepared to meet this with even greater concession. French representatives reiterated firm position re Dong Hoi line.

<sup>1</sup> Dated July 14, p. 1368.

BONSAI.

---

PSA files, lot 58 D 207, "Vietnam Correspondence"

The Special Adviser to the United States Delegation (Bonsai) to Ambassador Donald R. Heath

PERSONAL AND SECRET

GENEVA, July 14, 1954.

DEAR DON: Many thanks for your good letter of July 4<sup>1</sup> which I received on July 13. In spite of the delay it was most useful and I am truly grateful to you for taking the time to write for I know how rushed you must have been.

You are certainly faced with a difficult task. Nevertheless on the basis of the past record I am sure you will get out of the situation all that can be gotten in the interest of the United States.

I noted your statement about the feeling in the Department regarding U.S. intervention. Whatever may be the merits of this course of action, those who favor it are, it seems to me, in the somewhat sterile position of favoring something which is just not going to happen. My own belief is that the threat of American intervention has been and perhaps still is of some value to those who are negotiating for an end of this long war—a war which of course it would have been desirable to have won. But I have throughout been strongly of the opinion that actual intervention by U.S. forces against the Vietminh would not produce durable or desirable results. Therefore, when you refer to "all the people below the Secretary and Under Secretary" as being unanimous on this matter, please count me out.

There is some question as to whether the settlement which we finally reach will leave much scope for Mike O'Daniel and his activities. Certainly the pressure will be off and I suspect that the French attitude on the matter will stiffen although of course the Vietnamese will be anxious for our help.

I was also interested to note that in your talk with Bob Murphy you urged that we try for an enclave at Hanoi, whereas on your return to Saigon you seemed to feel that a Hanoi-Haiphong enclave must be sought. I hope that this change of view reflects your view that the military situation in the north is really better than it was when you talked with Bob Murphy. We will probably end up with a few months tenure of Haiphong but that is about all. On the other hand we may well get a solid area south of the 18th parallel. What can we then do?

---

<sup>1</sup> Ante, p. 1280.

Cheysson is most anxious that we should be thinking along lines of French and American economic and military support for "retained Vietnam".

I think that under the circumstances we have been kept fairly well informed regarding Mendes-France's negotiations. I also hope and believe that we have now reached a point where Diem in Saigon and Do in Geneva are also being taken into the confidence of the French. It seems to me furthermore that Mendes-France has taken a firm and resolute stand at least within the framework of our seven points and that to the extent that he can count on our support and on our association with the results he achieves, he will get the very best deal justified by the facts with which we are confronted.

I agree with what you say about Bao Dai and have been trying my best to follow this line in spite of my real feelings on the subject.

You are much missed on the Delegation here not only for your company but also because of the fact that we are kept pretty busy and would like to have someone to share the work with.

Margaret joins me in love to Louise and in very best to you both in the job which you have so brilliantly and wholeheartedly performed over the past four years. If all concerned had been as devoted and single-minded as the two of you our enterprise would not now be going through the wringer. But there will be something left from which to build.

Yours as ever,

PHILIP W. BONSAI

JULY 15, 1954

Editorial Note

Upon the return of the Secretary of State from Paris the Department of State released the following press release (387) on July 15:

"I return from consultations at Paris with the new French Prime Minister and Foreign Minister, M. Pierre Mendès-France. These talks were also participated in by Anthony Eden, the British Foreign Secretary.

"These talks have brought about an understanding concerning Indochina much more complete than has heretofore existed. It enabled us to demonstrate anew the solidarity of the Western powers in the face of Communist hostility and intrigue.

"The United States has been concerned to find a way whereby it could help France, Viet-Nam, Laos, and Cambodia find acceptable settlements without in any way prejudicing basic principles to which the United States must adhere if it is to be true to itself, and if the captive and endangered peoples of the world are to feel that the United States really believes in liberty.

"I had the opportunity in Paris fully to explain the United States position in this respect to M. Mendès-France, whom I had known before but whom I had not met since he assumed his new offices.

"The conclusion was that we would ask the Under Secretary of State, Gen. Walter Bedell Smith, to return to Geneva at an early date to renew his participation in the Indochina phase of the Conference. But this is on the understanding, to which both the French and British Ministers expressly agreed, that renewed participation by the United States at the ministerial level will be without departing from the U.S. principles which I had described.

"I believe that we have found a formula for constructive allied unity which will have a beneficial effect on the Geneva Conference. And it carries no danger that the United States will abandon its principles."

---

396.1 GE/7-1554 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET      NIACT

GENEVA, July 15, 1954—11 a. m.

Secto 617. Repeated information Paris 65, Saigon 38. At working level meeting today representatives of French, US and UK Dels called by French Del (Laloy) there was discussion of Soviet counterproposal to French draft declaration to be issued by conference. Soviet text is contained in Secto 615.<sup>1</sup>

Meeting opened with some discussion of original French text. Aside from some unimportant matters of drafting, there was general acceptance of French text except that USDel reserved position on final paragraph concerning agreement of members of conference to consult among themselves.

Turning to Soviet counterproposal, Laloy stated there were 3 main objections:

1. It applies political criteria for Vietnam also to Laos and Cambodia which do not have political problems,
2. It establishes date for elections, and
3. It introduces for all 3 countries prohibition on alliances and foreign bases.

Following are comments developed on specific numbered paragraphs of Soviet counterproposals:

1. It was agreed that instead of "approve" effort would be made to restore "takes note" from original French text. USDel firm on this point—French and British acquiesced.

2. This is new provision to which French do not object provided word "recognition" is replaced by "respect". French point is that independence has already been recognized.

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated July 15, p. 1384.

3. French Del will ask explanation of clause added by Soviets to 6th paragraph of original French text.

4. There was objection to lumping together of Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia. Evacuation of foreign troops is to take place in Laos and Cambodia at once subject to agreed reservations in case of French military personnel whereas in Vietnam position is that presence of French troops will be in accordance with decisions of representative authority.

5. In addition to lumping together of 3 countries, French hold that case of Vietnam will be covered in military agreement between commands and that there is no need for repetition in conference declaration. In case of Laos and Cambodia, these countries are making unilateral declarations which should be noted by conference in terms used by 2 countries.

6. This introduces new concepts of "military alliances" and "foreign bases". General subject matter to be covered in Laos and Cambodia by their unilateral declarations. In case of Vietnam, difficult to see how "foreign base" could be established in light of prohibition of introduction reinforcing troops and arms.

7. Again this provision joins together 3 countries and calls for political negotiations with Laos and Cambodia where there are no political problems.

8. British stated no fundamental objection to having international commission to supervise elections consisting representatives of same states supervising military aspect. French have already told Soviets they consider fixing of date for elections entirely unacceptable. They did not like concept of consultation between "northern and southern zones of Vietnam".

9. It appears unnecessary and perhaps dangerous to spell out freedoms to be guaranteed in Laos and Cambodia. This is derogatory to established governments of those countries. Conference should limit itself to taking note of unilateral statements by Governments of Laos and Cambodia re dates of elections and should not attempt itself to fix dates.

10. This item should be in military agreement rather than in conference declaration. Final sentence appears ambiguous and should be eliminated.

11. No comment.

12. In this paragraph regarding consultation, Soviets have added word "collective". It was agreed that this should be omitted and US representative reiterated US reservation of position.

Laloy expressed view that conference guarantee would be of no really effective importance since serious differences would have to be settled in some other manner.

Laloy will get Mendes-France's views on Soviet proposals and on working level comments this evening and will then prepare a further French draft based on original French draft incorporating whatever may be acceptable from Soviet draft. He will distribute this new draft as soon as possible to US and UKDels.

It was agreed that effort should be made so that Ministers could have before them urgently a text showing agreed and disagreed working level draft.

There was some inconclusive discussion of method of financing international supervisory commission. It was emphasized that adequate financing most important to proper functioning. Department's view this point would be appreciated.

JOHNSON

396.1 GE/7-1554 : Telegram

Johnson-Kimny Meeting, Geneva, July 15, Morning: The United States Delegation to the Department of State<sup>1</sup>

SECRET

GENEVA, July 15, 1954—8 p. m.

Secto 616. Repeated information Paris 64, Saigon 37, Phnom Penh 3. Nong Kimny called on me this morning. He described call yesterday by Chou En-lai, accompanied by two aides and interpreter and Cambodian Foreign Minister arranged at Chou's request. Chou stated his recent interviews with Nehru, U Nu and Ho Chi Minh permitted him to assert that all three want peace in Indochina and that this also is wish of all countries of South and Southeast Asia. Unanimous desire is that three Associated States be united and have cordial relationship with Colombo powers, such as Burma, India and Indonesia. Chou stated that India was willing to participate in International Control Commission. Chou recalled the two declarations which had been issued on occasion of his visits to New Delhi and Rangoon, reiterating the five points contained in the Chinese-Indian Treaty regarding Tibet.<sup>2</sup>

Chou then asked Cambodian Foreign Minister regarding prospects of Conference. Foreign Minister replied that in two meetings he had had with Dong, latter had insisted on injecting political problem into military aspect and that if this continued, Foreign Minister is dubious as to prospects. He reported that Dong had asked that certain provincial officials appointed by resistance movement be retained, and that resistance youth movements be preserved. These demands are contrary to Cambodian constitutional processes. Chou is reported to have laughed at these claims, and to have stated that these are internal matters which Cambodian Government should handle unilaterally.

<sup>1</sup> Telegram transmitted in two sections.

<sup>2</sup> The "Communiqué on Talks between Mr. Nehru and Mr. Chou En-lai, 28 June 1954" and the "Joint Statement by the Prime Ministers of China and Burma. Mr. Chou En-lai and U Nu, 29 June 1954" are printed in Documents on International Affairs, 1954, pp. 313-314. The Sino-Indian Agreement on Tibet, signed on Apr. 29, 1954, is in 70 UNTS 229.

Chou then referred to the two documents he had received the day before (July 13) from French delegation, namely draft of Conference declaration (Secto 597<sup>3</sup>), and working paper regarding controls in Cambodia and Laos (Secto 605<sup>4</sup>) with important draft declaration, Chou stated that in this document, France recognizes independence and sovereignty of Cambodia without discriminating against elements having cooperated with either party and contemplates the evacuation of all foreign forces. Also Chou interpreted document as meaning that there would be no military foreign bases in the three States of Indochina and that no military alliances would be permitted between the three States and other States. (Nong Kimny stated he was unable to find any basis for these assertions in French draft declaration; it is, however, included in Soviet draft just received.) Referring particularly to Cambodia, Chou stated his understanding intent was that countries would gain complete independence and that all elements belonging to resistance movement could return to national community. This would leave only military problem for solution.

Cambodian Foreign Minister replied that after cessation of hostilities, all elements of the population who had formerly worked with Viet Minh would be able to return to national community without deprivation of constitutional civic rights. (In reply to my question, Nong Kimny stated amnesty was not designed to apply to crimes against persons and property.) Foreign Minister then asked Chou for his thinking regarding introduction of arms and military personnel in Cambodia after cessation of hostilities. Chou stated that this matter was to be subject in case of both Cambodia and Laos to separate negotiations, but did not elaborate on this theme, taking refuge in statement that he had not thoroughly studied French draft document which, however, he had received favorably as representing French desire to reach agreement. In reply to Foreign Minister's insistence on impossibility of accepting limitation on introduction of arms and military personnel into Cambodia, Chou replied that he would make further study of question and hoped Cambodian and Laotian representatives would submit their ideas. He expressed interest in knowing quantity of foreign troops, military personnel and arms which Cambodian and Laotian Governments consider necessary for defense of their countries.

Cambodians reiterated point that arms limitation incompatible with sovereignty and pointed out that defense establishment in Laos and Cambodia would depend on armament of Cambodia's neighbors.

---

<sup>3</sup> Dated July 13, p. 1355.

<sup>4</sup> Dated July 14, p. 1369.

Chou then referred to his June 16 proposal and stated belief that perhaps principles therein had been badly stated or badly understood. He referred particularly to paragraph 3 of that proposal which reads:

"3. After the cessation of hostilities, the introduction in Laos and Cambodia from outside of fresh troops and military personnel of ground, naval or air forces and of all types of arms and ammunition shall be prohibited.

"The question of the amount and the type of arms that may be introduced for the requirements of self-defense shall be the subject of separate negotiations."

Chou stated that he wished to make clear that the provisions regarding nonintroduction of arms and military personnel refers only to armistice period and not to permanent situation which will prevail after armistice has given way to definitive peace. Nong Kimny expressed view that this represents important development in Chinese thinking but added that Chou continues to link armistice in Cambodia with armistice in Laos and Vietnam and apparently contemplates that there will be one armistice for all three countries with simultaneous termination. Since Cambodians believe their problem extremely simple and recognize Vietnam problem extremely complex, it appears evident to them that if Chou's view prevails they may be bound by armistice terms long after peace could be definitively restored to their country.

Chou established differentiation between situation in Vietnam where neither party is to bring in arms and troops and that in Cambodia and Laos where limited introduction of arms and munition will be contemplated. Chou did not mention military personnel.

Later in day (July 14) Cambodians met with French. French told them they contemplate three basic documents in connection with cessation of hostilities:

- 1) Draft declaration copies of which have already been submitted to all delegations;
- 2) Three separate agreements on cessation of hostilities;
- 3) Unilateral statements by governments concerned including in case of Cambodia and Laos statement of intent regarding elections and regarding arms and equipment needed for self-defense.

Nong Kimny thought well of my suggestion to amend statement on elections by adding phrase "in accordance with constitutional processes" since Cambodians did not wish to assume obligation of holding special elections. (Normal elections scheduled in 1955.) Cambodians also raised point with French that it would have been desirable instead of submitting draft declaration and draft control document to all delegations if agreements could not have been reached between six friendly delegations before handing these papers to Communists.

French replied that they recognized justice of observation but that from practical point of view it was necessary to discuss these papers simultaneously with both friendly and unfriendly elements if practical conclusions are to be reached within available time periods.

I took occasion in this connection to express the view that French position regarding general terms of settlement in Indochina was as firm and courageous as we could expect in view of realities of present situation. I stated Secretary had been much heartened by his talks with Mendes-France. I added that it seemed to me that Cambodian unilateral declaration envisaged in French draft need be no more than repetition of what Cambodians have already stated at conference regard to elections and to Cambodian defense plans.

JOHNSON

---

Editorial Note

At the 206th meeting of the National Security Council, July 15, in Washington, the Council devoted a substantial amount of time to a report by the Secretary of State on his talks in Paris with Premier Mendès-France and Foreign Secretary Eden and to the decision that Under Secretary Smith would return to the Geneva Conference as Head of the United States Delegation.

For a memorandum of discussion of this meeting, see volume XIII.

---

396.1 GE/7-1554 : Telegram

The Secretary of State to the United States Delegation<sup>1</sup>

CONFIDENTIAL      NIACT      WASHINGTON, July 15, 1954—4:50 p. m.

Tosec 544. For Ambassador Johnson from Secretary. Please deliver following message from Secretary to Mendes-France.

"My dear Mr. President: Ambassador Johnson has just transmitted to me your kind message.<sup>2</sup> I share your feeling that our meeting was well worthwhile. Certainly from my standpoint I feel a sense of respect and admiration for the forthright position which you have taken on the vital issues that confront us. Uncertainty is the worst plague and you have done much to dissipate it.

---

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by the Secretary of State.

<sup>2</sup> This reference to a "kind message" from Premier Mendès-France is apparently a reference to a handwritten paragraph at the end of Mendès-France's letter to Secretary Dulles of July 14, p. 1365. This paragraph was translated and then transmitted to Secretary Dulles on July 15 in telegram Secto 614, July 15. It read as follows: "I do not wish to end this letter without telling you how much I have appreciated during the meeting, certainly fruitful for the future of France-American relations, the way in which you have been able to join the firmness and the sureness of your political views to a broad understanding of the positions of your friends." (396.1 GE/7-1554)

I am glad to tell you that General Bedell Smith will be able to leave tomorrow and he plans to get away sometime tomorrow afternoon arriving in Geneva around Saturday noon.

Immediately upon my arrival in Washington a few hours ago I went from the airport to the White House and reported fully to the President, to General Bedell Smith and the other members of the National Security Council. The President was highly gratified with my report. General Bedell Smith will go to Geneva fully informed not only on the basis of documentation but on the basis of my personal report.

As you face fateful decisions at Geneva, you can feel that the many friends of France will be supporting you with their best wishes and with their prayers, and I am glad that we have found a way whereby, I hope without violation of our principles or serious risk of future misunderstanding, we can evidence at Geneva our moral and political support.

Mrs. Dulles asked me to thank you for the beautiful roses which you sent and which greeted her on her return.

With sincere good wishes, I am
Sincerely yours, Foster Dulles"

DULLES

---

396.1 GE/7-1554 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of Defense

TOP SECRET

GENEVA, July 15, 1954—7 p. m.

Defense Message Gento 81. For Sullivan from Dwan. Following are principal provisions of French Delegation draft agreement on cessation of hostilities in Vietnam, copy of which shown me today by member of French Delegation who promised to give US Delegation copy as soon as finalized :

Article I: Cease-fire.

This article provides for complete separation of opposing forces to be completed within 380 days from date of cease-fire and for division of final zones of regroupment along line in vicinity Porte d'Annam (18th parallel). Disengagement of forces to consist of initial separation and is to proceed to final positioning of opposing forces.

Article II: Principles for Execution of Agreement on Cessation of Hostilities.

This article prescribes that the cease-fire, separation, and regroupment of forces will take place simultaneously for both sides. It includes details such as that forces both sides will be withdrawn from demilitarized zones; that civilians who desire may leave regroupment zones; that persons may cross demarcation line only with authorization of Joint Commission; that civil administration and relief is responsibility of commanders of zones concerned; that sides must remove mines and provide safe conditions for supervisory organs etc. It further makes distinction between regular and irregular forces, defining former as organized formations which on Viet Minh side include both regular and regional forces, and defines irregular forces as partisans.

Article III: Separation of Combatants.

This article provides for inclusion of a specific time for cease-fire and calls for execution of separation of forces as soon as possible thereafter. It provides for (but for the moment leaves blank) the number of days during which regroupment of forces into initial assembly areas must be completed and prescribes that Joint Commission is to fix local conditions therefor. It further provides for (but for moment leaves blank) number of days thereafter during which movement into primary regroupment zones must be completed and leaves to Joint Commission responsibility for fixing details for this movement. Following are primary regroupment zones designated for each side:

North Vietnam.

French Union Forces to be regrouped into following areas in three stages:

- (1) Area delimited by present battle line in delta (details to be fixed by Joint Commission, both sides to agree to undertake no offensive action during fixing of detailed line);
- (2) Enclave extending inland just beyond Haiduong;
- (3) Enclave around Haiphong.

Central Vietnam.

Viet Minh Forces located between Col des Nuages (above Tourane) and Porte d'Annam to be evacuated north of Porte d'Annam; Viet Minh Forces located in quadrangle Col des Nuages, west to Laos border, south to junction borders of Annam, Cochinchina and Cambodia, east to Phan-Ri, to be regrouped in Quang-Ngai and Binh-Dinh Provinces, with five-kilometre demilitarized zone to be established around this regroupment area; Viet Minh Forces in Central Vietnam south of quadrangle described above to be regrouped in South Vietnam.

South Vietnam.

Viet Minh Forces east of Saigon River to be regrouped in Xuyen-Moc and Ham-Tan Provinces. Viet Minh Forces west of Saigon River to be regrouped vicinity Long-My and in Ca Mau Peninsula.

Article IV: Withdrawals and Transfers.

This article describes simultaneous phased movements of opposing forces from regroupment areas. (1) When French Union Forces withdraw to Haiduong enclave, Viet Minh evacuate Long-My and Ca Mau regroupment areas in South Vietnam. (2) When French Union Forces withdraw to Haiphong enclave, Viet Minh evacuate Xuyen-Moc, Ham-Tan regroupment area. When French Union Forces withdraw from Haiphong enclave, Viet Minh evacuate regroupment area in Central Vietnam. This article also prescribes that embarkation port in Central Vietnam is at Qui Nhon, and in South Vietnam at Can Tho, Ham-Tan, or Phan Thiet. It further prescribes that first simultaneous withdrawal phase is to be completed within three months, second within one additional month and third within eight months 15 days additional (total 380 days after cease-fire).

Article V :

This article prohibits the introduction into Vietnam of re-enforcing military personnel, and weapons, and contains wording similar to Korean Armistice Agreement (paragraphs 13(C) and (D)). It further prescribes 11 ports of entry on each side through which all military personnel and arms must enter and leave under supervision of International Commission.

Article VI, prisoners of war; and Article VII, further details, were not available in draft.

Provisions for control machinery also to be included.

Member of French Delegation said French would present to Viet Minh draft of agreement including first four articles described above. Balance of draft, including article on re-enforcement of military personnel and arms, would not be presented and French would wait for Viet Minh initiative on this subject. Member French Delegation also said similar draft agreement on Laos currently under preparation.

---

396.1 GE/7-1554 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

TOP SECRET      NIACT

GENEVA, July 15, 1954—8 p. m.

Secto 615. Sent Paris 63, Saigon 35. Following is unofficial translation made by UK del of Soviet counterproposal to French draft declaration (Secto 597<sup>1</sup>) to be issued by conference :

“1. The participants of the Geneva conference on the question of re-establishing peace in Indochina approve the bilateral agreements which put an end to hostilities in Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia and which establish an international control and supervision over the implementation of the said decisions.

2. The conference takes note with satisfaction of the statement made by the French Government to the effect that, when settling all problems connected with the re-establishment and consolidation of peace in Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia, it proceeds from the recognition of the complete sovereignty and independence, unity and territorial integrity of Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia.

3. In its relations with Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia, each participant of the Geneva conference, regardless of its political, military, diplomatic or other relations with the said states, at the time of the signature of the agreements on the cessation of hostilities, undertakes to recognize and respect the sovereignty, independence, unity and integrity of the said states and to refrain from any interference in their internal affairs.

<sup>1</sup> Dated July 13, p. 1355.

4. The conference takes note of the agreement of the parties that all foreign troops and foreign military personnel will be withdrawn from the territories of Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia within time limits to be determined by agreement between the parties.

5. The conference takes note of the agreement, reached between the parties, that the transfer from abroad into Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia, of new military units and military personnel, of all kinds of arms and ammunition will not be permitted and that the import of arms into Laos and Cambodia will be limited in relation to the established defense requirements of these countries.

6. The conference takes note of the agreement reached by the parties, that after the cessation of hostilities, Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia must not enter any military alliances whatsoever, and that the establishment of foreign bases on the territories of the said states must not be permitted.

7. The conference notes that the agreements regarding Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia have as their goal the settlement of military questions in order to put an end to hostilities in Indochina. As far as political problems are concerned, these will be settled within the shortest possible time by means of direct negotiations between the interested parties in accordance with the provisions contained in the present declaration.

8. The conference declares that, in respect of Vietnam, the settlement of political problems effected on the basis of respect for the principles of the independence, unity and fundamental freedoms guaranteed by democratic institutions established as a result of free elections by secret ballot. These elections will be conducted under the control of an International Commission composed of representatives of the member states of the commission for control and supervision mentioned in the agreement on the cessation of hostilities, when the agreed opinion, reached by consultation between the competent representative authorities of the northern and southern zones of Vietnam, is that the re-establishment of peace in the country shall have made sufficient progress and when all the conditions necessary for a free expression of the national will shall have been created, but not later than June 1955.

9. The conference takes note of the declaration by the Governments of Cambodia and Laos of their intention to hold general free elections by secret ballot, and to take all measures to enable all citizens to take their place in the national community. These elections should take place before June 1955. In order to conduct general free elections, the Governments of Cambodia and Laos must ensure individual rights and democratic freedoms for the whole population of these states, in particular, freedom of speech and press, freedom of meetings and organizations, freedom of residence and of movement.

10. The competent representative authorities of the northern and southern zones of Vietnam as well as the authorities of Laos and Cambodia must not permit individual or collective collaboration in any way with one or the other side during the war. These persons and the members of their families should be afforded individual freedom and freedom of political activity and right to elect and be elected.

11. The provisions contained in the agreement on the cessation of hostilities, aimed at protecting persons' property, must be very strictly implemented, and should in particular afford any person in Vietnam the right to choose the zone in which he wishes to reside.

12. The members of the conference agree to hold consultations among themselves on any question referred to them by the International Commission on control and supervision, in order to consider collective measures which may prove to be necessary in order to ensure observance of the agreement on the cessation of hostilities in Indochina.

13. The members of the Geneva conference express their confidence that, as a result of the implementation of the provisions contained in the present declaration and in the agreement on the cessation of hostilities, which ensure the re-establishment of peace in Indochina, Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia will freely develop in conditions of independence and sovereignty along the road of improving their economy and raising the standard of living of their people, and will make their useful contribution to the common cause of consolidating peace and cooperation among peoples."

JOHNSON

---

396.1 GE/7-1654 : Telegram

Bonsal-Chau Meeting, Geneva, July 15: The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET

GENEVA, July 16, 1954—11 a. m.

Secto 618. Repeated information Paris 66, Saigon 39. Tran Van Do yesterday sent Nguyen Hu Chau to call on Bonsal to express on behalf of Diem great concern over possibility of losing entire Tonkin delta in conference settlement. Chau read full text of point 2 of US-UK seven point reply to French aide-mémoire.<sup>1</sup> (Full text of seven points had been given to Vietnamese by British; we had only furnished them with abbreviated oral version contained in Secretary's message to Diem,<sup>2</sup> and put special emphasis on "if possible an enclave in the delta".) He expanded on both political and military necessity retaining Hanoi-Haiphong area as well as Bui Chu and Phat Diem, saying that new government would lose its raison d'être as champion of unity and independence if that area should be given up. At least, he said, Bui Chu and Phat Diem should somehow be neutralized and "subtracted" from Viet Minh pressure and influence.

<sup>1</sup> For text, see telegram 4853 to Paris, June 28, p. 1256.

<sup>2</sup> For text, see telegram Tosec 529, July 10, p. 1324.

Chau, who is lawyer by profession, laid great stress on legal arguments, implying that protectorate treaty of 1884 was last valid treaty between Vietnam and France, and that this would somehow preserve his government's claim to Tonkin even if French should sign it away at Geneva. His intention was apparently, through Bao Dai's status as heir of the Nguyens and Chief of State, to establish legitimacy of his government and its claim to all of Vietnam.

Chau alluded to possibility that if Tonkin were lost, Bao Dai might feel obliged to retire from the scene. Chau implied, not too convincingly, that this would be fraught with undesirable consequences and hence was an additional reason for trying to hold Hanoi, Haiphong and the bishoprics.

Bonsal replied that it was his understanding Franco-Vietnamese relations subject agreements of 1949 rather than treaty of 1884 and that Bao Dai's constitutional status currently that of Chief of State and not hereditary sovereign Emperor. He stressed view that current discussion of demarcation line involves only military arrangements and that goal continues to be, whenever favorable conditions can be brought about, the unity and territorial integrity of Vietnam. He stressed in this connection vital necessity of closest possible contacts between French and Vietnamese delegations.

In more general conversation Chau commented on following subjects:

1. Some Vietnamese and French would like to see reestablishment Cochin Chinese Republic; in this connection he noted Tran Van Huu back in Geneva after very active period in Paris. He implied French official backing for intrigues this direction.

2. He complained of French and Viet Minh neglect of Vietnamese Army officers at military talks in Indochina.

3. Chau seemed particularly proud that Ngo Dinh Diem government has obtained "full powers" from Bao Dai. Contact here with Viet Minh delegation and coming replacement of Tran Van Kha in Washington given for examples of action by new government without Bao Dai approval. Also noted plateau areas formerly ruled directly by Bao Dai through Imperial Cabinet now placed under Central Government. Chau was critical of Bao Dai's entourage.

JOHNSON

396.1 GE/7-1654 : Telegram

Bonsal-Offroy Meeting, Geneva, July 15: The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET PRIORITY

GENEVA, July 16, 1954—1 p. m.

Secto 620. Repeated information Paris 68, Saigon 40. Offroy of French delegation yesterday expressed following views to Bonsal regarding status of discussions on international controls of agreements for cessation of hostilities in Vietnam (Secto 575<sup>1</sup>) and in Cambodia and Laos (Secto 605<sup>2</sup>). He stated following four major questions remained pending with Communists:

1. Compositions: Communists insist on inclusion Communist member. Further discussions will have to take place at ministerial level following General Smith's arrival.

2. Freedom of action of international inspection teams: Soviets contend that complete freedom of action for these teams would infringe on sovereignty of states concerned.

3. Rules of procedure and mandatory character of decisions of International Commission: Soviets continue to insist on unanimity rule in event of major violations and on recommendatory rather than mandatory character of Commission's decisions and recommendations.

4. Organization: Soviets want one main commission with subcommissions for Laos and Cambodia. Our side conceives of three commissions with similar composition plus coordinating mechanism.

Offroy envisages meeting at early date of friendly delegations to express views on draft texts already submitted by French. This would be followed very shortly by discussion with other side on restricted basis. Offroy envisages not more than three or four powers taking part in this discussion aimed at securing definition of agreed and disagreed items.

To date, French have distributed papers on controls (Sectos 575 and 605) to all nine delegations; draft declaration for conference (Secto 597<sup>3</sup>) also to all nine (Soviet counterproposal contained Secto 615<sup>4</sup> has been distributed to all delegations); administrative human rights provision of cessation of hostilities agreements to six friendly delegations and draft military clauses of these agreements distributed probably only to US.

JOHNSON

<sup>1</sup> Dated July 8, p. 1305.

<sup>2</sup> Dated July 14, p. 1369.

<sup>3</sup> Dated July 13, p. 1355.

<sup>4</sup> Dated July 15, p. 1384.

JULY 16, 1954

Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 306

Memorandum by the Special Adviser to the United States Delegation (Bonsal) to the Head of the Delegation (Johnson)

[GENEVA,] July 16, 1954.

Re: Message from Dennis Allen

Dennis Allen telephoned at 10:35 a. m. to say that he had just had a call from la Tournelle who stated that at last night's Mendes-

France-Molotov dinner<sup>1</sup> it was suggested that a meeting might be held this afternoon between the two Chairmen (Eden and Molotov) and the French to review the documents which have so far been produced and to see where the Conference stands.

Eden has asked Allen to let you know of this suggestion and to find out your views. Eden believes that the meeting in practice might be useful. If the question of U.S. participation in such a meeting is raised, Allen believes that the Russians will probably insist on the presence of the Chinese communists, and we would thus have a five-power gathering.

I told Allen that we would let him have your views as soon as possible.<sup>2</sup>

---

<sup>1</sup> See telegram Secto 626, July 16, p. 1394.

<sup>2</sup> Handwritten notations on the source text indicated that Ambassador Johnson had "no objection" to holding the meeting between the two Chairmen and the French and that Johnson agreed with Dennis Allen's belief that the Russians would probably insist on a Chinese Communist presence which would mean a five-power gathering. An additional handwritten notation indicates that Allen was advised of the Ambassador's notations.

---

Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 301

The Secretary of State to the Under Secretary of State (Smith)<sup>1</sup>

TOP SECRET

WASHINGTON, July 16, 1954.

MY DEAR GENERAL SMITH: The following basic instructions,<sup>2</sup> which have been approved by the President, will guide you as head of the United States Delegation in your participation in the Indochina phase of the Geneva Conference for which you are leaving today.<sup>3</sup>

1. I append hereto as Annex A a Six Point France-United States Position Paper, dated July 14, 1954.<sup>4</sup> Attached thereto is a Seven Point Memorandum setting out the terms which the French Government states it believes are obtainable at Geneva by negotiation, and which would be acceptable to France, and France believes, to Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia.<sup>5</sup>

2. The United States recognizes that these four nations have a direct and primary interest as belligerents which entitles them to negotiate a settlement without any coercion or pressure from the United States. As stated in the Position Paper, the United States will not seek "to

---

<sup>1</sup> A copy of this letter is also filed in 396.1 GE/7-1654.

<sup>2</sup> Under Secretary Smith's original instructions were contained in telegram Tosec 138, May 12, p. 778.

<sup>3</sup> Under Secretary Smith departed for Geneva on the afternoon of July 16.

<sup>4</sup> Ante, p. 1363.

<sup>5</sup> Attached to the position paper. p. 1364.

impose its views in any way upon those primarily interested", i.e., France and Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia.

3. Therefore, your role at the Conference will be that of the representative of a nation friendly to the non-Communist states primarily interested, which desires to assist, where desired, in arriving at a just settlement. You will not, however, go beyond this role.

4. If there is a cease-fire, armistice or political settlement which conforms substantially to the Seven Points referred to in the annexed Position Paper, and which is agreed to by the states primarily interested, you are authorized to make a declaration of the attitude of the United States in the form of the annexed declaration, marked Annex B. This will be a unilateral declaration, unless certain of the non-Communist states desire to associate themselves with it, in which case this is acceptable. The United States will not, however, become cosignatory with the Communists in any declaration.

5. You will note that the Position Paper states that if the terms of settlement differ materially from those set out in the Seven Points, the United States will not be asked or expected by France to respect those terms and "it may publicly disassociate itself from such differing terms."

6. In the event that you are in doubt as to whether the settlement conforms substantially to, or differs materially from, the Seven Points referred to in the Position Paper, you will seek instructions before either refusing to make the declaration contemplated by the above paragraph numbered 4 or publicly disassociating the United States as contemplated by the above paragraph numbered 5. Of course, before taking any important action which could have serious repercussions upon our international relations, you will naturally communicate with me.

7. You will avoid participation in the negotiations in any way which would imply, or give the Communists a plausible case for contending, that the United States was so responsible for the result that it is in honor bound to guarantee that result to the Communists. We apprehend that the Communists might offer to make certain concessions if the United States would then guarantee the settlement so far as they were concerned. You should, so far as possible, avoid getting yourself into a position which would lend itself to such a Communist maneuver. Accordingly, the non-Communist belligerents, rather than the United States, should be the active negotiators, and such ideas as we have should be put forward to the French or Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia, as may be appropriate, and through them to the Conference if they find it desirable to adopt such ideas as their own.

8. Also, since the United States is not prepared at the present time to give any commitment that it will intervene in the war if the Geneva Conference fails—the United States position in this respect is set out in President Eisenhower's letter of June 16, 1954, to President Coty<sup>6</sup>—you should avoid as far as possible exerting any pressures or giving advice to the French of such a character that, if there is no cease-fire, the French can plausibly contend that it is because of our advice to, or pressure upon, them, and that therefore we are morally obligated to intervene at once in a military way.

Sincerely yours,

JOHN FOSTER DULLES

Annex B<sup>7</sup>

The Government of the United States being resolved to devote its efforts to the strengthening of peace in accordance with the principles and purposes of the United Nations

Takes note of the Agreements concluded at Geneva on _____ (date) _____ between the _____ military commands

Declares with regard to aforesaid Agreements that

(i) it will refrain from the threat or the use of force to disturb them, in accordance with Art. 2(4) of the Charter of the United Nations dealing with the obligation of members to refrain in their international relations from the threat or use of force; and

(ii) it will seek that other states which are not members of the United Nations shall similarly refrain from the use of force, in accordance with the Art. 2(6) of the Charter of the United Nations dealing with insuring that states which are not members of the United Nations shall act in accordance with the principles of the Charter so far as may be necessary for the maintenance of international peace and security;<sup>8</sup> and

(iii) it would view any renewal of the aggression in violation of these agreements with grave concern and as seriously threatening international peace and security.

<sup>6</sup>The text of President Eisenhower's letter to French President Coty, June 16, is printed in Public Papers of the Presidents of the United States: Dwight D. Eisenhower, 1954, pp. 583–584. The pertinent portion of the letter, the fourth paragraph, is printed in volume XIII.

<sup>7</sup>The copy of this draft in the Dulles papers at the Eisenhower Library bears the handwritten initials of President Eisenhower indicating approval.

<sup>8</sup>The following marginal notation appeared opposite paragraph (ii): "Deletion recommended by Secretary. Tosec 560." Telegram Tosec 560, July 17, read as follows: "Upon reflection and in view of reactions here, believe that Subparagraph 2 of US Declaration Annex B should, if at all possible, be eliminated as subject to misconstruction. Suggest you inform Phleger." (396.1 GE/7-1754)

396.1 GE/7-1654 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET

GENEVA, July 16, 1954—4 p. m.

Secto 622. Repeated information Paris 70, Saigon 42. Following is unofficial translation of draft given us by French which is latest refinement of text of clauses to be included in cessation hostilities agreement to cover certain political and administrative requirements:

"Article 1. Each regrouping zone is placed under the administration of the side which is carrying out the regroupment of its forces within it.

"Article 2. The administration of the zones which cease to come under one authority in order to pass to the authority of another is transferred on the day the regroupment is finished. The passing of responsibilities is carried out in conformity with the provision of article (blank) (military on the passing of command).

"Article 3. Vietnamese Nationals as well as French and foreigners residing in any part of the territory of Vietnam will be able, during a period of six months following the going into effect of this agreement, to transfer freely their domicile to any other part of the territory. The competent authorities of the two sides will take all necessary measures in order to facilitate the transfer of persons and property.

"Article 4. No one will be the object of measures of reprisal because of his previous political activities in favor of one of the sides.

"Article 5. The security of French and foreign Nationals as well as the safety of their property will be assured throughout the territory of Vietnam by the responsible authorities who must take all necessary measures to this effect. No legislative, administrative or judicial measure may be taken against these persons and their property in an arbitrary or discriminatory manner."

JOHNSON

396.1 GE/7-1354 : Telegram

The Secretary of State to the United States Delegation<sup>1</sup>

SECRET

WASHINGTON, July 16, 1954—5:33 p. m.

Tosec 549. Secto 600.<sup>2</sup> With respect USDel comment that French outline agreement for Vietnam provides for cease-fire before international control mechanism is installed and ready to act, Department refers to numbered paragraph 17 French working paper (Secto 575<sup>3</sup>) which says "International Control Commission is to be on the spot from the moment of the cessation of hostilities in Indochina." Similar provision made for Laos and Cambodia in working paper transmitted

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by Sturm of FE/PSA. Repeated to Paris as telegram 205 and to Saigon as telegram 203.

<sup>2</sup> Dated July 13, 1957.

<sup>3</sup> Dated July 8, p. 1305.

Secto 605.<sup>4</sup> This point should be clarified. Further comment on Sectos 600 and 606<sup>5</sup> will have to await spelling out of conditions under the several headings.<sup>6</sup>

DULLES

---

<sup>4</sup> Dated July 14, p. 1369.

<sup>5</sup> Dated July 14, p. 1372.

<sup>6</sup> The U.S. Delegation reported in telegram Secto 651, July 18, that "With regard to refrel [Tosec 549], USDel can only point out that if agreement for cease-fire in Indochina is reached in next couple of days and if date for cease-fire is set, as would appear inevitable, fairly soon, cease-fire will take place in absence of functioning international control commission on spot. This result seems to us as undesirable as it is inevitable. It reflects long standing conference deadlock on major principles of control arrangements." (396.1 GE/7-1854)

---

396.1 GE/7-1454: Telegram

The Secretary of State to the United States Delegation<sup>1</sup>

SECRET

WASHINGTON, July 16, 1954—5:33 p. m.

Tosec 550. Secto 601.<sup>2</sup> Vietminh proposal touches on only one phase of possible economic relations between Communist and non-Communist zones Vietnam. As this suggestion raises problem East-West trade, USDel should attempt discover contemplated duration such arrangement if made; nature goods to be exchanged; currency or currencies to be used; control mechanisms to be set up. These problems will necessarily assume importance and affect our attitude toward Geneva agreement if inter-zone trade provision written into it.

Since as Saigon 194<sup>3</sup> states means will be found carry on trade between zones in any case Department interested know why Vietminh may be concerned to regularize it.

While there is reason to fear that formal economic exchange between two zones would work to political advantage Vietminh, some concession this character may be necessary to gain Vietminh acceptance of principle of exchange of populations. It seems likely also such exchanges goods would work to economic advantage Vietminh. However developments past few months in Indochina may have altered circumstances on which this judgment is based. Embassy Saigon should be able furnish timely comment this respect.

Department's initial judgment of French draft submitted Secto 599<sup>4</sup> is it does not adequately cover point six of US-UK reply to French aide-mémoire of June 26. That item specifies that provision

---

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by Sturm of FE/PSA. Repeated to Paris as telegram 204 and to Saigon as telegram 204.

<sup>2</sup> Dated July 14, p. 1358.

<sup>3</sup> Not printed, but see footnote 2, p. 1359.

<sup>4</sup> Dated July 13, p. 1356.

shall be made for the "peaceful humane transfer, under international supervision, of those people desiring to be moved from one zone to another of Vietnam." Numbered paragraph (b) does not in our view adequately spell out this provision, and paragraphs (a) and (c) lay too much stress on rights of French and foreign nationals.

DULLES

---

396.1 GE/7-1654 : Telegram

The Secretary of State to the United States Delegation<sup>1</sup>

SECRET

WASHINGTON, July 16, 1954—6 : 37 p. m.

Tosec 553. For Under Secretary from Secretary. There is rising concern which found utterance at my hearing today with Foreign Relations Committee that vast amounts of war matériel from US will fall into hostile hands. I hope that you will have the opportunity to emphasize to French importance of cease-fire terms which will permit safeguarding or at least destroying this matériel.

Hearing as a whole went well and there was no expressed criticism of your return to Geneva.

DULLES

---

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by the Secretary of State.

---

396.1 GE/7-1654 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

TOP SECRET PRIORITY

GENEVA, July 16, 1954—7 p. m.

Secto 626. Repeated information Paris 72, Saigon 44. Saw Chauvel this afternoon. He told me that Mendes-France and Molotov had dinner last night, and Soviets had launched into substantive discussion even before cocktails were served and continued throughout dinner, and Mendes-France and Molotov had discussion following dinner with only interpreters present which lasted more than 3 hours until almost 1 a. m. Discussion covered whole range of outstanding questions at least once; according to Chauvel some of them "twenty times". Chauvel said Mendes had stuck firmly to French positions and with very minor exceptions of elections mentioned below, Molotov had, while being very pleasant, not budged an inch. On elections Molotov finally made suggestion that conference agree on date by which two governments of Vietnam would have decided date for elections. Mendes rejected this. Chauvel's assessment was that Communists expected to find Mendes

“soft”, are somewhat confused at his firmness, and are still testing him.<sup>1</sup>

There have been no other major developments. I called Chauvel's particular attention to paragraph 3 of position paper on Indochina agreed at Paris and noted that French were still using term “guaranteeing powers” in draft armistice, and asked how he perceived the situation in this regard. He said that he conceived guarantee to be more than that embodied in French draft of conference declaration (Secto 597<sup>2</sup>). I pointed out that position paper made it clear that US will express its position unilaterally or in association only with non-Communist states, and was not quite sure how French concept of conference declaration fitted therewith. I said I had particularly instructed Bonsal reserve our position on last paragraph of French draft providing for consultation among conference powers on reports of violations by supervisory commission. Although I had no instructions on subject, I did not believe US would be willing assume continuing obligation consult with all conference powers including Communist China and Viet Minh. Chauvel said that in light of paragraph 3 of position paper, French draft provided only for conference “noting” armistice agreement.

Chauvel said French were concerned over reports continued contacts between Tran Van Do and Dong. They did not know exactly what was happening, they know very little about Do, but they had impression he was unsophisticated and might be “taken into camp” by Dong. They felt after zones between defined and two governments each clearly responsible for own territories, such contacts would probably be desirable and necessary, but in present situation might be dangerous and could even result in surprise move bringing about something in nature of coalition government. Chauvel said De Jean was going to see Bao Dai to determine what Bao Dai knew about the matter and whether he had approved.

In reply to my question on what French conceived to be major outstanding issues, Chauvel listed: (1) military demarcation line in Vietnam, (2) regrouping in Vietnam, particularly in delta area, where Chauvel said Viet Minh would be required to move out two divisions from areas that they now occupied so as permit separation from French-Vietnamese forces. In Laos he said major question was retention small number French troops there (consideration was being given to "changing their flag" from French to Laos), and also political questions in Laos. He said there were no major issues on Cambodia.

---

<sup>1</sup> With respect to this meeting the U.S. Delegation reported to the Department of State in telegram Secto 621, July 16, as follows: “Latournelle today told us that in course of dinner meeting with Molotov last night, Mendes-France gave complete statement of French positions on Indochina settlement. Molotov listened attentively and courteously but gave no indication of any yielding from previously assumed Communist positions. According to Latournelle. Molotov behaved like a ‘feather bed’”. (396.1 GE/7-1654)

<sup>2</sup> Dated July 13. p. 1355.

Chauvel also mentioned international control and asked whether I had any new instructions on subject. I said I had not and subject had not been discussed at Paris in any detail.

UK informed me today that meeting was proposed this afternoon between Mendes, Eden and Molotov to go over present stage of work of conference and make catalogue of work to be done. They asked whether I wished to be present, pointing out if US were present Soviets would probably insist on presence of Chinese, thus turning meeting into "five-power affair". I replied that I had no objection to their going ahead on three-power basis.<sup>3</sup>

JOHNSON

---

<sup>3</sup> See telegram Secto 632, July 17, p. 1408.

---

396.1 GE/7-1654 : Telegram

The Secretary of State to the United States Delegation<sup>1</sup>

TOP SECRET

WASHINGTON, July 16, 1954—7:38 p. m.

Tosec 555. Secto 597.<sup>2</sup> US position is still that it will not negotiate and sign with Communist bloc any multilateral declaration on Geneva conference or on any agreement issuing therefrom.

With respect French draft we note with concern political content particularly commitment to hold elections in Vietnam at time to be chosen by "competent representative authorities".

Final paragraph draft appears contemplate perpetuation of conference through imposing on participant states obligation to act as referee on matters submitted by International Control Commissions. This seems be off-hand manner of charging such states with obligation to "guarantee" Geneva settlement which US not prepared accept.

Following comments apply to numbered paragraphs Soviet counter-proposal Secto 615<sup>3</sup> and Working Group comments Secto 617:<sup>4</sup>

- 1) Agree with USDel comment.
- 2) Agree with Working Group amendment. Soviet recognition of territorial integrity of Vietnam indicates they have no doubt as to who would win any elections held as early as June 1955.
- 3) It would be interesting know exactly what this paragraph signifies to Soviets. Is this paragraph and its French counterpart in-

---

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by Sturm of FE/PSA. Repeated to Paris as telegram 211 and to Saigon as telegram 208.

<sup>2</sup> Dated July 13, p. 1355.

<sup>3</sup> Dated July 15, p. 1384.

<sup>4</sup> Dated July 15, p. 1376.

tended to include formal diplomatic recognition all around? How are Vietnam and the Vietminh regimes to be accommodated within this formula?

4) Who are the "parties": military commands? In the Working Group comment on this paragraph what is meant by "representative authority"?

5) Again who are the "parties"? Will Russians openly acknowledge that paragraph applies to Vietminh also?

6) This paragraph is of great interest to US because of prospective Southeast Asia security pact. In its present form it is accordingly wholly unacceptable to us. Do Russians mean it to be applicable to Vietminh also?

7) What is meant by second sentence? Who are "the interested parties"?

8) Agree with French comment. We note that under this proposal elections would have taken place before expiration 380 days French propose as period for separating opposing forces (Gento 81<sup>5</sup>).

9) We consider this paragraph irrelevant and objectionable.

10) As received this paragraph says authorities must not "permit" individual or collective collaboration. We assume this should read "punish", and agree with French comment.

11) Would implementation of this paragraph on movement of persons be left to chance?

12) Department's comment on similar French proposal applies. Laloy's remark on this subject is not clear.

It strikes us that Soviets in this draft have done masterly job of masking existence of Vietminh.

We agree with Laloy's three numbered objections stated at beginning of message.

Question of financing will be taken under advisement.

DULLES

---

* Dated July 15, p. 1382.

---

396.1 GE/7-1654: Telegram

The Secretary of State to the United States Delegation<sup>1</sup>

SECRET

WASHINGTON, July 16, 1954—8:14 p. m.

Tosec 557. Secto 618.<sup>2</sup> US-UK seven points<sup>3</sup> given Prime Minister Diem in Secretary's message<sup>4</sup> were edited to eliminate references to Laos and Cambodia and state in general terms territorial conditions as they affect Vietnam. Mention of enclave in northern delta purposely eliminated since condition was softened by phrase "if possible" and

---

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by Sturm of FE/PSA and Gullion of S/P. Repeated to Saigon as telegram 210 and to Paris as telegram 216.

<sup>2</sup> Dated July 16, p. 1386.

<sup>3</sup> For text, see telegram 4853 to Paris. June 28, p. 1256.

<sup>4</sup> For text, see telegram Tosec 529, July 10, p. 1324.

developments since adoption of seven points indicated unlikelihood that any such enclave could in fact be retained for more than transitional period.

Ambassador Johnson should take appropriate occasion state to Tran Van Do and Ambassador Heath to Prime Minister Diem, that Department fully recognizes justice of Vietnamese Government's claim to sovereignty over all national territory and views loss of northern areas, which it cannot accept as final, as dictated by harsh military necessity. They should also indicate that in our discussions with French and British we specifically stressed great importance of maintaining enclave and that this was implied in our phrase "at least" in point two.

We would welcome any estimate USDel and Saigon can furnish on basis present information with respect Vietnamese intentions, if military agreement does not provide northern enclave. Specifically are they likely to pull out of Geneva? If so will Diem resign or undertake independent action in Vietnam?

It has never yet been made clear how or through what agency Vietnamese people will or will not be associated with agreement between military commands which provides for division of country.<sup>5</sup>

DULLES

---

<sup>5</sup> The U.S. Delegation reported in telegram Secto 643, July 18, that "with reference final paragraph reference telegram [Tosec 557], demarcation line will be established through agreement on cessation of hostilities signed by Franco-Vietnamese and Vietminh military commands. Members of conference including Vietnamese Government will presumably 'take note' of agreement (with exception, of course, of US). No other 'association' of Vietnamese people with this purely military division of country is contemplated so far as we are aware." (396.1 GE/7-1854)

---

396.1 GE/7-1654 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET

PRIORITY

GENEVA, July 16, 1954—11 p. m.

Secto 627. Repeated information Paris 73, Saigon 45. After background statement by Laloy for benefit of Associated States representatives who although they had received original French draft declaration to be issued by conference (Secto 597<sup>1</sup>) had only today shortly before meeting received Soviet counterproposal (Secto 615<sup>2</sup>) and new French draft (Secto 628<sup>3</sup>). Laloy also explained reasoning behind new French draft along general lines of conclusions reached at tri-

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated July 13, p. 1355.

<sup>2</sup> Dated July 15, p. 1384.

<sup>3</sup> Infra.

partite working level meeting yesterday (Secto 617<sup>4</sup>). He gave following as guiding principles in new French text :

1. Separation of Vietnam from Cambodia and Laos;
2. Non-repetition in declaration of matters already handled in proposed military agreements;
3. Maintenance of position regarding not fixing date for elections in Vietnam;
4. Modification of article regarding withdrawal of French troops so that these are now to be withdrawn on request of governments concerned;
5. Acceptance of Soviet idea contained in paragraph 3 of Soviet counterproposal (Secto 615), but
6. By maintaining in brackets portion of Soviet proposal (reproduced in paragraph 9 of new French proposal) to leave this phrase open for further clarification.

Cambodian Ambassador Nong Kimny took issue with paragraph 3 of new draft. He wished to get across idea that Cambodia (as well as Laos) had held periodic elections and would continue to do so. This was finally redrafted so that it now reads "all citizens . . . will be able to take their place in the national community by taking part in the next general elections which, in accordance with the constitutions of each of these countries, will take place by secret ballot respecting fundamental liberties".

With regard to Article 4, Cambodians presented a proposed Cambodian declaration to the effect that for duration of armistice period in Vietnam, Cambodian Armed Forces would be no larger than those sufficient for defense of Cambodia and would not constitute a threat to anyone. He proposed that a definite time period for duration of Vietnamese armistice might be fixed in Cambodian declaration. This proposal was somewhat brusquely disapproved by other delegations including French and Vietnamese who pointed out that it was essential that no time period be set in any way for duration of pre-electoral period in Vietnam. Nong Kimny withdrew his draft and said he would think the matter over.

Sam Sary remarked that proposed declaration in fact gives Cambodia no assurances or guarantees for her security in the future. He entered a general reservation based on fact Cambodian delegation had only received text less than hour before meeting.

After meeting Sam Sary told Bonsal that Cambodia most reluctant to make any commitment with respect to territorial integrity of Vietnam because Cambodia considers boundary between Cambodia and Vietnam was set arbitrarily by President of France and that it leaves outside of Cambodia large number of people of Cambodian racial origin. For this reason Cambodia makes a general reservation.

---

<sup>4</sup> Dated July 15, p. 1376.

Vietnamese representative (Chau) emphasized need for leaving imprecise duration of pre-electoral period in Vietnam.

UK (Allen) and US (Bonsal) expressed view new text represented considerable progress. US position on not participating in consultation with other conference members regarding questions transmitted to them by international control commissions was reiterated.

After meeting, Bonsal endeavored to make clear to Cambodian delegates that it would not be possible practically to guarantee Cambodian security through any mechanism composed of conference members and subject to Communist veto. He stated that Cambodian security would have to be insured through other means which he was confident US and other interested countries looked forward to discussing with Cambodian Government once satisfactory cessation of hostilities achieved. Such cessation to be satisfactory must not bind hands of Cambodian Government or prevent it from cooperating with other non-Communist states in defense matters.

JOHNSON

---

396.1 GE/7-1654 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET PRIORITY

GENEVA, July 16, 1954—11 p. m.

Secto 628. Repeated information Paris 74, Saigon 46. Following is unofficial translation of French redraft of proposed conference declaration prepared following discussion of Soviet draft Secto 615<sup>1</sup> and Secto 617:<sup>2</sup>

"1. The conference takes note of the agreements which terminate hostilities in Cambodia, Laos and Vietnam and which organize international control and supervision of the implementation of the provisions of these agreements.

2. The conference is pleased to see peace re-established in Cambodia and Laos, which countries, following the placing in effect of the provisions contemplated in this declaration and in the agreements on the cessation of hostilities, will be able thereafter to take up, without obstacle, in full independence and sovereignty, their role in the peaceful community of nations.

3. The conference takes note of the declarations made by the Governments of Cambodia and Laos with reference to their intent of adopting measures which will permit all citizens to take their place in the national community and, especially, re their intentions to proceed to general elections with secret ballot which will take place in accordance with the constitution of each of these countries, with respect for fundamental liberties.<sup>3</sup>

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated July 15, p. 1384.

<sup>2</sup> Dated July 15, p. 1376.

4. The conference also takes note of the declarations of these governments according to which (text to be drafted on the basis of the declarations of the Governments of Laos and of Cambodia re their defense needs).

5. The conference notes that the agreement concerning Vietnam has as its essential goal the settlement of military questions in order to put an end to hostilities, but does not prejudice the solution of other problems related to the definitive restoration of peace in Vietnam. It expresses the conviction that, following the placing in effect of the provisions contemplated in this declaration and in the agreement on the cessation of hostilities, Vietnam will be able to take up without obstacle, in full independence and sovereignty its role in the peaceful community of nations.

6. The conference declares that the settlement of political problems in Vietnam must be carried out on the basis of respect for the principles of the independence, the unity, and the territorial integrity of Vietnam. This settlement must permit the Vietnamese people to enjoy the fundamental liberties guaranteed by democratic institutions formed following free elections by secret ballot which will take place under the control of an international commission, composed of representatives of the states' members of the International Control Commission set up by the agreement on the cessation of hostilities, when, in the opinion of the competent representative authorities in each zone, the restoration of peace in the country has made sufficient progress and all the necessary conditions are present in order to permit the free expression of the national will.

7. The provisions of the agreements on the cessation of hostilities meant to assure the protection of persons and property must be applied in the strictest fashion and particularly must permit everyone in Vietnam to decide freely as to the zone where he wishes to live.

8. The conference notes the declaration of the Government of the French Republic according to which that government is prepared to withdraw its troops from the territories of Cambodia, Laos, and Vietnam at the request of the governments concerned.

9. The conference takes note of the declarations of the French Government according to which the settlement of all the problems related

---

<sup>3</sup> In telegram Secto 629, July 17, the U.S. Delegation transmitted to the Department of State a new redraft paragraph 3 that the delegation had received from the French. The text of paragraph 3 now read as follows :

"The conference takes note of the declarations made by the Governments of Cambodia and Laos with reference to their intent of adopting measures which will permit all citizens to take their place in the national community, especially by participating in the next general elections which, in accordance with the constitution of each of these countries, will take place with secret ballot and with respect for fundamental liberties." (396.1 GE/7-1754) to the restoration and to the strengthening of peace in Cambodia, Laos, and Vietnam is based upon respect for the independence, the sovereignty, the unity and the territorial integrity of Cambodia, Laos and Vietnam.

In its relations with Cambodia, Laos and Vietnam, each of the members of the Geneva conference (without prejudice to its political, military, diplomatic or other relations with the states concerned at the time of the signature of the agreements on the cessation of hostilities) undertakes to respect the sovereignty, the independence, the unity and the territorial integrity of the said states and to refrain from any interference in their internal affairs.

10. The members of the conference agree to consult together on any question which may be transmitted to them by the International Control Commissions, in order to study the measures which may appear necessary to insure observance of the agreements on the cessation of hostilities in Indochina.”

Immediately following telegram describes discussion of this draft at working level meeting today attended by France, US, UK and three Associated States.<sup>4</sup>

JOHNSON

---

<sup>4</sup> Telegram Secto 627, July 16, supra.

JULY 17, 1954

751G.00/7-1754

Memorandum by the Special Adviser to the United States Delegation (Bonsal) to the Head of the Delegation (Smith)

SECRET

[GENEVA,] July 17, 1954.

Laloy of the French Delegation tells me that there will be a meeting this afternoon between the French Delegation (Latournelle, Gros, Laloy and Cheysson) and the Viet Minh Delegation in order to go over both the draft military agreements and the draft declaration. The idea is to see whether questions to be settled by Ministers can be separated from those which can be considered purely technical.

In reply to my question, Laloy told me that the Vietnam Delegation will not be represented at this meeting. While the Vietnam Delegation has participated in the military conversations, it is Laloy's view that these are <sup>1</sup> at a higher level and that there is no reason for Vietnamese participation. (I think this is a mistake.)

---

<sup>1</sup> On a copy of this document in Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 306, the words "these are" have been stricken and the following words inserted: "today's meeting is".

396.1 GE/7-1654 : Telegram

The Secretary of State to the United States Delegation<sup>1</sup>

SECRET

WASHINGTON, July 17, 1954—1:07 p. m.

Tosec 558. We agree French redraft of proposed conference declaration transmitted Secto 628<sup>2</sup> marks some advance, subject to comments made Tosec 555.<sup>3</sup>

We are however still perturbed by numbered paragraph six which says elections are to be held in Vietnam when "in opinion of competent representative authorities in each zone" such action is feasible. Assuming "competent representative authorities" to mean governments of respective zones, we foresee almost certain disagreement between them with result that elections in Vietminh zone might take place few months hence while being delayed much longer time in non-Communist zone. We fear any disagreement between zones on this issue would tend be resolved in favor Vietminh with corresponding prejudice to interests of free world. How does working group propose such situation should be dealt with?

With reference to numbered paragraph 8, would proposed French declaration state or imply French troops would be withdrawn only "at request of governments concerned" and not before or otherwise?

We agree with Bonsal's remarks to Cambodian delegates, but we do not wish them to be left with impression US will be willing discuss question of Cambodian security only if and when satisfactory cease-fire is achieved throughout Indochina.

DULLES

---

<sup>1</sup>Drafted by Sturm of FE/PSA. Repeated to Paris as telegram 222 and to Saigon as telegram 217.

<sup>2</sup>Dated July 16, p. 1400.

<sup>3</sup>Dated July 16, p. 1396.

751G.00/7-1754

Memorandum by the Special Adviser to the United States Delegation (Bonsal) to the Deputy United States Representative and Coordinator of the Delegation (Johnson)

SECRET

[GENEVA,] July 17, 1954.

Subject: Final Conference Declaration

Paragraph 10 of the current French draft declaration<sup>1</sup> for issuance by the Conference reads as follows:

"10. The members of the Conference agree to consult together on any question which may be transmitted to them by the international control commissions, in order to study the measures which may appear necessary to insure observance of the agreements on the cessation of hostilities in Indochina.”

---

<sup>1</sup>For full text, see telegram Secto 628, July 16, p. 1400.

We have consistently taken the position that we would not consult with the Communist powers regarding matters related to Indochina after the close of the present Conference. Therefore we should either suggest that this paragraph be omitted or that it merely provide that the international commission will report to the Geneva Conference powers on such matters related to the implementation of the agreements on the cessation of hostilities as the international commission has not been able to handle.

The following wording might be appropriate in the event the latter alternative is accepted :

“10. The International Control Commission (or Commissions) will inform the members of the Conference regarding the progress of its (their) work and particularly regarding questions which appear to involve a threat to the successful implementation of the agreements on the cessation of hostilities. In the event that unanimity is not achieved in the preparation of such reports, any member or members of the Commission may communicate directly with the members of the Geneva Conference.”

---

396.1 GE/7-1754 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET

GENEVA, July 17, 1954—3 p. m.

