New Members of the Faculty

D. H. OTIS

Daniel Henry Otis, M. S.

ASSISTANT TO THE DEAN OF THE COLLEGE OF AGRICULTURE, AND ASSISTANT PROFESSOR OF ANIMAL NUTRITION.

DANIEL HENRY OTIS was born and raised on a dairy farm in Shawnee County, Kansas. He graduated from the Kansas State Agricultural College in 1892, a few months later became Assistant in Agriculture at the same institution, and in 1898 received the degree of Master of Science. In July 1900 he was promoted to Assistant Professorship of Dairying and Farmer's Institutes. In 1902 he was elected to the chair of Animal Husbandry, but resigned in August, 1903, to become Manager of the Deming Ranch in southeastern Kansas.

Professor Otis was for four years dairy editor of the Kansas Farmer. He is the author of many books and pamphlets on the subject of Dairying, and has also written extensively for the agriculture press.

Prof. Murray C. Beebe, B. S.

PROFESSOR OF ELECTRICAL ENGINEERING.

MMURRAY C. BEEBE was born in Racine, Wis. He graduated from the Electrical Engineering course at the University of Wisconsin in 1897, and remained until 1900 as instructor in Electrical Engineering. He then accepted the position of Experimental Engineer with George Westinghouse, and later became chemist for the Nernst Lamp Company at Pittsburg. Professor Beebe left the Nernst Lamp Company in 1904 to become a member of the firm of Beebe & Bennett, Contracting and Consulting Engineers, of Pittsburg. In 1905 he accepted the Associate Professorship of Electrical Engineering at Wisconsin.

Professor Beebe is actively identified with many branches of engineering. He is an Associate member of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers and the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, a member of the American Chemical Society, the American Electro-Chemical Society, the Illuminating Engineering Society, and the Society of Chemical Industry.

Professor Beebe is a member of the Chi Psi Fraternity.

Edward Charles Elliott, Ph. D.

ASSOCIATE PROFESSOR OF EDUCATION.

EDWARD CHARLES ELLIOTT was born in Chicago. His A. B. and M. A. degrees were taken at the University of Nebraska in 1895 and 1897 respectively. He then attended Columbia, receiving his Ph. D. there in 1905. Professor Elliot is a member of the Phi Kappa Psi Fraternity.

E. C. ELLIOTT

Evander B. McGilvary, Ph. D.

PROFESSOR OF PHILOSOPHY.

EVANDER B. MCGILVARY was born at Bangkok, Siam, in 1864 and received his grammar school education at Fayetteville, N. C. He later attended Bingham Military Academy at Mebane, N. C. and in 1884 he received the degree of A. B. from the North Carolina College of Davidson. After teaching the classics for two years in the Bingham Military School, he entered Princeton in 1886, receiving his A. M. degree there in 1888. In 1891 Professor McGilvary went to Siam, where he did translating into the Siamese language. He returned in 1894, and taught logic in the University of California. He stayed here for two years. From this institution he received his Ph. D. degree in 1897, and was made Professor of Logic and Theory of Knowledge. In 1899 he was made Sage Professor of Moral Philosophy at Cornell and in 1905 was appointed Professor of Philosophy at the University of Wisconsin.

H. A. SMITH

Hugh Allison Smith, M. A.

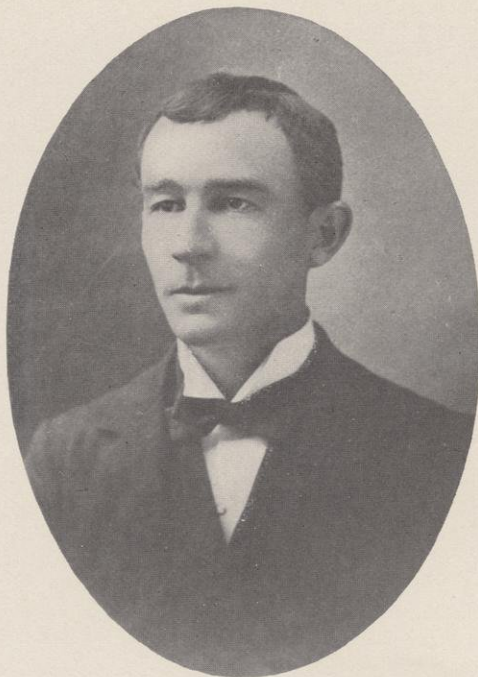

PROFESSOR OF ROMANCE LANGUAGES.

HUGH A. SMITH was born in Missouri, Henry County, 1873. In 1897 he received his A. B. degree and in the following year his M. A. degree. He was instructor in the Romance department in his state university during 1898. From 1899 to 1901 he was assistant professor of modern languages at Colorado College. The following year, 1901, Professor Smith studied at the University of Paris, later returning to Colorado College as professor of French. In 1904-05 he studied at Harvard. Professor Smith is author of various articles in the field of modern languages.

George Depue Hadzsits, Ph. D.

ACTING ASSISTANT PROFESSOR OF LATIN.

GEORGE DEPUE HADZSITS, who was born in Detroit, Michigan, received his A. B. degree at the University of Michigan, in the year 1898. Four years later he took his Ph. D. degree also at Michigan. He supplemented his study of the Latin language by two years travel abroad spent in Rome and Athens. Before taking up his work at Wisconsin, he was assistant professor of Greek and Latin at the University of Cincinnati. Professor Hadzsits, who is a member of the Sigma Phi fraternity, is the author of numerous articles on classical history; one of his works "Ethics of Plutarch" is now being published.

S. J. HOLMES

Samuel J. Holmes, Ph. D.

ASSISTANT PROFESSOR OF ZOOLOGY.

SAMUEL J. HOLMES received the degree of B. S. at the University of California in 1893 and in 1894 that of M. S. From 1893 to 1895 he was assistant in biology at this University. In 1897 he obtained the degree of Ph. D. at Chicago University where he had held a fellowship in Zoology. The following two years were spent in California. In 1899 he held a position in the State Normal School at Stevens Point, Wis. Professor Holmes came to Wisconsin in 1905 from the University of Michigan where he had been for five years, in the Zoological Department.

Rollo Lu Verne Lyman, A. B.

ASSISTANT PROFESSOR OF RHETORIC AND ORATORY.

ROLLO LU VERNE LYMAN received the degree of A. B. at Beloit College in 1899, continuing his work from 1902 to 1904 as a graduate student at Harvard University. While at Harvard, Mr. Lyman was also a special student at the Emerson School of Oratory in Boston.

From 1900 to 1902 he was Assistant Professor of speaking in Pacific College at Forest Grove, Oregon. He was instructor in English at Harvard 1903-1904, occupying this position until his call to Wisconsin.

Mr. Lyman won the Inter-State Oratorical Contest in 1899; in 1897 he was on the Beloit-Knox debate, and in 1903 he participated in the Yale-Harvard debate.

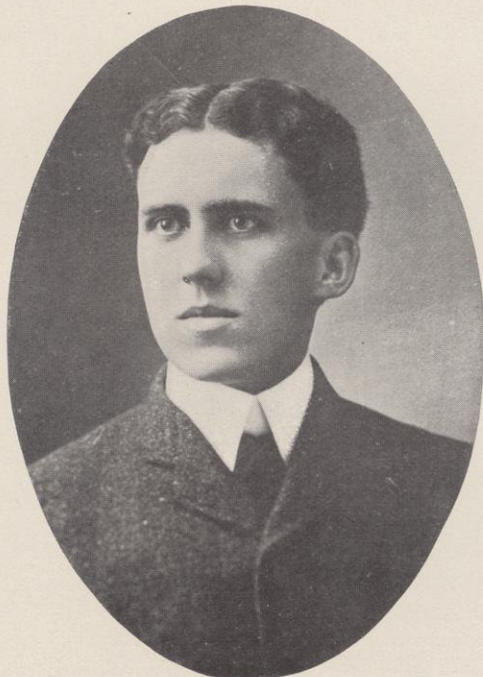

Mr. Lyman was born in 1879 at Windsor, Wisconsin. Both his parents were graduates of the University of Wisconsin, Rev. W. A. Lyman '73, and Henrietta Crane Lyman, '74. Mr. Lyman is a member of the Sigma Chi fraternity and of Phi Alpha Tau.

Allyn Abbot Young, Ph. D.

ASSISTANT PROFESSOR OF POLITICAL ECONOMY.

ALLYN ABBOTT YOUNG was born Sept. 19, 1876 at Canton, Ohio. His early education was secured in the public and private schools of Sioux Falls, S. D. In 1894 he received the degree of Ph. B. from Hiram College in Ohio. For four years Professor Young was engaged in business and journalism; then in 1898 he took up graduate work at the University of Wisconsin, where he was instructor in Economics for the year 1901-1902. In 1902 he took the degree of Ph. D. from the same institution. For the next two years he was at the head of the department of Economics in Western Reserve University, at Cleveland Ohio. In 1904 he was made assistant professor of finance at Dartmouth College, and in 1905 was appointed assistant professor of Economics at the University of Wisconsin.

The publications of Professor Young have been mainly along the line of statistics, including a discussion of age statistics published by the Federal Census of 1900.

Professor D. B. Frankenburger

O, the pangs it costs to forward the birth
Of expanding life, on the planes of earth;
Our heart strings break, and our eyes shed tears,
As we yield to the march of the passing years.
Does the oak feel bad as the swelling tree
Forces off the bark we were used to see?
Does the fruit tree sigh when the blossoms fall
Though the fruit comprehends blossom, beauty and all?
Does the butterfly weep o'er its outgrown cocoon
As it mounts toward the sky in the sunny June?
Wiser than mortals all nature sings
When the larger life has taken wings
And the outgrown limits are left behind,
No more to fetter, to burden, or bind—
Our tabernacles we may not build
To tarry in, ere our task be fulfilled,
But onward ever toward larger seeing,
And upward ever toward broader being
Leaving nothing behind but an outward sense
Of the works and the ways of Omnipotence;
Taking nothing away that ever was ours,
Of awakening life or developed powers.
The love and the truth and the sweetness we prized
Is the Infinite thought individualized.
If love has been brought to a hungry heart,
Love used its idea this grace to impart,
If courage and hope have been multiplied
In the lives of men, love is satisfied.
If a sweetening touch has been felt by us all
Let us cherish that touch be it ever so small.
Let us use it and spend it, yet keep it our own,
Till our immature harshness has all been outgrown
The ONE life unfolding, our lives we would lay
On the altar of progress, and welcome the day—
Then hasten, the east is aflame with the dawn,
It beckons us all to press upward and on.

DAVID BOWER FRANKENBURGER

David Bower Frankenburger

*"Gentleness, Virtue, Wisdom, and Endurance,
These are the seals of that most firm assurance
Which bars the pit over Destruction's strength."*

It is peculiarly true of Professor Frankenburger that the public events and memorials of his career very inadequately represent the achievements of his life. These are to be found only by the searcher of hearts, in the lives of those who knew him; invisible records, but, we trust, perennial also. There was that about him which inspired, in a supreme degree, confidence and love,—a frankness, a bright openness of soul, a faith, such as warmed the spirit into life and begot, in a remarkable proportion of those whom he instructed, a loyalty and affection which it is not too much to call passionate. They gave themselves to him because he gave himself unstintedly to them. To lead out the awkward into grace, the discordant into harmony, and the bashful into enthusiasm, these were his chief delights. And if to stir character and fill it with high enterprize be a great part of a teacher's duty, then was he one of our great teachers. It is, therefore, with more than ordinary tenderness and reverence that we record the events of his life.

David Bower Frankenburger was born October 13th, 1845, at Edinburg, Pennsylvania, a little town about five miles from the Ohio line and some forty miles north of the Ohio river. A great grandfather of the same name had come to America from North Germany about 1760 and was a soldier in the war for independence. Alliances had been made with families of French, Irish, Scotch and English ancestry, and one who is fond of tracing hereditary characteristics could find a happy blending of racial and national traits in the developed man whom we knew. Not to push the analysis too far, it might be safe to attribute to this mixture of ancestry the fine combination of sturdiness and sincerity, on the one hand, with graciousness and pliability, on the other.

When the boy was ten years of age the family came to Wisconsin, and took up a farm in Green County. His early years were spent in severe hand labor on the farm, except for some months each year at the district school, months which we may be sure were eagerly improved, for soon the young farmer found a way to attend, for a few terms, the little country academy at Milton, now Milton College. At the age of twenty-one, he entered the University and graduated, with the degree of Ph. B., in 1869. That year the Law School was established and, while supporting himself by instructing in the University, he succeeded in completing the work of the law course in the next two years and received the law degree in 1871.

During the years 1871—78 he practised law at Milwaukee, but though he was successful in this profession, his literary tastes seem to have predominated over his technical interests. He maintained a warm interest in the poets and in nature, and wrote a limited amount of verse on his own account, much of which shows the influence of Emerson, with whose philosophy he was deeply imbued. In those simple days, a literary program furnished a part of the "excitement" of Alumni Day, and "D. B. Frankenburger, Esq., of Milwaukee," was several times the poet of the occasion. Perhaps the most admired of these productions was the poem, entitled, "Our Welcome Home." It is full of fine idealism, not untouched by humor. Even then it was possible, it seems, to appeal to the simpler modes of the days gone by, for we hear of an earlier, and pastoral, time,

"When Chancellor Barnard reigned supreme
And pastured his cow on the college green."

The transcendentalism of the poem appears to advantage in the following lines:—

“The old stone sill is worn away
By the constant tread, day after day,
Of a thousand feet that have danced along
To the rhythmic measure of hope and song.”

“There is nothing dead in this world of ours;
The rock has life as well as the flowers;
The atoms are prisoned, but living still,
Are waiting the call of a forming will;
And the humble place they hold this hour,
Shall be changed in the next to one of power.
Unlocked by the tread of our hasty feet,
In the bloom of flower and fruit shall meet,
For back of rock, and bird, and tree,
Throbs the same great heart of Deity,
Delights the God of the universe,
His ancient miracles to rehearse,
And the atom marches in time and sings,
As it did in the Genesis of things.”

To him the University is sacred as the home of aspiration, of beauty and truth and free thought, and progress; the parent of men, through her, an ever higher race of the sons and daughters of the state shall thrive and grow, until

“As the generations pass along
Tutored in beauty and bred in song
In some glad time, some primal morn,
A new man Adam shall be born
Who shall see quite through the frame of things.”

It is not strange, then, that when he was recalled to his Alma Mater in 1878, to take the chair of Rhetoric and Oratory, he came with unbounded enthusiasm and hope, and bade farewell without regret to “the dusty purlieu of the law.” In preparation for the new career, he took courses at the Emerson School of Oratory in 1879, but acknowledged particular gratitude to the instruction of Wizeman Marschall, an excellent actor in the old style, with whom he studied privately in 1880 and again in 1882. In the latter year he received the degree of M. A. from the University. He had been married in 1880 to Mary S. Stover of Madison.

If, as has been said, Professor Frankenburger came to the University with the expectation that he would have a more prosperous environment for the pursuit of a literary career, he was grievously misled. He found awaiting him opportunities for unremitting toil and selfsacrifice, unlimited ministry to the wants of others. Practically all of his literary work henceforth had its genesis in his devotion to some cause or person; various articles on the University, one of these published in “The New England Magazine,” and three editions of the Alumni Catalogue, were labors of love; so, too, was the edition of Professor William F. Allen’s “Monographs and Essays,” of which he was joint-editor and for which he did most of the work, including the writing of the “Memoir.” His community interests were broad; he was an active member of the Unitarian Church, was one of the founders of “The Town and Gown Club” and one of the oldest members of “The Madison Literary Club.” Before the latter club he read the following papers:—

Sources of Chaucer’s Stories, 1879; The life and works of Sir John Suckling, 1881; The order of composition and the sources of Shakespeare’s plays, 1882; Great Shakespearian actors, 1884; Shakespearian actors, 1885; The Stage, 1888; Walt. Whitman, 1890; Edmund Burke, 1896; Dickens, 1900; Dr. Hobbins, at the Anniversary banquet, 1903; The Society for Psychical Research, 1905.

But immeasurably the greatest portion of his time and energy was given to the work of his department, particularly to individual students. Although as the University grew in numbers, he was given more assistants, no one could take the place of "Frankie," and so he was always in requisition. He was the patron of the debating societies, advised on the selection of teams, criticised the choice and statement of questions, coached the participants in "Blow-outs," "Semipublics," "Joins," and "Intercollegiates;" assisted in the securing and cancellation of judges, and presided at meetings; besides all this he read and criticised orations and coached for the various contests and for Commencement, rehearsed dramatic clubs, collected money for prizes in debate, oratory and dramatics, censored "The Badger" and the Class Day Program, and was the court of last resort in a score of matters, answered a thousand queries, settled a thousand differences. As time went on, the multiplication of these industries forced him, from the mere physical limitations of time and human energy, to give over the younger students and less important organizations and contests to others; but to some body of students he gave himself always, year after year, literally body and soul.

And all this he did, not patiently merely, or only cheerfully, but buoyantly. He was always accessible; the rawest lad from the farm might come to him; and though he came awkward and ashamed, he left fired and uplifted, conscious of unsuspected powers in himself, and kindness in the world. "Those of us who in our plastic years came under his influence will never forget that rare questioning smile, that challenge and invitation to the best and highest lying like the seed within our souls. He had the attitude of expectancy, the provocative sympathy which like God's sunshine drew forth the bud and blossom of our best endeavor."

I remember that one of the old Badgers quoted a series of pet expressions, in satire of the respective mannerisms of certain professors "on the hill". Professor Frankenburger was depicted with his glasses poised tentatively between thumb and forefinger, while he beamed benignantly down over glasses and desk, toward some hypothetical student, to whom he was saying, "I can see how that might be". This was well done. The artist had caught an essential characteristic of the man, that "sweet reasonableness," that tolerance of the thought and views of others. He paused, he waited, he took infinite pains, lest in the chaff of the student's reply there might be lurking some grain of truth, precious to him, which ought not to be winnowed too ruthlessly away.

But he who was so tolerant toward others made, and permitted, the most pitiless demands upon himself. The work to which he so generously gave himself, the rehearsal of individuals in vocal expression, is a most exhausting drain upon the teacher. Of incalculable value to the student, it is appallingly costly to the teacher, in both time and vital force. Those of us who could but see, during the last years, that the strain was beginning to tell upon that glorious stock of vitality, it often seemed like a heart-breaking waste. But

"High Heaven rejects the lore, of nicely calculated less and more."

It is useless to speak of discretion to those who are made of the stuff of devotion. Professor Jones did not exaggerate when he said:—"No soldier under any flag, or missionary, ever served his cause or mission more devoutly than Professor Frankenburger served his mission for over a quarter of a century at this University."

One reward of this devotion is a unique position in the hearts of the alumni of the University. No member of the faculty was so universally and tenderly loved and so gratefully revered as "Frankie." "Dear Old Frankie;" has been on hundreds of trembling lips these past months. No one knew him who did not owe him something—some gracious debt, some gift of the heart most royally bestowed, some bright or conciliating thought, some purpose touched to a clearer issue, thrilled with a purer joy. May the memory of his sweet and helpful life be a golden heritage to our Alma Mater. In the day when she ceases to cherish his Christian chivalry may we too be disinherited.

J. F. A. P.

My Friend and Teacher

(On death of Professor D. B. Frankenburger)

The sweet, white silence given of God
To those He loveth best,
Lies on thy closed lips tenderly
And bathes thy heart with rest.

Kindly and helpful; such thou wert;
Holding thy torch where all
Might light their tapers, as they passed
To answer Life's stern call.

'Tis not for us to know the heights
Such souls as thine ascend,
Who, working in the ways of earth
Hail each co-laborer friend;

Until God's door shall open wide
And we, likewise, pass through
To that fair country where abide
The Beautiful and True.

MARY GRANT O'SHERIDAN.

