Subject: Lao Provincial Leaders and Population Statistics.

Attached is a list of names, locations, and administrative subdivisions including information as recent as April, 1965. Many district officers from provinces -- like Phong Saly, Houa Phan, and Xieng Khouang -- with substantial areas under communist control, are actually resident in Vientiane or Savannakhet.

The list also included population statistics, a few recently gathered but most of some vintage. Dated statistics were all that was available for Pathet Lao/Viet Minh held areas. The only statistics on government areas fresher than 1961 are those for Vientiane Prefecture, and for three southern provinces: Sedone, Champassak, and Sithandone. Allowing for a twenty per cent population underestimate (the total was 1,915,404), Laos may thus have some 2,300,000 people. Twenty per cent may not be a generous enough allowance, however.

The grouping of the country's sixteen provinces under three regional headings (Center, North, and South) is a logical but arbitrary one which the Lao Government does not necessarily recognize.

SUBJECT: Lao Provincial Leaders and Population Statistics 2nd edition.

Attached is a list of names, locations, and administrative subdivisions including information as recent as June, 1966. Many district officers from provinces -- like Phong Saly, Houa Phan, and Kieng Khouang -- with substantial areas under communist control, are actually resident in Vientiane or Savannakhet.

The list also included population statistics, a few recently gathered but most of some vintage. Dated statistics were all that was available for Pathet Lao/Viet Minh held areas. The only statistics on government areas fresher than 1961 are those for Vientiane Prefecture, and for three southern provinces: Sedone, Champassak, and Sithandone. Allowing for a twenty per cent population underestimate (the total was 1,915,404), Laos may thus have some 2,300,000 people. Twenty per cent may not be a generous enough allowance, however.

The grouping of the country's sixteen provinces under three regional headings (Center, North, and South) is a logical but arbitrary one which the Lao Government does not necessary recognize.

The information was obtained from the RLG Ministry of Interior.

The Ministry is presently trying to bring the population figures more up to date.
