Free Greenville Man in Krueger Extortion Plot

Roland Hassinger, Greenville farmer who was arrested by Neenah police Wednesday night as a suspect in a plot to extort $3,000 from William Krueger and Son, Neenah hardware merchants, was released from custody Thursday evening when it became certain that his alibi was sound and when a second extortion letter was received by the Kruegers. The first letter received Wednesday demanded that the Kruegers place $3,000 in a bag, take the 11:17 Soo Line train from Neenah and throw the parcel out the window from the left side of the train when highway crossing 26 was reached. This first letter also demanded that the Krueger firm use its influence to get Fred Runde out of state prison at Waupun. Runde is serving a fifteen year term for kidnapping a small daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Webb of Neenah several years ago. Mrs. Webb is a niece of Mr. Krueger.

A dummy package was made up and M. W. Krueger threw it from the train at the crossing specified in the letter. Neenah police officers armed with a machine gun had stationed themselves at the crossing. Hassinger drove up to the crossing and waited for the train to pass. When he saw the package thrown from the train he got out of his car and walked over to pick it up. He was commanded to halt, but, according to his story, he became alarmed thinking he was being accosted by hold-up men and fled toward his car. The officers then fired several shots into Hassinger's car putting it out of commission and Hassinger then surrendered. He denied any knowledge of the extortion plot or the Runde affair and said he was just curious to know what was in the package which was tossed from the train.

A second letter, mailed about noon in Neenah, gave additional credence to Hassinger's alibi. This missive changed the instructions contained in the first letter. It ordered the Kruegers to throw the package from the train near a bonfire along the right of way near Dale. The first letter was partly typewritten and partly printed. The second, which is being held by Neenah postal authorities, was printed in pencil.

No additional trace has been found of the writer of the missives since Hassinger's release, according to word late Friday morning from C. H. Watts, Neenah police chief.

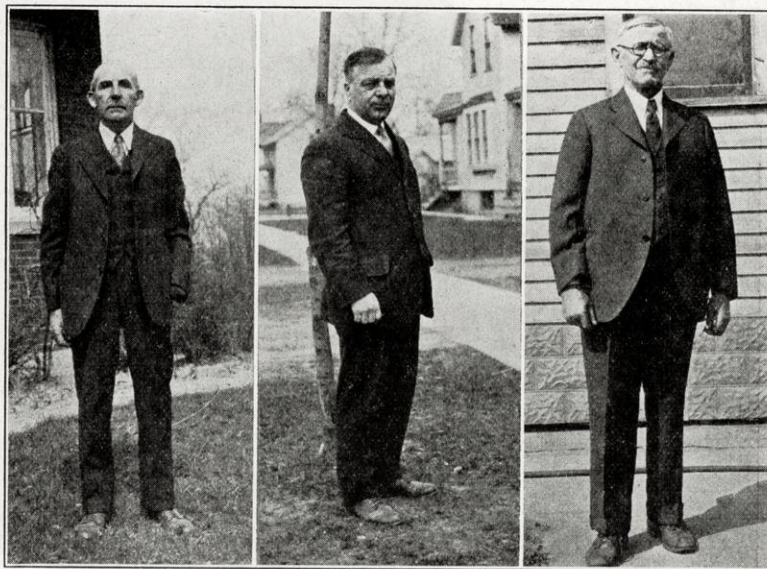

George T. Prim, chief of police, has been appointed to the resolutions committee of the Wisconsin Knights of Columbus. Other members are P. J. Stone, Wausau, chairman. W. J. Nuss, Fond du Lac; R. J. Hennessey, Milwaukee; J. Levinda, Park Falls; Voyta Wrabetz, Madison; and D. F. O'Connell, Hudson. The committee will meet at Wausau May 9. The state convention will be held at Racine May 19 and 20.

County Board Opposed to Building of New Court House at Present

While none of the major problems before the present session of the Outagamie county board is new, long and heated arguments have followed their presentation, with only one of the three questions disposed of by Thursday night, the close of the third day.

The board on Wednesday, after a heated discussion, tabled the report of the highway committee which opposed the institution of an eight-hour day for employes in the highway department, and the payment of a wage equivalent to the union scale. The resolution was introduced by Supervisor Jansen of Little Chute at the February session and laid over for consideration to this session. Immediately upon reading of the eight hour day was discussed. He said no county in the state operates on this basis, and that it cannot be done without disturbing the present efficiency of the department. He urged the county not to jump into a new venture, and said this is the wrong time to raise wages. He did not advocate a cut, but opposed a raise. Explaining why the county cannot adopt the eight hour day as mills and factories have done, the supervisor said these establishments are equipped with lighting facilities so that work on shifts is feasible, while county work must be done in daylight. He said the men in the department are satisfied and that it is unwise to tamper with what is well.

APPLETON'S NEW COUNTY BOARD MEMBERS

the report, Supervisor Powers of Kaukauna, asked for an amendment to the report requiring the payment of a wage equal to that paid by the federal government for work in the Fox river valley, which it was pointed out, is fifty cents an hour, with Saturday afternoons and holidays off with full pay allowance. Claiming that he stood staunchly for the interests of the laboring men, Supervisor Powers answered the protest of farmer members of the board with the assertion that it was the city people who made the pay and prices for the farmers.

Supervisor Jansen in his plea for an eight hour day, said the county was one of the outstanding ones in the state and should be progressive. An eight hour day, he contended, would create more jobs, and that if this policy were adopted in Outagamie county, others would follow. Chairman Krueger of the highway committee told the board his committee met with county highway committees at Green Bay recently and

M. Ryan, Combined Locks, felt that the establishment of the eight hour basis would provide more work, and that anything that tended to create more jobs should be done, since machines already have thrown too many men out of work.

Supervisor Powers, in response to the statement that two hours of the ten are consumed in transporting the men from the county garage to the job, suggested that they transport themselves on their own time. This was pointed out to be impracticable, since the crews are sent to different parts of the county each day and that implements and equipment must be hauled from a central point. The shift system, Supervisor Krueger said, would result in employment of inexperienced workers and would disrupt the general efficiency of the plant. The report was brought up for a vote, and Supervisors Esler, Jansen, Mayer, Powers, Reichel, M. Ryan, and Sherman voted against its adoption.

The court house question was made a special order of business for Thursday morning. The report of the special committee, appointed at the February session of the board, with Clyde Burdick as chairman, submitted its report which cited the need for more space for court house purposes, but which declared that building an addition would be only a temporary remedy to the situation. The committee fulfilled its obligation by submitting a plan for an addition to the south side of the present structure, 52 by 80 feet in size. Shifting of offices to provide extra room for crowded quarters would be possible with the addition, but the committee felt that the present court house could serve the purpose until a new structure could be built. The plan was submitted in compliance with the committee's instruction, but was not recommended.

The subject was revived Thursday by a strong appeal by Supervisor T. H. Ryan for the construction of a new court house.