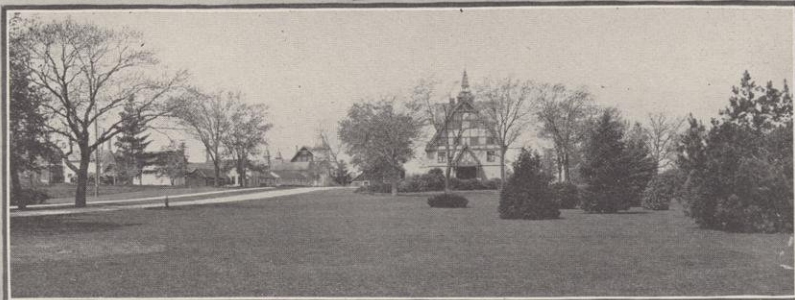

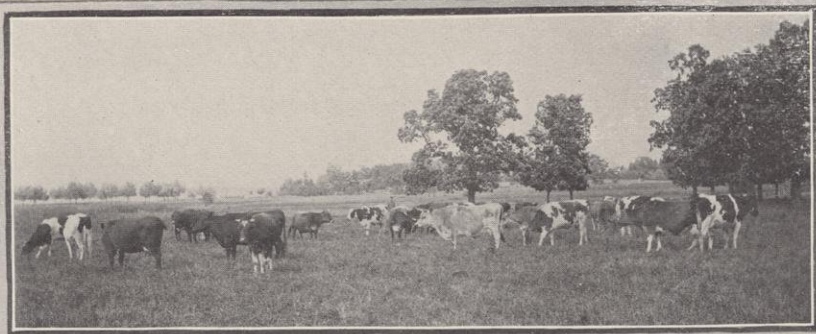

State Journal, February 8, 1906.

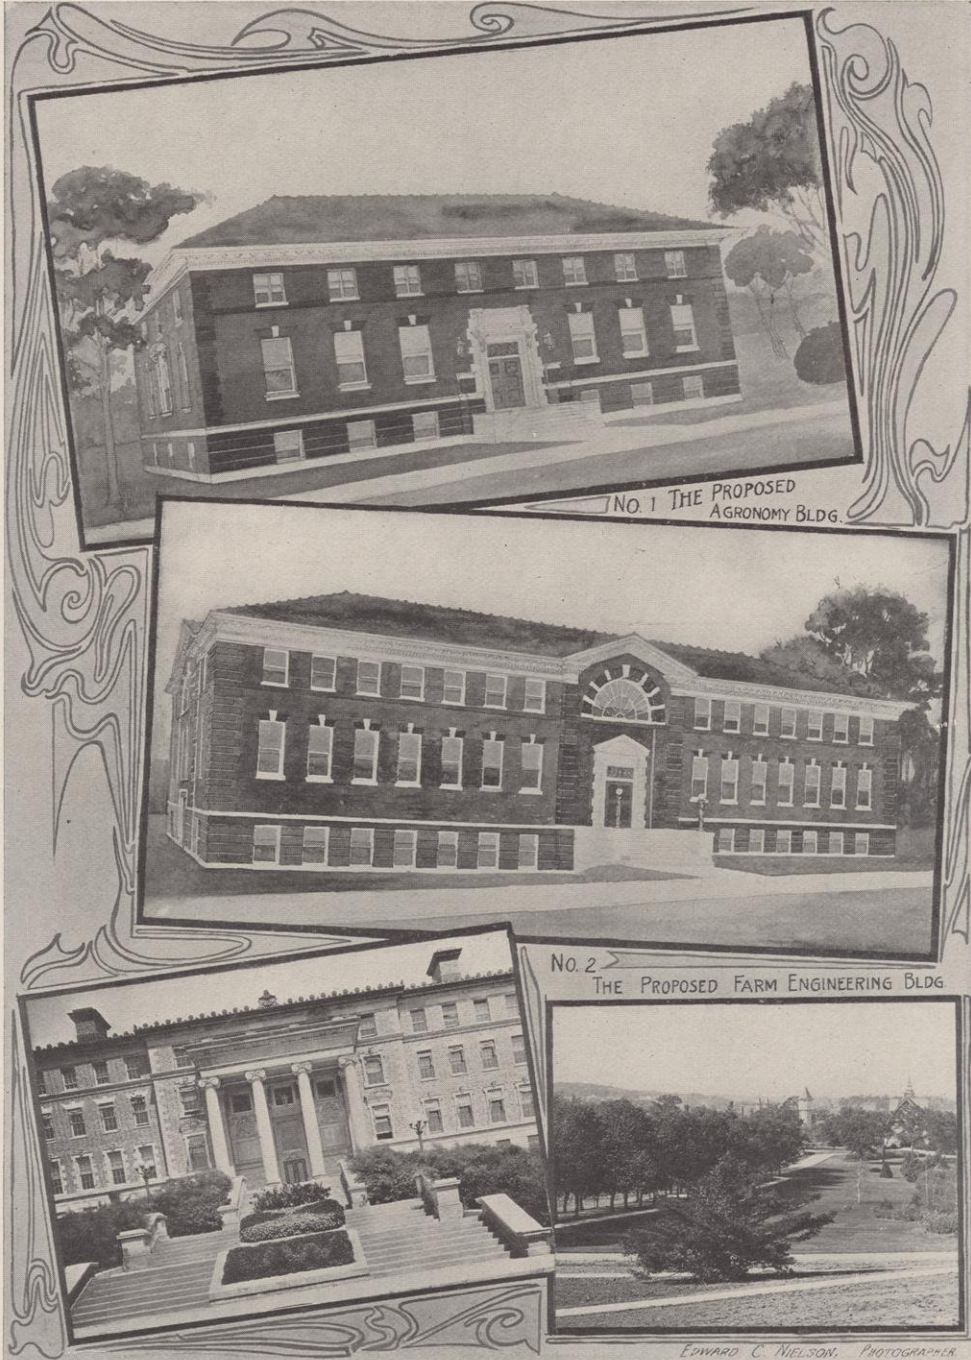

Large-hearted, strong, benign,
He looked on every student as a son
Nor set himself above us, but was one
Among us: freely yours and freely mine.

The mighty Shakespeare whom he loved had laid
His seal upon that furrowed actor face,—
The imprint of a world-enfolding span
Of wisdom, gentleness, and homely grace.
In singleness of heart, nor e'er dismayed,
He trod the earth: an upright fearless man.

“How They Did Things in Wisconsin in the Olden Days.”

BY R. W. HUBBELL '58.

“Reprinted from the Wisconsin Alumni Magazine for February, 1906.”

There came to the University in these days one James D. of a poetic turn of mind who imagined he resembled Lord Byron, because he had dark, short, curly hair. Shades of Amnesty! He looked about as much like Lord B as an infatuated bootjack. He procured him a mongrel dog to keep up the resemblance. The last I saw of this dog he stood near my room there one cold, winter's night at the south-east corner of the old building “baying deep-mouthed welcome” to the moon. A charge of quail shot in the propellor end of his fabric caused him to go off like a shooting-dogstar, leaving a long red trail behind him on the snow. Excuse this digression. It came to pass that we heard that Jim was invited to deliver a lecture at a country schoolhouse about three miles out but was so fearful the boys would hear of it and attend that he was afraid to accept. So we appointed George W. Stoner to work the matter up and by flattery to get him to go and let us know the date. George did it—the “immortal George”—the great University ornithologist, —the purveyor of turkeys and chickens for the midnight feast—the hero of “4th lake” and “the little brown jug”—the only lecturer on the festive “angle-worm” during which in the Assembly Chamber he gave an imitation of Madison's gigantic bird,—the shanghai rooster's morning anthem, so graphic and sonorous that many rustic solons who had retired early woke up and thought it was the dawn of creation. Another digression, but it is hard to keep on the track. Well, when the eventful night came Wakely, Booth, Hayden Smith, Wm. Pitt Dewey and a whole lot of us followed Jim and Stoner out there and when the performance was just about to begin we entered to the immense astonishment of the orator and his rural friends.

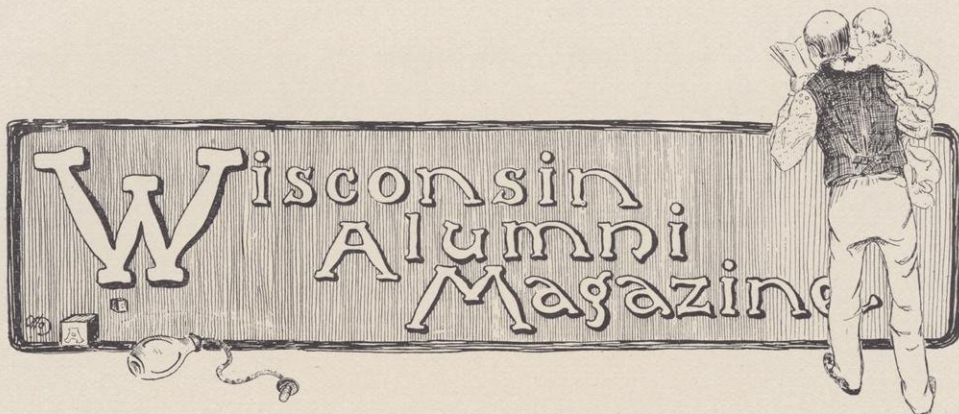

The orator stood behind a table with a tallow candle stuck thereon, being the only light in the room. I think his subject was “Eloquence”—at all events he got excited and warmed up on Henry Clay—exclaiming that on Clay's first debating night he could not say a word except that “it is in me and it must come out!” and that then Clay “burst forth like a torrent” and sweeping his arm around, James sent the tallow candle to the floor leaving his audience in total darkness.

There was no pandemonium. Wakely, or some one, struck a match and relit the candle and the orator went on to a finish.

When he got through, various students were called on for remarks. I can not remember now—I think Dan Tenney had something to say. I think Wakely, when called on stated that he desired to refute the aspersion on his intimate friend Henry Clay, stated, that it was his privilege often to dine and sleep with Kentucky's famous statesman and he never heard of his having “burst” on any occasion. That if he had he would have known it. That if the great statesman was ever “busted” at all it was when he, Wakely, had had the honor of lending him five dollars, etc.

Wm. Pitt Dewey being called on arose shaking with indignation. He stated that he denied the allegation and spurned the alligator who had basely asserted that the orator of the evening looked like Byron's ugly cur. It was a calumny on the whole university. (No one had said James did.)

More remarks were made—but I can't recall them. After something like a war dance the boys rode home. The writer of this wrote it all out in the doggerel and read it in the Chapel for the edification of the Faculty and his hearers.

Closing Chorus

Air: "Give my Regards to Broadway"
We're going to leave Wisconsin
Our college days will soon be o'er.
And when we're far from here we're sure to wish
That we were back once more.
We'll whisper of how we're yearning
To mingle with the old time throng.
So now give three cheers for the Engineers
Who soon will have to say, "So long."

Air: "If I were the man in the moon"
If he were the man in the moon
He'd can all the boys pretty soon.
He would surely take delight
Watching things go on at night,
If he were the man in the moon.

Words by L. B. McCoy

Air: "My Illinois"
The Engineers, the Engineers,
The Pride of all the golden west,
We'll hate to leave, of course we'll grieve,
For here are all the things we love best.
Ring loud the cheers for the Engineers,
I hear your voices loudly call
There are Laws and Hillmen too,
But there's none so good and true
As our own, our Engineers.

WISCONSIN-CHICAGO GAME
Madison, October 21, 1905

WISCONSIN-MICHIGAN GAME
Ann Arbor, November 18, 1905

FOOT BALL SQUAD, 1905

Review of the Football Season of 1905

The season of 1905 began under favorable auspices. The new material was of unusual quality; five of the old men had come back for their fourth year with the team; Phil King, the coach whose teams had made Wisconsin famous in former years, had returned to help us win back our lost prestige; in Holt he had an able assistant; in Kraenzlein an acknowledged expert in training. But more important and of greater significance than the excellent material, able coaching and careful management with the unparalleled revival of football spirit which, in a season otherwise the most striking in our history, gave it its distinguishing characteristic.

Though we did not win the championship, the record of last fall seems, to us, most encouraging. Before breaking camp at Marinette where the preliminary work was done, the team defeated Company I of that city by a score of 16 to 0, in a loosely played game. A week later Northwestern college of Naperville lost to us, 56 to 0. The Notre Dame game was played in Milwaukee as it was expected to furnish a close and exciting match; Wisconsin had improved more than the critics realized and won, 21 to 0, in a game marred by fumbling and careless play. Interest in the team and confidence in its prospects of victory were increasing rapidly. In the two weeks which intervened before the Chicago game, the student supporters of the team appeared nightly at the side-lines without regard to the weather encouraging the team by their presence as well as with the good old U! Rah! Rah Wisconsin!

The Chicago game is history; we lost by a single goal from the field. The defeat was an honorable one and we believe that it is pretty generally conceded that we equalled our rivals on "straight football" and would not have lost but for the successful effort of the redoubtable Mr. Eckersall.

A game was taken from the weak Beloit team, 49 to 0, with a lot of substitutes in the line-up. Later Lawrence was beaten 33 to 0; a game was won from the all-star Alumni aggregation; the strong Marquette team was beaten 29 to 0.

On November fourth came the great game which we like to remember. There were five of us who had never played on the winning side in a great intercollegiate contest before the Minnesota game. Minnesota was strong; the game was at Minneapolis and it was the only one that institution had scheduled with a possible winner of the Western championship. It was a great game and in spite of some costly accidents, we won it, 16 to 12.

Two weeks later came the last game of the season. The men who went to Michigan were determined to win; they were enthusiastically backed by the student body; we all thought they would win. I watched the game from the side-lines kept out by an arm broken in the last week of practice. Never have I been prouder of the team. Michigan won for the fourth successive time, 12 to 0.

This was the last year of college football for Bertke, Bush, Findlay, Brindley, Remp and myself; the only great winning contest in which any of us have played was the Minnesota game. We didn't come much nearer the championship last year than we did in the three disastrous years which preceded. But we are all satisfied when we look back on the season of 1905 and remember, not the efficient work of King and Holt, and the sportsman-like spirit of their coaching, not the game at Minneapolis but the days when the crowd marched out to practice through the mud and rain with the band at the head of the column and singing the song that the Wisconsin man hears in his dreams, the one that begins: "Cheer, Boys, Cheer, Wisconsin's got the ball."

E. J. VANDERBOOM, Captain.

Meeting the Team After the Minnesota Game

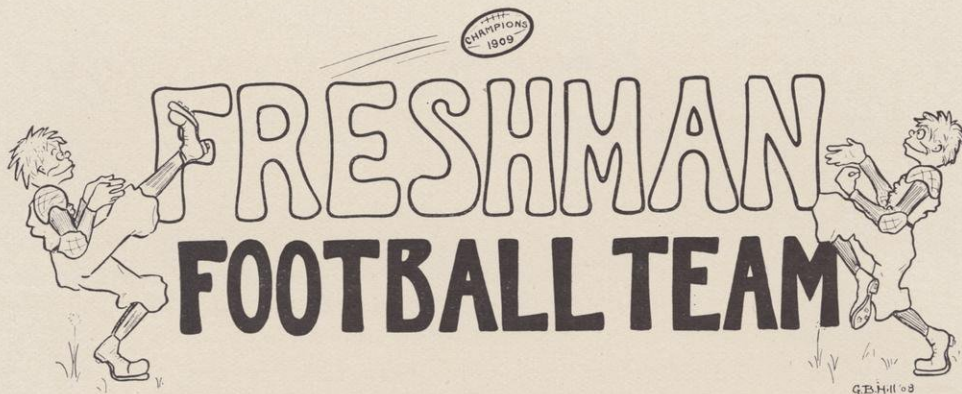

Review of the Season of 1905, of the Freshman Team

Scarcely less gratifying than the return of the Varsity to its own this year, were the clean-cut victories of Wisconsin's freshman team, in bringing, as it did, the freshman championship to Madison for the second time in three years. Credit for the showing is due chiefly to two factors: efficient coaching and fine spirit on the part of the men. Earl Driver, '03 L, did excellent work with material that probably was not of as good average quality, physically, as that of either Minnesota or Chicago, and the youngsters backed him up loyally, working against the many handicaps of conflicting class schedules, required physical drill, the absence of a proper practice field, and others scarcely less troublesome. It is especially to Coach Driver's credit that he insisted, at all times, on the men giving their first attention to their regular college work, notwithstanding that as a result he never was able to get the same thirty men out in suits on two consecutive afternoons. That he succeeded, under the circumstances, in developing a first class attack and a defense which was really quite creditable for a freshman team, indicates both ability in the coach, and a spirit in the men that make winners every time. Not only the class of 1909 but the entire University may be, and is, pleased to say to this team, "Good work, freshmen!

Some phases of the freshman situation have been interesting. One was the almost complete lack of class spirit. Even late in the season, when the team was making a great showing, there was not the slightest evidence of interest in the eleven by the first year class, as being their particular organization—a fact worthy of note by those who believe that general interest in sports can be promoted by making more of class contests. The team was watched closely for evidence of Varsity material for 1906 and the majority showed varsity quality in everything but weight. With another year's added growth several will weigh 190, but there was not a 200 pound man in the squad.

All in all, the season was an eminently successful one, and the men of 1909 showed themselves thoroughly able to wear the Varsity Cardinal with credit, at least next year. To Coach Driver who, by the way, was not only coach but trainer, goes the honor of developing this team and starting the men toward the varsity eleven not only well grounded in foot ball, but with the right idea of the relations of foot ball and college work.

Review of the Crewing Season of 1905

The crewing season of 1905 was one of contradictions and disappointing circumstances and outcome. We had an excellent lot of material and an urgent hard working lot of men they were. They were better, it seemed to us, than anything we had ever turned out before. In fact a trial on our waters showed them superior to any other Wisconsin crew. This is what every one not closely associated with the condition of affairs thought. In fact to a certain degree these views were held by every one except possibly our coach. Even the men and the management thought our chances were as good if not better than ever before.

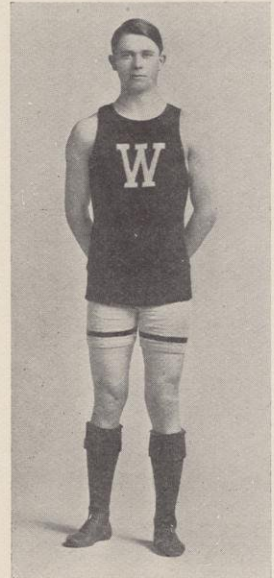

But the coach saw things differently. He watched the weather conditions eagerly. When he was unable to take his crew out day after day—two and three times a week on an average—because Mendota was too rough, and when he realized that at the Eastern Institutions they were rowing their ten and fifteen miles a day, he felt somewhat put out we imagine. But he too took courage when our men tried out on our water some seconds less than any other Wisconsin crew had ever done. He saw no reason then why our fellows could not come out on top, and so in spite of the fact that the coach was not able to train the fellows from a launch, as ours had given out absolutely two weeks before we left, we went east to try our mettle against that of the Eastern Colleges.