Secto 630. Repeated information Paris 76, Saigon 48. Caccia gave Johnson brief account of Mendes-France, Eden, Molotov meeting last night. More complete account will be received and transmitted later today.<sup>1</sup> The three met for approximately three hours, from 6 until 9 p. m.

It was agreed the following eight documents are working papers before some or all conference members: French draft cease-fire agreement on Vietnam, French draft cease-fire agreement on Laos, French draft cease-fire agreement on Cambodia, Viet Minh draft cease-fire agreement on Vietnam (not yet received by US delegation), French draft control organization for Vietnam, French draft control organization for Laos and Cambodia, declaration by Cambodia on military and political matters and similar declaration by Laos (neither country has yet presented drafts), and French-Russian drafts and counter-drafts on final declaration of conference.

---

<sup>1</sup> Telegram Secto 632, July 17, p. 1408.

Discussion then turned to substantive issues, with Mendes listing: (1) line in Vietnam, (2) elections in Vietnam, (3) international control organization as major issues requiring ministerial decision. Molotov added (1) time required for completion regrouping; that is, French proposal for 380 days vs. Communist proposal for maximum for six months; (2) prevention of entry of arms, ammunition and foreign forces to all three states; (3) foreign bases in all three states; (4) nonentry of three states into military alliances. Eden added regroupment in Laos.

There was vigorous but inconclusive discussion on three French points, neither side moving from previously stated positions.

The Laotian delegation informs us that they had talk with Viet Minh this morning with completely negative results. The Viet Minh demand about half the country for regroupment zone for Pathet Lao and at same time that there be formed for entire country government of national unification in which Pathet Lao would be represented. These demands were rejected by Laotian delegation.

Latournelle tells us that at Mendes-France dinner for Molotov July 15, Molotov on two occasions referred to US as "war-like power".<sup>2</sup> Mendes-France denied this stating that he would not have gone to Paris to see Secretary unless he was convinced sincerity US desire for restoration of peace in Indochina on terms which Mendes-France believes acceptable and honorable.

SMITH

---

<sup>2</sup> This meeting was reported in telegram Secto 626, July 16, p. 1394.

396.1 GE/7-1854: Telegram

*Smith-Eden-Mendès-France Meeting, Geneva, July 17, Afternoon:
The United States Delegation to the Department of State*

SECRET      PRIORITY

GENEVA, July 18, 1954—11 a. m.

Secto 638. From the Under Secretary. Limit distribution. I met with Eden and Mendes-France at the latter's residence yesterday afternoon. Previous to Eden's arrival I had a few minutes with Mendes-France alone and gave him full background regarding my role here and regarding impossibility that US should sign any conference document with Communist powers. I read him extracts from my letter of instructions. I made clear that these applied also to current French draft of declaration to be issued by conference. I also emphasized extreme importance of evacuating military equipment in order that it should not fall into Communist hands. I said that if there were any difficulties of local evacuation from advanced posts, heavy equipment should rather be destroyed on spot than abandoned to enemy. He said instructions to this effect already issued, and all equipment would be needed in south. However he would send urgent message emphasizing this. He understood my own role here and was grateful for your personal message, which I had made a little florid.

When Eden arrived, the three of us began with extensive discussion of status of international control. Minor issue of number of commissions (one or three) and coordinating mechanism if three commissions appears on way to solution with Viet Minh acceptance of three commission principle.

So far as voting is concerned, it appeared to us all that we would have to accept majority voting on minor or routine questions and unanimity for major matters. We speculated as to possibility of securing acceptance of majority vote to determine which are minor and which major matters. There was general agreement that built-in veto, in view probable composition of commission (see below) might work more to our advantage if solid "neutral" on our side was included in commission.

Chauvel stated that two French working papers on controls (Sectos 575<sup>1</sup> and 605<sup>2</sup>) had been circulated to other members of conference but that no counter-proposals had yet been received from Communists. Molotov had indicated to Eden that he saw no particular problem with French papers on this subject. Those papers, however, do not cover matter of composition.

On composition we agreed that Communists would not drop demand that at least one Communist power be included. We tentatively therefore agreed that best position might be Colombo powers plus one Communist power plus one Western neutral (Belgium or Canada were mentioned, although it was recognized Canada would probably be unacceptable because of Commonwealth ties).

On question of freedom of movement for international commission it was general view that commission would not in fact receive necessary facilities for thorough timely inspections throughout Viet Minh zones and that therefore to insist on theoretical freedom of movement would probably favor other side more than ourselves.

I then made clear that US could not agree any proposal requiring all conference members consult on reports supervisory commissions. I added that we did not wish in any way to perpetuate conference. I suggested, however, we would have no objection if, in armistice document rather than in conference declaration, statement were made that the international commission would report on its work and particularly on difficulties encountered to members of conference. Mendes-France and Chauvel both stated they feared this would result in a control commission having no "top" although they recognize futility of a guarantee system in which Communists participate. Chauvel pursued subject of trying to get something into conference declaration on this subject of which all members could "take note" and which would bind none to consultations.

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated July 8, p. 1305.

<sup>2</sup> Dated July 14, p. 1369.

Turning to subject of demarcation line Eden expressed hunch that final settlement would be near eighteenth parallel. He wondered whether it might not be possible to trade some nonessential area between seventeenth and eighteenth parallels for position on elections which we could all accept. French have three successive positions on lines between seventeenth and eighteenth parallels which they intend present as necessary in negotiations. Mendes-France stated that our interests require delay of at least two years before elections. Soviet thinking on election date seems to be any time in 1955. Mendes-France stated that on this point therefore French and Soviets are only about six months apart, since French could accept date mid-1956.

SMITH

---

396.1 GE/7-1754

Memorandum by the Special Adviser to the United States Delegation (Bonsal) to the Deputy United States Representative and Coordinator of the Delegation (Johnson)

SECRET

GENEVA, July 17, 1954.

De Latournelle telephoned me at 5:20 this afternoon to say that he and Gros and Cheysson would like to call on me to discuss the proposed French draft declaration to be issued by the Conference. It was suggested that Mr. Phleger might also be present at this meeting.

After consulting with you, I telephoned de Latournelle at 5:55 and stated that in view of the conversation which General Smith had had with M. Mendes-France this afternoon and in view also of the third point of the joint French-US position paper prepared in Paris on July 15, there did not seem to be any useful purpose served by further US working level participation in the discussion of this declaration. I suggested that if there was anything unclear in the situation it should probably be discussed directly by General Smith and M. Mendes-France.

De Latournelle stated that he would report our conversation to Mendes-France.

396.1 GE/7-1754 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET

GENEVA, July 17, 1954—7 p. m.

Secto 632. Repeated information Paris 79, Saigon 50. Following account of Mendes-France-Eden-Molotov meeting last night is based on report of this meeting to Foreign Office made available to Johnson by Caccia. This telegram expands upon and supersedes preliminary account transmitted in first three paragraphs Secto 630 (repeated information Paris 76, Saigon 48).<sup>1</sup>

At Eden's suggestion, French enumerated documents before conference:

(a) Armistice agreements to be signed by local commanders-in-chief. French have prepared drafts for Vietnam and Laos and Cambodians draft for Cambodia. Viet Minh delegation preparing counter draft for Vietnam.

(b) Control arrangements. French have circulated papers for Vietnam, Laos, and Cambodia.

(c) Political arrangements. After having seen military documents, certain delegations might make unilateral statements. For example, Laos and Cambodia are preparing statements on their willingness to limit their armed forces. Conference as whole would then agree upon common statement taking note of military agreements and unilateral declarations. French have circulated draft of such statement. Soviets have prepared counter draft and French second redraft.

French explained that if conference did not have time to agree on all details of armistice, it might approve only parts providing for cessation of hostilities and first stage of regroupment. Remaining aspects of agreements could be covered by statement of general principles for guidance of experts who would work out details after conference had dispersed.

It was agreed that British, French, and Soviet experts would meet July 17 to consider various drafts.

At Eden's suggestion, Mendes-France summarized main outstanding problems as (a) demarcation line for Vietnam, (b) elections, and (c) control arrangements. Concerning demarcation line, he said French had proposed line near 18th parallel whereas Viet Minh proposed 16th parallel. On elections in Vietnam, he said question was whether to fix firm date now (Soviets had proposed June 1955) or whether, as French proposed, to settle now only manner in which date would be set. Elections in Laos and Cambodia already provided for in constitutions for August and September 1955, respectively. On control, he said main questions were: Whether there should be one commission or three, composition, voting, execution of commissions' recommendations, and freedom of movement for inspection teams.

<sup>1</sup> Dated July 17, p. 1404.

Molotov added to outstanding issues: (d) time required for regrouping (French have proposed 380 days and Soviets 6 months); and (e) prevention of importation of new arms and military personnel subject to certain exceptions for Laos and Cambodia, prohibition of foreign military bases, and prohibition of military alliances by three states.

Eden added (f) question of regroupment areas for resistance forces in Laos.

Discussion then turned to substantive issues:

(a) Elections in Vietnam. Molotov said conference should fix date for elections. He conceded more flexible formula might be found than firm date of June 1955 previously proposed by Soviets and suggested agreement merely that elections be held during 1955 with precise date to be fixed by Vietnamese and Viet Minh authorities.

Mendes-France argued that it would be imprudent to fix date as early as the end of 1955. He suggested two ways of providing necessary flexibility in arrangements: Date for elections might be fixed after completion of regrouping; or exact date might be fixed now and international control commission be given authority to advance date if necessary.

Eden supported Mendes-France on need for flexibility and suggested that two parts of Vietnam fix date after completion of regrouping. Mendes-France agreed to consider this suggestion, but Molotov continued to urge elections during 1955.

(b) Demarcation line. Molotov argued that in moving from 13th to 16th parallel, Viet Minh had made substantial concession which called for proper response from French. Mendes-France disagreed, arguing that Viet Minh would be giving up much less in Annam than they would be getting in Tonkin. He said that Pham Van Dong had admitted that line on 16th parallel would require special arrangements for Tourane, Hue, on route No. 9 leading into Laos. Mendes-France stated that necessity for such special arrangements showed how unnatural demarcation line at 16th parallel would be. He said that there was no chance of persuading French Government to accept line which excluded either Hue or route No. 9. Eden supported Mendes-France.

Molotov suggested that discussion move to question of control arrangements. Mendes-France replied might be better to postpone such discussion. He observed that questions of elections and demarcation line had been discussed together and might be linked in sense that conceivably one party might yield on one question and another party on other.

396.1 GE/7-1754 : Telegram

The Secretary of State to the United States Delegation<sup>1</sup>

SECRET

WASHINGTON, July 17, 1954—7:37 p. m.

Tosec 562. 1. Final report US-UK study group on SEA defense being cabled.<sup>2</sup> Rob Scott requests you make copies available Eden to which we fully agree.

2. Scott asking UK govt to concentrate on two immediate questions:

a. US position that working group of representatives US, UK, France, Australia, New Zealand, Philippines, Thailand should be formed immediately to prepare recommendations on terms of collective security treaty.

b. US position that declaration of intent should be issued quickly whether or not there is a settlement at Geneva.

3. We hope Eden will not continue emphasize efforts toward persuading Colombo Powers at expense moving ahead rapidly on collective defense arrangement.

4. We will, of course, continue our consultations with Australia, New Zealand, Philippines and Thailand.

5. FYI study group agree copies report should not be given other countries but there was informal understanding Australia, New Zealand and Canada could receive copies, which is being followed up here.

DULLES

---

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by Galloway of C.

<sup>2</sup> Infra. For background information on the establishment of the Joint U.S.-U.K. Study Group on Southeast Asia, see volume XIII.

---

Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 254 : Telegram

The Secretary of State to the United States Delegation

SECRET

WASHINGTON, July 17, 1954—8 p. m.

Tosec 563.

[REPORT OF THE JOINT U.S.-U.K. STUDY GROUP ON SOUTHEAST ASIA]

ITEM I

Terms of Reference:

“Assuming France-Associated States and Vietminh reach agreements on Indo-China, which the US and UK are willing to respect—

(a) The precise terms on which the UK and US might be willing to be associated with such agreements; and

(b) The basis on which the free Asian and other interested non-Communist states might be brought into association with the agreements.”

1. There was discussion of the methods of association with such agreements. The UK members preferred a multilateral declaration to be signed by all the countries taking part in the Indo-China phase of the Geneva conference and as many other interested South and South-east Asian states as possible. The US members stated that provided the agreements met US specifications, the US, at the conclusion of the Geneva conference, would be prepared to make a unilateral statement of US policy to the effect that the US would respect the agreements in the sense of applying thereto the non-force principles of Article 2 (4) and (6) of the UN Charter. The US would gladly welcome non-Communist co-signers. The US members were not prepared to envisage negotiating the terms of such a unilateral statement of US policy either directly with the Communists at Geneva or indirectly through discussion of the terms with the Indians or other countries.

2. The US members defined an agreement which the US could respect as being one which (a) in its view substantially fulfilled the seven points communicated to the French by the UK and US<sup>1</sup> and subsequently accepted by France (July 14, 1954);<sup>2</sup> and (b) the Associated States accepted.

3. The UK members pointed out that the UK would wish to make a declaration in a form which as many as possible of other interested states might feel able to use. Some of these countries might not be members of the UN, or not represented there. The UK might therefore wish to avoid too many detailed references to provisions of the Charter, and refer only to the general principles of the UN, in order to secure as wide agreement as possible on the substance and terms of a declaration in respect of an Indo-China settlement.

4. On the assumption that agreements are reached on Indo-China which the US and UK members are willing to respect, the UK members stated that the free Asian and other non-Communist states should be encouraged to bring themselves into association with the agreements on the same basis as the US and the UK. The UK members considered that the first step in securing the support of these powers for a collective defense system would be to induce them to associate themselves with an Indo-China settlement. This would not only help to make that settlement durable and effective, it would also be valuable in the event of violation and in the event of an appeal to the UN.

---

<sup>1</sup> The seven points were contained in telegram 4853 to Paris, June 28, p. 1256.

<sup>2</sup> The French acceptance was contained in the U.S.-France Position Paper, July 14, 1954, p. 1363.

5. The US members agreed that it would be valuable to have free Asian and other interested non-Communist states associate themselves with whatever declarations the US and the UK might make. The US members stated, however, that the value was not so great that the US would be disposed to exert political pressure on other non-Communist countries to associate themselves with the declaration which the US might make.

6. Agreed recommendations on Item I.

The Study Group agreed that provided agreements are reached which the two governments can respect :—

a. The US and UK should each issue a declaration of policy in respect of the agreements.

b. The terms of the US and UK declarations should be as similar as possible.

c. These declarations should conform to the purposes and principles of the UN and should contain a statement that the issuing government would not use force to disturb the agreements.

d. It would be desirable for as many interested non-Communist countries as possible to issue similar or identical declarations.

ITEM II

Terms of Reference :

“Assuming an Indo-China agreement, the terms of a collective security pact regarding Southeast and possibly South Asia, designed—a. To deter and if necessary to combat Communist aggression by making it clear that it would be met by prompt and united action and would involve grave consequences ;

b. To provide machinery for effective cooperation in defense of the area against aggression and for assisting the lawful governments to resist Communist infiltration and subversion ;

c. To commit the members to take, in accordance with their constitutional processes, such action as is deemed necessary, including the use of armed force, in the event of Communist aggression covered by the pact ;

d. To protect Laos, Cambodia, and that part of Vietnam remaining free after any agreement, whether or not they are free to participate under the terms of the agreement.”

7. [a.] The Study Group agreed that drafting a collective security treaty should be a matter for negotiation between all the founder members.

b. The US members submitted an informal draft text of a collective security treaty for Southeast Asia and the Southwest Pacific, as an indication of US thinking.

(Annex A<sup>3</sup>). The US members stated that they had also made this draft available to certain of the other potential founding members of a collective security arrangement.

c. The UK members made some preliminary comments on the American draft. The UK comments are given in Annex B.<sup>4</sup> The UK members considered that it was premature to submit a text until clear agreement had been reached between the two governments on the nature and purposes of the proposed treaty, and on the timing and negotiations with other powers. They were therefore unable to associate themselves with the US members in submitting a text at this stage.

8. Main features of a collective security treaty.

The Study Group agreed on the main features of the proposed treaty. These features are indicated in the following recommendations, which, however, do not attempt to use language suitable for inclusion in the treaty.

a. Purpose. The purpose of the treaty is to block the expansion of Communist influence in the general area of South and Southeast Asia and the Southwest Pacific. The group recognized that this might take several forms: Overt aggression; infiltration and subversion coupled with Communist assistance to armed rebellions or Communist interference in civil wars; or Communist infiltration and subversion without resort to violence. The group agreed that provision should be made in the treaty against all these contingencies.

b. Membership.

(1) The initial membership of the collective security treaty should include UK, US, Australia, New Zealand, France, Thailand and the Philippines and other Southeast Asian states (Burma and Indonesia) if they are willing. The initial membership could also include other states which, on the basis of informal consultations, indicated their desire to participate.<sup>5</sup>

(2) Cambodia, Laos, and non-Communist Vietnam should be participants if the arrangements at Geneva should permit this.

(3) After entry into force of the treaty, invitations to other states to accede to the treaty, or to associate themselves with it, could be issued upon unanimous agreement of the parties to the treaty.

c. Nature of the commitment.

Each party should agree:

(1) To assist the lawful governments to maintain and develop their capacity to resist armed attack and Communist infiltration and subversion, through help in the military, police, intelligence, information, economic, technical, and other relevant fields.

<sup>3</sup> Annex A, a draft treaty text dated July 9, is printed in volume XII.

<sup>4</sup> Annex B is printed ibid.

<sup>5</sup> For clarification of paragraph 8.b. (1), see telegram Tosec 566, July 18, p. 1431.

(2) To consult together in order to agree on the measures which should be taken whenever in the opinion of one of the parties the territorial integrity, political independence or security of one of the parties, or the peace of the area, is endangered.

(3) In the event of overt Communist aggression in the area of the treaty, to take in accordance with its constitutional processes such action as it deems necessary including the use of armed force.<sup>6</sup>

d. Geographical scope of the commitment.

(1) The commitment in paragraph c(3) above should cover:

(a) Local territory of parties to the treaty in the general area of Southeast Asia and the Southwestern Pacific;

(b) Laos and Cambodia and non-Communist Vietnam whether or not they are parties to the treaty;

(2) Provision should be made to allow countries not participating in the treaty to be covered, by agreement, by the commitment in paragraph c(3) above.

(3) The treaty should permit later enlargement of its geographical scope.

e. Organization.

The treaty should contain no more than a simple and generalized description of a council; precise organization should be left to discussion with other participating countries and to development by the council. Among the subjects the council should consider would be:

(1) Establishment of such permanent machinery as might be needed;

(2) Interim arrangements pending the completion of (1) above;

(3) Arrangements for the association of countries not parties to the treaty with work of the organization.

f. Duration.

The treaty should be of indefinite duration with the provision that any party may cease to be a party one year after notice of denunciation.

9. Considerations affecting timing.

a. The group agreed that any agreements reached at Geneva would register a considerable gain for the Communist bloc in Southeast Asia. In the wake of such agreements there would be left an unstable situation in those areas of Indochina remaining free. At the same time those agreements would increase the tendency of the other non-Communist states in the area to accommodate themselves to the prospect of further Communist encroachment. These considerations underlined the necessity for urgent conclusion of collective security arrangements. The group also recognized the importance of securing the backing of the Colombo powers in halting the expansion of Communist influence.

<sup>6</sup> For clarification of paragraph 8.c.(3), see telegram Tosec 566, July 18, p. 1431.

The attitude of these powers toward the collective security arrangement would be important. It would be desirable that these powers should at least acquiesce in the establishment of such an arrangement.

b. The UK members believed that strong efforts to secure the participation of the Colombo powers in the collective security arrangement or at least their acquiescence in its formation should be made prior to the negotiation of the treaty. In the long run the general aim of blocking Communist expansion in the area will be governed by the support that can be obtained from the peoples and governments of the area. The UK, therefore, considered that immediate negotiations of a collective security arrangement prior to consultation with the Colombo powers would prejudice the eventual attitude of the latter thus endangering the ultimate object of the treaty.

c. The US members believed that explorations with the Colombo powers should not delay the formation of a security arrangement for the area. The US members recognized the possibility that speedy establishment by other countries of a collective security arrangement might engender temporary opposition on the part of some of the Colombo powers; they believed, however, that in the long run the immediate creation of a strong defense against Communist expansion in Southeast Asia would lead to eventual cooperation by South Asian countries. The US members believed that the political emergency created by a Communist victory at Geneva should be met by immediate action to serve notice that Communist expansion in Asia had reached its limit. The US members believed that delay in the formation of a collective security agreement would probably result in a deterioration in the area of South and Southeast Asia which in the end could well render impossible the conclusion of any effective security arrangement, additional to the US security arrangements with others in the area. The US members believed, therefore, that the collective security arrangement should be negotiated forthwith, with those nations now ready to proceed in the establishment of an effective collective defense system in the general area of the South and Southeast Asia and the Southwest Pacific.

10. Declaration of intention.

a. The US members considered that even if there were agreements at Geneva, the urgency of the situation was such, and the probable length of time before a treaty could be signed and ratified was such, that it would be important to have the founding countries issue a statement of intent to conclude a treaty, and immediately to establish ad hoc machinery pending the ratification of such a treaty. The US submitted a draft declaration (Annex C) <sup>7</sup> as an indication of US thinking.

---

<sup>7</sup> Annex C is printed in volume XII.

The US members stated that copies of this draft had been made available to other potential signatories of such a declaration.

b. The UK members doubted whether it would be necessary, in the event of a settlement in Indo-China, to issue a declaration of intent, but did not exclude this possibility.

ITEM III

Terms of Reference:

“Assuming no agreement on Indochina—

a. The form of collective defense pact for the purposes outlined in paragraph 2, which would be suitable to the situations;

b. The action to be taken in respect of Laos, Cambodia and Vietnam.”

11. The group agreed that the main features of a collective security treaty which would be suitable in the event of no agreement on Indochina should be similar to those proposed by the group in the event of a settlement.

12. Timing.

The group agreed that in the event of a failure of the negotiations at Geneva the establishment of a collective security treaty would become more urgent.

a. The UK members considered that a strenuous effort should be made to enlist the support of the Colombo powers and that this consideration should be kept in mind in deciding how to proceed with the negotiation of the treaty.

b. The US members believed that the situation would require negotiation of a treaty with the utmost dispatch by those nations ready to participate in such a treaty.

13. Declaration of intention.

The group agreed that in the event of failure of the negotiations at Geneva:

a. It would be desirable that each of the 2 governments should issue a declaration of intent to conclude with other interested countries a collective security treaty.

b. It would be desirable that as many other potential members of the treaty as possible should issue similar declarations, and that they should be consulted urgently to this end.

The US members believed that the issue of a declaration would, in the event under consideration, be not only desirable but imperative and that the declaration should provide for the immediate formation of ad hoc machinery by the potential founding members of a security treaty.

The UK members considered that the text of the declaration of intent should be simple and general and drafted with the Colombo powers in mind.

14. In the event of no agreement being reached at Geneva the study group recognized that decisions of high policy on the action to be taken in respect of Cambodia, Laos and Vietnam would be required. Among others, consideration should be given to the following:

(a) Invitations to Cambodia, Laos and Vietnam to join the security treaty.

(b) Appeals to the Security Council by Cambodia, Laos and Vietnam.

(c) The opening of military discussions with the French.

(d) Further measures to ensure the political stability and defense of Thailand.

ITEM IV

Terms of Reference:

"The procedure for bringing other interested nations promptly into these negotiations".

15. The group noted that consultations have already been undertaken with representatives of Australia, and the Colombo powers.

16. The group recommended that the problem of further consultations concerning a declaration in respect of an Indo-China settlement should be dealt with by the representatives of the two governments at the Geneva conference. (The respective views of the UK and US members are covered under Item I of this report).

17. a. As regards consultation with other powers on the projected Collective Security treaty, the US members believed that a working group with representatives of the UK, US, Australia, New Zealand, France, Thailand, and the Philippines should be established in Washington immediately to prepare agreed recommendations on the terms of a Collective Security pact regarding Southeast Asia and the Southwest Pacific, and to prepare agreed recommendations on the terms of a declaration of intent. Consultations should be undertaken with the Cambodians, Laotians and Vietnamese as appropriate.

b. The United Kingdom members believed that such a working group should not be set up until the views of the two governments on this report were known and that in any case the establishment of the group should be preceded by individual soundings of the views of all potential participants in the treaty. Meanwhile consultation with other powers should be in general terms on an individual and not collective basis.

396.1 GE/7-1754 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET      PRIORITY

GENEVA, July 17, 1954—8 p. m.

Secto 633. Rptd info Paris 80, Saigon 51. Nguyen Huu Chau of Vietnamese delegation handed USDel copy of note<sup>1</sup> which was given to French delegation today. He said French requested contents be kept secret for moment, and that French not aware copy given to this delegation. Following is unofficial translation :

“Just as the French High Command in Indochina evacuated, without fighting and in spite of the strongest protests by President Ngo Dinh Diem, zones vital for the defense and the existence of a free Vietnam, the delegation of the Vietnamese National Government learned only by the papers and by the messages which were sent to it yesterday, July 16, that the French delegation appears already to have accepted abandoning to the Viet Minh all of that part situated north of the eighteenth parallel and that the delegation of the Viet Minh might claim an even more advantageous demarcation line.

The National Government of Vietnam has also been left in complete ignorance of the proposals on the fate of Vietnam made by the French Government to the American and British Governments, particularly at the meeting in Paris.

The delegation of the State of Vietnam must express its surprise at this situation.

This delegation finds it hard to understand that peace in Vietnam is being negotiated without previously consulting with its qualified representatives.

The de facto partition which seems to have been adopted from the outset by the delegations of France and of the Viet Minh—at discussions bearing only on the materialization of the partition—does not take any account of the unanimous will for national unity of the Vietnamese people.

On the other hand the regroupment of non-national armed forces in the zones resulting from the partition implies their consolidation outside of any danger of combat and thus reinforces the threat that they constitute to the free expression of the will of the people.

Therefore not only does such a cease-fire not lead to a durable peace, since, ignoring the will for national unity, it provokes the people to ‘unify’ the country, but by the consolidation of the armed forces now facing each other, it violates in advance the liberty of the future elections.

The delegation of the State of Vietnam, which more than any other wishes the return of peace, is pleased with the efforts put forth by the other delegations in favor of this object. However, it greatly fears that the cease-fire, such as it seems to be accepted by certain delegations, far from leading to peace, makes peace improbable and precarious.

Aware of these very grave dangers and certain that it is expressing the profound aspirations of all true Vietnamese, including most of the

---

<sup>1</sup> A copy of this note is in Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 323.

Viet Minh fighters themselves, and in full accord with the Chief and the Government of the State of Vietnam, the Vietnamese delegation asks not only a cease-fire but the disarmament of all the belligerent forces in Vietnam.

The Vietnamese delegation asks that the entire territory of Vietnam be placed provisionally under the control of the United Nations pending the complete re-establishment of security, of order and of peace in their minds and in their hearts which will permit the Vietnamese people to decide their destiny by free elections.

His Majesty Bao Dai, Chief of State of Vietnam, thus shows once more that he places the independence and the unity of his country above any other consideration, and the National Government of Vietnam would prefer this provisional control by the United Nations over a truly unified and independent Vietnam to its maintenance in power in a country dismembered and condemned to slavery.

The Vietnamese delegation reserves its right to develop its proposal at a later time."

SMITH

396.1 GE/7-1754 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET

GENEVA, July 17, 1954—9 p. m.

Secto 634. Repeated information Paris 81, Saigon 52. French delegation has given us draft of declaration to be made by Laos delegation for our comments. They pointed out language second paragraph taken from USSR-Norwegian treaty, and fourth paragraph from UN charter. Unofficial translation follows:

"The Government of Laos wishes to establish relations with all its neighbors pacifically founded on mutual respect, non-interference, and non-aggression. It considers that the defense of its territory is best assured by its association in the French Union.

The Government of Laos is resolved never to take part in a policy having aggressive goals and will never permit Laotian territory to be used in the service of such a policy.

The Laotian Government will never take part in an agreement with other states if this agreement carries with it for Laos the obligation of establishing bases for the military forces of foreign powers on Laotian territory, as long as Laos is not attacked or exposed to the threat of an attack.

The Government of Laos is resolved to settle its international differences by pacific means, in such a manner that peace and international security, as well as justice, will not be endangered.

The Government of Laos will refrain from recourse to threats or the employment of force either against the territorial integrity or the political independence of any state or in any other manner."

SMITH

396.1 GE/7-1754: Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET

GENEVA, July 17, 1954—9 p. m.

Secto 635. Repeated information Paris 82, Saigon 53, Phnom Penh 4. Nong Kimny tells us Cambodian Foreign Minister this morning called on Chou En-lai, returning latter's call described Secto 616.<sup>1</sup> He found Chou less conciliatory than on occasion previous conversation. Chou urged that Cambodian government take steps to incorporate resistance elements into Cambodian army, police or civil service. He also spoke with great seriousness and emphasis regarding proposed Southeast Asian pact. He said that if Cambodia were to join such a pact or to permit foreign bases on her territory or to accept American military instructors, the consequences would be very serious and would aggravate the situation with unfortuante consequences for Cambodian independence and territorial integrity. He said that it would be all right for the Cambodians to have French or even British instructors. He made clear that his remarks regarding the Southeast Asian pact, foreign bases and American instructors apply to all three states of Indochina.

According to Nong Kimny, Cambodian Foreign Minister reiterated Cambodian position that Cambodia must retain her freedom of action to insure her own defense.

SMITH

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated July 15, p. 1378.

396.1 GE/7-1754: Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET

GENEVA, July 17, 1954—9 p. m.

Secto 636. Repeated information Paris 83. Eden today gave Mendes-France and me following account his talks with Chou En-lai this morning. Chou was most anxious about reports reaching him re recent Paris talks and particularly re US plan to create Southeast Asia pact including Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia. Chou reiterated his position to effect that he was prepared to join in a guarantee of the freedom and independence of all three Indochinese states but that if these states were to become members of Southeast Asian pact, everything would be changed.

Eden told us that he replied that he knew of no proposal for the Indochinese states to join a Southeast Asian pact but that he would confirm this with General Smith. He told Chou that of course we are interested in the defense organization of Southeast Asia and he pointed to current Soviet-Communist-Chinese pact as indicating right of nations to join for self-defense. Chou rejoined that this pact was concerned only with Japan, adding that he does not mind ANZUS which also is directed against Japan. He spoke at length on danger of foreign bases in Indochina. Eden told us he said this was nonsense.

I stated to Eden and Mendes-France that it seemed to me that question of whether or not Indochinese states are to be members of Southeast Asian defense pact depends on the outcome of current conference. I added that if we failed here we would have to go ahead and face a different and serious situation.

Later at Eden's villa, I urged upon him the great importance of our being prepared without delay, regardless of how conference comes out, to issue statement of intent to form Southeast Asian defense organism. I said that I hoped that US, UK, Australia, New Zealand, possibly France as well as the Philippines and Thailand could be members initially. Eden stated that he would give serious thought to this matter but added that of course he would have to advise Commonwealth members in South Asia before any action was taken. He promised me a reply on this subject before long.

Turning to general situation here, Eden and I agreed that Communist position, and particularly Molotov's has hardened very considerably in last three or four days. It is evident that Mendes-France has been a great disappointment to the Communists both as regards the relatively firm position he has taken on Indochina and his attitude toward EDC. They may therefore wish to force him out of the government by making settlement here impossible.

SMITH

396.1 GE/7-1754 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET PRIORITY

GENEVA, July 17, 1954—11 p. m.

Secto 637. Repeated information Paris 84, Saigon 54. Immediately following close of meeting between Molotov, Eden, Mendes-France this evening at Eden's villa, Caccia gave Johnson detailed account of their meeting of which following is summary.

Molotov opened by referring to four major unsettled questions he had mentioned at meeting last night (Secto 630<sup>1</sup>) saying that he had been unable to find anything in French documents on question of arms, ammunition and troops into Vietnam. It was pointed out to him that French draft armistice agreement on Vietnam dealt with this subject and that proposed French conference declaration covered matter insofar as Laos and Cambodia concerned. Molotov said he would study matter further. Molotov then said he could not find anything with respect to foreign military bases and non-entry of these countries into military alliances. Mendes referred to proposed unilateral declarations by Laos and Cambodia and note to be taken thereof in conference declaration, to which Molotov replied that this was fine, but Russian counter-draft had proposed each power in conference undertake obligation in this regard and French proposal was "not quite the same thing".

<sup>1</sup> Dated July 17, p. 1404.

There was then discussion of time required for regrouping, in which Mendes pointed out this was military problem; French military estimated 305 days would be required under ideal conditions and that 21½ months had been added for "acts of God" and as a margin of error. He said that there was not only question of military personnel and matériel, but also of civilian population. Molotov appeared to be somewhat surprised at the mention of civilian population and suggested that perhaps that could be handled in some other way. After fairly extensive discussion, it was agreed French and Viet Minh military experts would discuss matter further, Molotov agreeing to urge Viet Minh military meet with French who for some time have been unable to make contact on military level.

Mendes then turned discussion to supervision, during course of which Molotov said the French proposal for three separate commissions for each of Associated States acceptable if there was coordinating committee. During course this discussion, Eden supported Colombo power group and finally suggested that if not acceptable, non-Communist state and one other state be added to Colombo group, pointing out French have conceded issue of unanimity and this would meet Communist point having at least one Communist state. Molotov replied by referring to his previous three-nation proposal, saying he had no other proposal to make and would inform Viet Minh of British suggestion.

On voting, Mendes referred to French paper and Molotov stated, subject to certain drafting amendments, positions not far apart. It was agreed French and Viet Minh civilian experts would meet to discuss drafting changes. Freedom of movement for commission was also raised by Mendes, to which Caccia understood Molotov to reply that this was no problem. However, status of this apparently left vague.

Ministers then asked for report from experts (Tahourdin, Levrishew and Laloy were meeting in separate room on last French draft of conference declaration). However, it appeared that no progress had been made. Soviets, while accepting last French re-draft as basis for discussion (Secto 628<sup>2</sup>) attempting to re-introduce all items dropped from Soviet counterproposal (Secto 615<sup>3</sup>).

Molotov then suggested a conference meeting be held tomorrow and long discussion ensued with Mendes and Eden attempting prevent meeting and making counter-suggestions of short meeting starting at 5:00 instead of 3:00, etc., but Molotov remained adamant on full meeting. During course of discussion, Molotov indicated Chinese and Viet Minh feel they have perhaps been left out of negotiations a little and have something to say. There was also vague reference by him to General Smith's return and desirability he be "brought back into picture". Matter was left with Molotov to consult with Chinese and Viet Minh on meeting at later hour than 3:00, and UK and France suggested meeting be very restricted with only 2 or 3 present from each delegation. Apparently, Eden and Mendes feel meeting cannot be refused if Communists continue to insist.

Caccia reported that on entering meeting with Molotov, Mendes had requested Eden not to raise question of line and elections, as in talk with Chou which Mendes had just had it appeared some resolution can be found these problems. However, neither Eden nor Caccia had opportunity obtain more full account from Mendes.

French had told Caccia they are immediately replying to Vietnamese note (Secto 633<sup>4</sup>) denying Vietnamese have not been kept fully informed.

SMITH

---

<sup>2</sup> Dated July 16, p. 1400.

<sup>3</sup> Dated July 15, p. 1384.

<sup>4</sup> Dated July 17, p. 1418.

---

751G.00/7-1754: Telegram

The Ambassador at Saigon (Heath) to the Department of State

SECRET

SAIGON, July 17, 1954—midnight.

218. Repeated information Paris 85, Geneva 46. Reference: Secto 601, repeated Paris 52, Saigon 31, July 14.<sup>1</sup> Free exchange of goods between regrouping zones would certainly be of importance to Viet Minh. Practically all of surplus economic areas will be in free zone. Even if Viet Minh get control of coal mines and cement mill north Vietnam, in addition to cotton mills, Viet Minh would still have trouble making their zone self-sustaining due to problems of supply of machinery and raw materials and transportation and marketing difficulties. All of surplus rice and rubber areas would be in free zone.

---

<sup>1</sup> Ante, p. 1358.

Most of mineral resources would be in Viet Minh zone, but are relatively undeveloped. Viet Minh zone would be deficient in rice.

In summary, after certain amount of reconstruction free zone could be made self-sustaining over longer period of time and with more difficulty.

Free exchange of goods between zones would enormously complicate problem of giving US economic aid to free Vietnam. Free exchange would in effect mean we giving economic aid Viet Minh as pointed out in our telegram 194, sent Geneva 38, Paris 74.<sup>2</sup> Difficulties preventing smuggling between zones, which goes on even under war conditions, would be increased under armistice. However, this should not prevent free world from attempting to put economic pressure on Viet Minh and Communist China.

USOM concurs.

HEATH

---

<sup>2</sup> Not printed, but see footnote 2, p. 1359.

JULY 18, 1954

396.1 GE/7-1854: Telegram

*Working Level Meeting of Six Delegations, Geneva, July 18, Morning:
The United States Delegation to the Department of State*

SECRET

GENEVA, July 18, 1954—10 p. m.

Secto 648. Repeated information Paris 90, Saigon 59. There was working level meeting of friendly delegations this morning in order to consider questions related to conference restricted session this afternoon. Phleger and Bonsal attended for USDel. The French chairman (Roux) said he understood Molotov's main purpose in calling meeting was to study proposed declaration. Text of declaration with agreed and unagreed portions resulting from meeting between UK, USSR and French working level representatives yesterday evening was taken up. These portions covered in Secto 647.<sup>1</sup>

Vietnamese representative Ngo Dinh Luyen (brother of Prime Minister) stated his delegation not in position to express views on declaration which referred to agreement on cessation of hostilities with terms of which Vietnamese Government unfamiliar since it had not participated in negotiation of agreement.

USDel reiterated US reservation on paragraph dealing with consultations and stated that full position of USDel with regard to declaration and to guarantees of results of conference would be made known by chief of USDel.

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated July 18, p. 1438.

It was agreed that in paragraph of proposed declaration sentence would be added to effect "line of demarcation provided in agreement on cessation of hostilities must in no way be interpreted as constituting a political or territorial boundary".

There was also some discussion of proposed unilateral declaration to be made by Laotian and Cambodian delegations. Laotian text is contained in Secto 634.<sup>2</sup> Laotian del reserved comment. Cambodian del to whom similar draft had just been submitted stated that his government had previously envisaged unilateral declaration on three subjects:

- (1) Absence of reprisals against resistance movements;
- (2) Intention to hold elections in accordance with Cambodian constitution; and
- (3) Military intentions and limitations. He said that he would prefer to have statement on elections included in unilateral declaration rather than in conference declaration. He wished to avoid impression that holding of elections was something which had been imposed on Cambodia by Communists in course of reaching settlement.

Reverting to conference declaration Cambodian representative (Sam Sary) also stated that his government would have to make reservation regarding articles 6 and 9 in which respect for territorial integrity is mentioned since his government did not wish to disbar itself from negotiations with Vietnamese Government regarding boundary between Vietnam and Cambodia, boundary which Cambodia does not recognize since it was established by unilateral action of French President.

SMITH

---

<sup>2</sup> Dated July 17, p. 1419.

---

396.1 GE/7-1854: Telegram

Smith-Kimny Meeting, Geneva, July 18, Morning: The United States Delegation to the Department of State

CONFIDENTIAL

GENEVA, July 18, 1954—11 p. m.

Secto 650. Repeated information Paris 91, Saigon 60, Phnom Penh 5. Cambodian Foreign Minister and Cambodian Ambassador to Washington called on me this morning for discussion of conference prospects. We agreed as to strength and justice of Cambodian position and as to probability Cambodia would come out of conference with assurances Viet Minh invaders would be withdrawn.

Re problems of Cambodia's defense in future, I stated that if Cambodians could create conditions under which they would be able to import arms and continue to employ French military instructors and technicians, it seemed to me that Cambodia might then, if necessary to secure agreement at conference, make declaration to effect Cambodia does not intend foreign bases on her territory and does not intend to enter military alliances under present circumstances. I stated in this connection that US and other like-minded countries intend to go ahead rapidly and effectively with creation of Southeast Asia pact. If Cambodia could join this pact, so much the better. But if Cambodia were for any reason unable to have a formal relation with the pact, I assured the Cambodian Foreign Minister that, in our view, any aggression overt or covert against Cambodian territory would bring pact into operation even though Cambodia not a member.

I took position that French Union membership afforded Cambodia adequate desirable means of securing through France necessary arms some of which would be American as well as necessary instructors and technicians some of which might well be American trained.

Nong Kimny took careful notes on conversation. Foreign Minister limited himself to statement that Cambodia relies heavily on US for eventual protection against aggression and that Cambodia desires to emerge from current conference with maximum freedom of action re measures Cambodia may take to assure defense.

SMITH

---

396.1 GE/7-1854 : Telegram

Smith-Do-Chuong Meeting, Geneva, July 18, Morning: The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET

GENEVA, July 18, 1954—11 p. m.

Secto 652. Repeated information Paris 93, Saigon 62. Vietnamese Foreign Minister Tran Van Do and Tran Van Chuong called on me this morning. Burden of conversation for Vietnamese was carried by Chuong. Latter referred to meeting with Secretary in Paris and memorandum which he presented at that time.

I expressed our sympathy for present difficulties Vietnam, but emphasized that any division of country was forced by harsh military necessity and that US could only consider such arrangement to be of temporary nature. I said US would not guarantee or recognize a partition and would not associate itself with statement accepting partition as such. However, US would not use force to upset an armistice agreement. I reiterated that no more could be gained at conference table than on battlefield.

In discussion of post-armistice need for Vietnam to maintain and strengthen army, Chuong brought up need for continuing US aid. I said, in view probable Communist insistence no foreign arms or instructors, it would appear necessary emphasize non-foreign character French Union assistance Chuong objected to US aid being channeled through French, to which I replied that aid could go through French directly to Vietnamese Army. I recalled that I had told Bao Dai to insist to French that Vietnam be permitted reorganize and form autonomous army, but he had not done this.

Chuong noted that Ngo Dinh Diem's request to General Ely for arms for Catholic militia in bishoprics for self defense had been met by French military withdrawal from those provinces. I replied that as military man I understood necessity of French decision in face of Viet Minh strength. It was too bad that better organized autonomous Vietnamese Army had not previously been created; this fault of neither Vietnam nor US, but it was too late to accomplish this in north.

Chuong asked US reaction to situation brought out in his note to effect that Vietnam, after accepting principle military regrouping zones, now being faced with partition. I repeated US does not accept partition, only temporary division through armistice agreement. To Chuong's question about need for military and political build-up of south during division period, I replied it was imperative if there to be any hope for success in eventual elections. Previous to elections south should be cleaned of Viet Minh and strengthened, while during this same period population of north would have had taste of living under Communist rule. After two years, there was hope that elections would turn out favorably.

Chuong asked if Vietnam could count on US aid; I countered by asking if Vietnam would remain in French Union, to which Chuong replied that necessary conditions were full independence and right to leave if they wished. I again made point that Communist insistence on no foreign military assistance might require such aid to go through medium of French Union.

Chuong then went through customary exercise of blaming presence French for strength of Communists. He said Vietnam would use this conference to gain real independence from France.

When I asked if this might not mean departure French troops, he said that was wish of Vietnamese Government; without French, they could successfully appeal to Nationalists and fight Communists. I replied that in such circumstances Communists would walk through the country.

I ended by noting that US would not obstruct conference by insisting on US right to give direct military assistance and training, and that

US certainly not prepared to fight for this principle if Vietnamese refused French channel.

SMITH

396.1 GE/7-1854 : Telegram

The Head of the United States Delegation (Smith) to the Secretary of State

TOP SECRET      NIACT

GENEVA, July 18, 1954—1 p. m.<sup>1</sup>

Secto 639. For the Secretary from the Under Secretary. Following despatch given us in advance by Topping of Associated Press apparently represents official Chinese Communist position and was given Topping in order that we would become aware of it.<sup>2</sup> It begins:

"The Communist bloc has demanded that the United States guarantee the partition peace plan for Indochina and join in an agreement to neutralize the whole country, a responsible Chinese Communist informant said today.

The informant, who reflects the views of Red China Premier Chou En-lai, said the Communists are hopeful of a cease-fire agreement by next Tuesday's deadline if the Western powers agree to 'bar all foreign military bases from Indochina and keep the three member states out of any military bloc.'

The informant said the Communists are pressing for the stamp of American approval on the armistice agreement—already okayed in principle by Britain and France—which would divide Vietnam between Communist leader Ho Chi Minh's Viet Minh and Bao Dai's pro-Western regime.

'We believe that the US as a member of the conference should and is obligated to subscribe to and guarantee any settlement. Morally there is no reason for the US to avoid this obligation.'

But the informant did not rule out the chance of an Indochina cease-fire even if the US refuses to okay the armistice agreement.

The Eisenhower administration has told France and Britain that they can go ahead with their plan for an Indochina settlement based on partition of Vietnam. But Washington has made it clear that it is not ready to associate itself formally with the plan which would sanction putting millions of Vietnamese under Red rule.

The Communist informant said the 'crucial issue' now in the Geneva peace negotiations revolves around whether the Western powers will agree effectively to neutralize Indochina.

'Refusal to join in such a guarantee,' the informant said, 'could seriously deter a final settlement. On other important points in the negotiations we are in agreement or close to it. We are hopeful and we believe that there is time to reach a settlement by July 20.'

<sup>1</sup> Because of the time difference between Geneva and Washington, telegram Secto 639 was received at 9:58 a. m., Washington time, and the reply to Geneva, infra, was sent at 12:26 p. m., Washington time.

<sup>2</sup> For background on Topping's talk with the Chinese, see telegram Secto 661, July 19, p. 1448.

French Premier Pierre Mendes-France has promised to resign with his Cabinet if he fails to end the bloody eight-year-old war by next Tuesday. Fall of the French Government probably would doom the Geneva negotiations. The informant declared that American efforts to organize a Southeast Asia Treaty Organization (SEATO) is 'a threat to any possible Indochina agreement.'

'Success or failure of the Geneva Conference may depend on the attitude of the American delegation in this regard,' he added."

The above seems to me extremely significant, particularly in view of the fact that in my discussion with Eden last night he expressed pessimism, which he said was now shared for the first time by Krishna Menon. Latter had begun to feel, as I do, that Molotov wishes to force Mendes-France's resignation. Eden remarked that Molotov had now become the most difficult and intransigent member of Communist delegation. You will note obvious intention to place on shoulders of US responsibility for failure of Geneva Conference and fall of French Government if this occurs.

Molotov is insisting on a meeting this afternoon which French and British are trying to make highly restricted as they are apprehensive of what may occur. If such a meeting is held and if demands are made for US association in any agreement, I will simply say that in the event a reasonable settlement is arrived at which US could "respect", US will probably issue a unilateral statement of its own position. If question of participation Laos, Cambodia and Vietnam in security pact is raised, I will reply that this depends on outcome of conference.

Eden has already told Molotov that security pact is inevitable, that he himself favored it some time ago and that he would not withdraw from that position, but he made the mistake of saying that no consideration had been given to inclusion of Laos and Cambodia.

This final gambit is going to be extremely difficult to play and I do not now see the moves clearly. However, my opinion as expressed to you before leaving, i.e., that Molotov will gain more by bringing down Mendes Government than by a settlement, has grown stronger.

SMITH

396.1 GE/7-1754 : Telegram

The Secretary of State to the United States Delegation<sup>1</sup>

TOP SECRET      NIACT      WASHINGTON, July 18, 1954—12:26 p. m.

Tosec 565. From Secretary for Under Secretary. Does Secto 637<sup>2</sup> fourth paragraph mean that Eden has given away position which

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by the Secretary of State.

<sup>2</sup> Dated July 17, p. 1421.

Mendes-France took in Paris, namely that he was willing to have Communist state on Control Commission without veto, or unanimity if no Communist state a member, but he would not take both a Communist state and unanimity rule?

Your Secto 639<sup>3</sup> received. It may be useful for you to bear in mind that Executive has no Constitutional power to give "guarantee". This can only be done by treaty, ratification of which would surely be rejected. Executive can only reaffirm in relation to Indochina its general undertakings expressed in UN Charter.

Am fearful Eden will try to push Mendes-France into agreement far short of 7 Points which will confront us with dilemma of either agreeing to "respect" it or repudiation which might involve our responsibility for breakup. This precisely result which I apprehended and fully discussed with Mendes-France Paris and I must count on him to strive to protect both our countries against consequences of this Communist maneuver which Eden might unwittingly abet.

DULLES

---

<sup>3</sup> Supra.

---

396.1 GE/7-1854 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET

GENEVA, July 18, 1954—1 p. m.

Secto 640. Repeated information Paris 86, Saigon 55. Tosec 550, repeated Paris 204, Saigon 204.<sup>1</sup> USDel will remain alert to various points raised in reference telegram concerning economic relations between Communist and non-Communist zones Vietnam. USDel doubts, however, whether detailed economic arrangements will be incorporated in agreement for cessation of hostilities and assumes that these arrangements will be subject of later negotiation between authorities of two zones at which time the US representatives in Saigon and perhaps also in Paris will have an opportunity of making our detailed views known.

Regarding final paragraph of reference telegram on subject humane transfer of populations, USDel assumes these comments made prior to receipt of Secto 622<sup>2</sup> which gives latest French draft on this general subject.

SMITH

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated July 16, p. 1393.

<sup>2</sup> Dated July 16, p. 1392.

396.1 GE/7-1854 : Telegram

The Secretary of State to the United States Delegation<sup>1</sup>

SECRET

WASHINGTON, July 18, 1954—1:41 p. m.

Tosec 566. At conclusion final study-group meeting UK showed us memorandum representing their understanding situation re membership countries as follows:<sup>2</sup>

"For UK Record

It was understood that the wording of Para 8b(1) covered the possibility of India, Pakistan, and Ceylon becoming initial members. The US Representative said that they would not in practice interpret it to cover the inclusion of Formosa, Korea or Japan as initial members. He indicated that the US Government had no intention of opening informal consultations with Formosa, Korea or Japan in order to bring them in as initial members, but would not, however, preclude their eventual participation under the provisions of the treaty governing the accession of additional parties."

With respect to area to be covered by pact we made following notation which we gave the British:

"The US Representative made clear to the UK Representatives that in the US view, commitments under Para 8c(3) did not apply to Hong Kong."

DULLES

---

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by Tyler of EUR/WE and Duvall of OC/T. Repeated to Saigon as telegram 220, to London as telegram 367, and to Paris as telegram 226.

<sup>2</sup> For the text of the report of the U.S.-U.K. Study Group on Southeast Asia, see telegram Tosec 563, July 17, p. 1410.

---

396.1 GE/7-1854 : Telegram

Twenty-third Restricted Session on Indochina, Geneva, July 18, 4 p. m.: The United States Delegation to the Department of State<sup>1</sup>

CONFIDENTIAL

PRIORITY

GENEVA, July 18, 1954—11 p. m.

Secto 654. Repeated information Paris 94, London 19, Saigon 63, Tokyo 6, Moscow 7. Department pass Defense; Tokyo pass CINCFE; Saigon pass Vientiane and Phnom Penh. Twenty-third Indochina restricted session Sunday, July 18, Molotov presiding. This session called at urgent request Soviets; French and British had requested that participants be confined to chiefs of del plus one adviser. This latter relaxed to permit two advisers.

---

<sup>1</sup> A set of minutes of this session (IC Restricted/23) is in Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 279. The minutes indicate that the session convened at 4 p. m. and adjourned at 4:45 p. m. The minutes are also printed in Conférence de Genève, pp. 376-377. This message was transmitted in two sections.

Molotov spoke first, noting that last meeting of Foreign Ministers held on June 19, just one month ago. He believed that today's session presented good opportunity to gauge importance of period which had passed since last meeting and work performed by deputies. He believed that results achieved through private meetings and discussions had been not inconsiderable. Of course, not all of the questions had been resolved nor everything done which had to be done, but one should recognize the value of what had been achieved.

Molotov said first of all he wished to note that as far as the most complicated problem was concerned, that of peace in Indochina, a basis for reestablishment of peace had been achieved as a result private negotiations which had opened possibility of agreement on that question. He believed all participants would attach appropriate significance to this accomplishment. He felt it was also important to recognize the work done with reference to establishment of peace in Laos and Cambodia. In this connection, it is perhaps true that everything had not been done that could be done, but it appeared conference was on way to agreement concerning Laos and Cambodia.

Molotov said that all this shows recent private talks have had success and he expressed belief that such success would continue.

Describing situation as it appeared to him, Molotov noted that drafts for agreements on cessation of hostilities in Vietnam and Laos had been presented to conference. Two drafts would be available today. The same was also true for Cambodia. He hoped parties concerned would display goodwill necessary to agree on unresolved points in these drafts.

Molotov noted also [there] were two drafts of Geneva conference declaration dealing with important political matters.

Two drafts have also been presented concerning the question of international control pertaining to implementation of the agreements. Question of control commission has long been discussed and Molotov felt that final agreement on this subject would not require great deal of time.

Molotov concluded by saying that he had made these observations in order to give general picture of the conference at present and that his remarks were naturally not complete. He believed that today's meeting could make progress re the questions under discussion and would contribute to solution of problems facing conference.

After long pause Tran Van Do (Vietnam) spoke next, saying he had learned this morning that today's meeting was to review final declaration of Geneva conference. In order to avoid any misunderstanding, he wished to state firmly that Vietnam del could not associate itself with any discussion of this declaration. Vietnam position based on following points:

1. Vietnam does not agree to conditions advanced for cessation of hostilities.

2. Vietnam delegation has not as yet advanced proposals on behalf of Vietnam Government for solution of problem based on principles of peace, independence and unity.

With regard point number one, Do referred to French draft of July 16 of conference declaration (Secto 628 repeated Paris 74, Saigon 46<sup>3</sup>). This draft spoke of division of Vietnam into zones. For example, article 6 said settlement must permit Vietnamese people enjoy fundamental liberties guaranteed by democratic institutions formed following free elections supervised by international commission. Elections would take place when in opinion of competent representative authorities in each zone restoration of peace in country has made sufficient progress, et cetera. Article 7 speaks of a settlement which would give Vietnamese people right decide freely as to zone where residence desired.

Vietnamese representative next referred to Soviet draft of July 15 (Secto 615, repeated Paris 63, Saigon 35<sup>4</sup>). Article 8 of Soviet draft speaks of "consultation between competent representative authorities of northern and southern zones of Vietnam". Article 10 states that representative authorities in northern and southern zones of Vietnam, as well as authorities of Laos and Cambodia, will not permit persecution of persons who have collaborated with other side.

In view Vietnamese delegation, this indicates that Vietnam will be divided into north and south zones. Everyone is talking of the division of Vietnam and mention is even made of parallels at which division will be accomplished. Delegation of Vietnam can only protest the idea of partition. Based on point number one cited earlier in statement of Vietnamese representative, Vietnamese delegation flatly rejects both drafts submitted to conference.

Vietnamese representative then stated that Vietnamese delegation has not had opportunity, on behalf of new Vietnamese Government, to express own views. It reserves its right to submit a draft declaration and to elaborate on it at a plenary meeting in near future. Vietnamese delegation therefore requests a plenary meeting for this purpose.

Do noted further that there was no mention of State of Vietnam in either French or Soviet drafts. Vietnamese delegation cannot accept declaration or agreement where Vietnam, which invited to conference as existing state, not even mentioned.

---

<sup>3</sup> Dated July 16, p. 1400.

<sup>4</sup> Dated July 15, p. 1384.

After pause following Molotov's request for other speakers, General [Smith] made following statement:

"If no one else desires to speak, I think it would be helpful if I made clear position of US in these last critical days of conference. I do this because I have recently seen the advance drafts submitted to the conference and have had a chance to review them.

"The position of the United States with respect to this conference has consistently been that it is willing to assist, where desired, in arriving at a just and honorable settlement which will contribute to the establishment and maintenance of peace in the area. The United States is not a belligerent in this conflict and it has not and will not seek to impose its views in any way upon the belligerents, who are the parties primarily interested.

"If the agreements arrived at here are of a character which my government is able to respect, the United States is prepared to declare unilaterally that, in accordance with its obligations under the United Nations Charter, and particularly Article II(4), it will refrain from the threat or the use of force to disturb them, and would view any renewal of the aggression in violation of the agreements with grave concern."

Since no other representatives requested floor following General Smith's statement, Molotov suggested intermission. After intermission had lasted for 45 minutes, it was informally agreed that meeting should be adjourned without returning to conference room. No communiqué issued.

Comment: Today's restricted session strangest performance to date. Apparent Molotov had not set stage even with Communist colleagues for any particularly important announcement despite his insistence that meeting be called. Molotov had said to Mendes-France just before meeting that he thought would be well underline progress made and to show how close conference was to reaching agreement.

During recess, Chou En-lai said he had no desire make any statement. He seemed as much in dark as everyone else as to why Soviets had called meeting.

SMITH

361.1 GE/7-1854: Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET      PRIORITY

GENEVA, July 18, 1954—6 p. m.

Secto 644. Limit distribution. Eden has just given us following draft message to Colombo powers, Australia and New Zealand (re Tosec 562<sup>1</sup>) which he is today transmitting to capitals concerned for delivery as soon as London approval received. He expects this will be forthcoming tomorrow. I told Eden I thought we would want to make similar communication to Philippines and Thailand, that it would be somewhat different because they had already agreed in principle to this move, but that we should synchronize our approaches. He undertook to have London inform Washington directly of UK Government approval.

Further comment follows in separate message.<sup>2</sup>

Language in brackets [parentheses] is original UK text<sup>3</sup> which Eden agreed to amend at my suggestion.

Begin text:

Draft message to Colombo powers, Australia and New Zealand

"We are now in the critical concluding phase of the Geneva conference. We are all working very hard for an agreement, to which I attach the greatest possible importance. I still hope one may be reached.

"If it is, I trust that we may count upon all of the Colombo powers as well as upon other countries, to endorse it and to associate themselves with it in some way. This would very greatly strengthen peace in Asia. I shall communicate with you again as soon as possible about this once we have got agreement.

"The chances of agreement are still in my opinion no better than even. In these circumstances we are bound in prudence to consider the action to be taken in the interests of peace if we fail. A very grave situation would at once arise and it would be of crucial importance that common action on the widest possible basis should be taken urgently in order to stabilize it.

"In my view the best action would be an early announcement that countries of the Commonwealth and of South and Southeast Asia, together with the United States and France had all agreed to work together to ensure their common defense.

"As you know, we have long been in favor of creating a broadly based defensive organization for Southeast Asia and the southwest Pacific. Such a system is needed whether or not agreement is reached here. But if agreement is not reached then the need will become far more urgent and joint planning should begin at once.

"HMG have accordingly decided in that event to join with the United States Government, and with such other interested governments as are willing to take part, in making an early declaration of their intention to establish such an organization (begin such joint discussion). They greatly hope that the government of _____ will also be ready to make such a statement. You will see that no place is mentioned and we would like your views upon this. A draft showing the form such a statement might take is contained in my immediately following telegram.

<sup>1</sup> Dated July 17, p. 1410.

<sup>2</sup> Telegram Secto 649, July 18, p. 1439.

<sup>3</sup> The original text of the message from Foreign Secretary Eden to the governments of the five Colombo Powers, Australia, and New Zealand, July 18, is filed in 751G.00/7-1854.

"We shall be glad to have your very early views on this proposal. A similar invitation is being addressed to the governments of _____.

"Draft declaration"<sup>4</sup>

"The government of _____ desiring to strengthen the fabric of peace in Southeast Asia and the southwest Pacific and convinced that the situation calls for them to be prepared for the exercise in this area of the inherent right of collective self-defense, recognized by article 51 of the Charter of the United Nations, have decided to set up immediately in _____ an interim council or committee (working committee) to prepare early recommendations for the conclusion (on the question) of a collective defense agreement for Southeast Asia and the southwest Pacific."

End text.<sup>5</sup>

SMITH

<sup>4</sup> Annex B to Foreign Secretary Eden's draft. Titled "Draft Declaration of Intention on Collective Defence."

<sup>5</sup> Annex A to the draft was as follows: "Possible points for inclusion in a Declaration of Support for an agreement on Indo-China. 1. Note (or approve or welcome or support) Geneva settlement. 2. Desire to contribute to consolidation of peace in the area. 3. Undertake to treat violation of Indo-China settlement as a threat to international peace and security. 4. Resolve to apply principles of United Nations in support of the settlement (e.g. Article 2(4) of Charter)." (751G.00/7-1854)

396.1 GE/7-1854: Telegram

The Secretary of State to the United States Delegation<sup>1</sup>

CONFIDENTIAL PRIORITY WASHINGTON, July 18, 1954—7:16 p. m.

Tosec 568. From Secretary for Undersecretary. President asking principal radio and television networks to reserve time for Wednesday nite<sup>2</sup> which President will use if Geneva Conference fails so that he can explain gravity of resulting situation.<sup>3</sup> You may in your discretion inform your French colleague.

DULLES

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by the Secretary of State and Browne of OC/T.

<sup>2</sup> July 21.

<sup>3</sup> For background information on the President's decision to ask for principal radio and television network time, see a memorandum of a conversation with the President by the Secretary of State, July 19, in volume XIII.