The report of the special committee, Mr. Ryan said, confirmed the position he held that the county needed a new court house. "It is conceded by everyone who knows anything about court houses that we need a new building," Supervisor Ryan stated, "and the only question is when are we going to build?" Even if the committee had recommended that building of an addition, the supervisor said, it could not be done because the plans would require approval of the Industrial Commission, and that body, he assured the board, would never consent to spending $50,000 for the addition to a "fire trap." He cited the employment situation in the county, declaring construction work would provide jobs for idle men and that suggestions had been made to even disturb the smooth workings of the highway department by shortening the days in order to create work for the jobless. He charged the citizens with being willing to do anything but tax themselves. The supervisor declared it was a manly act to provide work for those needing it rather than allowing these persons to become county charges, and through the source of the poor department, pay the taxes that surely must be levied.

Mr. Ryan gave figures to show that the tax burden created through bonding for a court house would be only $1.22 per thousand assessment for a period of twenty-five years, and that the total would be but $30. The figures were prepared by accountants, Mr. Ryan said. Supervisors Krueger and Schultz questioned the figures. The former gave it as his opinion that the estimates were based on the income assessor's figures, which varied from the actual assessment, which were much lower and would raise the rate of taxation over the $1.22 indicated.

Supervisor Burdick, chairman of the special court house committee, conceded the necessity for a new structure, but advised deferring action. He suggested a plan whereby an appropriation of $50,000 annually would be set aside toward a building fund, and then when conditions were more favorable and after a sizable amount had been set aside, to proceed with a new structure. Supervisor Beek told the board that the farmers, whose incomes are negligible, and the laborers who are idle, object to a building program at the present time. He intimated that if the gas tax money is used to diminish the present indebtedness of the county, outstanding bonds will soon be paid for and that at such a time voters would look upon the project favorably.

Supervisor Powers, an ardent supporter of an immediate building program, reminded the board that two years ago he asked for a referendum on the court house question. "If we started today," he said, "we would need six months in which to have plans prepared and approved. Two years would be consumed in construction work and there would still be three years during which nothing would have to be paid on the principal. I believe if the voters thoroughly understood the matter, they would vote for a new building."

Several other supervisors entered the discussion, all agreeing that a new structure should be erected in preference to patching up and building onto the old one, but that the time has not arrived for that step. The report of the special committee, with suggested deferring action on a new building and presenting a plan for an addition without recommendation for its construction, was adopted. No course of action was definitely agreed upon Thursday, but statements from the supervisors indicated building would be deferred.

Practically the entire afternoon session Thursday was taken up with a discussion of dance hall ordinances. The dance hall committee reported that it had conferred with officials of Calumet and Winnebago counties and both groups desired to co-operate with Outagamie county in increasing the effectiveness of the ordinance. Frank B. Keefe, district attorney for Winnebago county, was called upon to discuss the operation of the Winnebago county ordinance. He told the board members that the ordinance should be based on sane and reasonable operation, but that no ordinance should be enacted which is passed with the mental reservations that certain sections will not be enforced. He referred to the number of roadhouses that have sprung up in the outlying communities, claiming that since the advent of the repeal of the state prohibition law the situation in many instances has become intolerable and needs attention. Old dilapidated places for which $15 a month would be a high rental fee have been leased to roadhouse operators for fabulous rents, he declared, claiming the owners of these premises are as guilty of violating the law as the operators themselves. He told his audience that Winnebago county rigidly enforces the law pertaining to disorderly roadhouses, and that the state law provides for a search of such places to determine their status. He urged a rock-pile for persons committed to jail, instead of comfortable quarters in a jail where the prisoners could entertain themselves with cards. Pleading for reasonable enforcement of an ordinance, which is not simply puritanical and aimed to deprive the citizens of their liberties, the district attorney advised against passage of a law which the sponsors do not expect to observe. Several amendments to the dance hall ordinance passed at the November session were laid over to Friday.

The board adopted a report favoring the widening of Seventh, Elm and Walnut streets around the court house, and ordered a copy of the resolution dispatched to the city officials. John C. Ryan was re-appointed a member of the board of appeals. The board went on record as opposed to any change in distribution of utility taxes, and also opposed to the proposed system which would create a general county school board committee and abolish all district committees.

Grounds about the Greenville Grange hall were beautified this week when about fifteen members held a "planting bee" and set out about two hundred trees and shrubs. Native plants were used so that the expense of landscaping the grounds was comparatively small. Plans were prepared by Dr. Franz Aust of the horticultural department of the University of Wisconsin. W. C. Wilhams was chairman of the committee, and Gus Sell, county agricultural agent, assisted.

Marriage licenses have been granted by John E. Hantschel, county clerk, to Martin J. Berner, Seymour, and Anna Hofacker, Black Creek; Cletus Vander Heyden, 615 N. Richmond St. and Gertrude Schultz, 923 W. Packard St., Appleton; and Herbert Longsine, Combined Locks, and Anna VanHimbergen, Kimberly.

August Sechwer, 34, Brillion, was arrested Tuesday evening by Officer Albert Deltgen and brought before Judge Theodore Berg in municipal court Wednesday morning on a charge of drunkenness. He pleaded guilty and was fined $10 and costs.

Two veterans of the county board, John Tracy, who retired last February after serving as supervisor from the Fourth ward, Appleton, for thirty-four successive years, and Fred Reichel, still serving as supervisor from the Fifth ward, Kaukauna, and entering his thirty-third year of service, were honored by members of the county board when it convened at the court house Tuesday afternoon. A rising vote of appreciation was extended. A special committee, consisting of Supervisors Knapstein, Reichel, and M. Ryan, was commissioned to present to Mr. Tracy, on behalf of the board, a bouquet, and express verbally the thanks of the board for his long and faithful service.

IT'S A WISE COUNCIL THAT SAYS "NO"

Practice of self denial is as good for a city as for an individual when it is a matter of paying up old bills and getting back to an even footing. Mayor John Goodland's "No" message to the incoming common council therefore is appropriate to the city's financial situation.

It is not as easy for a municipal governing body to say "No" to the demands for city expenditures and a firm policy takes courage. The officials who court unpopularity by their stand deserve a great deal of credit. For the time being they may be the target of abuse, but if the city a year hence has retired its bank loans, has its bills paid and a clean slate to start with, ill feeling will dissipate itself quickly.

When it is a case of spending other people's money, there is a tendency to be more liberal. Likewise, in a city government, the constituents are in close personal contact with their representatives. The people of a ward can wear out an alderman's doorstep with persistent demands for improvements, until the official finally is forced to yield. In state or national government, the contact is more remote and the people's dislikes are not heaped personally upon those who deny such requests.

It will help the new council a great deal if the public will recognize the wisdom of another year of curtailment of improvements. If the people will take the attitude that the city can get along for a year or two without additional paving, sewer extensions, the proposed incinerator, new buildings, extensive street oiling and other heavy drains on the municipal funds, the council will respond willingly and concentrate its attention on the reduction of maintenance expenses and the more efficient purchasing system suggested by the mayor. Public sentiment of this kind is a distinct help to a group of men trying to meet the wishes of those whom they serve.

