"The committee set the price at 40 cents per invitation, with the understanding that all the seniors would order, as they have in previous years. It is up to the members of our class to do so immediately," Howard Lyman, chairman of the invitation committee, said last night.

ELY PORTRAIT TO BE GIVEN FRIDAY

Painting of Econ Professor Will Be Unveiled in Ag Hall

The unveiling ceremonies of the portrait of Dr. Richard T. Ely, for 32 years professor of economics in the university, will be held in the Agricultural auditorium at 8:15 o'clock Friday instead of in Bascom hall as previously announced.

The celebration is the culmination of several important events in the life of Dr. Ely. Two years ago, he completed his thirtieth year with the university. Last year, at commencement he was awarded the honorary L. L. D. degree by the university and April 13, 1924 marked his seventieth birthday anniversary.

The 1925 Badger is dedicated to Dr. Ely and the portrait that is to be unveiled Friday will be used in full color as the frontispiece.

Frank A. Fetter of Princeton university, the main speaker of the evening, will talk on "The Influence of the Economist in Business and Government."

ADVERTISING CAN HELP LANDSCAPE

—AUST

Well Made Bill-boards Enhance Scenery, Professor Declares

"Whether outdoor advertising is to enhance or detract from the beauty of the nation's landscape depends upon the cooperation the advertising agencies, business men and landscape designers give responsible outdoor advertising organizations," is the contention made by Prof. F. A. Aust, landscape designer at the university, in the latest issue of Printer's Ink.

"Advertising can be part of the natural landscape. Good taste and foresight, planning and cooperation are going to make outdoor advertising more valuable to business by overcoming opposition and prejudice," Professor Aust says.

"Even though one bill board may be good, artistic in itself, the good result it might have is lost because it is crowded among countless others of every description, color and size, and degree of preservation, he declares in describing the advertising which surrounds most cities.

"It is not usually the board which the passer-by is conscious of having forced upon his gaze, that he remembers longest, but the one which he slows down to look at of his own accord that he does not forget. A subtle idea in the picture as a whole fires a very human imagination to find out more; the entire clever design is made so much a part of its setting that he pauses to admire," Professor Aust states.

CANOEING SEASON IS GETTING GOOD START

According to E. M. Niabuhr the canoeing season is opening up fine. The university boat-house accommodates 164 canoes and is practically filled. $10 is charged as yearly rent and can be paid to the bursar. Many students take advantage of the lockers and store their canoes the year round. Mr. Niabuhr has 30 canoes which he rents to students at 40 cents per hour. This year has opened up exceptionally well in spite of the disagreeable weather, according to Mr. Niabuhr, who has been in charge of the canoeing since 1904.

Stout? Slender? Specialist Has Advice on Dress for You

If you are in doubt as to the fitness of a new style for your particular needs, Miss Meloche, clothing specialist in the Home Economics department gives the following hints to solve your troubles:

"Since the tall, slender woman usually appears taller than she is, she should adopt some style that will make her look broader and shorter," Miss Meloche says. "Loose, full draperies, ruffles, flounces, horizontal trimmings suggest breadth, provided they cause the eye to follow around the figure."

Long up and down lines should be avoided, she suggests, and advocates the wearing of full, loose blouses, uneven, hems, draped skirts, and bands at the bottom of the skirt. The tall woman should avoid wearing plaids and figured materials.

"The short slender woman should wear tailored garments with many lines running up and down. The lines may be plaids, bands of em-nata," Beethoven, piano solo by Paul S. Jones.

Ball Team to Play Beloit College This Afternoon

GAME WILL AFFORD
BADGERS A SESSION
OF NEEDED PRACTICECoach Lowman to Use All
Three Pitchers; Team
Shows Improvement

The varsity baseball team will meet the Beloit college team this afternoon at 3:45 o'clock at Camp Randall. The reason for the scheduling of this game is that the men need some real practice before they meet Minnesota and Michigan.