In the memorandum the Secretary wrote as follows: "After leaving the President [on July 18] I despatched to General Smith a cable [Tosec 568] informing him of the President's intentions and authorizing him to inform Mendes-France which he did [see telegram Secto 665, July 19, p. 1455]. Subsequently on Monday morning [July 19] I telephoned to General Smith to ascertain his views as to whether or not some announcement or 'leak' should be made from here as to the President's possible speech. General Smith was of the opinion that matters were going better from the standpoint of prospective settlement and that what had already been done was sufficient. I informed the President and he concurred." (Eisenhower Library, Dulles papers, meetings with the President)

396.1 GE/7-1854 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET

GENEVA, July 18, 1954—10 p. m.

Secto 645. Caccia has told us of conversation he had with Li K'Nung [Ko-nung] this morning. Later [latter] made strong statement to effect that Indochinese states must not be allowed to become members of any alliances and that acts of conference must not permit this. Caccia said he replied by saying that if an agreement were reached which UK liked and if agreement provided that military alliances were not acceptable then UK would not spend spare time trying to force Indochinese states into Southeast Asian pact.

On subject of Laos, Caccia told Li that Viet Minh were still demanding half of country. This was out of all reason and would jeopardize conference. Li said his Prime Minister thought a single regroupment area along NE frontier was best solution. It would, of course, remain under Laotian sovereignty and would be preferable to series of smaller areas.

Re election dates Li said it was important to make clear to people of Vietnam that conference was not fooling. This could only be done by setting specific date. When Caccia pointed out to him that India and Burma had taken from two to three years to hold elections and that Communist China apparently had problems in this connection, Li said that two or three years is a definite date and much preferable to an indefinite formula.

SMITH

396.1 GE/7-1854 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET

GENEVA, July 18, 1954—10 p. m.

Secto 646. Repeated information Paris 88, Saigon 57. Tosec 558 repeated information Paris 222, Saigon 217.<sup>1</sup> The term elections as used in French draft declaration is assumed to involve nation-wide elections resulting from agreement between representative authorities of two zones that conditions were adequate for such elections. Current controversy with Communists centers around date for such nation-wide elections.

So far as we know, French troops would not be withdrawn except at request of governments concerned although French are making no commitments re number of troops which military situation might require be maintained. This would presumably be subject of further negotiation within French Union.

<sup>1</sup> Dated July 17, p. 1403.

USDel does not believe Cambodians were left by Bonsal with impression we would discuss Cambodian security only if and when satisfactory cease-fire was achieved throughout Indochina. USDel will however bear this point in mind.

SMITH

---

396.1 GE/7-1854 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET

GENEVA, July 18, 1954—10 p. m.

Secto 647. Repeated information Paris 89, Saigon 58. Following French-UK-Soviet working group meeting yesterday, French del circulated new draft of proposed conference declaration showing in brackets following points on which French-UK and Soviet positions still differ. References are to numbered paragraphs of previous French draft transmitted in Secto 628 repeated Paris 74, Saigon 46.<sup>1</sup>

Second paragraph. Soviets want paragraph to refer to Vietnam as well as to Laos and Cambodia.

Third paragraph. French and British want to refer explicitly to regular elections called for by constitutions of Laos and Cambodia in August and September 1955 respectively. Soviets want elections in these two countries "within one year after the signature of the agreement on the cessation of hostilities".

Fourth paragraph. Soviets want to substitute following for French draft:

"The conference takes note of the understanding reached between the parties upon the fact that the introduction of new troops, military personnel, and all arms and munitions into Vietnam, Laos, and Cambodia will be prohibited and upon the fact that the importation of arms into Laos and Cambodia will be limited to the defined needs of the defense of these countries.

"The conference takes note of the agreement reached by the parties, that after the cessation of hostilities, Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia must not enter any military alliances whatsoever, and that the establishment of foreign bases on the territories of the said states must not be permitted."

Fifth paragraph. Soviets want to delete following from first sentence: "But does not prejudge the solution of other problems related to the definitive restoration of peace in Vietnam."

Sixth paragraph. Soviets want elections in Vietnam not later than June 1955. French and British do not want conference to set deadline.

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated July 16, p. 1400.

Eighth paragraph. Soviets want "parties" to negotiate time for withdrawal foreign troops and military personnel. French and British stand on French draft.

Ninth paragraph. Bracketed passage omitted, apparently by mutual agreement.

Tenth paragraph. French and British want members of conference to study "collective or individual" measures. Soviets want "collective" only.

In addition to above points of difference, French and British have not agreed to Soviet effort to include tenth paragraph Soviet draft declaration (Secto 615 repeated Paris 65 [63], Saigon 35<sup>2</sup>).

SMITH

---

<sup>2</sup> Dated July 15, p. 1384.

396.1 GE/7-1854 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET

GENEVA, July 18, 1954—11 p. m.

Secto 649. Limit distribution. I think UK message to Colombo powers, Australia and New Zealand (Secto 644<sup>1</sup>) is satisfactory step forward particularly since Eden is talking in terms of making declaration of intention as early as Thursday, July 22 in event of failure Geneva negotiations. Message itself may have salutary effect on work of conference when Communist delegates become aware of UK approach to Colombo powers.

Should, however, conference produce settlement Eden is hoping for more time and would like a delay of two or three weeks before making declaration of intention. His thought is that first thing following a settlement is to get Colombo powers to declare their support thereof and with this in mind is suggesting to them a form of words along the lines of proposed US unilateral declaration. It is clear that in this eventuality we will need to keep pushing Eden for earliest possible action.

SMITH

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated July 18, p. 1434.

396.1 GE/7-1854 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET

GENEVA, July 18, 1954—11 p. m.

Secto 655. Repeated information Paris 95, Saigon 64. At recess after today's meeting Tran Van Do and Tran Van Chuong immediately approached Johnson stating they wished US clearly understand reasons they felt compelled make their statement at today's meeting (Secto 654<sup>1</sup>) and why they were asking for a plenary session. They said they desired at such a plenary session put forward position contained their note to French (Secto 633<sup>2</sup>) and asked Johnson's opinion on position. Johnson replied that did not feel it was practicable proposal, to which they responded they fully realized that it was not practicable and would be rejected by other side, but they felt they must make moral position their government clear to world and to Vietnamese people. If other side rejected it, position of their government would have been improved. Upon rejection by other side they would be prepared accept settlement along lines now being discussed.

Johnson pointed out that time was short and it was late for such proposal to which they replied that Mendes could of course ask for and obtain additional time from French Assembly. Johnson expressed strong doubt and urged they speak directly with French. After repeated strong urgings they finally approached Mendes, who listened sympathetically and at length. He suggested and they promised to consider formulation their proposal in writing and circulation to other delegations. He categorically stated he could not even if he so desired ask Assembly for any extension time he has given self.

Johnson told Mendes he was concerned over reaction to Vietnamese statement and reminded Mendes of US position on Vietnamese concurrence with any agreement. Mendes stated he was very conscious of this and was asking De Jean immediately go to Cannes to see Bao Dai.

Chauvel said that from De Jean's previous talk with Bao Dai it appeared Bao Dai had no knowledge of Do's conversations with Dong and in general had given delegation here free hand.

SMITH

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated July 18, p. 1431.

<sup>2</sup> Dated July 17, p. 1418.

396.1 GE/7-1854 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET

GENEVA, July 18, 1954—11 p. m.

Secto 656. Repeated information Paris 76, Saigon 65. Tonight after restricted session, at Tran Van Do's request, Bonsal and Getz met with him and Ngo Dinh Luyen at Vietnamese villa.

Principal Vietnamese concern was explanation statement made at today's meeting (Secto 654<sup>1</sup>) and proposal contained Secto 633.<sup>2</sup> Do emphasized they did not wish to sabotage Mendes-France or possibility of conference agreement. Vietnamese delegation feels that in present state of military inferiority they must carry fight to Viet Minh on political grounds. To do this, they have chosen strong stand against partition, which will contrast with Viet Minh willingness to reach agreement on this basis. This stand, they believe, will evoke extremely favorable response of Vietnamese people, and permit Diem Government to attract popular support in post-armistice period.

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated July 18, p. 1431.

<sup>2</sup> Dated July 17, p. 1418.

This new "position" of Vietnamese delegation intended as primarily psychological move which will not prevent their acceptance agreement based on US-UK seven points, which they consider minimum. They intend speak with all friendly delegations tomorrow morning, beginning with French to make sure there is complete understanding.

Bonsal expressed understanding their difficult position but stressed hard realities with which we are faced along lines Under Secretary's talk with Do this morning (Secto 652<sup>3</sup>). Conversation ended on friendly note with Do explaining delegation could not return to Vietnam without having made this stand.<sup>4</sup>

SMITH

<sup>3</sup> Dated July 18, p. 1426.

<sup>4</sup> The U.S. Delegation transmitted an additional report on this conversation in telegram Secto 658, July 19. It read as follows: "During conversation with Tran Van Do (Secto 656), Bonsal asked Do purpose Tran Van Huu's visit to Geneva last week. Do said Huu had seen Pham Van Dong to sound out possibilities of coalition government. When Bonsal expressed surprise, Do said Huu would do anything to get into power. Do said he realized impossibility coalition government from experience in 1946. Even one Viet Minh in coalition would lead to disaster." (396.1 GE/7-1954)

396.1 GE/7-1854: Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State<sup>1</sup>

SECRET      PRIORITY

GENEVA, July 18, 1954—11 p. m.

Secto 657. Repeated information Paris 97, Saigon 66. Department pass Defense. Following is translation (done by British) of text working paper on control in Vietnam prepared by Soviet delegation. Paper dated July 9 although only received today. Soviet paper follows closely French paper July 7 (Secto 575, repeated Paris 25, Saigon 17<sup>2</sup>). Most important changes from French text appear in paragraph three of numbered paragraph eight, numbered paragraph nine (d), numbered paragraphs 15 and 18.

"1. The responsibility for implementing the agreement on the cessation of hostilities is placed on the parties.

<sup>1</sup> Message transmitted in two sections.

<sup>2</sup> Dated July 8, p. 1305.

"2. Control and supervision over this implementation is ensured by the international commission.

"3. In order to facilitate, under conditions shown below, the implementation of provisions concerning joint actions by the two parties a joint commission will be set up in Vietnam.

"4. The joint commission is composed of an equal number of representatives of the commands of the two parties.

"5. The presidents of the delegations of the joint commission will hold the rank of general. The joint commission will set up joint groups, the number of which will be determined by mutual agreement between the parties. The joint groups will be composed of an equal number of officers from both parties. Their activity on the demarcation lines between the zones of regroupment will be determined by the parties whilst taking into account the powers of the joint commission.

"6. The joint commission will ensure the implementation of the following provisions of the agreement on the cessation of hostilities:

a. A simultaneous and general cease-fire in Vietnam for all regular and irregular armed forces of the two parties.

b. A regroupment of the armed forces of the two parties.

c. Observance of the demarcation lines between the zones of regroupment and the demilitarized sectors.

It will help the parties to implement the said provisions, will ensure liaison between them for the purpose of the working out and putting into effect of plans for the application of these provisions, and it will endeavor to solve controversial questions which may arise between the parties during the implementation of these provisions.

"7. An international commission will be set up for control and supervision over the application of the provisions of the agreement on the cessation of hostilities in Indochina. It will be composed of an equal number of representatives of the following states: (blank)

It will be read by the chairman (blank)

Its location will be (blank)

"8. The international commission will set up permanent and mobile inspection brigades, composed of an equal number of officers appointed by each of the above-mentioned states. The permanent brigades will be located at the following points (blank). These points of location may, at a later date, be altered at the request of the joint commission, or of one of the parties, or of the international commission itself by agreement between the international commission and the command of the party concerned.

The field of action of the mobile brigades will be the demilitarized zones. Within the limits of these zones they will have the right to move freely and to receive from the local civil and military authorities all facilities they may be in need of for the fulfillment of their tasks (supply of personnel, placing at their disposal documents necessary for control, summoning witnesses necessary for investigation, ensuring the security and freedom of movement of the inspection brigades, etc. . . .) they will have at their disposal the necessary modern means of transport, supervision and communication. Outside the zones and points of activity shown above, the mobile brigades may, by agreement with the command of the party concerned, make trips within the limits of the tasks given them by the present agreement.

"9. The task of supervising the implementation by the parties of the provisions of the agreement will be placed on the international commission. For this purpose it will fulfill the tasks of control, supervision, inspection and investigation connected with the application of the provisions of the agreement on the cessation of hostilities, namely, it must,

a) Control the movement of the armed forces of the two parties, effected within the framework of the regroupment plan.

b) Supervise the demarcation lines between the zones of regroupment, and also the demilitarized zones.

c) Control the operations of releasing prisoners of war and civilian internees.

d) To watch over the implementation of the provisions of the agreement on the cessation of hostilities, concerning the ban on the introduction into the country from abroad, of armed forces, military personnel and of all kinds of arms, ammunition, military equipment, in the zones and points shown in Article 8.

"10. The international commission shall, through the medium of the mobile brigades mentioned above, and as soon as possible, either at its own initiative, or at the request of the joint commission, or of one of the parties, have recourse to necessary investigations by documents and on the spot.

"11. The inspection brigades will submit to the international committee the results of their control, their investigation and their observations, furthermore they will draw up special reports which they may consider necessary or which may be requested from them by the commission. In the case of a disagreement within the brigades, the conclusions of each member will be submitted to the commission.

"12. If any one inspection brigade is unable to settle an incident or considers that there is a violation or a threat of a serious violation the international commission will be informed; the latter will study the reports and the conclusions of the inspection brigades and will inform the parties of the measures which should be taken for the settlement of the incidents, ending of the violations or doing away with the threat of violation.

"13. When the joint commission is unable to reach an agreement on the interpretation to be given to some provision or on the appraisal of a fact, the international commission will study the controversial question. Its conclusions will be sent directly to the parties and will be notified to the joint commission.

"14. Recommendations will be adopted or passed by the international commission by majority vote, reservation being made for the provisions contained in Article 15. If there is a split of votes the chairman's vote will be decisive.

The international commission may pass recommendations concerning amendments and additions which it may be necessary to make to the provisions of the agreement on the cessation of hostilities in Vietnam, in order to ensure a more effective implementation of that agreement. These recommendations will be adopted unanimously.

"15. When dealing with questions concerning violations of the agreement, or threats of violations, which might lead to a resumption of hostilities, namely :

- (a) Refusal by the armed forces of one party to effect the movements provided for in the regroupment plan ;
- (b) Violation by the armed forces of one of the parties of the regroupment zones, territorial waters, or air space of the other party ;

The decisions of the international commission must be unanimous.

"16. If one of the parties refuses to put into effect a recommendation passed by the international commission, the commission or one of the parties address themselves to the guarantors. If the international commission does not reach unanimity in the cases provided for in Article 15, it will submit a majority report and one or more minority reports to the guarantors. The international commission will address itself to the guarantors in all cases where its activity is being hindered.

"17. The international control commission will be set up at the time of the cessation of hostilities in Indochina in order that it should be able to fulfill the tasks provided for in Article 9.

"18. The international commission for control and supervision in Vietnam will act in close connection with the international control commissions in Cambodia and Laos. A body for coordinating the activities of the three commissions will be set up by agreement among them, in the form of a coordination international commission for control and supervision in Indochina.

"19. The coordination international commission for control and supervision in Indochina will adopt decisions concerning a progressive decrease in the activities of the international commissions for control and supervision in Laos and Cambodia, taking into account the evolution in Vietnam. These decisions will be adopted unanimously."

SMITH

JULY 19, 1954

Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 306

Memorandum by the Adviser to the United States Delegation (Dwan)<sup>1</sup>

CONFIDENTIAL

[GENEVA, July 19, 1954.]

COMMENTS ON VIETMINH DRAFT ARMISTICE AGREEMENT FOR VIETNAM <sup>2</sup>

1. Vietminh draft is based on French draft, follows its organization, and in many cases borrows whole paragraphs.

2. It establishes a single military demarcation line but does not say where.

3. It requires transfer of all forces of both sides to their respective sides of the line within 180 days. (French draft provides for 380 days.)

<sup>1</sup> The handwritten initials of U. Alexis Johnson appear on the source text.

<sup>2</sup> Summary of the Viet Minh draft agreement is attached ; it was transmitted to the Departments of Defense and State in telegram Gento 84, July 19. (Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 307)

4. It omits any reference to intermediate regroupment zones as French draft covers so completely, and calls instead for withdrawal in two stages—air and naval forces and two-thirds of the ground forces during first three months, balance in last three months. Draft leaves up to the representatives of the two commands on the spot to work out further details.

5. It provides that turnover of civil authority between each side begins at the outset of the withdrawal and transfer of troops, specifically requiring that such transfer of civil administration of Hanoi be completed within 60 days and of Haiphong within 180 days.

6. It permits transfer of civilians from one zone to the other.

7. It prohibits introduction into Vietnam of reinforcing military personnel (although permitting individual and small unit rotation), except during 180 day period of evacuation.

8. It prohibits introduction of reinforcing arms and ammunition (but permits piece for piece replacement only during period between completion of transfer of forces and withdrawal of foreign forces).

9. Neutral control commission to observe and inspect reliefs and replacements at specific ports of entry.

10. It prohibits creation of new military bases and reinforcement of existing bases, and reestablishment of old bases.

Draft is exceedingly vague on details and phasing of regroupment of forces, leaving details to two commanders to work out. It appears constructed so as to permit the spirit of the agreement to be violated through imprecision of the letter.

It calls for transfer of forces in a time period less than that French say is needed to evacuate Delta in orderly fashion.

[Attachment]

SUMMARY OF PROVISIONS OF VIETMINH DRAFT ARMISTICE PROPOSAL FOR VIETNAM

Demarcation Line and Demilitarized Zones

1. Provides for provisional military demarcation line and 10-kilometer demilitarized zone.

2. Location of line to be indicated on attached map.<sup>3</sup>

3. Forces of both sides to be regrouped on either side of the line within 180 days after armistice comes into effect.

Principles for Implementation of Armistice Agreement

1. Establishes principle of simultaneous ceasefire throughout all Indochina as of (blank) hour and date.

<sup>3</sup> Not printed.

2. Requires conference to establish a schedule for the meeting in Indochina of representatives of the two opposing commands who will handle operations connected with the cessation of hostilities.

3. Pending general elections for unification of Vietnam, civil administration in each regroupment zone to be conducted by the side regrouping therein. (Comment: question of elections not mentioned in French draft.)

4. Transfer of civil administration from one party to the other to begin at the outset of the withdrawals and to be completed when the withdrawal is completed. Specifically, transfer of civil administration of Hanoi to Vietminh must be completed within at least 60 days from date armistice comes into effect; that for Haiphong within 180 days. (Comment: French draft provides that civil administration remain in hands of one side until all its forces are withdrawn from zone concerned.)

5. Prohibits reprisals against persons and organizations having collaborated with other side during hostilities and guarantee of their democratic liberties.

6. Between time armistice enters into effect and completion of transfers of troops, civilians desiring to move from the zone of one side to the zone of the other will be authorized and assisted to do so by the authorities of zone in which they are now living.

7. Withdrawals of forces and equipment to be made by sector or province in the following order: all combat aircraft, naval units, and two-thirds of the ground forces to be evacuated in the first three months; the balance of forces and supplies to be totally evacuated in the last three months.

8. The Joint Commission and the neutral control commission to observe measures guaranteeing security of the forces during withdrawals and transfers.

9. A meeting of the representatives of the two high commands in Indochina will determine specific conditions for withdrawals and transfers according to the above principles.

Prohibition of the Introduction of New Troops, Military Personnel, Arms and New Ammunition, and the Question of Military Bases

1. All reinforcing troops and additional military personnel prohibited from entering Vietnam after the ceasefire.

2. Arrival of individual military personnel into Vietnam for temporary duty and return to Vietnam of individual military personnel after short periods of leave or temporary duty outside Vietnam to be authorized under the following conditions: relief of units and personnel not authorized during evacuation period of 180 days; term "relief" means replacement of units or personnel by other units of the same echelon or of other personnel arriving in Vietnam for military service there; relief units not to be larger than battalion size or equivalent naval and air units; relief to be man for man and no more than 1000 men to be admitted within any one month; units and personnel to enter and leave Vietnam only at points set forth below; neutral control commission, through its inspection teams, to observe and inspect reliefs at locations mentioned below.

3. Introduction of reinforcing armaments and ammunition and other war materials into Vietnam is prohibited, such as combat aircraft, naval units, artillery, recoilless weapons, armored vehicles, etc.; piece for piece replacement permitted between completion of transfer of forces to withdrawal of all foreign forces; neutral control commission, through its inspection teams, to observe and inspect these replacements.

4. From proclamation of ceasefire, creation of new military bases (naval and air) and construction work on existing military bases and restoration of bases will be prohibited.

5. Points of entry and exit for relief personnel and equipment (to be defined later).

POW and Civilian Internees

1. Vietnamese nationals, French and other nationalities, to be liberated within period of (blank) days from effective date of armistice.

2. Term "civilian internees" to include those arrested and detained for having contributed to armed or political struggle between the sides.

Additional Provisions

1. Commanders of both sides to accord protection and assistance to Joint Commission and the neutral nations control commission.

2. Expenses of the commissions to be shared, etc.

---

396.1 GE/7-1954 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

TOP SECRET      NIACT

GENEVA, July 19, 1954—11 a. m.

Secto 659. Eyes only for the Secretary from the Under Secretary. Reference your Tosec 565.<sup>1</sup>

Paragraph 1. No. I gave the background of thinking on this in my Secto 638.<sup>2</sup>

Paragraph 2. I am fully aware limitations of executive power and authority in this matter and have and will continue to use constitutional argument as necessary. As I reported in my Secto 638, I made it clear that United States cannot join in any guarantee and will not even join any proposal declaring conference members will in future consult.

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated July 18, p. 1429.

<sup>2</sup> Dated July 18, p. 1405.

I have reason to be well satisfied with what we have been able thus far to accomplish with Eden and Mendes-France, and am particularly gratified at progress have been able to make with Eden on SEATO. See my Sectos 644<sup>3</sup> and 649.<sup>4</sup> In the event of failure conference Eden is prepared make immediate declaration, and even if conference succeeds is prepared to go ahead very quickly along lines for which we have long been working.

In the latter case he asked for two to three weeks to work on Colombo powers in order to get at least benevolent neutrality.

SMITH

---

<sup>3</sup> Dated July 18, p. 1434.

<sup>4</sup> Dated July 18, p. 1439.

396.1 GE/7-1954 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET NIACT

GENEVA, July 19, 1954—1 p. m.

Secto 660. Limit distribution. Dennis Allen has just informed us that London has cleared Eden's messages to Colombo powers, Australia and New Zealand (Sectos 644<sup>1</sup> and 649<sup>2</sup>) including suggestion for statements along lines of proposed United States unilateral declaration in event of Geneva settlement and instructed that messages be delivered immediately.

We will be discussing with British today program of action to be taken in event agreement reached at conference.

SMITH

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated July 18, p. 1434.

<sup>2</sup> Dated July 18, p. 1439.

396.1 GE/7-1954 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State<sup>1</sup>

TOP SECRET

GENEVA, July 19, 1954—1 p. m.

Secto 661. Re Secto 639. Topping has supplied in confidence following background information concerning his story on views of Chinese Communist delegation.<sup>2</sup>

---

<sup>1</sup> Substance of Topping's talk with Yager of the delegation is also in a memorandum from Yager to Johnson in Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 303.

<sup>2</sup> Topping's story was transmitted to the Department of State in telegram Secto 639, July 18, p. 1428.

He stated his informant was Huang Hua, whom he has known for many years. Interview was at Huang's initiative, was called on short notice, and was conducted in extremely serious manner without propaganda harangues.

Topping said he had reported Huang's statement fully in his story but had obtained number of "visual impressions" during interview. When Huang spoke of possibility American bases in Indochina or anti-Communist pact in Southeast Asia, he became very agitated, his hands shook, and his usually excellent English broke down, forcing him to work through interpreter. Huang also spoke seriously and with apparent sincerity concerning his belief that I have returned to Geneva to prevent settlement. Topping believes Chinese Communists convinced Americans made deal with French during Paris talks on basis of which Mendes-France has raised price of settlement.

SMITH

---

396.1 GE/7-1854 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET PRIORITY

GENEVA, July 18 [19], 1954—1 p. m.<sup>1</sup>

Secto 662. Repeated information Paris priority 99, Saigon priority 68. Working level elements French delegation indicate that if agreements between commands are reached tomorrow and conference accepts or "respects" these agreements, date for cease fire will probably be set at fifteen days from July 20. This period has been suggested by French High Command, Saigon.

SMITH

---

<sup>1</sup> Although note on source text indicates that this message was delayed in transmission, it is more likely that it was dated July 19 and not July 18. It was not received in the Department of State until July 21.

---

396.1 GE/7-1954 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET PRIORITY

GENEVA, July 19, 1954—2 p. m.

Secto 663. Repeated information Paris 100, Saigon 69. Laotian Foreign Minister called on Johnson this morning to describe interview with Chou En-lai yesterday at which Chou En-lai presented unofficial and extravagant demands. These include:

- (1) Regrouping of Laotian resistants in provinces of Phong Saly and Sam Neua and in portions of provinces of Luang Prabang and Xien Khouang as far south as Ban Ban;

(2) The administration of these provinces to be placed under the supervision of joint committees composed of representatives of Royal Government and of the resistance movement with a supervisory joint committee at Vientiane; this situation would prevail until general elections scheduled for August 1955 at which time government of "national unity" would presumably emerge;

(3) Complete elimination of French Union bases in Laos even though provided in Franco-Laotian treaty.

Most recent Viet Minh proposals (latest day before yesterday) have been based on concept of large regrouping zones administered by Pathet Lao resisters whose nominations would be rubber-stamped by Royal Government.

Laotian Foreign Minister has told us that both Chinese and Viet Minh proposals are wholly unacceptable and that his government will not adhere to any agreement on cessation of hostilities which Franco-Laotian Command may sign with Viet Minh accepting such conditions. Foreign Minister holds that Laotian proposals which include regrouping zones within which resistance elements are to have freedom of movement together with facilities for resisters to recover civic rights and to re-enter administration are ample and Royal Government can go no further. Foreign Minister asked us what help US could give his government if it refused to accept cessation of hostilities agreement.

USDel is urging and facilitating contacts between Laotian and UK delegations on this subject and is also arranging to discuss it with French delegation without delay.

SMITH

---

396.1 GE/7-1954: Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

CONFIDENTIAL

PRIORITY

GENEVA, July 19, 1954—3 p. m.

Secto 664. Repeated information Paris 101, Saigon 70. Department pass Defense. With reference to French delegation working paper on control in Vietnam (Secto 575<sup>1</sup>), French and Viet Minh have agreed on first 17 of 19 paragraphs with following changes:

Paragraph two: Insert "observation and" before "control".

Paragraph seven: First sentence: Insert "neutral" before "International Commission" throughout text; insert "observation and" before "control".

Second sentence: Insert "an equal number of" before "representatives".

Paragraph eight: First sentence: Insert "equal" before "number".

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated July 8, p. 1305.

Paragraph nine: First sentence: Change "supervising" to "observing".

Paragraph thirteen: First sentence: Substitute "is to be informed of" for "arbitrates".

Second sentence: Substitute "recommendations" for "conclusions".

Paragraph fourteen: First sentence: Delete "and the arbitral decisions"; delete "or rendered".

Paragraph fifteen: Sub-paragraph (c): Delete; delete last sentence.

Paragraph sixteen: First sentence: Delete "or an arbitral decision"; substitute "the interested sides or the commission itself is to inform the members of the Geneva Conference" for "the latter informs the guarantors".

Second sentence: Substitute "members of the conference" for "guarantors".

Third sentence: Substitute "members of the conference" for "guarantors".

French are proposing following new paragraphs eighteen and nineteen to Viet Minh today:

"Eighteen. The International Control Commission in Vietnam will act in close cooperation with the International Control Commissions in Cambodia and Laos.

A body made up of a representative of each member state of the neutral International Commission is created to coordinate the activities of the three commissions each time that the implementation of the agreements on the cessation of hostilities in Cambodia, in Laos, and Vietnam makes it necessary.

Nineteen. The neutral International Control Commission in (Cambodia) (Laos) (Vietnam) can, in agreement with the coordinating body, and taking account of the development of the situation in Cambodia, Laos and Vietnam, formulate recommendations concerning the progressive reduction of its activities. These recommendations will be adopted unanimously."

Soviet draft on control in Vietnam (Secto 657<sup>2</sup>), presumably is superseded by new French-Viet Minh draft.

Communists appear to have conceded two important points.

Soviet version (Article 8) restricts actions zones within which mobile teams can function without agreement of side concerned to "demilitarized zones" and make no mention of "areas neighboring land and sea frontiers of Vietnam" as does French draft. It also retains reference to "guarantors" in paragraph sixteen rather than "members of conference" as in French draft. Therefore, on these points French-Viet Minh version more acceptable than Soviet draft. Although agreed

<sup>2</sup> Dated July 18, p. 1441.

French-Viet Minh draft reflects desirable change in paragraph sixteen, it weakens role of International Commission by omitting reference to arbitral function and providing only that commission can inform and make recommendations to the sides. (Paragraphs thirteen and fourteen.)

French also will attempt today to get Viet Minh agreement on designation of following twofour [24] points at which fixed teams are to be stationed: Lai Chau, Lao Kai, Ha Giang, Cao Bang, Langson, Tien Yen, Cam Pha, Hongay, Haiphong, Nam Dinh, Hanoi, Vinh, Dong Hoi, Hue, Tourane, Nha Trang, Phan Thiet, Cap St. Jacques, Saigon, Can Tho, Dalat, Ban Me Thout, Pleiku, Kontum.

SMITH

396.1 GE/7-1954: Telegram

Smith-Mendès-France Meeting, Geneva, July 19, Afternoon: The United States Delegation to the Department of State

TOP SECRET      NIACT

GENEVA, July 19, 1954—8 p. m.

Secto 669. For the Secretary from the Under Secretary. I had long talk with Mendes-France this afternoon, as I told you. He urgently asked that we expand our proposed unilateral declaration so as take note not only of agreements between military commands, but also take note of paragraphs one to nine proposed conference declaration. (See Sectos 628<sup>1</sup> and 647<sup>2</sup>). I made it clear that we could under no circumstances associate ourselves with conference declaration even though it is anticipated it will be only conference document and not signed agreement, nor could we note or otherwise imply any acquiescence in or approval of paragraph 10 which provides for consultation among conference members on questions transmitted to them by international control commissions.

Text of declaration not yet agreed between French and Communists, but I am transmitting immediately by following telegram French estimate probable final text.<sup>3</sup> I am also transmitting texts of unilateral statements to which Laos and Cambodia have agreed which are referred to in paragraph 4 draft declaration<sup>4</sup> and draft French unilateral declaration referred to in paragraph 8.<sup>5</sup>

French position is this conference declaration is integral part of agreements reached at conference and they will be sorely disappointed if we simply disassociate ourselves from declaration without even

<sup>1</sup> Dated July 16, p. 1400.

<sup>2</sup> Dated July 18, p. 1438.

<sup>3</sup> Telegram Secto 667, July 19, p. 1460.

<sup>4</sup> Telegram Secto 668, July 19, p. 1456.

<sup>5</sup> Telegram Secto 670, July 19, p. 1462.

taking note in same manner as with respect to cease-fire agreements. I recommend that I be authorized to amend our proposed declaration (Annex B my instructions <sup>6</sup>) by inserting a brief addition taking note of paragraphs one to nine of conference declaration if its final content does not too greatly differ from that which French have indicated they prepared to accept. I would like some latitude on this, and am sure I know what would be acceptable to you. I will, of course, have to state in conference that the US is unable to join in a multilateral declaration (since the one planned would include the Communists) but it is making a declaration of its own position, et cetera. This may come to a head tomorrow afternoon or evening, and while it would be possible to make our declaration later it is infinitely preferable to do it at the time of settlement. Otherwise we will have to disassociate ourselves with a lengthy and detailed conference declaration without anything of our own to offer except the very brief declaration we already have prepared.<sup>7</sup>

SMITH

---

<sup>6</sup> Dated July 16, p. 1391.

<sup>7</sup> French Ambassador Bonnet telephoned the Secretary of State at 8:32 a. m. on July 20 and reported that he had had a telephone conversation with Mendès-France that morning. Mendès-France had reported that there would be some "little" changes in the wording of the final declaration but that the general meaning would not be changed. Mendès-France wanted to show the solidarity of the three Western Powers and told Bonnet that he would appreciate it if Smith had as broad instructions as possible to take note of the final act of the conference. Mendès-France mentioned point 9. The Secretary of State said it was not a question of what was in the final act, but rather a "question of making it with the Communists." Secretary Dulles told Ambassador Bonnet that he was studying the second part of point 9 and that instructions would be sent to Smith. Bonnet asked to be notified. At 8:47 a. m. the Secretary informed the Ambassador that Smith was being told he could make a unilateral declaration on behalf of the United States, which would include acceptance of article 9. Ambassador Bonnet said he was delighted. (Eisenhower Library, Dulles papers, Telephone Conversations)

For the instructions to Under Secretary Smith, which were contained in telegrams Tosec 578 and Tosec 586, July 20 and 21, see footnote 4, p. 1472.

---

396.1 GE/7-1854 : Telegram

The Secretary of State to the United States Delegation<sup>1</sup>

TOP SECRET      PRIORITY      WASHINGTON, July 19, 1954—6:28 p. m.

Tosec 572. For General Smith from Secretary. Makins came in this afternoon and gave me copy of message <sup>2</sup> (which is practically identical to that contained in your Secto 644 <sup>3</sup>) from Eden to Govts five Colombo powers plus Australia and New Zealand. Message contained Annex A—possible points for inclusion in Declaration of Support on

---

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by Bonbright of EUR.

<sup>2</sup> Not printed.

<sup>3</sup> Dated July 18, p. 1434.

an agreement for Indochina; and Annex B—draft declaration of intention on Collective defense.<sup>4</sup>

I observed that Eden's message might leave impression that if agreement which we could respect was reached we might join in multi-lateral statement with Communists. Makins said he was sure this was not contemplated.

Re point 3 of Annex A which reads: "Undertake to treat violation of Indochina settlement as threat to international peace and security" I pointed out difference between this wording and that contained in Annex B of your instructions under which we "would view any renewal of the aggression in violation of these agreements with grave concern and as seriously threatening international peace and security". I explained that while we did not expect that any non-Communist state would violate the agreements, we were unwilling to enter into an engagement which might place us in position of having to side with Communists against a non-Communist state. Makins readily saw point and said he would report it to his Govt. He pointed out that Eden's wording was not "sacrosanct" and had been conveyed to other Commonwealth Govts in order to elicit views.

Re Annex B I suggested that final clause concerning "conclusion of a collective defense agreement, etc." be changed to "establishment of a collective defense, etc.". (I had in mind that with this change it would be easier for us to move expeditiously in establishment of ad hoc machinery before details of agreement were finally worked out which might take some time.) Makins thought this change would be an improvement.

I suggest you convey substance of above to Eden at your earliest opportunity.

DULLES

---

<sup>4</sup> For text of Annex B, see telegram Secto 644, July 18, p. 1434; for text of Annex A, see footnote 5, p. 1436.

---

Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 307

The United States Delegation to the Department of Defense

CONFIDENTIAL

GENEVA, July 19, 1954.

Defense Message Gento 85. For: Sullivan from Dwan. Rptd info: USARMA Saigon. Defense pass State. Ref: Gento 81.<sup>1</sup> French Del has circulated additional paragraph under Article 5, Draft Agreement on Cessation of Hostilities in Vietnam, which reads as follows:

"While present agreement is in effect, no military bases of a foreign state shall be established in the regroupment zones of the two sides; the latter will see to it that their zones are not used for the resumption of hostilities or in the service of an aggressive policy.”

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated July 15, p. 1382.

This addition appears to be to advantage of French Union side since it appears aimed directly at possibility of Vietminh using their regroupment zones as bases for further aggression. Prohibition of establishment of foreign bases in regroupment areas not to French Union disadvantage since Delta to be evacuated.

SMITH

---

396.1 GE/7-1954: Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State<sup>1</sup>

CONFIDENTIAL      NIACT

GENEVA, July 19, 1954—7 p. m.

Secto 665. For Secretary from Under Secretary. Reference: Tosec 568.<sup>2</sup> In event failure Geneva conference I believe it would be useful if President included in his radio and TV speech reference to approach British and ourselves have made to prospective members of southeast Asia collective security organization (Secto 660<sup>3</sup> and previous).

If you agree suggest you send us text of pertinent language so that I may inform Eden before speech delivered.

I told Mendes-France today of the President's intention. He expressed interest and I invited his suggestions for anything he thought might be usefully included in the speech. He promised to let me know.

SMITH

---

<sup>1</sup> Handwritten notation on the source text indicates that the Secretary of State saw this telegram.

<sup>2</sup> Dated July 18, p. 1436.

<sup>3</sup> Dated July 19, p. 1448.

---

396.1 GE/7-1954: Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

TOP SECRET      NIACT

GENEVA, July 19, 1954—7 p. m.

Secto 666. For the Secretary from the Under Secretary. The outlines of international control now clearly emerge. Composition will probably be Poland, India, and Canada or Belgium. The French prefer Belgium and so do I. Both Poland and Canada or Belgium will have veto on important questions. Commission will have full freedom of movement in demilitarized zones which will separate forces at each stage of regrouping and in all frontier and seacoast areas.

Taking everything into consideration, I strongly feel this is satisfactory and much better than we were able to obtain in Korea. French feel, and Eden and I agree, that with such composition built-in veto will work to our advantage. This setup is best French or anybody else could get, and I feel it is within spirit of point 7.<sup>1</sup>

SMITH

---

<sup>1</sup> Point 7 of the U.S.-U.K. communication to the French, contained in telegram 4853 to Paris, June 28, p. 1256, read: "7. Provides effective machinery for international supervision of the agreement."

396.1 GE/7-1954 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET NIACT

GENEVA, July 19, 1954—7 p. m.

Secto 668. Repeated information Paris 102, Saigon 71. French delegate has given us copy of draft of unilateral declaration of Governments of Laos and Cambodia which these governments have accepted. Draft also given Viet Minh and Chinese Communists but their reaction not yet received. Unofficial translation follows:

"The Government of (Laos, Cambodia) is resolved never to take part in an aggressive policy and never to permit the territory of (Laos, Cambodia) to be used in the service of such a policy.

"The Government of (Laos, Cambodia) will never join in any agreement with other states if this agreement carried with it for (Laos, Cambodia) the obligation of establishing bases for military forces of foreign powers on the territory of (Laos, Cambodia) as long as (Laos, Cambodia) is not attacked or exposed to threat of attack.

"The Government of (Laos, Cambodia) is resolved to settle its international differences by pacific means in such a manner that peace and international security as well as justice will not be endangered. During the period between the date of cessation of hostilities in Vietnam and that of definitive settlement of the political problems in that country, the Government of (Laos, Cambodia) will not solicit foreign aid in matériel or personnel or instructors other than within the limits defined above and in the framework of a strictly defensive policy which it intends to apply in the future as it has always done in the past."

SMITH

---

396.1 GE/7-1954 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State<sup>1</sup>

SECRET

GENEVA, July 19, 1954—7 p. m.

Secto 677. Repeated information Paris 108, Saigon 77. Following is UK translation of July 17 USSR "Working document concerning the joint and international commissions in Cambodia and Laos".

---

<sup>1</sup> Message transmitted in two sections.

Russian text delivered USDel offices July 18.

Verbatim text:

Restricted. July 17, 1954. Translation (UK). USSR delegation.

Working document concerning the joint and the international commissions in Cambodia and Laos.

1. Responsibility for the execution of the agreement on the cessation of hostilities is placed on the parties.

2. An international commission shall be entrusted with control and supervision over the application of the provisions of the agreement on the cessation of hostilities in (Laos Cambodia). It shall be composed of representatives of the following states: _____

It shall be presided over by the representative of _____

Its location shall be _____

3. The international commission shall set up fixed and mobile inspection teams, composed of an equal number of officers appointed by each of the above-mentioned states. The fixed teams shall be located at the following points _____

These points of location may, at a later date, be altered by agreement between the government of (Laos Cambodia) and the international commission. Beyond the points shown above mobile teams may, by agreement with the command of the party concerned, carry out movements within the limits of the tasks given them by the present agreement. They shall receive from the local civil and military authorities all facilities they may require for the fulfilment of their tasks (provision of personnel, placing at their disposal documents needed for supervision, summoning witnesses necessary for the holding of enquiries, ensuring the security and freedom of movement of the inspection teams, etc.). They shall have at their disposal such modern means of transport, supervision and communication as they may require.

4. The international commission shall be responsible for supervising the proper execution by the parties of the provisions of the agreement. For this purpose it shall fulfil the tasks of control, supervision, inspection and investigation connected with the application of the provisions of the agreement on the cessation of hostilities, namely it shall:

(a) Control the withdrawal of foreign armed forces in accordance with the provisions of the agreement on the cessation of hostilities.

(b) Control the operations of releasing prisoners of war and civilian internees.

(c) Supervise at the points mentioned in Article 3, the implementation of the provisions of the agreement on the cessation of hostilities, concerning the ban on the introduction into (Laos Cambodia) from abroad, of armed forces, military personnel and of all kinds of arms, munitions, and war material.

5. A joint committee and joint teams shall be set up in order to facilitate the implementation of the provisions concerning the withdrawal of foreign armed forces and foreign military personnel. The joint committee shall ensure the implementation of the following provisions of the agreement on the cessation of hostilities :

(a) A simultaneous and general cease-fire in (Laos Cambodia) for all regular and irregular armed forces of the two parties.

(b) A regroupment of the armed forces of the two parties. It shall help the parties to implement the said provisions, shall ensure liaison between them for the purpose of preparing and carrying out plans for the application of these provisions and shall endeavour to solve such disputed questions as may arise between the two parties in the course of implementing these provisions. They shall follow these troops and foreign personnel during their movement and shall be disbanded once the execution of the withdrawal plan has been completed.

6. The joint committee and joint teams shall be composed of an equal number of representatives of the commands of the interested parties.

7. The international commission shall, through the medium of the inspection teams mentioned above, and as soon as possible either on its own initiative, or at the request of the joint committee, or of one of the parties, undertake the necessary investigations, both documentary and on the ground.

8. The inspection teams shall submit to the international commission the results of their supervision, their investigation and their observations, furthermore they shall draw up such special reports as they may consider necessary or as may be requested from them by the commission. In the case of a disagreement within the teams, the conclusions of each member shall be submitted to the commission.

9. If any one inspection team is unable to settle an incident or considers that there is a violation or a threat of a serious violation the international commission shall be informed, the latter shall study the reports and the conclusions of the inspection teams and shall inform the parties of the measures which should be taken for the settlement of the incidents, ending of the violations or doing away with the threat of violation.

10. The recommendations of the international commission shall be adopted by majority vote, subject to the provisions contained in Article 11. If the votes are divided the Chairman's vote shall be decisive. The international commission may formulate recommendations concerning amendments and additions which should be made to the provisions of the agreement on the cessation of hostilities in (Laos Cambodia) in order to ensure a more effective implementation of that agreement. These recommendations shall be adopted unanimously.

11. When dealing with questions concerning violations of the agreement, or threats of violations, which may lead to a resumption of hostilities, namely :

(a) Refusal by the foreign armed forces to effect the movements provided for in the withdrawal plan ;

(b) Violation or threat of violation by foreign armed forces of the integrity of the country ; the decisions of the international commission must be unanimous.

12. If one of the parties refuses to put into effect any recommendation of the international commission, the commission or one of the parties shall address themselves to the guarantors. If the international commission does not reach unanimity in the cases provided for in Article 11, it shall submit a majority report and one or more minority reports to the guarantors. The international commission shall address itself to the guarantors in all cases where its activity is being hindered.

13. The international commission for control and supervision shall be set up at the time of the cessation of hostilities in Indochina in order that it should be able to fulfil the tasks provided for in Article 4.

14. The international commission for control and supervision in (Laos Cambodia) shall act in close cooperation with the international control commissions in Vietnam (and Laos Cambodia). A body for coordinating the activities of the three commissions shall be set up by an agreement among them, in the form of an international coordinating commission for control and supervision in Indochina.

19. [15.] The international coordinating commission for control and supervision in Indochina shall adopt decisions concerning a progressive decrease in the activities of the international commissions for control and supervision in Laos and Cambodia, taking into account the evolution in Vietnam. These decisions shall be adopted unanimously.

SMITH

396.1 GE/7-1954: Telegram

The Secretary of State to the United States Delegation<sup>1</sup>

TOP SECRET      NIACT

WASHINGTON, July 19, 1954—7:42 p. m.

Tosec 576. For Under Secretary from Secretary. Your Sectos 666, 667, 668, 669.<sup>2</sup> As requested 669 you may expand proposed unilateral declaration so as to take note of paragraphs 1 to 8 of the proposed Conference Declaration with understanding that US obligations "with regard to aforesaid agreements and paragraphs of Declaration" are limited to those expressed Subparagraphs 1 and 3 of Annex B of your instructions.<sup>3</sup>

The foregoing is on the assumption that the Declaration in its final form does not materially differ from Secto 667. As to non-materiality of differences, would like you to obtain Phleger's legal judgment.

Have no objection to including first portion of paragraph 9 of proposed Conference Declaration but am concerned as to effect of including second portion of paragraph 9 as this seems to imply a multilateral engagement with Communists which would be inconsistent with our basic approach and which subsequently might enable Communist China to charge us with alleged violations of agreement to which it might claim both governments became parties.

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by the Secretary of State.

<sup>2</sup> All dated July 19, p. 1455, infra, pp. 1456 and 1452, respectively.

<sup>3</sup> Dated July 16, p. 1391.

While we don't want to take responsibility of imposing our views on the French, I feel particularly concerned about provisions of paragraph 6 which gives the Control Commission constituted as per Secto 666 authority also to control the general elections. The ink is hardly dry on the Declaration of President Eisenhower and Prime Minister Churchill of June 29<sup>4</sup> to the effect that "In the case of nations now divided against their will, we shall continue to seek to achieve unity through free elections supervised by the UN to insure that they are conducted fairly." It is rather humiliating to see that Declaration now so quickly go down the drain with our apparent acquiescence.

With reference to 668 believe something like this is acceptable if obtainable. Believe that this would not necessitate these states dealing only with or through France as suggested your 650 and 652.<sup>5</sup> We hope that this possibility of direct assistance for genuinely defensive and internal security purposes and not involving any US bases can be preserved as it may very well be that as a result of surrender in Tonkin Delta French will become so highly unpopular that their effort to maintain authority in other areas would in fact lead to these other areas surely falling under Communist domination.<sup>6</sup>

DULLES

---

<sup>4</sup> See editorial note, p. 1260, for the text of this declaration.

<sup>5</sup> Both dated July 18, pp. 1425 and 1426, respectively.

<sup>6</sup> For the Vietnamese Government's views on the Tonkin Delta issue, see telegram 248 from Saigon, July 19, in volume XIII.

---

396.1 GE/7-1954 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET NIACT

GENEVA, July 19, 1954—8 p. m.

Secto 667. Repeated information Paris 103, Saigon 72. Following is best French estimate text of conference declaration which they expect will be adopted.

"1. The conference takes note of the agreements which terminate hostilities in Cambodia, Laos and Vietnam and which organize international control and supervision of the implementation of the provisions of these agreements.

2. The conference is pleased to see peace re-established in Cambodia and Laos, which countries, following the placing in effect of the provisions contemplated in this declaration and in the agreements on the cessation of hostilities, will be able thereafter to take up, in full independence and sovereignty, their role in the peaceful community of nations. (Note: French will accept wording here to general effect peace will also be restored in Vietnam following but not preceding placing in effect of provisions of declaration.)

3. The conference takes note of the declarations made by the Governments of Cambodia and Laos with reference to their intent of adopting measures which will permit all citizens to take their place in the national community, especially by participating in the next general elections which, in accordance with the constitutions of each of these countries, will take place in September 1955 for Cambodia and in August 1955 for Laos with secret ballot and with respect for fundamental liberties.

4. The conference also takes note of the declarations of these governments according to which (text to be drafted on the basis of the declarations of the Governments of Laos and of Cambodia regarding their defense needs). (See Secto 668 for current draft.<sup>1</sup>)

5. The conference notes that the agreement concerning Vietnam has as its essential goal the settlement of military questions in order to put an end to hostilities and that the military demarcation line does not constitute a definitive territorial or political boundary. It expresses the conviction that the placing in effect of the provisions contemplated in this declaration and in the agreement on the cessation of hostilities has created the necessary premises for realizing in the near future a political settlement in Vietnam.

6. The conference declares that the settlement of political problems in Vietnam must be effectuated on the basis of respect for the principles of the independence, of the unity, and the territorial integrity of Vietnam. This settlement will involve free general elections, with secret ballot, which will take place in the course of the year 1956, under the control of an international commission composed of the representatives of the states members of the international control commission, it being requisite that all conditions must be present to assure the respect of fundamental liberties and of free expression of the national will.

7. The provisions of the agreements on the cessation of hostilities meant to assure the protection of persons and property must be applied in the strictest fashion and particularly must permit everyone in Vietnam to decide freely as to the zone where he wishes to live.

8. The conference notes the declaration of the Government of the French Republic according to which that government is prepared to withdraw its troops from the territories of Cambodia, Laos, and Vietnam in agreement with the governments concerned.

9. The conference takes note of the declaration of the French Government according to which the settlement of all the problems related to the restoration and to the strengthening of peace in Cambodia, Laos and Vietnam will be based upon respect for the independence, the sovereignty, the unity and the territorial integrity of Cambodia, Laos and Vietnam.

In its relations with Cambodia, Laos and Vietnam each member of the Geneva conference undertakes to respect the sovereignty, the independence, the unity and the territorial integrity of the said states and to refrain from any interference in their internal affairs.

<sup>1</sup> Dated July 19, p. 1456.

10. The members of the conference agree to consult together on any question which may be transmitted to them by the international control commissions, in order to study the measures (USSR: Collective) (French-UK: . . . or individual) which might appear necessary to insure observance of the agreements on the cessation of hostilities in Indochina."

Note: In addition French would agree to following desired by Soviets. "The competent representative authorities of the northern and southern zones of Vietnam as well as the authorities of Laos and Cambodia must not permit individual or collective persecution of persons, or members of their families, who had collaborated in any way with one or the other side during the war". (This omits last sentence of Article 10 of Soviet draft transmitted in Secto 615.<sup>2</sup>)

SMITH

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated July 15, p. 1384.

---

396.1 GE/7-1954 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET      PRIORITY

GENEVA, July 19, 1954—8 p. m.

Secto 670. Repeated information Paris 104, Saigon 73. USDel has just received from French Del following draft of articles related to proposed conference declaration (Sectos 628,<sup>1</sup> 647<sup>2</sup> and 648<sup>3</sup>):

"Draft of unilateral French declaration re withdrawal of French troops (reference: Article 8 of draft declaration): The Government of the French Republic declares that it is prepared to withdraw French troops from the territories of Cambodia, Laos and Vietnam in agreement with the governments of these states."

Comment: Previous French draft stated that withdrawal would be at request of governments concerned.

"Draft of unilateral French declaration (reference: Article 9 of draft final declaration): In the settlement of all problems relating to the restoration and the reinforcement of peace in Cambodia, Laos and Vietnam, the Government of the French Republic will base itself upon respect for the independence and the sovereignty, the unity and the territorial integrity of Cambodia, Laos and Vietnam."

Comment: This appears to involve only minor drafting change as compared with previous text of this portion of Article 9.

SMITH

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated July 16, p. 1400.

<sup>2</sup> Dated July 18, p. 1438.

<sup>3</sup> Dated July 18, p. 1424.

396.1 GE/7-1954 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET

GENEVA, July 19, 1954—8 p. m.

Secto 671. Repeated information Paris 105, Saigon 74. French Delegation has told us that they intend to maintain position re text of final conference declaration set forth in Secto 628<sup>1</sup> with following possible changes (see also Secto 647<sup>2</sup> in which current Soviet positions are set forth). References are to be numbered paragraphs of French text transmitted Secto 628.

2. French anticipate no difficulty in satisfactory wording here which will give away nothing of previously assumed position.

3. French will insist on maintaining reference to "constitution of each of these countries" and that elections be fixed in August or September 1955 and will reject Soviet proposal of elections within one year.

4. French will endeavor to secure Communist agreement to text of declaration made by Governments of Laos and Cambodia and which Laotian and Cambodian delegations have already accepted. This article will then refer to those declarations. French will not accept Soviet proposal cited Secto 647.

5. French will insist on inclusion of language to the effect that military line of demarcation does not constitute definitive territorial or political boundary.

6. French plan to propose following alternative wording for this article: "The conference declares that the settlement of political problems in Vietnam must be effectuated on the basis of respect for the principles of the independence of the unity, and the territorial integrity of Vietnam. This settlement will involve free general elections, with secret ballot, which will take place in the course of the year 1956, under the control of an international commission composed of the representatives of the states members of the international commission, it being requisite that all conditions must be present to assure the respect of fundamental liberties and of free expression of the national will".

8. The French Government will insist upon maintenance of French drafting on this point, i.e., that French troops will be withdrawn from the territories of Cambodia, Laos and Vietnam only in agreement with the governments concerned.

With regard to additional paragraph which Soviet Delegation desires to have included and which is the same as paragraph 10 of the Soviet proposal transmitted in Secto 615,<sup>3</sup> French will accept first sentence reading: "The competent representative authorities of the northern and southern zones of Vietnam as well as the authorities of Laos and Cambodia must not permit individual or collective persecution of persons, or members of their families, who had collaborated in any way with one or the other side during the war." But will reject second sentence: "These persons and the members of their families should be afforded individual freedom and freedom of political activity and right to elect and be elected."

<sup>1</sup> Dated July 16, p. 1400.

<sup>2</sup> Dated July 18, p. 1438.

<sup>3</sup> Dated July 15, p. 1384.

SMITH

396.1 GE/7-1954 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET PRIORITY

GENEVA, July 19, 1954—9 p. m.

Secto 673. Repeated information Paris 106, Saigon 75. Vietnamese Del handed us late this afternoon their new proposal. It is elaboration of idea in note to French (Secto 633<sup>1</sup>) and conference was advised of its preparation in yesterday's restricted session. Unofficial translation follows:

"French, Soviet, and Viet Minh drafts all admit the principles of a partition of Vietnam in two zones, all of North Vietnam being abandoned to the Viet Minh.

Although this partition is only provisional in theory, it would not fail to produce in Vietnam the same effects as in Germany, Austria, and Korea.

It would not bring the peace which is sought for, deeply wounding the national sentiment of the Vietnamese people, it would provoke trouble throughout the country, trouble which would not fail to threaten a peace so dearly acquired.

Before discussing the conditions of a de facto partition with disastrous consequences for the people of Vietnam and for the peace of the world, the Del of the state of Vietnam renews its proposal for a cease-fire without a demarcation line, without partition, even provisionally.

The Vietnamese Del therefore proposes:

1. A cease-fire on present positions.
2. Regroupment of troops in two zones which would be as small as possible.
3. Disarmament of irregular troops.
4. After a period to be fixed, disarmament of Viet Minh troops and simultaneous withdrawal of foreign troops.
5. Control by the United Nations:
  - A. Of the cease-fire
  - B. Of the regroupment
  - C. Of the disarmament and the withdrawal
  - D. Of the administration of the entire country
  - E. Of the general elections, when the United Nations believes that order and security will have been everywhere truly restored.

<sup>1</sup> Dated July 17, p. 1418.

This proposal made on the formal instructions of His Majesty Bao Dai, and of the President Ngo Dinh Diem, shows that the chief of state of Vietnam once more places the independence and the unity of his country above any other consideration, and that the national government of Vietnam would prefer this provisional UN control over a truly independent and united Vietnam to its maintenance in power in a country dismembered and condemned to slavery.

Vietnamese Del renews its request that a conference session be devoted to the study of its proposal for a cease-fire without partition.

In adding this proposal to those of other members of the conference, the Del of the state of Vietnam means to bring a positive contribution to the search for a real and durable peace which conforms to the aspirations of the Vietnamese people.

Geneva, July 19, 1954."

Comments follow.

SMITH

396.1 GE/7-1954 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET NIACT

GENEVA, July 19, 1954—9 p. m.

Secto 674. Limit distribution. Re Secto 660.<sup>1</sup> Eden and I have discussed program of action to be taken in event of acceptable settlement. We have agreed to submit the following formula to London and Washington for approval. I feel this text reflects gratifying progress in UK thinking. "Action in re to Southeast Asia pact in the event of acceptable agreement on Indochina at Geneva on or about July 20."

1. Every effort should be made to persuade countries of Southeast Asia and Southwest Pacific to associate themselves in some way with the Geneva agreement, in accordance with the suggestion made to them on July 19.<sup>2</sup>

2. Whether or not such declarations of association are made by all the countries concerned, invitations should be addressed not later than August 7 to the Governments of France, Australia, New Zealand, India, Pakistan, Ceylon, Burma, Indonesia, the Philippines and Siam, to appoint representatives to meet with representatives of the Governments of the US and UK in (blank) not later than September 1 in order to prepare recommendations on the conclusion of a collective defense agreement for Southeast Asia and the Southwest Pacific.

3. The invitations to the five commonwealth countries, Burma, and Indonesia would be sent by the UK Government, to the Philippines and Siam by the US Government, and to France jointly by the two governments."

SMITH

<sup>1</sup> Dated July 19, p. 1448.

<sup>2</sup> See telegrams Secto 664, July 18, p. 1434, Secto 649, July 18, p. 1439, and Tosec 572, July 19, p. 1453.

396.1 GE/7-1954 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET PRIORITY

GENEVA, July 19, 1954—9 p. m.

Secto 675. Repeated information Paris 107, Saigon 76. At Mendes-France-Eden meeting with Chou this afternoon, Chou very considerably modified demands with regard to Laos set forth Secto 663.<sup>1</sup> He agreed to retention of French bases in Laos, provided French turn base at Xieng Khouang over to Laotians and establish substitute base in southern part of Laos. French state this entirely agreeable to them as they for some time have considered moving base elsewhere.

Chou also dropped his demand for any joint administration. He proposed regrouping points for Pathet Lao forces be established in northeast provinces. French more optimistic over possibility agreement on Laos.

SMITH

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated July 19, p. 1449.

396.1 GE/7-1954 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

TOP SECRET

GENEVA, July 19, 1954—9 p. m.

Secto 676. Repeated information Moscow 8. For the Secretary from the Under Secretary. As I mentioned on the telephone today, Mendes-France told me that during his first dinner with him, Molotov had made two very brief references to Europe, simply saying that it was necessary to "strengthen peace in Europe too", and when Indochina settlement was complete might be possible to exploit the atmosphere that would exist for "bringing peace in Europe".

Mendes said that he had replied when the Indochina affair was settled he would be pleased to hear what Molotov had to say and report to his government. However, he was not prepared to discuss Europe now, as he was concentrating on the Indochina problem, and he was young and uninformed on many aspects of the European problems, and was therefore in no position to discuss them. Mendes said that although he had expected there would be effort to link Indochina with Europe, since then Molotov had never mentioned Europe and subject had not come up in any way during negotiations here.

However, yesterday during private luncheon between Joxe (French Ambassador to Moscow) and Vinogradov (Soviet Ambassador in Paris), latter had said that before leaving Geneva Molotov would be glad to have a good talk with Mendes concerning European affairs.

When Joxe had replied that Mendes was concentrating completely on Indochina problem, Vinogradov said that talk could take place after the signature of Indochinese agreements.

Mendes said that it was clear enough that Molotov will invite him discuss European problem, and it is his intention to listen and report to his government. He promised that US will be kept informed. He intimated that today's AFP reports on the 4-power meeting on Europe in Stockholm in the fall were inspired by Communist sources. Mendes said that if such a talk with Molotov took place he was very anxious to have the gesture of western unity on Europe before leaving Geneva and suggested that there might be a meeting between Eden, himself and myself in connection with his conversation with Molotov if one was held so as to make clear that he was not dealing bilaterally with Molotov on Europe.

SMITH

396.1 GE/7-1954 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET      NIACT

GENEVA, July 19, 1954—11 p. m.

Secto 678. Repeated information Paris 109, Saigon 78. Re Secto 668 repeated Paris 102, Saigon 71.<sup>1</sup> Cambodian delegation has circulated new draft of unilateral declaration of Cambodian Government which corresponds exactly to French draft transmitted by reference telegram, but adds passage, which reads in unofficial translation as follows:

"The Government of Cambodia, faithful to democratic and liberal principles and respectful of the fundamental law of the country granted and promulgated by His Majesty The King on May 6, 1947, by virtue of which it has already held two free legislative elections, makes clear its intention to take measures to integrate all citizens without any discrimination into the national community, granting them in particular all civic, political rights and all individual liberties provided by the constitution.

It affirms its intention to organize, in conformity to this constitution, new general elections, after the re-establishment of peace and security in Cambodia."

Reaction other delegations above draft not yet known.<sup>2</sup>

SMITH

<sup>1</sup> Dated July 19, p. 1456.

<sup>2</sup> For Soviet amendments to this draft, see memorandum from Bonsal to Johnson, July 20, p. 1468.

396.1 GE/7-1954 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET NIACT

GENEVA, July 19, 1954—11 p. m.