Unemployment exists in Appleton as in other cities, but not in a measure that demands the release of public funds for lavish improvements. The summer and fall seasons are productive of more jobs than the winter period and the city can safely forego expansion for the time being so as to make further gains on its financial readjustment. Should conditions later become such that employment must be created, the council can meet the situation much more conveniently if the funds have been conserved in the meantime.

There is no more advantageous time than the present to establish the office of city comptroller, and to adopt an iron-clad budget that cannot be exceeded. This plan has been talked about for years, because it removes one of the principal weaknesses in financial administration. The present city budget is only an estimate of the expenditures for twelve months ahead. Departments continually exceed the amount allotted them, because the council appropriates money left and right without ascertaining whether the budgeted amount has been spent. Near the close of the fiscal year, heavy borrowing usually starts. The new year begins with a deficit staring the council in the face and not enough taxes levied to take care of the excesses as well as the needs of the future.

Under a controlled budget plan, the council could not exceed the amount allotted any department. The comptroller would be obliged to keep an accurate record showing the balances in various funds so the council would know just how much money it could spend. There would be no day of reckoning at the end of each year for moneys appropriated beyond what was in the treasury.

This system would ease the way for the aldermen in dealing with the demands of their constituents. Requests could be denied with good grace when it were known that the budget had been exhausted. The public would readily understand and would see the necessity of waiting until money was available for the particular things wanted.

It behooves the council to take advantage of the economy complex abroad everywhere now, and adopt the comptroller system. The measure would go through with little opposition. In times of prosperity and liberal spending, neither the council nor the public like to be restrained. The attitude is different now and a great deal of credit would redound to the present administration if it could point to this enactment as one of its accomplishments.

GOVERNMENT BY THE COMMON PEOPLE

Students of politics are following the activities of the Wisconsin legislature this year with greater interest than in many past sessions. It is a time when theories are being converted into laws and when their application will be made to the life and activities of the people of the state.

For years Progressivism has been gaining strength. The conservative Republicans have been virtually on the defensive to save their organization and their following. Each legislature found a less pronounced division of power, with the Progressives increasing and the Conservatives decreasing.

This time the Progressives achieved their long anticipated goal. Gov. Philip LaFollette was placed at the head of the state regime. The control in both the assembly and the senate is in the hands of the Progressives. Likewise all the major state offices are being filled by this group, and important appointments are favored much the same way.

There is in power then in Wisconsin a political group which can legislate at will according to its own principles and aspirations. The program in favor of state-owned public utilities is an example. No Conservative legislature would enact such laws because industry's strength depended on this group. Nothing can stop final passage by the Progressives, however. Much legislation benefitting the laborer and the farmer also is making its way onto the statute books. Likewise, there is a further shifting of taxation in favor of the little fellow and onto the shoulders of those having the larger earnings and the wealth.

This bi-ennium is the heyday in legislation for the common people. It is their opportunity to fulfill wishes of many years standing. Their party is in power. What may happen before the session closes perhaps worries the capitalist element and a sigh of relief will be breathed when adjournment finally comes. No doubt the changes in the laws will be more sweeping and far-reaching, and literally radical than in any session for years.

Progressives have promised much from the stump and their principles have appealed to the masses. The chance of fulfillment is here. The party either will gain new strength from this demonstration of its effectiveness or will legislate itself out of power because it has gone too far. Perhaps Progressivism might even be accepted by the skeptics. Who knows what the scene will be like after the smoke of legislative battle clears away?

Our next two legal holidays come on Saturday, meaning double holidays again. We dread the motor accident reports of those two weekends. It would be a good idea to give the whole highway to the driver trying to take a two weeks' trip in two days.

We keep something handy these days to heave at the egg who begins to talk about another hard winter ahead. Let us get through spring and summer first. There may be sunshine enough to last.

Those who roll up their sleeves instead of turning up their noses are the most apt to succeed these days, says B. C. Forbes.

Business reports show one automobile factory after another increasing production. Must be the effect of the billion dollar soldier bonus loan privilege is being felt.

Mayor Stresses Need of Continued Economy in Address to New Council

Economy was the keynote of Mayor John Goodland's address to the new city council, which held its first formal session Wednesday. Two new aldermen were seated, C. O. Davis of the First ward, who succeeds George H. Packard, and Wenzel Hassman of the Fifth ward, successor to W. H. Vanderheyden.

In a terse address, the mayor emphasized his slogan, "Reduce the indebtedness of the city." He pointed to the fact that a year ago when he assumed office as mayor of Appleton there were but $18,000 in the city treasury and that it was necessary to borrow money with which to conduct municipal business, at the first meeting in the year. The city debt was $250,000. During the year that indebtedness was cut in two, and this council, the mayor said, was expected to wipe out the balance. The only way in which it can be done is via the path of economy, he added. In contrast to financial status of the city at the beginning of the new council year and a year ago, the executive declared loans will not be necessary until in July. He reminded the councilmen, also, that interest which amounted to approximately $33 a day on the large loan of last year, counted up rapidly. When the new regime went into office a year ago there were many outstanding bills. This year there are none beyond current expenses and the treasury has a balance of $124,562.

The largest undertaking of the year, the mayor said, is the re-assessment. He pointed to the urgent need for this re-evaluation, stating that the city had never had a re-assessment and that too much had been expected of the assessors. The city had been drifting along until assessments ran rampant and many inequalities were evident. The work of revaluing the city, he said, is being done under supervision of the state tax commission. He urged the councilmen to assist in clarifying the erroneous impression that exists in relation to the re-assessment. A complete description of each parcel of property is being taken by the field men, the mayor explained, who will turn this information over to the assessor. A data sheet for each property will eliminate errors. The re-assessment, Mayor Goodland concluded, is one of the biggest things that has been attempted in the city in many years.

Briefly the mayor discussed the National Fire Underwriters' report. He said all the suggestions made in the report cannot be carried out immediately, though eventually all such recommendations will be realized. He advised against hasty action, and cited figures submitted by Joseph Plank, of the water commission, which showed Appleton had 610 hydrants as against 398 in Fond du Lac, a larger city, and 522 at Janesville, a smaller city. Appleton has 895 valves compared to 56 at Fond du Lac and 691 at Janesville, and in this city there are 75 miles of mains, at Fond du Lac 51 miles, and at Janesville 63. The report, he said, would make Appleton an "ideal city." The community is a good insurance city, Mayor Goodland asserted. Insurance premiums totalling $200,000 are paid here annually with $70,000 returned for losses. However, he said, the report was something for the fire and water commission to study.

