Edgar Obma's studio looks out on the Main Street of Dodgeville and the proprietor, through the camera lens, views the Faces of Wisconsin. Mr. Obma has recorded these faces with great sensitivity over the past 30 years. Like the faces of people everywhere, they reflect the joys and sorrows, the successes and defeats, the innocence and wisdom that color the spectrum of human existence.

A Master of Photography and an associate of the Photographers Society of America, Mr. Obma is both competitor and judge at state and national levels. His portraits have been consistent award winners. He began his photographic career with the Oscar DeLonge Studio in Milwaukee and later studied in New York City with Nicholas Haz and Helene Sanders.

In the next eight pages we present a portfolio of Mr. Obma's portraits. The lines quoted with each photograph are, unless otherwise noted, Mr. Obma's own words. □

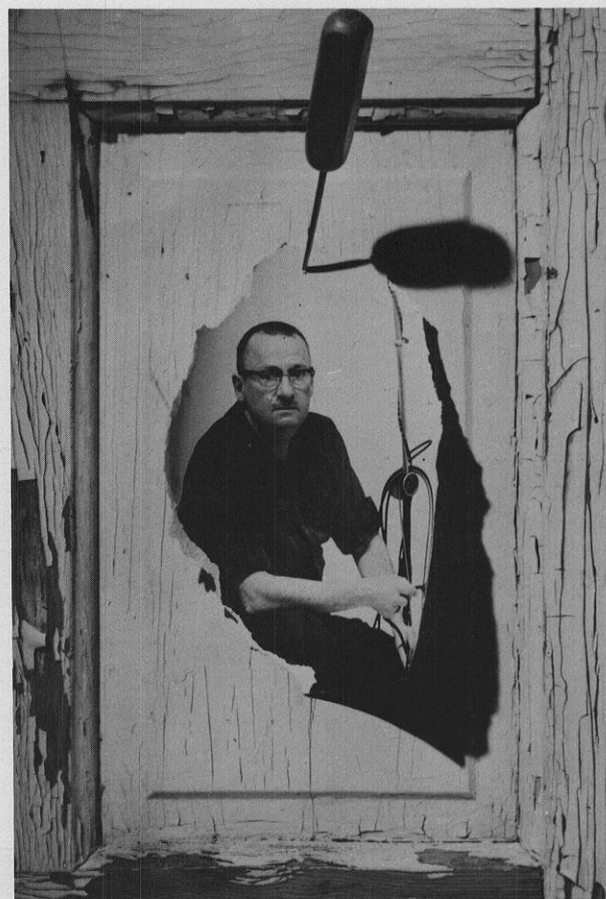

A Portfolio of Portraits

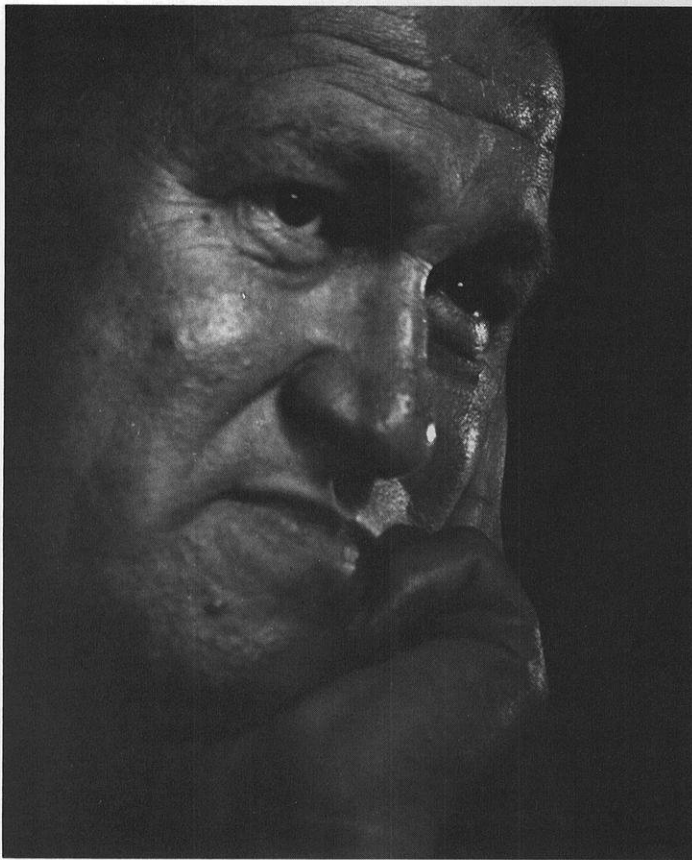

The Faces of Wisconsin

By Edgar L. Obma

When Aaron Bohrod, University of Wisconsin artist-in-residence, saw Edgar Obma's whimsical self-portrait done in Bohrod style, he wrote, tongue-in-cheek, "Edgar, I like the door!"