Secto 679. Repeated information Paris 110, Saigon 79. French delegation has circulated new draft unilateral declaration proposed to be made by Laotian delegation. Reactions other delegations not yet known.<sup>1</sup> Unofficial translation follows:

“The Royal Government of Laos :

Anxious to assure the harmony and unanimity of the populations of the Kingdom;

Declares it is resolved to take the necessary measures in order to integrate all citizens without any discrimination in the national community and to guarantee to them the enjoyment of the rights and liberties provided for in the constitution of the Kingdom which has been in effect since 1947;

Makes clear that all Laotian citizens will be able to participate freely as voters and as candidates in the general elections with secret ballot anticipated in Laos in conformity with the dispositions of the constitution and of the existing electoral law;

Indicates additionally, that it will promulgate the appropriate measures to organize in the provinces of Phong Saly and Sam Neua during the period from the cessation of hostilities to the general elections, a special representation attached to the Royal administration of these provinces to benefit the Lao nationals who fought in the ranks of the People's Army of Vietnam.”

SMITH

<sup>1</sup> For Soviet amendments to this draft, see memorandum from Bonsal to Johnson, July 20, infra.

JULY 20, 1954

Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 306

Memorandum by the Special Adviser to the United States Delegation (Bonsal) to the Deputy United States Representative and Coordinator of the Delegation (Johnson)<sup>1</sup>

SECRET

GENEVA, July 20, 1954.

Subject: Soviet amendments to French draft of unilateral declaration to be made by the Lao delegation.

The Soviet amendments to the French draft on a Lao declaration (see attached Secto 679<sup>2</sup>) are the following:

1. In the third paragraph, the phrase “which has been in effect since 1947” (referring to the constitution) is eliminated.

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by Getz of the delegation.

<sup>2</sup> Supra.

2. In the fourth paragraph, the phrase "in conformity with the dispositions of the constitution and of the existing electoral law" (referring to elections) is eliminated.

3. In the last paragraph, the phrase "who fought in the ranks of the People's Army of Vietnam" is changed to read "who fought against the Royal Government during the hostilities."

Comment: The first two changes seem to forecast a possible attempt to change the provisions of the constitution and the electoral law which refer to civil rights and elections. By eliminating specific reference to the constitution which has been in effect since 1947, one could even imagine the intention of the Pathet Lao to demand a new or completely revised constitution. Elimination of reference to the electoral law would leave the actual date of the elections open.

The change in the last paragraph seems only to be a reluctance to admit the presence of the Viet Minh army in Laos.

---

Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 306

Memorandum by the Special Adviser to the United States Delegation (Bonsal) to the Deputy United States Representative and Coordinator of the Delegation (Johnson)<sup>1</sup>

SECRET

GENEVA, July 20, 1954.

Subject: Soviet Amendments to Cambodian Declaration

We have just received the amendments proposed by the Soviet delegation in the unilateral declaration to be made by the Government of Cambodia. These amendments appear to be addressed to the French draft of early yesterday (Secto 668<sup>2</sup>) and ignore the language added to the French draft by the Cambodians last night (Secto 678<sup>3</sup>).

The Soviets propose the following changes:

1. Cambodia is to declare its intention not to enter into military alliances, as well as not to permit the establishment of foreign bases on its territory.

2. The following language qualifying the commitment not to permit foreign bases is omitted: "as long as Cambodia is not attacked or exposed to threat of attack."

3. The Soviet draft would permit Cambodia to solicit foreign aid in matériel, in personnel or in instructors "only for the needs of self-defense and within the limits fixed by the agreements on the cessation of hostilities." The French and Cambodian drafts permit Cambodia to

---

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by Yager of the delegation.

<sup>2</sup> Dated July 19, p. 1456.

<sup>3</sup> Dated July 19, p. 1467.

solicit such aid "within the limits defined above [i.e., in the declaration itself] <sup>4</sup> and in the framework of a strictly defensive policy which it [Cambodia] intends to apply in the future as it has always done in the past."

<sup>4</sup> Both sets of brackets in the source text.

396.1 GE/7-1954: Telegram

The Secretary of State to the United States Delegation<sup>1</sup>

TOP SECRET      NIACT

WASHINGTON, July 20, 1954—9:39 a. m.

Tosec 579. From Secretary for Under Secretary. Re Secto 674.<sup>2</sup> Please inform Eden US Govt accepts formula set forth in reftel. You may also tell him that while we would prefer slight change in language in paragraph 2 of reftel, substituting "establishment of a collective defense etc." for "conclusion of a collective defense agreement" (our reasons for this are set forth as penultimate paragraph of Tosec 572<sup>3</sup>), this is not sufficiently important to delay reaching agreement now.<sup>4</sup>

In your discretion you may tell Eden we think Baguio (Philippines) would be very suitable for the meeting, both because it is in area and is Asian.<sup>5</sup>

DULLES

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by MacArthur.

<sup>2</sup> Dated July 19, p. 1465.

<sup>3</sup> Dated July 19, p. 1453.

<sup>4</sup> The U.S. Delegation reported in telegram Secto 688, July 20: "Eden agrees to substitution of phrase 'establishment of a collective defense' in paragraph two of formula set forth in Secto 674." (396.1 GE/7-2054)

The Department of State in telegram Tosec 592, July 21, informed the U.S. Delegation that it had "been in consultation with British Embassy on question approaching French re further action SEA collective defense. Could you let us know to what extent you or Eden informed Mendes-France in Geneva about agreed US-UK formula, Secto 674 as amended by Tosec 579, so we can determine what if anything needs to be done with French." (396.1 GE/7-1954) Under Secretary Smith replied in telegram Secto 723, July 22, that he "did not discuss specific US-UK formula with Mendes-France but last night at dinner I discussed subject in general terms and impressed on him urgency of our moving forward. Am uninformed whether Eden took occasion to mention formula to him but believe unlikely." (396.1 GE/7-2254)

<sup>5</sup> Under Secretary Smith reported in telegram Secto 688, July 20, that "day before yesterday I suggested to him Baguio as suitable place for meeting and have repeated suggestion today. He has not yet commented." (396.1 GE/7-2054)

In telegram Secto 713, July 21, the U.S. Delegation reported as follows: "Caccia said today that the UK thought the suggestion of Baguio as a meeting place was a good idea but a decision now would be premature. They thought that the place of meeting should not be named in the invitations but should be selected after it is finally known what nations have accepted, as this might well be taken into consideration in the final selection of the meeting place." (Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 261)

396.1 GE/7-2054 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

TOP SECRET

GENEVA, July 20, 1954—noon.

Secto 680. For Secretary from Under Secretary. The Russians are pressing for a signed declaration and have also proposed the following opening paragraph :

“The members of the Geneva Conference, the Ministers for Foreign Affairs of France, of the State of Vietnam, of the United States of America, of Cambodia, of the USSR, of the United Kingdom, of the People’s Republic of China, of the Democratic Republic of Vietnam and of Laos have examined the question of the restoration of peace in Indochina and have reached agreement on the following points . . . .”

Eden, as co-chairman, is meeting with Molotov this morning in an effort to induce him to drop both proposals and accept the simple heading “Declaration by the Conference” and the procedure that after its presentation each delegate will state his position. I will not know the outcome until about noon, local time, and I will telephone you as soon thereafter as possible. The final session may begin at 4 or 5 p. m.

Whatever happens, I would state approximately the following (Phleger and I are still polishing it up and it is possible that last-minute developments may dictate some slight alteration).

Begins :

“As I stated on July 18, my government is not prepared to join in a declaration by the conference such as is submitted. However, the United States will make a unilateral declaration of its position in these matters in the following form :

Declaration

“The Government of the United States being resolved to devote its efforts to the strengthening of peace in accordance with the principles and purposes of the United Nations.

Takes note

Of the agreements concluded at Geneva on July 20, 1954 between the (a) Franco-Laotian Command and the Command of the People’s Army of Vietnam; (b) The Royal Khmer Army Command and the Command of the People’s Army of Vietnam; (c) France-Vietnamese Command and the Command of the People’s Army of Vietnam and of paragraphs one to blank of the declaration thereon considered by the Geneva Conference declares with regard to the aforesaid agreements and paragraphs that (i) it will refrain from the threat or the use of force to disturb them, in accordance with Article 2(4) of the Charter of the United Nations dealing with obligation of members to refrain in their international relations from the threat or use of force; and (ii) it would view any renewal of the aggression in violation of them with grave concern and as seriously threatening international peace and security.

"In connection with the statement in the declaration concerning free elections in Vietnam, my government wishes to make clear its position which it has expressed in a declaration made in Washington on June 29, 1954, as follows: 'In the case of nations now divided against their will, we shall continue to seek to achieve unity through free elections, supervised by the United Nations to insure that they are conducted fairly'".<sup>1</sup>

Unless you have serious objection, I am strongly of opinion, and Phleger and Johnson concur, that our declaration should include taking note of paragraph 9. (See Tosec 576<sup>2</sup> and Secto 667<sup>3</sup>). We share your concern regarding second half this paragraph, but believe that pointedly to refuse simply to take note of part of this paragraph will cause Communists and some others to believe we actually intended to disregard it and probably would result in Communists insisting that we include it. This could have serious effects. French yesterday, and again today, strongly urged us to include it, pointing out that it is substantially UN Charter language, and that our singling it out for omission carries with it strong implications that we intend to violate it. I had same reaction from UK this morning.<sup>4</sup>

SMITH

<sup>1</sup> This statement was taken from a declaration made by President Eisenhower and Prime Minister Churchill in Washington on June 29. For the text of the declaration, see editorial note, p. 1260.

<sup>2</sup> Dated July 19, p. 1459.

<sup>3</sup> Dated July 19, p. 1460.

<sup>4</sup> In telegram Tosec 578, July 20, the Secretary of State instructed Under Secretary Smith to "make declaration as indicated, assuming Conference declaration does not materially vary from Secto 667 and include taking note paragraph 9. This on assumption that declaration is 'unilateral', thus avoiding 9 becoming contractual with Communists." (396.1 GE/7-1954)

After discussing the matter with the President, the Secretary of State instructed Smith in telegram Tosec 586, July 21: "You are authorized to make unilateral declaration as per Secto 680 with the slight verbal modifications indicated by telephone. We would like, if possible to add following: 'We share the hope that the agreements will permit Cambodia, Laos and Vietnam to play their part, in full independence and sovereignty, in the peaceful community of nations and will enable the people of that area to determine their own future.'" (396.1 GE/7-2054)

The telephone communication referred to above was made on July 21 by the Secretary to the U.S. Delegation and is contained in a memorandum from Hennes to Smith, July 21. (Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 306)

396.1 GE/7-2054 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET NIACT

GENEVA, July 20, 1954—1 p. m.

Secto 681. Repeated information priority Paris 111, Saigon 80. Chauvel told Johnson this morning that Laotian problem seemed on way to settlement along lines of temporary regrouping for short period resistance forces in areas close to where they are now located. Upon entering such regroupment areas, members resistance forces would be given choice of laying down arms and returning to civilian life or proceeding to two regroupment areas located in two northeast provinces, there being one regroupment center in each province. Resistance forces would have no territorial authority in either province, right of full administration being retained by Royal Government, but resistance forces would appoint representative deal in their behalf with Royal authorities pending their integration into Royal Army.

Chauvel stated all but two or three small points text of armistice in Vietnam agreed.

French say Cambodians have been very difficult to work with, refusing accept French or other assistance in preparing armistice draft and having produced very unworkable document. This confirmed by members USDel. Late last night Cambodians finally accepted French assistance, and workable draft was produced early hours this morning. As of this morning they were waiting to get together with Viet Minh.

At meeting between Dong and Mendes-France late last night Mendes-France accepted June, 1956, as latest date elections would be held in Vietnam.

Chinese have offered, and Dong has confirmed, demarcation line 10 kilometers north of RC 9. French have not accepted and are trying obtain something better. Chinese and Viet Minh have also offered 245 days for completion regroupment, but French have not accepted and are also trying to improve.

SMITH

---

396.1 GE/7-2054 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

TOP SECRET      PRIORITY

GENEVA, July 20, 1954—5 p. m.

Secto 683. For Secretary from Under Secretary. Makin's report to Eden accurately covered ground your Tosec 572.<sup>1</sup> Latter assured me there was no misunderstanding re impossibility US joining in any multilateral statement with Communists.

Eden messages to Colombo powers, Australia and New Zealand were all delivered yesterday.

Re point three of his Annex A,<sup>2</sup> Eden prepared to take our language if article "the" omitted and text thus amended to read "would view any renewal of aggression" etc. He observed, however, that what was sought in this instance was not agreement on part of seven powers to text of joint declaration but to stimulate them to produce and issue individual declarations associating them in some way with a Geneva settlement and containing suggested points, but in their own language. These points had been advanced as "the kind of points that might be included in anything that were said." In agreement with us, no indication was given that points taken from US draft declaration. It was Eden's thought that each country would produce its own form of language and these would probably differ considerably. Most Colombo powers would presumably wish to avoid using term "aggression" in this context.

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated July.19, p. 1453.

<sup>2</sup> For text of Annex A, see footnote 5, p. 1436.

Re Annex B,<sup>3</sup> Eden said he thought phrase "establishment of a collective defense" was better than his original and agreed to advance and support it, if and when this proposed document discussed with powers concerned. We agreed it was better not to make special démarche for this purpose but to await recipients initial reactions.

SMITH

---

<sup>3</sup> For text of Annex B, see telegram Secto 644, July 18, p. 1434.

---

396.1 GE/7-2054 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State<sup>1</sup>

SECRET      NIACT

GENEVA, July 20, 1954—5 p. m.

Secto 684. Regarding Secto 667.<sup>2</sup> Following is French draft text of conference declaration as furnished by Ambassador Chauvel at 12:45 today and is under discussion at Eden, Mendes, Molotov meeting this afternoon. Hold this text to provide basis for telephone call to Secretary when report is received of changes resulting from that meeting.

"1. The conference takes note of the agreements which terminate hostilities in Cambodia, Laos and Vietnam and which organize international control and supervision of the implementation of the provisions of these agreements.

"2. The conference congratulates itself on the termination of hostilities in Cambodia, Laos and Vietnam; and expresses the conviction that the placing in effect of the provisions contemplated in this declaration and in the agreements on the cessation of hostilities will permit Cambodia, Laos and Vietnam to assume hereafter their role in the peaceful community of nations in full independence and sovereignty.

"3. The conference takes note of the declarations made by the governments of Cambodia and Laos with reference to their intent of adopting measures which will permit all citizens to take their place in the national community, especially by participating in the next general elections which, in accordance with the constitutions of each of these countries, will take place in the course of the year 1955 with secret ballot and with respect for fundamental liberties.

---

<sup>1</sup> Message transmitted in three sections.

<sup>2</sup> Dated July 19, p. 1460.

"4. The conference takes note of the articles in the agreement on the cessation of hostilities in Vietnam prohibiting the entering into Vietnam of foreign troops and military personnel as well as of all arms and munitions. It also takes note of the declarations made by the governments of Cambodia and Laos concerning their determination not to request foreign aid and materials, personnel or instructors except in the interest of the defense of their territory and within the limits fixed by the agreements on the cessation of hostilities.

"5. The conference takes note of the articles in the agreement on the cessation of hostilities in Vietnam according to which no military base depending from a foreign state can be established in the regrouping zones of the two sides, it being the duty of the latter to see to it that the zones attributed to them do not become a part of any military alliance and are not used for the resumption of hostilities or in the service of an aggressive policy. It also takes note of the declarations of the governments of Laos and Cambodia in accordance with which these governments will not join in any agreement with other states if this agreement involves the obligation to participate in a military alliance which is not in conformity with the principles of the Charter of the United Nations or with the principles of the agreements on cessation of hostilities in Indochina or to establish basis for the military forces of foreign powers on Laotian or Cambodian territory.

"6. The conference notes that the agreements concerning Vietnam has as its essential goal the settlement of military questions in order to put an end to hostilities and that the military demarcation line cannot in any way be interpreted as constituting a political or territorial boundary. It expresses the conviction that the placing in effect of the provisions contemplated in this declaration and in the agreement on the cessation of hostilities creates the necessary premises for realizing in the near future a political settlement in Vietnam.

"7. The conference declares that, so far as Vietnam is concerned, the settlement of the political problems, to be effectuated on the basis of respect for the principles of the independence, of the unity and of the territorial integrity, must permit the Vietnamese people to enjoy the fundamental liberties guaranteed by democratic institutions formed as a result of free general elections with secret ballot. In order that the restoration of peace may have made sufficient progress and that all the conditions be present which are necessary to permit the free expression of the national will, the general elections will take place on July 20, 1956, under the control of an international commission composed of representatives of the states which are members of the commission for control and observation contemplated in the agreement on the cessation of hostilities. Consultations on this subject may take place between the competent representative authorities of the two zones beginning July 20, 1955.

"8. The provisions of the agreements on the cessation of hostilities meant to assure the protection of persons and property must be applied in the strictest fashion and particularly must permit everyone in Vietnam to decide freely as to the zone where he wishes to live.

"9. The conference takes note of the agreement which has been made to take note (constater) of the fact that, in accordance with the declaration of the Government of the French Republic, the latter will withdraw its troops from the territories of Cambodia, of Laos and of Vietnam at the request of the governments concerned and within the periods which will be fixed in agreement with those governments, except for those cases where, in accordance with provisions of the agreements on the cessation of hostilities, a certain quantity of French troops may be left in agreed points and for agreed periods.

"10. The conference takes note of the declaration of the French Government according to which, for the settlement of all the problems related to the restoration and strengthening of peace in Cambodia, Laos and Vietnam the French Government will base itself upon respect for the independence and the sovereignty, the unity and territorial integrity of the governments of Cambodia, of Laos and of Vietnam."

In their relations with Cambodia, Laos and Vietnam, [each] of the members of the Geneva conference undertakes to respect the sovereignty and the independence, the unity and the territorial integrity of the said states and to refrain from any interference in their internal affairs.

"11. The members of the conference agree to consult together on any question which may be transmitted to them by the International Control Commissions, in order to study the measures (USSR: Collective) (FR-UK: . . . or individual) which might appear necessary to insure observance of the agreements on the cessation of hostilities in Indochina."

Note—following additional sentence agreed but precise place it will be inserted in body declaration not known :

"The competent representative authorities of the northern and southern zones of Vietnam as well as the authorities of Laos and Cambodia must not permit individual or collective persecution of persons, or members of their families, who had collaborated in any way with one or the other side during the war."

SMITH

---

396.1 GE/7-2054 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET NIACT

GENEVA, July 20, 1954—5 p. m.

Secto 685. Repeated information Paris 113, Saigon 82. State pass Defense. Following is unofficial translation of "draft declaration of the Cambodian delegation on the final act" which will apparently be added to list of conference documents transmitted Secto 682 repeated information Paris 112 Saigon 81.<sup>1</sup>

"Paragraphs 6 and 9 of the final act<sup>2</sup> stipulate respect for the territorial integrity of Vietnam. The delegation of Cambodia asks the conference to consider that this clause does not imply the abandonment of the rights and legitimate interests which Cambodia might wish to assert with respect to certain regions of South Vietnam, and subject to which Cambodia has formulated specific reservations, particularly at the time of the signature of the Franco-Khmer Treaty of 8 November 1949 on the relations between Cambodia and FR, and at the time of the vote on the FR law joining Cochin China to Vietnam.

Faithful to the ideal of peace and to the international principle of non-intervention, Cambodia does not intend to interfere in the internal affairs of the state of Vietnam, and associates itself completely with the principle of respect for its integrity, subject to a reservation concerning the adjustment and regularization of the delimitation of the frontiers between that state and Cambodia, frontiers until now fixed by unilateral act of France.

In support of this declaration, the Delegation of Cambodia is addressing to all members of the conference a 'memorandum on the Cambodian territories of South Vietnam'.<sup>3</sup>

19 July 1954"

SMITH

<sup>1</sup> Dated July 20, not printed. (396.1 GE/7-2054)

<sup>2</sup> See telegram Secto 684, supra.

<sup>3</sup> Not printed. (Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 302)

396.1 GE/7-2054 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET NIACT

GENEVA, July 20, 1954—6 p. m.

Secto 686. Repeated information priority Saigon 114, Paris 83. Following is unofficial translation of text of note received from Vietnamese delegation this afternoon :

"In case of rejection of the proposal for a cease-fire without partition, and in order not to slow down the search for another peaceful solution, the delegation of the State of Vietnam solemnly draws the attention of the other delegations to the following points :

"The armistice agreement, considered as an act of a purely military nature, affecting only the French High Command and the Viet Minh High Command, and only being signed by the two commanders-in-chief and by their representatives, will lead nevertheless to consequences which compromise the future of the State of Vietnam from other points of view.

"In effect, it leads to the abandonment of territory, of populations, of civilian public services.

"The delegation of powers that the French High Command holds from the Chief of State of Vietnam, insofar as Vietnamese troops are concerned, does not imply that the State of Vietnam must endure such grave consequences.

“(a) On the line of demarcation: The delegation of the State of Vietnam regrets that it is not able to subscribe to a solution of partition, that is to say, the abandoning to the Viet Minh of all the north of Vietnam, of the most populous part of Vietnam, an abandonment which takes from Vietnam, in the military as well as in the political field, the possibility of resisting Communist expansion.

“The State of Vietnam cannot abandon the Catholic populations which have shown their will to remove themselves and to be removed from the Communist regime. That is why our delegation asks:

“(b) For the protection of the populations that everything possible be undertaken in order that the population may be effectively protected against what would be for them a political and moral annihilation, and that their transfer into a non-Communist zone, if they show this desire, be assured under the most effective conditions.

“(c) On the right of the State of Vietnam to assure its own defense.

“The prohibition against any importation of new arms into Vietnam after the armistice would only work in favor of the Viet Minh for whom no control could, in practice, prevent from continuing to receive arms across the very long Chinese frontier.

“To the contrary, such a prohibition would condemn the State of Vietnam to be able for its defense to count only on the maintenance in Vietnam of an expeditionary corps which the French Government has stated that it intends to repatriate as soon as possible.

“For these reasons, the State of Vietnam cannot accept to see taken from it not only a vital part of its territory and of its population but, beyond that, the right of a sovereign and independent state to organize its defense in the manner that it believes the most in conformity with its national interests.”

SMITH

---

Editorial Note

At 6:20 p. m., Washington time, July 20, Secretary Dulles and Under Secretary Smith held the following telephone conversation:

“Nothing is happening, said the Gen. Vietnam looks pretty good—the line is the 17th parallel. The wording prohibits their joining any alliance. Both are worried about that, and being able to aid these countries. The thing is until the documents which are referred to are available, we cannot decide what to do. They are on their way, said Smith. Smith said they can have an army of their own. We don’t have to commit ourselves tonight. Then Smith said he didn’t believe there would be a meeting tonight, but if there is, he would read a prepared statement. He read it to the Sec. and the Sec. thought it good. He will hold off on a plenary session until the afternoon so we can get word over there. Tonight they will probably sign a military armistice—for Vietnam and probably Laos, but probably not Cambodia. Phleger got on and he is worried about the cross-references. He said the General's statement is good. They agreed the countries must be able to develop a security force of their own.

"It was left that when we got the documents, we would communicate with them tomorrow." (Eisenhower Library, Dulles papers, Telephone Conversations)

At 6:43 p. m., Washington time, July 20, Secretary Dulles and Senator H. Alexander Smith held a telephone conversation in which the "Sec. said the situation is at present that we believe the belligerents will be signing a cease-fire within 15 minutes. Political declarations etc. contain cross-references and we can't understand what they mean because we haven't had adequate word. We will decide in the morning—we won't sign but it is a question of whether or not we totally disassociate ourselves of it or take notice. We have impressed this on the French. S. [Smith] will just say the US position won't be formulated until tomorrow." (Eisenhower Library, Dulles papers, Telephone Conversations)

There is some confusion as to exactly when the armistice agreements were signed. The United States Delegation reported in telegram Secto 699, July 21, page 1487, that the agreements for Vietnam and Laos were signed at 3:30 a. m., Geneva time, July 21. The delegation reported in telegram Secto 703, July 21, not printed, that these agreements were signed at 2400 hours (midnight), July 20. (751G.00/7-2154) The final approved texts of the agreements for Vietnam and Laos indicate that they were signed at 2400 hours, July 20. Although the delegation reported in telegram Secto 704, July 21, not printed, that the agreement for Cambodia was signed at 11 a. m., Geneva time, July 21, the final approved text of the agreement only indicates that it was signed on July 20. (Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 261)

---

396.1 GE/7-2054 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET      PRIORITY

GENEVA, July 20, 1954—7 p. m.

Secto 689. USDel has had request from French delegate (Gros, legal adviser) for views regarding sharing of expense of international control commissions in Indochina. French delegate states British delegate has indicated willingness to share in expenses of international commissions under whatever reasonable formula may be devised.

USDel replied to Gros that we had no instructions on subject but believe doubtful US would participate both because of our general attitude toward Indochina settlement and because of Korean precedent where expenses of international commission were borne by belligerents. (Secto 617<sup>1</sup> and Tosec 555<sup>2</sup>). Gros rejoined that of course in case of Indochina, this might result in receipt of inadequate contributions which would hamper effectiveness of control.

SMITH

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated July 15, p. 1376.

<sup>2</sup> Dated July 16, p. 1396.

---

751G.00/7-2054 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET

GENEVA, July 20, 1954—8 p. m.

Secto 690. Final agreed text conference declaration compares as follows with text contained Secto 684.<sup>1</sup>

Articles 1 through 4—No change.

Article 5—In second sentence instead of “or with the principles of the agreements on the cessation of hostilities in Indochina” final text reads “or with the principles of the agreement on the cessation of hostilities”.

Article 6—Insert word “provisional” before “military demarcation line”.

Article 7—First sentence—no change.

We do not yet have final agreed text of remainder of this article although we understand no change in election date of July 20, 1956 is contemplated.

Article 8—No change.

New Article 9 contains text given in note appearing as final paragraph of reftel. Instead of “persecution of persons” insert “reprisals against persons”.

New Article 10 (Article 9 in Secto 684). This article now reads “the conference takes note of the declaration of the government of the French Republic in accordance with which the latter is prepared to withdraw its troops from the territories of Cambodia, Laos and Vietnam at the request of the governments concerned within the periods which will be fixed by agreement by the parties, except for the cases where, through agreement between the two parties, a certain quantity of French troops may be left in agreed points and for agreed periods.”

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated July 20, p. 1474.

New Article 11—Same as first paragraph of Article 10 of Secto 684 except that instead of “the independence and the sovereignty, the unity and territorial integrity of the Governments of Cambodia, of Laos and of Vietnam” insert, “the independence and the sovereignty, the unity and the territorial integrity of Cambodia, of Laos and of Vietnam”.

New Article 12—Same as second paragraph of Article 10 in Secto 684.

Article 13—This article now reads: “the members of the conference agree to consult together on any question which will be transmitted to them by the international control commissions, in order to study the measures which might appear necessary to insure observance of the agreements on the cessation of hostilities in Cambodia, in Laos and in Vietnam.”

SMITH

---

751G.00/7-2054 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET      NIACT

GENEVA, July 20, 1954—9 p. m.

Secto 691. Re Secto 690.<sup>1</sup> Following prelude added final agreed text conference declaration :

“Final declaration dated July 20, 1954, of the Geneva Conference on the problem of the restoration of peace in Indochina, in which participated the representatives of Cambodia, the State of Vietnam, the United States of America, France, Laos, the Democratic Republic of Vietnam, the People’s Republic of China, the United Kingdom, and the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.”

Remainder paragraph 7 reads :

“In order that the restoration of peace may have made sufficient progress and that there may be present all the necessary conditions to permit the free expression of the national will, general elections will take place in July 1956, under the control of an international commission composed of representatives of the states which are members of the international commission for supervision and control provided for in the accord on the cessation of hostilities. Consultations will take place on this subject between competent representative authorities of the two zones after July 20, 1955.”

Correction translation paragraph 2, “hereafter” should read “thereafter”.

SMITH

---

<sup>1</sup> Supra.

751G.00/7-2054 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET NIACT

GENEVA, July 20, 1954—9 p. m.

Secto 692. Following declarations of French Government have been agreed to by all parties :

“Declaration of the Government of the French Republic (reference: Article 10 of the final act <sup>1</sup>).

“The Government of the French Republic declares that it is prepared to withdraw its troops from the territories of Cambodia, Laos and Vietnam at the request of the governments concerned and in periods which will be fixed in agreement with those governments, with the exception of those cases where, by agreement of the two parties, a certain number of French troops may be left at fixed points and for fixed periods.”

“Declaration of the Government of the French Republic (reference: Article 11 of the final act).

“In the settling of all the problems related to the restoration and the strengthening of peace in Cambodia, Laos, and Vietnam, the Government of the French Republic will base itself upon respect for the independence and the sovereignty, the unity and the territorial integrity of Cambodia, of Laos and of Vietnam.”

SMITH

---

<sup>1</sup> For text of the draft final declaration (or act), see telegrams Secto 684 and Secto 690, July 20, pp. 1474 and 1480, respectively.

396.1 GE/7-2054 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET NIACT

GENEVA, July 20, 1954—10 p. m.

Secto 693. Following is unofficial translation of declaration to be made by Government of Laos which has been agreed to by all parties (reference: Article 3 of the final declaration <sup>1</sup>) :

“The Royal Government of Laos,

“Anxious to insure the harmony and the unanimity of the populations of the Kingdom, “Declares itself resolved to take the necessary dispositions in order to integrate all citizens without any discrimination into the national community and to guarantee to them the enjoyment of the rights and liberties provided for by the Constitution of the Kingdom.

---

<sup>1</sup> For text of the draft final declaration (or act), see telegrams Secto 684 and Secto 690, July 20, pp. 1474 and 1480, respectively.

“Makes clear that all Laotian citizens will be able to participate freely as voters and as candidates in the general elections with secret ballot.

“Indicates additionally that it will promulgate the appropriate measures to organize in the provinces of Phong Saly and Sam Neua, during the period from the cessation of hostilities to the general elections, a special representation attached to the Royal administration of these provinces, for the benefit of the Lao Nationals who were not on the side of the Royal forces during the hostilities”.

SMITH

396.1 GE/7-2054 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET      NIACT

GENEVA, July 20, 1954—10 p. m.

Secto 694. Following is unofficial translation final agreed draft declaration of Royal Government of Laos:

“(Reference: Articles 4 and 5 of the final draft <sup>1</sup>):

“The Royal Government of Laos is resolved never to take part in an aggressive policy and never to permit the territory of Laos to be used in the service of such a policy.

“The Royal Government of Laos will never join in any agreement with other states if this agreement carries with it for the Government of Laos the obligation to enter into a military alliance not in conformity with the principles of the Charter of the United Nations or with the principles of the agreement on the cessation of hostilities or to establish bases for the military forces of foreign powers on Laotian territory.

“The Royal Government of Laos is resolved to settle its international differences by pacific means in such a manner that peace and international security as well as justice will not be endangered.

“During the period between the date of cessation of hostilities in Vietnam and that of definitive settlement of the political problems in that country, the Royal Government of Laos will only solicit foreign aid in matériel, in personnel, or in instructors in the interest of the defense of the country and within the limits fixed by the agreement on the cessation of hostilities.”

SMITH

<sup>1</sup> For text of the draft final declaration (or act), see telegrams Secto 684 and Secto 690, July 20, pp. 1474 and 1480, respectively.

396.1 GE/7-2054 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET      NIACT

GENEVA, July 20, 1954—10 p. m.

Secto 695. Following are texts of two declarations to be issued by Government of Cambodia. These texts have been agreed between French and Viet Minh and are currently being discussed with Cambodians:

The first declaration reads:

"Declaration of Royal Government of Cambodia

(Reference: Article 3 of the final declarations <sup>1</sup>)

The Royal Government of Cambodia:

Anxious to assure the harmony and unanimity of the populations of the Kingdom, declares it is resolved to take the necessary measures in order to integrate all citizens without any discrimination in the national community and to guarantee to them the enjoyment of the rights and liberties provided for in the constitution of the Kingdom.

Makes clear that all Cambodian citizens will be able to participate freely as voters and as candidates in general elections with secret ballot."

The second declaration reads:

"Declaration to be made by Cambodian Government

(Reference: Articles 4 and 5 of the final declaration)

The Royal Government of Cambodia is resolved never to take part in an aggressive policy and will never permit the territory of Cambodia to be used in the service of such a policy.

The Royal Government of Cambodia will never join in any agreement with other states, if this agreement involves for the Royal Government of Cambodia the obligation to enter into a military alliance which is not in conformity with the principles of the Charter of the United Nations, or with the principles of the agreement on the cessation of hostilities or to establish bases for the military forces of foreign powers on Cambodian territory.

The Royal Government of Cambodia is resolved to settle its international differences by pacific means in such a way that peace and international security as well as justice will not be endangered.

During the period between the date of cessation of hostilities in Vietnam and that of the definitive settlement of the political problems in that country, the Royal Government of Cambodia will not request foreign assistance in material, in personnel or in instructors other than in the interest of the defense of the country and within the limits fixed in the agreement on the cessation of hostilities."

SMITH

<sup>1</sup>For text of the draft final declaration (or act), see telegrams Secto 684 and Secto 690, July 20, pp. 1474 and 1480, respectively.

751G.00/7-2054 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET NIACT

GENEVA, July 20, 1954—11 p. m.

Secto 696. Re Sectos 684 and 690.<sup>1</sup> Following has been submitted by del of state of Vietnam for insertion between Article 11 and present Article 12 of declaration :

“The conference takes note of the declaration of the Government of the state of Vietnam undertaking :

“—To make and support every effort to re-establish a real and lasting peace in Vietnam ;

“—Not to use force to resist the procedures for carrying the cease-fire into effect, although it deems them to be inconsistent with the will of the nation ;

“—To pursue the achievement of the aspirations of the Vietnam people with all the means conferred upon it by the national independence and sovereignty solemnly recognized by France.”

SMITH

<sup>1</sup> Both dated July 20, pp. 1474 and 1480, respectively.

JULY 21, 1954

396.1 GE/7-2154 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET NIACT

GENEVA, July 21, 1954—1 a. m.

Secto 698. Repeated information Saigon niact 85, Paris 115, Hanoi niact 1, Tokyo 7, London 20, Moscow 9, Vientiane 2, Phnom Penh 7. Department pass Defense. Tokyo pass CINCFE. Following is clear text final conference declaration as translated by British delegation and issued by six nation secretariat : <sup>1</sup>

“Final declaration, dated the 20th July, 1954, of the Geneva conference on the problem of restoring peace in Indochina, in which the representatives of Cambodia, the Democratic Republic of Vietnam, France, Laos, the People’s Republic of China, the state of Vietnam, the Union of Soviet Socialist Republic, the United Kingdom, and the United States of America took part.

1. The conference takes note of the agreements ending hostilities in Cambodia, Laos and Vietnam and organizing international control and the supervision of the execution of the provisions of these agreements.

2. The conference expresses satisfaction at the ending of hostilities in Cambodia, Laos and Vietnam ; the conference expresses its conviction that the execution of the provisions set out in the present declaration and in the agreements on the cessation of hostilities will permit Cambodia, Laos and Vietnam henceforth to play their part, in full independence and sovereignty, in the peaceful community of nations.

<sup>1</sup> For the approved text of the Final Declaration, Indochina Document IC/43 Rev. 2, July 21, see p. 1540. The Final Declaration was also printed in the Department of State Bulletin, Aug. 2, 1954, p. 164.

3. The conference takes note of the declarations made by the Governments of Cambodia and of Laos of their intention to adopt measures permitting all citizens to take their place in the national community in particular by participating in the next general elections, which, in conformity with the constitution of each of these countries, shall take place in the course of the year 1955, by secret ballot and in conditions of respect for fundamental freedoms.

4. The conference takes note of the clauses in the agreement on the cessation of hostilities in Vietnam prohibiting the introduction into Vietnam of foreign troops and military personnel as well as of all kinds of arms and munitions. The conference also takes note of the declarations made by the Governments of Cambodia and Laos of their resolution not to request foreign aid, whether in war material, in personnel or in instructors except for the purpose of their territorial defense and to the extent defined by the agreements on the cessation of hostilities.

5. The conference takes note of the clauses in the agreement on the cessation of hostilities in Vietnam to the effect that no military base at the disposition of a foreign state may be established in the regrouping zones of the two parties, the latter having the obligation to see that the zones allotted to them shall not constitute part of any military alliance and shall not be utilized for the resumption of hostilities or in the service of an aggressive policy. The conference also takes note of the declarations of the Governments of Laos and Cambodia to the effect that they will not join in any agreement with other states if this agreement includes the obligation to participate in a military alliance not in conformity with the principles of the Charter of the United Nations or with the principles of the agreement on the cessation of hostilities in Indochina or the obligation to establish bases on Cambodian or Laotian territory for the military forces of foreign powers.

6. The conference recognizes that the essential purpose of the agreement relating to Vietnam is to settle military questions with a view to ending hostilities and that the military demarcation line should not in any way be interpreted as constituting a political or territorial boundary. The conference expresses its conviction that the execution of the provisions set out in the present declaration and in the agreement on the cessation of hostilities creates the necessary basis for the achievement in the near future of a political settlement in Vietnam.

7. The conference declares that, so far as Vietnam is concerned, the settlement of political problems, effected on the basis of respect for the principles of independence, unity and territorial integrity, shall permit the Vietnamese people to enjoy the fundamental freedoms, guaranteed by democratic institutions established as a result of free general elections by secret ballot. In order that the restoration of peace may have made sufficient progress and that there may be present all the necessary conditions to permit the free expression of the national will, general elections will take place in July 1956, under the control of an international commission composed of representatives of the states which are members of the international commission for supervision and control provided for in the accord on the cessation of hostilities. Consultations will take place on this subject between competent representative authorities of the two zones after July 20, 1955.

8. The provisions of the agreements on the cessation of hostilities intended to ensure the protection of individuals and of property must be most strictly applied and must, in particular, allow everyone in Vietnam to decide freely in which zone he wishes to live.

9. The competent representative authorities of the northern and southern zones of Vietnam, as well as the authorities of Laos and Cambodia, must not permit any individual or collective reprisals against persons who have collaborated in any way with one of the parties during the war, or against members of such person's families.

10. The conference takes note of the declaration of the French Government to the effect that it is ready to withdraw its troops from the territory of Cambodia, Laos and Vietnam, at the request of the governments concerned and within a period which shall be fixed by agreement between the parties except in the cases, where by agreement between the two parties, a certain number of French troops shall remain at specified points and for a specified time.

11. The conference takes note of the declaration of the French Government to the effect that for the settlement of all the problems connected with reestablishment and consolidation of peace in Cambodia, Laos and Vietnam, the French Government will proceed from the principle of respect for the independence and sovereignty, unity and territorial integrity of Cambodia, Laos and Vietnam.

12. In their relations with Cambodia, Laos and Vietnam, each member of the Geneva conference undertakes to respect the sovereignty, the independence, the unity and the territorial integrity of the above-mentioned States, and to refrain from any interference in their internal affairs.

13. The members of the conference agree to consult one another on any question which may be referred to them by the International Supervisory Commission, in order to study such measures as may prove necessary to ensure that the agreements on the cessation of hostilities in Cambodia, Laos and Vietnam are respected."

SMITH

---

751G.00/7-2154 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

NIACT

GENEVA, July 21, 1954.

Secto 699. Armistice agreements Vietnam and Laos to be signed at 3 : 30 a. m. Geneva time.<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> For the Armistice Agreements for Vietnam, Laos, and Cambodia, Indochina Documents IC/42 Rev. 2 of July 20, IC/51 Rev. 1 of July 20, and IC/52 of July 21, see pp. 1505, 1521, and 1531, respectively. The Indochina Documents indicate that the agreements for Vietnam and Laos were signed at 2400 hours (midnight), July 20, and that the agreement for Cambodia was signed on July 20 (no specific time given).

US delegation releasing following statement at that time :

Statement by the United States representative

“The United States delegation is very pleased with the important progress that has been made tonight toward ending the bloodshed in Indochina. As soon as we have had an opportunity to examine the final texts of the agreements reached by the belligerents, the United States delegation will express its views with regard to them. Meanwhile, we share the fervent hopes of millions throughout the world that an important step has been taken toward a lasting peace in Southeast Asia, which will establish the right of the peoples of that area to determine their own future.”

SMITH

751G.00/7-2154 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

NIACT

GENEVA, July 21, 1954.

Secto 705. For immediate action of Secretary. Following is revised text of declaration by Royal Government of Cambodia (reference: Articles 4 and 5 of final declaration) which has been agreed to by all parties: <sup>1</sup>

“The Royal Government of Cambodia is resolved never to take part in an aggressive policy and never to permit the territory of Cambodia to be utilized in the service of such a policy.

The Royal Government of Cambodia will not join in any agreement with other states, if this agreement carries for Cambodia the obligation to enter into a military alliance not in conformity with the principles of the Charter of the United Nations or with the principles of the agreements on the cessation of hostilities, or, as long as its security is not threatened, the obligation to establish bases on Cambodian territory for the military forces of foreign powers.

The Royal Government of Cambodia is resolved to settle its international disputes by peaceful means, in such a manner as not to endanger peace, international security and justice.

During the period which will elapse between the date of the cessation of hostilities in Vietnam and that of the final settlement of political problems in this country, The Royal Government of Cambodia will not solicit foreign aid in war material, personnel or instructors except for the purpose of the effective defense of the territory.”

SMITH

<sup>1</sup> Final text, Indochina Document IC/46 Rev. 2, July 21, p. 1544.

751G.00/7-2154 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

NIACT

GENEVA, July 21, 1954.

Secto 707. Repeated information Saigon niact 90, Vientiane 6, Phnom Penh 11, Hanoi 5, Paris 120, London 25, Moscow 14, Tokyo 11. Tokyo pass CINCFE. Following is revised text declarations by Laos as translated and issued by 6-nation secretariat.

Declaration by the Royal Government of Laos<sup>1</sup>

(Reference : Article 3 of the final declaration)

The Royal Government of Laos,

In the desire to ensure harmony and agreement among the Peoples of the Kingdom,

Declares itself resolved to take the necessary measures to integrate all citizens, without discrimination, into the National Community and to guarantee them the enjoyment of the rights and freedoms for which the constitution of the Kingdom provides;

Affirms that all Laotian citizens may freely participate as electors or candidates in general elections by secret ballot;

Announces, furthermore, that it will promulgate measures to provide for special representation in the Royal Administration of the provinces of Phang Saly and Sam Neua during the interval between the cessation of hostilities and the general elections of the interests of Laotian Nationals who did not support the Royal Forces during hostilities.

Declaration of the Royal Government of Laos<sup>2</sup>

(Articles 4 and 5 of the final declaration)

The Royal Government of Laos is resolved never to pursue a policy of aggression and will never permit the territory of Laos to be used in furtherance of such a policy.

The Royal Government of Laos will never join in any agreement with other states if this agreement includes the obligation for the Royal Government of Laos to participate in a military alliance not in conformity with the principles of the Charter of the United Nations or with the principles of the agreement on the cessation of hostilities or, unless its security is threatened, the obligation to establish bases on Laotian territory for military forces of foreign powers.

The Royal Government of Laos is resolved to settle its international disputes by peaceful means so that international peace and security and justice are not endangered.

During the period between the cessation of hostilities in Vietnam and the final settlement of that country's political problems, the Royal Government of Laos will not request foreign aid, whether in war material, in personnel or in instructors, except for the purpose of its effective territorial defense and to the extent defined by the agreement on the cessation of hostilities.

<sup>1</sup> Final text, Indochina Document IC/45 Rev. 1, July 21, p. 1542.

<sup>2</sup> Final text, Indochina Document IC/47 Rev. 1, July 21, p. 1543.

SMITH

---

Editorial Note

At 7 a. m. on July 21 the Secretary of State received a telephone call from Under Secretary Smith summarized as follows:

"S. [Smith] said one of the Foreign Ministers there will make a statement that a cease-fire has been arranged. The protest against negotiations will be done in the political field. It is the best obtainable by negotiation. They discussed some of the terms, but they will probably come in by cable, and I won't set down what may be inaccuracies unless someone wants them. There are practically no restrictions on Cambodia's maintaining an adequate security arrangement. There is international control or supervision of the transfer of some of the people. Re what the Sec. was worried about, the French assured S. it will be given priority—even over personnel. They discussed S.'s statement, and the Sec. suggested putting in something re self-determination as independent and sovereign states. S. agreed and referred the Sec. to the statement made last night. The prohibition of arms and alliances is not forever. They agreed S. would make his declaration. It would be extremely bad if we did not when Mendes has done all he has. S. said today they are going to demonstrate Western solidarity by dining and meeting together. This would be done preparatory to Mendes' talking with Molotov. S. and the Sec. have their fingers crossed on this. S. assured the Sec. there were no under-the-table deals. S. said he thought his declaration would have been made by the time the Pres. has his press conference. S. read his statement." (Eisenhower Library, Dulles papers, Telephone conversations)

For the text of President Eisenhower's statement made at his press conference on July 21, see editorial note, page 1503.

---

Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 306

Memorandum by Richard V. Hennes to the Head of the United States Delegation (Smith)<sup>1</sup>

[GENEVA,] July 21, 1954.

GENERAL SMITH: The Secretary is recommending to the President that he give the following statement at his press conference.<sup>2</sup> He will proceed with this unless you advise to the contrary:

"As evidence of our resolve to assist Cambodia and Laos to play their part, in full independence and sovereignty, in the peaceful community of free nations, we are requesting the agrément of the Governments of Cambodia and Laos to our appointment of Chiefs of Diplomatic Mission, to be resident in Phnom Penh and Vientiane. We already have a Chief of Mission at Saigon, the capital of Viet-Nam, who will of course be maintained."

<sup>1</sup> Smith's handwritten initials appear on the source text.

<sup>2</sup> For the text of the President's statement made at his press conference on July 21, see editorial note, p. 1503.

It will be assumed in making this statement that the contacts have by that time been made and that the Foreign Ministers of Cambodia and Laos are agreeable.

RVH

---

Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 308

Memorandum by the Special Adviser to the United States Delegation (Phleger)<sup>1</sup>

[GENEVA,] July 21, 1954.

With respect to the seven points attached to the instructions,<sup>2</sup> the various proposed agreements and declarations compare as follows:

1. If the Vietnamese Government does not agree to the arrangement, the provision of the instruction regarding agreement by the states primarily interested is not met.

2. Point 1. Appears to be met.

Point 2. Military demarkation line should be assessed on basis that it was best obtainable by negotiation.

Point 3. This is met as to Cambodia. Laos is probably restricted to French instructors and military supplies acceptable to International Commission. Prohibited from foreign bases save where security threatened and military alliances save UN type.

Vietnam prohibited importation arms, personnel, bases and alliances. Very similar to Korean Armistice.

Point 4. There are political provisions which risk loss of retained area to Communist control, but the principal one is that requiring elections in two years, which is the means for complying with Point 5.

Point 5. This is met.

Point 6. This is met, though not as completely as might be desired.

Point 7. The international supervision of the Agreements and of the Elections is by India, Canada and Poland which must act unanimously in important matters. It has no enforcement authority and its powers in connection with the election are not spelled out.

---

<sup>1</sup> Smith's handwritten initials appear on the source text.

<sup>2</sup> Reference to the memorandum of points attached to the U.S.-French Position Paper, July 14, p. 1363. This memorandum was also attached to the Secretary's instructions to Under Secretary Smith, July 16, p. 1389.

396.1 GE/7-2154

Memorandum by the Special Adviser to the United States Delegation (Reinhardt) to the Deputy United States Representative and Coordinator of the Delegation (Johnson)<sup>1</sup>

CONFIDENTIAL

GENEVA, July 21, 1954.

Subj: Possible Communist Attack Against U.S. Position at Final Plenary Session

We have heard rumors to the effect that, at the final plenary session this afternoon, Molotov or Chou may take the opportunity to denounce the United States' position of non-association with the Indo-Chinese settlement. According to these rumors, the Communists might use the occasion for a full-scale attack against United States policy.

If the Communists engage in polemics against us at the plenary, it would probably be with the aim of eliciting a counter-attack from our side, which could then be used by their propaganda in an attempt to demonstrate that we were opposed to a peaceful settlement in South-east Asia.

On balance, however, we believe it is unlikely that the Communists will choose to upset the picture of "sweetness and light" which they will wish to achieve at the final plenary by launching a violent attack against the United States.

We have considered what response should be made by the United States if such an attack materializes. In our view, it would be best to refrain from responding in kind to a Communist denunciation and to re-state, in restrained and dignified fashion, our position of non-association based on the fact that the United States is not a belligerent.

---

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by Stoessel of the delegation.

---

Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 306

Memorandum by the Special Adviser to the United States Delegation (Bonsal) to the Head of the Delegation (Smith)

SECRET

GENEVA, July 21, 1954.

The Vietnamese Foreign Minister [Do] has just told me that he will be present at the plenary session this afternoon. He will state that his government is glad that a cease fire has been arranged. He will protest at the manner in which the negotiations have been conducted and at the fact that his government has not been kept informed. He will state that his government does not plan to use force in order to overthrow the cease fire but that it reserves its freedom of action in the political field.

396.1 GE/7-1954 : Telegram

The Secretary of State to the United States Delegation<sup>1</sup>

SECRET

NIACT

WASHINGTON, July 21, 1954—12:15 p. m.

Tosec 587. For Under Secretary from Secretary.

1. Re Eden's formula for moving ahead on collective defense in SEA (Secto 674<sup>2</sup> as amended by Tosec 579<sup>3</sup>) we have assumed that Eden would not extend formal invitations to any of Colombo Powers unless such powers had previously indicated informally that they would accept invitation. Is this assumption correct? In our view it would be counter-productive to send a formal invitation and to have such invitation formally rejected. Furthermore, it would greatly complicate our ability to deal with fact that neither ROK nor Formosa will be invited.

2. Also we had not envisaged that US-UK invitations would be made public but rather that after invitations are extended, those governments accepting would make simultaneous and identical announcements in capitals in the form of a declaration of agreement to appoint Reps to meet together to prepare recommendations on establishment of SEA collective defense. This would make clear their common purpose and fact that their decision was on basis of common initiative and agreement and not something that US and UK had pushed others into.

3. Now that Geneva Conference has produced agreements, assume Eden will proceed immediately with further consultation Colombo Powers to determine their attitude toward establishment collective defense SEA. As he knows, Philippines and Thailand are ready to proceed. We will concert with British Embassy here immediately to initiate necessary further consultation with French.

4. Hope consultations with Colombo Powers will produce early indication attitudes those powers so that if they are willing to participate, invitations can be extended and announcements made (paragraph two above) as far as possible in advance August 7 deadline. In our view, timing is still the important element particularly in view of the fact that public reaction to Geneva Conference is as we expected portraying Indochina agreement as great victory for Communists.

5. Please discuss above with Eden.

DULLES

---

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by MacArthur.

<sup>2</sup> Dated July 19, p. 1465.

<sup>3</sup> Dated July 20, p. 1470.

751G.00/7-2154 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET PRIORITY

GENEVA, July 21, 1954—1 p. m.

Secto 708. Repeated information Paris 123, Saigon 91. Following is unofficial translation of note from French to Vietnamese delegation which was given us by French this morning; Vietnamese have asked that it be made a conference document, which French are now considering:<sup>1</sup>

The Government of the French Republic has undertaken to with-bring a full and complete satisfaction to the aspirations of the Viet-namese people, confirms that it will settle its relations with Vietnam in conformity with the principles of Public International Law through bilateral agreements on the basis of respect for the independence, unity, and territorial integrity of Vietnam.

The Government of the French Republic has undertaken to with-draw its troops from the territory of Vietnam at the request of the Government of the State of Vietnam, and the final act of the Geneva Conference has solemnly verified this.

The Government of the French Republic agrees to submit any possible disagreement on the transfers of authority and of services or on the execution of the above treaties to arbitration, the arbiter being in each case designated by agreement between the two governments. In case of disagreement in this choice, each government will designate one arbiter, and the two arbiters thus named will choose the third arbiter."

SMITH

---

<sup>1</sup> This document did not become a conference document.

751G.00/7-2154 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

CONFIDENTIAL NIACT

GENEVA, July 21, 1954—1 p. m.

Secto 709. Repeated information Paris 124, Saigon 93, Hanoi 6, Tokyo 12, London 26, Moscow 15, Vientiane 7, Phnom Penh 12. Fol-lowing are revisions to declaration sent Secto 698:<sup>1</sup>

Date was changed to 21st of July.

On paragraph 4 last sentence should read: "The conference also takes note of the declarations made by the Governments of Cambodia and Laos of their resolution not to request foreign aid, whether in war material, in personnel or in instructors except for the purpose of the effective defense of their territory and, in the case of Laos, to the extent defined by the agreements on the cessation of hostilities in Laos."

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated July 21, p. 1485.

Last sentence of paragraph 5 should read as follows: "The conference also takes note of the declarations of the Governments of Cambodia and Laos to the effect that they will not join in any agreement with other states if this agreement includes the obligation to participate in a military alliance not in conformity with the principles of the charter of the United Nations or, in the case of Laos, with the principles of the agreement on the cessation of hostilities in Laos or, so long as their security is not threatened, the obligation to establish bases on Cambodian or Laotian territory for the military forces of foreign powers."

No other deletions or additions.<sup>2</sup> Please note, however, that due to translation differences secretariat documents as issued will differ in wording and use of phrasing although not in substance from US delegation translations contained in, for example, Sectos 692, 693, 694 and 695.<sup>3</sup>

Further, last two sentences of paragraph 7 should read as follows: "In order to ensure that sufficient progress in the restoration of peace has been made, and that all the necessary conditions obtained for free expression of the national will, general elections shall be held in July 1956, under the supervision of an international commission composed of representatives of the member states of the International Supervisory Commission, referred to in the agreement on the cessation of hostilities. Consultations will be held on this subject between the competent representative authorities of the two zones from 20 April 1955 onwards."

SMITH

---

<sup>2</sup> In telegram Secto 726, July 22, the U.S. Delegation sent the following additional revisions: "Six-nation Secretariat advises that translation recheck revised text declaration sent Sectos 698 and 709: First sentence paragraph 6 insert 'is a provisional line and' between 'line' and 'should'." (751G.00/7-2254)

<sup>3</sup> All dated July 20, pp. 1482, 1483, and 1484.

---

751G.00/7-2154 : Telegram

The Secretary of State to the Embassy in France<sup>1</sup>

CONFIDENTIAL      PRIORITY      WASHINGTON, July 21, 1954—1 : 34 p. m.

253. For Ambassador from Secretary. If you think appropriate please orally say to Mendes-France that while many aspects of the Indochina settlement obviously reflect a sense of compulsion rather than of choice, I feel that it is at least a good augury for France that he has demonstrated a capacity to take decisions and carry them out. You may tell him that I hope he feels that our presence through General Smith at the Geneva Conference was helpful to his cause, and that so far as I am concerned, I greatly value the opportunity we had at Paris for an exchange of views, and believe that exchange will be helpful for the future.<sup>2</sup>

---

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by the Secretary of State.

DULLES

---

<sup>2</sup> In telegram 364 from Paris, July 27, Ambassador Dillon replied that he had passed the Secretary's message to Mendès-France the day before. With respect to the presence of Under Secretary Smith at the Geneva Conference Ambassador Dillon reported that Mendès-France "felt the return of Bedell Smith to Geneva had been an event of the greatest importance and he thought it was probably impossible for us to realize how important Bedell Smith's presence had been to achieving a successful result at Geneva." (751G.00/7-2754) For the remainder of Ambassador Dillon's reply, see volume XIII.

---

396.1 GE/7-2154

Memorandum of Conversation, by the Head of the United States Delegation (Smith)

TOP SECRET

GENEVA, July 21, 1954.

Subject: Unilateral U.S. Declaration at Geneva Conference.

Participants: Mr. V. M. Molotov, Minister for Foreign Affairs,
USSR

Mr. V. V. Kuznetsov, Deputy Minister for Foreign Affairs, USSR

Mr. O. A. Troyanovsky, Interpreter
U-General Smith

Ambassador U. Alexis Johnson

I called on Molotov at his villa shortly before the plenary meeting this afternoon and told him I wished to inform him of exactly what the United States was going to say at the meeting this afternoon.

Troyanovsky interpreted to Mr. Molotov the full text of the U.S. Delegation declaration. I said that this declaration should be satisfactory, and pointed out that the last paragraph of the declaration with respect to the renewal of aggression was stronger than that in the proposed Conference declaration.

Mr. Molotov pointedly referred to the fact that the U.S. would not be associated with the other members of the Conference and was taking a unilateral position. He said it was unfortunate that the U.S. was disassociating itself from all the others. I replied that some of the others were not recognized by the U.S. and that the Conference agreements contained some things we disliked very much. However, I said, the United States had consistently tried to be helpful, particularly in discussions with the Cambodian representatives the previous night. This drew a quizzical expression from Molotov. (Both the Chinese and the Russians believe we tried to induce the Cambodians to hold out.)

Without mentioning it by name, Molotov referred to SEATO as a renewed threat. I replied that it would not be a threat to anyone, but would be purely, and I hoped strongly, defensive. In response to his question I said that it was not now contemplated that the Associated States be invited or pressed to join SEATO.

WBS

---

396.1 GE/7-2154: Telegram

*Eighth Plenary Session on Indochina, Geneva, July 21, 3:10 p. m.:
The United States Delegation to the Department of State*<sup>1</sup>

SECRET

GENEVA, July 21, 1954—10 p. m.

Secto 721. Repeated information Paris 130, Saigon 99, London 29, Tokyo 15, Moscow 18, Hanoi 9, Phnom Penh, Vientiane unnumbered. Tokyo pass CINCFE. Department pass Defense. Eighth and final plenary session Indochina conference with Eden in chair opened Wednesday, July 21 at 1500 hours and lasted until 1725. First ten minutes spent taking press photographs.

Eden announced that before opening formal proceedings, he wished to call on representative state of Vietnam. Tran Van Do stated his delegation tabled proposal for armistice without partition, involving disarmament all forces, limited regroupment zones, temporary UN administration of country, and final settlement through free elections. He protested rejection this proposal without examination. He requested conference accept at least demilitarization and neutralization of Catholic bishoprics in south Tonkin delta. He protested fact that armistice for Vietnam had been negotiated by French command, although authority of that command over Vietnamese troops had been delegated from Chief of State of Vietnam. He also protested abandonment of territory still under Vietnamese control and stated that as result Vietnam was deprived of sovereign right to organize its defense without reliance on foreign troops. Finally, he protested inclusion of date for elections in armistice agreement since such provision obviously political in nature. He reserved Vietnam's right to full freedom of action to safeguard unity, independence and territorial integrity.

---

<sup>1</sup> A set of minutes of this meeting (US Verb Min/8) is in Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 277. The minutes indicate that the meeting convened at 3:10 p. m. (after 10 minutes for press photographs) and adjourned at 5:20 p. m. The minutes are also printed in Conférence de Genève, pp. 378-392. Extracts of the minutes are printed in Cmd. 9239, pp. 5-9. This message was transmitted in two sections.

Mendes-France responded to Do's statement. He said French delegation did not wish to return to points raised by Vietnamese delegation, but believed French command had acted within its mandate. He further stated French Government has always shared concern of Vietnamese delegation for Catholic bishoprics and expressed hope that recent declaration by Ho Chi Minh concerning Viet Minh intention respect freedom of conscience will be observed.

Eden remarked conference will wish to take note of statements of Vietnam and France.

Eden then proceeded to list agreed documents which were before conference (Secto 682<sup>2</sup>). He stated agreements on cessation of hostilities were not to be made public pending agreement between parties. He explained agreements should not be published until all cease-fires had been effected.

After completing list of documents Eden requested each delegation declare its position on final conference declaration.<sup>3</sup> Responses varied:

France—approved terms of declaration.

Laos—had no observations to make.

Democratic Republic of Vietnam—nodded agreement.

Chinese Communists—agreed.

UK—associated themselves.

USSR—agreed.

Cambodia—protested Eden's failure to list Cambodian declaration reservations concerning Cambodian-Vietnamese frontier (transmitted Secto 685<sup>4</sup>) and read text.

(Eden explained that he had only at that instant received Cambodian declaration and expressed opinion that past controversies between Cambodia and Vietnam were not part of task of conference. Dong agreed with Eden and registered "most express reservation" concerning Cambodian statement. Eden declared conference could take note of statements of Cambodia and Democratic Republic of Vietnam.)

US—statement transmitted Secto 711.<sup>5</sup>

Vietnam—asked following language be inserted after Article 10 in final conference declaration: "Conference takes note of the declaration of the Government of the State of Vietnam undertaking:

"To make and support every effort to re-establish a real and lasting peace in Vietnam; not to use force to resist the procedures for carrying the cease-fire into effect, in spite of the objections and reservations

<sup>2</sup> Dated July 20, not printed. (396.1 GE/7-2054) For the three armistice agreements, the final declaration, and all of the final declarations made by Laos, Cambodia, Vietnam, and France, see pp. 1505 ff.

<sup>3</sup> For the final conference declaration, Indochina Document IC/43 Rev. 2, July 21, see p. 1540.

<sup>4</sup> Dated July 20, p. 1476.

<sup>5</sup> Infra.

that the state of Vietnam has expressed, especially in its final statement."

Eden responded final declaration already drafted and proposed conference take note of Vietnamese statement.