Fire runs outside the city was another topic discussed. This problem was presented previously, the mayor said, but no action has been taken. He expressed his opinion that it was unfair to expect this service to be rendered to residents outside the city limits, who have moved to the outskirts to avoid taxation. Each run, he said, costs about $250 and unless communities outside the city borders pay for this service, it should not be granted. He said he believed annexation to the city proper of small adjacent towns would result if advantages enjoyed by citizens were denied persons living outside Appleton's domain.

Unemployment Problem

Unemployment is one of the most difficult problems the new council probably will meet this year, Mayor Goodland declared. He stated that whatever had been saved in the snow removal fund had been far offset by expenditures of the poor department. Unless conditions improve before winter, a serious problem faces the community. Prices will go down, he said, if conditions do not improve, and with it taxes and rents must go down. That probability demands strict adherence to budgets. Ten members of the council, who held over from last year, pledged themselves to an economy program, the mayor said, and he urged them to abide by that promise. It may be necessary, he continued, to cut the levy in order to so reduce taxes that homeowners will be able to pay. Councilmen must learn to say "no."

Mayor Goodland urged that city officials not be allowed to attend national conventions this year.

Street department maintenance was reduced by $50,000 last year, the chief said, and expressed the hope that it would be cut even more this year. He said the city officials have learned much about purchasing, and that prices will be sought on small items as well as on large amounts. This principle, he said, would be applied also in the poor department.

Urging action on the petition of the Appleton Trades and Labor Council petition for an ordinance providing for the use of home labor, the mayor called attention to the fact that home labor is specified in several present city contracts.

Retaining Appleton Industries

A contact committee, which would endeavor to retain manufacturing plants considering removal from the city, and make an effort to secure location of additional plants in the city, was recommended in the mayor's program. He pleaded for informal meetings where city affairs could be discussed openly and conscientiously in a way of preparation for action in executive sessions. He invited conferences with the aldermen, declaring understanding eliminated difficulty and closed his address to the new council with a plea for co-operation and team work.

Several changes in the rules of the council were presented and adopted. Supervisor P. H. Ryan, who is ill, was unable to attend the April session of the county board and asked the council to appoint a substitute for him. Upon recommendation of the second ward alderman, Frank P. Young was chosen temporary supervisor from the second ward.

Recommendation for a storm sewer extension in Bellaire park was referred to the street and bridge committee, and a report recommending the allotment of space now used in the fire department to the police department, the installation of an air line and water system in the room, was adopted. With most of the business held over to the May session, the council adjourned until tonight, when a hearing will be held on the paving projects, for which bids were recently opened.

Skippy Comes from Living Pattern

There is an actual living-and-breathing, in-the-flesh "Skippy," who, while he could not possibly appear in the Paramount picture version of this famous syndicate feature, opening Monday at the Fox theatre, nevertheless has imbued the scenes with all the realism of life permitted by his age and size.

The one-and-only, real "Skippy," according to close friends, is none other than Percy Crosby, cartoonist whose facile pen and ready wit have made "Skippy" in newspaper form a national favorite.

But Crosby is thirty-six years old and nearly six feet tall.

Jackie Cooper, who plays the title role in the picture, was chosen because he was a copy of the original lovable little rogue, and no small weight in the decision was carried by the opinion of those who best know Crosby, the boy and the man. Many of his friends shook their heads and sighed that Crosby could not throw aside the years and play "Skippy," himself.

They recall his swinging, dynamic, boyish carriage; his nervous face and impudent eyes, the small boy dressed up to look solemn and adult, but whose youthful spirit bubbled over and beamed out over a massive bow tie.

In charting the life of "Skippy," Crosby puts his whole spirit in his work. It is absolutely impossible for the artist to like anything, think anything, do anything, in a half-hearted fashion, with "Skippy." He is in it up to his neck and ears, or out of it entirely. Crosby, sandy-haired, wiry, compact with energy, has plunged himself whole-heartedly into the little fellow he draws; has made him a palpable influence on American life and thought.

A story is told of how he recently presented an editor with a new series of adventures for "Skippy."

"No," he objected firmly when the editor suggested that a certain event would be a logical event for Crosby's cartoon kid. "No, Skippy has a different bug in his hat. You see, here's what he's really interested in."

Crosby then went on outlining Skippy's aim, like a real boy were depending upon his originator to do the right thing by him in all transactions with the outside world.

As if "Skippy" were to be nudged into any false sort of slapstick, any antic which he didn't thoroughly enjoy or approve, any conduct that was not closely attuned to his secretive heart.

"Well, now, honey, you can't expect those ladies to be wearing their best bib and tucker mornings to do the housework in. Besides, most of the men come without their women folk. They'll send for them, and then you'll have plenty of company. It isn't every woman who'd have the courage you showed, roughing it out here. You're the stuff that Rachel was made of, and the mother of the Gracchi."

Rachel, was, she knew, out of the Bible; she was a little hazy about the Gracchi, but basked serene in the knowledge that a compliment was intended.

There was the absurdly wide street—surely fifty feet wide—in this little one-street town. Here and there a straggling house or so branched off it. But the life of Osage seemed to be concentrated just here. There were tents still to be seen serving as dwellings. Houses and stores were built of unpainted wood. They looked as if they had been run up overnight, as indeed they had. Tied to the crude hitching posts driven well into the ground were all sorts of vehicles; buckboards, crazy carts, dilapidated wagons, mule drawn; here and there a top buggy covered with the dust of the prairie; and everywhere, lording it, those four-footed kings without which life in this remote place could not have been sustained—horses of every size and type and color and degree. Direct descendants, these, of the equine patricians who, almost four hundred years before, had been brought across the ocean by Coronado or Moscoso to the land of the Seven Cities of Gold.

Crude and ugly though the scene was that now spread itself before Sabra and Yancey, it still was not squalid. It had vitality. You sensed that behind those bare boards people were planning and stirring mightily. There was life in the feel of it. The very names tacked up over the store fronts had bite and sting. Sam Pack. Mott Bixler. Strap Buckner. Ike Hawkes. Clint Hopper. Jim Click.

Though they had come to town but the night before, it seemed to her that a surprising number of people knew Yancey and greeted him as they passed down the street. "H'are you, Yancey! Howdy, ma'am." Loungers in doorways stared at them curiously.

It struck Sabra suddenly with a little shock of discovery, that the men really were doing nothing. She was to learn that many of them were not builders but scavengers. The indomitable old '49ers were no kin of these. They were, frequently, soft, cruel, furtive, and avaricious. They had gathered here to pick up what they could and move on. Some were cowmen, full of resentment against a government that had taken the free range away from them and given it over to the homesteaders. Deprived of their only occupation, many of these became outlaws. Equipped with six-shooters, a deadly aim, and horsemanship that amounted to the miraculous they took to the Gyp hills or the Osage, swooping down from their hidden haunts to terrorize a town, shoot up a bank, hold up a train, and dash out again, leaving blood behind them. They risked their lives for a few hundred dollars. Here was a vast domain without written laws, without precedent, without the customs of civilization; part of a great country, yet no part of its government. Here a horse was more valuable than a human life. A horse thief, caught, was summarily hanged to the nearest tree; the killer of a man often went free.