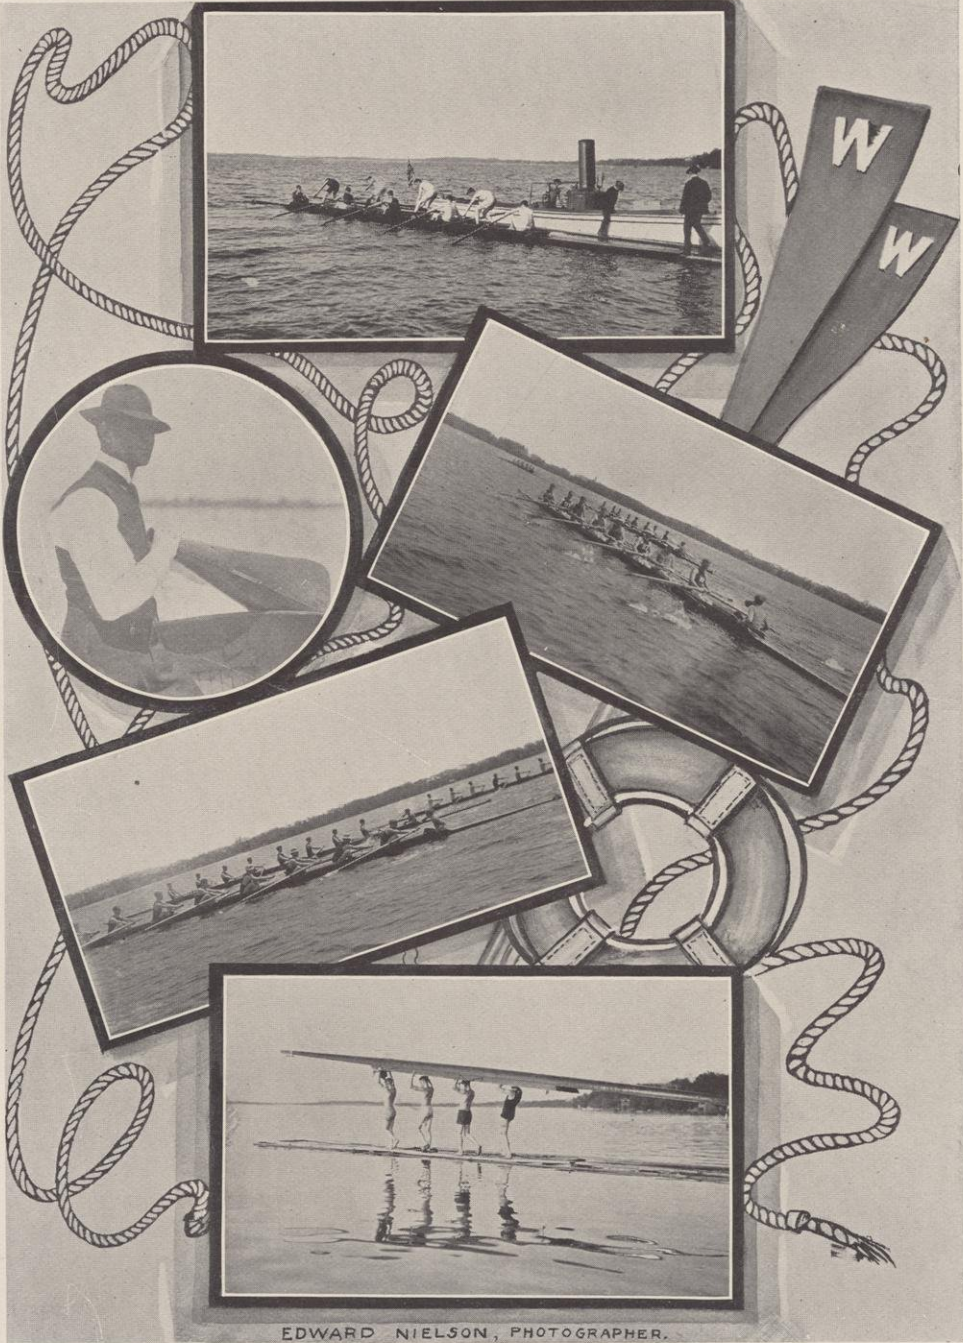

We arrived at Poughkeepsie to find that Cornell had arrived a week before; Syracuse three or four days before; all of them materially in advance of us. Was it the irony of fate that should cause the weather to change and storm so for the first few days we were there before the race so that we could get on the water for practice only a couple of days? Was it the irony of fate that gave four of the fellows a bad case of throat trouble which was supposed so well the day of the race that he went into it but nearly choked the last half of the contest and was thus materially hampered?

This is not meant as a hard luck story merely a recital of facts so that things will not be misjudged by anyone.

The spirit with which the fellows came out of that race and the spirit with which they are now entering into preparation for the next race in spite of our athletic upheaval and disappointment is indeed good to behold. It is merely another demonstration of the sterling qualities of a Wisconsin University bred man, and especially significant of our Crew Department, and the good it works in our men.

Review of the Baseball Season of 1905

The base ball season of 1905 opened with Coach Pierce in charge. About 55 men responded to the call for candidates and the chances for a championship team never looked brighter.

The entire squad of 1904 were again in their old positions when outdoor practice began and many new men were pushing the old men for their jobs. The first piece of hard luck came to team when "Big" Perry, the best clouter in the team, decided to leave college, and this was quickly followed by "Cy" Young, the best college pitcher that ever wore a spike, having the hard luck to lose his arm. The team lined up against Michigan with the old outfield and two new men doing the work around the second bag. Bond Whitman was guarding the first sack, Brush was eating them up around third base, Cummings was on the slab, and Captain Leahy was doing the grabbing and making the runners stay on first base.

The team lost most of their games by one run, and could we have had better weather for our out door work in which to help our batting, we would have been all to the good, fighting it out with Michigan for the banner. The team was conceded to be the best fielding team in the college league and when they struck their batting gait they made it warm for any of them.

Cummins, the Freshman pitcher, was a phenom in all his work and was a handy man with the stick. Too much credit cannot be given to Cummins as he was a glutton for work and fielded his position well. The outfield was exceptionally fast in fielding and the plume must go to Slim Lewis as being the fastest fielder in the college teams, while Persons led the team as a batsman.

Leahy and Persons were chosen by the critics as the two men on the team entitled to positions on the "All Western Team" but public opinion at Wisconsin was that Lewis also should have been on that team.

The team finished third in the college race, being beaten by Michigan and Illinois by a close margin. It was a singular fact that the team played much better ball on the road than at home.

Taking it all in all, it was a good year all around and with a little better break of luck Coach Pierce would have landed his team in first place which he deserved, because he is the best Coach in the West today and very popular with his men.

Time: 25 minutes, 17 seconds.

*In the cross country run each team consists of five men all of whom must finish. The runners are "ranked" 1, 2, 3, etc., in the order in which they cross the finish line. When all have finished the "rankings" secured by the members of each team are added together and the team with the lowest total wins. The closeness of this meet is shown by the fact that only eight points separates the best team from the poorest.

Review of the Track Season of 1905

At the beginning of the 1905 track season the outlook for the track team was very auspicious. Through graduation the team had been deprived of the services of Captain MacEachron, Poage, Fuhrer, and Miller, who won nineteen of the twentyfive points in the preceding Conference; but several new men of ability had entered the Varsity and gave promise of developing into good athletes.

Before the season was far advanced, however, Coach Kilpatrick resigned and was replaced by James Temple, and several athletes who were regarded as Conference point winners left college. These incidents in a way are probably the reasons why both Chicago and Michigan defeated us in the indoor meets. In the Central Association A. A. W. Championship Meet held in Milwaukee, Wisconsin won second with twenty-four points—a very creditable showing, considering the large number of entries. The mile relay team did very good work, winning against Chicago twice, defeating Michigan (this being the first time Michigan lost a relay race on its own track) and taking the race for colleges and universities in the New Illinois Athletic Club Meet.

The team was unable to win either of the outdoor dual meets with Chicago and Illinois, although in the latter contest, the Wisconsin athletes won nearly all of the track events. On the day of the Inter-collegiate, the team was in excellent condition, and had not one world's and six Conference records been broken, Wisconsin might have won better than fifth place.

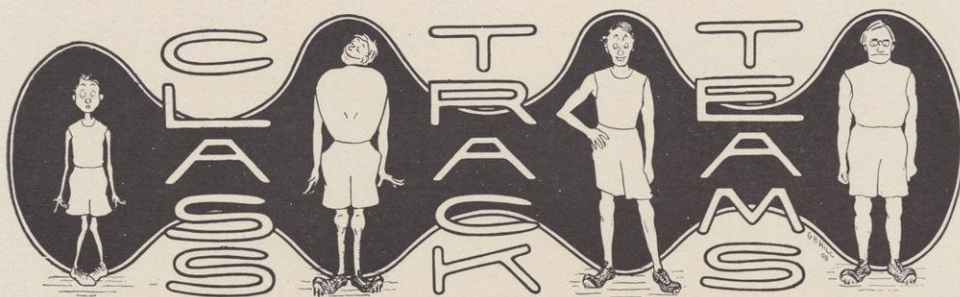

FRANK C. WALLER,
Capt. 1905 Team.

Review of the Basketball Season of 1905-1906

The season opened with basketball on a better basis than ever before, which was undoubtedly due to the organization of the Western Intercollegiate Basketball Association with Wisconsin, Minnesota, Chicago, Purdue and Illinois in the league.

Wisconsin started the season handicapped by the loss of three of last year's championship team, and after winning all of the early season games, opened the Intercollegiate series by defeating Purdue at Lafayette, Ind., by a large score. Prospects were very bright at this time and two weeks later at Madison, Purdue was again defeated 31 to 14. After this game the followers of the team felt very sure of landing the championship. The Minnesota game came the first week of the second semester, and with both the regular guards out of the game and with only two days of practice to organize a new team, prospects were not very bright. But by one of the hardest fights ever put up by a Wisconsin team, the Minnesota five was played to a standstill before one of the largest crowds that had ever witnessed a game in the home gymnasium, and Wisconsin won by a score of 31 to 24. The next two games were played away from home and we lost to Chicago but defeated Illinois. This left us a tie with Minnesota, each team having lost one game.

The splendid showing made by the team in the Championship race and the feeling that a great fight would be witnessed, packed the gym to its fullest extent on the evening of March 9, when Wisconsin played Chicago the return game. Although outplayed in the first half, the team made one of the greatest braces ever made by a Badger team and overcoming a lead of six points, swept Chicago off their feet and won by three points. The final and deciding game was played with Minnesota at Minneapolis. This was the most bitterly fought game of the whole year, as the success of the season depended on this one game. To make a long story short, the Gophers won 16 to 10, which gave them the championship.

The interest that has been taken in basketball this year shows that the game is the most popular of winter sports, and it is recognized by all as a collegiate game.

I cannot give too much praise to Coach E. D. Angell for the work which he has done for the team this fall, and the record of winning 12 out of 14 games is due largely to his coaching. Next year Wisconsin stands an excellent show of winning the championship, four of this year's team are coming back, together with many good substitutes from the class teams who will be eligible.

Championship Tournament

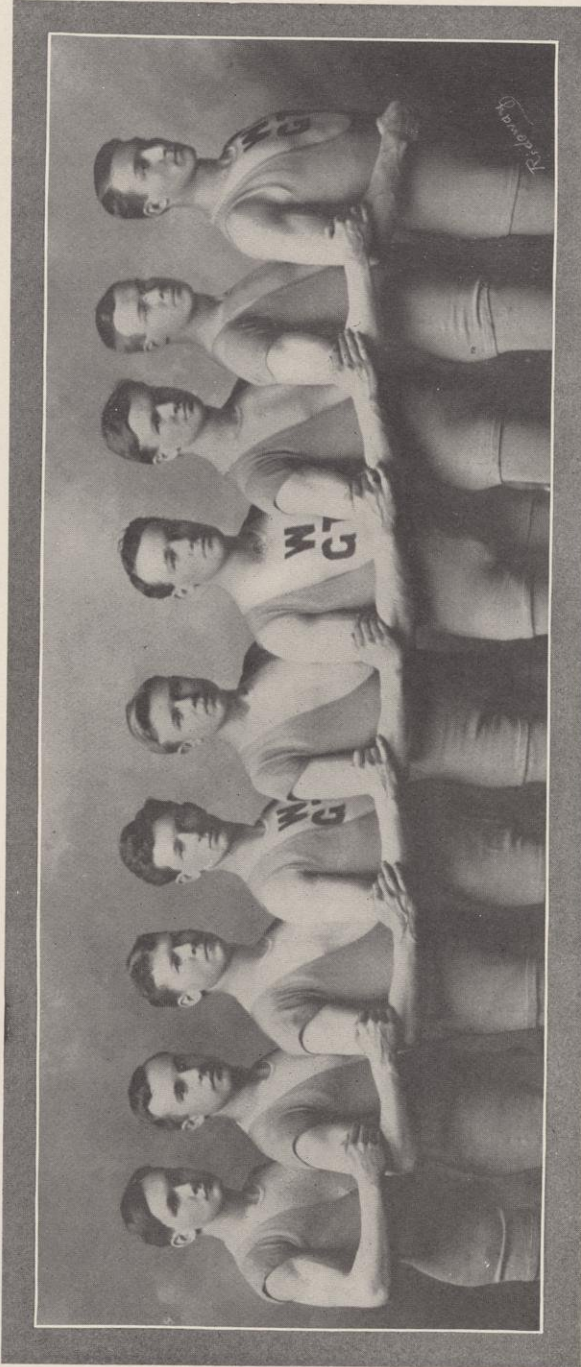

Since there were no members of any previous tennis teams then attending the University, the spring tournament determined the entire team for the season. In the semi-finals, R. L. Loesch and W. A. Rehm easily disposed of their respective opponents, the other two members of the team. In the finals, W. A. Rehm won the championship by defeating R. L. Loesch in three closely contested sets; 8 to 6, 9 to 7, 6 to 4.

Intercollegiate Tournament in Chicago

Loesch and Rehm represented Wisconsin at Chicago. In doubles they lost to the championship Chicago team: 6 to 4, 7 to 5. In singles Wisconsin also drew Chicago and lost both matches; Rehm to Gray, 6 to 3, 6 to 4, and Loesch to Garnett, 6 to 2, 6 to 4. Later in the summer, the Wisconsin team were runners-up in doubles in the annual State Tournament held at Milwaukee.

The Committee of Twenty-five

Organized 1905

Preamble of Constitution

Believing, that in our University life, there is to be filled, a place, which when properly filled, will tend toward a better and more united Wisconsin spirit, we do hereby form ourselves into an organization, whose purpose and intent will be to arouse, enliven and maintain the "old Wisconsin spirit." It will be our endeavor to encourage all sorts and varieties of sports, including the many minor games, believing as we do, that indirectly these will lead to a desire for, and a possession of, good, clean, sportsman-like play in all branches of University life, and indirectly maintain the spirit so dear to every Wisconsin man, and so necessary to our welfare as one of the most prominent of our Western Universities.

BOOK VII

AUGUSTINE JASON

OPENING OF THE SECOND SEMESTER

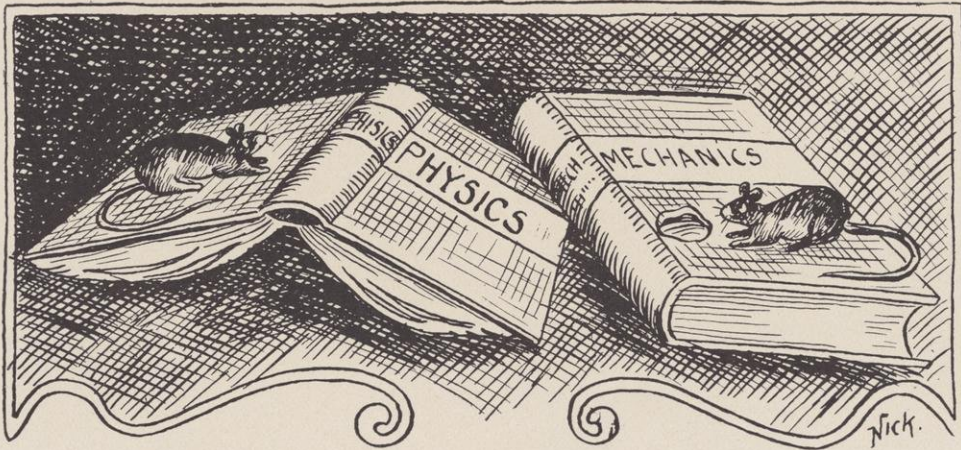

The Fellow Who "Didn't Get Through"

EDDIE MAURER'S Mechanics is covered with mould,
But grim and forbidding it stands;
And Watson's fat Physics is dusty and old,
Untouched by disturbing hands.
Time was when Eddie's Mechanics was new,
And the Physics was passing fair,—
'Twas then that a fellow who "didn't get through"
Closed them and left them there.

Since then the seasons have jogged their rounds
Unmindful of pleasure or pain,
And the Campus still echoes the same old sounds
With the same familiar refrain;
New classes have left for the fields beyond
That Commencement Day opens to view,
But there's none to recall with a memory fond
The fellow who "didn't get through."

Yet stolid as ever the old books stand,
Each in the same old place,
Awaiting the touch of a patient hand,
The sight of a patient face.
And they wonder as waiting the long years through,
There in that dusty row,
What has become of the one they knew,
Since he closed them and left them so.

Received on the Afternoon of May 8, 1906.

Phi Delta Theta requests the honor of your presence at a Musical to be given in the Lodge-hall Tuesday, May the 8th, at half after seven o'clock.

After the Musical the undersigned will do the disappearing act in three scenes as follows:

First, A sudden and unexpected aqua showerobus.

Second, A hasty and disorderly march by a circuitous route to Chadbourne Hall followed by all the guests. Here an informal and inconsequential rehearsal will be given.

Third, The grand finale.

Signed: Antonio Darnne.

Entertainer and getter-up of the stunt: Also taker-up and permanent custodian of a collection for the benefit of the Park and Pleasure Drive Association.

Infant Industries

Prof. Fish: "One of the young ladies in my class informed me in her blue-book that the object of the protective tariff is the protection of industrious infants."

"I wonder," said the Senior reformer to his fellow, as they walked into the Historical Library, "how we can reach the students; how we can gain their attention; how —"

"Put an ad. in the Cardinal," said John Moffat who was just coming out of the Library.

Snap-Judgments are mediocre opinions, given with an air of absolute finality, by a man who is entirely satisfied with himself.

To a Butterfly

("FERD" BARTLETT.)

How many hearts, oh have you heard,
That long to have and hold you, Ferd?
Like to a butterfly you flit,
And no one knows when she is it.
When love and fate their web have spun
I wonder who will be the one.
It must be very hard to tell,
There are so many you love well—
So many girls are in the game—
Why really, Ferd, it's quite a shame.
It's Hettie one day, Phoebe next—
They both must surely be perplexed.
Sue Baker once it was, and Phil,
You trotted up and down the Hill.
Now really 'tis a sad offense
To keep these maidens in suspense.
Why don't you do the thing up brown,
And go to Utah's famous town?
For there your love poems you might sigh,
And there a Mormon live and die.

In Logical Succession

Dear Archie:—

As cheer leader at the Varsity this Fall I have gained great prominence and popularity, both among the fellows and the girls. When you come here to school, make it your aim to get this position. I suggest that you get some experience in high school along this line.

Trusting you will seriously consider this matter, I am

Your brother,

Charles.

One week later the Barron County Shield contained the following item:

“Archie Taylor was elected cheer leader for the Rice Lake contest and the base ball games this spring.”

A Few Antidotes

The pessimistic line of talk
Passed out upon the Campus
Would make a person take us for A bunch of gouty Grandpas.

And thus it is, for every Prof
That wields the inky feather,
A Ferdie Kaestner hangs his sign
And throws the drinks together.

And ergo, if we feel inclined
To raise a little holler,
The Armory supplies the goods
For only half a dollar.

If we rebel from time to time
At our examinations,
They're very easy to forget
In post-exam libations.

And if we chance to overstep
The limits of discretion,
A dose of Bromo will avert
A most distressing session.

And if we're called before the Dean,
And soundly we're berated,
Perhaps we're not the only ones
Who've been investigated.

So every time we come across
The things that seem pernicious,
Let's try to find the antidotes,
They're often quite delicious.

The Virtue of a Kiss

"If you had ever studied psychology —"

"Would that make me as wise as you?" The girl turned to look at the lake, as if wearied to the last degree by her companion. "If you cannot discuss this matter with me on a common plane —"

"Why Miss Mason —"

"Because it is quite true that I never did study psychology. Do you care to talk of our surroundings? They are somewhat romantic, and perhaps in time we should strike up quite a literary conversation."

"But you mistook my meaning."

"Did I? Wouldn't our little camp-fire be an ideal setting for a novel? Man and woman on the shore of a black, placid lake—all in the moonlight. Trees, big, shadowy forest trees, back of them, and the little fire burning brightly."

"And this romantic setting all spoiled by the prosy man," he added smiling.

"No, not prosy," she said, "simply overburdened with knowledge, university knowledge."

"Whereas the woman knew so much of life before she came to the university —"

"Now don't be that way, Mr. Frank. You know I may be older than I look."

"Well?"

"Well, if you'll be good and forget how much you know, we'll go back to our 'previous question.'"

"Which was?"

"What is the virtue of a kiss?"

"I don't know."

"You never experimented, I suppose. Or is it so long ago that you've forgotten?"

"No —"

"Of course, I see how that would be. When a man becomes a student he puts aside the vanities —"

"Do I strike you as such an irredeemable grind?"

"Not irredeemable; but far gone."

"And we only met a week ago and you have discovered all this?"

"A week is a long time."

"Tell me some of the ear-marks of the chronic grind. Perhaps I can conceal mine."

"Oh you are not as bad as that. Only you are so sensible."

"I'm sorry —"

"There you go again! Now truly, what ordinary man, when a girl asks him the virtue of a kiss, would be so dully irresponsible, unemotional perhaps, as to say that he didn't know, and let it go at that?"