Eden then stated two more pieces of business to be settled:

(1) He suggested that two chairmen send telegrams to governments of India, Poland and Canada, asking them to undertake the armistice supervisory duties proposed by conference. No objection.

(2) He suggested chairmen prepare proposal on allocation of costs on International Commission. Again no objection.

At this point, session appeared to be at point of adjournment. Eden made brief statement concerning conference achievements and expressed his appreciation for cooperation all delegations, hospitality of Swiss Government, and assistance of United Nations. US delegate thanked chairmen for their performance. Molotov replied to US delegate, stressing outstanding role of Eden in conference.

Vietnamese delegate again asked conference include his insertion in final declaration. Eden again replied final declaration could not be amended, but conference could note Vietnamese statement.

Eden then started to declare session closed, but Molotov triggered series of concluding statements by asking to speak, explaining he had believed such statements were to be made.

Molotov's speech consisted largely of standard Communist themes. Only points of interest were:

- (1) Reference to unsolved problem of Korean re-unification;
- (2) Cryptic reference to position taken by US on final declaration "fact which we know";
- (3) Assertion that artificial obstacles to international role Communist China created by aggressive circles now being swept away.

Pham Van Dong followed with equally platitudinous and somewhat emotional pronouncement on accomplishments of conference. He made special reference to DRV policy of freedom of worship in Bui Chu and Phat Diem. He emphasized DRV desire for cultural and economic links with France and ended with appeal to Vietnamese of south, stating "victory is ours, independence is in our hands".

Chou En-lai followed with statement similar in tone to those of Dong and Molotov and containing no points of particular interest. Laos and Cambodia then delivered brief statements on accomplishments of conference. Mendes-France gave final statement, in which he emphasized that success of conference was due to spirit of compromise and that same spirit would be needed in carrying out agreements.

SMITH

751G.00/7-2154 : Telegram

Eighth Plenary Session on Indochina, Geneva, July 21, 3:10 p. m.:
The United States Delegation to the Department of State

NIACT

GENEVA, July 21, 1954.

Secto 711. Repeated information Saigon niact 94, Vientiane 8, Phnom Penh 13, Hanoi niact 7, Paris 125, Tokyo 13, London 27, Moscow 16. Tokyo pass CINCFE. Department for press backstop. Text follows of statement made by General Smith at concluding Indochina plenary, July 21.<sup>1</sup> Release made here 1630 Geneva time. Request Department release immediately. Other addressees may also release as deemed appropriate.

"As I stated on July 18,<sup>2</sup> my government is not prepared to join in a declaration by the conference such as is submitted. However, the United States makes this unilateral declaration of its position in these matters:

Declaration

The Government of the United States being resolved to devote its efforts to the strengthening of peace in accordance with the principles and purposes of the United Nations takes note of the agreements concluded at Geneva on July 20 and 21, 1954 between the (a) Franco-Laotian command and the command of the Peoples Army of Viet-Nam; (b) the Royal Khmer Army Command and the command of the Peoples Army of Viet-Nam; (c) Franco-Vietnamese command and the command of the Peoples Army of Vietnam and of paragraphs 1 to 12 inclusive of the declaration presented to the Geneva Conference on July 21, 1954 declares with regard to the aforesaid agreements and paragraphs that (i) it will refrain from the threat or the use of force to disturb them, in accordance with Article 2 (4) of the Charter of the United Nations dealing with the obligation of members to refrain in their international relations from the threat or use of force; and (ii) it will view any renewal of the aggression in violation of the aforesaid agreements with grave concern and as seriously threatening international peace and security.

In connection with the statement in the declaration concerning free elections in Vietnam, my government wishes to make clear its position which it has expressed in a declaration made in Washington on June 29, 1954,<sup>3</sup> as follows:

'In the case of nations, now divided against their will, we shall continue to seek to achieve unity through free elections, supervised by the United Nations to insure that they are conducted fairly.'

<sup>1</sup> Smith's statement and the unilateral U.S. declaration are also printed in the Department of State Bulletin, Aug. 2, 1954, pp. 162-163 and in Cmd. 9239, pp. 6-7.

<sup>2</sup> Smith's statement made in the Twenty-third Restricted Session on Indochina, July 18, was contained in telegram Secto 654, July 18, p. 1431.

<sup>3</sup> A reference to the joint statement issued by President Eisenhower and Prime Minister Churchill in Washington on June 29; see editorial note, p. 1260.

With respect to the statement made by the representative of the State of Vietnam, the United States reiterates its traditional position that peoples are entitled to determine their own future and that it will not join in an arrangement which would hinder this. Nothing in its declaration just made is intended to or does indicate any departure from this traditional position.

We share the hope that the agreements will permit Cambodia, Laos and Viet-Nam to play their part in full independence and sovereignty, in the peaceful community of nations, and will enable the peoples of that area to determine their own future."

SMITH

396.1 GE/7-2154 : Telegram

Eighth Plenary Session on Indochina, Geneva, July 21, 3:10 p. m.: The United States Delegation to the United States Information Agency

CONFIDENTIAL

PRIORITY

GENEVA, July 21, 1954—11 p. m.

Tousi 15. For Berding/Phillips. Geneva Guide Final. But for Molotov's sudden awakening at 4:10 this after, conference chairman Eden might have closed the Geneva Conference without a final round Communist harangue. Matter of fact, plenary session was actually closed in Eden's words when Soviet Foreign Minister suddenly asked whether closing statements were in order. Probably weren't but he started off anyway.

Naturally, he set the theme for his two Asian colleagues, striking chords of "peaceful co-existence", "relaxation of tensions", and the "success" achieved at Geneva by the "forces of peace". Molotov's tone considered moderate, especially towards US, but this did not last long. Pham Van Dong picked up the theme but not the tone, and once having touched in his own words on the "Communist success" (and thus the conference success, of course) at Geneva, he launched into the type of aggressive attack that has come to be expected of him. Certainly it was in bad taste under the circumstances.

Aside from these three speeches, final session of conference, as you know from news file, devoted largely to presentation of final declaration plus special statements from almost everyone of Allied delegations. Some of these made for home consumption, especially when they reflected note of protest, demand or reservation. This does not, of course, apply to US declaration, principles of which are well-known and can be dealt with accordingly. Certainly Smith's forthright statement can be considered a sound and positive, rather than negative, approach to problems of guaranteeing peace and security in South-east Asia, and protecting fundamental rights of man in which free world believes. US declaration was actually much stronger and had much more substance for non-Communist states than conference declaration by other members. Our statement was the only one which really carried the weight of a guarantee against further aggression. This should be a recurring point in our commentary on the whole conference.

Treatment: Of other separate declarations, only one with which we need deal especially, aside from noting (as did the conference, in most cases), is short Vietnam resolution prepared for insertion into the final declaration. Not accepted as an insertion, but since it states worthy pledge on behalf of Vietnam to bend all efforts to re-establish real peace in that country, and to refrain from using force to oppose any implementation of cease-fire agreements, US supports it. Because of the language, it requires careful handling, with emphasis on the pledge, and not on irony of its phraseology. US considers this a statement of valid intent to achieve true and lasting peace, and we wish the Vietnam[ese] well.

Communist wind-ups were notable, and even vulnerable, for at least one specific strain which ran through them all. At every turn they combined the "forces of peace": Viet Minh, Communist China and the Soviet Union, with France. In their lexicon, France is on their side, because it helped to make peace and peace is their private property. Not only weakness of this argument but the affrontery of it should be obvious. We suspect French themselves will rebut this premise, and we should pick up everything in next few days, probably from Mendes in Paris, which helps knock down that inadmissible although not new by any means, Communist reasoning.

Notable also was Asian Communist appeals, either in Dong's language or in Chou's more moderate approach, for what would amount to an Asian security pact. Their principal objective is just such a pact as Molotov has proposed for Europe, with US isolated. We have our answer to that, which presumably is being worked into our output as situation permits.

Also note heavy reliance on cultural and economic cooperation theme, to which our national strategy for this area might have some other than straight military answers. It has been obvious throughout conference that Chou is most concerned over US activities in Asia, so the more active we are, on all fronts, and especially in the next two years where elections will be held, the more anxious we can make him. Our statement is part of the strategy referred to; it stands out of the welter of language in Geneva today as a real, valid, and applicable principle, and should be treated as such.

Editorial Note

At his news conference on July 21, President Eisenhower made the following statement:

"I am glad, of course, that agreement has been reached at Geneva to stop the bloodshed in Indochina.

"The United States has not been a belligerent in the war. The primary responsibility for the settlement in Indochina rested with those nations which participated in the fighting. Our role at Geneva has been at all times to try to be helpful where desired and to aid France and Cambodia, Laos, and Viet-Nam to obtain a just and honorable settlement which will take into account the needs of the interested people. Accordingly, the United States has not itself been party to or bound by the decisions taken by the Conference, but it is our hope that it will lead to the establishment of peace consistent with the rights and the needs of the countries concerned. The agreement contains features which we do not like, but a great deal depends on how they work in practice.

"The United States is issuing at Geneva a statement to the effect that it is not prepared to join in the Conference declaration, but, as loyal members of the United Nations, we also say that, in compliance with the obligations and principles contained in article 2 of the United Nations Charter, the United States will not use force to disturb the settlement. We also say that any renewal of Communist aggression would be viewed by us as a matter of grave concern.

"As evidence of our resolve to assist Cambodia and Laos to play their part, in full independence and sovereignty, in the peaceful community of free nations, we are requesting the agreement of the Governments of Cambodia and Laos to our appointment of an Ambassador or Minister to be resident at their respective capitals (Phnom Penh and Vientiane). We already have a Chief of Mission at Saigon, the capital of Viet-Nam, and this Embassy will, of course, be maintained.

"The United States is actively pursuing discussions with other free nations with a view to the rapid organization of a collective defense in Southeast Asia in order to prevent further direct or indirect Communist aggression in that general area."

The text of this statement is also printed in the Department of State Bulletin, August 2, 1954, page 163, and in the Public Papers of the Presidents of the United States: Dwight D. Eisenhower, 1954, page 642.

---

751G.00/7-2154: Telegram

The Secretary of State to the United States Delegation<sup>1</sup>

SECRET PRIORITY

WASHINGTON, July 21, 1954—7:45 p. m.

Tosec 597. For Phleger from Cowles. Secretary has asked for our legal opinion as to what extent Geneva agreement may impose inhibitions and restrictions on the Associated States. He has asked particularly how we can (a) protect Laos, Cambodia and retained Vietnam through SEATO against external aggression and assist them to prevent internal subversion and (b) bring them into some form of military or economic association with SEATO.

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by O'Connor of S.

Secretary thinks that what we can do in these respects will depend to a considerable extent on the legal interpretations which France, UK and Associated States place on the agreements reached at Geneva, in light of their discussions and negotiations of these agreements. I would very much like to have your comments on these points either by cable or in person if you plan be back by end of week.<sup>2</sup>

DULLES

---

<sup>2</sup>The reply to the Secretary's request was contained in two memoranda—one, dated July 22, prepared by Meeker of L/UNA; the other, dated July 27, also prepared by Meeker, was sent by Phleger of L to the Secretary of State. The memorandum of July 22, which contains a handwritten notation on the source text that the Secretary of State saw it, is filed in Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 329. For the memorandum from Phleger to the Secretary, which also contains a handwritten notation on the source text that the Secretary saw it, see p. 1552.

---

751G.00/7-2154: Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

SECRET

GENEVA, July 21, 1954—8 p. m.

Secto 718. Repeated information Paris 128, Saigon 97. Offroy of French del tells us that following conclusion of conference today he is pursuing negotiations with Viet Minh del regarding protection of French economic interests in North Vietnam and regarding conditions under which Frenchmen will be allowed to continue to reside there. According to Offroy French do not propose for present to have any sort of official representation in North Vietnam after evacuation French Expeditionary Corps and have rejected Viet Minh proposal for Viet Minh representation in Paris.

SMITH

IV. INDOCHINA DOCUMENTS PREPARED BY THE INTERNATIONAL SECRETARIAT OF THE GENEVA CONFERENCE: ARMISTICE AGREEMENTS FOR VIETNAM, LAOS, AND CAMBODIA; THE FINAL DECLARATION ON INDOCHINA; DECLARATIONS BY CAMBODIA, LAOS, AND FRANCE; PROPOSED AMENDMENT BY VIETNAM TO THE FINAL DECLARATION (JULY 20-JULY 21)

396.1 GE/7-2154

Agreement on the Cessation of Hostilities in Vietnam<sup>1</sup>

CONFIDENTIAL

GENEVA, 20 July 1954.

IC/42 Rev. 2

CHAPTER I

PROVISIONAL MILITARY DEMARCATION LINE AND DEMILITARIZED ZONE

Article 1

A provisional military demarcation line shall be fixed, on either side of which the forces of the two parties shall be regrouped after their withdrawal, the forces of the People's Army of Viet-Nam to the north of the line and the forces of the French Union to the south.

The provisional military demarcation line is fixed as shown on the map attached (see Map No. 1<sup>2</sup>).

It is also agreed that a demilitarized zone shall be established on either side of the demarcation line, to a width of not more than 5 kms. from it, to act as a buffer zone and avoid any incidents which might result in the resumption of hostilities.

Article 2

The period within which the movement of all the forces of either party into its regrouping zone on either side of the provisional military demarcation line shall be completed shall not exceed three hundred (300) days from the date of the present Agreement's entry into force.

Article 3

When the provisional military demarcation line coincides with a waterway, the waters of such waterway shall be open to civil naviga-

<sup>1</sup> This document was transmitted to the Department of State in telegram Secto 700, July 21. (751G.00/7-2154) Revisions issued by the International Secretariat were transmitted to the Department in telegram Secto 703, July 21. (751G.00/7-2154)

The following printed notation appeared on the source text: "The two parties have agreed that this text shall not be published until further notice."

This agreement was also printed in American Foreign Policy, 1950-1955: Basic Documents, pp. 750-767; Cmd. 9239, pp. 27-40; and Conférence de Genève, pp. 427-442.

<sup>2</sup> Not printed.

tion by both parties wherever one bank is controlled by one party and the other bank by the other party. The Joint Commission shall establish rules of navigation for the stretch of waterway in question. The merchant shipping and other civilian craft of each party shall have unrestricted access to the land under its military control.

Article 4

The provisional military demarcation line between the two final regrouping zones is extended into the territorial waters by a line perpendicular to the general line of the coast.

All coastal islands north of this boundary shall be evacuated by the armed forces of the French Union, and all islands south of it shall be evacuated by the forces of the People's Army of Viet-Nam.

Article 5

To avoid any incidents which might result in the resumption of hostilities, all military forces, supplies and equipment shall be withdrawn from the demilitarized zone within twenty-five (25) days of the present Agreement's entry into force.

Article 6

No person, military or civilian, shall be permitted to cross the provisional military demarcation line unless specifically authorized to do so by the Joint Commission.

Article 7

No person, military or civilian, shall be permitted to enter the demilitarized zone except persons concerned with the conduct of civil administration and relief and persons specifically authorized to enter by the Joint Commission.

Article 8

Civil administration and relief in the demilitarized zone on either side of the provisional military demarcation line shall be the responsibility of the Commanders-in-Chief of the two parties in their respective zones. The number of persons, military or civilian, from each side who are permitted to enter the demilitarized zone for the conduct of civil administration and relief shall be determined by the respective Commanders, but in no case shall the total number authorized by either side exceed at any one time a figure to be determined by the Trung Gia Military Commission or by the Joint Commission. The number of civil police and the arms to be carried by them shall be determined by the Joint Commission. No one else shall carry arms unless specifically authorized to do so by the Joint Commission.

Article 9

Nothing contained in this chapter shall be construed as limiting the complete freedom of movement, into, out of or within the demilitarized zone, of the Joint Commission, its joint groups, the International Commission to be set up as indicated below, its inspection teams and any other persons, supplies or equipment specifically authorized to enter the demilitarized zone by the Joint Commission. Freedom of movement shall be permitted across the territory under the military control of either side over any road or waterway which has to be taken between points within the demilitarized zone when such points are not connected by roads or waterways lying completely within the demilitarized zone.

CHAPTER II

PRINCIPLES AND PROCEDURE GOVERNING IMPLEMENTATION OF THE PRESENT AGREEMENT*Article 10*

The Commanders of the Forces on each side, on the one side the Commander-in-Chief of the French Union forces in Indo-China and on the other side the Commander-in-Chief of the People's Army of Viet-Nam, shall order and enforce the complete cessation of all hostilities in Viet-Nam by all armed forces under their control, including all units and personnel of the ground, naval and air forces.

Article 11

In accordance with the principle of a simultaneous cease-fire throughout Indo-China, the cessation of hostilities shall be simultaneous throughout all parts of Viet-Nam, in all areas of hostilities and for all the forces of the two parties.

Taking into account the time effectively required to transmit the cease-fire order down to the lowest échelons of the combatant forces on both sides, the two parties are agreed that the cease-fire shall take effect completely and simultaneously for the different sectors of the country as follows:

Northern Viet-Nam at 8:00 a. m. (local time) on 27 July 1954
Central Viet-Nam at 8:00 a. m. (local time) on 1 August 1954
Southern Viet-Nam at 8:00 a. m. (local time) on 11 August 1954

It is agreed that Peking mean time shall be taken as local time.

From such time as the cease-fire becomes effective in Northern Viet-Nam, both parties undertake not to engage in any large-scale offensive action in any part of the Indo-Chinese theatre of operations and not to commit the air forces based on Northern Viet-Nam outside that sector. The two parties also undertake to inform each other of their plans for movement from one regrouping zone to another within twenty-five (25) days of the present Agreement's entry into force.

Article 12

All the operations and movements entailed in the cessation of hostilities and regrouping must proceed in a safe and orderly fashion :

(a) Within a certain number of days after the cease-fire Agreement shall have become effective, the number to be determined on the spot by the Trung Gia Military Commission, each party shall be responsible for removing and neutralizing mines (including river- and sea-mines), booby traps, explosives and any other dangerous substances placed by it. In the event of its being impossible to complete the work of removal and neutralization in time, the party concerned shall mark the spot by placing visible signs there. All demolitions, mine fields, wire entanglements and other hazards to the free movement of the personnel of the Joint Commission and its joint groups, known to be present after the withdrawal of the military forces, shall be reported to the Joint Commission by the Commanders of the opposing forces ;

(b) From the time of the cease-fire until regrouping is completed on either side of the demarcation line :

(1) The forces of either party shall be provisionally withdrawn from the provisional assembly areas assigned to the other party.

(2) When one party's forces withdraw by a route (road, rail, waterway, sea route) which passes through the territory of the other party (see Article 24), the latter party's forces must provisionally withdraw three kilometres on each side of such route, but in such a manner as to avoid interfering with the movements of the civil population.

Article 13

From the time of the cease-fire until the completion of the movements from one regrouping zone into the other, civil and military transport aircraft shall follow air-corridors between the provisional assembly areas assigned to the French Union forces north of the demarcation line on the one hand and the Laotian frontier and the regrouping zone assigned to the French Union forces on the other hand.

The position of the air-corridors, their width, the safety route for single-engined military aircraft transferred to the south and the search and rescue procedure for aircraft in distress shall be determined on the spot by the Trung Gia Military Commission.

Article 14

Political and administrative measures in the two regrouping zones, on either side of the provisional military demarcation line :

(a) Pending the general elections which will bring about the unification of Viet-Nam, the conduct of civil administration in each regrouping zone shall be in the hands of the party whose forces are to be regrouped there in virtue of the present Agreement;

(b) Any territory controlled by one party which is transferred to the other party by the regrouping plan shall continue to be administered by the former party until such date as all the troops who are to be transferred have completely left that territory so as to free the zone assigned to the party in question. From then on, such territory shall be regarded as transferred to the other party, who shall assume responsibility for it.

Steps shall be taken to ensure that there is no break in the transfer of responsibilities. For this purpose, adequate notice shall be given by the withdrawing party to the other party, which shall make the necessary arrangements, in particular by sending administrative and police detachments to prepare for the assumption of administrative responsibility. The length of such notice shall be determined by the Trung Gia Military Commission. The transfer shall be effected in successive stages for the various territorial sectors.

The transfer of the civil administration of Hanoi and Haiphong to the authorities of the Democratic Republic of Viet-Nam shall be completed within the respective time-limits laid down in Article 15 for military movements.

(c) Each party undertakes to refrain from any reprisals or discrimination against persons or organizations on account of their activities during the hostilities and to guarantee their democratic liberties.

(d) From the date of entry into force of the present Agreement until the movement of troops is completed, any civilians residing in a district controlled by one party who wish to go and live in the zone assigned to the other party shall be permitted and helped to do so by the authorities in that district.

Article 15

The disengagement of the combatants, and the withdrawals and transfers of military forces, equipment and supplies shall take place in accordance with the following principles:

(a) The withdrawals and transfers of the military forces, equipment and supplies of the two parties shall be completed within three hundred (300) days, as laid down in Article 2 of the present Agreement;

(b) Within either territory successive withdrawals shall be made by sectors, portions of sectors or provinces. Transfers from one regrouping zone to another shall be made in successive monthly instalments proportionate to the number of troops to be transferred;

(c) The two parties shall undertake to carry out all troop withdrawals and transfers in accordance with the aims of the present Agreement, shall permit no hostile act and shall take no step whatsoever which might hamper such withdrawals and transfers. They shall assist one another as far as this is possible;

(d) The two parties shall permit no destruction or sabotage of any public property and no injury to the life and property of the civil population. They shall permit no interference in local civil administration;

(e) The Joint Commission and the International Commission shall ensure that steps are taken to safeguard the forces in the course of withdrawal and transfer;

(f) The Trung Gia Military Commission, and later the Joint Commission, shall determine by common agreement the exact procedure for the disengagement of the combatants and for troop withdrawals and transfers, on the basis of the principles mentioned above and within the framework laid down below :

1. The disengagement of the combatants, including the concentration of the armed forces of all kinds and also each party's movements into the provisional assembly areas assigned to it and the other party's provisional withdrawal from it, shall be completed within a period not exceeding fifteen (15) days after the date when the cease-fire becomes effective.

The general delineation of the provisional assembly areas is set out in the maps annexed to the present Agreement.

In order to avoid any incidents, no troops shall be stationed less than 1,500 metres from the lines delimiting the provisional assembly areas.

During the period until the transfers are concluded, all the coastal islands west of the following lines shall be included in the Haiphong perimeter :

- meridian of the southern point of Kebao Island
- northern coast of Ile Rousse (excluding the island), extended as far as the meridian of Campha-Mines
- meridian of Campha-Mines.

2. The withdrawals and transfers shall be effected in the following order and within the following periods (from the date of the entry into force of the present Agreement) :

Forces of the French Union

Hanoi perimeter	— 80 days
Haiduong perimeter	—100 days
Haiphong perimeter	—300 days

Forces of the People's Army of Viet-Nam

Ham Tan and Xuyenmoc provisional assembly area	— 80 days
Central Viet-Nam provisional assembly area—first installment	— 80 days
Plaine des Jones provisional assembly area	—100 days
Central Viet-Nam provisional assembly area—second installment	—100 days
Point Camau provisional assembly area	—200 days
Central Viet-Nam provisional assembly area—last installment	—300 days

CHAPTER III

BAN ON THE INTRODUCTION OF FRESH TROOPS, MILITARY PERSONNEL, ARMS AND MUNITIONS, MILITARY BASES*Article 16*

With effect from the date of entry into force of the present Agreement, the introduction into Viet-Nam of any troop reinforcements and additional military personnel is prohibited.

It is understood, however, that the rotation of units and groups of personnel, the arrival in Viet-Nam of individual personnel on a temporary duty basis and the return to Viet-Nam of individual personnel after short periods of leave or temporary duty outside Viet-Nam shall be permitted under the conditions laid down below :

(a) Rotation of units (defined in paragraph (c) of this Article) and groups of personnel shall not be permitted for French Union troops stationed north of the provisional military demarcation line laid down in Article 1 of the present Agreement, during the withdrawal period provided for in Article 2.

However, under the heading of individual personnel not more than fifty (50) men, including officers, shall during any one month be permitted to enter that part of the country north of the provisional military demarcation line on a temporary duty basis or to return there after short periods of leave or temporary duty outside Viet-Nam.

(b) "Rotation" is defined as the replacement of units or groups of personnel by other units of the same échelon or by personnel who are arriving in Viet-Nam territory to do their overseas service there;

(c) The units rotated shall never be larger than a battalion—or the corresponding échelon for air and naval forces.

(d) Rotation shall be conducted on a man-for-man basis, provided, however, that in any one quarter neither party shall introduce more than fifteen thousand five hundred (15,500) members of its armed forces into Viet-Nam under the rotation policy.

(e) Rotation units (defined in paragraph (c) of this Article) and groups of personnel, and the individual personnel mentioned in this Article, shall enter and leave Viet-Nam only through the entry points enumerated in Article 20 below.

(f) Each party shall notify the Joint Commission and the International Commission at least two days in advance of any arrivals or departures of units, groups of personnel and individual personnel in or from Viet-Nam. Reports on the arrivals or departures of units, groups of personnel and individual personnel in or from Viet-Nam shall be submitted daily to the Joint Commission and the International Commission.

All the above-mentioned notifications and reports shall indicate the places and dates of arrival or departure and the number of persons arriving or departing.

(g) The International Commission, through its Inspection Teams, shall supervise and inspect the rotation of units and groups of personnel and the arrival and departure of individual personnel as authorized above, at the points of entry enumerated in Article 20 below.

Article 17

(a) With effect from the date of entry into force of the present Agreement, the introduction into Viet-Nam of any reinforcements in the form of all types of arms, munitions and other war material, such as combat aircraft, naval craft, pieces of ordnance, jet engines and jet weapons and armoured vehicles, is prohibited.

(b) It is understood, however, that war material, arms and munitions which have been destroyed, damaged, worn out or used up after the cessation of hostilities may be replaced on the basis of piece-for-piece of the same type and with similar characteristics. Such replacements of war material, arms and munitions shall not be permitted for French Union troops stationed north of the provisional military demarcation line laid down in Article 1 of the present Agreement, during the withdrawal period provided for in Article 2.

Naval craft may perform transport operations between the regrouping zones.

(c) The war material, arms and munitions for replacement purposes provided for in paragraph (b) of this Article, shall be introduced into Viet-Nam only through the points of entry enumerated in Article 20 below. War material, arms and munitions to be replaced shall be shipped from Viet-Nam only through the points of entry enumerated in Article 20 below.

(d) Apart from the replacements permitted within the limits laid down in paragraph (b) of this Article, the introduction of war material, arms and munitions of all types in the form of unassembled parts for subsequent assembly is prohibited.

(e) Each party shall notify the Joint Commission and the International Commission at least two days in advance of any arrivals or departures which may take place of war material, arms and munitions of all types.

In order to justify the requests for the introduction into Viet-Nam of arms, munitions and other war material (as defined in paragraph (a) of this Article) for replacement purposes, a report concerning each incoming shipment shall be submitted to the Joint Commission and the International Commission. Such reports shall indicate the use made of the items so replaced.

(f) The International Commission, through its Inspection Teams, shall supervise and inspect the replacements permitted in the circumstances laid down in this Article, at the points of entry enumerated in Article 20 below.

Article 18

With effect from the date of entry into force of the present Agreement, the establishment of new military bases is prohibited throughout Viet-Nam territory.

Article 19

With effect from the date of entry into force of the present Agreement, no military base under the control of a foreign State may be established in the re-grouping zone of either party; the two parties shall ensure that the zones assigned to them do not adhere to any military alliance and are not used for the resumption of hostilities or to further an aggressive policy.

Article 20

The points of entry into Viet-Nam for rotation personnel and replacements of material are fixed as follows:

- Zones to the north of the provisional military demarcation line: Laokey, Langson, Tien-Yen, Haiphong, Vinh, Dong-Hoi, Muong-Sen;
- Zone to the south of the provisional military demarcation line: Tourane, Quinhon, Nhatrang, Bangoi, Saigon, Cap St. Jacques, Tanchau.

CHAPTER IV

PRISONERS OF WAR AND CIVILIAN INTERNEES

Article 21

The liberation and repatriation of all prisoners of war and civilian internees detained by each of the two parties at the coming into force of the present Agreement shall be carried out under the following conditions:

(a) All prisoners of war and civilian internees of Viet-Nam, French and other nationalities captured since the beginning of hostilities in Viet-Nam during military operations or in any other circumstances of war and in any part of the territory of Viet-Nam shall be liberated within a period of thirty (30) days after the date when the cease-fire becomes effective in each theatre.

(b) The term "civilian internees" is understood to mean all persons who, having in any way contributed to the political and armed struggle between the two parties, have been arrested for that reason and have been kept in detention by either party during the period of hostilities.

(c) All prisoners of war and civilian internees held by either party shall be surrendered to the appropriate authorities of the other party, who shall give them all possible assistance in proceeding to their country of origin, place of habitual residence or the zone of their choice.

CHAPTER V

MISCELLANEOUS

Article 22

The Commanders of the Forces of the two parties shall ensure that persons under their respective commands who violate any of the provisions of the present Agreement are suitably punished.

Article 23

In cases in which the place of burial is known and the existence of graves has been established, the Commander of the Forces of either party shall, within a specific period after the entry into force of the Armistice Agreement, permit the graves service personnel of the other party to enter the part of Viet-Nam territory under their military control for the purpose of finding and removing the bodies of deceased military personnel of that party, including the bodies of deceased prisoners of war. The Joint Commission shall determine the procedures and the time limit for the performance of this task. The Commanders of the Forces of the two parties shall communicate to each other all information in their possession as to the place of burial of military personnel of the other party.

Article 24

The present Agreement shall apply to all the armed forces of either party. The armed forces of each party shall respect the demilitarized zone and the territory under the military control of the other party, and shall commit no act and undertake no operation against the other party and shall not engage in blockade of any kind in Viet-Nam.

For the purposes of the present Article, the word "territory" includes territorial waters and air space.

Article 25

The Commanders of the Forces of the two parties shall afford full protection and all possible assistance and co-operation to the Joint Commission and its joint groups and to the International Commission and its inspection teams in the performance of the functions and tasks assigned to them by the present Agreement.

Article 26

The costs involved in the operations of the Joint Commission and joint groups and of the International Commission and its Inspection Teams shall be shared equally between the two parties.

Article 27

The signatories of the present Agreement and their successors in their functions shall be responsible for ensuring the observance and enforcement of the terms and provisions thereof. The Commanders of the Forces of the two parties shall, within their respective commands, take all steps and make all arrangements necessary to ensure full compliance with all the provisions of the present Agreement by all elements and military personnel under their command.

The procedures laid down in the present Agreement shall, whenever necessary, be studied by the Commanders of the two parties and, if necessary, defined more specifically by the Joint Commission.

CHAPTER VI

JOINT COMMISSION AND INTERNATIONAL COMMISSION FOR SUPERVISION AND CONTROL IN VIET-NAM

28. Responsibility for the execution of the agreement on the cessation of hostilities shall rest with the parties.

29. An International Commission shall ensure the control and supervision of this execution.

30. In order to facilitate, under the conditions shown below, the execution of provisions concerning joint actions by the two parties a Joint Commission shall be set up in Viet-Nam.

31. The Joint Commission shall be composed of an equal number of representatives of the Commanders of the two parties.

32. The Presidents of the delegations to the Joint Commission shall hold the rank of General.

The Joint Commission shall set up joint groups the number of which shall be determined by mutual agreement between the parties. The joint groups shall be composed of an equal number of officers from both parties. Their location on the demarcation line between the re-grouping zones shall be determined by the parties whilst taking into account the powers of the Joint Commission.

33. The Joint Commission shall ensure the execution of the following provisions of the Agreement on the cessation of hostilities:

(a) A simultaneous and general cease-fire in Viet-Nam for all regular and irregular armed forces of the two parties.

(b) A re-groupment of the armed forces of the two parties.

(c) Observance of the demarcation lines between the re-grouping zones and of the demilitarized sectors.

Within the limits of its competence it shall help the parties to execute the said provisions, shall ensure liaison between them for the purpose of preparing and carrying out plans for the application of these provisions, and shall endeavour to solve such disputed questions as may arise between the parties in the course of executing these provisions.

34. An International Commission shall be set up for the control and supervision over the application of the provisions of the agreement on the cessation of hostilities in Viet-Nam. It shall be composed of representatives of the following States: Canada, India and Poland.

It shall be presided over by the Representative of India.

35. The International Commission shall set up fixed and mobile inspection teams, composed of an equal number of officers appointed by each of the above-mentioned States. The fixed teams shall be located at the following points: Laokay, Langson, Tien-Yen, Haiphong, Vinh, Dong-Hoi, Muong-Sen, Tourane, Quinhon, Nhatrang, Bangoi, Saigon, Cap St. Jacques, Tranchau. These points of location may, at a later date, be altered at the request of the Joint Commission, or of one of the parties, or of the International Commission itself, by agreement between the International Commission and the command of the party concerned. The zones of action of the mobile teams shall be the regions bordering the land and sea frontiers of Viet-Nam, the demarcation lines between the re-grouping zones and the demilitarized zones. Within the limits of these zones they shall have the right to move freely and shall receive from the local civil and military authorities all facilities they may require for the fulfilment of their tasks (provision of personnel, placing at their disposal documents needed for supervision, summoning witnesses necessary for holding enquiries, ensuring the security and freedom of movement of the inspection teams etc. . . .).<sup>3</sup> They shall have at their disposal such modern means of transport, observation and communication as they may require. Beyond the zones of action as defined above, the mobile teams may, by agreement with the command of the party concerned, carry out other movements within the limits of the tasks given them by the present agreement.

36. The International Commission shall be responsible for supervising the proper execution by the parties of the provisions of the agreement. For this purpose, it shall fulfil the tasks of control, observation, inspection and investigation connected with the application of the provisions of the agreement on the cessation of hostilities, and it shall in particular:

(a) Control the movement of the armed forces of the two parties, effected within the framework of the regroupment plan.

(b) Supervise the demarcation lines between the regrouping areas, and also the demilitarized zones.

(c) Control the operations of releasing prisoners of war and civilian internees.

(d) Supervise at ports and airfields as well as along all frontiers of Viet-Nam the execution of the provisions of the agreement on the cessation of hostilities, regulating the introduction into the country of armed forces, military personnel and of all kinds of arms, munitions and war material.

---

<sup>3</sup> Ellipsis in the source text.

37. The International Commission shall, through the medium of the inspection teams mentioned above, and as soon as possible either on its own initiative, or at the request of the Joint Commission, or of one of the parties, undertake the necessary investigations both documentary and on the ground.

38. The inspection teams shall submit to the International Commission the results of their supervision, their investigation and their observations, furthermore they shall draw up such special reports as they may consider necessary or as may be requested from them by the Commission. In the case of a disagreement within the teams, the conclusions of each member shall be submitted to the Commission.

39. If any one inspection team is unable to settle an incident or considers that there is a violation or a threat of a serious violation the International Commission shall be informed; the latter shall study the reports and the conclusions of the inspection teams and shall inform the parties of the measures which should be taken for the settlement of the incident, ending of the violation or removal of the threat of violation.

40. When the Joint Commission is unable to reach an agreement on the interpretation to be given to some provision or on the appraisal of a fact, the International Commission shall be informed of the disputed question. Its recommendations shall be sent directly to the parties and shall be notified to the Joint Commission.

41. The recommendations of the International Commission shall be adopted by majority vote, subject to the provisions contained in article 42. If the votes are divided the chairman's vote shall be decisive.

The International Commission may formulate recommendations concerning amendments and additions which should be made to the provisions of the agreement on the cessation of hostilities in Viet-Nam, in order to ensure a more effective execution of that agreement. These recommendations shall be adopted unanimously.

42. When dealing with questions concerning violations, or threats of violations, which might lead to a resumption of hostilities, namely:

(a) Refusal by the armed forces of one party to effect the movements provided for in the regroupment plan;

(b) Violation by the armed forces of one of the parties of the regrouping zones, territorial waters, or air space of the other party; the decisions of the International Commission must be unanimous.

43. If one of the parties refuses to put into effect a recommendation of the International Commission, the parties concerned or the Commission itself shall inform the members of the Geneva Conference.

If the International Commission does not reach unanimity in the cases provided for in article 42, it shall submit a majority report and one or more minority reports to the members of the Conference.

The International Commission shall inform the members of the Conference in all cases where its activity is being hindered.

44. The International Commission shall be set up at the time of the cessation of hostilities in Indo-China in order that it should be able to fulfil the tasks provided for in article 36.

45. The International Commission for Supervision and Control in Viet-Nam shall act in close co-operation with the International Commissions for Supervision and Control in Cambodia and Laos.

The Secretaries-General of these three Commissions shall be responsible for co-ordinating their work and for relations between them.

46. The International Commission for Supervision and Control in Viet-Nam may, after consultation with the International Commissions for Supervision and Control in Cambodia and Laos, and having regard to the development of the situation in Cambodia and Laos, progressively reduce its activities. Such a decision must be adopted unanimously.

47. All the provisions of the present Agreement, save the second sub-paragraph of Article 11, shall enter into force at 2400 hours (Geneva time) on 22 July 1954.

Done in Geneva at 2400 hours on the 20th of July 1954 in French and in Viet-Nameese, both texts being equally authentic.

For the Commander-in-Chief of the People's Army of Viet-Nam

For the Commander-in-Chief of the French Union forces in
Indo-China

TA-QUANG-BUU

Brigadier-General DELTIEL

Vice-Minister of National Defence of the Democratic Republic of Viet-Nam

Annex

ANNEX TO THE AGREEMENT ON THE CESSATION OF HOSTILITIES IN VIET-NAM

I. DELINEATION OF THE PROVISIONAL MILITARY DEMARCATION LINE AND THE DEMILITARIZED ZONE (Article 1 of the Agreement, refer- ence map: Indo-China 1/100,000)<sup>4</sup>

(a) The provisional military demarcation line is fixed as follows, reading from east to west:

<sup>4</sup> Not printed.

the mouth of the Song Ben Hat (Cua Tung River) and the course of that river (known as the Rao Thanh in the mountains) to the village of Bo Ho Su, then the parallel of Bo Ho Su to the Laos-Viet-Nam frontier.

(b) The demilitarized zone shall be delimited by Trung Gia Military Commission in accordance with the provisions of Article 1 of the Agreement on the cessation of hostilities in Viet-Nam.

II. GENERAL DELINEATION OF THE PROVISIONAL ASSEMBLY AREAS
(Article 15 of the Agreement; reference maps: Indo-China 1/400,000)<sup>5</sup>

(a) North Viet-Nam

Delineation of the boundary of the provisional assembly area of the French Union forces

1. The perimeter of Hanoi is delimited by the arc of a circle with a radius of 15 kilometres, having as its centre the right bank abutment of Doumer Bridge and running westwards from the Red River to the Rapids Canal in the north-east.

In this particular case no forces of the French Union shall be stationed less than 2 kilometres from this perimeter, on the inside thereof.

2. The perimeter of Haiphong shall be delimited by the Song-Van-Uc as far as Kim Thanh and a line running from the Song-Van-Uc three kilometres north-east of Kim Thanh to cut Road No. 18 two kilometres east of Mao-Khé. Thence a line running three kilometres north of Road 18 to Cho-Troi and a straight line from Cho-Troi to the Mong-Duong ferry.

3. A corridor contained between:

In the south, the Red River from Thanh-Tri to Bang-Nho, thence a line joining the latter point to Do-My (south-west of Kesat), Gia-Loc and Tien Kieu;

In the north, a line running along the Rapids Canal at a distance of 1,500 metres to the north of the Canal, passing three kilometres north of Pha-Lai and Seven Pagodas and thence parallel to Road No. 18 to its point of intersection with the perimeter of Haiphong.

Note: Throughout the period of evacuation of the perimeter of Hanoi, the river forces of the French Union shall enjoy complete freedom of movement on the Song-Van-Uc. And the forces of the People's Army of Viet-Nam shall withdraw three kilometres south of the south bank of Song-Van-Uc.

Boundary between the perimeter of Hanoi and the perimeter of Haiduong

<sup>5</sup> Not printed.

A straight line running from the Rapids Canal three kilometres west of Chi-ne and ending at Do-My (eight kilometres south-west of Kesat).

(b) Central Viet-Nam

Delineation of the boundary of the provisional assembly area of the forces of the Viet-Nam People's Army south of the Col des Nuages parallel.

The perimeter of the Central Viet-Nam area shall consist of the administrative boundaries of the provinces of Quang-Ngai and Binh-Dinh as they were defined before the hostilities.

(c) South Viet-Nam

Three provisional assembly areas shall be provided for the forces of the People's Army of Viet-Nam.

The boundaries of these areas are as follows :

1. Xuyen-Moc, Ham-Tan Area

Western boundary: The course of the Song-Ray extended northwards as far as Road No. 1 to a point thereon eight kilometres east of the intersection of Road No. 1 and Road No. 3.

Northern boundary: Road No. 1 from the above-mentioned intersection to the intersection with Route Communale No. 9 situated 27 kilometres west-south-west of Phanthiet and from that intersection a straight line to Kim Thanh on the coast.

2. Plaine des Joncs Area

Northern boundary: The Viet-Nam-Cambodia frontier.

Western boundary: A straight line from Tong-Binh to Binh-Thanh.

Southern boundary: Course of the Fleuve Antérieur (Mekong) to ten kilometres south-east of Cao Lanh. From that point, a straight line as far as Ap-My-Dien, and from Ap-My-Dien a line parallel to and three kilometres east and then south of the Tong Doc-Loc Canal, this line reaches My-Hanh-Dong and thence Hung-Thanh-My.

Eastern boundary: A straight line from Hung-Thanh-My running northwards to the Cambodian frontier south of Doi-Bao-Voi.

3. Point Camau Area

Northern boundary: The Song-Cai-lon from its mouth to its junction with the Rach-Nuoc-Trong, thence the Rach-Nuoc-Trong to the bend five kilometres north-east of Ap-Xeo-La. Thereafter a line to the Ngan-Dua Canal and following that Canal as far as Vinh-Hung. Finally, from Vinh-Hung a north-south line to the sea.

396.1 GE/7-2154

Agreement on the Cessation of Hostilities in Laos<sup>1</sup>

GENEVA, 20 July 1954.

IC/51 Rev. 1

CHAPTER I

CEASE-FIRE AND EVACUATION OF FOREIGN ARMED FORCES AND FOREIGN MILITARY PERSONNEL*Article 1*

The Commanders of the armed forces of the parties in Laos shall order and enforce the complete cessation of all hostilities in Laos by all armed forces under their control, including all units and personnel of the ground, naval and air forces.

Article 2

In accordance with the principle of a simultaneous cease-fire throughout Indo-China the cessation of hostilities shall be simultaneous throughout the territory of Laos in all combat areas and for all forces of the two parties.

In order to prevent any mistake or misunderstanding and to ensure that both the cessation of hostilities and the disengagement and movements of the opposing forces are in fact simultaneous,

(a) Taking into account the time effectively required to transmit the cease-fire order down to the lowest échelons of the combatant forces on both sides, the two parties are agreed that the complete and simultaneous cease-fire throughout the territory of Laos shall become effective at 8 hours (local time) on August 6, 1954. It is agreed that Peking meantime shall be taken as local time.

(b) The Joint Commission for Laos shall draw up a schedule for the other operations resulting from the cessation of hostilities.

Article 3

All operations and movements entailed by the cessation of hostilities and re-grouping must proceed in a safe and orderly fashion:

(a) Within a number of days to be determined on the spot by the Joint Commission in Laos each party shall be responsible for removing

<sup>1</sup> This document was transmitted to the Department of State in telegram Secto 702, July 21. (396.1 GE/7-2154) Revisions issued by the International Secretariat were transmitted in telegram Secto 703, July 21. (751G.00/7-2154) Additional revisions to this document were issued by the International Secretariat in a note by the Secretariat of July 24. (396.1 GE/7-2454)

This agreement was also printed in American Foreign Policy, 1950-1955: Basic Documents, pp. 775-785; Cmd. 9239, pp. 18-26; and Conférence de Genève, pp. 443-452.

The revisions made to this agreement were entered on the two source texts by typewriter and by hand. As far as can be determined there is no final copy of IC/51 Rev. 1 in Department of State files; there is no indication that a final, revised copy of IC/51 was ever issued by the International Secretariat at Geneva.

and neutralizing mines, booby traps, explosives and any other dangerous substance placed by it. In the event of its being impossible to complete the work of removal and neutralization in time, the party concerned shall mark the spot by placing visible signs there.

(b) As regards the security of troops on the move following the lines of communication in accordance with the schedule previously drawn up by the Joint Armistice Commission in Laos, and the safety of the assembly areas, detailed measures shall be adopted in each case by the Joint Armistice Commission in Laos. In particular, while the forces of one party are withdrawing by a line of communication passing through the territory of the other party (road or waterways) the forces of the latter party shall provisionally withdraw two kilometres on either side of such line of communication, but in such a manner as to avoid interfering with the movements of the civil population.

Article 4

The withdrawals and transfers of military forces, supplies and equipment shall be effected in accordance with the following principles:

(a) The withdrawals and transfers of the military forces, supplies and equipment of the two parties shall be completed within a period of 120 days from the day on which the present Agreement enters into force.

The two parties undertake to communicate their transfer plans to each other, for information, within 25 days of the entry into force of the present Agreement.

(b) The withdrawals of the Viet-Nameese People's Volunteers from Laos to Viet-Nam shall be effected by provinces. The position of those volunteers who were settled in Laos before the hostilities shall form the subject of a special convention.

(c) The routes for the withdrawal of the forces of the French Union and Viet-Nameese People's Volunteers in Laos from Laotian territory shall be fixed on the spot by the Joint Commission.

(d) The two parties shall guarantee that the withdrawals and transfers of all forces will be effected in accordance with the purposes of this Agreement, and that they will not permit any hostile action or take action of any kind whatever which might hinder such withdrawals or transfers. The parties shall assist each other as far as possible.

(e) While the withdrawals and transfers of the forces are proceeding, the two parties shall not permit any destruction or sabotage of any public property or any attack on the life or property of the local civilian population. They shall not permit any interference with the local civil administration.

(f) The Joint Commission and the International Commission shall supervise the implementation of measures to ensure the safety of the forces during withdrawal and transfer.

(g) The Joint Commission in Laos shall determine the detailed procedures for the withdrawals and transfers of the forces in accordance with the above-mentioned principles.

Article 5

During the days immediately preceding the cease-fire each party undertakes not to engage in any large-scale operation between the time when the Agreement on the cessation of hostilities is signed at Geneva and the time when the cease-fire comes into effect.

CHAPTER II

PROHIBITION OF THE INTRODUCTION OF FRESH TROOPS, MILITARY PERSONNEL, ARMAMENTS AND MUNITIONS*Article 6*

With effect from the proclamation of the cease-fire the introduction into Laos of any reinforcements of troops or military personnel from outside Laotian territory is prohibited.

Nevertheless, the French High Command may leave a specified number of French military personnel required for the training of the Laotian National Army in the territory of Laos; the strength of such personnel shall not exceed one thousand five hundred (1,500) officers and non-commissioned officers.

Article 7

Upon the entry into force of the present Agreement, the establishment of new military bases is prohibited throughout the territory of Laos.

Article 8

The High Command of the French forces shall maintain in the territory of Laos the personnel required for the maintenance of the two French military establishments, the first at Seno and the second in the Mekong valley, either in the province of Vientiane or downstream from Vientiane.

The effectives maintained in these military establishments shall not exceed a total of three thousand five hundred (3,500) men.

Article 9

Upon the entry into force of the present Agreement and in accordance with the declaration made at the Geneva Conference by the Royal Government of Laos on 20 July 1954, the introduction into Laos of armaments, munitions and military equipment of all kinds is prohibited, with the exception of a specified quantity of armaments in categories specified as necessary for the defence of Laos.

Article 10

The new armaments and military personnel permitted to enter Laos in accordance with the terms of Article 9 above shall enter Laos at the following points only: Luang-Prabang, Xieng-Khouang, Vientiane, Seno, Paksé, Savannakhet and Tchépone.

CHAPTER III

DISENGAGEMENT OF THE FORCES—ASSEMBLY AREAS—CONCENTRATION AREAS

Article 11

The disengagement of the armed forces of both sides, including concentration of the armed forces, movements to rejoin the provisional assembly areas allotted to one party and provisional withdrawal movements by the other party, shall be completed within a period not exceeding fifteen (15) days after the cease-fire.

Article 12

The Joint Commission in Laos shall fix the site and boundaries:

—of the five (5) provisional assembly areas for the reception of the Vietnamese People's Volunteer Forces, —of the five (5) provisional assembly areas for the reception of the French forces in Laos, —of the twelve (12) provisional assembly areas, one to each province, for the reception of the fighting units of "Pathet Lao".

—The forces of the Laotian National Army shall remain in situ during the entire duration of the operations of disengagement and transfer of foreign forces and fighting units of "Pathet Lao".

Article 13

The foreign forces shall be transferred outside Laotian territory as follows:

(1) French Forces:

The French forces will be moved out of Laos by road (along routes laid down by the Joint Commission in Laos) and also by air and inland waterway;

(2) Vietnamese People's Volunteer Forces:

These forces will be moved out of Laos by land, along routes and in accordance with a schedule to be determined by the Joint Commission in Laos in accordance with the principle of simultaneous withdrawal of foreign forces.

Article 14

Pending a political settlement, the fighting units of "Pathet Lao", concentrated in the provisional assembly areas, shall move into the Provinces of Phongsaly and Sam-Neua except for any military personnel who wish to be demobilised where they are. They will be free to move between these two provinces in a corridor along the frontier between Laos and Viet-Nam bounded on the south by the Line Sop Kin, Na Mi, Sop Sang, Muong Son.

Concentration shall be completed within one-hundred-and-twenty (120) days from the date of entry into force of the present Agreement.

Article 15

Each party undertakes to refrain from any reprisals or discrimination against persons or organizations for their activities during the hostilities and also undertakes to guarantee their democratic freedoms.

CHAPTER IV

PRISONERS OF WAR AND CIVILIAN INTERNEES

Article 16

The liberation and repatriation of all prisoners of war and civilian internees detained by each of the two parties at the coming into force of the present Agreement shall be carried out under the following conditions:

(a) All prisoners of war and civilian internees of Laotian and other nationalities captured since the beginning of hostilities in Laos, during military operations or in any other circumstances of war and in any part of the territory of Laos, shall be liberated within a period of thirty (30) days after the date when the cease-fire comes into effect.

(b) The term "civilian internees" is understood to mean all persons who, having in any way contributed to the political and armed strife between the two parties, have been arrested for that reason or kept in detention by either party during the period of hostilities.

(c) All foreign prisoners of war captured by either party shall be surrendered to the appropriate authorities of the other party, who shall give them all possible assistance in proceeding to the destination of their choice.

CHAPTER V

MISCELLANEOUS

Article 17

The Commanders of the forces of the two parties shall ensure that persons under their respective commands who violate any of the provisions of the present Agreement are suitably punished.

Article 18

In cases in which the place of burial is known and the existence of graves has been established, the Commander of the forces of either party shall, within a specified period after the entry into force of the present Agreement, permit the graves service of the other party to enter that part of Laotian territory under his military control for the purpose of finding and removing the bodies of deceased military personnel of that party, including the bodies of deceased prisoners of war.

The Joint Commission shall fix the procedures by which this task is carried out and the time limits within which it must be completed. The Commanders of the forces of each party shall communicate to the other all information in his possession as to the place of burial of military personnel of the other party.

Article 19

The present Agreement shall apply to all the armed forces of either party. The armed forces of each party shall respect the territory under the military control of the other party, and engage in no hostile act against the other party.

For the purpose of the present article the word "territory" includes territorial waters and air space.

Article 20

The Commanders of the forces of the two parties shall afford full protection and all possible assistance and co-operation to the Joint Commission and its joint organs and to the International Commission

If an inspection team is unable to settle an incident or considers that assigned to them by the present Agreement.

Article 21

The costs involved in the operation of the Joint Commission and its joint groups and of the International Commission and its inspection teams shall be shared equally between the two parties.

Article 22

The signatories of the present Agreement and their successors in their functions shall be responsible for the observance and enforcement of the terms and provisions thereof. The Commanders of the forces of the two parties shall, within their respective commands, take all steps and make all arrangements necessary to ensure full compliance with all the provisions of the present Agreement by all military personnel under their command.

Article 23

The procedures laid down in the present Agreement shall, whenever necessary, be examined by the Commanders of the two parties and, if necessary, defined more specifically by the Joint Commission.

CHAPTER VI

JOINT COMMISSION AND INTERNATIONAL COMMISSION FOR SUPERVISION AND CONTROL IN LAOS

Article 24

Responsibility for the execution of the Agreement on the cessation of hostilities shall rest with the parties.

Article 25

An International Commission shall be entrusted with control and supervision over the application of the provisions of the Agreement on the cessation of hostilities in Laos. It shall be composed of representatives of the following States: Canada, India and Poland. It shall be presided over by the representative of India. Its headquarters shall be at Vientiane.

Article 26

The International Commission shall set up fixed and mobile inspection teams, composed of an equal number of officers appointed by each of the above-mentioned States.

The fixed teams shall be located at the following points: Paksé, Seno, Tchépone, Vientiane, Xieng-Khonang, Phongsaly, Sophao (province of Sam Neua). These points of location may, at a later date, be altered by agreement between the Government of Laos and the International Commission.

The zones of action of the mobile teams shall be the regions bordering the land frontiers of Laos. Within the limits of their zones of action they shall have the right to move freely and shall receive from the local civil and military authorities all facilities they may require for the fulfilment of their tasks (provision of personnel, access to documents needed for supervision, summoning of witnesses needed for holding enquiries, security and freedom of movement of the inspection teams etc. . . .<sup>2</sup>). They shall have at their disposal such modern means of transport, observation and communication as they may require.

Outside the zones of action defined above, the mobile teams may, with the agreement of the Command of the party concerned, move about as required by the tasks assigned to them by the present Agreement.

Article 27

The International Commission shall be responsible for supervising the execution by the parties of the provisions of the present Agreement. For this purpose it shall fulfil the functions of control, observation, inspection and investigation connected with the implementation of the provisions of the Agreement on the cessation of hostilities, and shall in particular:

(a) Control the withdrawal of foreign forces in accordance with the provisions of the Agreement on the cessation of hostilities and see that frontiers are respected;

(b) Control the release of prisoners of war and civilian internees;

---

<sup>2</sup> Ellipsis in the source text.

(c) Supervise, at ports and airfields and along all the frontiers of Laos, the implementation of the provisions regulating the introduction into Laos of military personnel and war materials;

(d) Supervise the implementation of the clauses of the Agreement on the cessation of hostilities relating to rotation of personnel and to supplies for French Union security forces maintained in Laos.

Article 28

A Joint Commission shall be set up to facilitate the implementation of the clauses relating to the withdrawal of foreign forces.

The Joint Commission shall form joint groups, the number of which shall be decided by mutual agreement between the parties.

The Joint Commission shall facilitate the implementation of the clauses of the agreement on the cessation of hostilities relating to the simultaneous and general case-fire in Laos for all regular and irregular armed forces of the two parties.

It shall assist the parties in the implementation of the said clauses; it shall ensure liaison between them for the purpose of preparing and carrying out plans for the implementation of the said clauses; it shall endeavour to settle any disputes between the parties arising out of the implementation of these clauses. The joint groups shall follow the forces in their movements and shall be disbanded once the withdrawal plans had been carried out.

Article 29

The Joint Commission and the joint groups shall be composed of an equal number of representatives of the commands of the parties concerned.

Article 30

The International Commission shall, through the medium of the inspection teams mentioned above, and as soon as possible, either on its own initiative, or at the request of the Joint Commission, or of one of the parties, undertake the necessary investigations both documentary and on the ground.

Article 31

The inspection teams shall submit to the International Commission the results of their supervision, investigations and observations; furthermore, they shall draw up such special reports as they may consider necessary or as may be requested from them by the Commission. In the case of a disagreement within the teams, the findings of each member shall be transmitted to the Commission.

Article 32

If an inspection team is unable to settle an incident or considers that there is a violation or a threat of a serious violation the International Commission shall be informed; the latter shall examine the reports and the findings of the inspection teams and shall inform the parties of the measures which should be taken for the settlement of the incident, ending of the violation or removal of the threat of violation.

Article 33

When the Joint Commission is unable to reach an agreement on the interpretation of a provision or on the appraisal of a fact, the International Commission shall be informed of the disputed question. Its recommendations shall be sent directly to the parties and shall be notified to the Joint Commission.

Article 34

The recommendations of the International Commission shall be adopted by majority vote, subject to the provisions contained in Article 35. If the votes are equally divided, the chairman's vote shall be decisive.

The International Commission may make recommendations concerning amendments and additions which should be made to the provisions of the Agreement on the cessation of hostilities in Laos, in order to ensure more effective execution of the said Agreement. These recommendations shall be adopted unanimously.

Article 35

On questions concerning violations, or threats of violations, which might lead to a resumption of hostilities, and in particular,

- (a) refusal by foreign armed forces to effect the movements provided for in the withdrawal plan,
- (b) violation or threat of violation of the country's integrity, by foreign armed forces,

the decisions of the International Commission must be unanimous.

Article 36

If one of the parties refuses to put a recommendation of the International Commission into effect, the parties concerned or the Commission itself shall inform the members of the Geneva Conference.

If the International Commission does not reach unanimity in the cases provided for in Article 35, it shall transmit a majority report and one or more minority reports to the members of the Conference.

The International Commission shall inform the members of the Conference of all cases in which its work is being hindered.

Article 37

The International Commission shall be set up at the time of the cessation of hostilities in Indo-China in order that it may be able to fulfil the tasks prescribed in Article 27.

Article 38

The International Commission for Supervision and Control in Laos shall act in close co-operation with the International Commissions in Viet-Nam and Cambodia.

The Secretaries-General of these three Commissions shall be responsible for co-ordinating their work and for relations between them.

Article 39

The International Commission for Supervision and Control in Laos may, after consultation with the International Commissions in Cambodia and Viet-Nam, and having regard to the development of the situation in Cambodia and Viet-Nam, progressively reduce its activities. Such a decision must be adopted unanimously.

CHAPTER VII

Article 40

All the provisions of the present Agreement, save paragraph (a) of Article 2, shall enter into force at 24 hours (Geneva time) on July 22, 1954.

Article 41

Done at Geneva (Switzerland) on July 20, 1954, at 24 hours, in the French language.

For the Commander-in-Chief of the French Union in Indo-China:

DELTIEL,
Général de Brigade

For the Commander-in-Chief of the fighting units of "Pathet-Lao" and for the Commander-in-Chief of the People's Army of Viet-Nam:

TA-QUANG-BUU
Vice-Minister of National Defense of the Democratic Republic of Viet-Nam

396.1 GE/7-2154

Agreement on the Cessation of Hostilities in Cambodia<sup>1</sup>

CONFIDENTIAL

GENEVA, 21 July 1954.

IC/52

CHAPTER I

PRINCIPLES AND CONDITIONS GOVERNING EXECUTION OF THE CEASE-FIRE

Article 1

As from twenty-third July 1954 at 0800 hours (Pekin mean time) complete cessation of all hostilities throughout Cambodia shall be ordered and enforced by the Commanders of the Armed Forces of the two parties for all troops and personnel of the land, naval and air forces under their control.

Article 2

In conformity with the principle of a simultaneous cease-fire throughout Indo-China, there shall be a simultaneous cessation of hostilities throughout Cambodia, in all the combat areas and for all the forces of the two parties.

To obviate any mistake or misunderstanding and to ensure that both the ending of hostilities and all other operations arising from cessation of hostilities are in fact simultaneous,

(a) due allowance being made for the time actually required for transmission of the cease-fire order down to the lowest échelons of the combatant forces of both sides, the two parties are agreed that the complete and simultaneous cease-fire throughout the territory of Cambodia shall become effective at 8 hours (local time) on 7 August 1954. It is agreed that Peking mean time shall be taken as local time.

(b) each side shall comply strictly with the time-table jointly agreed upon between the parties for the execution of all operations connected with the cessation of hostilities.

Article 3

All operations and movements connected with the execution of the cessation of hostilities must be carried out in a safe and orderly fashion.

---

<sup>1</sup>This document was transmitted to the Department of State in telegram Secto 715, July 21. (751G.00/7-2154)

This agreement was also printed in American Foreign Policy, 1950-1955: Basic Documents, pp. 767-775; Cmd. 9239, pp. 11-18; and Conférence de Genève, pp. 453-460.

The following printed notation appeared on the source text: "The two parties have agreed that this text shall not be published until further notice."

Revisions made on the source text were made in accordance with a note issued by the International Secretariat, July 24, 1954. (396.1 GE/7-2454)

(a) Within a number of days to be determined by the Commanders of both sides, after the cease-fire has been achieved, each party shall be responsible for removing and neutralizing mines, booby traps, explosives and any other dangerous devices placed by it. Should it be impossible to complete removal and neutralization before departure, the party concerned will mark the spot by placing visible signs. Sites thus cleared of mines and any other obstacles to the free movement of the personnel of the International Commission and the Joint Commission shall be notified to the latter by the local military Commanders.

(b) Any incidents that may arise between the forces of the two sides and may result from mistakes or misunderstandings shall be settled on the spot so as to restrict their scope.

(c) During the days immediately preceding the cease-fire each party undertakes not to engage in any large-scale operation between the time when the Agreement on the cessation of hostilities is signed at Geneva and the time when the cease-fire comes into effect.