Coach Lowman will use his regular lineup, but all three of the pitchers, Christianson, Johnson and Luther, will be used. Beloit has a first class ball team this year and they rate with most teams in the conference. They have a good pitching staff and are considered to be one of the best minor college teams in the country.

Time Lapse Harmful

The long lapse of time between games has done the Badger team a lot of harm, and with a hard game in the middle of the week they will be in better condition for the regular conference games at the end of the week. The game will give Coach Lowman a chance to correct some of the faults that were brought to light in the Purdue game, notably base running and infield work.

Hitting has shown a decided improvement during the past week.

Three Pitchers Slated

Christianson will work the first three innings of today's game, then Johnson will take up the pitching duties. Luther will finish. Luther showed a world of stuff in the Purdue game and allowed only one hit in the four innings which he worked. With these three men going good, Coach Lowman has nothing to worry about in the way of pitchers.

The probable lineup and batting order for today's game will be as follows:

Ellingson, shortstop.
Dugan, right field.
Aschenbrenner, catcher.
Goss, second base.
Emanuel, center field.
Tangen, third base.
Freuschwanger, first base.
Johnson, Christianson, Luther, pitchers.

TENNIS TEAM OFF
FRIDAY FOR TILTSTo Play Chicago, Iowa, and Minnesota; Moulding and Sah in Doubles

The varsity tennis is in for a busy week-end. The team will leave here Friday morning and engage in three conference matches with various Big Ten schools. Chicago will be met Friday, Iowa Saturday, and Minnesota Monday.

The men who will make the trip have not yet been chosen, Captain Moulding and Sah will compose one doubles combination, and the other two men will from Crane, Manierre, Stebbins, or Groenert.

There will be two doubles teams and the four men will also play in the singles. The men are working hard, and with the present good weather, should be in the best of shape for the three meets.

Little is known of the strength of the Maroons, Hawks, or Gophers, but the men will undoubtedly have to work hard to defeat them. The Gophers are strong, but if the victory over Marquette can be taken as a sign, the Cardinal racquetters should make good.

BURLINGTON—A petition asking the paving of highway 83 from here to the Kenosha county line will be sent to the Racine county board as the result of a resolution passed at a meeting of the Burlington club.

FROSH TRACKSTERS
TO MEET ILLINOIS

For the first time in several years, Wisconsin's freshman track team will meet the first year tracksters of the University of Illinois in a telegraphic meet this afternoon. This is the first of a series of telegraphic meets scheduled for freshmen. They have been working since shortly after the opening of the school year and have rounded into a well balanced group of tracksters. In a recent meet with the varsity, the freshmen showed up well, and won several first places.

Yearling Football
Men Prepare For Scrimmage Today

The football candidates worked out yesterday under coaches Ryan and Traynor. The greater part of the time was spent in passing, charging, and getting in shape for the hard scrimmage that probably will start today. The men have been in too poor condition to scrimmage heretofore, but most of those that have been coming out regularly are in fair condition now.

One day last week Wisconsin's star fullback, Taft, put on a suit and showed some of the newer men a little of the art of punting. Kibo Brum watched the squad work out yesterday and seemed pleased with the shape the men were in. He and coach Traynor settled some of the finer points of work in the line, especially the new type of line interference that is being developed for next fall.

Scrimmage will be the order of the day from now on with a hard workout every night. The tackling last night was fast and snappy. Blood has been tapped several times already this season in scratches and bruises.

Several of the "W" men of last year's team are out for other sports this spring. Teckemeyer and Bentson are rowing on the varsity crew. Fritz Radke is playing first base with the baseball team. Leo Harmon, Bieberstein, and Harris are working out with the track squad.

Fight Gas Tax

Dorsey Askew.

Oklahoma is pondering a question raised by Dorsey Askew of Arkmore. Askew is organizing the aviators of the state to fight the tax of 2½ cents a gallon imposed on gasoline sales by the state legislature to provide funds for the building and upkeep of highways. The argument of Askew and his brother aviators is that the tax is unfair to them since they neither need nor use paved roads.