Down the street these two stepped in their finery, the man swaggering a little as a man should in a white sombrero and with a pretty woman on his arm; the woman looking about her interestedly, terrified at what she saw and determined not to show it. If two can be said to make a procession, then Yancey and Sabra Cravat formed quite a parade as they walked down Pawhuska avenue in the blaze of the morning sun. Certainly they seemed to be causing a stir. Lean rangers in buckboards turned to stare. Loungers in doorways nudged each other, yawping. Cowboys clattering by whooped a greeting. It was unreal, absurd, grotesque.

"Hi, Yancey! Howdy, ma'am." Past the Red Dog saloon. A group in chairs tilted up against the wall or standing about in high-heeled boots and sombreros greeted Yancey now with a familiarity that astonished Sabra. "Howdy, Cim! Hello, Yancey." "He called you Cim!"

He ignored her surprised remark. Narrowly he was watching them as he passed. "Boys are up to something.

If they try to get funny while you're here with me—"

Sabra, glancing at the group from beneath her shielding hat brim, did see that they were behaving much like a lot of snickering schoolboys who are preparing to let fly a bombardment of snowballs, an air of secret mischief afoot.

"Why are they—what do you think makes them—" Sabra began, a trifle nervously.

"I can't say for sure. But I suspect they're the boys that did Pegler dirt."

"Pegler? Who is—oh, isn't that the man—the editor—the one who was found dead—shot dead on the banks of the—Yancey! Do you mean they did it!"

"I don't say they did it—exactly. They know more than is comfortable, even for these parts. I was inquiring around last night, and everybody shut up like a clam. I'm going to find out who killed Pegler and print it in the first number of the Oklahoma Wigwam."

"Oh, Yancey! Yancey, I'm frightened!" She clung tighter to his arm. The grinning mirthless faces of the men on the saloon porch seemed to her like the fanged and snarling muzzles of wolves in a pack.

"Nothing to be frightened of, honey. They know me. I'm no Pegler they can scare. They don't like my white hat, that's the truth of it. Dared me last night down at the Sunny Southwest saloon to wear it this morning. Just to try me out. They won't have the guts to come out in the open—"

The sentence never was finished. Sabra heard a curious buzzing sound past her ear. Something sang—zing! Yancey's white sombrero went spinning into the dust of the road.

Sabra's mouth opened as though she were screaming, but the sounds she would have emerged, feebly, as a croak.

"Stay where you are," Yancey ordered, his voice low and even. "The dirty dogs." She stood transfixed. She could not have run if she had wanted to. Yancey strolled leisurely over to where the white hat lay in the dust. He stooped carelessly, his back to the crowd on the saloon porch, picked up the hat, surveyed it, and reached toward his pocket for his handkerchief. At that movement there was a rush and a scramble on the porch. Tilted chairs leaped forward, heels clattered, a door slammed. Of the group only three men remained. One of these leaned insolently against a porch post, a second warily behind him, and a third was edging prudently toward the closed door. There was nothing to indicate who had fired the shot that had sent Yancey's hat spinning.

Yancey, now half turned toward them, had taken his fine white handkerchief from his pocket, had shaken out its ample folds with a gesture of elegant leisure and, hat in hand, was flicking the dust from the headgear. This done he surveyed the hat critically, seemed to find it little the worse for its experience unless, perhaps, one excepts the two neat round holes that were drilled, back and front, through the peak of its crown. He now placed it on his head again with a gesture almost languid, tossed the fine handkerchief into the road, and with almost the same gesture, or with another so lightning quick that Sabra's eye never followed it, his hand went to his hip. There was the crack of a shot. The man who was edging toward the door clapped his hand to his ear and brought his hand away and looked at it, and it was darkly smeared. Yancey still stood in the road, his hand at his thigh, one slim foot, in its fine high-heeled Texas star boot, advanced carelessly. His great head was lowered menacingly. His eyes, steel gray beneath the brim of the white sombrero, looked as Sabra had never seen them look. They were terrible eyes, merciless, cold, hypnotic.

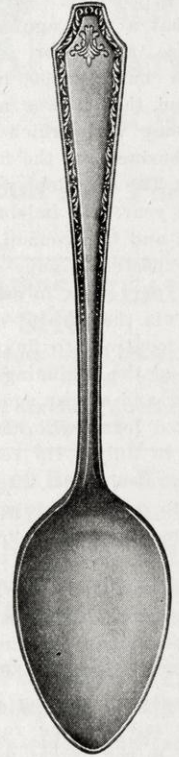

"A three-cornered piece, you'll find it, Lon. The Cravat sheep brand."

"Can't you take a poke, Yancey?" whined one of the three, his eyes on Yancey's gun hand.

What Shall We Have For Dinner Today?

VARIETY IN MEAT COURSES AT LOW COST

Have you gotten into a rut of sameness in preparing meals? Here is one way out.

Avail yourselves of the great variety of meats, economical and rich in food values, offered in Review columns by the most progressive meat shops in the city. Familiarize yourselves with some of the less used portions of our standard food animals and learn to use them to their full advantage, releasing your family from the eternal round of steaks, chops, roasts and stews.

How often do you use livers (chicken, rabbit, veal, beef, pork, or fish livers), hearts and kidneys? They are all rich in food value, high in protein and delicate in flavor (when properly prepared), lower in cost than many of the cuts we serve habitually, and now used in the treatment of certain organic disorders. Perhaps some of you are like the woman who asked us the other day how one cooked tongue. She hadn't known that tongues could be cooked and eaten, much less that there are so many delectable ways of preparing them for the table. And yet she had catered for her family for nearly twenty years.

Like all close-textured—"solid"—meats, these require careful cooking to be at their tenderest and most palatable.

Broiled Lamb's Kidneys

These being small and delicate are best when broiled, although they may be used in a stew and other ways. Remove the thin skin and with a sharp knife cut from outer edge almost to the center, run a toothpick through the outer surface of the split kidney to keep it from curling. Brush with melted shortening and broil about five minutes, turning two or three times. Serve on toast garnished with crisp slices of bacon, allowing two kidneys for each serving. Season when done (as with all broiled meats) with salt, pepper and a bit of lemon juice, if liked. Or roll in seasoned flour and pan broil.

Beef Kidneys

These, being larger, are better adapted to stewing, deviled dishes, and meat pies. To prepare them for any of the dishes into which they may enter, cut crosswise into slices and remove the white membranous tissue in the center. Soak in cold water for an hour. Discard the water. Then they are ready to cook.

Meat and Kidney Pie

Cut 1½ lbs. round steak into thin strips; prepare 1 beef kidney as directed above. Mix on a plate 2 tbsp. flour, 1 tsp. salt, 1/3 tsp. pepper. Dip each piece of steak and kidney into this and form into rolls with the kidney in the center. Place in a baking dish, sprinkle over them, if liked, a diced onion and a diced carrot, fill dish two-thirds with cold water, cover and bake slowly for one hour.