CHAPTER II

PROCEDURE FOR THE WITHDRAWAL OF THE FOREIGN ARMED FORCES AND FOREIGN MILITARY PERSONNEL FROM THE TERRITORY OF CAMBODIA

Article 4

1. The withdrawal outside the territory of Cambodia shall apply to:

(a) the armed forces and military combatant personnel of the French Union;

(b) the combatant formations of all types which have entered the territory of Cambodia from other countries or regions of the peninsula;

(c) all the foreign elements (or Cambodians not natives of Cambodia) in the military formations of any kind or holding supervisory functions in all political or military, administrative, economic, financial or social bodies, having worked in liaison with the Viet-Nam military units.

2. The withdrawals of the forces and elements referred to in the foregoing paragraphs and their military supplies and materials must be completed within 90 days reckoning from the entry into force of the present Agreement.

3. The two parties shall guarantee that the withdrawals of all the forces will be effected in accordance with the purposes of the Agreement, and that they will not permit any hostile action or take any action likely to create difficulties for such withdrawals. They shall assist one another as far as possible.

4. While the withdrawals are proceeding, the two parties shall not permit any destruction or sabotage of public property or any attack on the life or property of the civilian population. They shall not permit any interference with the local civil administration.

5. The Joint Commission and the International Supervisory Commission shall supervise the execution of measures to ensure the safety of the forces during withdrawal.

6. The Joint Commission in Cambodia shall determine the detailed procedures for the withdrawals of the forces on the basis of the above-mentioned principles.

CHAPTER III

OTHER QUESTIONS

A. The Khmer armed forces, natives of Cambodia.

Article 5. The two parties shall undertake that within thirty days after the cease-fire order has been proclaimed, the Khmer Resistance Forces shall be demobilized on the spot; simultaneously, the troops of the Royal Khmer Army shall abstain from taking any hostile action against the Khmer Resistance Forces.

Article 6. The situation of these nationals shall be decided in the light of the Declaration made by the Delegation of Cambodia at the Geneva Conference, reading as follows:

“The Royal Government of Cambodia,

In the desire to ensure harmony and agreement among the peoples of the Kingdom,

Declares itself resolved to take the necessary measures to integrate all citizens, without discrimination, into the national community and to guarantee them the enjoyment of the rights and freedoms for which the Constitution of the Kingdom provides;

Affirms that all Cambodian citizens may freely participate as electors or candidates in general elections by secret ballot.”

No reprisals shall be taken against the said nationals or their families, each national being entitled to the enjoyment, without any discrimination as compared with other nationals, of all constitutional guarantees concerning the protection of person and property and democratic freedoms.

Applicants therefor may be accepted for service in the Regular Army or local police formations if they satisfy the conditions required for current recruitment of the Army and Police Corps.

The same procedure shall apply to those persons who have returned to civilian life and who may apply for civilian employment on the same terms as other nationals.

B. Ban on the Introduction of Fresh Troops, Military Personnel, Armaments and Munitions. Military Bases.

Article 7. In accordance with the Declaration made by the Delegation of Cambodia at 2400 hours on 20 July 1954 at the Geneva Conference of Foreign Ministers:

"The Royal Government of Cambodia will not join in any agreement with other States, if this agreement carries for Cambodia the obligation to enter into a military alliance not in conformity with the principles of the Charter of the United Nations, or, as long as its security is not threatened, the obligation to establish bases on Cambodian territory for the military forces of foreign powers.

"During the period which will elapse between the date of the cessation of hostilities in Viet-Nam and that of the final settlement of political problems in this country, the Royal Government of Cambodia will not solicit foreign aid in war material, personnel or instructors except for the purpose of the effective defence of the territory."

C. Civilian Internees and Prisoners of War.—Burial.

Article 8. The liberation and repatriation of all civilian internees and prisoners of war detained by each of the two parties at the coming into force of the present Agreement shall be carried out under the following conditions:

(a) All prisoners of war and civilian internees of whatever nationality, captured since the beginning of hostilities in Cambodia during military operations or in any other circumstances of war and in any part of the territory of Cambodia shall be liberated after the entry into force of the present Armistice Agreement.

(b) The term "civilian internees" is understood to mean all persons who, having in any way contributed to the political and armed struggle between the two parties, have been arrested for that reason or kept in detention by either party during the period of hostilities.

(c) All foreign prisoners of war captured by either party shall be surrendered to the appropriate authorities of the other party, who shall give them all possible assistance in proceeding to the destination of their choice.

Article 9. After the entry into force of the present Agreement, if the place of burial is known and the existence of graves has been established, the Cambodian commander shall, within a specified period, authorize the exhumation and removal of the bodies of deceased military personnel of the other party, including the bodies of prisoners of war or personnel deceased and buried on Cambodian territory.

The Joint Commission shall fix the procedures by which this task is to be carried out and the time limit within which it must be completed.

CHAPTER IV

JOINT COMMISSION AND INTERNATIONAL COMMISSION FOR SUPERVISION
AND CONTROL IN CAMBODIA*Article 10*

Responsibility for the execution of the Agreement on the cessation of hostilities shall rest with the parties.

Article 11

An International Commission shall be responsible for control and supervision of the application of the provisions of the Agreement on the cessation of hostilities in Cambodia. It shall be composed of representatives of the following States: Canada, India and Poland. It shall be presided over by the representative of India. Its headquarters shall be at Phnom-Penh.

Article 12

The International Commission shall set up fixed and mobile inspection teams, composed of an equal number of officers appointed by each of the above-mentioned States.

The fixed teams shall be located at the following points: Phnom-Penh, Kompong-Cham, Kratié, Svay-Rieng, Kampot. These points of location may be altered at a later date by agreement between the Government of Cambodia and the International Commission.

The zones of action of the mobile teams shall be the regions bordering on the land and sea frontiers of Cambodia. The mobile teams shall have the right to move freely within the limits of their zones of action, and they shall receive from the local civil and military authorities all facilities they may require for the fulfilment of their tasks (provision of personnel, access to documents needed for supervision, summoning of witnesses needed for enquiries, security and freedom of movement of the inspection teams, etc.). They shall have at their disposal such modern means of transport, observation and communication as they may require.

Outside the zones of action defined above, the mobile teams may, with the agreement of the Cambodian command, move about as required by the tasks assigned to them under the present Agreement.

Article 13

The International Commission shall be responsible for supervising the execution by the parties of the provisions of the present Agreement. For this purpose it shall fulfil the functions of control, observation, inspection and investigation connected with the implementation of the provisions of the Agreement on the cessation of hostilities, and shall in particular:

(a) control the withdrawal of foreign forces in accordance with the provisions of the Agreement on the cessation of hostilities and see that frontiers are respected;

(b) control the release of prisoners of war and civilian internees;

(c) supervise, at ports and airfields and along all the frontiers of Cambodia, the application of the Cambodian declaration concerning the introduction into Cambodia of military personnel and war materials on grounds of foreign assistance.

Article 14

A Joint Commission shall be set up to facilitate the implementation of the clauses relating to the withdrawal of foreign forces.

The Joint Commission may form joint groups the number of which shall be decided by mutual agreement between the parties.

The Joint Commission shall facilitate the implementation of the clauses of the Agreement on the cessation of hostilities relating to the simultaneous and general cease-fire in Cambodia for all regular and irregular armed forces of the two parties.

It shall assist the parties in the implementation of the said clauses; it shall ensure liaison between them for the purpose of preparing and carrying out plans for the implementation of the said clauses; it shall endeavour to settle any disputes between the parties arising out of the implementation of these clauses. The Joint Commission may send joint groups to follow the forces in their movements; such groups shall be disbanded once the withdrawal plans have been carried out.

Article 15

The Joint Commission shall be composed of an equal number of representatives of the Commands of the parties concerned.

Article 16

The International Commission shall, through the medium of the inspection teams mentioned above and as soon as possible, either on its own initiative or at the request of the Joint Commission or of one of the parties, undertake the necessary investigations both documentary and on the ground.

Article 17

The inspection teams shall transmit to the International Commission the results of their supervision, investigations and observations;

furthermore, they shall draw up such special reports as they may consider necessary or as may be requested from them by the Commission. In the case of a disagreement within the teams, the findings of each member shall be transmitted to the Commission.

Article 18

If an inspection team is unable to settle an incident or considers that there is a violation or threat of a serious violation, the International Commission shall be informed; the Commission shall examine the reports and findings of the inspection teams and shall inform the parties of the measures to be taken for the settlement of the incident, ending of the violation or removal of the threat of violation.

Article 19

When the Joint Commission is unable to reach agreement on the interpretation of a provision or on the appraisal of a fact, the International Commission shall be informed of the disputed question. Its recommendations shall be sent directly to the parties and shall be notified to the Joint Commission.

Article 20

The recommendations of the International Commission shall be adopted by a majority vote, subject to the provisions of article 21. If the votes are equally divided, the Chairman's vote shall be decisive.

The International Commission may make recommendations concerning amendments and additions which should be made to the provisions of the Agreement on the cessation of hostilities in Cambodia, in order to ensure more effective execution of the said Agreement. These recommendations shall be adopted unanimously.

Article 21

On questions concerning violations, or threats of violations, which might lead to a resumption of hostilities, and in particular,

(a) refusal by foreign armed forces to effect the movements provided for in the withdrawal plan,

(b) violation or threat of violation of the country's integrity by foreign armed forces,

the decisions of the International Commission must be unanimous.

Article 22

If one of the parties refuses to put a recommendation of the International Commission into effect, the parties concerned or the Commission itself shall inform the members of the Geneva Conference.

If the International Commission does not reach unanimity in the cases provided for in article 21, it shall transmit a majority report and one or more minority reports to members of the Conference.

The International Commission shall inform the members of the Conference of all cases in which its work is being hindered.

Article 23

The International Commission shall be set up at the time of the cessation of hostilities in Indo-China in order that it may be able to perform the tasks prescribed in article 13.

Article 24

The International Commission for Supervision and Control in Cambodia shall act in close cooperation with the International Commissions in Viet-Nam and Laos.

The Secretaries-General of these three Commissions shall be responsible for coordinating their work and for relations between them.

Article 25

The International Commission for Supervision and Control in Cambodia may, after consultation with the International Commissions in Viet-Nam and in Laos, and having regard to the development of the situation in Viet-Nam and in Laos, progressively reduce its activities. Such a decision must be adopted unanimously.

CHAPTER V

IMPLEMENTATION

Article 26

The Commanders of the forces of the two parties shall ensure that persons under their respective commands who violate any of the provisions of the present Agreement are suitably punished.

Article 27

The present Agreement on the cessation of hostilities shall apply to all the armed forces of either party.

Article 28

The Commanders of the forces of the two parties shall afford full protection and all possible assistance and co-operation to the Joint Commission and to the International Commission and its inspection teams in the performance of their functions.

Article 29

The Joint Commission, composed of an equal number of representatives of the Commands of the two parties, shall assist the parties in the implementation of all the clauses of the Agreement on the cessation of hostilities, ensure liaison between the two parties, draw up plans for the implementation of the Agreement, and endeavour to settle any dispute arising out of the implementation of the said clauses and plans.

Article 30

The costs involved in the operation of the Joint Commission shall be shared equally between the two parties.

Article 31

The signatories of the present Agreement on the cessation of hostilities and their successors in their functions shall be responsible for the observance and enforcement of the terms and provisions thereof. The Commanders of the forces of the two parties shall, within their respective commands, take all steps and make all arrangements necessary to ensure full compliance with all the provisions of the present Agreement by all personnel under their command.

Article 32

The procedures laid down in the present Agreement shall, whenever necessary be examined by the Commands of the two parties, and if necessary, defined more specifically by the Joint Commission.

Article 33

All the provisions of the present Agreement shall enter into force at 00 hours (Geneva time) on 23 July 1954.

Done at Geneva on 20 July 1954.

For the Commander-in-Chief of the Units of the Khmer Resistance Forces and for the Commander-in-Chief of the Viet-Namese Military Units

For the Commander-in-Chief of the Khmer National Armed Forces

TA-QUANG-BUU

Vice-Minister of National Defence of the Democratic Republic of Viet-Nam

General NHIEK TIOULONG

396.1 GE/7-2154

The Final Declaration on Indochina<sup>1</sup>

GENEVA, 21 July 1954.

IC/43 Rev. 2

Final Declaration, dated the 21st July, 1954, of the Geneva Conference on the problem of restoring peace in Indo-China, in which the representatives of Cambodia, the Democratic Republic of Viet-Nam, France, Laos, the People's Republic of China, the State of Viet-Nam, the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, the United Kingdom, and the United States of America took part.

1. The Conference takes note of the agreements ending hostilities in Cambodia, Laos and Viet-Nam and organizing international control and the supervision of the execution of the provisions of these agreements.

2. The Conference expresses satisfaction at the ending of hostilities in Cambodia, Laos and Viet-Nam; the Conference expresses its conviction that the execution of the provisions set out in the present declaration and in the agreements on the cessation of hostilities will permit Cambodia, Laos and Viet-Nam henceforth to play their part, in full independence and sovereignty, in the peaceful community of nations.

3. The Conference takes note of the declarations made by the Governments of Cambodia and of Laos of their intention to adopt measures permitting all citizens to take their place in the national community, in particular by participating in the next general elections, which, in conformity with the constitution of each of these countries, shall take place in the course of the year 1955, by secret ballot and in conditions of respect for fundamental freedoms.

4. The Conference takes note of the clauses in the agreement on the cessation of hostilities in Viet-Nam prohibiting the introduction into Viet-Nam of foreign troops and military personnel as well as of all kinds of arms and munitions. The Conference also takes note of the declarations made by the Governments of Cambodia and Laos of their resolution not to request foreign aid, whether in war material, in personnel or in instructors except for the purpose of the effective defence of their territory and, in the case of Laos, to the extent defined by the agreements on the cessation of hostilities in Laos.

---

<sup>1</sup> This document was transmitted to the Department of State in telegram Secto 698, July 21, p. 1485. Revisions issued by the International Secretariat were transmitted to the Department in telegram Secto 709, July 21, p. 1494.

This declaration was also printed in American Foreign Policy, 1950-1955: Basic Documents, pp. 785-787; the Department of State Bulletin, Aug. 2, 1954, p. 164; Cmd. 9239, pp. 9-11; and Conférence de Genève, pp. 467-468.

5. The Conference takes note of the clauses in the agreement on the cessation of hostilities in Viet-Nam to the effect that no military base under the control of a foreign State may be established in the regrouping zones of the two parties, the latter having the obligation to see that the zones allotted to them shall not constitute part of any military alliance and shall not be utilized for the resumption of hostilities or in the service of an aggressive policy. The Conference also takes note of the declarations of the Governments of Cambodia and Laos to the effect that they will not join in any agreement with other States if this agreement includes the obligation to participate in a military alliance not in conformity with the principles of the Charter of the United Nations or, in the case of Laos, with the principles of the agreement on the cessation of hostilities in Laos or, so long as their security is not threatened, the obligation to establish bases on Cambodian or Laotian territory for the military forces of foreign Powers.

6. The Conference recognizes that the essential purpose of the agreement relating to Viet-Nam is to settle military questions with a view to ending hostilities and that the military demarcation line is provisional and should not in any way be interpreted as constituting a political or territorial boundary. The conference expresses its conviction that the execution of the provisions set out in the present declaration and in the agreement on the cessation of hostilities creates the necessary basis for the achievement in the near future of a political settlement in Viet-Nam.

7. The Conference declares that, so far as Viet-Nam is concerned, the settlement of political problems, effected on the basis of respect for the principles of independence, unity and territorial integrity, shall permit the Viet-Nameese people to enjoy the fundamental freedoms, guaranteed by democratic institutions established as a result of free general elections by secret ballot. In order to ensure that sufficient progress in the restoration of peace has been made, and that all the necessary conditions obtain for free expression of the national will, general elections shall be held in July 1956, under the supervision of an international commission composed of representatives of the Member States of the International Supervisory Commission, referred to in the agreement on the cessation of hostilities. Consultations will be held on this subject between the competent representative authorities of the two zones from 20 July 1955 onwards.

8. The provisions of the agreements on the cessation of hostilities intended to ensure the protection of individuals and of property must be most strictly applied and must, in particular, allow everyone in Viet-Nam to decide freely in which zone he wishes to live.

9. The competent representative authorities of the Northern and Southern zones of Viet-Nam, as well as the authorities of Laos and Cambodia, must not permit any individual or collective reprisals against persons who have collaborated in any way with one of the parties during the war, or against members of such persons' families.

10. The Conference takes note of the declaration of the Government of the French Republic to the effect that it is ready to withdraw its troops from the territory of Cambodia, Laos and Viet-Nam, at the request of the governments concerned and within periods which shall be fixed by agreement between the parties except in the cases where, by agreement between the two parties, a certain number of French troops shall remain at specified points and for a specified time.

11. The Conference takes note of the declaration of the French Government to the effect that for the settlement of all the problems connected with the re-establishment and consolidation of peace in Cambodia, Laos and Viet-Nam, the French Government will proceed from the principle of respect for the independence and sovereignty, unity and territorial integrity of Cambodia, Laos and Viet-Nam.

12. In their relations with Cambodia, Laos and Viet-Nam, each member of the Geneva Conference undertakes to respect the sovereignty, the independence, the unity and the territorial integrity of the above-mentioned states, and to refrain from any interference in their internal affairs.

13. The members of the Conference agree to consult one another on any question which may be referred to them by the International Supervisory Commission, in order to study such measures as may prove necessary to ensure that the agreements on the cessation of hostilities in Cambodia, Laos and Viet-Nam are respected.

---

396.1 GE/7-2154

Declaration by the Royal Government of Laos (Reference: Article 3 of the Final Declaration)<sup>1</sup>

GENEVA, 21 July 1954.

IC/45 Rev. 1

The Royal Government of Laos,

In the desire to ensure harmony and agreement among the peoples of the Kingdom,

Declares itself resolved to take the necessary measures to integrate all citizens, without discrimination, into the national community and to guarantee them the enjoyment of the rights and freedoms for which the Constitution of the Kingdom provides;

---

<sup>1</sup>This declaration was also printed in Cmd. 9239, p. 41 and in Conférence de Genève, p. 461.

Affirms that all Laotian citizens may freely participate as electors or candidates in general elections by secret ballot;

Announces, furthermore, that it will promulgate measures to provide for special representation in the Royal Administration of the provinces of Phang Saly and Sam Neua during the interval between the cessation of hostilities and the general elections of the interests of Laotian nationals who did not support the Royal forces during hostilities.

---

396.1 GE/7-2154

Declaration by the Royal Government of Cambodia (Reference: Article 3 of the Final Declaration)<sup>1</sup>

GENEVA, 21 July 1954.

IC/44 Rev. 1

The Royal Government of Cambodia,

In the desire to ensure harmony and agreement among the peoples of the Kingdom,

Declares itself resolved to take the necessary measures to integrate all citizens, without discrimination, into the national community and to guarantee them the enjoyment of the rights and freedoms for which the Constitution of the Kingdom provides;

Affirms that all Cambodian citizens may freely participate as electors or candidates in general elections by secret ballot.

---

<sup>1</sup> This declaration was also printed in Cmd. 9239, p. 40 and in Conférence de Genève, p. 462.

---

396.1 GE/7-2154

Declaration by the Royal Government of Laos (Reference: Articles 4 and 5 of the Final Declaration)<sup>1</sup>

GENEVA, 21 July 1954.

IC/47 Rev. 1

The Royal Government of Laos is resolved never to pursue a policy of aggression and will never permit the territory of Laos to be used in furtherance of such a policy.

---

<sup>1</sup> This declaration was also printed in Cmd. 9239, pp. 41-42 and in Conférence de Genève, p. 463.

The Royal Government of Laos will never join in any agreement with other States if this agreement includes the obligation for the Royal Government of Laos to participate in a military alliance not in conformity with the principles of the Charter of the United Nations or with the principles of the agreement on the cessation of hostilities or, unless its security is threatened, the obligation to establish bases on Laotian territory for military forces of foreign powers.

The Royal Government of Laos is resolved to settle its international disputes by peaceful means so that international peace and security and justice are not endangered.

During the period between the cessation of hostilities in Viet-Nam and the final settlement of that country's political problems, the Royal Government of Laos will not request foreign aid, whether in war material, in personnel or in instructors, except for the purpose of its effective territorial defence and to the extent defined by the agreement on the cessation of hostilities.

---

396.1 GE/7-2154

Declaration by the Royal Government of Cambodia (Reference: Articles 4 and 5 of the Final Declaration)<sup>1</sup>

GENEVA, 21 July 1954.

IC/46 Rev. 2

The Royal Government of Cambodia is resolved never to take part in an aggressive policy and never to permit the territory of Cambodia to be utilised in the service of such a policy.

The Royal Government of Cambodia will not join in any agreement with other states, if this agreement carries for Cambodia the obligation to enter into a military alliance not in conformity with the principles of the Charter of the United Nations, or, as long as its security is not threatened, the obligation to establish bases on Cambodian territory for the military forces of foreign powers.

The Royal Government of Cambodia is resolved to settle its international disputes by peaceful means, in such a manner as not to endanger peace, international security and justice.

During the period which will elapse between the date of the cessation of hostilities in Viet-Nam and that of the final settlement of political problems in this country, the Royal Government of Cambodia will not solicit foreign aid in war material, personnel or instructors except for the purpose of the effective defence of the territory.

---

<sup>1</sup> This declaration was also printed in Cmd. 9239, p. 41 and in Conférence de Genève, p. 464.

396.1 GE/7-2154

Declaration by the Government of the French Republic (Reference: Article 10 of the Final Declaration)<sup>1</sup>

GENEVA, 21 July 1954.

IC/48 Rev. 1

The Government of the French Republic declares that it is ready to withdraw its troops from the territory of Cambodia, Laos and Viet-Nam, at the request of the Governments concerned and within a period which shall be fixed by agreement between the parties, except in the cases, where by agreement between the two parties, a certain number of French troops shall remain at specified points and for a specified time.

---

<sup>1</sup>This declaration was also printed in Cmd. 9239, p. 42 and in Conférence de Genève, p. 466.

396.1 GE/7-2154

Declaration by the Government of the French Republic (Reference: Article 11 of the Final Declaration)<sup>1</sup>

GENEVA, 21 July 1954.

IC/49 Rev. 1

For the settlement of all the problems connected with the re-establishment and consolidation of peace in Cambodia, Laos and Viet-Nam, the French Government will proceed from the principle of respect for the independence and sovereignty, the unity and territorial integrity of Cambodia, Laos and Viet-Nam.

---

<sup>1</sup>This declaration was also printed in Cmd. 9239, p. 42 and in Conférence de Genève, p. 465.

396.1 GE/7-2154

Draft Submitted by the Delegation of the State of Vietnam (Amendment for Insertion Between Article 11 and Present Article 12 of the Final Declaration)<sup>1</sup>

GENEVA, 20 July 1954.

IC/50

The Conference takes note of the declaration of the Government of the State of Viet-Nam undertaking:

—to make and support every effort to re-establish a real and lasting peace in Viet-Nam;

---

<sup>1</sup>For the action taken by the Conference on this draft proposed amendment, see infra.

—not to use force to resist the procedures for carrying the cease-fire into effect, although it deems them to be inconsistent with the will of the nation;

—to pursue the achievement of the aspirations of the Viet-Nam people with all the means conferred upon it by the national independence and sovereignty solemnly recognized by France.

---

396.1 GE/7-2154

Proposal for Insertion in the Final Act, Submitted by the Delegation of the State of Vietnam<sup>1</sup>

GENEVA, 21 July 1954.

IC/53

The Conference takes note of the declaration of the Government of the State of Viet-Nam to the effect that it undertakes:

To make and to support every effort for the restoration of peace in Viet-Nam;

Not to use force to oppose the agreed procedure for execution of the cease-fire, despite the objections and reservations it has expressed, in particular in its final statement.

---

<sup>1</sup> For text of the Vietnamese proposal, see supra.

V. POST-CONFERENCE DOCUMENTS: VIEWS ON THE ARMISTICE AGREEMENTS; STATEMENTS BY SECRETARY OF STATE DULLES AND UNDER SECRETARY OF STATE SMITH; LEGAL ANALYSIS OF THE GENEVA ARMISTICE AGREEMENT RESTRICTIONS; ARRANGEMENTS PERTAINING TO THE INTERNATIONAL CONTROL COMMISSION (JULY 22–AUGUST 11)

396.1 GE/7-2254 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

CONFIDENTIAL

GENEVA, July 22, 1954—2 p. m.

Secto 725. Repeated information London 32, USUN New York 1. Caccia, UK delegate, said he wished inform Department that Prince Wan had agreed with him early in July that, if an armistice agreement was reached in Geneva, Thai appeal would not be pressed for hearing at a special session of the assembly but would wait for the next regular session which convenes in September.

Caccia said UK agreed with this view and now that an agreement had been reached in Geneva, was advising Dixon in New York of UK view and asking he meet Ambassador Lodge and Hoppenot, French delegate, to discuss matter, and with their agreement, take matter up with Wan. It is further UK view that when next regular session of the assembly convenes that matter should then be reviewed in light of conditions as it would appear at that time. If Geneva settlement is working well, then Thai appeal should not be presented but held in further abeyance.

SMITH

396.1 GE/7-2254 : Telegram

The Consul at Geneva (Gowen) to the Department of State

PRIORITY

GENEVA, July 22, 1954.

129. Mytel 127.<sup>1</sup> Under Secretary and party left for London 1530 hours Geneva time.

GOWEN

---

<sup>1</sup> Dated July 22, not printed.

Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 261 : Telegram

The United States Delegation to the Department of State

GENEVA, July 22, 1954.

Secto 728. Repeated information Saigon 102. Tran Van Van, former Minister of National Economy and claiming to be Geneva observer of Vietnamese Front of National Safety (Hoa Hao, Cao Dai, Binh Xuyen, and Catholics) left copies of prise de position with USDel this morning.<sup>1</sup>

Van supports position Vietnamese delegation at conference, but criticizes it for not walking out at last minute. He attacks French Colonialists and Viet Minh for collusion and sell-out to Vietnam, accusing former of wishing to hold on to richest part of country, states that the Front will take up the fight for independence and unity.

Statement being pouched Department and Saigon.

JOHNSON

---

<sup>1</sup> Not printed.

751G.00/7-2354 : Telegram

The Consul at Geneva (Gowen) to the Department of State

SECRET

GENEVA, July 23, 1954—11 a. m.

135. For the Under Secretary and pass Defense. Following is substance remarks made by General Deltiel representative of CG French Union forces in military negotiations with Viet Minh to Dwan 22 July at airport prior departure of General Smith.

Deltiel said Mendes-France asked him to make known to General Smith Deltiel's view about armistice agreements from military point of view but crowded schedule had prevented his doing it personally. He asked his remarks be passed on General Smith.

Deltiel said signature Vietnam and Laos agreements "extremely painful" for him as military man since they represented a partial capitulation. He felt however that terms of agreements were very best that could have been obtained under circumstances. Task now remaining is to strengthen military position in retained Vietnam. This will be complicated by uncooperative attitude Vietnam Government, divided loyalties of indigenous groups specifically Cao Daists and lack of dynamic Vietnam leadership [" "] like that of Syngman Rhee". Deltiel made especially bitter references to Bao Dai for staying away while country in crisis.

As for military demarcation line Deltiel said vicinity 18th parallel and Chalk Hills region only natural defensive position with narrow coastal strip on east and almost impenetrable mountains with few passes. He held firm in negotiations on this line. Decision to drop to 17th parallel that of Mendes-France. Song Ben Hat River site of present line far less desirable from military point of view.

Three hundred day period for movement into regroupment zones more than adequate for orderly evacuation of delta. Deltiel seemed quite satisfied on this point, saying initial French position consciously high for bargaining purposes. However he expressed serious anxiety over difficulties of disengagement and separation of forces in delta during initial phase. French Union forces must withdraw lines to smaller perimeter at same time Viet Minh now within battle position pass through to outside. Meanwhile possibility further defection Vietnamese National forces is possible, and trouble with population under Viet Minh incitement also a danger.

Some forces withdrawn from delta will be disembarked at Tourane to reinforce demarcation line and northern part regroupment zone, and others at more southern ports.

In response to question whether he thought "Pathet Lao" forces who chose neither to withdraw with Viet Minh nor to be disarmed on the spot would create problem in provinces of Phang Saly and Sam Neua after movement there, Deltiel said he thought they could be handled once disassociated from Viet Minh and provided Viet Minh actually withdrew as required. On this point, as on all provisions agreements, he said, much depends on whether international commission can bring about compliance with terms.

GOWEN

---

751G.00/7-2354 : Telegram

The Consul at Geneva (Gowen) to the Department of State

CONFIDENTIAL

GENEVA, July 23, 1954—3 p. m.

138. Repeated information Saigon 103. Chou En-lai gave dinner last night for all Indo-Chinese delegations. Tran Van Do had "previous engagement" but sent Ngo Dinh Luyen to represent him. Nong Kimny refused to attend. Tioulong, although present, expressed his great disgust with affair.

GOWEN

---

751G.00/7-2354 : Telegram

The Consul at Geneva (Gowen) to the Department of State

SECRET

GENEVA, July 23, 1954—5 p. m.

142. Repeated information Paris 134, Saigon 104. Tran Van Van called on Bonsal today. Although he represents himself as delegate of Cao Dai Pope and of Commander of Binh Xuyen his closest connection appears to be Col. Trinh Minh The, former dissident Cao Daist. Van was also observer at Geneva Conference on behalf of National Salvation Front said to be composed of Cao Dai, Hoa Hao, Binh Xuyen and Catholics.

Van is bitterly anti-French. He believes nothing politically constructive can be done in Vietnam in presence of French whom he credits with worst intentions. Nevertheless he recognizes early departure French Expeditionary Corps would leave a vacuum which Vietnam Army could not fill at present. He is most anxious for all forms of US aid.

Van states that although movements he represents are not all that might be desired, being in fact somewhat corrupt, still their armed forces are valid assets and should form basis of Maquis if needed. He is contemptuous of Catholic forces in south and of Leroy. He describes Tam and Huu as more French than the French.

Van describes Diem, Do and their associates as well meaning bourgeois devoid of the Nationalistic revolutionary fervor required by present situation. Van would like to proceed to US in order to propagate his ideas and inform American people about the situation in Vietnam. He will get in touch with Gibson Paris Embassy about his plans. Saigon's recommendations as to how he should be handled would be appreciated.

Before embarking upon his future activities Van will spend another week here followed by a month at Vichy taking the cure.

GOWEN

---

Editorial Note

At a news conference on July 23 the Secretary of State made the following statement:

"The Geneva negotiations reflected the military developments in Indochina. After nearly 8 years of war the forces of the French Union had lost control of nearly one-half of Viet-Nam, their hold on the balance was precarious, and the French people did not desire to prolong the war.

"These basic facts inevitably dominated the Indochina phase of the Geneva Conference and led to settlements which, as President Eisenhower said, contain many features which we do not like [see editorial note, page 1503].

"Since this was so, and since the United States itself was neither a belligerent in Indochina nor subject to compulsions which applied to others, we did not become a party to the Conference results. We merely noted them and said that, in accordance with the United Nations Charter, we would not seek by force to overthrow the settlement. We went on to affirm our dedication to the principle of self-determination of peoples and our hope that the agreements would permit Cambodia, Laos, and Viet-Nam to be really sovereign and independent nations.

"The important thing from now on is not to mourn the past but to seize the future opportunity to prevent the loss in northern Viet-Nam from leading to the extension of communism throughout Southeast Asia and the Southwest Pacific. In this effort all of the free nations concerned should profit by the lessons of the past.

"One lesson is that resistance to communism needs popular support, and this in turn means that the people should feel that they are defending their own national institutions. One of the good aspects of the Geneva Conference is that it advances the truly independent status of Cambodia, Laos, and southern Viet-Nam. Prime Minister Mendès-France said yesterday that instructions had been given to the French representatives in Viet-Nam to complete by July 30 precise projects for the transfers of authority which will give reality to the independence which France had promised. This independence is already a fact in Laos and Cambodia, and it was demonstrated at Geneva, notably by the Government of Cambodia. The evolution from colonialism to national independence is thus about to be completed in Indochina, and the free governments of this area should from now on be able to enlist the loyalty of their people to maintain their independence as against Communist colonialism.

"A second lesson which should be learned is that arrangements for collective defense need to be made in advance of aggression, not after it is under way. The United States for over a year advocated united action in the area, but this proved not to be practical under the conditions which existed. We believe, however, that now it will be practical to bring about collective arrangements to promote the security of the free peoples of Southeast Asia. Prompt steps will be taken in this direction. In this connection we should bear in mind that the problem is not merely one of deterring open armed aggression but of preventing Communist subversion which, taking advantage of economic dislocations and social injustice, might weaken and finally overthrow the non-Communist governments.

"If the free nations which have a stake in this area will now work together to avail of present opportunities in the light of past experience, then the loss of the present may lead to a gain for the future."

The Secretary's statement was released as Department of State press release 400, July 23, and is also printed in the Department of State Bulletin, August 2, 1954, pages 163-164.

---

396.1 GE/7-2354

Statement by the Under Secretary of State (Smith)<sup>1</sup>

WASHINGTON, July 23, 1954.

While the agreements reached at the Geneva Conference contain features which the United States does not like, I am nevertheless convinced that the results are the best that could be expected in the circumstances.

---

<sup>1</sup>Smith made this statement upon arrival in Washington from the Geneva Conference.

The position of the United States was stated officially in the unilateral U.S. Declaration made at Geneva, and clearly outlined in the President's statement of July 21.<sup>2</sup> I am also convinced that the decision regarding our representation during the closing, critical hours at Geneva was wise and effective, both as to timing and tactics. Also, I might point out that, when we analyze and discuss the results of Geneva it will be well to remember that diplomacy is rarely able to gain at the conference table what cannot be gained or held on the battlefield.

<sup>2</sup> For text, see editorial note, p. 1503.

396.1 GE/7-2754

Memorandum by the Legal Adviser (Phleger) to the Secretary of State<sup>1</sup>

SECRET

WASHINGTON, July 27, 1954.

Subject: Geneva Armistice Agreement Restrictions on Cambodia, Laos, and Vietnam

This memorandum is designed to give an analysis<sup>2</sup> of the restrictions placed on Cambodia, Laos, and Vietnam in the Armistice Agreements and Declarations made at the recent Geneva Conference.<sup>3</sup> This analysis is based on the instruments executed at the Conference, and must necessarily be regarded as tentative because much depends on the views which will be taken of those instruments by France and the Associated States, by other Conference members, and by the international commissions to be established under the Armistice Agreements. The memorandum will consider, in turn, a number of different respects in which restrictions are imposed, and under each heading will deal with the status of Cambodia, then of Laos, and then of Vietnam.

1. Membership in collective security arrangement

(a) Cambodia would be permitted to participate as a member of a Southeast Asia collective security arrangement. Article 7 of the Armistice Agreement with Cambodia provides, in part:

"In accordance with the Declaration made by the Delegation of Cambodia at 2400 hours on 20 July 1954 at the Geneva Conference of

<sup>1</sup> Drafted by Meeker of L/UNA and approved by Phleger. A handwritten notation on the source text indicates that the Secretary of State saw it.

A copy of this memorandum in a slightly different form is filed in Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 329.

<sup>2</sup> Meeker drafted a briefer analysis of the armistice agreement restrictions, dated July 22, and it is filed in Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 329. A handwritten notation on the July 22 document indicates that the Secretary of State also saw this document.

<sup>3</sup> For all of the armistice agreements and final declarations, see pp. 1505 ff.

Foreign Ministers: "The Royal Government of Cambodia will not join in any agreement with other States, if this agreement carries for Cambodia the obligation to enter into a military alliance not in conformity with the principles of the Charter of the United Nations or with the principles of the Agreements on the cessation of hostilities, . . ."

Assuming that a Southeast Asia collective security arrangement would constitute a "military alliance" within the meaning of Article 7, such an arrangement would not be precluded by the provisions just quoted. A Southeast Asia collective security agreement would be "in conformity with the principles of the Charter of the United Nations". Similarly, such an arrangement would be compatible "with the principles of the Agreements on the cessation of hostilities". There is nothing in the Armistice Agreement with Cambodia which would make Cambodia's membership in the arrangement inconsistent, nor would it seem that such membership would be inconsistent with the "principles" of the Armistice Agreements relating to Laos and Vietnam; it is possible that the Conference text of Article 7 in the Cambodian Agreement contains a typographical error in giving "Agreements" as plural.

The international commission provided for in the Armistice Agreement with Cambodia—composed of Canada, India, and Poland—might be called upon to express its view whether a Southeast Asia collective security arrangement conformed to the principles of the United Nations and of the Indochina Armistice Agreements. Articles 19, 20 and 21 of the Cambodian Agreement contain the following provisions:

"Article 19.

"When the Joint Commission is unable to reach agreement on the interpretation of a provision or on the appraisal of a fact, the International Commission shall be informed of the disputed question. Its recommendations shall be sent directly to the parties and shall be notified to the Joint Commission.

"Article 20.

"The recommendations of the International Commission shall be adopted by a majority vote, subject to the provisions of article 21. If the votes are equally divided, the Chairman's vote shall be decisive.

"The International Commission may make recommendations concerning amendments and additions which should be made to the provisions of the Agreement on the cessation of hostilities in Cambodia, in order to ensure more effective execution of the said Agreement. These recommendations shall be adopted unanimously.

"Article 21.

"On questions concerning violations, or threats of violations, which might lead to a resumption of hostilities, and in particular,

(a) refusal by foreign armed forces to effect the movements provided for in the withdrawal plan,

(b) violation or threat of violation of the country's integrity by foreign armed forces,

the decisions of the International Commission must be unanimous."

It is not clear whether the cases enumerated in subparagraphs (a) and (b) of Article 21 are exclusive, since they are introduced by the words "and in particular". In the Armistice Agreement with Vietnam, the expression "namely" is used instead of these words. It may or may not have been intended that the cases referred to in (a) and (b) would be exclusive for all three Armistice Agreements. In any event, it would seem that a recommendation of the international commission concerning Cambodian membership in a Southeast Asia collective security arrangement should be considered subject to majority voting rather than unanimity under Article 21 of the Armistice Agreement.

Consideration by the international commission of problems under the Armistice Agreement could only result in recommendations by the commission. The Parties to the Armistice Agreement have not bound themselves to accept any such recommendations. Article 22 of the Agreement provides, in part :

"If one of the Parties refuses to put a recommendation of the International Commission into effect, the Parties concerned or the Commission itself shall inform the members of the Geneva Conference.

"If the International Commission does not reach unanimity in the cases provided for in Article 21, it shall transmit a majority report and one or more minority reports to members of the Conference."

(b) Laos would be permitted to participate as a member of a Southeast Asia collective security arrangement. The Armistice Agreement with Laos contains no provision prohibiting such membership, and no provision comparable to Article 7 of the Cambodian Agreement. Laos, however, made a Declaration on July 21, 1954, containing the following statement :

"The Royal Government of Laos will never join in any agreement with other States if this agreement includes the obligation for the Royal Government of Laos to participate in a military alliance not in conformity with the principles of the Charter of the United Nations or with the principles of the Agreement on the cessation of hostilities . . ."

Membership by Laos in a Southeast Asia collective security arrangement would not be inconsistent with this Declaration.

This Declaration is noted in paragraph 5 of the Final Declaration of the Geneva Conference. However, since the terms of the Declaration are not incorporated in the Armistice Agreement with Laos, it would seem that the international commission established under the Agreement would not be called upon to express a view as to whether or not Laotian membership in a collective security arrangement was in conformity with the principles of the United Nations and of the Laotian Armistice Agreement.

(c) The zone of Vietnam south of the demarcation line would, apparently, be precluded from membership in a Southeast Asia collective security arrangement. Article 19 of the Armistice Agreement with Vietnam provides, in part:

“The two Parties shall ensure that the zones assigned to them do not adhere to any military alliance and are not used for the resumption of hostilities or to further an aggressive policy.”

An argument might be made that the projected Southeast Asia collective security arrangement would not be a “military alliance” since it would be entirely defensive in character and would not commit the Parties to come to the assistance of any Party which became involved in an armed conflict regardless of the origin of that conflict. However, as a practical matter, such a narrow and now perhaps obsolete definition of the term “military alliance” would be difficult to sustain. It seems not unlikely that the Parties to the Armistice Agreement covering Vietnam understood the term as including a defensive treaty like the proposed Southeast Asia collective security arrangement.

2. Other coverage by collective security arrangement

(a) If Cambodia were not itself a Party to a Southeast Asia collective security arrangement, Cambodia could, consistently with its Armistice Agreement, be protected by the undertakings of Parties to such an arrangement to defend Cambodia against attack. This follows a fortiori from the conclusion that Cambodia could be a member of a Southeast Asia collective security arrangement. There is nothing in the Cambodian Armistice Agreement to prohibit defensive treaty guaranties by other powers in favor of Cambodia. It seems clear that Cambodia could at any time request or consent to the protection afforded by such guaranties.

(b) Laos, similarly, could be protected by a collective security arrangement to which it was not a Party.

(c) While the two zones of Vietnam are precluded by Article 19 of the Vietnamese Agreement from adhering “to any military alliance”, either zone, presumably, could be protected against attack by a defensive security treaty concluded among other powers. The Armistice Agreement covering Vietnam contains no provision prohibiting such protection of the two zones. Because of the provisions in Article 19 quoted above, it is problematical whether retained Vietnam could request or consent to the extension of SEATO protection prior to actual military attack. Its giving of consent or making a request in advance might be considered as a degree of participation which constituted adherence to a military alliance.

3. Bases

(a) Article 7 of the Armistice Agreement with Cambodia, in incorporating the Cambodian Declaration at the Geneva Conference, contains the following provision:

“The Royal Government of Cambodia will not join in any agreement with other States, if this agreement carries for Cambodia . . . , as long as its security is not threatened, the obligation to establish bases on Cambodian territory for the military forces of foreign powers’ ”.

Under this provision, the United States, in implementing the proposed Southeast Asia collective security arrangement, would not be able to have military bases in Cambodia in the absence of a threat to Cambodia's security. The international commission provided for in Article 11 of the Cambodian Agreement might be called upon to express its view as to whether such a threat existed. Probably a recommendation on this score by the international commission would be through majority vote.

It is not clear whether the reference to “foreign powers” in Article 7 includes France. Inferentially, from various indications scattered through the Indochina Armistice Agreements, the term “foreign” would not seem to apply to France. However, in connection with the matter of bases, this issue may be academic because of the provision (Article 4(1) (a)) for the withdrawal of French military forces from Cambodia and the implication that new French combatant units may not be introduced (except perhaps in the event of a threat to Cambodia's security within the meaning of Article 7). Article 4(1) (a) will be discussed below.

(b) The Laotian Declaration referred to in paragraph 5 of the Final Declaration of the Geneva Conference contains a provision on foreign military bases which has the same wording as the corresponding portion of Article 7 in the Armistice Agreement with Cambodia. This Declaration by Laos may not have the force of an international commitment, since it is cast as a statement of policy and is not incorporated in the Laotian Armistice Agreement.

Article 7 of the Laotian Agreement provides:

“Upon the entry into force of the present Agreement, the establishment of new military bases is prohibited throughout the territory of Laos.”

Article 8 limits France to the maintenance of two bases in Laos. The first paragraph of that Article reads :

“The High Command of the French forces shall maintain in the territory of Laos the personnel required for the maintenance of the two French military establishments, the first at Seno and the second in the Mekong valley, either in the province of Vientiane or downstream from Vientiane.”

While Article 7 does not in terms prohibit the use of any existing Laotian bases by foreign forces such as United States forces, the restrictions placed by Article 6 of the Laotian Agreement on the introduction of military personnel into Laos may render this issue academic in the absence of a threat to Laotian security such as is mentioned in the Laotian Declaration. In the event of such a threat, perhaps both French and foreign military bases could be established on Laotian territory despite the provisions of the Armistice Agreement. The international commission might be called into play here since effectuation of the Laotian Declaration would involve departure from the Armistice terms.

(c) Article 19 of the Armistice Agreement covering Vietnam provides, in part :

“With effect from the date of entry into force of the present Agreement, no military base under the control of a foreign State may be established in the regrouping zone of either Party;”

This provision would apparently preclude the United States from having a military base in retained Vietnam. It would not seem to preclude France from maintaining military bases in the zone south of the demarcation line. Article 18, however, provides :

“With effect from the date of entry into force of the present Agreement, the establishment of new military bases is prohibited throughout Viet-Nam territory.”

4. Local forces

There are no provisions in the Armistice Agreements covering Cambodia, Laos, and Vietnam prohibiting or limiting the numbers or types of local armed forces which Cambodia, Laos, and retained Vietnam may keep or create.

5. French forces

(a) Paragraph (1) of Article 4 of the Armistice Agreement with Cambodia provides, in part :

“The withdrawal outside the territory of Cambodia shall apply to :
(a) the armed forces and military combatant personnel of the French Union”.

It might be inferred from this provision that, when the relatively small number of French forces now in Cambodia have been withdrawn, other such French personnel could not be introduced—except, presumably, to man bases which might be established under Article 7 in the event of a threat to Cambodia's security. In any event, it could be argued that Article 4(1)(a) means simply that French fighting units must be withdrawn during the withdrawal period; and that despatch of a French military advisory mission would not be prohibited by the Cambodian Agreement.

(b) The Armistice Agreement with Laos appears to place a numerical ceiling on the number of French military personnel who may be in Laos. Article 6 provides:

“With effect from the proclamation of the cease-fire the introduction into Laos of any reinforcements of troops or military personnel from outside Laotian territory is prohibited.

“Nevertheless, the French High Command may leave a specified number of French military personnel required for the training of the Laotian National Army in the territory of Laos; the strength of such personnel shall not exceed one thousand five hundred (1,500) officers and non-commissioned officers.”

Article 8 provides:

“The High Command of the French forces shall maintain in the territory of Laos the personnel required for the maintenance of the two French military establishments, the first at Seno and the second in the Mekong valley, either in the province of Vientiane or downstream from Vientiane.

“The effectives maintained in these military establishments shall not exceed a total of three thousand five hundred (3,500) men.”

It is possible that French forces over and above these 5,000 could be brought into Laos to man bases established in the event of a threat to Laotian security, if French forces were considered to be foreign forces for purposes of the Laotian Declaration provision relating to bases.

(c) Additional French military personnel may not be introduced into the Southern zone of Vietnam except through rotation as provided in the Armistice Agreement and through the French withdrawals from the Northern zone. Article 16 of the Vietnamese Armistice Agreement begins with the following general statement:

“With effect from the date of entry into force of the present Agreement, the introduction into Viet-Nam of any troop reinforcements and additional military personnel is prohibited.”

The Article then goes on to make provision for rotation.

(d) At the Geneva Conference France made the following Declaration, which is referred to in paragraph 10 of the Final Declaration of the Conference:

“The Government of the French Republic declares that it is ready to withdraw its troops from the territory of Cambodia, Laos and Viet-Nam, at the request of the Governments concerned and within a period which shall be fixed by agreement between the parties, except in the cases where, by agreement between the two parties, a certain number of French troops shall remain at specified points and for a specified time.”

This statement of policy constitutes an additional element to be considered in assessing the position of France in regard to the stationing of troops in Indochina.

6. Foreign forces

(a) Article 7 of the Armistice Agreement with Cambodia incorporates the following provision contained in a Declaration by the Government of Cambodia:

“During the period which will elapse between the date of the cessation of hostilities in Viet-Nam and that of the final settlement of political problems in this country, the Royal Government of Cambodia will not solicit foreign aid in war material, personnel or instructors except for the purpose of the effective defense of the territory.”

The international commission might be called upon to express its view as to whether foreign aid in the form of a military advisory mission or other military personnel were “for the purpose of the effective defense of the territory”. Presumably, if foreign military bases were established on Cambodian territory in the event of a threat to Cambodia’s security (Article 7), such bases could be manned by foreign forces.

(b) Laos appears to be prohibited from the introduction of any additional military personnel from outside the country, except for specified numbers of French personnel. These restrictions are contained in Articles 6 and 8 of the Armistice Agreement with Laos, quoted above.

At the Geneva Conference Laos made a Declaration containing the following statement (referred to in paragraph 4 of the Final Declaration):

“During the period between the cessation of hostilities in Viet-Nam and the final settlement of that country’s political problems, the Royal Government of Laos will not request foreign aid, whether in war material, in personnel or in instructors, except for the purpose of its effective territorial defense and to the extent defined by the Agreement on the cessation of hostilities.”

Under the terms of this Declaration, the ability of Laos to secure foreign aid in the form of a military mission or other military personnel would seem to be limited to what is allowed by Articles 6 and 8 of the Laotian Armistice Agreement.

In an earlier paragraph of this same Declaration (noted in paragraph 5 of the Final Declaration of the Geneva Conference), Laos stated that it would "never join in an agreement with other States if this agreement includes the obligation for the Royal Government of Laos . . . , unless its security is threatened, . . . to establish bases on Laotian territory for military forces of foreign powers." By implication, this statement envisages the possibility of foreign forces being introduced into Laos, despite the provisions of the Armistice Agreement, in the event that Laotian security is threatened. The international commission might be called into play if foreign military forces were introduced into Laos to man bases established in the event of a threat to Laotian security, since such introduction would involve departure from the Armistice terms.

(c) Article 16 of the Vietnamese Armistice Agreement prohibits the introduction "of any troop reinforcements and additional military personnel". This would apparently preclude the assignment of new United States Air Force technicians or military advisory group personnel, except in rotation for such technicians or personnel who were being replaced. It is understood that approximately 100 Air Force mechanics remain in Vietnam, and that the United States military advisory mission to the three Indochinese countries (now concentrated in Vietnam) comprises approximately 200 members of the U.S. armed forces.

7. Armaments from abroad

(a) Cambodia has agreed, in Article 7 of its Armistice Agreement, not to solicit foreign aid in war material, pending a final political settlement in Vietnam, "except for the purpose of the effective defense of the territory". Presumably, this provision covers receipt as well as solicitation. The international commission may have a role in determining what imports of armaments are "for the purpose of the effective defense of the territory".

(b) Laos has agreed as follows in Article 9 of its Armistice Agreement:

"Upon the entry into force of the present Agreement and in accordance with the declaration made at the Geneva Conference by the Royal Government of Laos on 20 July 1954, the introduction into Laos of armaments, munitions and military equipment of all kinds is prohibited, with the exception of a specified quantity of armaments in categories specified as necessary for the defence of Laos."

There is no indication elsewhere in the Agreement how the quantity and categories referred to are to be specified. Presumably, this is to be done by agreement in the joint commission. If agreement is not reached there, the matter might then be referred to the international commission.

Laos has also stated (in its Declaration noted in paragraph 4 of the Geneva Conference Final Declaration) that the Royal Government of Laos will not request foreign aid "except for the purpose of its effective territorial defense and to the extent defined by the Agreement on the cessation of hostilities". This provision indicates that it remains subordinate to the effect of Article 9 in the Armistice Agreement. However, if a foreign military base were established on Laotian territory as contemplated by paragraph 2 of the Laotian Declaration (mentioned in paragraph 5 of the Geneva Conference Final Declaration), the forces maintaining such a base would presumably be entitled to import arms and equipment for their use.

(c) Article 17 of the Armistice Agreement covering Vietnam begins with the following provision :

"With effect from the date of entry into force of the present Agreement, the introduction into Viet-Nam of any reinforcements in the form of all types of arms, munitions and other war material, such as combat aircraft, naval craft, pieces of ordinance, jet engines and jet weapons and armored vehicles, is prohibited."

Subsequent paragraphs of this Article make provision for a piece-for-piece replacement of material destroyed, damaged, worn out or used up after the cessation of hostilities.

8. Locally produced armaments

Cambodia, Laos and Vietnam are not limited as to the armaments they possess or produce within their territories. The Armistice Agreements covering these countries place no restrictions on economic aid which may be given to them. In fact, it would be possible under the Armistice Agreements to supply Cambodia, Laos and retained Vietnam with machinery and plants to manufacture all kinds of products including war materials.

9. Traffic and commerce between the zones of Vietnam

Traffic of persons and commerce of goods between the Northern and Southern zones of Vietnam is not precluded by the Geneva instruments. Paragraphs 6 and 8 of the Final Declaration of the Geneva Conference state that "the military demarcation line should not in any way be interpreted as constituting a political or territorial boundary", and "the provisions of the Agreements on the cessation of hostilities intended to ensure the protection of individuals and of property must be most strictly applied and must, in particular, allow everyone in Viet-Nam to decide freely in which zone he will live." Article 13 (d) of the Vietnamese Armistice Agreement states :

"From the date of entry into force of the present Agreement until the movement of troops is completed, any civilians residing in a district controlled by one Party who wish to go and live in the zone controlled by the other Party shall be permitted and helped to do so by the authorities in that district."

Articles 3 and 6 of the Agreement provide for control by the Joint Commission at the demarcation line and in its immediate area. Article 3 provides :

"When the provisional military demarcation line coincides with a waterway, the waters of such waterway shall be open to civil navigation by both parties wherever one bank is controlled by one party and the other bank by the other party. The Joint Commission shall establish rules of navigation for the stretch of waterway in question. The merchant shipping and other civilian craft of each party shall have unrestricted access to the land under its military control."

Article 6 provides :

"No person, military or civilian, shall be permitted to cross the provisional military demarcation line unless specifically authorized to do so by the Joint Commission."

The Agreement contains no provisions restricting traffic by air or sea between the two zones.

---

Conference files, lot 60 D 627, CF 315

Documents Pertaining to the Arrangements for the International Control Commission, July 22-August 11, 1954<sup>1</sup>

INTERNATIONAL CONTROL COMMISSIONS IN INDOCHINA

1. Text of a Statement on Canadian Membership in the International Commissions for Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia released at 5 E.D.T., July 28, 1954

2. Message from Mr. Eden and M. Molotov to the Governments of Canada and India, dated July 21

3. Message from Mr. Nehru to Mr. Eden, as co-Chairman of the Geneva Conference, dated July 24

---

<sup>1</sup> For further documentation on the arrangements and activities of the International Control Commission, see volume XIII.

4. Text of the Canadian Government's reply to the Invitation to serve on the International Supervisory Commission for Laos, Cambodia and Vietnam
5. Message from Mr. Nehru to Mr. Eden
6. Reply, dated July 22, of the Government of India to the Message from Mr. Eden and M. Molotov

[Attachment 1]

THE FOLLOWING IS THE TEXT OF A STATEMENT ON CANADIAN MEMBERSHIP IN THE INTERNATIONAL COMMISSIONS FOR VIETNAM, LAOS AND CAMBODIA RELEASED AT 5 E.D.T., JULY 28, 1954.

The Canadian Government has today transmitted to Mr. Anthony Eden co-chairman, with Mr. Molotov, of the Geneva Conference on Indochina, its acceptance of the invitation forwarded by him on July 21 to designate representatives to form with India and Poland, the International Supervisory Commissions for Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia. Officials are being sent to New Delhi this week to take part in preliminary organizational discussions, prior to the actual establishment of the Commissions in Indochina. The Canadian representatives on the Commissions will be named shortly.

The Government has decided to accept this invitation only after detailed study of the Cease-fire and Armistice Agreements which are to be supervised by the International Commissions, and with full knowledge and appreciation of the responsibilities and difficulties that will go with membership. There are no illusions about the magnitude and complexity of the task.

Canada is geographically remote from Indochina and her collective security responsibilities in Southeast Asia are limited to those that arise from membership in the United Nations. We know from experience, however, that just as local conflicts can become general war so conditions of security and stability in any part of the world serve the cause of peace everywhere. If, therefore, by participating in the work of these Indochinese Commissions, Canada can assist in establishing such security and stability in Southeast Asia we will be serving our own country as well as the cause of peace.

While it is a matter of regret to us that the settlement in Indochina and the supervision of that settlement are not directly under the aegis of the United Nations, the Government is satisfied that Canadian participation will be fully in harmony with our responsibilities as a member of the world organization.

It should be emphasized that acceptance of membership on these Commissions does not mean that we have been called upon to guarantee or enforce the Indochina cease-fire. Nor does it involve any new military or collective security commitments for Canada.

The actual execution of the Cease-fire Agreements is the responsibility of the two sides directly concerned, functioning through joint commissions established by the Armistice Agreements. The International Commissions themselves have no enforcement obligation or responsibility. Their function will be solely supervisory, judicial and mediatory. Under Indian chairmanship, the Commissions will be responsible for supervising the proper execution of the provisions of the Agreements by the parties directly concerned; will assist these parties with the interpretation of those provisions; will be available to settle disputes; and in cases where disputes cannot be settled, will report the matter to the members of the Geneva Conference. India, Poland and Canada are also expected to assume responsibility at a later stage for supervising elections.

In carrying out their tasks the International Supervisory Commissions should be able to function more effectively than the Neutral Nations Supervisory Commission in Korea which because of equal Communist and non-Communist representation, very often had effective action blocked, and which could report only to the two military commands.

The Indochina Commissions will each consist of three members—Indian, Polish and Canadian—and in most cases will be able to take decisions by majority vote. In those special and designated cases where unanimity is required by the Cease-fire Agreements but cannot be obtained, the Commissions will submit majority and minority reports to the Geneva Conference powers. It will then be the responsibility of those powers to deal with the matter.

In addition to providing representatives for each of the three Supervisory Commissions, India, Poland and Canada will supply a number of military officers for the fixed and mobile inspection teams which will supervise the execution of the Cease-fire Agreements in the field, under the direction of the Supervisory Commissioners.

A study of the information available has led us to the conclusion that the Commissions have a reasonable chance of operating effectively and of making a constructive contribution to the successful implementation of the Cease-fire Agreements, and hence to peace in Southeast Asia. If our expectations unfortunately prove ill-founded, and the Commissions are frustrated by obstruction, then of course no useful purpose would be served by continuing their existence.

The exchange of views which we have had with those powers with whom we are especially closely associated in efforts to maintain peace and strengthen security has confirmed our conviction that we ought to accept this onerous but honorable assignment.

Finally we have been conscious of the serious consequences which might follow if we were to decline the invitation, since this could delay and complicate the implementation of the Cease-fire Agreements with unhappy and possibly even serious results. We have no illusions that the task we are undertaking will be either easy or of short duration, but we take satisfaction from the fact that in performing it Canada will be playing a worthy and responsible part in an effort to strengthen peace.

[Attachment 2]

MESSAGE FROM MR. EDEN AND M. MOLOTOV TO GOVERNMENTS OF CANADA
AND INDIA, DATED JULY 21

We have the honour to address you as co-Chairmen of the Geneva Conference on Indo-China which concluded its work on July 20, 1954. The Conference took note of agreements ending hostilities in Viet Nam, Laos and Cambodia, and organising international control and the supervision of the execution of the provisions of these agreements. In particular, it was agreed that an International Commission should be set up in each of the three countries for control and supervision of the application of the provisions of the agreement on the cessation of hostilities in Indo-China. It was further proposed that these Commissions should be composed of an equal number of representatives of Canada, India and Poland, presided over by the representative of India.

2. On behalf of the Conference we accordingly have the honour to invite the Canadian/Indian Governments in consultation with the Governments of Canada/India/Poland, to designate representatives to form the International Supervisory Commissions for Viet Nam, Laos and Cambodia as envisaged in the agreements on the cessation of hostilities and on supervision in those three countries.

3. It is hoped that the three International Supervisory Commissions can be established on the spot as soon as possible from the date on which the ceasefire comes into force.

4. The text of the final declaration adopted by the Conference and of all other agreements and declarations concerning the cessation of hostilities and the organisation of supervision in the three countries of Indo-China will be transmitted to you as soon as possible.

5. We have the honour to request an early reply, which we shall at once transmit to the members of the Conference.

[Attachment 3]

REPLY, DATED JULY 22, OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA TO THE MESSAGE
FROM MR. EDEN AND M. MOLOTOV

The Government of India have the honour to acknowledge receipt of the communication forwarded by the United Kingdom High Commission conveying a message from Mr. Eden and M. Molotov as co-Chairmen of the Geneva Conference. In this message it is stated that the Conference agreed that an International Commission should be set up in each of the three countries, namely, Viet Nam, Laos and Cambodia, for control and supervision of the application of the provisions of the agreement on the cessation of hostilities in Indo-China. It was further proposed that these Commissions should be composed of an equal number of representatives of Canada, India and Poland, presided over by the representative of India. The Government of India are anxious to help, in every way possible to them, the cause of a peaceful settlement in Indo-China and are prepared to consider favourably assuming responsibilities as suggested, in regard to the control and supervision of the execution of the agreement arrived at Geneva. They would like to have, however, the texts of the agreements as well as of the declarations made in regard to the cessation of hostilities and the organisation of supervision, to enable them to find out the exact nature of the functions of the Supervisory Commissions and the responsibilities which the Government of India will have to undertake in regard to them. They will be grateful, therefore, if these texts are supplied to them at an early date, together with such other particulars as may be considered necessary.

[Attachment 4]

FOLLOWING IS THE TEXT OF THE CANADIAN GOVERNMENT'S REPLY TO THE INVITATION TO SERVE ON THE INTERNATIONAL SUPERVISORY COMMISSION FOR LAOS, CAMBODIA AND VIETNAM

I have the honour to acknowledge your message of July 21 which you and Mr. Molotov sent in your capacity as co-chairmen of the Geneva Conference on Indo-China, containing the invitation to the Canadian Government to designate, in consultation with the Governments of India and Poland, representatives to form the International Supervisory Commissions for Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia as envisaged in the Agreements on the cessation of hostilities, and on supervision in those three countries.