"It's a dangerous subject."

"To a student who knows all the frailties of the human mind, who can analyze passion in the abstract, who has forgotten what a kiss is like?"

The man stirred nervously and tried not to look at the girl. At last he said slowly, "You draw your conclusion from your own premises. I never said —"

"Oh, so you do know what a kiss is like? Is it a vague memory of your childhood? Tell me about it!"

"You know the verse," he said laughing in spite of himself, "about the fate that awaits the man who will kiss a girl, and run away and tell?"

"Oh well—but you don't need to tell me her name. Your psychological mind should be able to resense the emotions you experienced. Now, look straight at me, and —"

"And find a source of inspiration?"

"I didn't say that, — and tell your little story."

"It really was a long time ago."

"Yes, go on."

"So long that the emotions are blotted out by the fact."

"Now don't spoil such a good beginning. Do you really need an inspiration? Perhaps it was just such a scene as this—water, and moon and a little fire—"

"Perhaps."

"Must I tell the whole story for you? Well perhaps the girl started just such a talk as this, and you being younger and less learned and not without some emotion, fell into her mood, for perhaps she was younger than the girl with you now, and half in earnest."

"And then?"

"And then perhaps you put your arm around her, and drew her up to you, never heeding her frightened little protests, and kissed her!"

The man poked the fire with his shoe and turned over a smouldering log, so that it blazed up fiercely for a moment.

"Do you know what you are doing?" he said, his eyes on the log.

"I am trying to make you tell me a story, and failing, am telling it for you."

"You are doing what I am."

"What?"

"Playing with the fire?"

The girl blushed just a trifle, then spoke scornfully. "Is the student forgetting his part? Is the man with the trained mind so affected by the passing story of a foolish girl that he cannot analyze it? Or has he been looking too long at the lake and the moon and the fire?"

"No, at the girl."

The man rose, and instinctively the girl stood up with him. "You know," he said quickly, "that when an image rises into consciousness, by psychological law it must result in action, unless prohibited."

"Well?" she remarked a little defiantly.

"You have built a picture for me. You took the setting that was here. You put in a man and a woman. You made me the man, made the woman imaginary. But the law of association made you the woman. You made the man and the woman act. Your image of the man's action has risen to full consciousness in my mind—and now—"

The girl felt the man's strong arms about her and did not resist. When he had kissed her and after a moment released her, she said quietly, "If you have finished your buffoonery, perhaps you will take me home."

Without more words they stepped into a canoe, and the man strove to concentrate his overcharged mind on the paddling.

Dear Kate:

I've won my bet, you foolish overconfident mortal. Your irreproachable, analytical, inconceivable Mr. Frank kissed me! Yes he really did—last night. But oh! it was hard work. I led the poor benighted man up to the brink three times before his mind forgot itself. Wouldn't you hate to have a "mind," Kate? And I had to be so careful not to be a forward thing, and scare him, I didn't speak a word to him all the way home. You'd have died to hear him say "Good-night Miss Mason," in as solemn and funereal a tone as if he were going to his execution. His repentance ought to be worth a t l e a s t five pounds of Allegretties.

—Faith

Wisconsin's Grand Old Men

Every country, burg, or village
In the range of human ken
Points with pride to certain persons
Whom it calls its Grand Old men.

Grand Old Men are like the beacons
Shining out upon the sea,
Helping those who still are battling
With the waves, like you and me.

There's Joe Cannon in our congress;
Wall street has its Russell Sage;
Dewey represents the Navy.
Mansfield typifies the Stage.

In Wisconsin's student body
Grand Old Men you'll find galore,
Men who seem to like the climate
Of our fair Mendota's shore.

It may be their genial habits
Lead the Profs. to keep them here;
It may be they're fond of study,
Or perhaps it's Hausmann's beer.

One among this bunch of fossils
Has been here since Lord knows when;
And deserves an early mention
In our list of Grand Old Men.

We refer to one who thinks that
With a baseball he's a shark;
If his smile shows his ability,
Hats off to Heine Stark!

Then there's anti-grafter Mahon,
With his auburn flowing hair;
He's the candy politician
And the man behind the Mayor.

Howell Parks has trod our byways
Till his hair is turning gray;
Whether that's from age or study
We are not prepared to say.

Sidney Law was once a fossil
And belonged their ranks among;
But now Davie's quite a youngster;
You know love makes all men young.

Arne Lerum is a has-been
It's impossible to lose,
But he finds that Thursday-nighters
Down at Kehl's keep off the blues.

Duckie Bigelow's still supporting
The Park Hotel Buffet;
And he's bigger 'round than ever,
Funny how it acts that way.

Charlie Taylor's led the rooting,
And he's led our soldier boys:
Charlie always was a corker
When it came to making noise.

Big Kowalke, staid and pensive,
Is the wise man of the bunch;
Things that stump a common being
To Kowalke are a lunch.

When he stalks to make his classes,
Freshmen bow their heads and sigh,
And resolve to do their darndest
And to make Tau Beta Pi.

People say this same Kowalke,
That it's true I have no doubt,
Was one of those three wise Men
Whom the Bible tells about.

Now our Otto's making money
Printing pictures of his face
Saying "Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey
Is what keeps me in the race."

All these Grand Old Men have gotten theirs
In Badgers since B. C.
As they're getting old and feeble
Let's dismiss them tenderly.

But when finally you leave us,
To battle with Life's storm,
Watch out for Dr. Osler
With his can of chloroform.

Some College Animals I Have Known

The Bucker is an awful beast
He studies late when others feast,
He hath the wisdom of a sage,
He's quite a startling personage;
He is the Prof's one great delight,
This wise old college proselyte.

Quite close in kin there is the whale
Who oft from Normal School doth hail;
'Twere well if him we'd emulate
And not, forsooth, eradicate,
For ever you may see him shine,
Especially when it's Blue-book-time.

Beneath the blazer's burnished lid
This toothsome bunny oft is hid
Tho' innocent in looks, 'tis said
To be a fractious quadruped;
And if you're wise, you will beware
This "foreign species of the hare."

Right well you know the old Book-Worm
In libraries he loves to squirm
And for his meat and for his drink
He chooses leaves and printer's ink.
He crams and stuffs from morn till night
He has an awful appetite.

The winged courser, called the Horse
Full many a man can well endorse.
If used with some sagacity,
You'll e'er escape calamity.
But once you loosen up his rein,
Disaster! Ruination! Pain!

A bird there is yclept the Jay
In work as foolish as in play,
He thinks he's quite the only bird
That should be seen and should be heard,
He should be squelched where'er met
This unsophisticated pet.

The Goat you'll find where e'er you roam
In foreign climes or here at home,
Upon the campus, Libe or Gym
You'll always find him butting in.
His aim in life is to annoy,
This omnipresent Billey-boy.

Who late and foolishly doth feast
May meet this fierce nocturnal beast;
Who dines unwisely and too well
Shall feel its awful mystic spell.
I quake to hear upon my bed
The thunder of the night-mare tread.

Gentlemen:

A copy of your catalogue listing your line of barios diamond rings sent to Mr. William McGillivray has accidentally fallen into my hands. I would suggest that when you mail a catalogue to one of our fellows kindly send it in care of the lodge. Mac is a bashful and retiring sort and would naturally keep such things from us lest we suspect that he is engaged. There are others in our chapter, however, who would like to examine your catalogue and you will appreciate that unless we saw it you would lose our trade. Do not mistake me, I am not saying that Mac is engaged. I believe that our connections give him the right to demand secrecy from me. If you were not so closely connected with university people I could say more; but since things are as they are they are thus.

I want to buy a "solitaire." I like the one on page 33 of your catalogue. The one that costs $2.60, (Two Dollars and sixty cents). I haven't much money to spend, still I believe that when a fellow does a thing of this kind he might as well get something good; and this may be the last ring I will ever buy. I don't know the size of her finger and it wouldn't do to let her know, or even suspect, just what I am up to. I can say though that it isn't very large. We are getting on splendidly. If I could only keep that smile from my face. The fellows notice it. It seems to be broad and out-spoken. They laugh at me and guy me about it. They think we've got it all fixed. It will be a cold day, I'll tell you, when they find out.

Please send the ring as soon as possible. And say, kindly send it C. O. D. I think I can arrange by that time, that is, I think it will reach me quicker in that way.

Very truly yours,

Jerome H. Coe.

P. S. Don't say anything about this to anybody.

I would like to make a correction in my letter as follows; for "out-spoken" read "telling" or "noticeable". I suppose it really makes but little difference which word I use, however, we Cardinal men always make it a point to use those words which express our meaning exactly.

To Leuconoe '08

Translated from the Latin of Horace

Leuconoe, shut up that book, never mind
The lessons the stone-hearted Prof has assigned
To you and to me; you can't puzzle it out,—
The best of the ponies but leaves it in doubt.
Let's take what we get, dash the worry and care
For whether he gives us an "ex" or a "fair"
Or cons us this term, with the lake five miles wide,
All frozen so smooth, surely lessons can slide.
Be wise, stow these bitter-sweets out of the way.
There isn't much time, let's enjoy all we may.
The library clock! Gee whiz! but it's late
Come on, let's skate first and then have the debate.

The Lorelei

Ich weiss nicht was soll es bedeuten
That I dread my Deutches Exam
Ein Maerchen aus Alten Zeiten
Tells me that I surely must cram.

Die schoene Co-ed sitzt
Up there many hours a day
Ihr goldnes Geschmeide blitzet
Which is not at all out of the way.

Die Luft is kuehl und es dunkelt
And Mendota is rough as to ice
Der Gipfel des Main Hall funkelt
(This idea I think is quite nice.)

Aus ihr Haar fallen oft ihre Kaemme,
When the breeze blows up from the lake,
Das hat eine wundersame
Price, and is marked "special make."

Die Studenten lieben die Maedchen
And we do too, don't you know,
Die letzten sind immer die schoensten;
Ach Himmel! verse-making is slow!

Das Maerchen ich glaub, ist am Ende
It was slowly and painfully writ,
Ich will es nach "Badger Board" sende,
I though I'm sure they won't like it one bit!

The two Freshman Co-eds walked complacently into the bank.

"I want to get a check cashed," said the first one sweetly.

"I'm sorry but I don't know you," said the cashier.

"I'll identify her," said the second Co-ed, with the look of one who has assumed a great burden of responsibility.

"But I don't know you," smiled the cashier.

"Well, I'll introduce her to you," said the first Co-ed graciously, and the bank official would be explaining yet if The Fellow Who Lives in the Same Town had'nt walked in just then.

A Moonlight Mishap

The Senior shook out the yellow gown and laid it on the bed. It was soft and clinging, with silky lace and little bows in unexpected places,—what modistes call an artistic gown. The Senior looked at it contemplatively while she did her hair. Her room-mate watched her curiously.

“Who’s coming tonight, Eugenie?” She said at last.

“The Freshman,” Eugenie answered with a smile of amusement.

“And you are making all this fuss for him?” asked the incredulous roommate.

“Oh, Bobby’s a dear, and it does take so little to please him. Why shouldn’t I try to look nice when he comes?” returned the Senior carelessly.

“Well, all I have to say is, be cautious, or he’ll be falling in love with you.”

The Senior turned to stare in amazement at this startling room-mate, and burst out laughing.

“Bobby! With me! Why, my dear Ethel, we’re the best of chums, but I’m centuries older than he; I’m sort of an aunt to him. Bobby! Bless the baby, he ought to be in dresses, with a rattle.” She laughed again, and promptly forgot all about it. She put on the yellow dress and stood surveying herself in the mirror with a dreary gaze. Presently she spoke, half to herself, half to Ethel.

“Lawrence,”—she spoke the name softly, shyly,—“Lawrence said I looked like a daffodil in this dress.”

The room-mate sniffed, and returned to her Greek verbs. She was not a sentimental person, and though she saw how well the creamy color of the gown harmonized with Eugenie’s dark hair and big, brown eyes, it seemed foolish to her to liken the girl to a flower.

The Freshman was punctual, as ever. As Eugenie went down to receive him, he sprang up and came toward her.

“I’m so glad to see you, Bobby,” the Senior found herself saying as she gave him her hand. He certainly was good to look at, this big, clean-looking boy with his sparkling blue eyes and captivating smile. That he was glad to see her needed no telling. It shone out all over his face.

“It’s beastly hot in this parlor of yours, Eugenie,” he began. “Let’s go for a walk. It’s a peach of a night.”

It was a “peach” of a night. June had just come, and with it the first summer moon. There were many people strolling up and down, forgetful of everything but the enchantment of the springtime and the moonlight.

“Where shall we go?” Bobby asked, as he fell into step beside Eugenie. It seemed ridiculous to suggest the “Pal” on such a night.

“Let’s go down by the lake,” replied the girl. The witchery of the moonlight was affecting her, too. They walked along slowly, scarcely speaking. That was one nice thing about the Freshman,—he knew when not to talk. He led Eugenie down the steps, and they sat looking over the silvery stillness. A canoe went gliding silently past, and a girl’s white gown showed in the moonlight. The sound of singing from far out on the lake came softly yet distinctly to their ears. The Senior had forgotten the boy by her side. She was thinking of a tall, quiet man, slow perhaps, and serious, but with splendid, compelling grey eyes and a low voice that could sound like a lash, or like a caress. She could see those eyes,—they were looking into hers, into her soul, and she could hear that low voice, sweeter than any music, saying, “Will you remember me dear, when”—

But what was the freshman saying? “Going away tomorrow,—not coming back—start in with the Governor.” The words roused Eugenie from her reverie.

"Why, Bobby, are you going away before the exams?" She said, with real regret. "What shall I ever do without you?"

"Shall you miss me?" he said, in a strange low tone without looking at her.

"Miss you!" The Senior's voice was more tender than she knew. The moonlight had worked too well. "Miss you! Why, Bobby dear, —"

He bent over her and seized her hands. "Then may I come back? Will you wait for me, dear? If you'll just give me something to hope for, I'll work so hard till I've something to offer you, and be so patient and" —

"Bobby Temple, what are you talking about?" The Senior sat up very straight and tried to free her hands. She began to laugh. "Is this a new part you're rehearsing, or the latest jolly? What do you mean?"

"Mean!" cried the boy, "I mean I love you and want you to be my wife."

"You —!" The Senior burst into a merry peal of laughter. It was too funny. The look of pain and surprise on the Freshman's face deepened to one of bitterness. Eugene checked her mirth.

"Why, Bobby," she said gently, but amusedly. "I think the world of you, you know. I feel like a mother to you, or a maiden aunt. You musn't let a little moonlight go to your head this way." She paused. They could hear the soft dip of oars, and men's voices singing "The Farewell Waltz." A sweet wailing tenor soared above the rest and blended with them.

"She knew," thought the Freshman. "She knew I loved her, and she's just been amusing herself with me. Oh, how could she!" His idol was shattered, his faith in womankind gone. He dropped her hands and turned away as he sighed heavily. He was so very young, this Freshman, and she was his first love.

"It's getting late, — we must go," said the Senior, rising. "Don't look so tragic, Bobby, it isn't becoming." But the words brought no smile to the stern face.

At first the Senior missed him. She was sorry she had laughed at his youthful ardor, and she really had liked him immensely. Then he gradually faded from her thoughts, which were quite taken up with the big grey-eyed man with the sweet, low voice, who was coming at Commencement.

As for the Freshman, — well, after all, he was very young, only nineteen.

A Strange Coincidence

Fair Miriam Noyes,	And "Hib," quoth he:
Of stately poise,	"It seems to me
Decided boys	Girls plurally
Henceforth she'd shun;	Just spoil the fun."
She told them all	He dropped them all,
No more to call;	Both large and small,
Did I say all?	Did I say all?
Yes,—all but one.	Yes,—all but one.

Sue and I

A BALLAD

Sung by Mr. Norman Walker Sanborn for the Columbia Phonograph Company of New York and Paris

On a warm and mellow evening,
When it's great to purr and spoon
In the glimmer of the starlight
And the shimmer of the moon,—

I invited for a paddle
With me in my canoe,
The One whose slightest giggle
Seems to thrill me through and through.

Once when I was young and foolish,
I had notions weird and wild,
That a man who bowed to Cupid
Was no man, but just a child.

Now those days are gone forever,
And I'm clear up to my neck
In a mire of devotion
He has steered me to, by Heck!

Ah, the girl who sat before me
In the bow of my canoe,
Could have cooked my Malta Vita,
Yes, and darned my stockings, too.

For her tresses were of auburn,
All her own, both hair and hue,
Which is going some, I tell you,
For a girl of twenty-two.

Her complexion was a marvel
Of advanced cosmetic art:
Not a freckle or a blemish
From its broad expanse did start.

Her waist was just exactly
Fourteen inches by the clock,—
To have thrown my arm around it
I'd have put myself in hock.

Her heels were in the middle
Of the little shoes she wore,
And their altitude in inches
Must have measured six or more.

And I pondered, as I paddled,
How to put my love in words
That would sound to her like music,
Or the cooing of the birds.

For I felt that such devotion
As had budded in my breast
Needed words in its expression
Chosen only from the best.

So I said in accents teary,
After clearing out my throat,
“Darling Sue, behold a lover;
Dear, don't make me be the goat.”

Then she smiled like Heaven's sunshine
On a rainy day in June,
And her teeth shone whiter, brighter
Than the glisten of the moon.

And I took this shy rejoinder
As encouragement from her;
So I gently moved up closer,
To be nearer, as it were.

All at once the boat turned over,
And we both were in the drink,
And I heard the waters bubbling
As my head began to sink.

And I thought of home and mother,
And of how they'd miss me so,
And decided that my duty
Was to leave the girl and go.

So I started swimming madly
Where I thought the shore should be,
And Mendota frothed and lathered,
As I beat it frantic'ly.

And the way I covered distance
Would have made a porpoise prance,
While my gasping breath was coming
In abbreviated pants.

By degrees a nobler feeling
Bade me stay my rapid course,
And my better self rebuked me
With a feeling of remorse.

For I thought of helpless Susie,
Who had never learned to swim,
And I started back to find her,
While my eyes with tears were dim.

And a sweat broke out upon me,
And a shudder shook my spine,
As I thought perhaps already
She had sunk beneath the brine.

Hark! I heard her dear voice calling,
And it seemed as if she laughed,
And I thought she had hysterics
Or had gone completely daft.

With a sob I must acknowledge
My feeling of chagrin
When I found her calmly standing
There in water to her chin.

And she had the boat beside her,—
Mat and paddles all were there,—
And she pointed with her finger
As she wrung her auburn hair.

And behold! I saw before me,
Not twenty feet away,
With the moonlight on its willows
The shoreline of the bay.

Official Correspondence

Dean William A. Henry, University Farm, Madison, Wis.

My dear Sir:

While telephoning this morning I overheard a conversation regarding which I deem it my duty to advise you. The voice in the telephone said, "I have only one chapter of my thesis done. Brindly has just got a pony for his." When a student uses a "pony" even for his thesis, it seems to me an alarming state of affairs. I

I listened for many minutes, but got no further clue to this disgraceful procedure. To be safe, I had my clerk stay at the 'phone the rest of the morning, but without any results. The evidence I have inadvertently come upon is, however, ample to convince me that this is a clear case of dishonesty, deserving the strictest and most arbitrary censure. The fellow in question, so a reliable informant tells me, is a football player, which would indicate that there is sure to be something wrong with his morals. In the interest of honesty and the name of our University, I submit these facts, trusting that you will fearlessly carry out the course which plainly points to you.

Very sincerely,

Frederick J. Turner.

Frederick J. Turner, Madison, Wis.

Dear Sir:

In reference to your letter of today, let me say that I appreciate your interest in this matter. Before summoning the man in question, Brindley, I looked up his record in this college and I find that his thesis is "Observations upon the fluctuation in the weight of colts, with a view to explaining same." Upon further inquiry, I learn that Brindley actually did purchase a pony, a real pony to be used in connection with his thesis. If you think that the fellow merits surveillance owing to his being a football player I enclose herewith his photograph, which you may file for further reference. Very respectfully,

William A. Henry.

Investigation Song

Sing a song of Faculty
Investigation's here,
See the profs and undergrads
Start to quake and fear.
Now the court is hushed and stern,
Fellows all appear
Answering questions such as these:
Saw you ever beer?