In the meantime prepare pastry or biscuit dough, roll out, cover meat with this crust and return to the oven for half an hour. This may be served hot or cold. If you want to make a one-dish meal of this, add potatoes cut in large cubes and cook with the meat.

Hearts

To prepare these for baking, smothering or stewing, wash in lukewarm water to which 1 tsp. of baking soda has been added. Remove blood clots and cut away the tough muscle and veins. Place in cold water for an hour.

Blend 2 cups stale bread crumbs with 1 tsp. salt, ¼ tsp. pepper, 1 large minced onion, 1 tsp. minced parsley, 1 tsp. poultry dressing, and about 3 tbsp. melted shortening. Moisten with egg and milk, if necessary. Stuff the prepared heart and tie oiled paper over the stuffing. Place in deep dish with 1 cup hot water and 2 tbsp. bacon fat in moderate oven (about 2 to 2½ hours according to size), basting frequently. Before it is quite finished the paper may be removed. Serve very hot with a brown gravy or tomato sauce.

The smaller hearts, or kidneys too, may be carefully boiled, then cubed and heated in brown gravy. Smother in tomato sauce and bake, or prepare in other ways which you may devise for yourselves as you experiment with this sort of cookery.

Rules for cooking liver are more numerous and available and most of us are more familiar with the preparation of liver dishes, especially since its exploitation in the treatment of anemia. The use of fish livers, when you can get them, is more of an unfamiliarity to the majority of cooks.

Treat your family to one of these "different" meat dishes soon.

Mack Named Chairman of Board for Fifth Time

Mike Mack, supervisor from Shiocton, was elected chairman of the county board for the fifth successive term when that body convened at the court house Tuesday afternoon. Anton Jansen, supervisor from Little Chute, was re-elected vice chairman.

The session opened with sharp criticism of the state legislators for their attempts to strip towns and villages of funds the board believes should be retained by them. Supervisor Jansen, who led the discussion, urged towns and cities to fight for their rights. Bills proposing to take from municipalities income tax receipts and providing for compulsory employment of county electrical inspectors, came in for special scoring. County Clerk John E. Hantschel was instructed to wire the board's sentiments to the legislative committees. Assemblyman Oscar Schmiede was instructed to oppose the measure creating a county electrical inspector. Supervisors Laabs, Jansen and Burdick were named on a special committee to investigate bills which might prove derogatory to various districts.

Relocation of Highway 55 between Freedom and Seymour, suggested by the state highway commission, was approved by the board. The rerouting will shorten the distance between the two points and eliminate several dangerous corners. New committees appointed for the year, announced by Chairman Mack Wednesday morning are as follows:

Finance — Beck, Jacobs, Muenster, Burdick, and Ruppel.

Knowing Our Children Better

By

Edith D. Dixon

Children Like To Earn

Practically all children like to earn money because it gives them a feeling of independence to have money to spend as they please. The satisfaction which the child experiences is akin to that of the adult who is financially independent.

Once the child has tasted the joy of being self-supporting he is unwilling voluntarily to become dependent. This urge to be self-supporting appears in the teens and arouses a desire in the minds of many children to leave school to earn money. Sometimes it is difficult to tide over this period and convince the child that more education will, in the long run, be not only an asset but essential to increased earning capacity.

In towns and smaller communities a common way of making money is having a newspaper route or a job as errand boy on Saturdays in a local store. In some cases parents take for their own use some or all of the money earned by the boy.

"Henry earns $30 a month on his paper route," said one mother, "but I take every cent, for otherwise it goes right through his fingers."

Henry was 14 years old, and it was time he learned how to spend wisely. Was he learning by having his mother spend for him?

A better plan would be to discuss with the boy what should be saved, what spent on necessities, what on pleasures, and to encourage him to keep accounts. Then leave him alone to handle the matter. Once a week the accounts could be gone over. This would furnish an excellent excuse for comparing wise and foolish purchases.

It is desirable for children in their teens to find their own ways of earning money and not have all the means supplied by the parents. Often the opportunity comes through membership in organizations. The girls in these clubs not only earn their club dues but raise money for equipment or good times by selling cookies, cake, and candy which they have learned to make at their club meetings. These same girls may also earn their Christmas money by taking orders for such articles as book ends, dress bags, stationery portfolios, the making of which has been taught in other club projects.

Miss Mary Baker, dean of girls; Miss May Webster, instructor in bookkeeping; Bruno Krueger, commercial department; and H. H. Helble, principal, of Appleton High school will attend the annual state convention of the Wisconsin Vocational Guidance association in Green Bay Saturday.

Appleton Trades and Labor council discussed a suggestion recently presented to the city council providing for the protection of home labor, at its meeting Wednesday night. An ordinance, covering the request of the labor group and several additional features, was rejected by the council.

Cast 32 Ballots for City Home Keeper and Matron

Though it was necessary to ballot on applications for appointive offices from two to thirty-two times, all but two former city appointive employes were retained by the new council, which held its first formal session at the council chambers Tuesday evening. The most exciting contests were in the appointments for poor commissioner and city home keeper and matron. Five formal ballots were taken before W. L. Lyons gained a majority for the position of poor commissioner, and a three-cornered race between Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Becher, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Harth, and Mr. and Mrs. Earl Otto was not ended until the thirty-second formal ballot gave Becher the majority necessary to put him into office. Becher and Harth continued to poll five and six votes alternately, with the odd vote going to Otto. Several times a tie occurred between the two leaders with five votes each and two for Otto.

Offices for which there was no opposition were those of city clerk, city physician, and weigh master.

Anxiety was thrust into the contests in several instances where there were but two candidates, each having received an equal number of votes on the informal ballot. This situation occurred in the case of building inspector when John N. Weiland, incumbent, and William Campshure each received six votes. The formal ballot gave Weiland eleven votes to Campshure's one. On the informal ballot Theodore Albrecht, incumbent, and Frank Bartz each were given six votes for the office of street commissioner. The result of the formal ballot was ten votes for Albrecht against two for Bartz.

Mayor John Goodland cast the deciding vote in the janitor race. On the first formal ballot six votes each were accorded to Henry Frank, incumbent, and Frank VandenBoogard. The mayor cast his vote for VandenBoogard.

Three formal ballots were taken to select a plumbing inspector, with George E. Gauslin, incumbent, maintaining a slight lead until the final vote put him into office. Other applicants were John H. Bauer, Fred W. Wise and Raymond Childs.

Three applications were filed for the office of city engineer. Robert M. Connelly, a former city engineer, and Omar W. White sought the job in opposition to L. M. Schindler, incumbent. Schindler polled ten votes on the first formal ballot.

Six applicants sought the office of poor commissioner. They were E. A. Tesch, A. W. Zerbel, W. L. Lyons, E. G. Schueler, Michael Jacobs, and P. G. Schwartz. Mr. Lyons, incumbent, was elected on the fifth ballot.

