The libraries provide public access to a wide range of material, including online exhibits, digitized collections, archival finding aids, our catalog, online articles, and a growing range of materials in many media.

When possible, we provide rights information in catalog records, finding aids, and other metadata that accompanies collections or items. However, it is always the user's obligation to evaluate copyright and rights issues in light of their own use.

Not long ago I was travelling around looking for stories around what they used to call Fish Creek in the old fashioned way. Taylor Cornelius lives there and I showed up as three old men were there. So I listened to them talking. Then one of them wants to go home and he asked what time it way. So another one took out his watch and told him the time. Right away the other one took out his watch and there watches were different in time. So that man said we should trade and throw out the one whose watch is incorrect. Then they laughed at such a comical guy.