How about the Junior Prom —
Were you feeling gay?
Did you ask a girl to come,
And did you pay her way?
Did you stay up after twelve—
Dance till break of day,
Then ride out to Middleton
On a load of hay?

Did you have to pawn your watch?
Did your coat go too?
Did you rent an old dress-suit,
Or did you buy it new?
Did you have an opera hat,
Or did your derby do?
Did you sell your desk and books,
So as to raise a few?

Did you make your eight o'clock?
Could you keep awake?
Or did you snore out loud in class,
And make the windows shake?
How about your bank account?
Did it make you quake
To learn that during Prom you'd spent
What took Dad years to make?

POWERFUL SERMON

Rev. Floyd M. Clark an Eloquent Preacher

POLISHED AND PROFOUND

At the First Baptist Church last Sunday the Rev. F. M. Clark delivered one of the greatest sermons ever heard in this city. The text was taken from the Holy Writ, the gist of his dissertation can fittingly be summed up in the words "The Universe et cetera."

Perhaps no preacher since the days of Henry Ward Beecher has ever held a congregation so well. Every one marveled at the spontaneity of Rev. Clark's eloquence. Facts gleaned from the learning of all nations were brought together to illustrate the points made, so that the listeners not only received spiritual uplifting but were mentally enriched. When the deep resonance of his voice was coupled with his earnest and vindictive manner, his description of the eternal torment became so realistic that multitudes were frightened into the faith. At times the interminable flow of strange words of such length that even Samuel Johnson could never have pronounced them suggested thunder and light-

FIRE

Prof. Parkinson's Home Burned

NOBLE WORK BY MADISON FIRE DEPARTMENT

The city was startled early this morning by the blowing of the fire-whistle. "Fire!" shouted the running throng. The fire department woke with a start. Here was an opportunity to show the people what they could do if they wished.

How often had the department responded nobly to false alarms! How proud was the town populace of them on such occasions! That department could run two miles a minute if they wished—so the people maintained.

But this was a real fire; the smoke and flames down State Street proved that. What was to be done? The department had maintained the record of never appearing at a fire—a real fire—until all the furniture and roof were burned. Would they preserve this record?

They reached the fire only half an hour after the alarm was given. Fate seemed against them. Must they start at the fire before the roof was off? With a courage born of despair, they set themselves against fate.

The chief had an idea—they must discover where the

MEMBERS OF TEAM EXPOSED

Serious Charges of Graft Unearthed in Debating at Wisconsin

BY JED NORDEN

Men of Wisconsin:

As I take up my pen to write this article, my first emotion is one of pleasure. A reformer is ever maligned, and it occurs to me that some, because I am a graduate of Wisconsin, will accuse me of ingratitude! Think of it! But I am comforted by the knowledge that sober second thought will convince the most casual reader of my real purpose. Like murder truth will out. There is graft at the University and the sooner it is exposed the better—better for the University—better for the exposor. Such is modern journalism.

I have chosen in this article to expose debating. My thesis is this: Graft does exist, has existed, and now flourishes in debating circles of the University of Wisconsin. I propose to prove it.

Let us first consider the men who make the teams. If they stand the test of honesty, we may drop the investigation. But they will not stand it. It is no use to talk of the innocent lads from the farm who come to the university, join the literary societies, and debate. How far do they rise? Some make the "semi-public." What then? Do they make the intercollegiate teams? No! The grafters make the intercollegiate teams. The team which just met Nebraska was a team of grafters! Baker, Geisse, Olbrich. Prominent men do you say? Yes, to the greater shame of the University. But their records, you say. I will show you their records. Geisse is paid five dollars a month by the Hesperian Literary Society.

Do you ask for more to prove the utter rottenness of the University?

Do you ask me how I know he is paid five dollars a month by Hesperia? With my own eyes I have seen a check for five dollars made out to Harry Geisse by Thomas J. Mahon. Thomas J. Mahon once thought of joining Hesperia.

After this crushing proof you may say there is no need to continue, but I propose to carry out this matter to the bitter end.

Look, then, at Baker. Do you tell me he is innocent as the driven snow? Did you ever see snow driven into the mud of the street until it was gray and vile and filthy? Then bear the simile in mind.

Baker wrote to Nebraska before the last debate and offered to sell Wisconsin's charts for one thousand dollars! Think of that! Then think of the mud. You have read "The Treason of the Senate." I might call this article the treason of the Student! My proofs, do you cry again? Read and be convinced. The day before I wrote this article I walked up the hill to the dear old law building. I was in a dreamy mood, planning what and how I might do for the University. Suddenly I became aware of voices behind me. I dared not turn around lest they stop. This is what I heard! "He would barter them for a thousand." Whom do they mean? thought I, for it was evident to me they were conversing in a secret code. Suddenly the solution flashed upon me. Can "he" mean Olbrich? No. Can "he" mean Geisse? No. "Barter" ah! Baker. It was easy. The rest I deduced. But do you ask how I know they were not lying? Ah, I have not told you who they were. The voices back of me belonged to T. S. Adams and Don E. Mowry. Could they lie?

But if Geisse is a paid professional; if Baker would sell his charts for a paltry thousand dollars,—they are babes in the woods compared to Emil Olbrich. Do

PROF. ELY'S HINTS ON ABSENTMINDEDNESS

Send for my booklet "The Success of Forgetfulness."

We are advertised by our loving friends. Read their testimonials:

DR. ELY:

Dear Sir: I have given your Forgettery System a faithful trial, and wish to report that in my case it has proved a complete success. After only a month's practice of your invaluable rules, I am able, with comparative ease, to forget the tailor bills I owe, to forget my classes, forget my friends and family. Repeated duns and alarms have no effect on my memory. Everything has passed away from my memory as completely as if it had never existed, everything except one face and one name, one girl and one town. Please give me instructions as to how to forget this one lingering remnant.

Yours very gratefully,
Wilfred Cedric Parker.

DR. ELY:

Dear Sir: I have long been a sufferer from acute Memoritis. After a few days' trial of your wonderful system I was able to borrow a cigar and forgot to return it. I have also learned to forget to take a contribution to church. Especially helpful is your little book "Lest We Forget." I have already forgotten the contents of same. I used to know how to write, but I have completely forgotten the art. I have also forgotten how to play and sing. What can I do to forget to write poetry? It bothers me very much, as it often gets me into trouble. Gracefully yours,

Frederick W. MacKenzie.

DR. ELY:

Dear Sir: For years I have sufferred from frequent attacks of memory. Since coming to college I have often been unable to forget many unpleasant evening engagements. I tried Lethe water without success. But now I can stay out all night and by the next noon I have forgotten everything that has occurred. I am slowly learning to forget everything I ever knew. I can't even remember the time of Tammany; and only by the greatest effort can I remember the Maine.

Yours in deepest gratitude,
Walter I. Sleep.

BEEBE CALLED

The Cruel Hand of Fate is Felt
Once More

A GALLANT, A SOLDIER, AND A SCHOLAR

PAX VOBISCUM BEEBE

When spring came and nature was all gay and young, our dear Freshman Beebe was called away from us. Of course we cannot question the cruel rights of the hand of Fate, and yet we miss the boy. His genial smile, which he bestowed even upon those whom he did not know, was ever a welcome sight. Be he in the class room, the gymnasium, at home or on horseback, he was always bright and cheerful. Most any time one might see him walking carelessly along, swinging his note-book by a shoe string and spreading sunshine about him. He was ever generous and liberal.

At a dance no one could you know how Olbrich got on the team? It was all a machine trick. Suffice it to add that the alumni contributed a purse of four hundred dollars to grease the wheels. How do I know? Art Lambeck said so.

Now I have shown the character of the grafters who debated Nebraska—of the men who are corrupting the university—who are throwing the very grafting of the Engineering Faculty in the shade. It remains only to show the reverse of the shield—to point out to you the men who thus unfairly have been cheated out of the glory they have worked so hard for—out of the right to represent their university. I refer to Hal Week, Ruben Arndt and E. J. Vanderboom. I pass over the sad cases of Hal Week who wept when informed that Geisse the professional had won his (Harold's) place, and of Ruben Arndt who was driven to soda-water on the news of his defeat. Let me picture to you big honest Vanderboom receiving the tidings that Olbrich had been pushed in. His manly bosom heaved and heaved again. "Alas!" he cried, "has Wisconsin come to this!"

My next article will be "The Literary Magazine or 'Why Walsh turned down the stuff.'" ning and all the side dishes. The poetry and imagery of his discourse will not soon be rivalled.

In closing Floyd said: "Good brethren, faith we must have to be saved. Seek not material proof for things spiritual. Read and believe! The superficiality of the sophistry of unbelievers is plain, and is indicative of the assinine propensities of these pusillanimous imbeciles. What a superabundance of unqualified assurance is found in this text for today. 'Be of good cheer the Comforter will come.' Comprehend the profundity of meaning here expressed, and even among the anthropological specimens of humanity no terror will shake the stability and equilibrium of your anatomy. But perhaps this is esoteric to any environment you may ever find yourselves in. I take a more common application. When you shall have been raised up after immersion in the tank, and multitudinous minute eruptions of cuticle are brought on by the action of cold, let your spirits be inversely to the temperature, for there comes assurance from the paraphrase of the text 'Be of good cheer, the Comforter will come,'—cheer up and you will get the quilt."

have been more democratic than Mathew. Taking a careful survey of the room from above the rims of his glasses, he would seek out the prettiest girl in the hall, walk up, introduce himself, and none could have tripped it lighter than he.

But his equestrian skill put even his dancing in the shade. Pegasus went out of business when Beebe took to the stirrup, but this again was only one of his many and varied accomplishments. When he first came to college, the freshman resolved to be both a military man and a Phi Beta Kappa, but his professors soon persuaded him to give up the latter ambition. As a captain he won eminence and applause.

Mr. Beebe's mellow laugh, languishing eyes, sentimental nature and bland smile, will forever remain as one of our pleasantest recollections of university life.

On the Sick List

John Leslie got his feet wet on the day of the Chicago-Wisconsin game last November and it has just now developed in a cold in the head.

Greatness

Some men are born to greatness
With luck their lives begin;
And some achieve distinction,
While others just "butt in."

GREAT MAN GONE

Colonel Underwood Summoned

Yesterday at 2:23 occurred a calamity that shook Madison to its very foundation. We refer to the passing away of Col. Walter Scott Underwood. It will be many a day before Madison will recover from the loss of the remarkable man. In his decease we lose our leading military diplomat and one of the coming literary men of the age. We lose one to whom the words scholar and gentleman could aptly be applied. Madison society is thunderstruck; the debutantes are wearing black shoes to show how deeply they feel this blow, and to the clubs nothing is heard but praises of this remarkable man.

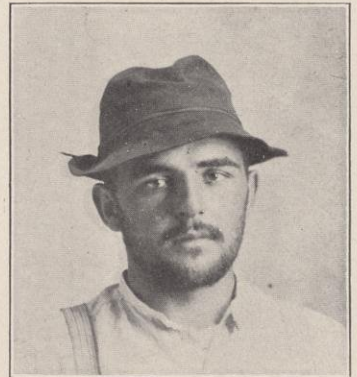

The funeral will be probably the largest function of its kind within the memory of the oldest inhabitants. Burial will be at Mendota cemetery where a large and commodious lot is owned by the heirs of the deceased.

As the body is lowered into the watery grave it is planned to shoot a large cannon 23 times thus giving to our departed Colonel the customary salute for one of his high military position.

Olaf B. Johnson Passes Away

At the death of Olaf B. Johnson, Madison loses one of her oldest and most versatile citizens. While with us Mr. Johnson was closely affiliated with the Departments of Engineering, Letters and Science, Agriculture and Domestic Science, and worked the leading men in each department with tireless energy. The cause of Mr. Johnson's death is supposed to be overwork. Said one of his close associates, "Ole worked hard in every study he undertook, but finally he took to mechanics and they killed him."

A WILD MAN

He was captured in Dead Man's Gulch, Wy., by a party of Wisconsin Students in 1901, and brought to Madison.

STARTLING DISCLOSURES

Special Investigating Committee
Unearths Scandal in Varsity Athletics and Society

GOOD WORK OF REFORMERS

Messrs. Taylor, Ledvina and Melzner have been appointed by the investigating committee to act as a special committee in the University Probe. These young men are the most prominent in the reform movement and their selection for this important position was to be expected. The special committee spent the entire afternoon in questioning students in regard to social activities, sports, religious movements. Many startling disclosures were made. Mr. Milton Woodward was the first student called upon the stand. His testimony is as follows:

Q. What is your name?

A. Milton Woodward.

Q. Are you a student?

A. I am.

Q. Are you sure you are a student?

A. Why certainly I am!

Q. Do you find the hill work hard?

A. Well, rather!

Q. Do you like your Professors?

A. Why — yes!

Q. Does your work keep you up late at night?

A. Oh, no — my work doesn't.

Q. What time do you retire then?

A. Usually a litte after nine.

Q. Do you always retire immediately after studying?

A. Not Immediately.

Q. Did you ever hear of the Juneau?

A. I have heard it mentioned.

Q. Do you know of a gentleman by the name of "Ferdy?"

A. Slightly.

Q. Do you know where East Main is?

A. I think I could find it.

Q. Do you remember ever passing a yellow brick building decorated with posters?

A. No, I never pass it by.

Q. Is there any good restaurant near Flom's where refreshments can be had after performance?

A. Cronin's is quite near, I believe.

Q. Do Cronin's furnish good things to eat?

A. Why, really, I don't quite know about the "eats."

Q. Do you have many eight o'clock's to make?

A. Well, I don't make very many.

Q. That will do, Mr. Woodward.

Mr. Montgomery was next called.

Q. What is your name?

A. Harry Gage Montgomery.

Q. What college do you attend?

A. The Agricultural.

Q. Do you enjoy your work there?

A. No. I have to get up so early in the morning I haven't time to make myself look real nice.

Q. Why should you desire to look "especially nice?"

A. Because, I meet the girls always. They go up the hill on the same side I do, so that they can see my new suits.

Q. Do you like the professors in your department?

A. Oh, yes, but they give me low marks.

Q. Why is that?

A. Because they are jealous of me. Why! One professor gave me Fair in American history because my paper staggered him. Of course I should have had an Ex!

Q. What do you think is a fellow's greatest purpose in going to college?

A. To become acquainted with the latest styles and the prettiest girls.

Mr. Montgomery was dismissed and the committee heard from Mr. Sprecher on Football.

Q. What is your name?

A. Walter E. Sprecher, son of Mr. Sprecher, President of the First National Bank of Independence.

THE SUNDAY CARDINAL

CARDINAL STAFF

Editorially Speaking

Prepared

The meanest man on earth is one who will station himself within a hearing distance from you and then indulge in a discourse concerning your character, accomplishments and work.

A member of a former Badger Board, who is now leading a desultory life, was sitting in the library one day shortly after the Badger of his class came out. Opposite from him sat the mean man pouring his criticism of the Badger with footnotes on specific members of the Board into the ear of a third party. We have reasons to believe that the Badger Boarder was very much distressed at what he heard. There is nothing more disagreeable to an eminent man than to stand by and hear himself discussed. He related the episode to us when we were making a run for a position on the Board and we cannot forget his story; much less the way in which he told it. We have been thinking on the matter exceedingly of late, so we have made suitable arrangements and if any one is especially desirous of letting us know just how the Badger strikes their cultivated tastes they will be able to find us at a distance of one day's walk from the city in the general direction of the Aurora Borealis. There we will be sitting wrapped in gloom and asbestos in the midst of a quarter section. We will have our dogs and the trusty winchester at our side. Who can tell — May be!

We understand that two verses of the poem entitled "Wisconsin's Grand Old Men," which appears in the 1907 Badger, were originally to run thus:

One among this bunch of fossils
Has been here since Lord knows when;
And deserves an early mention
In our list of Grand Old Men.

We refer to one who thinks that
With a stein he's quite a shark;
If his smile shows his capacity,
Hats off to Hine Stark.

After submitting the verses to Mr. Stark and a second thought on the part of the Badger Board it was concluded to alter the verses. We desire to commend the action of the Board. We believe that anything so suggestive should be kept out of the Badger, especially if it is misleading and untrue.

We heard from a reliable source that Mr. Stark feared if the verses were run in their original form he would be "kveered witthe Old Mon"

We hoped to be able to dish up a nicer platter of scandal, with cream, concerning a few popular co-eds than ever appeared at a woman's tea or formed a subject for the careful and detailed discussion of the S. G. A. Board.

A real woman's hazing party, full grown and exceedingly fractious and versatile—captured on the upper campus with the goods on its person. The women concerned are making every effort to gag the editor of this paper. But we say emphatically: "They cannot."

Gag this paper,—stay us from expressing our opinion. The very irrocity. (The word irrocity doesn't really mean anything but we had a friend once who was fond of it so we are reviving it, as it were, to his memory!)

We would take undiluted pleasure in serving this story with sugar and fingerbowl—so to speak, but alas! The last man we sent out to pry up enough facts for a hearty meal returned to the office with his head in a pillow-case.

We have, nevertheless, some facts, and we do not hesitate to take the lid from our information for a spell in order to give the hungry public a peep.

The leader of the gang was Corrie B. Dawkins of South Carolina, not North Carolina. Some think she is from North Carolina but that is incorrect. It is South Carolina. There is all the difference in the world between the two Carolinas. Anyone having any doubt about that had better look up a few points about the history of the South. Corrie B. Dawkins, leader, elected by a plurality of one vote. There were 12 voters and only 11 candidates.

Her associates—all of whom are now being carefully shadowed were: Misses A. D. Smith, R. F. Boden, E. M. Kimball, N. Murphy, E. J. Dahl, L. M. Olson, M. Olson, A. L. Williams, R. Z. Hildebrand, J. Smith and L. B. Elliott.

GUESTS AT PROM

Two Manitowoc Students to Attend Box Parties at Event
February 16

Two Manitowoc students at the University, will be members of box parties at the Junior Prom, the university social event to be held this year on February 16, the name of Edward J. McMahon being listed among guests who will be entertained by the Sigma Alpha Epsilon and S. J. Killen, Cato, being a member of a private box party. More tickets have been given out for the Prom than ever before in the history of the event and it will be the most elaborate social function attempted in university history. A number from this city may attend.

Galena Gazette: Eugene Wallace delighted his parents and the city at large by returning home for a short visit. Eugene is one of Galena's most favorite sons, and the University of Wisconsin will doubtless bring out his great qualities.

A Sage

John came home and found his boy filling the house with riot, banging madly on his drum, while his mother in the room sat serenely, unmoved by it.

"Madam," said the irate sire, "I would stop this noise, or try it;" "No you wouldn't," answered she "Were you vexed all day like me You'd do anything for quiet."

ALFRED HOEFER INTERESTED

Freeport Student Investigating System of Electric Lighted Train

Freeport Daily

Alfred Hoefer of this city, now a student at the University of Wisconsin, has just completed an important investigation of the train lighting system on the electric lighted train of the C., B. & Q. railway, running between Chicago and Denver. The work was carried on in company with E. Wray, of Janesville, and Edgar Kearney, of St. Louis, Mo., and was under the supervision of Prof. D. C. Jackson of the university.

fire was located. He imparted it to his men. Slowly and surely they surrounded the building. With great coolness they looked in at every window. After an inspection of half an hour, they came to the conclusion that the fire was in the cellar. One hour—but the roof still there.

One man was detailed to see what was burning in the cellar. He reported that the door was locked. Accordingly the whole department was sent around the neighborhood to find the key. After ten minutes it was found. Then the chief came to the conclusion that the key was not necessary, after all—the fire was already on the second floor. But ten minutes had been gained and they all respected their chief. One hour and ten minutes—the roof still there.

Next, the hose must be laid. The situation was critical. Every man must keep his wits about him. One hero discovered that he was out of plug. An inspiration! He dropped the hose which he was coupling, went over to a fellow-fireman for plug, borrowed a knife of another and then biting off a chunk with his teeth he calmly returned the knife and the plug. Then he returned to his hose. One hour and fifteen minutes—the roof still there.