An interfraternity swimming relay has been announced to take place Thursday and Friday nights in the gym tank, results to be determined on a time basis. Four men will represent each fraternity and each will swim the regulation 40 yards.

At least 10 entries are needed in order to insure the relay meet, according to Hugh Folsom, who with E. A. Banner, is managing the event. Applications must be by Thursday noon, accompanied by a $5 entry fee. The entry fee will go towards purchasing cups which will be awarded to the winning team. Notices in regard to the relay are posted on the bulletin board in the tank room.

FOUR SENIOR WOMEN

EMBLEM FOR SPORTSEsther Bilstad, Margaret Callsen, Maurine Hall, Margaret Henry Honored

Esther Bilstad '24, Margaret Callsen '24, Maurine Hall '24, and Margaret Henry '24 are the four senior women who have been awarded the W. A. A. final emblem according to the announcement of the committee in charge of the awards.

This is given to certain senior members of W. A. A. who have already earned their big "W" on a basis of athletic ability, womanliness, spirit, scholarship and service. The election is made by a special committee composed of four senior women, two junior women, and two of the physical education faculty. Blanche Trilling and Marie Cairns served on the committee this spring.

The list of final emblem wearers is posted on a special bulletin board over the main entrance of Lathrop, where it remains through the entire year, until elections are made next spring.

Formal presentation of the emblems will be made at the W. A. A. annual spring banquet which will be held the first part of June.

This honor has been given to certain senior women for several years as a mark of high ability in athletics and all around service. Last year it was awarded to seven, but unusual circumstances made the number larger than the average which has run from two to four in past years.

OUTING CLUB HOLDS
HOUSE PARTY AT LAKE

Outing club will leave on its annual spring house party Friday afternoon. Three cottages on Devil's lake have been engaged to accommodate the party.

"Any girl whether she is a member of Outing club or not can go on the party," Doris Burdick '25, president, said yesterday. "All ready to go" she said, signing on the Outing club bulletin board at Lathrop hall.

Miss Gall and Miss Kay of the Physical education department will act as chaperons. The party will take an all day tour at the Wisconsin dells Sunday afternoon.

The week end house party is one of the traditions of Outing club having been held every spring since its organization.

Because of the entrance of new teams in each of the industrial baseball leagues, new schedules have been necessitated. These schedules, printed below, will replace those published last week in the Cardinal.

Play in the inter-college league is slated to begin this afternoon at 5:30 o'clock when the engineers clash with the agricultural nine on the lower campus. The five schools of medicine, law, engineering, commerce, and agriculture are represented in this league.

Opening battles in the independent league were played last night when the Y. M. C. A. nine downed the Bernard courts, 6 to 1 on the lower campus, and the Johnson street squad defeated the Levis 5 to 4 on the Camp Randall diamond.

Start Campaign to Stop
R. R. Crossing Accidents

A state-wide educational campaign for the prevention of railroad crossing accidents will be undertaken in Wisconsin in the near future as result of the conference in Chicago last week of utility commission and railroad officials. The campaign will be conducted by the railroad commission and highway commission cooperating.

ROLLIE'S TEAM IS IDLE AFTER STRIKE

All athletic activities at the James Millikin university, Decatur, Ill., were declared off for a month, in connection with the permanent "strike" vote taken today by fourfifths of the students. The Millikin track meet scheduled for next Saturday will liams '23, is athletic director at Millikin.

Hitting the High
Spots With Ken

From Kentucky university comes a letter to "Shorty" Walsted, head cheerleader, asking him with all due respect, what kind of a cheerleader system we use here. Is there anything else that the rest of the universities of the country would like to learn about from us

Under a third degree examination last night, the writer of this column broke down and admitted that it was good.

This is a little friendly advice. Keep away from the pier when the crews are launching their shells. If "dad" Vail catches you he will say some things that burn.