Mr. Obma promptly retaliated by sending Mr. Bohrod the door, which has since appeared in a Bohrod painting, "The Pieta."

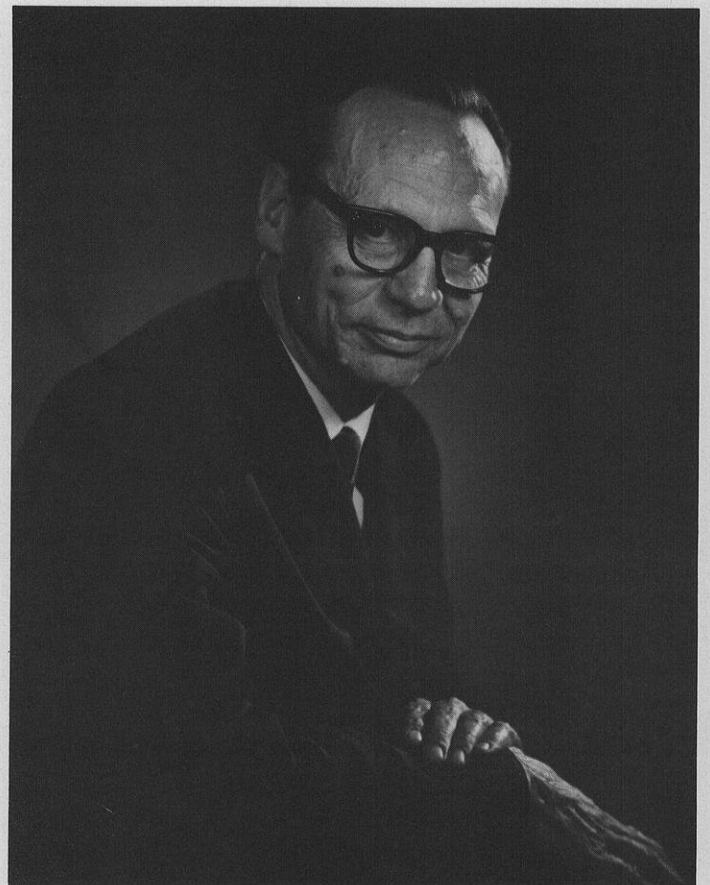

August Derleth, author

"August was a man of keen intelligence and rugged character—he was a good friend and an interesting man to know. He was very much an individualist who wouldn't compromise on principles. The story is told that August, who was a devout Catholic, used to stand up in church and challenge the priest about things he disagreed with. Not that he wanted to create a scene, but because principle was so important to him and he felt the truth just had to be the truth."

Robert Gard, professor of drama
University Extension writer-in-residence
Founder of the Wisconsin Idea Theatre

"I had never seen a photograph of Bob Gard that captured that Lincolnesque quality he has, so I called him up one day and asked if I could do a portrait. The Gard Theater was opening in Spring Green about that time and this portrait was used in the lobby. Bob is, by the way, the gentlest of men—there's a kind of serenity about him."