Meanwhile it was found that the hydrants were frozen. Fate was smiling. But no! Those "cussed" students insisted upon thawing them out. In vain did the firemen cuss and swear and heap snow on the fire which the students had built. Would the roof come down before those hydrants thawed out? Would they? Desperately they heaped snow on the fire. It seemed hopeless, but lo! The roof was burning and the water came just a minute after. The last effort had won the day. They were proud, the people were proud, everybody was proud of the Madison fire department for such heroic delay. Their honor was maintained and now they could use the hose. Now was there a man dismayed? Cool, calm and collected, they set that hose, each man at his post. With a precision that will never be equalled they threw that nice cold water in a beautiful rainbow over the burning building. In beautiful torrents it fell upon those meddling students who were carrying out the furniture. Not one of them was overlooked. Each was given a good drenching, a fitting climax to the wonderful work of the department.

No prouder day will be recorded in the annals of the department, and every Madison citizen swells up with civic pride when he thinks of his fire department on that day.

NOBLE SPIRIT

STUDENTS AID WORTHY CAUSE

That the students of the University of Wisconsin stand ready to lend their aid to a cause that is truly deserving was plainly shown not long ago. At a certain congenial boarding house the students were discussing the Junior "Prom." Among the number was a good fellow known as Captain Richard A. Schmidt, who had no great liking for such social functions as a formal dance. When asked why he did not go to the Prom he put off his companions with the answer: "Well, I haven't got the money." But that was to be no excuse. It was quickly agreed among the boys that they would remove all financial difficulties and as that was the only obstacle, Schmidt would have to go.

There was no way out so he said he would, little thinking anything more would come of it. Captain Schmidt made the best of the matter by attending the Prom, when he was presented with the following contract:

Madison, Wis., Jan. 27, 1906

On consideration that Richard A. Schmidt attend the "Junior Prom" of the University of Wisconsin, which is to take place on February 16th, 1906, we the undersigned agree to pay Richard A. Schmidt the sum of fifty (50) cents each, said money to be paid on the day next succeeding said Junior Prom.

PROFESSOR DODGE

TO BUILD A SKATING RINK

It is rumored that Prof. Robert Elkin Neil Dodge, the all-western champion skater for the winter of 1905-06, is to build a skating rink on Lake Mendota next winter. This rink is to be just beyond Picnic Point where Professor Dodge spent many pleasant hours, and it was of the joys of sport here that he kindly informed his many friends. It is rumored that on one occasion he succeeded in enticing his faithful friend, Dr. Laird to accompany him and that this excellent gentleman was much surprised that Professor Dodge considered a cold bath in the lake before skating most invigorating. Indeed, he dropped quietly down into the cold waters as soon as he reached his much talked of glass-like ice.

Without doubt Professor Dodge's rink will be most popular and probably the cold baths will become a fad. The light reflected from the frozen skaters beneath the glare of the arc lights at night, will add much to the usual charm of an evening at a skating rink.

In humble mien
With hearts bereft
We thank our stars
For all that's left.

They've taken football,
Spirit, vim;
For sale or rent
Is our old gym.

They did the best
That they were able,
And empty is
The training table.

We humbly ask
And hope we may
With kindly leave
Still play croquet.

A CAMPUS CONVERSATION

"Say," said the baseball with the rip in the seam to the brand new leaguer, "I suppose you're going on a bat pretty soon."

"Yes, I feel pretty fly, why shouldn't I?"

"Well, keep your cover on. You'll go up in the air first crack."

"I call that a foul tip," put in the mask wearily.

Here the bat groaned, "If anyone else does that, I guess I'll have to strike out."

"Did you ever take a line drive?" squeaked an old glove, nudging the worn-out ball.

"Well, the last time I did, I went on a tear" returned the ball ruefully.

"Put him out," said the bat sternly.

"Can't you let me have my last inning?" rejoined the ball, "I'm done for. Why, I'm no longer even a good catch."

Just then the players came running on the field.

"I guess you'll be caught at the plate," remarked the home base, laughing.

"Now get onto my curves," boasted the new ball. The old glove muttered something about somebody being a leatherhead, and then the game began.

RECORD SMASHED

Professor Pyre's Remarkable Feat
on Lake Mendota

"SUNNY" QUITE AN OARSMAN

Perhaps the most notable event in the sporting world this week is Professor Pyre's breaking of the one mile record in the single shell. The scene of the triumph was on the course lying between Picnic Point and the University Boat House. In the cool of the evening an hour or so after old Sol had made his way to other parts, the great oarsman started from the "Point." He did not use the regulation shell, but had only an ordinary rowboat, burdened with cushions and dainty volumes of poems. Stranger still, his coxswain was a young lady,—some editors say it was a beautiful "co-ed." At first the coxswain called the strokes, but before a great deal of the course was covered she forgot her duty, and remarked on the beauty of the moonlight. Now Pyre having something of an aesthetic temperament himself, feathered his oars gracefully and joined his friend in great admiration for the moonlight.

In spite of these handicaps, Professor Pyre succeeded in breaking all previous records for the one mile course, covering the entire distance in 2 hour and 15 minutes.

FACULTY PLAY BALL

Stirring Game Between Professors

Our Special Correspondent Describes
First Contest of the New Faculty Baseball League.

BY A. REDHOT PHAN

Nov. 8—The first and second teams of the new faculty baseball league met in an exciting contest at three o'clock this afternoon on the lower campus. By special order of the President, all classes were suspended. Also by order of the president the fair-weather flag was hoisted on North Hall, thus insuring a cloudless day for the great battle.

An hour before the game was called, an immense crowd of students lined up on the sidewalks on either side of the campus. There were about thirty in all, not counting the Phi Beta Kappa delegates who occupied reserved seats in the balcony of the library overlooking the campus.

The clock in library hall struck three.

"Play Ball!" yelled Umpire John Hickey, carefully placing his hands in the pockets of his overalls.

"Hold on!" shouted Dean Henry, waving his hands in great excitement. "Are you sure there are no professionals on the teams?" Great beads of perspiration stood out on his brow, like brass knobs on a dog collar.

For a moment no one spoke. Then Doc Ely piped up absentmindedly and with some embarrassment, "I—I—forgot. Wait till I ask Anna."

The unwarranted discomfiture of the doctor was scarcely noticed, however, for Sunny threw himself into the breach with the witty remark, "Truly, Sir, whether there be professionals here may well be a matter for conjecture; but insooth there are many professors."

"Then that settles it," said Dean Henry. "Let the game go on. I used to play ball myself at Cornell." And he took another trip for his health to the sidelines.

The game as a whole was a most interesting spectacle. It was characterized by much deplorable roughness and brutality. Twice Doc Miller was hit in the head by a high ball. The second time he picked the ball up and put it in his pocket, declaring wrathfully that he would keep it if they didn't stop the roughness. Umpire Hickey threatened to take the matter into court if the Doctor didn't stop his "Blankety, Blank, Tantrums." This speedily brought the M. D. to terms and upon his returning the ball to the pitcher the incident was closed.

Benny Snow then took the stick. He connected with the first ball thrown, which was one of "Freddie" Turner's famous historical curves, and landed a safe hit out in right field. Benny was so enthusiastic over his feat, however, that he forgot to run to first. He danced up and down on the plate, shouting delightedly: "Dear me! Dear me! Ain't it cute? I did it! I did it!" This exhibition called forth a storm of applause from the spectators, and the instructors in the physics lab. turned a series of handsprings out of pure joy.

The game was frequently interrupted by zealous professors who wanted to assure themselves that it was being conducted strictly in accordance with Dr. Driedup's Rules of Propriety. Once at a critical moment, Trowbridge sprang into the diamond and in a most distressed voice asked Umpire Hickey if this were a formal or informal affair.

"They ain't nobody here a-wearin' dress suits, fur's I kin see," was the suggestive reply of the umpire.

"Then it must stop promptly at twelve o'clock," said Trowbridge, with determination.

At all times there was evident a sincere desire to play a clean, honest game. One of the professors, whose name was expurgated from this report by the censor of the University Press Bureau, had miraculously got around to second base. One of his team mates yelled, "Steal third! Steal third!" With an indecent show of brown hosiery he started for third, and was almost there when his conscience smote him. Steal third!? The very idea! "Would be a blot on the page of honest athletics! With fingers crossed he turned around and retraced his steps to second base.

The storm of applause which this extracted from the Phi Beta Kappa section had hardly died away when Professor Meyer took the bat. After sweeping a hasty glance over the field, however, he dropped the bat, planted himself squarely on the plate, folded arms across his altitudinous chest, and in stentorian tones shouted, "The game must stop right here! This has got to be straightened out!"

"Wat's de matter wid youse?" yelled the umpire.

The professor pointed a long accusing finger at first base—at second base—at third base. The bases were full.

"Wat's de matter wid youse?" insisted the umpire, growing at the same time wrathful and perplexed. Umpiring a faculty game was clearly getting on his nerves.

"You see that man on first base?" asked the professor.

"Shure!"

"And that man on second base?"

"Sure!!"

"And that man on third base?"

"Shure!!! Shure!!!" almost screamed the exasperated umpire.

"Well," said the professor with slow emphasis and great deliberation. "Well—what I want to know—with a man on every base—where shall I run to if I hit the ball?"

Hickey looked wildly around him for a moment, as if bereft of reason. He staggered like a man suddenly seized with apoplexy. Then the light of understanding slowly crept into his countenance. His look of wild amazement gradually gave way to an expression of supreme disgust.

"Rats!" he exclaimed, spitting heavily upon the ground.

"Rats! I'd clean forgot it was a faculty game!" Here he pronounced the game a draw and hastened from the field.

This trip will be made later by the same party.

HONORS FOR A WAUSAU BOY

Prof. Munro, of the History department of the state university was in the city yesterday. While here Principal Parlin asked him to recommend some one of his history students to take a position in our city school. Without hesitation Prof. Munro named Byron Kuhlman, son of our Asst. postmaster, as being the best one in his department. And it has been decided upon to offer Mr. Kuhlman the position now held by Prof. Lewis in our schools next year. Prof. Munro did not know, when the question was asked him that Byron's home is in Wausau. Tally one more for Wausau.

Mary had a little lamp,
She also had a stew,
And e'er the rosy morning dawned,
She had a nightmare too.

With stealthy hand he Strove to clip
One golden ringlet
From her head.
"Oh don't," then with Smiling lip,
"They are my sister Jane's,"
She said.

Q. Do you play football?

A. I have played for four years.

Q. What position did you have on the team?

A. Well, you know, I never really played on the regular team. Under the existing conditions the best men don't make the team.

Q. State what the existing conditions are.

A. Well, you see, King and Holt put in men like Remp and Vanderboom while much stronger players are kept out. The conditions should be changed. Men of ability should take the places of men who are "pushed in by a political pull."

Q. Were you ever hurt in playing football?

A. One time my eye was considerably blackened, but otherwise I never received any injuries. If a fellow plays a gentlemanly game there is slight danger. Some of the men on the team are too rough—I am decidedly in favor of a change.

Mr. Remp next testified in regard to the Y. M. C. A. as follows:

Q. What is your name in full?

A. Richard Willie Remp.

Q. Are you a student of the University?

A. I have for four years been enrolled as a scholastic of that institution.

Q. Are you a member of the Y. M. C. A.?

A. All the efforts of my vigorous constitution have been spent in the uplifting of that highly aesthetic organization.

Q. Is the association accomplishing its object?

A. Can such a question be even implied when a character so imbued with all the noble ideals which that organization sets forth, stands in your honorable presence?

Q. Are your prayer meetings well attended?

Hereupon Mr. Remp showed signs of deep emotion as he answered: "It is with the utmost sorrow, profound grief and most grievous pain that I am forced and compelled to inform you, and I do it with no conceit, that it is only when I am advertised to address these devotional assemblages, that there is a good attendance. (Here Mr. Remp carefully wiped his eyes with his cap.) The students I fear even then do not come for their own moral uplifting, so much as to gratify their curiosity concerning me. It appears that the many vicissitudes of life that I have experienced, my travel throughout the country, my varied associations both with men of lofty ideals and those whose diabolical machinations are ever deteriorating our social mechanism—it appears, I say, that these things have made my fellows feel that when I get up to speak, there is to be something doing.

Q. Will you state whether there is any truth in the charge that you have any cynical tendencies.

A. I am, gentlemen, entirely without any misanthropic atrabiliousness, esoteric anfractuositities of mentality or idiosyncrasies of personality, without any insinuatory manifestations of cerebellous imbecility. Such charges are made by those who seek to injure my fair fame.

Here upon the committee embraced Mr. Remp and dismissed him.

Mr. Walsh was next put on the witness stand.

Q. What is your name?

A. William T. Walsh, author and poet.

Q. Are you connected in any way with the Wisconsin Lit?

A. Yes, sir; Editor-in-Chief.

Q. Are the rewards of that position rich?

A. It is certainly a rich position.

Q. Explain more fully.

A. Our source of income is two-fold; first from subscriptions, second from advertising. But the students never pay their subscriptions and we have to take our advertising out in trade. The business manager, M. Mulcahy uses up all the livery and grocery ads and leaves the photographer's ads for me. I am averse to having my picture taken and glory is the only pay. But it is a great work I am doing for literature, so I am contented.

The final records of the investigation committee were completed with the examination of chairman J. M. Hoyt. Mr. Hoyt took his place on the witness stand with his usual manner of grace and ease. When he was asked whether things might not have been improved had a man been hired to run the prom he replied reflectively:

"Well I don't know; perhaps; but few men could be found who would have been able to run such a stupendous undertaking as this affair. To manage it a man must have clear insight, financial shrewdness, a knowledge of how true society conducts itself, world-wide popularity among men and women, and an attractive personality coupled with at least passable good looks. As I say, such men are not met with every day."

Q. "No," replied Mr. Taylor good naturedly, "and now Mr. Hoyt, as to house-parties, did you attend such a gathering?"

A. "Yes sir."

Q. Is it true that undue expense is incurred?

A. "Well of course certain repairs are always necessary in order to put an average fraternity house in readiness for such an event. Many pictures, hangings, vases, rugs, long-mirrors, etc. must be borrowed for all of which one is responsible. However, I ran our house-party as economically as possible"

Q. Is it true that many of our university girls are slighted at this time?

A. Yes, sir, it is. Most fellows prefer to take more stunning girls than are customarily found here in Madison. It is the one time when a fellow can duly impress his home-standing on his friends. It was not, however, necessary for me to import a lady. Besides, my standing is assured.

Q. Do many students pay the railroad fare of their young ladies?

A. For that answer, I can refer you best to Mr. Bill Volkman, State Street.

Q. Was the grand march a success?

A. It could not help but be, sir; I led it. Directly behind me were many of the most prominent members of the University.

Q. Can you state, Mr. Hoyt, as to whether the house-parties all had chaperons?

A. Yes, I am quite sure. Some of them had young married couples, who made excellent chaperons. Others prefer older people, some even aged. These latter make the best chaperons.

Q. Did any of the faculty attend the dance?

A. Yes, sir; Professor Phillips did, and I understand he had a hopping good time. Many of the other members of the faculty attended and—

Q. Thank you, Mr. Hoyt. That will do.

RECENT BOOKS BY PROMINENT AUTHORS

The Revellers

W. T. Walsh

"The Revellers" by William Tecumseh Walsh is the greatest novel which has yet come from this noted author.

Mr. Walsh introduces many jovial characters, among them Max Mulcahy, Pat Patterson, Guy Risley, Ole Ellefson and Mister Moon, and his delineation of these unique individuals is admirable. In this his latest work the author shows an easy and graceful style, a quaint philosophy, scintillating wit and a subtle suggestiveness so characteristic. The sales of the book are such as its character merits. Nineteen copies have already been inflicted upon the public. At last the American people has shown that it can actually tell what literature is.

"Who's Who"

"Who's Who in the University of Wisconsin" is a highly valuable volume published by the "Inner Gate." The board of the publication is composed entirely of members of the society which has so kindly assumed the task of defining those who were really great among us, and naturally all the celebrities mentioned are likewise affiliated.

Deutsches Liederbuch

German Faculty

Deutsches Liederbuch is the title of the new text book which the German Department has published. For many years this faculty has felt the need of a highly elevating and truly literary work of this kind. Such a soul inspiring selection as "Bedenklichkeiten" which pictures the difficulty of avoiding lamp posts and of keeping one's feet on the sidewalk will surely elevate the morals of Wisconsin's children. Besides producing immense moral growth, the sale of this book will enable the German Faculty to have "Zwei Beer und Pretzels" and silver topped steins at their many Fests. The appearance of this publication shows that college professors are no longer satisfied with secluded lives, but feel that each one should get out a book of some kind and thus spread his culture and refinement.

The Growing Complexities of Modern Legislation

Don E. Mowry

We are in receipt of a pamphlet called the "Growing Complexities of Modern Legislation." The writer points out the many difficulties and intricacies of present day legislation, and makes suggestions which will in all probability simplify the work of the law-makers. Every legislator should have a copy of this work. If he will send his name to Mr. Mowry, a copy will be forwarded to him at once, as the author is making a specialty of distributing this his greatest production.

WOMENS SUPPLEMENT

Woman Beautiful

Note: Those wishing the editor to answer their questions must enclose postage stamp.

Helen D.—Are white stockings with patent leather pumps correct to wear with a dark skirt?

Marion W.—How would you suggest making a spring suit for a girl who is just the least bit inclined to look stout?

Selina A.—Please give a fair young girl some idea on the latest ways of dressing hair.

Hattie M.—I have a new white China silk waist. Shall I line it? Also a mull one which I intend to use for iceboating this winter,—is a lining necessary?

Edith S.—I am a dashing brunette. Is red too conspicuous for me to wear.

E. Gaynor—I have an old seven-gored black taffeta skirt. I am tired of the two inch, machine-stitched, bias folds that trim the skirt from yoke depth to hem. What would you suggest to change it? I am majoring in English.

Gene S.—I have often found comfort in the following:

“Little gobs of powder,
Little daubs of paint,
Make the little freckles,
Look as if they ain't.”

Ada W.—Are veils still fashionable?

Bob O.—Recipes for Cream Marquise, Orange Flower, Skin Food and Astringent Wash will be mailed on receipt of self-addressed envelope.

Elvira W.—See answer to Gene S. As you are subject to freckles, you will find a chiffon veil a great protection. When the real hot summer comes, wear a sun-bonnet on the hill. When daintily made these little bonnets are most becoming and picturesque.

Jerry C.—A good curling fluid may be made of two parts of library paste to one of rosin, diluted with equal parts of gin and bay rum.

The fancy dress ball of the Cheap Skates was given last week at K—s. All participants were masked, and various characters and things were portrayed in an able manner. Hard Luck Taylor appeared as a mut but needed no mask to fill this part. The Schlitz Brewery was taken off by an able representative, Keg Uihlein, whose red face showed the effect of too careful study of his subject. Gerry Browne scrambled like an egg during the evening, and his antics caused much merriment among those present.

Miss Alma Bertles who recently ran for Secretary of the Self Graft club but was defeated by a small vote, is now on her vacation. She has gone up to Neenah, to make a thorough study of the men who are working in the bank at that place. It is needless to say that Pink Cheek Kimberly is working there, and now holds the responsible position of Basket cleaner. This is a good subject for Miss Bertles to study, and it is earnestly hoped that she will be successful in her work. (Hard Luck Gerry.)

The University of Wisconsin Announces a New Course in Applied Fussology

Admission

Students are admitted to this new course without examinations; no accredited courses are prerequisite. Students and graduates of normal schools, however, are not allowed to elect any work in this department.

Time of Entrance

New students usually enter this department in the fall of the year, with an increase of fifths as the spring waxes warm. To those who need to strengthen their preparation, advantage may be taken by continuing their prescribed courses during the summer session.

Students dropped from regular university courses during or at the end of the first semester may not feel it incumbent upon them to discontinue their work in this special department. The Wisconsin Academy offers inducements to especially ambitious students or private tutoring may be arranged for. We especially recommend the Charles Miller Bigelow Method; or "Short Cuts" by Steevens and Nevius.

Entrance Requirements

The requirements for students who wish to elect this work are stated in terms of units. The term unit means seven daily recitations a week for one year. In closely allied branches not usually taught in periods of one year each, such as Learning - Sorority - Telephone - Numbers and Sponging - Pal - Checks From - Your - Friendsology. Units may be construed by adding the respective time values of such studies.