Luke says: Seems that lots of persons got lost last Saturday, else why'd they get in to the track meet at the stadium and then stand on top rows and watch the baseball game?

The shiek of the crew, Mr. Jerry Jax, had his picture taken on the pier the other day, in his crew suit.

Dear Ken: They haven't named the new shell yet. Why not call it the Vail scull.

The golf team had a bad trip this week. Lost to Illinois and Northwestern by big scores. There's a lot in the suggestion that the strange courses accounted for it.

Don Newcombe, assistant crew coach, in his launch, often called derisively a "cheese box" has a lot of trouble keeping up with his freshman crews now.

Ought to see some homers out at Randall this afternoon, with the varsity playing Beloit college.

AN ARTISTIC GIFT

Every now and then some generous alumnus, realizing how the university is pressed on every side for some improvement or other, opens up his pocket book and donates a sum to be spent in some way which he designates or in a way in which the officers who have charge of such gifts feel will be of most service. This year two graduates at their death left liberal scholarship funds. Thus the institution is enabled to expend more than it would be able to if state appropriations were its sole source of income.

Money gifts, however, are not the only ones made to the institution. Several weeks ago Dr. A. J. Ochsner '84, a Chicago physician, gave the university 18 valuable etchings, now on exhibit in the museum on the fourth floor of the library building, etchings which eventually will be placed in the various buildings on the campus. These etchings are the work of some of the greatest artists in the world, of some of the outstanding Austrian and German etchers.

The donor felt that an artistic gift such as his can be of as much value to an institution as mere cold cash. His feeling is well founded, and his gift appreciated, as is indicated by the number of students who have visited the exhibit since it was put up last week.

RECONSTRUCTING THE LIBRARY

Following upon the discussion in The Cardinal for May 1 of some of the deficiencies to be found in the library comes a discussion of how these remedies may be temporarily and permanently executed.

The Division of the Social Studies advises as a temporary measure that the upper floor of the library building in which is now housed the museum should be turned into an "undergraduate reading room, supplied with proper administrative officers and with shelving for duplicate books."

It is needless to point to the fact that the library reading room is inadequate. More room is needed, and the fourth floor could well supply it. What to do with the relics which are now on the fourth floor is a problem. Most institutions of this kind have separate buildings for their museums. Obviously Wisconsin can not have such a building for many years. Every other building on the campus is crowded to the utmost. It would be too bad to have to store the relics of the museum in some place hidden from the sight of man. But this appears to be the only practicable way of providing the needed space. It is unnecessary to say that the reading room space is more important than the museum space. Whether or not the officers in charge of the museum would consent to seeing it relegated to store rooms is a question. But until some permanent enlargement of the library can be brought about, they must if the needed reading room space is to be supplied.

As for permanent improvements, the division recommends that the present building be extended westward by cutting off Park street between State and Langdon streets. Thus an addition similar to the east side of the building could be erected. The new part would be used for undergraduate reading rooms, not on the plan of one large hall, but of a number of separate rooms, each provided with the duplicate books required in some special field. The present library would then be reserved for advanced students and graduates. The system of having one large reading hall is now out of date, and all the institutions which are building libraries plan that small reading rooms for each course should be provided instead of the one large hall. Thus instructors in the various departments can be placed in the respective rooms to supervise the work and provide any necessary help. Such, to a certain extent, is the case at Illinois and Michigan.

In practically every school in the Big Ten special rooms are provided members of the faculty whose work is involved with the use of the library, working rooms which they may use at their discretion for the advancement of their preparation and research. It is therefore planned that part of an addition to the library would furnish such research rooms which are obviously needed here, as the faculty members have no adequate place for carrying on their work in connection with the library.