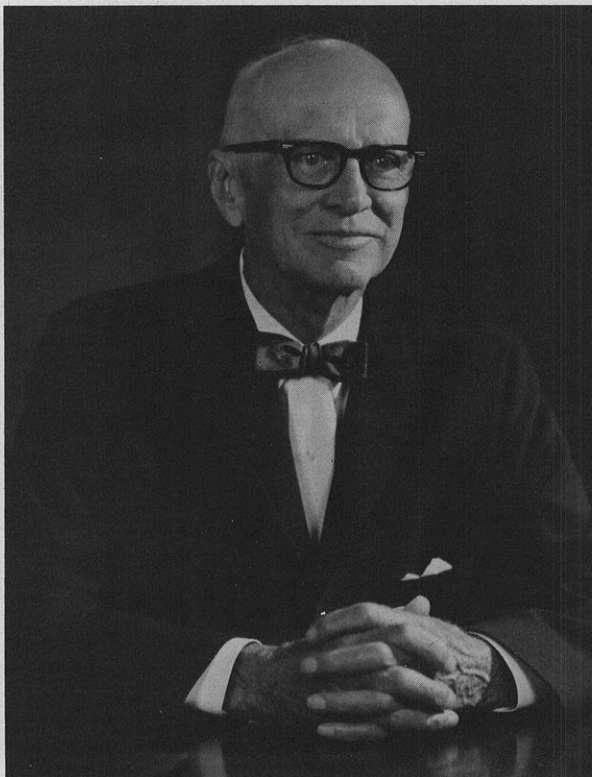

Anthony Logue

*"Isn't this a perfect little boy picture with the scuffed shoes and runny nose?
Anthony was the best of models—and all it ever cost me to get him to pose was a stick of gum.*

*If I wanted to take a picture,
he always looked at my pocket to be sure
I had that pack of gum.*

This was taken with available light and when I printed I concentrated on Anthony and softened all the contrasting lines in the background so they wouldn't distract from him."

Dr. Harry Steenbock,
Teacher, discoverer, benefactor

... with his scientific accomplishments he combines those other qualities — self-sacrifice, loyalty, unselfishness, and great integrity — which make him a man as well as a great scientist.

—Professor E. B. Hart,
University of Wisconsin

"There is, I think, a quality of warmth to this portrait. Dr. and Mrs. Steenbock had been engaged in a most pleasant conversation throughout the sitting—and I think that feeling is captured here."

Olgivanna Lloyd Wright

"I particularly like this print of Mrs. Wright. She looks so nice in profile and it shows her handsome white streak and that pleasant, relaxed expression. It was taken in the living room at Taliesin where all the furniture was designed by Mr. Wright. We used natural light so it took some manipulation to burn in the outside areas and bring out those nice sharp confirming lines."

Frank Lloyd Wright and Brandock Peters

"That day Mr. Wright had been sitting for me and I just wasn't getting any reaction or expression. Then young Brandock walked in and said, 'Grandfather, you look so sad—I can make you happy.' He playfully stamped his foot and Mr. Wright smiled and—bing! I had a picture. So I had Brandock sit with his grandfather and the two began to talk about Shakespeare and William Blake. The boy and his grandfather had great rapport and tenderness for each other and I think you can feel it in the picture. This is probably the most commented upon picture of the Wright series."

Gus Larson, carpenter

"Gus is another man whose look of character and facial textures appealed to me. This is the challenge to the portrait photographer—not just to get a 'likeness' but to bring out some of the individual. Gus was such a nice man and I wanted to show that he was a man who had worked hard, whose life had not been easy. This is the kind of portrait we like for competitions."

Etta Parsons Hocking, shopkeeper

... a graying, gay, gray-eyed little woman ... with a salty remark and the friendly smile that only Etta knew the secret of.

*—Frank Lloyd Wright
"An Autobiography"*

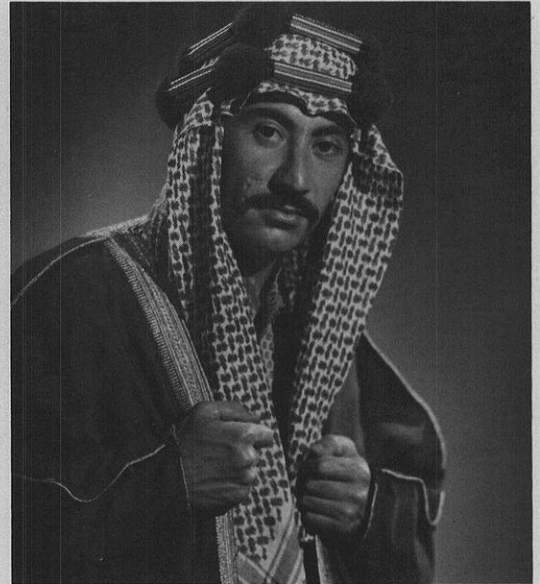

"Etta was a great friend of Frank Wright's—he would come into her store and cut off some sausage or cheese and open a box of crackers.