Fifteen hundred units are required for graduation. The requirements for degrees in this new branch are presented under two general heads:

I. Studies required of all.

II. Optional Groups.

(I) The following units are required of all:

Calling . . . 10 units

Strolling . . . 5 units

Driving . . . 5 units

Jollyng . . . 10 units

(II) In addition to the requirements under (I), 89 units from one of the following groups must be offered:

Group A

(a) Course in General Fussing (offered by Profs. Brown, Phillips and Imbush.)

(b) Ethics of Prinking; (Profs. Montgomery, Gascoigne, Hoffman.*

(c) Science of Spooning; (Profs. Howard, Simpson, Associate Prof. Dearing.*)

(d) Elements of Middletonging; (Profs. Hoyt, Stevens, Cochrane.)*

(e) Theory of Paling; (Profs. Law, Volkman and Thiermann.)

Group B

(a) Library Appointments; (Profs. Quarrels and Meyer.)

(b) Δ T Porching; (Profs. Hoyt, Spooner, Brown, Cochrane,* Steevens, etc.)

(c) Possibilities of the Spoon-Holder; (Profs. Moles, Simpson, Gaffin.)

(d) Googooing; (Profs. Underwood, Howard, Conger.)

Our Little Readers

Every week it is our custom to devote this page to the little folks among our readers. It is a delight to receive their childish questions, and see how they begin to busy themselves with thoughts of things which will some day engage their attention. Their frank and ingenuous letters are often original and interesting, doubly so by reason of their being free from any affectation. We enjoy hearing from these clever children, and promise next week to answer as far as possible the questions asked.

Dear Miss Editor: I have a new dog. My but he's cute! He has four legs, one at each corner of his body. He is only two months of age, and he is black, except his nose which is white. I like my dog. Mother says he's just like me, into everything. Well I must close, so good bye.

Your loving little friend,
PETER SCHRAM, 5 years old.

My Dear Editor: I am six years today and I thought you would be glad to know it. They say I am a bad boy. Isn't it right to fight with boys? Yesterday I slapped Tracy Burke,—he's always picking on me. He thinks he's big because he can steer a boat. Well I slapped him good. Papa said I had to take a spanking or go without my birthday cake. I took the spanking. It wasn't nice, but the cake was fine. I am going to be good now, but I don't think it's bad to be bad, do you? I am,

Your little friend,
WARREN GELBACH.

I took a lesson in fussing yesterday, and had my picture taken so you could see how I did it. I have learned much better now. Please put my picture in your paper, and I will be,

Your nice boy,
ROBERT SHELDROP.

My dear Miss: Please be so kind as to tell me what boys are good for. I can't see. But I am young and maybe don't know as much as you. Mamma says I shouldn't say such things, but I think boys are perfectly horrid. Yesterday I saw that naughty Cody Clark playing marbles for keeps, and he wouldn't even speak to me. Isn't they terrible? Here's a picture of one of the naughty little things.

Your friend,
MONA TRAILL, 7 years.

I am pretty big and have a cat and dog and I think I will send you my picture.

Good-bye,

Miss Traill is taking up the study of mineralogy, giving especial attention to Orr.

Miss Jennings is specializing in law.

Miss Kellar is seeking out the complicated relation of Persons.

Miss Harris goes in for the Stearn realities.

Miss Carey is giving general study to the languages, with special stress laid upon French.

Miss Murchinson has gone into horticulture and the cultivation of Bartlett pears.

Miss Burnham has begun her work on the analysis of Snow. Her sister is in a similarly unique profession, the erection and destruction of Castles.

Miss Bertles has gone into a Browne study on the art of jollyng.

Miss Wallis is tracing out the strange, psychological question of "What I am and how I've Bennett."

Miss Hunter is going in for forestry work and Bush cultivation.

Miss Davidson is examining the heating capacity of certain kinds of Cole.

Miss Gapin is working up a monograph on the "Benefits of Sleep."

Miss Whitney has recently taken a stand against slang. She is trying very hard to abolish "aint" for its correct and harmonious equivalent "Arndt."

Miss Etter is making a thorough study of tribal organizations in Scotland, with special reference to the "Mac" tribe.

Real Estate News

Last week six lots were sold in the Camp Randall Subdivision. This beautiful addition to the the city building property was once famous as the scene where many barbarous football games were played.

The old gymnasium passed from the ownership of the University on Tuesday last. The consideration was comparatively small, owing to the fact that the college authorities were glad to dispose of the structure. It is reported that the purchasers, the W. C. T. U., intend to use the building for their conventions, and that a kindergarten and sewing school will be opened on the second and third floor.

BUILDING NOTES

G. Browne has foreclosed his mortgage on the Delta Gamma house. As soon as the present occupants move, Mr. Browne will commence extensive repairs, preparatory to his taking up his residence there.

The Conover property was sold Monday to Henry Kimberly. It was thought that Kimberly would tear down the present structure and start a new block. He tells us that the site is to remain as it is, for he bought it merely that he might preserve one of his favorite college day haunts. There is no truth in the rumor that

Mr. Kimberly will move to Madison, as his arduous duties as messenger boy for the First National Bank of Neenah will keep him there for years to come.

The popular American House at Middleton has been sold, the purchaser being Robert Orr. The new owner has made great changes, remodeling the building in German Tavern style. All day the genial landlord sits out beneath the shade of a large elm where he drags his long German pipe after him and smokes it and sips from his stein. When a guest approaches, the landlord rushes out to meet him, and calls out to his pleasant spouse to prepare the best.

An Open Letter

To whom it may concern:

Hosts of my friends in the University, four or five thousand of them, recognizing my keen insight into things difficult and involved; also being familiar with my reasoning powers (I can argue on any question until "reason totters on its throne." Why, after I have talked to a fellow for a few minutes he can step out and commit murder without the slightest regard for consequences), have entreated me to submit to writing a few remarks on the subject; "Is it necessary to remain four years in college."

I do not think that it is necessary to remain four years in college. The associations out in the world are about the same as those we have here. I, however, recall having one association last spring which I believe that no other climate can duplicate. I wore a guy-rope around my head for a fortnight to steady my unreliable brains, and at study had to suspend my head in a loop from the ceiling. This, however, is an exception. I believe that every locality has its monstrocities. As a general rule outside of University circles one is greeted in the same affectionate way prior to elections, and the hand grasp of those who are anxious to give your dad's coin the distinction of being in their pockets is as warm as any sample we have here.

Then you have the fast life. What about that? you inquire. (You see I'm already getting argumentative). We have the example of S. Latshaw who kept up such temperature about his person while in college that the cold world sizzled when he struck it. Stan ups shortly after he thus landed and, nothing daunted, proceeded to move over the country at the usual speed, leaving each succeeding locality after sowing the seed for a choice assortment of duns for the dead letter office at Washington, D. C.

Stan's business associates are very enthusiastic about him. They keep up an unrelenting correspondence in regard to him with said dead letter office.

Then there is the question of a degree. Of course everybody wants their degree. I wouldn't leave here without one myself, yet I think that to adopt the course of some who get the same in less than four years is advisable. I have in mind a young fellow who bought his diploma. He got it at a reasonable figure too. The time has come when the callow youth in the high water trousers off the Wisconsin farm gets some advantage from the highly specialized processes of today. The bold and calculating youth to whom I refer is Reuben S. Peotter. I don't know exactly how long he was at Wisconsin, but he couldn't have been here much more than a year. One day last fall he walked into the office of the Registrar and observing that Mr. Heistand was absent he leaned carefully against the counter and, removing the rubber heels from his shoes and adjusting them to his voice, inquired of Miss Wilkinson if he couldn't make arrangements to get his diploma for his baccalaureate degree, (Miss Heuer witnessing the incident).

Miss Wilkinson gave him a scalding side glance, (seen by Miss Heuer) and turned to Miss Evans who was discussing a question in metaphysics or "who lost the proof" with Prof. Olson (which was also seen by Miss Heuer). After a few words she turned to Mrs. Timberlake (Miss Heuer looking on) and addressed her with a few burning sentences. Mrs. Timberlake wank the wink of the knowing, (Miss Heuer looking on), upon which Miss Wilkinson searched every desk in the office and finally leaning over and thrusting her hand deep into Miss Evans waste basket (Miss Heuer seeing her), she hauled forth the necessary document, (which was seen by Miss Heuer). She stepped forward to the counter, "This will cost you fifty cents, Mr. Peotter." With an expression of satisfaction and gratitude on his face (observed by Miss Heuer) Peotter handed her a hot and lonely four bits, and walked out of the office (Miss Heuer looking on till the lamp of experience flickered and went out).

This was a commendable transaction on the part of Peotter, but it was discovered later in the office (Miss Heuer looking on) that the diploma didn't bring enough money. There-upon Miss Wilkinson wrote to Mr. Peotter, (Miss Heuer seeing her so write) to the effect that sheep were very scarce; that two sheep-skin factories up north were obliged to close up on account of this shortage; that diplomas were very rare and as a result were selling at a slight advance in price that season. Would Mr. Peotter kindly consider these facts and commit them to memory to the end that he be able to persuade his friends to loan him an additional dollar, and with greater kindness still, would he not forward, or deliver in person, said dollar to the office of the Registrar to help defray extra expense incurred in procuring the above mentioned diploma. Mr. Peotter, considering that the deal was a good one at any price, promptly delivered the extra one dollar to Miss Wilkinson (all of which was seen by Miss Heuer).

I have no doubt that Peotter will some day write his name with every degree in the catalogue trailing after it so that when he turns Horse-Shoe curve on the Penn. Road he will be able to see the hoboes on behind, as it were.

He is already cooking up a scheme to get a masters decreed. 'Tis said that he wants to satisfy the thesis requirements for the same by his bachelor's thesis, which was an investigation of lovers lanes on the upper reaches of the Du Lievre River, Quebec, with a general treatise on the subject, "Is Marriage a Success."

While the scheme may again work satisfactorily we would strongly advise Mr. Peotter against repeating the use of the same thesis more than two times. "You are liable to work a good thing to death, Pete."

Is it necessary to remain four years in college?

Yes, most emphatically and unequivocally it is not necessary to remain four years in college.

THE FIRST DISCOVERY OF THE CENTURY --SUBDUE-INE.

Most College Men SHOULD Take It!

Some College Men MUST Take It!

If you have any surplus energy you should indeed use my remedy. It will direct the course of your action into useful and profitable channels. It will convert your passion for hazing into a desire to write poetry! It will destroy your love for highballs and beer and create a liking for cocoa and soda! It will kill any inclination to spend your evening at Keastner's or the Joneau, and on the other hand build up within you a real desire to seek quiet society! Keg-parties will be rendered to you absolutely repugnant!

Subdue-ine Endorsed by our Patients.

Mr. Sumner B. Rogers of 428 Sterling Court says:

"I add my humble word of recognition to those of the thousands who have been benefited by Subdue-ine with all my heart. I used to be shiftless, spending my evenings carelessly, seldom appearing at my home, 428 Sterling Place; whereas, now I am able to spend my evenings where I ought to. So well have I improved my time that I have learned to write poetry. (By the way, my poems have made a great hit with a dear friend of mine.) I used to have a passion to surround myself comfortably with some conveniences and relate incidents of ancient historical interest to my friends or to myself, but I am glad to say that I have been freed from that propensity. S. B. R.

"I am glad to corroborate all of Mr. Rogers' statements. If anyone knows of the truth of this, I ought to. I have been a constant companion of Mr. Rogers for many months and know what I am talking about. If more men would adopt the use of Subdue-ine, there would be more happy girls in Madison."

Evangelist Stearns Pleads with Large Audience

MANY SIGN PLEDGE

Last evening at the First Methodist Church Evangelist Edward W. Stearns faced the biggest audience that has ever gathered to listen to the cause of temperance.

Professor Lenny Smith with a few well chosen words introduced Mr. Stearns to the audience, which greeted the portly temperance worker with cheers and cat calls. Mr. Stearns was visibly affected by his reception. With trembling voice he thanked those present for the reception they gave him. "I am going to tell you of the life of one who was rescued from a life of drunkenness and brought to one of temperance and righteousness," began Mr. Stearns. He then told the story of his own life. How he was brought up in the slums of Chicago, and early acquired a craving for intoxicants; how he went from worse to worse, until at the age of 20, friendless, penniless, a degraded sot, he found himself one night walking rapidly toward the Clark Street bridge, fully determined there to end his miserable existence. But as he walked the song of a band of Salvation Army workers on the corner came to his ears, and, scarcely knowing why, he pressed into the crowd of listening idlers. Tears stood in the evangelist's eyes as he described what followed, how, touched by the earnestness of the little band, he gave up his awful purpose and was converted.

At the close of these remarks Miss H. Harris of this city sang that wonderfully appealing song "Oh where is my Wandering Boy Tonight." A collection was then taken and Evangelist Stearns in sweetly undulating tones urged all present to come forward and sign the pledge. Among those who signed were Robert Orr, Harry Montgomery, DeWitt Poole, Ole Johnson, H. C. Gaffin, Norman Kimball.

To the Sunday Cardinal

Madison, Feb. 16, 1905.
Mr. G. S. McConochie,
Editor:

Sir: I am proud to be classed as one of your admirers. I have a sincere regard for you; I admire the way you immersed from obscurity and swung into the editorial saddle, as it were, which you now occupy. I do not believe that any other man in your previous position could have accomplished that feat. Nor should he! I think you are making a strong bid for public notice; for example pitching with your left hand or signing your name G. Stewart. These little things cannot help attracting attention. You also have the knack of mixing in things sufficiently to keep yourself constantly in the public eye. All of these I wish to commend in you most heartily.

In a broader way I would like to state that you have become very popular and quite the rage. I think that you are everywhere recognized to be the real editor of the Daily. I, therefor, come to you for advice, having as I do, an ambition to become recognized in the literary world. I write extensively, yes. And some of my stuff has been accepted by my home papers. I have clipped these and enclosed them in this letter. According to what literary merit they possess I hope to be judged.

Kindly be frank and unreserved with me.

How do you like the first one? You will observe that I spelled the important words incorrectly. This was done merely for emphasis. I wanted to bring out as strongly as possible the fact that Philomathia did not deserve that decision. I have met the men who acted as judges on that debate on several occasions since and I invariably cut them. I believe that judges should be honest or suffer the bitter consequences. So I cut them on the street.

I think the one about my last year's oration is good. You will notice how well I bring out the fact that Loeb should never have won over me. That verse to "Mary" I think is good. I want to uncover my heart to you, Mac. I don't often uncover my heart, the breezes from the cold world chill it, so to speak; but I want to be frank and out-spoken with you. Honestly, Mac, do you think that I show my love for her fully in that verse?

"My love for you, Mary, is as pure as
The red on the burnished dome
When leisurly strolling prior to the gloom-
ing,
In the evening, the cows come home."

Now Mac, I hope to hear from you at your earliest. If there is anything I can do for you—if writing your editorials is getting to be too much of a burden on your staff—I will put pen to paper willingly to help you.

Yours fraternally journalistical John E. Baker.

The Development of a College Man

THE FRESHMAN

I wonder if instructors know
That all the students hate them so;
This college life's a downright bore,
And here I'm stuck for three years more;
I wish I had a job instead
Of trying to improve my head.

THE SENIOR

My college days are nearly o'er,
These fine old halls I'll haunt no more;
I never thought a place could be
One-half as dear as this to me;
And now to think my classic face
Some dirty office soon must grace!

If in class you chance to notice
That a friend of yours has cut,
And when roll is called you answer to his name,
'Tis embarrassing to have him,
E'er your mouth has fairly shut,
Unconcernedly walk in upon the game.

Five Cents Worth

Bold Max, the Mighty Manager,
By the nine Gods he swore
That bucking stupid text books was Becoming quite a bore.

He cursed his books till out of breath,
He cursed them then some more;
And had the books a soul to damn,
They would have trembled sore.

Then out into the chilly night
Bold Max Mulcahy went
And vowed he'd paint the dull town red
Till his last cent was spent.

He wandered on from street to street,
A wild look in his eye;
And at the end of every block
His spirits ran more high

He kept upon his aimless course
Until a hall he spied,
Whence came the sound of shuffling feet;
"Ha! ha! a" dance! he cried.

"Now shoot me if I don't go in
And show the Reubens how.
If they don't like my style there'll be
A chance to raise a row."

Into the House of Mirth he went
With studied steps and slow,
And picked him out a buxom maid
He might have used to know.

They danced a polka, then a waltz,
And then a two-step gay
Max jollied to a fare-thee-well,
For that was Max's way.

Now while all this was going on,
Her swain stood dismal by;
He glared at Max with lowered brow,
And hatred in his eye.

Eleven dances passed this way,
But e'er the twelfth was due,
The angry swain called Max aside,
And said, "A word wid you."

"Fer just two cents I'd poke yer! See?
An' batter in yer phiz;
Fer jest two cents I'd smash yer head,
An' put yer out of biz!"

Bold Max quailed not, though somewhat pale,
Nor sidestepped out of range;
He gave the guy five cents, and said:
"Take this and keep the change!"

Next day found Max with two black eyes—
Convincing evidence
That his opponent must have giv'n
Full measure for five cents.

A Fable

Once upon a time there lived a Wise Gazabe, whose name was Glen Snider. He was so far ahead of other people that he was simply beyond the horizon of Ocular Demonstration.

One day he got next to the idea that game laws over at Waunakee were being mistreated. People were catching fish while the game wardens had their fingers crossed, and it wasn't fair.

Glen is a philanthropist, so he had himself made a game warden, and blew over to Waunakee to revolutionize things. Perhaps he thought he might seduce a reward or two and turn over a little dust on the side. I don't know, Glen doesn't like to talk about it now.

Anyhow, he alighted at Waunakee, and before he had time to borrow a cigarette paper his detective's intuition rang the call bell. He got busy with his lamps and spotted an uncouth rube who looked like fresh fruit. (Snider's a good judge of fruit.)

The rube was carrying a bundle under his arm. The bundle was wrapped up in a newspaper, and out of one end stuck the tail of a big pickerel. Cinch! thought Glen, and began planning how he'd spend the money. Just like having it fed to you with a spoon. He gently tapped the native on the shoulder, and said in the indifferent tones he had read about:

"I want you!"

The culprit made a transparent show of innocence, and stammered

"What for?"

It was no use. Snider pulled back his coat and affectionately caressed his star. Perhaps he thought it was his lucky star. I don't know. As I said Glen doesn't like to talk about it.

The poor wretch showed fight, but the arm of the law was too much for him. He was finally induced to accompany the new game warden into the waiting room of the depot, where the disclosure might be witnessed by all.

"Open that bundle!" commanded Snider.

"Oh, please, Mister—"

"Open that bundle!" fiercely.

The good people gathered around, while the morning paper was torn from the bundle.

Inside was a board, to which was nailed the amputated tail of a pickerel.
MORAL—Don't believe everything you see in the newspaper.

If you chance to miss the dog
That always follows you around,
And you search to find the faithful friend of yore,
'Tis embarrassing to happen
On the unsuspecting hound
Waiting patiently at Ferdy Kaestner's door.

The Cheerful Prospect

Routine of College Life

The habits of the student have become so regular that one can tell the time of day from what he is doing.

Extracts from Mildred's Diary

Sunday.- In the afternoon, went driving with Walter. Ended at Middleton- Glorious moon. He is such a dear.

Monday.- Walked down the hill with W. S.-- He came to see me in the evening

Tuesday.- No sign of Walter.- Can he be ill? Must order some flowers.

Wednesday.- Still no word.- Is life worth living?

Thursday.- Life is worth living after all. He is going to take me to a high school party this week.

Friday.- Coasting with same.- Glorious time.

Saturday.- Ice-boating with Walter. Phi Delta party.- He asked me to the Prom.- At the Phi Delta house too. We do certainly have the fellows at the Varsity.