THE CUSSEDNESS OF CUSSING

If students possessed neither breeding nor culture, belonged to the great unwashed, and had no more sense of propriety and decency than the veriest of common laborers reared in the worst of environments, it would be quite different. But students do possess culture and breeding, though there are moments when one doubts this, and have a good sense of proper conduct, though often underexercised. The individual most easily reaches this conclusion by listening to the conversations that take place on the campus and in the Latin quarter, and noting the superabundance of profanity. Not that an occasional "damn" or "hell" or even worse now and then is unforgivably wrong, for it is not. A blue-tinted word now and then may quite easily be asserted as good for the best of constitutions, and there is nothing so very wrong about it.

But when the names of the Savior and of the Deity are invoked repeatedly in ordinary friendly conversation, something is wrong. When strong oaths and obscene words are used for introductory expletives for sentence after sentence, when every change in interest, attention, surprise, dislike, pleasure, and every other quality of conversation is marked by profanity, surely something is lacking in the way of good conduct. To be sure, the use of profanity is always a matter of individual taste, but even so, that fact does not license the individual to thrust his profanity upon the attention of others, as is too much the case now. There is neither sense nor good taste in the continual use of profanity; it lends neither strength nor character to one's utterances; it marks, rather, a weakness and a slavishness to a silly habit.

Other Editors Say—

THE PLACE OF ATHLETICS.

At a recent sectional meeting of alumni of a Big Three university, a prominent Iowa banker declared that athletics were assuming such an important position in college life that they appeared as a menace to the institution itself. "It is a case of the tail wagging the dog," he asserted.

He cited the fact that institutions were paying football coaches more than they were paying their presidents, and offered convincing evidence in the case of Middle Western as well as Eastern institutions. He pled for putting athletics off the pedestal and putting into the fore as the motive for a college's existence, the actual study and work in studies.

He hailed the passing of interest in oratory, debate, music, literature and the classics as being by-products of an unhealthy growth of the athletic system of American colleges.

Such a challenge to what is generally accepted as a sound institution of American college and university life will undoubtedly startle many. However, regardless of the truth of his claims and assertions, there is no doubt that any college or university will attempt to kill off athletics or to reduce their prominence in the institution.

The error into which this man has fallen is a common one. Athletics in themselves are most beneficial to an institution. The evils of the particular system of athletics might constitute a menace but never the underlying principle. Athletics for a selected few, moved only by the desire to win in competition, constitutes a menace, but a program of athletics to include a large number is undoubtedly one of the most beneficial moves a college or university can make.

It is the direction of more athletics and not fewer athletics, that colleges and universities will move. Intramural competition has already started an unprecedented growth. In that field, athletics can give the institution real service.

We can't think of any good reason why we should write this column today, in view of the fact that the "Plutocaryit" is due to spread itself over the campus this noon, and all of our readers (if we have any) will devote their time to "Seeing themselves as others see them," but still this space must be filled so here it is.

Yes, the "Plutocaryit" will be out Wednesday as announced, although many of us thought that it was OUT for good after its last edition.

Time enough has elapsed, however since the last appearance for the pungent odor of some of the remarks to blow away and the same instinct that killed the pussy will impel most of us to see what revelations this number has in store for us.

After walking up and down the hill a couple of times yesterday, we have arrived at the conclusion that the burning question of the hour is whether the hill should have its grass shingled, boy-bobbed or wear it long, as at present.

Wen there's bats in your belfry that flut,
Wen your "comprencz-vous" cord, it is cut,
Wen there's nobudy home in the top of your dome,
Then your hed's not a head,
It's a nut.

There has been a lot of speculation as to just what the beautiful brilliant red and white creation in Pete Burns' window is for, but it is our opinion that it is there for diver's reasons.

The spring clothes on the campus remind us that a co-ed's arm is not an arm when it is a little bare.

Our roommate insists that "I" is the happiest of the vowels, because it is in "bliss," while the others are either in purgatory or in hell.

They were in a canoe (even as you and I), the air was warm, the stars were bright, it was spring and he was in love (even as you and I). Nothing could be heard save the occasional dip of the paddle into the water. At last the silence was broken by a masculine plea for "just one", but she, being a girl who new her asparagus, said, "No", —not out here, it isn't safe, but paddle to shore and then ask me." and he broke two paddles getting there in his haste (even as you and I).