Philip Vogt, alderman from the Sixth ward, was elected president of the council. On the first formal ballot Vogt received four votes, George Richards one, and Charles D. Thompson six. On the second ballot, Vogt polled seven votes, Walter Gmeiner one, and C. D. Thompson four.

Robert E. McGillan was elected a member of the city plan commission; Harvey Kittner and Wenzel Hassman, members of the board of health; and Mike Steinhauer, a member of the library board.

New committees announced by Mayor Goodland are as follows: finance—Richards, Davis, Earle, Wassenberg, Hassman, and Kittner; street and bridge—Thompson, Steinhauer, Gmeiner, McGillan, Groth, and Vogt; fire and water—Gmeiner, Davis, Thompson, McGillan, Groth, and Vogt; street lighting—Earle, Steinhauer, Richards, Wassenberg, Hassman, and Kittner; poor—McGillan, Davis, Earle, Gmeiner, Groth, and Kittner; public grounds and building—Steinhauer, Thompson, Richards, Wassenberg, Hassman, and Vogt; police and license—Vogt, Davis, Earle, Gmeiner, Wassenberg, and Groth; ordinance—Kittner, McGillan, Steinhauer, Thompson, Richards, and Hassman; judiciary—Groth, Davis, Earle, Gmeiner, Wassenberg, and Vogt; and price committee—Wassenberg.

Appointive officers are city clerk, Carl Becher; city engineer, L. M. Schindler; building inspector, John N. Weiland; plumbing inspector, George E. Gauslin; city physician, Dr. F. P. Dehearty; poor commissioner, W. L. Lyons; sealer of weights and measure, Joseph A. Hodgins; weigh master, Alex Robedeau; city home keeper and matron, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Becher; street commissioner, Theodore Albrecht; and janitor, Frank VandenBoogard.

A son was born to Mr. and Mrs. C. Rooney, 317 N. Durkee street, Wednesday at St. Elizabeth hospital.

Mayor Reviews Work of Old City Council

With W. H. VanderHeyden, alderman from the Fifth ward, absent, the old city council held its final session Wednesday, transacting only a little minor business and referring all matters in the hands of council committees to similar committees of the new council.

Paul Noffke and Julius Krause were granted walk builders licenses, and permission was granted to the Holy Name society to decorate the streets on the line of march of the Holy Name convention parade in Appleton May 31. A communication from C. G. Cannon, attorney for the William Tesch estate, concerning repairs on the sidewalk alongside the Tesch property on Washington street was referred to the street and bridge committee, and a communication from the Chicago and Northwestern railroad in regard to donation of a strip of land necessary for widening Memorial drive was laid over to the May session of the council. An ordinance providing for inserting a provision of $70 per month for bridge tenders in the salary ordinance was referred to the ordinance committee and ordered published.

Alderman Packard, the only alderman of the two who are retiring, present, gave a short farewell address, in which he thanked his colleagues for courtesies extended during his incumbency and extended his hope for success to the new council.

Mayor Goodland closed the last session of the old council with a brief review of accomplishments of the year. He referred to the contrast of conditions now and a year ago. When the mayor took office a year ago he stated there were but $18,000 in the treasury with a large amount of unpaid bills due. At the close of the year all bills are paid and there is a sum of $124,500 on hand, leaving a net gain during the years of $106,500.

There was a difference in expenditures of $115,000 in favor of the year 1930 over 1929, the mayor said. He commended the council on its attempt to get the city back on a better financial basis.