Conscious of the grave responsibilities which the task will impose,—but in the hope that it can be discharged in such a way as to contribute to the establishment of peace and security in Indo-China, the Canadian Government accepts this invitation. The Canadian Government has been in touch with the Government of India concerning preliminary arrangements and intends to send representatives to New Delhi in the immediate future to consult with Indian and Polish officials on the setting up of the International Supervisory Commissions provided for in the Agreements drawn up by the Geneva Conference.

The Canadian Government would be grateful if you would transmit the text of this reply to the members of the Geneva Conference on Indo-China, whose continuing interest and support will be required if the Commissions are effectively to carry out their functions and if the Agreements on the cessation of hostilities are to be successfully implemented.

WASHINGTON, July 30, 1954.

[Attachment 5]

INTERNATIONAL SUPERVISORY COMMISSIONS MESSAGE FROM MR. NEHRU
TO MR. EDEN

The Government of India have the honour to inform the co-Chairmen of the Geneva Conference on Indo-China that at the invitation of the Government of India a preliminary conference of the three states constituting the International Commissions for Supervision and Control in Indo-China was convened and met in New Delhi from the 1st of August to the 6th of August, 1954. A final communiqué<sup>2</sup> of the Conference which embodies the principal decisions arrived and is being sent by air mail.

2. The Government of India are glad that the three Commissions will be installed and begin their work in Phnom Penh (Cambodia), Vientiane (Laos), and Hanoi (Vietnam) on the 11th of August, 1954.

3. The three Armistice Agreements and the issues arising therefrom were, as far as they are applicable to the work of the International Commissions, fully discussed. The Government of India are happy to state that the discussions were frank and cordial and the decisions were unanimous.

WASHINGTON, August 11th, 1954.

[Attachment 6]

REPLY, DATED JULY 22, OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA TO THE MESSAGE
FROM MR. EDEN AND M. MOLOTOV

The Government of India have the honour to acknowledge receipt of the communication forwarded by the United Kingdom High Commission conveying a message from Mr. Eden and M. Molotov as co-Chairmen of the Geneva Conference. In this message it is stated that the Conference agreed that an International Commission should be set up in each of the three countries, namely, Viet Nam, Laos and Cambodia, for control and supervision of the application of the provisions of the agreement on the cessation of hostilities in Indo-China. It was further proposed that these Commissions should be composed of an equal number of representatives of Canada, India and Poland, presided over by the representative of India. The Government of India are anxious to help, in every way possible to them, the cause of a peaceful settlement in Indo-China and are prepared to consider favourably assuming responsibilities as suggested, in regard to the control and supervision of the execution of the agreement arrived at Geneva. They would like to have, however, the texts of the agreements as well as of the declarations made in regard to the cessation of hostilities and the organisation of supervision, to enable them to find out the exact nature of the functions of the Supervisory Commissions and the responsibilities which the Government of India will have to undertake in regard to them. They will be grateful, therefore, if these texts are supplied to them at an early date, together with such other particulars as may be considered necessary.

<sup>2</sup> Not printed.

INDEX

INDEX

- Abello, Emile, 119, 539
 Aberra, Dedjazmatch Amha, 11
 Achilles, Theodore C. :
   Geneva Conference on Indochina, 404,
   407, 417, 428-431, 492-494, 543,
   544, 620-621, 694-696, 709-710
   Geneva Conference on Korea, 8, 124
 Indochina, cessation of hostilities,
   700-701, 742-743, 902
   Southeast Asia, 1021-1023
   U.N. Peace Observation Commission
     for Indochina, proposed, 883-884
     Vietnam, 816
 Acikalin, Cevat, 12, 170, 185, 261, 306,
   323, 343, 387, 715-716, 904-906
 Addis, John M., 413, 454
 Aldrich, Winthrop W., 470-471, 496-497,
   1066-1067, 1304-1305
 Ali Sastroamidjojo, 611
 Allen, Ward, 455
 Allen, William D. :
   Geneva Conference on Indochina :
     Participation in, 412, 454, 544,
     955, 1010-1011; preparations for,
     493, 694-696, 709-710; progress of negotiations, 819-821; review of conference documents, 1388-1389
   Geneva Conference on Korea, 13, 119,
   147, 153
   Indochina, cessation of hostilities,
     700-701, 743, 913, 916, 1173, 1400
   Korean unification, U.S. Alternate Plan B, 255
   U.N. Peace Observation Commission
     for Indochina, proposed, 823
 Allison, John M., 246, 248, 510-512
 Anderson, Lt. Gen. Samuel E., 296, 302
 Andronikov, C., 544, 955
 Anspacher, John, 8, 404
 ANZUS pact meeting on Southeast
   Asia, 654-665
 Associated States. See French Associated States.
 Atomic weapons, 245-246, 607, 619
 Audiat, Michel, 882
 Australia (see also Australian subheadings under other subjects), 538
 Baeyens, Jacques, 409, 544, 936
 Baldwin, Charles F., 630
 Bao Dai :
   France, treaty negotiations with,
     584*n*, 585
   Geneva Conference on Indochina, 565,
   603-604, 608-609, 613-614, 859-
   863
 Bao Dai—Continued
   Indochina, situation in, 660, 829-831
   Vietnam, State of : Government, 1008-
     1010, 1043-1044, 1134-1136, 1282,
     1288-1289; political situation,
     823-824, 881, 901*n*, 903, 1052; U.S. aid to, 859-860, 1106
 Barringer, Philip E., 9, 405
 Beam, Jacob D., 652*n*
 Beaumont, Jean Michel Guerin de, 1359
 Bech, Joseph, 11
 Benard, Jean, 409
 Benler, Talat, 715
 Bentinck, A., 11, 16, 343, 386
 Berlin Agreement. See under Geneva
   Conference on Korea.
 Bidault, Georges :
   Cambodian official, assassination by
     Viet Minh, 782, 783
   French Associated States, independence of, 968
   Geneva Conference on Indochina :
     Composition of, 427*n*, 493, 620-621
     French position : Associated States approval of, 417; formulation of, 575-576; presentation at opening session, 733, 735
     Participation in, 408, 677-678, 1155
     Preparations for, 544-548, 574, 591-
     594, 641-644, 669-670
   Restricted sessions, need for, 792-
     793
   Soviet position, 483-484
   Tactics, 776-777, 849-851, 873-874
   Geneva Conference on Korea, 11, 38,
   127-130, 139-140, 333, 415
 Indochina :
   Cessation of hostilities : British five questions, 777, 783, 819, 831,
     993-994; British proposal, 922,
     925, 965-966, 996; French proposals, 873-874, 878-879, 907-908, 1069-1071; international control problems, 987, 993-994,
     997-998, 1017-1019, 1034-1035,
     1061-1062, 1065-1066; Laos and
     Cambodia, 831, 839, 854-855,
     863-864, 878, 987, 996-997, 1174-
     1176; military negotiations with Viet Minh, 831, 945, 970, 986, 1126; political and military aspects, order of conference discussion, 910-911; prisoners of war problem, 997; Soviet five-point proposal, 880; Viet
     Minh proposal, 796-798, 819,
     873-874, 879, 922

- Bidault, Georges—Continued
 Indochina—Continued
 Internationalization of war in, 1039-1040, 1086
 Situation in, 517, 867, 944
 U.S. military intervention in, 638-639, 902-903, 1167
 Korean unification, 151-155, 174, 176, 257-258, 262-263, 337-338, 344, 364-365
 Laniel government, 806n, 902
 U.N. Peace Observation Commission for Indochina, proposed, 823
 Vietnam: Dien Bien Phu, 602, 712-713, 758, 807, 809-810, 833, 834, 971; partition question, 807
 Blake, Robert, 9, 405, 407
 Blakeney, F. J., 480
 Bohlen, Charles E., 28, 67-68, 71-72, 89-91, 96-97, 445, 467-468, 552
 Bonnet, Henri, 589, 742, 785-786, 903, 1100, 1101, 1166-1167, 1453n
 Bonsal, Philip W.:
 Geneva Conference on Indochina: Advisory role, 404, 407, 417n, 434n, 425, 445, 459, 503n, 1137n, 1166, 1238; composition, 541, 612, 613n; preparations for, 463-466, 686-687, 702-703; progress, 1149-1150, 1374-1375; tactics, 1109, 1175-1176; U.S. role, 1053, 1329; Vietnamese concerns on outcome, 859-862, 1347
 Geneva Conference on Korea, 8, 47, 437-442
 Indochina:
 Cessation of hostilities: Cambodia and Laos, 1207-1208, 1211-1212, 1303-1304, 1357, 1358; draft agreements, 1402; French military talks with Viet Minh, 1250, 1320-1321; international control problems, 1061-1062, 1278-1280, 1294-1296, 1357, 1387-1388; Vietnamese statement, 1440-1441, 1492
 French draft declarations, 1346-1347, 1355, 1367-1368, 1400, 1402-1404, 1407, 1469-1470
 Situation in, 614-615, 762, 816, 1051-1054, 1308-1309
 United action, proposed, 548-549
 U.S. intervention, 1052, 1053, 1374
 Western proposal for restoration of peace, draft, 631-635
 Southeast Asia, defense, 773-774, 801-803
 U.N. Peace Observation Commission, proposed, 866-867, 1108, 1172-1173
 Vietnam: Cessation of hostilities negotiations, 1277, 1356-1359, 1368-1369, 1373-1374, 1386-1387; situation in, 843-846, 848-849, 894-895,
- Bonsal, Philip W.—Continued
 Vietnam—Continued
 1134-1136, 1288-1289, 1298-1300, 1327-1328, 1334, 1549-1550
 Vietnam, State of, treaty negotiations with France, 584-586
 Boris, Georges, 409, 1346-1347
 Bowie, Robert R., 8, 404, 507n, 544, 598-599, 651-654, 1281
 Briggs, Ellis O.:
 Geneva Conference on Korea: Berlin Agreement, 18-20; Draft Declaration by Sixteen, 370; final phase and termination of, 325-326, 336-337, 344-347, 359; ROK participation, 22-26, 29-32, 36-37, 44, 48-49, 52-53, 55-56, 74-75, 78-79, 111-113; U.S.-ROK pre-conference discussions, 29n, 33-35, 59-62, 116-117, 144, 146
 Korea, Republic of: Mutual defense agreement with United States, 320-321; U.S. military aid question, 74-75
 Korean unification: ROK 14-point proposal, 319-320; U.S. Alternate Plan B for, 191-194, 200-203, 205-207, 213-215, 226-228, 239-242, 248; U.S.-ROK general principles, draft, 268-269, 273, 275-277, 281-283, 306-309
 Briones, Manuel C., 12, 266-267
 Broustra, Vincent, 409
 Brown, Elizabeth, 119-124, 535-538
 Bullard, Julian L., 413, 454
 Burleson, Omar, 574
 Burma, 928, 979
 Buu Kinh, 411, 717-718, 732-733, 890-891, 955, 1217-1218, 1274-1275
 Buu Loc, Prince of Vietnam, 513, 845, 914-916
 Cable, James E., 413, 586-588, 768
 Caccia, Sir Harold A., 13, 412, 544, 553, 577-578, 589-590, 593, 835-836, 1348, 1359, 1404-1405, 1408, 1421-1423, 1437, 1470n, 1547
 Cairo Declaration, 1943, 150
 Calhoun, John A., 8, 119, 185-186, 404, 803
 Cambodia:
 Cessation of hostilities negotiations. See Indochina: Cessation of hostilities: Laos and Cambodia Independence question. See French Associated States.
 National Intelligence Estimate on, 872, 1023-1029
 U.S. aid question, 768, 1206, 1208, 1227-1228, 1231-1232, 1234-1236, 1246-1247, 1341
 U.S. Ambassador to, proposed, 681, 1490-1491, 1503
 Viet Minh assassination of Cambodian official, 780, 782-783

- Capella, Basil, 9, 119, 406
 Carnahan, A. S. J., 574
 Carney, Adm. Robert B., 10, 119, 934*n*, 1057
 Casey, Richard G., 10, 157-159, 213, 217, 379, 384, 386, 389, 390*n*, 529-530, 557-558, 649, 651, 654, 656-657, 662-664, 1120-1121, 1130
 Chang Wen-tien, 11, 410, 955, 1322
 Chantarangsei, 1252
 Chauvel, Jean:
   Geneva Conference on Indochina: Continuity after departure of Foreign Ministers, 1176, 1178; participating role in, 408, 544, 1166; preparations for, 486, 492-493, 517, 526-527, 542-543, 581-584, 593, 640*n*, 641, 667-669, 694-696, 709-710, 729-730; restricted sessions, 1109; resumption at Foreign Minister level, 1209-1210, 1280, 1329
   Geneva Conference on Korea, 11, 124, 371, 386
   Indochina: Cessation of hostilities negotiations, 576, 700-701, 713-714, 742-743, 916, 931-933, 955, 956-958, 961-962, 1394-1396, 1473-1474; international control problems, 931-933, 982-983, 1050-1051, 1061-1062; 1138-1139, 1154-1156, 1176-1177, 1215-1216, 1218, 1229-1231, 1243-1244, 1246, 1249, 1255-1256, 1263, 1272-1274, 1278-1280, 1288, 1290, 1317, 1334-1335, 1406, 1407; Laos and Cambodia, 592, 961-962, 1139, 1159-1160, 1183-1184, 1195-1196, 1200, 1202, 1215-1216, 1218, 1248-1249, 1290, 1317, 1473-1474; situation in, 1239-1241; U.S. military intervention in, 853-854
   Southeast Asia, 821-822
   U.N. Peace Observation Commission for Indochina, proposed, 823, 851*n*, 862, 1084, 1132-1134
   Vietnam: Cessation of hostilities negotiations, 957-958, 1050, 1154-1155, 1174, 1175, 1177-1178, 1222, 1238-1239, 1241-1242, 1248-1249, 1252-1253, 1265-1268, 1276, 1286-1288, 1321-1323, 1334, 1473-1474; military situation, 676-677; political situation, 818-819
 Chaves, José Maria, 119
 Chechotkin, Igor, 618
 Chen Chia-kang, 410, 955
 Cheysson, Claude, 409, 517, 544, 816, 906, 955, 1367-1369
 Chiao Kuan-huc, 805
 Childs, Marquis, 629
 China, People's Republic of:
   Recognition question, 16, 17, 154, 160-161, 464, 488, 529
 China, People's Republic of—Con.
   Relations with Japan, 511-512; North Korea, 16, 154; Soviet Union, 897-899; United Kingdom, 648, 803-806, 1011, 1111
   Treaty with India regarding Tibet, 1378
   U.N. membership question, 232, 464, 488, 611
 China, Republic of, 154, 155, 160, 428, 501, 623
 Chipperfield, Robert B., 574
 Cho Chung Hwan, 144, 146, 233-234, 359
 Chou En-lai:
   British relations with Communist China, 648-649, 1011
   Chinese Communist aggression in Asia, 310-311
   Geneva Conference on Indochina: Charges against France and United States, 781-782; composition of conference, 735, 736; restricted sessions, 793*n*, 819-821; role at conference, 410, 1251, 1499, 1549
   Geneva Conference on Korea, 11, 174, 176, 177, 190-191, 390, 1170-1171, 1176
   Indochina:
   Cessation of hostilities negotiations: French military meetings with Viet Minh, 971-974; international control problems, 913, 946, 984, 996, 1011, 1019-1020, 1050, 1061, 1088-1090, 1139; Laos and Cambodia, 840, 856, 863-864, 878, 1158-1159, 1163, 1170-1171, 1173-1176, 1181-1182, 1201, 1208, 1211-1212, 1308-1309, 1378-1380, 1449-1450, 1466; order of discussion of political and military aspects, 908, 910; six-point proposal, 945, 946, 1088-1089, 1174-1175; Soviet proposal, 832; Viet Minh proposal, 782
   Meeting with Ho Chi Minh, 1322
   Meeting with Mendès-France, 1209, 1212-1213, 1222, 1233-1234, 1239-1241, 1347
   Korean unification, 310-312, 349-351, 353, 361-362, 377, 381-384
   Southeast Asia defense pact, 1420-1421
   Vietnam, partition of, 1368
 Chough Pyong Ok, 313
 Churchill, Sir Winston Leonard Spencer, 558-559, 594, 616, 617, 628, 638*n*, 651, 698, 834-835, 869-870, 1169-1170, 1254-1255, 1260-1261
 Clutterbuck, Sir Alexander, 930-931
 Cogy, Gen. René, 604, 881, 1044
 Colombo Conference, 198, 610, 612, 623, 625, 695

- Congress, U.S., 390, 393, 574, 706-708, 1069, 1223-1224
- Cooper, Chester L., 405, 407, 758-760, 881-882, 1023
- Corner, F. H., 11, 654
- Cowles, Willard B., 1503-1504
- Crawford, Boyd, 574
- Critchley, T. K., 10, 654, 663
- Crowe, Philip K., 610-612
- Cuenco, Miguel, 12, 612
- Cutler, Robert, 599-600, 943
- Daley, Brig. Gen. John, 8, 404, 407, 762
- Daridan, Jean, 81*n*, 102-103
- Davis, Vice Adm. Arthur C., 8, 404, 459, 520-521, 544, 606, 654, 659, 662, 690-691, 814-815, 1148*n*
- Day, Henry B., 539-540, 1236-1237, 1281, 1297-1298
- Dean, Arthur H. :
 Geneva Conference on Korea, 94*n*, 117, 144-146, 178, 317-319
 Korea : Panmunjom mission, 15*n* ;
 Van Fleet mission, 244-245, 301
 Korean unification : U.S. alternate plans for, 168-169, 191-196, 200-203, 205-207, 212-217, 226-229, 233-234, 237-241, 244-248, 253-254, 258-259 ; U.S.-ROK draft principles, 273-277, 281-286, 291-298, 301-303, 306-309, 321*n*
- Debarnot, Maj., 762, 764-766, 767
- de Beus, J. G., 455-456
- de Brebisson, Col. Michel, 409, 542, 762-767, 1166, 1276, 1322
- de Folin, Jacques, 409, 544, 1348
- De Grave, Vladimir, 9, 405
- Dejean, Maurice, 14*n*, 432, 609, 639-640, 727, 773, 806*n*, 1210, 1253
- de la Chevalerie, Daufresne, 10, 343
- Deltiel, Brig. Gen. Henri, 409, 986, 1518, 1530, 1548-1549
- de Manziarly, Alexandre, 409
- de Margerie. See Jacquin de Margerie.
- Deressa, 119
- de Salis, Jean, 129, 140
- Dien Bien Phu. See under Vietnam.
- Dillon, C. Douglas :
 Geneva Conference on Indochina : Adviser to, proposed, 459 ; French expectations, 435-437, 445-446 ; French fears of failure of, 699-700, 1335-1336 ; participation question, 456, 486, 524-527, 541, 613-614 ; postponement rumor, 466 ; preparations, 486, 492-495, 517-520, 527-529, 542-543 ; Soviet position, 483-484 ; U.S. role, 1336-1338, 1496*n*
 Indochina : Cease-fire question, 697-698 ; French request for military aid, 589*n* ; Mendès-France meeting with Chou En-lai, 1209*n*, 1212-1213, 1239-1241 ; Mendès-France meeting with Smith, 1188*n* ; U.S.-French military talks, 1001*n* ; U.S. military intervention in, 902*n*, 1131-1132 ; withdrawal of forces question, 525-526
 Vietnam, 541, 1127*n*, 1239, 1270*n*
 Dinh Xuan Kieu, 411
 Dixon, Sir Pierson, 928, 933, 937, 954-955, 968-969
 Doan Thuan, 411
 Donovan, William J., 980
 Dop Chuon, 1252
 Draper, Morris, Jr., 406
 Drew, Walter, 9, 82-87, 405
 Drumright, Everett F., 113*n*, 506-507, 539*n*, 1236-1237
 Dulles, Allen, 944, 977
 Dulles, John Foster :
 Address before American Legion, 16
 British relations with Communist China, 648, 1011
 Communist threat in Asia, address, 487
 Geneva Conference on Indochina :
 Australian interest in, 481*n*, 557-558
 Basic instructions for U.S. participation, 778-779, 1189, 1247-1248, 1271, 1389-1391
 Communist bloc unity, 621
 Conclusion of, news conference statement, 1550-1551
 Departure prior to opening, 459, 487, 641, 644, 666, 677
 Duration, 864*n*
 Final Declaration on Indochina, 1396-1397, 1403, 1453*n*, 1459-1460, 1472*n*
 Foreign Minister level, suspension and resumption of negotiations at, 1117-1118, 1137*n*, 1146-1147, 1148*n*, 1238, 1275, 1294, 1309-1311, 1330-1333, 1351-1355, 1367, 1381-1382
 French-U.S. position and meeting with Mendès-France, 1333, 1348-1355, 1359-1361, 1363-1364, 1375-1376
 Lack of progress, 1067, 1068, 1117-1118, 1282
 Mendès-France role, 1495-1496
 NSC consideration of French proposal for, 731-732
 Participation question, 579-580, 603, 608-609, 612-613, 620-621, 641-644, 666-667, 670-671, 739, 889-890
 Preparations for, 485-486, 491-492, 494-495, 514, 544-548, 553-558, 574-576, 579-580, 591-594, 641-644, 667-669
 Press briefing, 15-17, 559-569

Dulles, John Foster—Continued
 Geneva Conference on Indochina—
 Continued
 Radio-TV address to nation, 720-
 726
 Soviet position, 608, 644
 Special briefing, 535-538
 Trip to Paris, 540
 U.S. representative to, 403
 U.S. role at, 994-995, 1103-1105
 Western solidarity at, need for, 672
 Geneva Conference on Korea :
 Arrival statement, 552-553
 Berlin Agreement, 18, 415
 Communist attacks against United States, question of rebuttal,
 165-168
 Communist bloc unity, 621
 Congratulations to Smith at conclusion, 390*n*
 Declaration of Sixteen, 368-370
 Duration, 864*n*
 European problems, Soviet interest
 in, 469-470
 Final phase and termination, 334-
 335, 336*n*, 341, 370-371, 374
 Five-power concept, 424-425, 484-
 485
 Head of U.S. Delegation, 7, 459
 Official languages, 43
 Preparations for, 14, 29, 35, 47-48,
 53-54, 56-58, 68-69, 75-77, 88-
 89, 95-96, 117, 124-125, 128-130,
 139-144, 151-155, 157, 468, 532-
 534
 Press briefing, 15-17, 559-569
 Restricted session, 173-177
 ROK participation question, 21-22,
 39-43, 77-78, 115
 South African refusal of invitation,
 58-59
 Special briefing, 119-124
 U.S. Delegation guidance meeting,
 182-185
 Indochina :
 Cessation of hostilities negotiations: Agreements, signature of, 1478-1479; British position,
 576-577; French position, 590,
 1256-1259; French proposal,
 747; international control problems, 966-967, 1171-1172, 1175,
 1221-1222, 1392-1393, 1429-
 1430; Laos and Cambodia, 592,
 912-913, 1038, 1174-1175, 1226.
 1246-1247, 1338-1339; Soviet position, 617-618; U.S. basic principles, 787-789; U.S. guarantees, 1361-1362, 1403; U.S. position in support of agreement, 1309, 1324-1327; Viet
 Minh proposal, 967
 Internationalization of war, 728-
 729, 742, 785-786, 886, 1056,
 1067-1068, 1147

Dulles, John Foster—Continued
 Indochina—Continued
 Situation in: Briefing of Congressional leaders on, 706-708; five-power military talks, 842*n*, 856-
 857, 858-859, 866, 885, 888-889,
 900*n*, 934, 940-941, 950, 1068-
 1069; joint military commission, proposed, 595*n*; message to President Eisenhower, 605-
 607; NSC meeting on, 943;
 U.S.-French meetings, 1187-
 1188, 1342-1343; U.S.-French military conversations, 1001-
 1002; U.S.-Soviet discussion,
 895*n*
 U.S. military aid question, 588*n*,
 639-640
 U.S. military intervention, question of, 557-559, 570-571, 595*n*, 638-
 639, 648-649, 1081-1082, 1100-
 1101, 1166-1167
 U.S. public opinion poll, 911-912
 Korea, Van Fleet mission, 94*n*, 290
 Korean unification: Elections under international supervision, 156;
 ROK proposal, 317*n*, ROK and North Korean proposals, comparison of, 162; Soviet principles of agreement for, 356, 357; U.N. resolution, 171; UNCURK supervision, proposed, 225-226; U.S.
 Alternate Plan B, 172-173, 178-
 181, 207-210, 224-225, 237, 241-
 244; U.S.-ROK draft basic principles for, 269-270, 289-290, 294-295; withdrawal of forces question, 54, 233-235
 Presidential commendation, 693
 Southeast Asia, defense of, 596-598,
 622-625, 654-656, 660-665, 704*n*,
 705-706, 720-726, 745-747, 798-
 800, 868-870, 885, 1125, 1410, 1431,
 1453-1454, 1470, 1493, 1551
 Trip to London and Paris, 517, 532,
 1187-1188
 Trip to Paris for meeting with Mendès-France, 1342-1343
 U.N. Peace Observation Commission
 for Indochina, proposed, 786-787,
 790-791, 851-852, 875-877, 882-
 883, 927-928, 938, 941-942, 964,
 966, 1012-1013, 1058, 1081, 1179
 Vietnam: Cessation of hostilities negotiations, 1148, 1172, 1225, 1275,
 1393-1394; Dien Bien Phu, 602,
 607-608, 676-677; partition question, 1270; situation in, 578-579,
 800-801, 892-894, 927, 1044-1045,
 1394
 Vietnam, State of, 1147, 1324-1325
 Visit of Churchill to United States,
 558-559
 Dwan, Lt. Col. John E., 9, 405, 1148*n*.
 1149, 1166, 1242, 1283-1286, 1292-

- Dwan, Lt. Col. John E.—Continued
1293, 1313-1314, 1382-1384, 1444-1445, 1454-1455
- Eddy, Donald B., 47, 145
- Eden, Anthony:
British relations with Communist China, 648
Colombo Conference, 623
Geneva Conference on Indochina:
Agreed documents, 1498; chairmanship question, 642, 708-709, 735; Foreign Minister phase, suspension and resumption, 1136, 1165, 1170, 1304-1305, 1311*n*; head of British Delegation, 412, 454; lack of progress, 1114-1117, 1124-1125; participation question, 620-621, 735; preparations for, 514, 544-548, 553-557, 575-576, 593-594, 641-644, 669-670; restricted session, need for, 792-793, 819-821; tactics for, 776-777, 849-851, 873-875; termination, 1083-1085
Geneva Conference on Korea: Basic principles for, 260, 264, 337; Chinese Communist participation in future Korean discussions, 390; Declaration of Sixteen, 371, 387; final phase and termination of, 333-334, 340, 343, 383-385, 389, 1083-1085; head of British Delegation, 13, 454; outcome, 210; preparations for, 47, 95-96, 123, 128-130, 139-140, 142, 151-155, 415; restricted session, 174-177, 184; U.S. request for support in rebuttal of Communist charges, 165-168
Indochina:
Cessation of hostilities negotiations: Agreements. discussions on, 1404-1409; British position, 575-577, 777, 782, 879, 910, 911, 921, 925, 965-966, 970-974, 1404-1409; international control problems, 931-933, 993-994, 998, 1011-1012, 1013, 1032-1033, 1078-1079, 1114-1115, 1153-1154, 1406-1407, 1421-1423, 1565; Laos and Cambodia, 832, 840, 863-864, 1115-1116, 1132-1134, 1170-1171, 1173-1174, 1185, 1201-1202
Five-power staff study, 791-792, 836*n*
U.S. military intervention in, 570-571, 629-630, 638-639, 648-649, 750, 815-816, 1128-1129
U.S.-French position, 1348-1355, 1359-1361
Korean unification: Basic principles, need for, 264; international supervision of elections, 156, 174, 176-177, 264, 270-271, 279, 280,
- Eden, Anthony—Continued
Korean unification—Continued
287, 343, 363; North Korean proposal, 263-264; ROK 14-point proposal, 306; U.S. Alternate Plan B, 257-258
Malaya, 1084
Nuclear weapons, 607
Relationship with Dulles, 651
Southeast Asia, defense of, 622-625, 698-699, 774-776, 1066-1067, 1420-1421, 1429, 1470*n*, 1473-1474
U.N. Peace Observation Commission for Indochina, proposed, 823, 834, 852*n*, 954-955, 1030-1031, 1083-1084, 1105
Vietnam, 1404-1405, 1407-1409
- Eisenhower, Dwight D.:
Declaration on common principles of Anglo-American policy, 1260-1261
Geneva Conference on Indochina, 640-641, 949*n*, 1137*n*, 1169, 1333-1334, 1436, 1455, 1503
Geneva Conference on Korea, 45-46, 103-105, 532-534, 691-692, 1503
Indochina, 442*n*, 570*n*, 594-595, 599-600, 604-605, 616, 1123*n*, 1282
Korea, 42*n*, 44-45
Southeast Asia, defense, 555, 692-693, 710*n*, 887, 1254-1255
Vietnam, fall of Dien Bien Phu, 578*n*, 716
- Ekvald, Lt. Col. Robert, 406
Elbrick, Charles Burke, 470*n*
Ely, Gen. Paul, 544, 854, 943, 1044, 1103, 1111, 1168
Erkin, Feridun C., 119
Erskine, Gen. G. B., 475-479
European Defense Community, 418-419, 427, 532, 533, 618, 774, 1043
- Falaize, Pierre-Louis, 409, 603, 604, 608-609
Fedenko, F. A., 412
Fedorenko, N. T., 12, 412
Ferguson, Col. Robert G., 8, 404, 407, 762
Ferro, Maurice, 1150
Fierst, Herbert A., 119
Fischer, Martin, 1302-1303
Flanagan, Thomas E., 822
Flemming, Arthur S., 943
Ford, John F., 413
Forsyth, D. D., 58, 59*n*
France (see also French subheadings under other subjects):
Laniel government, 581, 582, 598-599, 618, 619, 661, 694, 712-714, 777*n*, 789*n*, 806, 829, 902, 1040, 1120, 1128
Mendès-France government, 1128, 1178, 1198
Treaty negotiations with State of Vietnam. See Vietnam, State of: Treaties with France.

- France—Continued
 U.S. aid to Indochina. See under Indochina : Situation in.
- Frédéric-Dupont, Edouard, 408, 1041-1044
- French Associated States, independence question (see also Cambodia ; Laos ; Vietnam, State of), 113, 416, 447, 508, 514, 530-531, 537, 546-547, 657, 658, 753, 780, 935-936, 968, 988, 1093
- Fromm, Joe, 1251
- Fulbright, J. W., 574
- Fulton, James G., 574
- Gallman, Waldemar J., 59n
- Garcia, Carlos P., 12, 185, 223, 260, 306, 343, 358, 379-380, 386, 612-613
- Geneva Conference on Indochina, May 8-July 21, 1954 (see also Geneva Conference on Korea) :
 British position, 576-577, 583-584, 834-835
 British-U.S. relationship at, 953
 Cambodian program for, 767-768, 1425-1426
 Cease-fire during, question of, 827
 Chairmanship question, 642-644, 647, 669-671, 700, 708-710, 735
 Chou En-lai role at, 410, 1251, 1499, 1549
 Communiqués on restricted sessions, 988n, 1001, 1204-1205
 Communist delegations, 891, 952
 Communist intentions, joint State Department-CIA estimate, 758-760
 Communist position, 483-484, 528, 608, 827-828, 1119-1120, 1192-1193, 1344-1346, 1421, 1429, 1492
 Composition (see also Participants ; Participation questions, infra), 426-427, 454-456, 482, 486, 497, 505-506, 514, 528, 535, 560-561, 579-580, 586-587, 591-593, 597-598, 612-613, 620-621, 643, 644, 646-647, 663, 669-670, 686-687, 889-890
 Conclusion, 1496n, 1499, 1501-1502, 1547, 1549-1551
 Declarations :
 Final Declaration on Indochina :
 Final text, 1540-1542 ; French drafts, 1346-1347, 1355-1356, 1367-1368, 1398-1400, 1400-1402, 1407, 1438-1439, 1460-1462, 1474-1476 ; translated text, 1485-1487 ; U.S. comments on, 1403-1404, 1462-1463, 1474, 1476, 1480-1481, 1485, 1494-1495, Vietnamese draft amendment, 1498-1499, 1545-1546 ; Western reaction to, 1498-1499
 Soviet counterproposal, 1376-1388, 1396-1397
- Geneva Conference on Indochina—Con.
 Declarations—Continued
 Unilateral declarations : Cambodia, 1456, 1467, 1469-1470, 1476-1477, 1484, 1488, 1543, 1544 ; *Laos, 1419, 1456, 1468, 1469, 1482-1483, 1489-1490, 1542-1544 ; Republic of France, 1482, 1545 ; U.S., 1309, 1361-1362, 1391, 1395, 1411-1412, 1452-1453, 1459-1460, 1471-1472, 1500-1501
 U.S. message to Vietnamese Prime Minister on status of U.S. relations with Vietnam, 1324-1327
 Vietnamese statement of disassociation with, 1432-1434, 1439-1441, 1492
- Dulles' nonparticipation, 487, 641-642, 677-678, 689
- Duration, 864-865, 952, 967, 1007, 1066, 1109-1110
- Eisenhower's proposed radio-TV address in event of failure, 1436, 1455
- European problems, Soviet interest in discussion of, 1110, 1466-1467
- Expenses, sharing of, 427-428
- Foreign Minister phase, preparations for suspension : Composition of conference after departure of Foreign Ministers, question of, 1146-1149, 1165, 1166, 1170, 1226-1227, 1238, 1271 ; continuation of conference, question of, 1174, 1176-1178, 1196-1198, 1202, 1205, 1249-1250, 1251n, 1265 ; departure of Foreign Ministers, 875, 981, 992-993, 1136-1137, 1170 ; departure of Smith, 935, 940, 949-950, 992-993, 1053, 1136-1137, 1146-1147, 1148-1149, 1205-1206
- French Foreign Ministers : Bidault nonparticipation, 641-642 ; Mendès-France decision-making role, 1495-1496
- French preconference position, 417, 432, 435, 437, 444-446, 485-486, 493-494, 496, 575-576, 581-584, 689-690
- Headquarters of delegations, 403, 407, 408, 410, 411, 412
- Invitations question, 449-450, 455-456, 668, 718-720, 734-737, 770
- Lack of progress and question of breakup, 1067-1068, 1083-1084, 1118, 1119, 1149-1150, 1151-1152, 1155, 1156, 1344-1346, 1436, 1465
- Laotian position, 540-541, 750, 1303-1304
- Meeting schedules, 401-402
- Meetings :
 Drafting Committee on Indochina, 955-963

- Geneva Conference on Indochina—Con.
Meetings—Continued
Meetings of the Six: May 10, 747-749; May 14, 794-795; May 17, 826-828; May 18, 838; May 24, 906; May 25, 916; May 27, 938-940; June 4, 1029-1030; June 10, 1109; June 18, 1175-1176; July 18, 1424-1425
- Plenary sessions: First, 734-737; Second, 749-755; Third, 780-785; Fourth, 795-799, 818-819; Fifth, 1069-1079; Sixth, 1087-1094; Seventh, 1111-1117; Eighth, 1497-1502
- Restricted sessions: First, 831-834; Second, 839-841; Third, 854-856; Fourth, 877-881; Fifth, 907-911; Sixth, 920-927; Seventh, 945-949; Eighth, 970-975; Ninth, 983-988; Tenth, 995-1001; Eleventh, 1015-1021; Twelfth, 1031-1038; Thirteenth, 1137-1146; Fourteenth, 1157-1165; Fifteenth, 1179-1187; Sixteenth, 1200-1205; Seventeenth, 1215-1221; Eighteenth, 1242-1246; Nineteenth, 1261-1265; Twentieth, 1272-1275; Twenty-first, 1289-1291; Twenty-second, 1315-1320; Twenty-third, 1431-1434
- Schedule of plenary and restricted sessions, 401-403
- U.S. meetings with delegates:
Cambodia: July 12, 1340-1341; July 15, 1378-1381; July 18, 1425-1426
- France (see also United Kingdom and France, infra): May 24, 902-903; June 5, 1039-1040; June 15, 1150-1152; June 16, 1154-1155, 1167; June 18, 1176-1178; June 19, 1195-1196; June 21, 1209-1210; June 25, 1241-1242; July 1, 1266-1268; July 3, 1278-1280; July 6, 1286-1288; July 8, 1300-1301; July 9, 1321-1323; July 15, 1387-1388; July 19, 1452-1453
- India: May 24, 913-914; June 4, 1038-1039; July 13, 1344-1346
- Laos: July 8, 1303-1304; July 12, 1342
- Netherlands: May 10, 748-749
- Soviet Union: May 10, 755-756; May 22, 895-899; June 18, 1189-1193; July 1, 1268-1270; July 13, 1346-1347; July 21, 1496-1497
- Thailand: May 30, 978-981; June 10, 1108
- Geneva Conference on Indochina—Con.
Meetings—Continued
U.S. meetings with delegates—Con.
United Kingdom: May 15, 815-816; May 20, 874-875; May 28, 954-955; June 9, 1083-1085; June 12, 1124-1125
- United Kingdom and France: May 12, 776-777; May 19, 849-851; May 20, 873-874; May 26, 931-933; May 28, 965-966; June 1, 993-994; June 13, 1132-1134; July 17, 1405-1407
- Vietnam, State of: May 25, 914-916; June 10, 1106-1107; June 14, 1134-1136; July 3, 1277; July 7, 1298-1300; July 12, 1343-1344; July 15, 1386-1387; July 18, 1426-1428, 1440-1441
- Nature of conference, 397
- NSC discussions, 943-944, 1381
- Official languages, 471, 647, 735
- Opening date, 569, 587-588, 647, 686, 694, 709-710
- Outcome of, French concern, 699-700
- Participants, list of, 403-413
- Participation questions (see also Composition, supra; U.S. advisory role, infra): Associated States, 16, 416, 417, 428-432, 453-456, 506-507, 518-519, 542-543, 545-546, 550, 663, 730, 737; Australia, 480-481, 663, 670-671; Communist China (see Geneva Conference on Korea: Chinese Communist participation); Pathet Lao and Free Cambodian groups, 428-429, 729, 734-739, 770, 787, 1298; Philippines, 539-540, 670-671, 884, 889-890; Thailand, 430, 670-671, 884, 889-890; Viet Minh, 512-513, 518-519, 584, 585, 663, 668, 734-737; Vietnam, 526-529, 531, 541, 545-546, 550, 565, 586-587, 603-604, 608-609, 613-614, 620-621, 642, 668-670
- Preparations:
ANZUS pact meeting, 663
- French consultations with: Associated States, 417, 435, 437, 542, 584; Soviet representatives, 527-528, 574, 591-592
- Paris Working Group, 503-506, 527-529, 542-548
- Press background briefing, 15, 16-17
- State Department briefings, 535-538, 670-671
- State Department Working Group, 399, 444-445

- Geneva Conference on Indochina—Con.
Preparations—Continued
- U.S. preconference meetings with representatives: Australia, 480-481, 529-530, 557-558, 649, 650; France, 491-495, 517-520, 694-696, 702-703; Thailand, 686-687; Turkey, 715; United Kingdom and France, 130, 139-140, 430-431, 446, 451, 494-495, 518, 527-528, 540, 550-552, 575-576, 593-594, 641-644, 709-710; United Kingdom—France—Vietnam, 669-670; Vietnam, 717-718
  - Western position, question of, 672, 704
  - Press leaks, 933, 936
  - Restricted sessions, question of, 792-793, 799, 820, 1109
  - Review of, 1374-1375, 1431-1432, 1434, 1447-1448, 1551-1552
  - Seating arrangements, 647
  - Secretariat, 648, 709-710
  - Tactics for, 747-749, 776-777, 779-780, 794-795, 811-814, 826-827, 838, 849-850, 873-874, 906, 1029-1030, 1109
  - U.S. advisory role, 445-446, 448-451, 458-459, 482, 504-506, 524-525, 774, 784-785, 896-897, 994-995, 1002-1004, 1055, 1067, 1323-1324, 1405-1406
  - U.S. basic instructions, 778-779, 1389-1391; withdrawal of, 1189, 1198, 1247-1248
  - U.S.-British statement of position in event of failure of, 1254-1255
  - U.S. guidelines, 463-466
  - U.S. minimum position, 437-442, 446-448, 496-497
  - U.S. participation in unsatisfactory settlement, question of, 523, 645-646, 675-676, 991, 1103-1105
  - U.S. position: Clarification, 1365-1367, 1434, 1503; outline, 672-676, 690-691
  - U.S. position papers:
    - Defense Department contribution to, 471-479, 520-524
    - Papers: Arguments against partition, coalition government, plebiscite, and immediate elections in Indochina, 681-685; draft position paper, 488-491; negotiations on Indochina, 417-424; U.S. aid in postwar reconstruction of Indochina, 517; U.S. participation in conference, 481-483, 516
    - U.S. press briefings, 950-953, 1002-1008
- Geneva Conference on Indochina—Con.
Vietnamese concerns re holding of conference, 419-420, 432, 732-733, 859-862
- Vietnamese conditions for participation, 669-670
  - Vietnamese consideration of withdrawal, 1225
  - Vietnamese contacts with Viet Minh delegation, 881-882
  - West German interest in, 1302-1303
  - Geneva Conference on Korea, Apr. 26-June 15, 1954 (see also Geneva Conference on Indochina):
    - Allied delegations:
      - Declaration. See Declaration by the Sixteen, infra.
      - Meetings. See infra.
      - Proposal for meetings of, 151, 152
      - U.S. military briefing, 100-102
    - Allied Secretary General, 102n, 388
    - Allied Working Group of Nine, 156, 231, 259, 266-267
    - ANZUS meeting, 530-532
    - Arrival statement by Dulles, 552-553
    - Berlin Agreement as basis for, 14n, 15-17, 18n, 19-21, 24-25, 39, 42, 50-51, 126-127, 243, 414, 415, 439, 444, 467, 481, 488, 496, 694, 778
    - British-U.S. relationship at, 651, 679-680, 1099
    - Chairmanship question, 102-103, 120, 121, 129, 139-143, 145, 531
    - Chinese Communist participation (five-power concept), 16-17, 18n, 20, 23, 26-27, 30, 41, 67-68, 70-74, 89-91, 98, 120-121, 126-128, 130, 414, 416, 424-425, 457, 467, 469-470, 484-485, 496-497, 503, 533-534, 561, 663, 734-739
    - Communist bloc unity, 621
    - Communist charges against United States and United Nations, 154-155, 619; Allied reaction to, 157, 162-163, 184-185, 200, 210, 250-251; Allied rebuttals, 187-189, 197-199, 263-264; Chinese Communist reaction to Allied rebuttals, 231-232
    - Communist contacts with U.S. Delegation, 4, 118
    - Coordinator, 416, 425
    - Declaration by the Sixteen:
      - Approval, 374-375
      - Draft texts, 361, 365-366, 368-369, 372-374
      - Final text, 385-386
      - Positions on: Belgian, 379n, 382, 383; British, 371; Canadian, 375; Chinese Communist, 381, 383, 384; Colombian, 367; New Zealand, 375; North Korean, 381-382; Soviet, 381; Thai, 375

Geneva Conference on Korea—Con.

Declaration by the Sixteen—Con.

Presentation at final plenary session, 379*n*, 381, 382

Demonstration by anti-Communist patriotic groups, 515

Dulles, duration of stay, 459, 559, 561–562, 691–692

Duration, 19, 30, 41, 46, 52, 283, 290, 300, 569, 864–865

European questions. Soviet interest in discussion of, 469–470

Expenses, sharing of, 427–428

Facilities, 28, 47, 56–58, 428, 468

Five-power concept. See Chinese Communist participation, supra.

Indian interest in, 347, 913–914

Indochina problem, separate discussion of, 23, 27, 29, 30, 35, 41–42, 51, 72–74, 416, 431, 433, 452, 535–536

Interpreters, 38, 57, 71, 120, 121, 502, 503

Introductory speeches, agreement to cutoff, 95–96, 152

Inventions: Acceptance of, 429, 455; Union of South African refusal of, 58–59, 100*n*; U.S. issuance of, 21–22, 433

Japan, implications of conference for, 510–512

Lack of progress, 315–316, 864–865, 897

Meetings:

Allied Working Group of Nine, 266–267

Deputy Representatives of Sixteen Allied Delegations: First, 146–148; Second, 168*n*–169*n*

Heads of Sixteen Allied Delegations: First, 143–144; Second, 155–157; Third, 173–174; Fourth, 184–185; Fifth, 259–261; Sixth, 304–306; Seventh, 342–344; Eighth, 357–358; Ninth, 371–372; Tenth, 374–376; Eleventh, 371–372

Plenary sessions: First, 144–145; Second, 148–151; Third, 153–155; Fourth, 157–161; Fifth, 170–171; Sixth, 187–191; Seventh, 196–200; Eighth, 223–224; Ninth, 249–251; Tenth, 262–264; Eleventh, 310–314; Twelfth, 322–324; Thirteenth, 348–354; Fourteenth, 361–365; Fifteenth, June 15, 376–385

Postconference discussions, June 16–18, 388–393

Restricted seven-power session, May 1, 156, 168, 171–177, 185, 344, 643–644

Schedules of plenary sessions and meetings of Heads of Sixteen Allied Delegations, 6–7

Geneva Conference on Korea—Con.

Meetings—Continued

United Kingdom—Soviet Union, May 5, 210

U.S. Delegation, May 3, 182–184

U.S. meetings with delegates of: Belgium, Apr. 30, 162–165; France, June 2, 337–338; Soviet Union, May 22, 315–316; Thailand, June 2, 338–339; United Kingdom, Apr. 30, 165–168; United Kingdom and France, Apr. 28, 151–153; May 12, 257–258; June 1, 333–334; June 13, 371

U.S.—ROK meetings:

Geneva with Foreign Minister Pyun and others: Apr. 30, 171–172; May 3, 185–186; May 5, 204–205; May 7, 221; May 12, 256–257; May 13, 261–262; May 21, 303–304; June 1, 329–333

Seoul with President Rhee: May 5, 202–203, 205–207; May 6, 213–215; May 7, 215–217; May 8, 226–228; May 10, 239–241; May 17, 275–277; May 21, 306–309; June 4, 344–347

U.S. comments on consultations, 185, 427

Nature of, 3, 26–27, 429–430

No-voting procedure, 383–385

Official languages, 38, 43, 57, 67, 71, 72, 126, 139–140, 502, 503

Organizational and procedural matters, agreement on, 143–145

Opening statements, 148–150, 153*n*, 154–155

Outcome of, report to President and Congressional leaders, 390, 393

Participants, list of, 7–13

Participation:

British Delegation, 454–455

Chinese Communist Delegation, 805–806

Neutrals, exclusion of, 16, 18*n*, 23, 72–75, 79, 104

Number of delegations, 416, 426, 428, 455–456, 493

ROK participation: Concerns, 14, 17–27, 29–32, 35, 48–53, 69–70, 78–80; conditions for attendance, 22–23, 29–31, 35–36, 44; decision to attend, 111–115; invitation, 21–22; question of nonparticipation, 32, 36; U.S. comments on efforts re ROK attendance, 26–27, 36–37, 39–43, 45–46, 55–56, 69–70, 75–79, 103–105, 115, 121–122, 531

Thai participation, 416, 429–430

U.S. participation, 459, 532–534

Geneva Conference on Korea—Con.

Position papers:

Basic U.S. Position on Korean Unification and Summary of Three Alternative Plans, 131-139

Draft U.S. Proposal for Reunification of Korea, 62-66; Alternate Plan A, 82-87; Alternate Plan B, 105-111; Alternate Plan C, 63-65

General U.S. Views on Korean Phase of Geneva Conference, 97-99

Post-Conference Standing Committee of Seven on Korea, proposed, 338-339

Postponement question, 466

Preparations:

Defense Department cooperation in preparation of position for, 434

Preconference Allied consultations, 68-69, 80-81, 129, 184, 185, 427, 460

ROK-U.S. preconference discussions, 26*n*, 27, 29*n*, 40, 42, 51-54, 55, 58, 69, 76, 93, 94, 116-117, 140-141, 144, 146

Seven-power substantive discussions, proposed, 152

Soviet aide-mémoire and tripartite replies, 38, 56-58, 67-68, 70-72, 88-92, 96-97, 126-130, 467-468, 502, 503, 544-545, 552

State Department briefing, 47-48

State Department task forces, 416-417, 425

State Department Working Group, 444-445

Timing of opening of conference, 493

Press conferences, 15-17, 119-124, 559-569

Press coverage, ROK reaction to, 332-333

Purpose and objectives, 97-99, 122-124, 157-161

Report to the United Nations, 183, 330, 331, 339, 344, 368, 388-389, 391-394

Republic of China aide-mémoire, 498-500

ROK withdrawal, question of, 169

Seating arrangements, 102-103, 120, 121, 124, 125, 128, 141-143, 531

Site, 16, 18

Soviet role, 16, 20, 23, 30, 41, 50, 73, 76, 79, 98, 905

Termination:

Allied draft letter to Mo'otov from U.S.-French-British Delegates, 360, 369-371

Allied preparation for final phase and breakoff on U.N. issue, 314-315, 317-319, 324-327, 333-344.

Geneva Conference on Korea—Con.

Termination—Continued

Allied preparation—Continued

360-361, 367-368, 371-372, 379-380, 382, 383, 389-390, 1108, 1149

British points of agreement proposal, 340-341

Indian proposal to announce points of disagreement, 347

Last plenary session, 379*n*, 1085

North Korean position on U.N. issue, 340

ROK position, 329-333, 339, 341-342, 359

U.S. approval, 374

U.S. message to Rhee, 366-367

U.S. press conference remarks on, 1097-1100

Title of conference, 27, 433

U.N. observer question, 493

UNGA resolution calling for conference, 41, 42, 50, 458*n*

U.S. briefing of Southeast Asia countries and Sixteen Allied Delegations on, 533*n*, 534

Georges-Picot, Leone, 409, 1253

Getz, John P., 9, 405, 506-507, 711-718, 1268, 1440

Gibson, William M., 459

Gillette, Guy M., 574

Gillmore, Maj. Gen. William M., 979, 980

Gleason, S. Everett, 942-944

Gleysteen, William H., Jr., 406

Gonzales Barros, Luis, 10

Gordon, Robert, 406

Gowen, Franklin C., 8, 405, 515, 1547, 1548-1549

Graham, Walter G. C., 13, 412

Gromyko, A. A., 12, 151, 411, 700, 895, 955, 959-960, 984, 986-987, 1128

Gros, André, 409

Guillaume, Gen. Augustin, 604

Guillemetz, Col. Jacques, 409

Gullion, Edmund, 417-424, 442-444, 446-448, 1281

Ha Van Lau, Col., 986

Hagerty, James C., 532*n*, 1333-1334

Hamilton, A. A. M., 58, 119

Hamilton, John, 8, 405, 407

Hammarskjold, Dag H. A. C., 103, 129, 493, 531, 937-938, 1012-1013

Han, Philip, 69, 119

Harris, William P., 407

Harry, R. L., 10

Heath, Donald R.:

Geneva Conference on Indochina:

Advisory role at, 404, 407, 646*n*, 1196-1198

Meetings of the Six on Indochina, 747-749, 826-827, 838, 906, 916, 938-939, 982-983, 1029-1030, 1155-1156

- Heath, Donald R.—Continued
 Geneva Conference on Indochina—
 Continued
 Participation question, 512–513, 541,
 603–604, 729
 Preparations for, 460–463, 529–530,
 544, 646–648, 672–676, 717–718
 Restricted sessions, tactics for, 813–
 814
 U.S. position papers, 515–517
 Vietnam: Position, 1009; tactics,
 779–780
- Geneva Conference on Korea, 8, 459
- Indochina: Cessation of hostilities negotiations, 688–689, 744–745,
 890–891, 1049–1051, 1205–1206,
 1227–1228, 1251–1252, 1423–1424;
 situation, 762, 829, 1041–1044,
 1051*n*, 1150–1152, 1225, 1280–1282;
 U.S. military intervention in,
 1048–1049, 1149*n*
- Southeast Asia, defense of, 821–822
- Vietnam: Cessation of hostilities agreement, 1339–1340; demarcation line, 1049; situation in, 818–
 819, 823–826, 843*n*, 857, 881–882,
 1122, 1134–1136, 1222–1223, 1252–
 1254
- Vietnam, State of, 571–573, 584–586,
 1107
- Heaney, Arnold D. P., 119, 530–532
- Heisbourg, Georges, 11
- Hemmendinger, Noel, 69–70
- Henkin, Louis, 8, 119, 405
- Hennes, Richard V., 7, 404, 729, 849, 1128–1130, 1490–1491
- Heywot, Ato Zaude Gabre, 11, 16, 199–
 200, 386
- Hickenlooper, Bourke B., 574
- Ho Chi Minh, 427*n*, 430, 455–456, 597– 598, 1322
- Hoang Van Hoan, 408, 955
- Hodge, Lt. Gen. John R., 203
- Hoey, Robert E., 10, 1297
- Hong, Jin Ki, 12, 254–255, 256
- Hoppenot, Henri, 933, 954–955, 968–969
- Horse, Outerbridge, 530–532
- Huan Hsiang, 410, 805, 820
- Huang Hua, 231–232, 410, 621*n*, 805, 1449
- Hull, Maj. Gen. John E., 37*n*, 61, 105, 111, 112, 246, 248
- Huston, Col. Milburn N., 9, 406
- Ilyichev, L. F., 12, 412
- India (see also Indian subheadings under other subjects), 1378
- Indochina (see also French Associated States):
 Alternative U.S. policies in, implementation of, 652–654
 Arms aid to, effectiveness of cessation of, 420
 Cease-fire demand, French opposition to, 697–698, 703, 712, 713
- Indochina—Continued
 Cessation of hostilities negotiations
 (see also under Vietnam):
 Agreements:
 Chinese Communist position on,
 1428–1429
 Comparison of agreements with U.S.-French position on Indochina, 1491
 Date of signature, 1487–1488
 Document review by British, Soviet, and French Delegations,
 1388–1389
 French outline for, 1372–1373
 French plan for, 1380
 Progress on, 1473–1474
 Restrictive effect of, U.S. legal opinion on, 1503–1504, 1552– 1562
 Signature, 1478–1479
 Texts: Cambodia, 1531–1539;
 Laos, 1521–1530; Vietnam,
 1505–1520
 Working paper, 1404–1405, 1408–
 1409
- Armistice terminology, French positions on, 543–544, 590, 593–594, 763
- British five questions on: Comments on, 777, 782, 785, 819,
 820; U.S., British and French discussion of answers to, 811–
 813; U.S. replies, 793–794
- British preconference position, 576–
 577, 834–835
- British talking paper, 917–919
- Canadian views, 628–629
- Chinese Communist six-point proposal, 460–463, 945–948, 957– 960
- Economic rehabilitation, 615, 635
- Free exchange of goods between regrouping zones, 1423–1424
- French economic and cultural interests in, 754
- French opening position, 729–733,
 735, 737
- French outline proposal, 694–697,
 700–703
- French six-point proposal, 436, 440–
 444, 447, 449–450, 461, 464–465,
 491, 519, 525–528, 531, 550–552,
 575–577, 582–583, 586, 631–635,
 689–690
- French seven-point proposal, 714–
 715, 731–733, 739–742, 744–745,
 750, 752–753, 779, 829, 907–910
- French and Viet Minh proposals as basis for discussion, 831–832,
 863, 873–875, 878–880, 890–891
- Indian position, 822, 913, 914, 930–
 931, 1030
- Indian six-point proposal at Colombio Conference, 436, 440–441,
 444, 564, 610–612, 625, 629, 635–
 638, 653

Indochina—Continued

Cessation of hostilities negotiations—Continued

International control problems, positions on: Australian, 1120, 1121; British, 769, 777, 916-919, 923, 931-933, 993-994, 998, 1013, 1014, 1029, 1032, 1033, 1037, 1074, 1078-1079, 1095, 1096, 1153-1154, 1249, 1255-1256, 1272, 1274, 1276, 1291-1292, 1294-1295, 1405-1407, 1421-1423, 1455-1456; Chinese Communist, 946, 984-985, 996, 1001, 1019, 1020, 1289-1290; French, 694-696, 715, 743, 762-763, 764, 777, 931, 982-983, 987, 993-994, 997-998, 1001, 1013, 1014, 1017-1019, 1029, 1034-1037, 1050-1051, 1061-1062, 1065, 1066, 1070-1071, 1149-1150, 1154-1156, 1161, 1164, 1208-1210, 1255-1256, 1259, 1263, 1267, 1268, 1272-1274, 1276, 1278-1280, 1287, 1290-1292, 1294-1295, 1305-1308, 1317, 1369-1371, 1387-1388, 1394-1395, 1405-1407, 1421-1423, 1455-1456; Indian, 913; Soviet, 973, 986-987, 999-1001, 1033-1034, 1059-1060, 1110, 1128, 1153-1154, 1161-1165, 1249, 1255-1256, 1260, 1266n, 1268, 1272-1273, 1276, 1278-1280, 1291-1292, 1295, 1421-1423; U.S., 509, 615, 696-697, 743, 777, 794, 923, 931-934, 963-964, 966-967, 969-970, 973, 981-982, 983, 984, 985, 990, 992, 994-995, 996, 1001, 1004, 1006-1008, 1013, 1014, 1019, 1031-1032, 1035-1038, 1048, 1050-1051, 1059-1062, 1075-1077, 1094-1096, 1110, 1128, 1137-1138, 1143, 1146, 1149-1150, 1156, 1171-1172, 1175-1177, 1199n, 1221-1222, 1242, 1246, 1259, 1264, 1268, 1292-1295, 1311-1313, 1327-1328, 1334-1335, 1392-1393, 1405-1407, 1429-1430, 1455-1456; Viet Minh, 998-999, 1001, 1020, 1261-1265, 1278-1280, 1316-1317; Vietnamese, 1015-1017, 1087, 1156, 1161, 1274-1275

International guarantees, positions on: Australian, 1130; British, 583-584, 768-769, 1429-1430; Chinese Communist, 946, 1139; French, 814-815, 821-822, 1070-1071, 1138-1139, 1149, 1394-1395; Indian, 1130; Soviet, 1137-1138, 1140, 1143-1147; U.S., 727-728, 740-741, 743, 762,

Indochina—Continued

Cessation of hostilities negotiations—Continued

International guarantees—Con.
982, 990, 1138, 1141-1143, 1149; Viet Minh, 1139-1140

Laos and Cambodia:
Chinese Communist concern, 1170-1171, 1173-1176, 1211-1215, 1233-1234, 1240-1241, 1378-1381, 1466

French compromise proposal, 1195-1196, 1202-1206, 1211

International control problems, positions on: British, 1216-1219; Cambodian, 768, 782, 982, 986, 1014, 1015, 1029, 1031-1032, 1072, 1156, 1217, 1242, 1263-1264, 1290, 1291, 1318, 1535-1536; Chinese Communist, 1216, 1245-1246; French, 1215-1216, 1218, 1243-1244, 1369-1371; Laotian, 150, 1088, 1218, 1291, 1526-1530; Soviet, 1219, 1244-1245, 1456-1459; U.S., 1219-1221; Viet Minh, 1217; Vietnam, 1217-1218

International guarantees, 1399, 1400, 1403

Need for discussion of problems, 1132, 1134, 1175, 1176

Neutralization question, 1169, 1225, 1339

Partition problem, 950-952, 1023, 1043, 1437

Prohibition of introduction of fresh forces and military personnel, 754, 973, 983, 998, 1000, 1070, 1107, 1290-1291, 1293, 1315, 1317, 1320, 1446-1447, 1523-1524, 1534

Proposals, 750, 1014-1015, 1186-1187

Regroupment of forces after cease-fire, agreement, 1524-1525

Repatriation of prisoners of war and civilian internees, 150, 1014-1015

Separate treatment of, positions on: British, 777, 812, 813, 832, 840, 849-850, 863, 878, 925, 1077-1078; Cambodian, 839, 841, 855-856, 878, 924-925, 1000, 1112, 1140, 1157, 1180-1181; Chinese Communist, 840, 856, 863-864, 878, 1038, 1158, 1159, 1162-1163, 1181-1182; French, 678-679, 696, 714, 715, 763, 812, 813, 826, 831, 839, 849-850, 854-855, 863, 864, 878, 922, 961-962, 1039, 1070; Laotian, 832, 839, 855-856, 1088, 1113, 1158,

Indochina—Continued

Cessation of hostilities negotiations—
Continued

Laos and Cambodia—Continued

Separate treatment of, positions on—Continued

1162, 1182-1183, 1449-1450;
Soviet, 832, 840-841, 895-896,
1038, 1096-1097, 1140-1141,
1160-1161, 1165, 1184; U.S.,
683-684, 696, 740, 793-794,
812, 813, 840, 849-850, 854,
864, 878, 879, 895-896, 912-
913, 922, 924, 925, 951, 962,
975-977, 1038-1039, 1075,
1093-1094, 1118, 1138, 1141-
1142, 1160, 1165, 1179-1180,
1182, 1185-1187; Viet Minh,
839-840, 855, 878, 1140, 1159-
1160, 1163-1164, 1182-1183;
Vietnamese, 832, 840, 890-
891, 920, 924, 1161, 1214-1215

Viet Minh military talks with,
1248-1249, 1251-1252, 1297-
1298, 1303-1304, 1340-1341,
1405

Withdrawal of foreign forces from:

Agreement provisions for:
Cambodia, 1532-1533;
Laos, 1521-1523

Positions on: Cambodian, 150,
768, 983, 1014-1015, 1227-
1228; French, 349, 592,
987; Laotian, 150; Soviet,
1189-1192; U.S., 615, 1005,
1189-1192, 1246-1247, 1437-
1438; Viet Minh, 753

Prisoners of war and civilian internees, exchange of, 150, 754, 921-
922, 997, 1014-1015, 1070, 1447,
1525, 1534

Simultaneous cease-fire in Indochina, question of, 754, 923, 924,
931, 932, 957, 962, 965-966, 996-
997

Soviet position, 617-618, 818

Summary of areas of agreement and disagreement, 1069-1074

U.S. basic principles for, 787-789

U.S. formula, 507-510

U.S. hypothesis of negotiations,
420-421

U.S. military position:

Defense Department draft position paper, 520-524

Defense Department views, 471-
479

U.S. proposal for Western position,
614-615, 631-635

Viet Minh proposal, 753-758, 770-
772, 780-782, 796-799, 819, 1231-
1232

Withdrawal and regroupment of armed forces into enclaves, 628,

Indochina—Continued

Cessation of hostilities negotiations—
Continued

Withdrawal—Continued

686, 762, 763, 765-766, 777, 938-
940, 955, 957-962, 987, 1233-
1234, 1239, 1241, 1373, 1421-
1423

Communist aid to, need of cessation of, 16, 17, 507-508, 530, 656, 657,
660, 1308-1309

Communist charges of U.S. aggression
in, 749-750, 751, 1090-1093

Dulles briefing of Congressional leaders, 706, 708

Dulles radio-TV address, 722-723

Emergency program for, 680-681

Five-power military talks. See under Southeast Asia.