Speaking of canoeing reminds us that a hungry student in a canoe likes best the kind of wind that blows foul and chops about.

Having acquired for ourselves a new Webster's we feel that we can now go to most of our lectures and have some idea of what the prof is talking about.

Some of the Eeon instructors have magnificent vocabularies, but our Geology pro has them all beat. His latest atrocity is his own original definition of "wind" in which he states that—"Wind is an eternal agitation of the nebular strata whereby air is impelled into transitory activity.

For some reason or other there seems to be a marked scarcity of knickers on the hill lately. The poor engineers stood on their steps for three hours yesterday and didn't get a chance to bellow "fore" once.

The shysters and the plumbers seem to have found one thing on which they agree and the only argument now is as to who can holler "fore" the loudest.

Darn the girl who has lots of pep, With sparkling eyes and a doubtful rep,
And a "come and get me" air beside,
But who rides in taxis—just for the ride.

The Reader's Say-So

WARNS PICKNICKERS.

Editor, The Cardinal:
News item—May 19, 1924. Fire broke out in the underbrush at Eagle Heights last night. It started from a campfire that some careless picknickers had left without putting out. The fire spread all over the Heights and set three cottages on fire. All three cottages were burned to the ground, as nobody was there to save them.

Some day such a thing will happen if picknickers from this university are not more careful in putting out fires. A fire is not out until every spark is out. I found a fire that was not put out Sunday evening. A little wind could have started a fire through the woods and taken some of the cottages near Black Hawk's Cave.

Last year the underbrush on Eagle Heights and the woods near burned. It was just good luck that some of the cottages did not. People wondered why there were so few flowers there last year!

Picknickers, see that your fires are put out to the last spark before leaving them! We don't want the beauty of Eagle Heights spoiled again as it was last year.

Spectators Not Wanted, Barber Informs Co-eds

Bobbed-haired girls who insist upon bringing their friends along for moral support, when they have their hair cut, will be the ruin of the barber, according to J. F. Runkel, proprietor of Runkel's barber shop, 616 State street.

Standing with razor precariously poised over the throat of a prominent customer, he hastened to add that the girls' trade is greatly appreciated, in fact, a large per cent of the shop's earnings come from the bobbed-hair service department.

"However, it is most annoying," Mr. Runkel declared, "to have a girl come in followed by a half dozen of her sorority sisters who do not want any work done, but come merely to watch operations.

"People passing outside see this line of girls, give up all hope of ever being waited on, and go to some other barber shop. In that way we lose a lot of trade, especially on Friday and Saturday," he said.

How and when the obnoxious custom originated remains a mystery. Few co-eds, it seems, have nerve enough to enter this traditionally masculine place alone. The watchful eyes of a school-girl audience seems to be all that is necessary to make one feel at home in the black and silver chairs.

As for the barber himself, all the stacomb in the establishment can't keep him from getting ruffled when a small army of girls invade his mirror-lined institution.

Clearly, something must be done. Either the blushing owners of bobbed hair must conquer their timidity at being in such close proximity to razors and lather and hair tonic; or else the barber must go bankrupt.

It will be interesting to watch results.

Approximately 450 students attended the dance and the affair was on the whole a success, George Fiedler '25, general chairman, said.

Phi Kap House to Border Mendota

Work was started last week on the new Phi Kappa Sigma house on the shore of Lake Mendota at foot of Lake Lawn Place. With the completion of this new house, "Fraternity Row" will present an almost unbroken line along the lake shore from Lake street to Wisconsin avenue.

The house will be built to contain four stories. The first floor will have a living room across the width of the house, dining room, library, guest room, and kitchen.

The basement will have the chapter room and servant's quarters, while the third and fourth floors will be occupied by study rooms and dormitories.