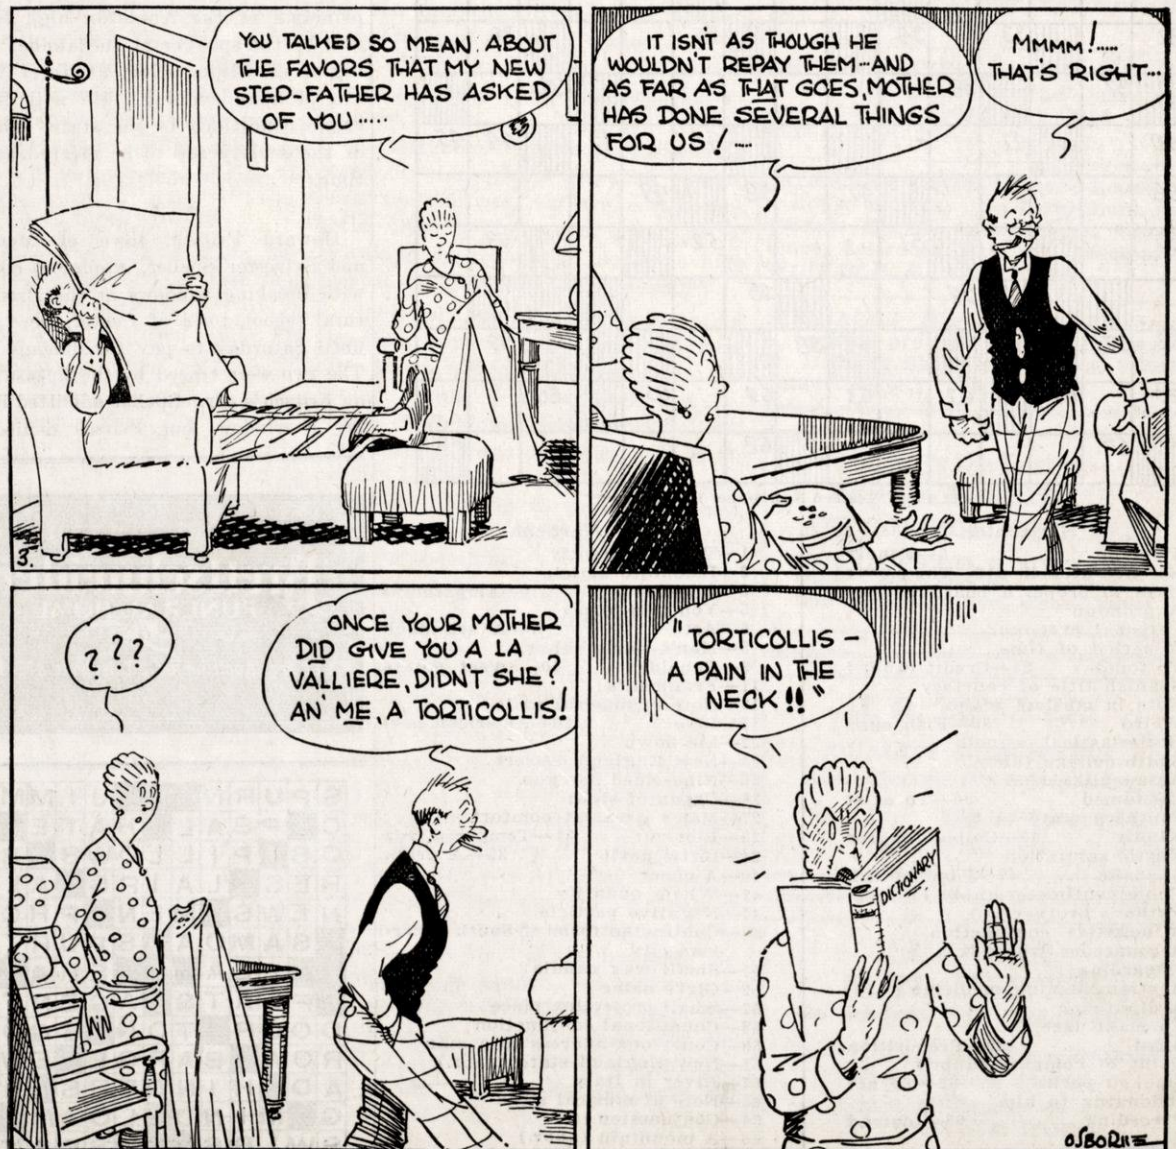

A. J. Geniesse has called a meeting of the retail division of the Appleton Chamber of Commerce for Monday afternoon. A communication in regard to decorations by the Lions club in connection with the celebration on May 18 observing the anniversary of the Treaty of the Cedars, a suggestion by the advertising club for a co-operative event this summer; and a merchants and manufacturing exposition are to be discussed.

Campus Comment

By Russell Davis

Spring football practice was concluded last Saturday with a scrimmage among the dozen or so athletes who appeared on the field. Coach Percy Clapp has returned to Milwaukee where he will wind up his duties as a member of the Milwaukee State Teachers college staff. Although the new coach did not have a great deal of material to work with it is the opinion of this column that next year's team is going to be more of a winner than anyone suspects. It is true the spring drills were lacking in manpower but that fact may be explained when it is known that many of the regulars of last season were unable to report because of various jobs which they hold. Then, too, several of the men counted upon for varsity positions next fall were kept from the early season drill by injuries. Thus, while we don't predict a world beater next fall we do think the Viking eleven will give a good account of itself in all of its games.

The second six week exams of the semester were presented to the student body this week. The grades are again due in the office and the campus atmosphere, in many cases, will be a trifle tense until the marks are recorded and passed on by the faculty committee.

Warren Beck spoke in chapel Wednesday on the subject "Wine and Cookies." Mr. Beck's talk had to do with the modern jazz music which the youth of the day revels in. The speech was presented in a very humorous style which was greatly enjoyed by both students and faculty.

Baseball, the final event on the interfraternity sports program, will get under way next Monday at Whiting field. No predictions will be ventured as to the outcome of the race because all of the teams are reported to boast a lot of strength both offensively and defensively.

"Meet the Millionaire," a play written by Miss Ruth McKennan will be presented this year as the senior class play. Try-outs will be held the beginning of next week. The cast includes eight boys and seven girls, the leading part being that of the millionaire. The play will be presented at Lawrence Memorial chapel, June 1.

Next Thursday afternoon in assembly the seniors will present their annual vanderbille. A fine orchestra will furnish music and there will be ushers to show students to their seats. Committees are now working on the program which will be very entertaining.

Plans are being made for the Class day program, May 28. The program this year will be written by a group of seniors. The committee is Dorothy Cohen, chairman, Mary Brooks, Anita Cast, Richard Balliet, and Edward Weis-millor. Various organizations will participate in the program this year.

Students have been selected to participate in the Bolton-Roth extemporaneous contest, May 7. They are: Ellen Balliet, Richard Balliet, Vernon Beckman, Chester Dorschner, and Fred Marshall. The winner will enter the valley contest at Sheboygan, May 14.

Yesterday in assembly G. A. A. awards were represented.

The golf tournament begins Friday, May 1. Many boys have entered, and from this group, four will be chosen to represent Appleton at the conference meet.

ROOSEVELT SCHOOL NOTES

By Jean C. Owen

Plans are well under way for a ninth grade spring frolic to be held May 22. No graduation exercises are held and this party provides for the last social gathering the ninth graders have before leaving the Junior high school. Miss Fenske is general chairman of the party. Committees are: Decorations—Mr. Wilson, chairman, Miss Schultz, Mr. Pickett; refreshments—Miss Taylor; Finance—Miss Jackson, chairman, Mr. Gardiner; entertainment—Miss Broderick, chairman, Miss May; cleanup—Mr. Barlow.

The Roosevelt orchestra under the direction of Mr. Jay Williams entertained the students at the regular assembly hour.

The girls volley ball team journeyed to the Wilson school Thursday to play the ninth grade champions. The Roosevelt team lost the game, but the boys evened things up, both teams having won one game. It is possible that a return game will be played to decide the championship.

The seventh and eighth grade boys volley ball tournament has just been completed. The results are:

| Clarence Voight, Capt. | | | |
| Lions | 5 | 1 | .835 |
| John De Bauer, Capt. | | | |
| Dragons | 2 | 4 | .334 |
| Alfred Stark, Capt. | | | |
| Cardinals | 0 | 6 | .000 |

| Zimmerman's team | 2 | 5 | .250 |

Tonight the seventh and eighth graders play at Wilson to determine the school championship between Roosevelt and Wilson. In the ninth grade first and second place championship was played off. Strutz's team was defeated for first place, the championship going to Wilson. Peterson's team of Roosevelt won second place. On April 29 picked teams from each school in the seventh, eighth, and ninth grades will play at Roosevelt. This will finish volley ball games for the year.

Today marks the end of the fifth six week period. It means that only six weeks remain in which to complete any work unfinished. Report cards are issued on April 28.

Little Nine High Schools To Have Forensic Meet

A forensic contest in which nine high schools will be represented will be held on May 1 at the Kimberly community club house. There will be four events in which representatives of these schools will compete: Extemporaneous reading, oratorical contest, extemporaneous speaking, and declamatory contest. The program will be opened at 2:30 in the afternoon with the extemporaneous reading contest. This will be followed by the oratorical contest and the extemporaneous speaking contest will be at 8 o'clock in the evening. The program concludes with the declamatory contest.

At this time the schools representing each division which will take part in this forensic program are not known. Miss Ruth McKennan of the public speaking department of Appleton high school will judge all the contests.

Subjects for the extemporaneous speaking contest will be selected from the March and April issues of the Literary Digest, World's Work and Review of Reviews. Each speaker will draw five subjects and select one as his choice. Speakers may outline topics without referring to those magazines, but all notes must be discarded as he goes to the stage.

Immediately following the afternoon contests a short conference business meeting will be held for the purpose of attempting to set a date for the conference track meet this spring.

Margaret Heckel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. P. Heckel, 1212 W. Eighth street, and Arthur Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Smith, 920 E. Eldorado street, are the only Appleton students at Lawrence college who will take part in the Sunset Players presentation of "Who Shot Cock Robin" at the Lawrence Memorial chapel tonight.