French military briefing, 762-767

French military effort, 454, 578-579,
597, 617

French military plan (Navarre plan),
418, 439, 441, 450, 463-464, 489,
490, 616, 658-659, 685-686

Geneva Conference. See Geneva Conference on Indochina.

International Control Commission
(see also Cessation of hostilities negotiations: International control problems, supra):

Allocation of costs, 1479-1480, 1499

Commencement of work, 1499, 1567

Documents on arrangements for,
1562-1568

Geneva Conference, discussion of composition, 768-769, 777, 852-
853, 928, 932, 963-964, 966-967,
969-970, 981-982, 992, 1004,
1033-1034, 1036, 1037, 1050-
1051, 1059-1060, 1072, 1075-
1077, 1087, 1088, 1094-1096,
1120-1121, 1128, 1153-1154,
1161, 1165, 1175, 1255-1256,
1260, 1378

Internationalization of war in, positions on: British, 1128-1130;

Chinese Communist, 1089;

French, 785-786, 886, 1056, 1086-

1087, 1131-1132, 1147, 1151; U.S.,

728-729, 742, 785-786, 886, 1039-

1040, 1067-1068, 1118, 1131, 1136

Military forces in, effect of Geneva agreement on, 1556-1561

Neutralization question, 422, 763,
1169, 1225, 1339

Situation in (see also under Vietnam):

ANZUS discussion, 657-659

Congressional resolution, question
of, 1069

Indian concerns regarding, 1030,
1045-1046

Military casualties for 1954 (first quarter), 594

Indochina—Continued

- Situation in—Continued
 NSC discussions, 615-617, 731-732, 942-944
 ROK views on, 56, 113
 U.N. consideration of, question of (see also United Nations Peace Observation Commission for Indochina, proposed), 657, 718, 732, 1132-1133
 U.S. aid to, question of (see also U.S. military intervention, infra), 418, 438, 441-442, 447, 451, 475, 477, 517, 588, 655, 658, 688
 U.S. estimates on, 795, 870-873, 1079-1080
 U.S. evaluation of, 614-615, 634-635, 1280-1282
 U.S. military intervention, positions on: Australian, 557-558; British, 553-555, 556, 570-571, 577-578, 581, 583, 595-596, 599, 616, 617, 623-630, 638*n*, 648-649, 673; Chinese Communist, 674; French, 638-640, 652-654, 836, 853-854, 902-903, 1042-1043, 1100-1101, 1131-1132, 1166-1167; U.S., 243, 489-490, 548-549, 555-558, 563-564, 566, 568-570, 574, 577-578, 589, 595, 599-600, 604-605, 616, 619-620, 623, 649, 652-654, 659-662, 815-816, 836, 1042-1043, 1047, 1049, 1052-1054, 1060, 1081-1082, 1103-1104, 1123*n*, 1150, 1152, 1374
 U.S. military personnel in, 155, 442, 1556-1557
 U.S. policy, 672-673
 U.S. public opinion polls, 911-912
 U.S. British-French Commission, proposed, 595*n*
 U.S.-French discussions, 517, 853-854, 867, 1001-1002, 1041, 1044, 1296
 U.S.-French position:
 Paper on, 1359-1361, 1363-1364
 U.S.-French-British meeting, 1342-1343, 1361-1366, 1375-1376, 1381
 Viet Minh offensive in Tonkin Delta, evaluation, 1051-1054, 1056-1057, 1085, 1111, 1283-1284
 Vietnamese concerns, 673, 674, 1225, 1298-1300
 Intelligence Advisory Committee, U.S., 870-871
 International Control Commission. See under Indochina.
- Jackson, C. D., 1003
 Jacquet, Marc, 11, 408, 603, 613-614, 688-689, 713-714, 881-882
- Jacquin de Margerie, Roland, 408, 590, 602, 603, 618, 689-690, 772*n*, 968, 1049-1050, 1061, 1086, 1131-1132
- Japan:
 Effect of situation in Southeast Asia on, 474
 Implications of Geneva Conference for, 510-512
 Mutual Security Treaty with United States, 297, 538
 U.S. bases in, 245-246, 317-318
 U.S. military aid to, 239
- Jebb, Sir Hubert Miles Gladwyn, 544, 1270*n*, 1348
- Jenkins, Alfred deS., 405
 Johnson, U. Alexis:
 Cambodia, U.S. aid to, 1228, 1234-1236
 Geneva Conference on Indochina:
 Chou En-lai role at, 1251
 Coordinator and U.S. Representative to, 403-404
 Head of U.S. Delegation, 1166, 1238, 1249-1251
 Lack of progress, 1344-1346
 Participation question, 544, 670
 Restricted sessions: Statements, 1219-1221, 1264-1265, 1319-1320; summaries, 1215-1219, 1242-1246, 1261-1264, 1272-1275, 1289-1291, 1315-1319
 Resumption at Foreign Minister level, 1209-1210, 1249-1251, 1280
 Review of documents, 1389*n*
 Seating arrangements, 647*n*
 U.S. advisory role, 1323-1324
 U.S. unilateral declaration, 1496
 Vietnamese declaration of position, 1439-1440, 1548
 West German interest in, 1302-1303
- Geneva Conference on Korea: Advisory role, 425; coordinator of, 8, 459; preparations for, 81*n*, 93-94, 100-102, 118, 119; restricted session, 171-172; report to United Nations on, 388; U.S. guidance meeting, 182-183
- Indochina:
 Cessation of hostilities negotiations: International control problems, 1176-1177, 1199*n*, 1208-1210, 1246, 1255-1256, 1259-1260, 1266, 1268-1270, 1276, 1287, 1291-1292, 1296-1297, 1300-1301, 1311-1313, 1334-1335, 1395; Laos and Cambodia, 1195-1196, 1211, 1213-1215, 1232-1233, 1293, 1340-1341, 1342, 1378-1381, 1449-1450
 French draft declaration, 1376-1378, 1398-1400
 Situation in, 1233-1234

- Johnson, U. Alexis—Continued
 Indochina—Continued
   U.S. military intervention, question of, 1047
   U.S.-French position, 1348-1355, 1359-1361
 Korean unification, 146-148, 168*n*, 169*n*, 185, 186, 266-267
 Southeast Asia, defense, 596-598
 Vietnam, cessation of hostilities negotiations, 1222, 1228-1231, 1241-1242, 1248-1249, 1265-1267, 1271-1272, 1276, 1286-1287, 1301, 1321-1323, 1341, 1343-1344, 1392, 1394-1396
 Joint Chiefs of Staff, U.S., 472-478, 858-859
 Jones, William G., 119
 Jooste, G. P., 58, 119
 Joxe, Louis, 1466-1467
 Joy, Michael G. L., 502, 503
 Judd, Walter, 329, 707
- Kallet, Lt. Col. Donald, 8, 406
 Kent-Hughes, Wilfred Selwyn, 651
 Keppel, John, 8, 405, 755, 1169
 Key, David McK., 119, 426, 455-456
 Khamphan Panya, 410, 955, 1291, 1342
 Ki Sok Pok, 10
 Kindynis, Jean, 11, 323-324, 343, 386
 King, James F., 8, 405
 Kirkpatrick, Sir Ivone A., 1066
 Kitchen, Jeffrey C., 406, 425-428
 Knowland, William, 94*n*, 707-708
 Ko Pai-nien, 410
 Koo, V. K. Wellington, 498-501
 Korea (see also Geneva Conference on Korea):
   Collective military action in, 725
   Communist aggression in, 158-159, 188
   Declaration by the Sixteen. See under Geneva Conference on Korea.
   Neutralization question, 34
   Panmunjom talks, 15, 17*n*, 21, 22, 29, 39, 41, 73, 230, 1009
   Sixteen-Power Joint Policy Declaration, 1953, 45
   Territorial integrity, 33, 35
   United Nations Command, 16
   United Nations Commission for Reunification and Rehabilitation of Korea (UNCURK). See United Nations Commission, etc.
   United Nations Reconstruction Agency for Korea, 111
   United Nations Temporary Commission on Korea, 149, 150, 187
   U.S. military intervention in, Soviet comment on, 159
 Korea, People's Republic of, nonrecognition of, 16
 Korea, Republic of:
   Communist prisoners of war in, 149-
- Korea, Republic of—Continued
   Communist prisoners of war in—Con. 150, 154, 172, 188, 190-191, 310, 312
   Elections in, 191-192, 193-194, 301, 312-314
   Mutual defense agreement with United States: Communist opposition to, 154, 377, 378; exchange of ratifications, question of, 37*n*, 206, 210, 213-214, 243, 285, 317*n*, 319-321; importance of, 228, 233, 234, 238; ROK proposal for modification of, 328
   North Korean refugees in, 148, 188
   Unilateral military action, question of, 25, 42*n*
   U.S. aid, 31-32, 36, 37, 45, 48-49, 74-75, 104-105, 111, 149, 215, 276, 286, 318
   Van Fleet mission, 45, 48-49, 94*n*, 105, 111, 222, 227, 234, 244-245, 285, 290, 301, 319, 328
- Korean Armistice Agreement, July 1953:
   Basis for Geneva Conference, 15, 150, 458*n*; Chinese Communist remarks, 1089, 1090; continuity of, 368, 376, 392, 394, 445*n*; restrictive nature of, 318-319; ROK concern about, 56, 390-391; termination after unification of Korea, proposed, 63, 66, 83, 87, 107, 111, 181, 219
 Korean political conference. See Geneva Conference on Korea.
 Korean Reunification Supervisory Commission (KRSC), 63-64, 66
 Korean unification negotiations:
   All-Korea free elections:
     Alternate Plans: (A), 83, 86-87; (B), 107-109, 218-219; (C), 63-65
     Positions on: Australian, 157-158, 649-651; British, 93-94, 343, 347; Chinese Communist, 154-155; Colombian, 150; North Korean, 150, 347-348; ROK, 116, 201-203
     U.S.-ROK discussions, 168-169, 192-193
   ROK proposal, 301-303
   ROK and North Korean proposals, 161-164
   Simultaneous election question, 192-193, 212-213, 217
   Working Committee draft paper, 180
 Allied position, 33-35, 93-96, 99, 133-134, 156-157, 183-185, 223-224
 Allied principles, 259-262, 266-271
 Alternate solutions to unification, 178, 183, 314-315
 Amnesty proposal, 298

- Korean unification negotiations—Continued
- Chinese Communist proposal and reactions to, 377, 380-384
  - Chinese Communist reaction to Conference rejection of proposal, 390, 392-393, 1170-1171, 1176
  - Constitutional convention, proposed, 267
  - French five-point proposal, 364-365
  - Government of unified Korea, plan for, 63, 66, 180-181, 219
  - Indian interest in, 913
  - International Permanent Standing Committee, proposed, 329-331
  - International security guarantees question, 63, 66, 83, 87, 181, 219, 349, 351, 352, 354
  - International supervision question, positions on: Australian, 323; Belgian, 250, 343, 384; British, 176, 264, 287; Canadian, 343-344; Chinese Communist, 156, 176, 177, 232, 310; Ethiopian, 348-359; French, 337; Greek, 323-324, 343; Netherlands, 343, 352, 353; New Zealand, 344; North Korean, 175, 177, 312-313, 352; Philippine, 343, 351; ROK, 149, 175, 177, 270-271, 279, 280, 287, 332, 343, 353; Soviet, 175-177, 354; Turkish, 343, 905; U.S., 143*n*, 153*n*, 156, 175-177, 182-183, 265, 334, 335, 336*n*, 337, 905, 1002
  - Japanese position, 510-511
  - Moscow Agreement, 1945, 149, 150, 187
  - National Assembly for unified Korea, proposed, 63, 64, 65-66, 83, 87, 107, 109-110, 264-265, 312
  - North Korean proposals, 149-150, 376-377
    - Allied opposition, 163*n*-169*n*
    - Positions on: Australian, 379; Belgian, 380; British, 263-264; Canadian, 197-198; Chinese Communist, 311-312, 377; Colombian, 323; French, 262-263; Greek, 190; Netherlands, 199; ROK, 185, 187-189, 250-251; Soviet, 250, 377-378, 381; Thai, 323; Turkish, 323; U.S., 200
  - ROK positions on, 19, 29, 30, 93, 133, 319-320
  - ROK proposal (14-point), 278-281, 298-300, 303-306, 309, 313, 316-317, 321-324
  - Soviet and North Korean proposals, discussion of, 377-380
  - Soviet position, 159-161
  - Soviet proposals, 351-352, 354-356, 379-383
- Korean unification negotiations—Con.
- Thai formula for continuing negotiating body, 315, 318, 326-327, 329-331, 334
  - U.N. resolutions on, importance of, 68-69, 83, 84, 98-99, 106-107, 134-135, 148-151, 170-171, 196-200, 223
  - U.N. supervisory role:
    - Allied stand on importance of, 149, 153*n*, 156, 182-183, 190, 225-226, 250-251, 265, 268, 334-335, 336*n*, 337, 343-344, 348-354, 362-364, 905, 1002
    - Communist rejection, 249-250, 355, 361-362, 363
  - U.S. alternative plans:
    - Alternate Plan A, 82-87, 173, 222, 228
    - Alternate Plan B, 105-111, 172-173, 178-181, 200-212, 215-231, 234, 237-249, 251-260
    - Alternate Plan C, 62-66
    - Alternate plan summary, 131-139
    - U.S. planned discussion at Geneva Conference, 100-102
  - U.S. position, 34, 44-45, 437-442, 446-448, 622-627, 670-680
  - U.S. press briefing, 15, 16
  - U.S. responsibilities, 14*n*, 35-36, 228
  - U.S.—ROK statement of basic principles:
    - Discussion, need for, 213-217, 265-266
    - Draft proposal, 264-265, 271-278
    - Draft proposal, revised text, 281-285, 287-290, 292-295, 321*n*
  - Withdrawal of foreign forces:
    - Alternate solution of buffer zone, British proposal for, 183
    - Korean Working Group consideration of, 54, 181
    - Positions on: Australian, 158; Chinese Communist, 176, 177; French, 176; North Korean, 150; ROK, 25, 34, 62, 116, 141, 144, 146, 149, 176, 192-193, 214-216, 226-228, 233-234, 281, 285, 286, 289, 328-329; U.S., 33, 34, 59-62, 176, 192-193, 233-236, 265, 289, 295-298, 302, 309-310
  - U.S. estimate of time for withdrawal of U.N. forces, 233
  - U.S. proposals, 63-64, 66, 83, 85-86, 99, 107, 110, 219-221
  - Working Group of Nine on unification, 156-157, 231
- Korry, Ed, 1251
- Kotelawala, Sir John L., 610, 611, 642-643
- Kremer, Jean-Pierre, 11
- Kung Peng, 410, 805

- Kural, Adnan, 102*n*, 145, 153, 267, 388, 710
- Kuznetsov, V. V., 12, 67-68, 411, 467-468, 1059-1060, 1219, 1244-1245, 1249, 1265, 1266, 1268-1270, 1272-1273, 1278, 1295, 1318-1319
- La Chambre, Guy, 408, 1253
- Lacoste, Francis, 124, 147, 255, 409, 486, 493-494, 517, 544, 713
- Laking, G. R., 119
- Laloy, Jean L., 409, 608, 1119-1120, 1376-1377, 1398-1399, 1420
- Lamb, Sir Lionel Henry, 412, 1242, 1249, 1255, 1256, 1272, 1274, 1276, 1291-1292, 1295
- Landon, Kenneth P., 429-430
- Langer, William, 574
- Laniel, Joseph, 435-437, 557-558, 697-698, 1001*n*
- Laos:
- Cessation of hostilities negotiations. See Indochina: Cessation of hostilities negotiations: Laos and Cambodia.
  - Chinese Communist-supported Viet Minh invasions, Burmese concern, 1308-1309
  - Free Lao position in government of, 1232
  - National Intelligence Estimate on, 872, 1024-1029
  - U.S. bases in, Chinese Communist opposition, 1211-1212, 1240-1241
  - U.S. Chief of Mission to, proposed appointment, 681, 1490-1491, 1503
- LaSelle, Mason A., 407
- Lavrishchev, A. A., 412, 1268
- Le Gallais, Hughes, 119, 120*n*
- Le Huu Thi, 829
- Le Quang Luat, 1121
- Le Quang Trieu, Col., 411, 1298-1300
- le Roy de la Tournelle, Guy, 408, 544, 1268, 1308, 1309
- Le Toan, 1121
- Le Van Kim, Col., 1031
- Lei Jen-min, 410, 805
- Lei Ying-fu, 410
- Li Ke-nung, 12, 410, 955, 1216, 1233, 1245-1246, 1289-1290, 1315, 1322, 1437
- Limb, Ben C., 12, 185, 204, 254-257
- Lloyd, John Selwyn, 96, 776
- Lodge, Henry Cabot, Jr., 862, 866-867, 928, 929, 933, 937, 954-955, 968-969, 968*n*-969*n*
- Luang Vichit Vadakan, 12
- Luce, Clare Boothe, 667
- Luns, Joseph M. A. H., 11, 198, 199, 745-749
- MacArthur, Douglas II, 8, 47-48, 162-165, 404, 416, 426, 434*n*, 448, 458-460, 481*n*, 581-584, 589-590, 641-644, 667-669, 1281
- MacDonald, Malcolm, 630
- Maitland, Donald James, 413
- Makins, Sir Roger, 102-103, 119, 533*n*, 534, 617, 630, 837, 846-847, 1311*n*
- Malan, Daniel F., 59*n*
- Malaya, 554, 589-590, 630, 1084
- Malik, Charles, 1173
- Mansfield, Mike, 533*n*, 574
- Mao Tse-tung (quoted), 998
- Martin, Edwin W., 9, 405, 407, 803-806, 904-906
- Mathieu, Maj., 1320-1321
- Matthews, H. Freeman, 426
- McBride, Robert H., 9, 47, 405, 407, 452, 488*n*, 503*n*, 544, 586-588, 654-664, 717-718
- McCardle, Carl W., 8, 404, 119, 559, 629-630, 1359
- McClintock, Robert, 432, 540-541, 609, 727-728, 769-770, 773, 800*n*, 806*n*, 901*n*, 1111
- McClurkin, Robert J. G., 119
- McConaughy, Walter P., 416, 497-501
- McCormack, John, 708
- McIntosh, A. D., 11, 261, 347, 362-363, 375, 386, 654
- McKnight, John P., 9, 406
- McNeil, W. J., 238
- Mendès-France, Pierre:
- French Premier and Foreign Minister, 1128, 1178
  - Geneva Conference on Indochina: French draft declaration on Indochina, 1452-1453; role at, 408, 1495-1496; U.S. position on participation at French Minister level, 1310, 1336-1338, 1351-1355, 1365-1366
- Indochina:
- Cessation of hostilities negotiations: Alternatives, 1335-1336, 1455; French position, 1341, 1346, 1347, 1381*n*, 1394-1395, 1404-1409, 1421-1423; French military talks with Viet Minh, 1348-1351
  - U.S.-French position paper, 1359-1361, 1363-1364
- Meeting with Chou En-lai, 1209, 1210, 1212-1213, 1222, 1233-1234, 1239-1241, 1347
- Meeting with Dulles and Eden, 1342-1343, 1351-1355
- Meeting with Smith, 1187-1188
- Soviet interest in discussion of European problems, 1466-1467
- Vietnam: Cessation of hostilities negotiations, Vietnamese statement, 1440, 1499; demarcation line, 1270*n*, 1341, 1346, 1368-1369, 1407
- Menon, V. K. Krishna:
- Geneva Conference on Indochina, 642, 644, 884, 913-914, 1120-1121, 1344-1346, 1429

- Menon, V. K. Krishna—Continued
 Geneva Conference on Korea, 340, 347, 913-914
 Indochina: Cessation of hostilities negotiations, Laos and Cambodia, 1030, 1038-1039, 1045-1046, 1237, 1298; international control, 913, 1051, 1062; situation, 1130, 1341
 Menzies, Robert G., 649-651
 Merchant, Livingston T., 8, 404, 530-532, 544, 577-578, 579, 593-594, 619-620, 626-628, 654, 837, 846-847
 Middleton, George H., 1120, 1121
 Millet, Pierre, 81*n*, 452, 502
 Mills, Sheldon T., 1120-1121
 Mohammad Ali, 611
 Mohn, Maj. Gen. Paul, 194-195, 229, 268, 1008
 Molochkov, F. F., 12, 412
 Molotov, V. M. :
 Cambodian official, assassination of by Viet Minh, 782-783
 Communist China, Soviet and U.S. relations with, 897-899
 Geneva Conference on Indochina: Bidault and Dulles departure prior to opening, 641-642, 875; closing statement, 1499, 1501-1502; duration, 967; European problems, interest in discussion of, 1466-1467; head of Soviet Delegation, 411; negotiating position, 644, 827-828, 895*n*, 899, 904, 1112-1113, 1169; preparations for, 574, 579-580, 591-592, 644, 708, 735, 755-757; restricted sessions, 793*n*; review of progress, 1431-1432, 1434; summary of areas of agreement and disagreement, 1072-1075; suspension and resumption at Foreign Minister level, 1136, 1189-1193, 1265, 1280; U.S. unilateral declaration, 1496-1497
 Geneva Conference on Korea, 12, 151-153, 159-161, 174-177, 249-250, 315-316, 351-352, 392-393, 415
 Indochina, cessation of hostilities negotiations: International control problem, 972-973, 999-1000, 1011-1012, 1033-1034, 1050-1051, 1059-1060, 1061-1062, 1065-1066, 1137-1138, 1153-1154, 1161, 1165, 1323-1324, 1421-1423, 1565; problems of Laos and Cambodia, 840-841, 1154, 1160-1161, 1184-1185, 1200, 1201
 Korean unification, 377-378, 381, 384
 Southeast Asia defense, 799, 827-828
 Vietnam: Cessation of hostilities negotiations, 756, 818, 831-832, 874-875, 878-879, 895-899, 907, 910, 911, 923-924, 925, 971, 972, 1034, 1066, 1112-1113, 1404-1405, 1408-
 Molotov, V. M.—Continued
 Vietnam—Continued
 1409, 1421-1423; Dien Bien Phu, 602, 811*n*, 817, 833
 Monckton, Lt. Col. G. W. R., 413, 762, 887, 888, 1165
 Morton, Thruston B., 94*n*
 Moscow Agreement, 1945, 149, 150, 187
 Muller, Charles, 119
 Munro, Leslie Knox, 119, 530-532, 837, 885
 Murphy, Robert D., 326-327, 416-417, 480-481, 698*n*, 969-970, 976-977, 989-991, 1103*n*, 1117*n*, 1119, 1199*n*, 1281-1282
 Nam II, Lt. Gen., 10, 149-150, 174, 175, 177, 189-190, 312-313, 349, 363, 376-377, 381-382
 National Intelligence Estimates, 870-872, 1023-1029
 National Security Council, U.S. :
 Meetings: Apr. 29, 615-617; May 27, 942-944; July 15, 1381
 NSC Actions on Indochina and Southeast Asia, 705-707, 731-732
 NSC 5405, continuing validity of, 472, 478, 672-673
 U.S. aid to Indochina, question of consideration of, 475, 479
 Navarre, Gen. Henri, 418*n*, 572-573, 592, 685-686, 703, 766, 773, 830, 881
 Navarre plan. See French military plan under Indochina.
 Nehru, Jawaharlal, 316, 436*n*, 564, 610-612, 635-636, 769, 822, 897, 1120-1121, 1130, 1567
 Neri, Felino, 12, 613*n*
 Neutral Nations Repatriation Commission, 996
 Neutral Nations Supervisory Commission (NNSC) :
 Performance in Korea, positions on: Chinese Communist, 350, 353, 362, 1089; New Zealand, 362; North Korean, 349, 363; U.S., 318-319, 353*n*, 1003
 Supervisory commission for Indochina, proposed, positions on: British, 998; Chinese Communist, 946, 984-985, 996, 1019-1021; French, 762-764, 998; Soviet, 973, 986-987, 999-1000, 1033-1034; U.S., 896, 984, 985, 988, 990, 995-996, 1001, 1019, 1021; Viet Minh, 998-999; Vietnamese, 1016
 Supervisory role in Korean unification, proposed, 310, 312-313, 353
 New Zealand, 538
 Newton, Earl K., 407
 Ngo Dinh Diem, 830, 843*n*, 845, 846, 848, 857, 860, 881, 894-895, 1136, 1275, 1339-1340
 Ngo Dinh Luyen, 843-846, 848-849, 859-862, 1298-1300, 1424, 1440, 1549

- Nguyen Dac Khe, 411, 717-718, 744-745, 779-780, 955, 961, 1009, 1031, 1134-1136, 1225, 1288-1289, 1298-1300
- Nguyen Duy Thanh, 411
- Nguyen Hau Chau, 411, 1298-1300, 1386-1387, 1400, 1418-1419
- Nguyen Huu Quy, 411
- Nguyen Huu Tri, 857, 860, 1052
- Nguyen Quoc Dinh, 411, 604, 666-667, 669-670, 779-780, 971-972, 1009, 1015-1017, 1074, 1087, 1106, 1107, 1113, 1161, 1196-1198
- Nguyen Thanh Le, 408, 955
- Nguyen Thuc, 1121
- Nguyen Tienny, 1121
- Nguyen Trung Vinh, 411, 541
- Nguyen Van Hinh, Brig. Gen., 825, 830, 873, 901*n*
- Nguyen Van Tam, 462
- Nhieck Tioulong, Gen., 408, 1025, 1237, 1252, 1539, 1549
- Nichol, Henry F., 9, 406
- Nixon, Richard M., 44
- Nong Kimny, 119, 407, 453, 506-507, 767, 955, 958-959, 1236-1237, 1341, 1378-1381, 1399, 1420, 1425-1426, 1549
- Norodom Sihanouk, King of Cambodia, 1214
- North Atlantic Treaty Organization, 537-538, 672
- Novikov, K. V., 412, 955, 1268, 1295
- Nutting, Sir Anthony, 544
- O'Connor, Roderic L., 7, 404, 842*n*
- O'Daniel, Lt. Gen. John W., 418*n*, 571-573, 606, 1106-1107, 1374
- Offroy, Raymond, 409, 517, 1150-1152, 1156, 1287, 1294-1296, 1300-1301, 1327-1328, 1373, 1387-1388, 1504
- Ohlin, Bertil, 140
- Oliver, Robert T., 254, 271
- O'Neill, C. D. W., 413
- Ourot Souvannavong, 119, 410, 506-507, 1211-1212, 1214, 1218, 1232-1233, 1297-1298
- Paek Nam Un, 10
- Page, Edward, Jr., 8, 404, 1049, 1059, 1119-1120
- Pandit, Mme. Srimati Vijaya Lakshmi, 1130
- Parodi, Alexandre, 11, 408, 544, 1238, 1239, 1348, 1359
- Partridge, Gen., 296-298, 302
- Patyn, C. L., 11
- Paul-Boncour, Jean, 710
- Pearson, Lester B., 10, 140, 196-198, 304, 306, 389, 390*n*, 626-629, 642-644, 671, 929
- Peaslee, Amos J., 649-651, 1062-1064
- Pelletier, Pierre, 119
- Petsarath, Prince of Laos, 1026-1027, 1298
- Pham Huu Chong, 1121-1122
- Pham Van Dong:
  - Geneva Conference on Indochina, 408, 735, 1499
  - Indochina: Cessation of hostilities negotiations, 879, 909-910, 998-999, 1020, 1071-1072, 1112, 1139-1140, 1217, 1261-1263, 1278-1279, 1316-1317; French draft declaration, 1367-1368; Laos and Cambodia, 839-840, 855, 878, 1159, 1163-1164, 1182-1183, 1214, 1217, 1232-1233, 1248-1249
  - Vietnam: Demarcation line, 1286-1288, 1341, 1368-1369; French military discussions with Viet Minh, 970-972, 1241, 1248-1249
- Phan Anh, 408, 830, 891, 955
- Phan Huy Quat, 432, 800*n*, 825, 830, 857, 901*n*, 955, 1222-1223
- Philippines, 536
- Phleger, Herman, 8, 182-183, 404, 670, 866-867, 955, 960, 962-963, 965, 1166, 1348, 1491, 1552-1562
- Phoui Sananikone, 410, 736, 955, 960, 1088, 1113, 1158, 1162, 1182, 1187, 1201, 1211-1212, 1303-1304, 1449-1450
- Pillai, Narayana Ragnavan, 1121, 1130
- Pleven, René, 445, 588*n*
- Poc Thieun, 408
- Polania Puyo, Jaime, 10
- Politis, Athanase G., 119, 120
- Popper, David H., 47, 455
- Pote Sarasin, 12, 119, 147, 429-430, 596, 597, 686-687, 801-803, 808, 978-980
- Prididebyabongs Devakula, Prince of Thailand, 12
- Priestman, John D., 413
- Pu Shou-chang, 955
- Puth Chay, 1252
- Pyun Yung Tai:
  - Geneva Conference on Korea: Final phase, 329-333, 341-342, 358; postconference standing committee, 338-339; preparations, 55, 72-74, 116-117, 140-141, 148-149, 157, 185; restricted meetings, 171-172, 174-177, 344; report to United Nations, 390-391; ROK delegate to, 12; ROK participation in, 20, 22-24, 26, 29-31, 49-52, 115*n*; signature on Declaration of the Sixteen, 387
  - Korea: Communist proposals, 380-381; U.N. role, 187-189, 250-251, 343
  - Korean Armistice Agreement, 376
  - Korean unification: All-Korean elections, 201-202, 260, 353; ROK 14-point proposal, 185, 186, 298, 300, 303-304, 305, 306, 313-314; ROK-U.S. basic principles, 261-262, 267, 270-271, 277-278, 279-281;

- Pyun Yung Tai—Continued
 Korean unification—Continued
 U.S. Alternate Plan B, 204-205,
 221, 228, 254-255, 256-257
- Radford, Adm. Arthur W., 37*n*, 472-
 475, 594-595, 616, 617, 858-859, 1086,
 1100, 1131, 1282
- Rankin, Karl L., 458*n*
- Raynor, G. Hayden, 480-481, 846-847
- Reading, Marquis of, 13, 382, 412, 454,
 641, 955-963, 974, 1165, 1208, 1216-
 1219, 1238
- Reilly, D'Arcy Patrick, 492-493, 543, 544
- Reinhardt, G. Frederick, 8, 404, 1109-1110, 1492
- Reston, James, 739*n*
- Reyes Canal, de Fregata Julio, 10
- Reynaud, Paul, 944
- Rhee, Syngman:
 Geneva Conference on Korea, 14, 17-
 19, 24-25, 35-36, 48-49, 55-56, 78-
 80, 111-115, 144, 146, 169, 193, 283,
 344-347, 359
 Indochina, situation in, 113
 Korea, Republic of: Mutual Defense
 Agreement with United States,
 320-321, 328; UNCURK supervision of elections, 191-194; U.S. aid to, 75*n*, 276; Van Fleet mission, 48-49, 227, 328
 Korean unification, 60, 191-194, 201-
 203, 205-207, 213-217, 226-228,
 233, 239-241, 258-259, 273, 275-
 277, 281-284, 286, 301-303, 306-
 309, 319-320, 328-329
 Vietnam, Dien Bien Phu, 228
 Richmond, William P., 407
 Ringwalt, Arthur R., 453-455
 Rives, Lloyd M., 787
 Robertson, Walter S.:
 Communist China, 898-899
 Geneva Conference on Indochina, 403,
 429-430, 463*n*, 498-501, 544, 557-
 558, 593, 670, 1166, 1196, 1198
 Geneva Conference on Korea: Deputy
 U.S. Representative to, 7, 459;
 final phase of conference, 328,
 330, 338-339; preparations, 21-22,
 29, 69-70, 80-81, 119, 140-141, 182-
 183; restricted meetings, 171-
 172; U.S.-ROK basic principles,
 186, 261-262
 Indochina, 1179-1180, 1182, 1185-1187
 Korean unification, 185, 186, 204-205,
 254-255, 256-257, 273-274, 279-
 281, 303-304
 Southeast Asia, defense, 596, 654
 U.N. Peace Observation Commission
 for Indochina, proposed, 808-809,
 849*n*, 866-867, 919-920, 978, 1108
- Ronning, Chester A., 10, 343-344, 362, 386
- Roux, Jacques, 409, 517, 584-586, 593,
 702-703, 816, 955, 1149-1150, 1208,
 1233-1234, 1259-1260, 1424
- Rowland, J. R., 10, 654
- Rumbold, Sir Horace Anthony C., 413, 1348, 1359
- Russell, Ned, 815
- Russell, Richard, 708
- Salan, Gen. Raoul, 1044
- Saltonstall, Leverett, 533*n*
- Sam Sary, 407, 735-736, 1217, 1227-1228, 1242, 1263-1264, 1290-1291, 1317-
 1318, 1399-1400, 1425
- Sandler, Richard, 140
- Savage, Edward, 9, 406, 1251
- Scheyven, Louis, 10
- Schumann, Maurice, 11, 408, 430-431,
 544, 699-700, 1100
- Scott, Sir Robert H., 102, 119, 1302
- Selwyn Lloyd. See Lloyd, John Selwyn.
- Shih Che, 151, 410
- Shimp, Max L., 407
- Shinicky, P. H., 313
- Shuckburgh, Charles A. E., 13, 412, 553,
 577-578, 641, 761*n*
- Silvercrucys, Baron Robert, 119
- Sisco, Joseph J., 119
- Smith, H. Alexander, 574, 708, 1479
- Smith, Kingsbury, 1109-1110
- Smith, Lawrence H., 574
- Smith, Walter Bedell:
 Communist China, Soviet and U.S. relationships with, 897-899
 French Associated States, independence question, 968, 988, 1113
 Geneva Conference on Indochina:
 Agreements, 1490, 1551-1552
 Basic instructions, 1198-1199
 Briefing of President and Congressional leaders, 1223-1224
 Communist charges of U.S. aggression in Indochina, 1090-1093
 Communist delegations, 1094-1097
 Communist position, 1192-1193
 Departure at conclusion, 1547
 Duration, 967, 981
 European problems, Soviet interest in discussion of, 1466-1467
 Final Declaration on Indochina:
 Cambodian and Laotian draft unilateral declarations, 1476-1477, 1488-1490; final agreed text, 1480-1481, 1485, 1490, 1494-1495; French draft declarations, 1460, 1462-1463, 1477, 1476; French unilateral declaration, 1482; Soviet proposal, 1471; U.S. unilateral
 declaration, 1452-1453, 1471-
 1472, 1482, 1496-1497
 Foreign Minister phase, suspension and resumption of, 992-993,
 1136-1137, 1148-1149, 1165-

Smith, Walter Bedell—Continued

Geneva Conference on Indochina—Continued

Foreign Minister phase—Continued
1166, 1170, 1189-1193, 1196-1198, 1226-1227, 1361, 1363, 1367, 1376, 1381-1382

Head of U.S. Delegation, 403, 649*n*, 678*n*, 789, 1496*n*

Indian interest in, 913-914

Lack of progress, 864-865, 1124-1125

Nature of conference, 755-757

Participation questions, 426-427, 431, 453, 530, 666-667, 670, 708-709, 734, 737-739, 884, 890*n*

Preparations for, 434*n*, 530-532, 641, 667, 669-670, 678-679, 685-686, 694, 700, 704, 708-710, 718-720, 730-733

Plenary sessions: Statements at, 736-739, 752-753, 1075-1077, 1090-1094, 1113, 1500-1501; summaries, 734-737, 749-755, 780-785, 795-799, 818-819, 1069-1075, 1087-1090, 1111-1117, 1497-1499, 1501-1502; tactics for, 776-777; unproductiveness of, 792-793

Progress, 1447-1448

Restricted sessions: Communiqué on sixteenth session, 1204-1205; press leak, 936; statements at sessions, 1138, 1141-1143, 1203-1204, 1434; summaries of, 831-834, 839-841, 854-856, 877-881, 907-911, 920-927, 945-949, 970-976, 983-988, 995-1001, 1015-1021, 1031-1038, 1137-1141, 1157-1165, 1179-1185, 1200-1203, 1431-1434; tactics for, 811-813, 849-851, 873-875

Return to Washington in absence of Dulles, question of, 935, 940, 949-950

Termination of, question of, 1083, 1085

U.S. press briefing, 950-953, 1002-1008, 1094-1100

Working level meeting of the Six, 1424-1425

Geneva Conference on Korea:

Agreement on principles, proposals for, 337-338, 365

Alternate head of U.S. Delegation, 7, 459

Berlin Agreement, 17-18

Briefing of President and Congressional leaders, 393

Chinese Communist participation in future Korean discussions, 392-393

Smith, Walter Bedell—Continued

Geneva Conference on Korea—Continued

Communist charges against United States and United Nations, 184, 200, 231-232

Declaration of the Sixteen:

Proposal, 361

Text, 365-366, 371-376, 379*n*, 383, 387

Duration, 300, 864-865

Indian interest in, 913-914

Indochina phase, separate from Korean phase, 433

Lack of progress, 315-316

Meetings of Sixteen Allied Delegations, summaries, 371-372, 374-376

Nature and objectives, 26-27, 457-458, 904-906

Plenary sessions, summaries, 250-251, 310-314, 376-385, 389-390

Postconference meeting of representatives of Sixteen Allied Delegations, summary, 388-389

Postconference standing committee on Korea, proposed, 338-339

Preparations for, 27, 102-103, 182, 185, 434*n*, 457, 530-532

Press briefing, 1002-1008

Report to the United Nations, 391-392

ROK participation question, 105

Termination of, 314-315, 324-325, 329-334, 339-344, 347-355, 357-358, 360-361, 366-369, 1083-1085

Indochina:

Cease-fire, French position, 698*n*

Cessation of hostilities:

Agreements: Chinese Communist position, 1420-1421, 1428-1429, 1448-1449; Laos and Cambodia, 1466, 1472-1473, 1478-1479, 1487-1488; substantive discussions, 1405-1407, 1420-1423, 1437-1438; working paper, approval of, 1404-1405, 1408-1409

British five questions, 776-777, 793-794

French and Viet Minh proposals, discussion of, 873-875

French proposals, 689-690, 696-697, 714-715, 737, 739-743, 752-753

French talks on military matters with Viet Minh, 973-975, 1031, 1126, 1127, 1154-1155

International control and guarantee problems, 913, 931-934, 973, 982, 984-985, 993-994, 1010-1014, 1019, 1030, 1035-1036, 1153-1154, 1406-1407

Smith, Walter Bedell—Continued

Indochina—Continued

Cessation of hostilities—Con.

International Control Commission, composition, 768-769, 852-853, 928, 963-964, 973, 981-982, 992, 995-996, 1014, 1036, 1059-1060, 1065-1066, 1075-1077, 1128, 1153-1154, 1165, 1455-1456, 1479-1480

Laos and Cambodia, 767-768, 840, 854, 863-864, 879, 965-966, 1014-1015, 1038-1039, 1095, 1160, 1162, 1170-1171, 1173-1174, 1202-1205, 1419, 1425-1426, 1456, 1466, 1467, 1472-1473, 1478-1479, 1482-1483, 1484, 1487

Political and military aspects, order of discussion, 907, 909, 910

Simultaneous cease-fire question, 965-966

Soviet constructive negotiating posture, 827-828

Summary of Chinese Communist, French, Laotian, and Viet Minh proposals, 1162-1165

U.S. position in event of unsatisfactory settlement, 1105*n*

U.S. statement at restricted session on, 922-924, 926-927

Viet Minh proposal, 757, 770-772

Vietnamese proposals, 789-790

Five-power military talks. See under Southeast Asia, infra.

French-U.S. position, 1187, 1188*n*

Internationalization of war in, 1039-1040, 1086-1087, 1152

Situation, deterioration of, 574, 595*n*, 615-617, 795, 829-831, 867, 895-899, 901-902, 944, 1045-1046, 1054-1055, 1085

U.S. military intervention in, 569-570, 594-595, 649, 815-816, 853-854, 902-903, 1082*n*, 1101*n*, 1130, 1167

Korea, Van Fleet mission, 94*n*

Korean Armistice Agreement, 379

Korean unification, 201-202, 211-212, 218-224, 226, 230-231, 235, 236, 248-249, 251-253, 257-261, 265-267, 271-272, 287-289, 294, 303-306, 309-314, 316-317, 321-324, 371-372, 374-385

Southeast Asia :

Defense of, 589, 654, 658-659, 662-664, 679-680, 686, 698-699, 710-712, 715, 748-749, 761-762, 772-773, 801-803, 835-836, 886-887, 930, 1021, 1420, 1421, 1434-1435, 1439, 1448, 1465, 1470*n*, 1473-1474

Smith, Walter Bedell—Continued

Southeast Asia—Continued

Five-power military talks, 791-792, 837-838, 841-842, 887-888, 900, 934*n*, 940*n*, 953-954

U.N. Peace Observation Commission for Indochina, proposed, 808-809, 822-823, 862, 928-930, 937-938, 954-955, 968-969, 978-979, 1030-1031, 1065, 1105, 1132-1134, 1172-1173, 1547

Vietnam: Cessation of hostilities negotiations, 1430, 1441, 1449-1452, 1464, 1478-1479, 1485, 1487-1489, 1494, 1504; Dien Bien Phu, 600-601, 703-704, 712-714, 806-807, 810-811, 817, 833; partition question, 701, 807, 992, 1055, 1407-1409, 1426-1428; situation in, 843-846, 857, 914-916, 927*n*, 936-937, 1008-1010, 1121-1122, 1123

Vietnam, State of :

Armed forces: French (O'Daniel) plan for training of, 1106-1107; U.S. training of, proposed, 1107, 1126-1127, 1152

Treaties with France, question of signature of, 915, 935-936

U.S. military assistance question, 849*n*, 915

Snidvongs, 119

Soldatov, A. A., 412

Son Ngoc Minh, 841

Son Ngoc Thanh, 1025, 1026

Son Sann, 407, 767, 768, 955, 1205-1206, 1207, 1340-1341

Souphanouvong, Prince of Laos, 1214, 1227-1228, 1298

South Africa. See Union of South Africa.

Southeast Asia :

Collective defense arrangement :

ANZUS meeting on, 654-664

Australian interest in, 649-651, 656-657, 662-664, 1125

Belgian views on, 773-774

British Commonwealth proposal for defense conference, 769

British formula, 1470

British message to Colombo powers and Australia and New Zealand, requesting support for, 1431, 1434-1436, 1439, 1448, 1453-1454, 1473-1474, 1493

British position, 533, 553-555, 570-571, 583, 590, 622-628, 743, 834-836, 847, 869-870, 885-887, 930-931, 1066-1067, 1084

British and U.S. declaration of intent, 1465; proposal for, 581-583, 1421, 1429, 1448; British position, 583, 590, 665, 679-680, 686-687; U.S. position, 616-617, 653-655, 674, 681, 1410

Burmese interest in, 928

Southeast Asia—Continued

- Collective defense arrangement—Con.
 Cambodian interest in, 1237, 1247
 China, Republic of, interest in 500–501
 Chinese Communist opposition to, 250, 1420–1421, 1437
 French views, 581–583, 713, 1295–1296
 Meeting of the Ten on, 533
 Netherlands interest in, 748–749
 New Zealand interest in, 657–658, 663, 664
 Participation question, 239, 1420–1421, 1431, 1437, 1552–1555
 Press statements: Churchill, 834–835, 869–870; Dulles, 1551; Eisenhower, 692–693, 1503
 Report of joint U.S.–British study group on, terms of reference for, 1410–1417
 ROK interest in, 113n
 Soviet position, 796, 827–828
 Thal interest in, 687, 801–803
 Turkish interest in, 905–906
 U.S. efforts at organization of arrangement, 536–538, 600, 704n, 705n, 707–708, 720–726, 739
 U.S. policy (NSC 5405), 472, 476–477
 Vietnamese concern, 824
 Five-power military talks:
 British proposal for, 761–762, 791–792
 British-U.S. agreement on holding of, 934
 Joint statement, 774–776
 Positions on: British, 836–838, 847, 852n, 856–857; French, 866; Thai, 980–981; U.S., 837–838, 847, 980–981
 Preparations for, 687, 705–706, 798–800, 841–842, 887–900, 934, 940–941, 950
 Press conference remarks, 1068–1069
 Report, 1283–1286
 Results, 1152–1153
 U.S.–Australia–New Zealand discussion, 885
 Five-power staff studies on Communist aggression in, 662–664
 Implications of loss of Indochina to, 474, 477, 478, 772–773, 1021–1023
 U.S. concern on Communist aggression in, 487, 1092, 1093
 Souvanna Phouma, Prince of Laos, 1212, 1214, 1226n, 1298, 1303
 Soviet Union (see also Soviet subheadings under other subjects), 1091–1092
 Spaak, Paul-Henri, 10, 161–165, 250, 260, 364, 379n, 380, 382, 383, 386, 389, 773–774
 Spender, Sir Percy C., 103, 119, 480–481, 530–532, 786–787, 837
 Spruance, Raymond A., 539n
 Stark, A. A. S., 413
 Stelle, Charles C., 9, 405, 407, 503n, 507–510, 635–638, 645–646, 672n, 955, 1281
 Stephanopoulos, Stephan, 11, 190
 Stevens, Ed, 1251
 Stimson, Henry L., 1128–1129
 Stoessel, Walter J., Jr., 405
 Sturm, Paul J., 386, 1281
 Sullivan, Charles A., 9, 405, 407, 1046–1047, 1064–1065, 1079–1080, 1101–1103, 1105–1106, 1168, 1193–1194
 Sulzberger, C. L., 564
 Suydam, Henry, 9, 406, 452, 950, 1002, 1094
 Suzdalev, S. P., 12, 412
 Sykes, Richard A., 413
 Ta Quang Buu, 408, 985–986, 1518, 1530, 1539
 Taber, Lt. Col. Robert C., 9, 406, 407, 573, 762–767
 Tahourdin, John G., 413, 454, 955, 1294, 1295
 Taylor, Gen. Maxwell D., 240, 248, 269, 302
 Taymans, Roger, 10
 Templer, Gen. Sir Gerald, 699
 Tep Phan, 407, 767–768, 798–799, 1072, 1112, 1157, 1180–1181, 1186–1187, 1201, 1205–1208, 1227–1228, 1231–1232, 1251–1252, 1420
 Tezenas du Montcel, Robert, 409, 882, 894–895
 Thailand, 596–597, 662, 801–803, 979–980
 Thanat Khoman, 1013
 Thurston, Ray L., 9, 47, 405, 407, 715–716, 734
 Tiao Khammao, Prince of Laos, 410
 Topping, 1428, 1448–1449
 Toussaint, Bernard, 409
 Tran Cong Tuong, 408, 1232–1233, 1287
 Tran Trungdung, 1121
 Tran Van Chuong, 411, 1343, 1426–1428, 1439–1440
 Tran Van Do, 411, 1271–1272, 1277, 1298–1300, 1341, 1343–1344, 1426–1428, 1432–1434, 1439–1441, 1492, 1497, 1549
 Tran Van Huu, 462, 1254, 1441n
 Tran Van Kha, 119, 506
 Tran Van Tuyen, 411, 1031
 Tran Van Van, 1548, 1549–1550
 Trapnell, Maj. Gen. Thomas, J. H., 573, 854, 943
 Treumann, Walter, 502
 Trevelyan, Humphrey, 13, 412, 454–455, 734, 803–806, 1011
 Trinh Minh The, 1550
 Troyanovsky, O. A., 151, 412, 579, 755, 756, 895, 955, 1001, 1059, 1496

- Trulock, Walter N., 9, 47-48, 406, 448n
 Truong Van Chinh, 411
 Tsouvalas, Mary, 407
- U Nu, 611
- Union of South Africa, 21, 58-59, 100n
- United Kingdom (see also British sub-headings under other subjects), 648, 803-806, 977-978, 1011, 1111, 1260-1261
- United Nations, membership for Communist China, question of, 232, 464, 488, 611
- United Nations Commission for Reunification and Rehabilitation of Korea (UNCURK):
 Dissolution plan after unification of Korea completed, 63n
 Supervision of elections in Republic of Korea: Proposal, 191-194; report, 314; supervisory body in Korean unification plan, 83-85, 87, 107-111, 150, 179-181, 192, 193n, 194, 195, 218, 225-226, 229, 230, 231, 291
- United Nations General Assembly:
 Adoption of Report of Geneva Conference on Korea, 393-394; Resolution on Geneva Conference on Korea, 41, 42, 50, 458n; Resolutions on Korean unification, 68-69, 83, 84, 98-99, 106-107, 134-135, 148-151, 196-199, 223; Uniting for Peace Resolution, 1132-1133
- United Nations Peace Observation Commission for Indochina, proposed:
 British efforts to limit appeal to Thailand, 1013, 1030-1031, 1066
 British position, 823, 847, 850-851, 927-931, 964, 968n-969n
 Cambodian and Laotian appeal, question of, 1174, 1179
 French position, 669, 695-696, 823, 850-851, 862, 903, 928, 929, 933, 964, 968-969
 Indian participation question, 955, 979
 Thai appeal, 875-877, 883-884, 969n; Dulles-Hammarskjold meeting on, 1012-1013; French and British agreement to appeal, 977, 1081, 1083-1084, 1105, 1133; suspension of appeal to U.N. General Assembly, 1547; U.N. Security Council action, 1173n; U.S. interest in, 508-509, 651-652, 668, 790-791, 847, 850-852, 868, 882-883, 927-931, 941-942, 954-955, 966; U.S.-Australian discussion, 786-787; U.S.-Thai discussions, 875-877, 883-884, 969n; U.S.-Vietnamese discussion, 829-830
- United Nations Reconstruction Agency for Korea, 111
- United Nations Temporary Commission on Korea, 149, 150, 187
- Urrutia Holguin, Francisco, 10, 148, 323, 344, 367-368, 386, 388, 392
- Vallat, Francis A., 412, 955
- Valluy, Gen. Jean, 860, 1056-1058, 1111
- Van Baarda, C. Th. R., 119
- Van Fleet, Gen. James A., 45, 48-49, 94n, 105, 111, 222, 224, 238-239, 240, 248, 249
- Van Fleet mission. See under Korea, Republic of.
- Van Hollen, Christopher, 10, 47, 82, 105-106, 119, 131, 182-183, 406, 670-671
- van Roijen, Jean Herman, 119
- Vassiliou, Nicolas Hadji, 11
- Vergin, Nurredin, 12
- Viet Minh. See under other subjects.
- Vietnam:
 Cessation of hostilities negotiations (see also under Indochina):
 Agreement: Final text, 1505-1520; French draft, 1382-1384, 1392; French note to Vietnamese Delegation on agreement, 1494; nonestablishment of foreign military bases in regroupment zones, 1454-1455; Viet Minh draft, 1444-1447
 Cease-fire, Vietnamese acceptance of, 1492
 Collaborators, nonprosecution of, 754, 784
 Economic relations between zones, 1358-1359, 1430
 Elections, all-Vietnam: Date question, 615, 684-685, 1394-1395, 1437, 1473; French views, 509; simultaneous elections in Germany and Vietnam, 462-463, 714; U.S. estimate of Communist position, 448, 460-463; U.S. military view, 473, 478; withdrawal of foreign troops prior to, 688, 753, 754, 1074
 French aide-memoire, 1256-1259
 International control and supervision: Agreement provision, 1515-1518; French draft agreement, 1228-1231; French proposal, 1036-1037; French working paper, 1450-1452; U.S. position on drafting of agreement, 1229n; Vietnamese proposal, 783, 784
 International guarantees: French draft agreement, 1356-1358; Soviet working paper, 1441-1444; Vietnamese proposal, 783, 784
 Lack of progress, Vietnamese concern, 1343-1344, 1347
 Limitation of negotiations to Vietnam, question of, 592

Vietnam—Continued

Cessation of hostilities negotiations—
Continued

Military regroupment zones: Agreement provision, 1519-1520; British paper, 938-940; Chinese Communist concerns, 1233-1234, 1239, 1241; French paper, 938, 939; positions: British, 955, 957, 959, 960; Cambodian, 959-960; French, 958, 961, 962, 1395-1396; Laotian, 960; Soviet, 959-960; U.S., 960, 962-963; Viet Minh, 923; Vietnamese, 1373

Military talks:

French meetings with Vietnamese and Viet Minh:

Agreement on, 975-976, 988*n*

Meetings: June 4, 1046-1047, 1050; June 7, 1064-1065; June 8, 1101-1103, 1105-1106; June 14, 1168; June 17-18, 1193-1194

French secret meetings with Viet Minh, 1120, 1127, 1134, 1148, 1154-1155, 1222, 1225, 1241-1242, 1275-1277, 1329, 1548-1549

Positions on: British, 921, 946-947, 957, 963, 970, 974, 1077; Cambodian, 925, 958-959, 971; Chinese Communist, 945-946, 971, 1233-1234, 1239-1241; French, 826, 922, 924-925, 938-939, 941, 946-949, 957-958, 960-962, 970, 972, 986, 1050, 1061, 1066, 1126, 1134, 1151, 1154-1155, 1222, 1238-1239, 1241-1242, 1256, 1265, 1276, 1329, 1548-1549; Indian, 1341; Laotian, 960, 971; Soviet, 896, 923, 959, 971, 972, 1034, 1066, 1329; U.S., 923-925, 946-957, 962, 973-975, 1046-1047, 1050, 1098-1099, 1126, 1148, 1225; Viet Minh, 970-972, 985-986, 988; Vietnamese, 924, 946, 961, 971-972, 1031, 1275, 1277

Prisoners of war and civilian internees, agreement provision, 1513

Prohibition of importation of new troops and supplies, agreement provision, 1511-1513

Vietnamese concerns on negotiations, 1339-1340; declaration of position on partition, 1464-1465, 1477-1478; protest of conduct of negotiations, 1497, 1498, 1548

Vietnam—Continued

Coalition government question, 419, 421, 449, 472, 478, 628, 655, 682-683, 684, 1126, 1127, 1441*n*

Dien Bien Phu:

Cessation of hostilities during Geneva Conference, question of, 676-677

Evacuation of wounded from, 602, 669-670, 703-704, 748, 749, 756-758, 773, 806-807, 809-811, 817, 826, 833-834, 971

Fall of, 228, 397, 598-601, 605-608, 712-714, 716, 1042, 1043

Partition question:

Agreement provision for, 1505-1507
Demarcation line, 1286-1288, 1341, 1368-1369, 1518-1519

Positions on: Australian, 656; British, 1405-1407; Canadian, 628-629; Chinese Communist, 1368, 1373-1374; French, 419-420, 590, 609, 688, 1042-1043, 1149, 1151, 1154-1155, 1166, 1177-1178, 1266-1267, 1270*n*, 1278, 1279, 1280, 1286, 1298-1300, 1348-1349, 1368, 1395, 1405-1407, 1473, 1548, 1549; Indian, 914; New Zealand, 657; Soviet, 1191; U.S., 421-422, 473, 556, 682-683, 1003, 1004, 1049, 1154-1155, 1266-1267, 1397-1398, 1405-1407; Viet Minh, 922, 1110, 1286-1300, 1348-1349, 1368, 1444-1445, 1548, 1549; Vietnamese, 419, 585, 609, 666, 783, 920, 922, 971-972, 983, 1087, 1266-1267, 1298-1300, 1386-1387, 1418-1419, 1426-1428, 1464-1465

Situation in:

French position, 816, 821-822, 881-882, 944

National Intelligence Estimate on, 872-873, 1027

U.S. concern, 800-801, 816, 823-826, 881-882, 914-916, 1122-1123, 1127, 1393-1394

Vietnamese views, 800*n*, 823-824, 830, 843-846, 901*n*, 914-916, 927, 936-937, 1222-1223, 1254, 1313-1314, 1549-1550

Vietnam, Democratic Republic of: Association with French Union, proposed, 754, 1367-1368; capital at Hanoi, 767; French concern on protection of interests, 1504; nonrecognition by State of Vietnam, 669-670

Vietnam, State of:

Aid from friendly nations, need for, 784

Armed forces:

French (O'Daniel) plan for training, 1106-1107

- Vietnam, State of—Continued
 Armed forces—Continued
 French training and absorption into
 French forces, problem of, 830-831
 U.S. aid in training National Army, 571-573, 769-770, 848-849, 859-861, 915, 1010, 1086, 1126-1127, 1131-1132, 1147, 1152
 Elections, 461-462
 Government: Bao Dai, 1008-1010, 1043-1044, 1134-1136, 1282, 1288-1289; new Foreign Minister, 1271-1272; provisional national assembly, 892-894, 901, 902, 1134-1136; regency proposal, 857; Vietnamese view of legal status of, 784; Vietnamese-planned government reforms, 848-849, 859-862, 1121-1122, 1134-1136
 Treaties with France: French signature, question of, 915, 935-936, 968*n*, 1107, 1121; French-Vietnamese declaration, 614, 780, 782; negotiations, 430, 541, 584-586, 663
 U.S. plan to continue Chief of Mission at Saigon, 1503
 U.S. position on aid to, 1135-1136
 Vinogradov, S. A., 12, 412, 483, 1466-1467
 Vo Nguyen Giap, Gen., 810, 1051, 1053, 1054, 1061
 Voroshilov, Marshal Kliment Yefremovich, 899, 904
 Vorys, John M., 574
 Wade, R. H., 119
 Wan Waithayakon Krommun Naradhip Bongsprabandh, Prince of Thailand: Geneva Conference on Indochina, 597-598, 643-644; Geneva Conference on Korea, 12, 140, 144-145, 381, 382, 387; Korean unification, 170-171, 315, 323, 364; Southeast Asia, 596-597; U.N. Peace Observation Commission for Indo-
- Wan Waithayakon Krommun Naradhip Bongsprabandh—Continued china, proposed, 808-809, 822-823, 866-867, 919-920, 1108, 1172-1173, 1547
 Wang Chia-hsiang, 11, 410
 Wang Cho-ju, 411
 Wang Ping-nan, 410, 703-704, 1050, 1061, 1374-1375
 Warbey, William Noble, 776
 Watt, Alan S., 10, 147, 261, 323, 344, 347, 530, 654, 679-680
 Webb, Thomas Clifton, 11, 223, 389, 390*n*, 654, 657-658, 662-664, 885, 886
 Weyland, Gen. Otto P., 49
 Wilcox, Francis, 574
 Willis, Frances E., 151
 Wilson, Charles E., 269*n*, 276, 298*n*, 434, 471, 1069
 Wolfrom, Jean, 409
 Yager, Joseph A., 9, 406, 407, 681-685, 758-760, 1023, 1268
 You Chan Yang, 12, 21, 69-70, 113*n*, 140-141, 148, 168*n*-169*n*, 204, 221, 254-257, 329, 331, 332, 338-339, 342, 388-389
 Young, Kenneth T.: Communist China, 803; Geneva Conference on Indochina, 405, 670; Geneva Conference on Korea, 9, 18-19, 47, 119, 182-183, 185, 261-262, 329, 338, 390-392, 417*n*, 425, 434*n*, 445, 459, 502, 503; Korea, Panmunjom talks, 17*n*; Korean unification, 131-139, 204, 254-255, 256-257, 270-271, 273-274, 277-281; U.N. Peace Observation Commission for Indochina, proposed, 919-920
 Yudin, P. F., 12, 412
 Zablocki, Clement J., 574
 Zaroubin, G. N., 12, 412, 455-456, 579, 895
 Zhukov, D. A., 412, 1109-1110
 Zuleta Angel, Eduardo, 10, 119, 140, 150-151, 185, 223, 261, 306

COLUMBIA UNIVERSITY LIBRARIES

0045664277

Lehman Library

JX

233

.A3

1952-54

v.16

copy 2