The plans for the house were drawn by Frank Riley, Madison architect, after he had made a careful study of new Eastern fraternity houses. J. H. Findorff and Son are the contractors.

EPIDEMIC SPREAD IS FEARED HERE

Wisconsin May Be Isolated to Keep Out Hoof and Mouth Disease

A state of quarantine, with Wisconsin virtually isolated from the rest of the world, the entry of food and many common articles of commerce forbidden, passenger traffic discouraged, and armed guards patrolling the borders of the state, is in prospect if the epidemic of hoof and mouth disease in California becomes general enough in the country to threaten the state.

This was revealed by V. S. Larson, state veterinarian and director of live stock sanitation, in describing preparations being made to protect Wisconsin herds. He further revealed that his staff, with members stationed throughout the state already has been made ready for mobilization at a few hour's notice to strike at the dread animal disease as soon as it appears.

Issues Quarantine

The first step in the defensive measures has already been taken by Mr. Larson. He has issued a quarantine order, supplementing an order of the federal department of agriculture, excluding all cattle, sheep, and swine, and all dressed carcasses and hides, skins and hoofs which originate in California, as well as hay and straw and similar fodder.

The order was issued Apr. 10 as part of the rearing of a nation-wide wall against the disease, which has thus far been confined to California.

Spread of the disease to Wisconsin would be a state calamity, Mr. Larson said.

"The loss, in case of an epidemic getting a start, would be inestimable," he declared. "There is reason not only to believe that the cattle industry would be crippled, but every branch of commerce would be seriously affected."

"If it were necessary, I should ask the governor to call out the national guard and to order them to enforce the regulations."

That the fear of the spreading of the disease is not unfounded is evidenced in the struggles being waged by states on California's border to enforce quarantine regulations.

News dispatches have told of border battles, of searching of passengers on trains of seizures of stock shipments in the West within the last month.

James I. Coppernoll, proprietor of Cop's cafe, Monday received a letter from his brother, W. L. Coppernoll in Eugene, Ore., describing the work of patrol at the California boundary line. Train passengers are being forced to submit to fumigation, automobiles are being halted on highways and articles of food are rigidly excluded, the letter said.

The staff of the state director of live stock sanitation consists of about 30 men, most of them engaged now in testing for tuberculosis in the northern part of the state.

A number of calls reporting suspected cases have been received at the capitol, but tests have proved them groundless. All alarms are answered at once by agents in automobiles.

"Any animal which is found infected will be slaughtered at once," Mr. Larson said.

"An epidemic would hit Wisconsin, the leading dairy state, the hardest of any. It is estimated that there are 2,100,000 head of cattle in the state, worth more than $200,000,000."

Conservatives in Senate Try For Tax Compromise

WASHINGTON—Senate Republican organization leaders go to work in earnest today in an attempt to line up a majority on a compromise for the Democratic income tax schedule substituted in the revenue bill yesterday for the Mellon rates.

Chairman Smoot of the finance committee, in charge of the bill, declared he would propose compromises on the surtax rates when the measure is brought up for final passage. He will offer a maximum rate of 30 percent, he said, and then if necessary 32 percent.

Final decision rests in the hands of Republican insurgents, who voted with the Democrats yesterday. The Democrats were confident today that their schedule, calling for a maximum surtax rate of 40 percent, would stand against any compromise offer.

The house rates and the senate Democratic plan differ so slightly, advocates of the latter asserted, that a Republican compromise will be difficult.

There is a prospect that the vote on passage of the bill will come by the end of the week. Flushed by their victory, the Democrats were prepared to push their substitutes for the corporation and estate taxes, which they have endorsed in party conference.

They point out that the East Side is a little city in itself, containing a larger number of residents than many surrounding towns and cities, and to adequately care for the needs of the territory a station and depot other than the city terminals are absolutely necessary.

Other matters to be taken up at the meeting are the building of an engine house on the East Side and the setting of a date for the annual picnic.