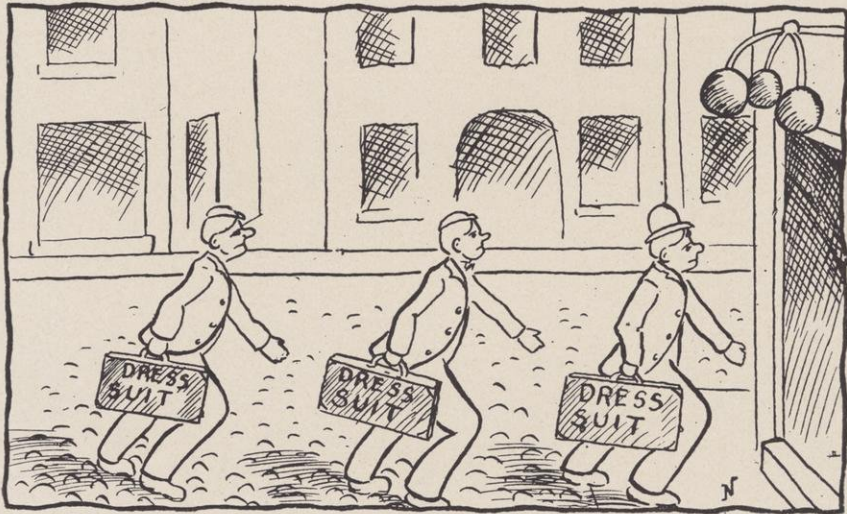

Z may stand for Zero
Which in quizzes you may draw;
'Tis often apt to happen
But it is no standard law.
Now you mustn't be discouraged,
And you mustn't weep or pine,
For the years you spend in college
Are the best that you will find.
So compound your interest daily,
Subtract all fear and doubt,
Multiply your joy and love,—
The sum is worth figuring out.

The Celibate

When Prom's last lingering tete-a-tete
At last has served to amputate
The round of stunts that animate
This little burg collegiate,
And when the girls evacuate
The lonesomeness to mitigate,—
'Tis then the students expiate
The happy times that antedate
Their present thoughts disconsolate.
No more boiled shirts immaculate,
No more the fond protectorate
Of arms that shyly circulate
A waist that tries to deprecate
Proceedings quite so intimate.

No more good meals propitiate
The protest quick to emanate
From stomachs loth to tolerate
Renewed attempts to lubricate
Their inner workings delicate
With hash and eggs inveterate.
Instead, the bills accumulate
In magnitude quite adequate
To cause grave doubts to percolate
Through minds that failed to calculate
How fast the girls can separate
The boys from coin they extricate
From Father's pockets obdurate
By frequent notes affectionate.
So urged by thoughts disconsolate
With steps that fast accelerate
The students straightway gravitate
Down town where they can irrigate
Their sentiments unfortunate.

Spring Song

Recalling by-gone Badger Boards
Who pictured Spring's arrival
With rhapsodies that quite surpassed
A Methodist revival,
I hereby take my quill in hand
And try to wax artistic,
So look out, Spring, while I get next
To something eulogistic.

Dear Goddess who doth make the breeze
Caress our heated foreheads,
And kiss with equal tenderness
The optimists and soreheads,
Thou knowest not how sweet it is,
When rain has lightly fluttered
From sky to earth, to find our walks
With worms profusely buttered.

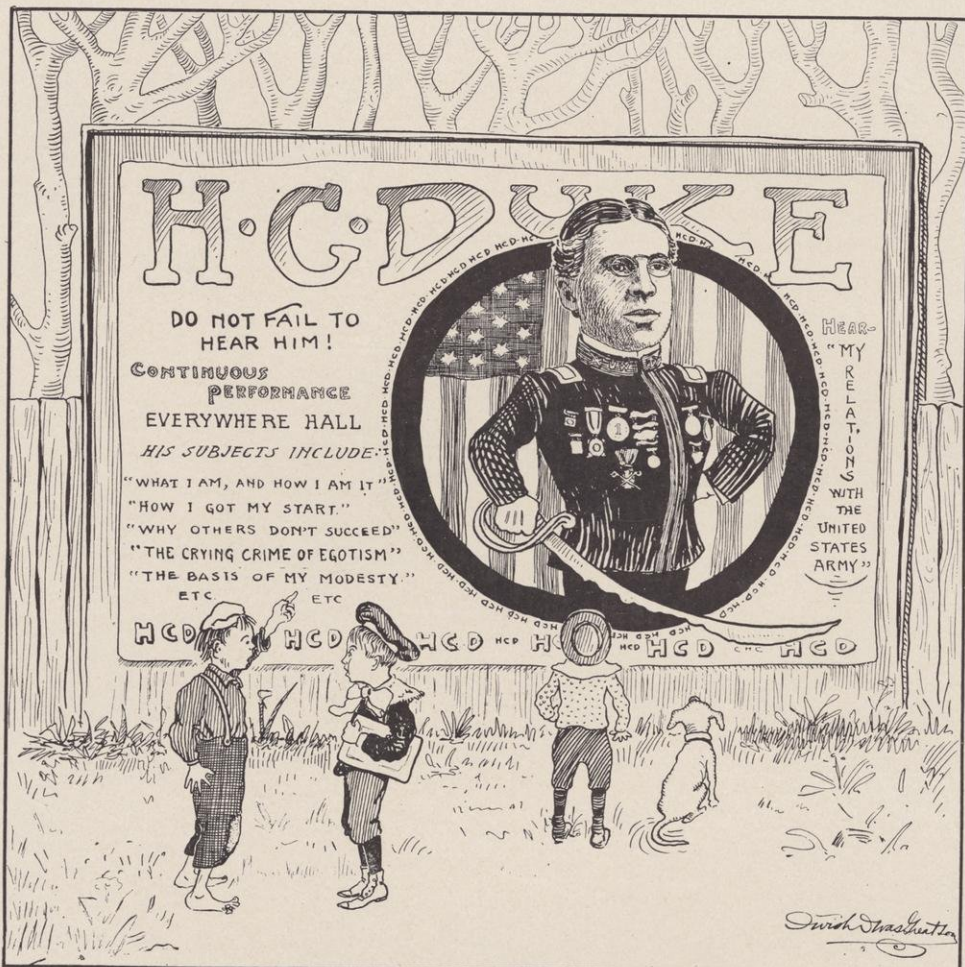

Thou Goddess who presideth o'er
Mendota's gentle flowing,
Thou knowest not what joy it is
To take your girl out rowing,
Thou knowest not that feeling queer,
When storms have started blowing,
To try to save the maid and find
How hefty she's been growing.

Thou Goddess who doth hover o'er
 That hushed and hallowed region,
 Where rests a worn and rustic seat
 Whose frequenters are legion,
 Thou knowest not how gladly we Re-enter on the season
 When we can sit upon said bench
 Without our trousers freezin'.

Thou shade of darkness brooding o'er
 The Discipline Committee,
 Incline thine ears unto the strains
 Of this our little ditty;
 Be not alarmed on noting how,
 With dry and thirsty candor,
 When Bock hits town we one and all
 Bock-ward forthwith meander.

And now thou Imp that madest me
 Begin this dulcet jolly,
 And hand out stuff that sounds as if
 I've slipped my mental trolley,
 Return I beg and seek the depths
 Of thy infernal chasm,
 And spare me from continuing
 This enervating spasm.

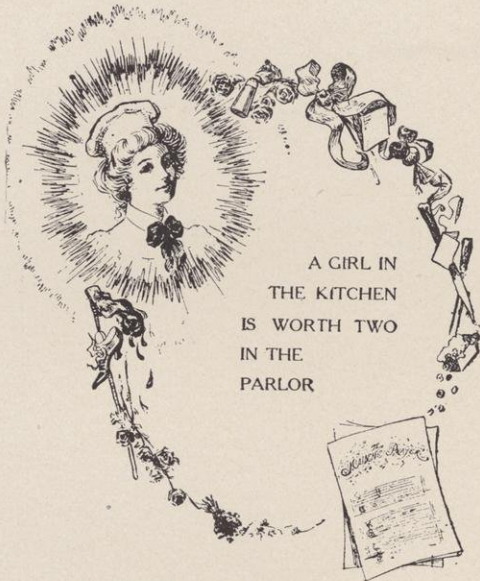

“Come here once, Jimmy, see dis guy,
Wid dis here stern gesicht;
Just tink of all de fights he’s had,
Tink how his sword is nicked.

“Dey say he’s simply all de cheese,
And shows dem all dere place,
And Hully Gee! it must be true,
Judgin’ from dat face.

“Get wise to all de medals dere,
Pinned up against his front;
I wish I didn’t have to be Such a little runt.

“My mama says as how he oncet
Was just a common kid,
And now Cap Curtis, when they meet,
Salutes and doffs his lid.

“And, Jimmy, if I mind my ma
And say my prayers and all,
Perhaps some day I’ll get to be A great big General.”

The Difference it Makes

A certain young Freshman was very unimportant about the University until recently when his papa bought him an automobile. Now everybody takes particular pains to speak to him, and even show more than a decorous deference. This is a striking example of a "machine made man."

Too Late, Cupe

Cupid Parker, without question,
Was designed fair hearts to bust;
He's put Hermes out of business,—
He's Adonis in disgust.

He's the Music Clubs' big drawing
Card when e'er they give a stunt
For the girls all love to watch him
Sitting bashfully in front.

But our Cupid has his troubles
Like his namesake, little Dan;
There are times, I think, when Wilfred
Is a most unhappy man.

Once the music clubs were playing
At,—but I'll withhold the name,—
I'm a friend of Cupe's and then you
Know, he's really not to blame.

For he saw a little giggle
Pass around the gathered throng,
And he could not help but feel that
There was somehow something wrong.

He began to get embarrassed,
As the giggle grew and grew,
And his face from chin to forehead
Took a mottled crimson hue.

Then he glanced around about him,
And 'tis said he nearly cried;
To his chair was hung the legend:
"TOO LATE FOR HERPICIDE."

The Girl and the Book

She sat within the reading room,
As studious as could be,
Eyes on her book, her face intent,
But not a glance for me.

I tried in vain to get her eyes
From off that stupid book;
I stirred about, I dropped my pen,—
She simply would not look.

I coughed a plaintive little cough,
She heeded not its pleading,
But slowly turned another leaf
And went on with her reading.

I sighed a sigh that floated forth
With longing deep and true,
I might have saved that sigh, for all
The good it seemed to do.

Meanwhile the hour of ten was near,
As I was well aware,
For soon the time would come, I knew,
When she would leave me there.

In desperation up I rose
And whispered in her ear;
She closed her book and quite forgot
To mark the place, I fear.

We wandered out beneath the trees,
Alone with stars and moon,
And all around was heard the sound
Of crickets' cheerful tune.

The shadows long, the crickets' song
Composed the simple setting;
The world seemed very far away,
Forgotten and forgetting.

We talked a language sweet and new
In voices soft and low,
We dived in lore that ne'er before
Had been given us to know.

And now we both are studying
One Book instead of two,
One Book of wondrous interest,
At once both old and new.

A Book that holds within its folds
A story without end;
The name is Life; on what we read
Our destinies depend.

The Literary Committee Judging Contributions

Miss Hinckley: "Isn't that perfectly grand?"

Mr. Bushnell: "Too sentimental to suit me."

Miss Flett: "Terribly funny."

Miss Swenson: "That's great."

Mr. Walechka: "Not half bad, but I do dislike to slam the girls."

Miss Minn: "Oh, I think that's dandy."

Mr. Cook: "I should think that would do very well?"

Miss Dahl: "I like that."

Miss Gilman: "Good work."

Miss Adams: "Who wrote it?"

Mr. Underwood: Too late to give opinion.

Miss Wehmhoff: "Ach! Sehr gut."

Mr. Krey: "Ha! Ha!"

Mr. Riley: "Don't slam my roommate."

Mrs. Schubring: "The idea might be worked out."

Inference

Hattie: I'm afraid these new shoes aren't going to look a bit nice.

Row: "Why? Are they very comfortable?"

He: "A rather drowsy looking couple over there."

She: "Why?"

He: "He does nothing but watch Mildred Gapen, and she nothing but watch Walter Sleep."

The Wise Old Owl

New Prof: "Have you ever had Vanderboon in your classes? Is he a really bright fellow? Does he know anything?"

Prof. Smith: "Know anything? Why he doesn't even suspect anything."

The Bells

A Modern Version

Hear the sleighs with their bells,
Silver bells!
What a heap of dad's good coin their melody dispels!
How they tinkle, tinkle, tinkle
Out to Middleton, so fair!
While the stars that over sprinkle
All the heavens, seem to twinkle
Quite forgetful of the pair;
How they spoon, spoon, spoon,
Underneath the pale new moon,
To the the tintinnabulation that so musically wells
From the bells, bells, bells,
Bells, bells, bells,
From the jingling and the tinkling of the bells.

Hear the mellow dinner bells,
Iron bells!
What a world of corn beef hash their harmony fortells!
Through the balmy evening night
Or the happy noontime bright,
From the molten iron notes,
From all around,
What a liquid ditty floats
To the hungry man that listens, while he gloats
On the sound.

Hear the loud electric bells,
Class bells!
What a world of ignorance their jingling dispels.
When their sounds the students greet,
How they rush upon their feet!
Too much overjoyed to wait
See how they all make straight;—
For the door!

Hear the tolling of the bells,
Calling hours!
What a world of solemn thought their monody compels!
At ten o'clock at night
How we shiver with afright
At the melancholy menace, and our fear,
For every sound that floats
From the rust within the throats
Tells us that the chaperon is near.
And the caller, ah! the caller
Must hike him to the hall, or
All alone he will be left.
And the one whose tolling, tolling
In this muffled monotone,
Fells a glory in so rolling,
On the caller's heart a stone.
She is neither man nor woman,
She is neither brute nor human,
She is but the chaperon.

IN MEMORIAM

“Reform” is the Angel that tore on its way
With a biff and a kick on that ill-fated day,
And what bit the dust like the old “One Horse Shay?”
The machine.

Reed Smoot from the Senate has lately been dumped,
And wicked insurance has recently slumped,
But what was most neatly and properly bumped?
The machine.

The powers of Righteousness all took a rap,
And jumped with both feet on that poor pile of scrap,
So what has discreetly thus moved off the map?
The machine.

But grim Evolution goes on as before,
And classes to come have machinists galore;
Throw it out of the window, it breaks in the door,—
The machine.

“I am Anti-machine,” is each candidate’s shout;
But as soon as he sees only friends are about
What’s he sure to start building, without any doubt?
The machine.

To enlarge on the stock that the Sophomores have shown
Each Freshman has made a machine of his own;
Then here’s to the greatest invention that’s known,
The machine.

Temporary quarters of the Badger Board

Dear Hib:

How is the sale of the Badger coming on?

Kindly let me know as soon as things have quieted down sufficiently so that it would be safe for us to return. Mrs. Selma Schubring is anxious to get back. You see it is causing them so much inconvenience.

The mosquitoes are a fright. You ought to see Lieber's face. I am glad he bought that "ad" we got from Nielson and had $36.00 worth of his photographs taken. He will never look like himself again.

Bushnell is seriously sick with the fever. It comes to him now that he must get a move on himself. The poor fellow is under the impression that the Book isn't out yet and he is sitting back of the tent writing stuff. Cora went out there and labored with him for an hour but he insists that he must write something for the Badger.

Elsie Adams, Cook and Wolf are out foraging.

Green brought in a large gump this morning and Bill and Margery Roberts are frying it for dinner. This with the potatoes, for which I negotiated with a farmer in the next township, and the bread Edith brought along will make about the best dinner we have yet had.

This fleeing from jeers and wrath and justice isn't all strawberries and cream. It has its dark side. This morning Elsie Minn wanted fruit for breakfast. What was I to do? When the waiter got her order, which was given in a stern voice, for a California orange she turned pale and called me out for a consultation. What could I do? I stepped into the cool air and stood for a long time wrapped in thought. Finally I divested myself of all the thought I had on and told her what was what.

I'll tell you, Hib, its pretty hard to get California oranges out here and keep your whereabouts in the dark. Some day I'll get mad and I'll yank my whereabouts out of the dark and take them right square into Madison, come what may.

Sarge broke down the second day we were here. I can't get him to eat anything. He even refuses coffee. Those unkind remarks H. Stark made about him are weighing on his mind. I think Henry could have overlooked that editorial of McConochie's in the Sunday Cardinal.

We keep up a careful watch day and night. Bessie, Helen, Elnora, Henry Swenson, Paul Johnson and Montgomery are on the day shift and they are out on the picket line now. Edith, Frida, Routh, McMahon, Riley and Underwood are on the night shift.

Yesterday Bessie spied Fred MacKenzie and Corrie Dawkins about three miles from here to the S. E. C. A. Taylor was also seen off in that direction. It was reported that he carried a hammer. To be safe we are going to move from here upon Section 27.

Don't confuse the location. Your messenger will find us on Section 27.

Sell the Books as fast as you can. Sell them all. I don't care to look a Badger in the face again.

Sincerely yours,
Jack.

	L'ENVOI
--	---------	--

In the twilight's cheerless shadow
I haunt the alley ways,
A dejected apparition
In a soporific daze

People stop and look and pity,
Some with scorn pass proudly by,
While I try in vain to vanish
From the gaze of mortal eye.

And they wonder as they see me
What sad blow has made me thus,
For to ease my bitter feelings
I cannot even cuss.

Gentle reader, if I tell you
The story of my woe,
For the sake of what I have been
You'll be merciful I know.

I was once a common student,
Self-respecting like the rest,
Plied my books and got my lessons,
My one failing all unguessed.

Till Ambition's poisoned cactus
Subtly bloomed inside my brain,
And the calm of my contentment
Was upset by hopes insane.

For the notion grew within me
I was not of common stuff,
But a literary genius,
And a diamond in the rough.

In my mind that Will F. Griffin
Wrote the poorest kind of trash,
And Jerome Jerome's productions
Were unmitigated hash.

My contempt for hapless Chauncey
M. Depew grew so sublime
That for all his witticisms
I prescribed Chloride of Lime.

I had pictures of my reigning
In an atmosphere of bliss
O'er the literary jugglers
That infest the U. of Wis.

So I had myself elected
To the literary ward
Of that hospital of Genius
That they call the Badger Board.

Gentle reader, pray be patient,
Kindly turn your head away,
While I irrigate my feelings
With the tears I cannot stay.

For I've seen a person roasted,
I have seen a football game,
But the pangs of misled Genius
Put such petty things to shame.

My dull pen's too weak to picture,
And my tongue's too weak to tell
How close we poor ink slingers
Set to Calorific Hell.

The unhappy plight of Tantulus
Who couldn't quite connect
With the water he was thirsting for,
Was hardly circumspect.

But with due regards to Tantulus
It simply isn't in it
With the plight of him who has to write
A verse and can't begin it.

But now emotion chokes me,
So this sorry tale must close.
For the lachrymal secretions
Are a-dripping off my nose.

But e'er we go our sev'ral ways
A moral is in order:
If you would keep away from grief,
Don't be a Badger Boarder.

THE DOUBLE VALUE

There are two values to everything. What it costs and what it is worth.

A loaf of bread costs only 5 cents, but to the starving man it is worth his life.

So there are two values to shoes made of

Trostel's Phoenix Kid

They do not cost any more than shoes made from ordinary leathers. But to a fastidious dresser they are worth far more. They are the most stylish shoes built. They are handsome as French Patent Calf, but much softer, easier on the feet, and outwear patent two to one. They never crack.

The finish of Trostel's Phoenix Kid is magnificent. Use but heightens and tones that original beauty. Ask your dealer for shoes made of Trostel's Phoenix Kid and be sure that one of these tags is attached:

What the sterling mark is to silver, Trostel's trade mark is to leather. It is the standard of excellence, unapproachable unapproachable!

QUALITY with us means constant, watchful care in everything that goes to make a first-class college annual. We give you the benefit of a wide range of experience in this particular line of work, both as printers, and as college men, and our aim is always to keep quality up and price down. Our equipment is of the best—both as to material and labor—and the promptness with which we turn out work has gained for us an enviable reputation among colleges throughout the United States. We respectfully solicit correspondence concerning any sort of college printing or binding.

MADE IN NEW YORK

THE best dressed men of New York have their sack coats shaped at the waist and of moderate length; they will not wear side or back vents. Their trousers have less of the peg top effect than was the vogue last season.

Alfred Benjamin & Co., whose tailor shops are a block from Broadway, a minute's walk from Fifth Avenue, faithfully adhere to every innovation in style.

AGENT FOR THE VISIBLE WRITING

OLIVER

The writing is visible, each letter being in plain sight the instant it is made, thus enabling the operator to be free from a nervous fear of making mistakes, and insuring at least twenty-five per cent more speed. Few operators realize how much time and force is wasted in lifting the carriage of a machine either from habit or to look for an imaginary error, or to find the location of a real one, or to make a correction, or to see if the correction has been properly made, and for many other reasons familiar to most operators. All this is avoided by the visible writing of the OLIVER.