Then he'd sit down to talk awhile and have a bite of lunch. Sometimes if he was tired, he'd take a nap on a cot in the back.

Even now when there's a special function at Taliesin, they send a car down for Etta so they really appreciate her as an old friend. She's a lovely, lively lady."

Nezam Ameri, Taliesin Fellow

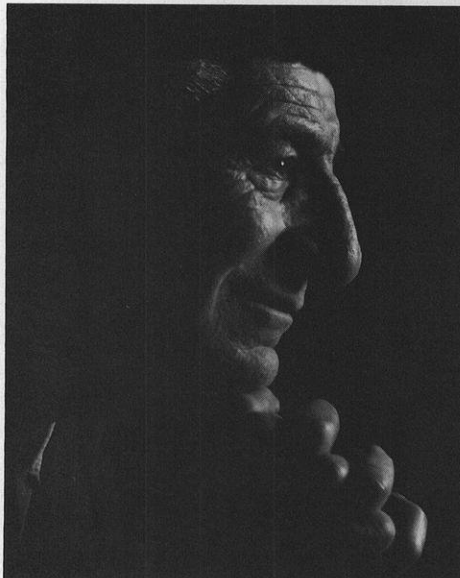

"The headdress that Nezam is wearing indicates royalty—his father was king of South Persia and the whole family suffered terribly during the political upheaval in that country. He was at Taliesin for a year or so and, in her book, Mrs. Wright points out that his face was always filled with sadness, the mark of his tragic childhood."

Lorraine Johansen
(Mrs. Gunnar Johansen)

"Lorraine has such a wholesome, healthy look with rosy cheeks and sparkly blue eyes. The goodness just emanates from her. The Johansens are people who love the land—they have some acres near Blue Mounds. This was in early spring when she'd been gathering sap from the maple trees. She'd bring it down in buckets to cook in this vat with a big oak fire under it. She was busy stirring and skimming the syrup but she posed just long enough to let the surface settle so we could pick up that nice reflection."

Clarence (Smiler) Holman, retired sheriff

"Clarence is a Cornishman from Peddler's Creek—that's what we call the town of Lyndon. He has a very forceful, nice head—wonderful facial texture, which dramatic lighting brings out. I like the triangular composition with confirming lines that follow along the nose and chin down to the hands. To get drama and emphasis, a single spot was used to bring out the facial highlights and give a dark surrounding area. It's a common error to over light a subject so the lights countermand each other and fill in shadows that shouldn't be filled in."

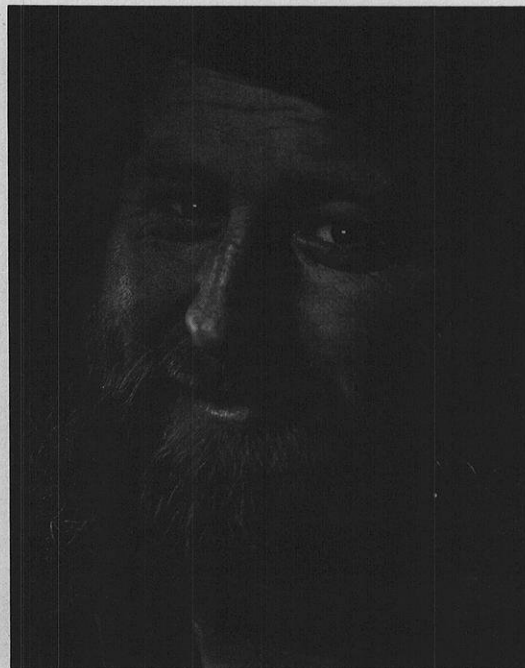

Michael Van Sicklen

"Michael came in for a formal head shot but I liked his natural, all-boy look with the rumpled jeans and that Huck Finn grin—it's sort of reminiscent of one of Norman Rockwell's drawings. The illustration-effect is heightened by the sharply defined, realistic detail and by the absence of any apparent background. We accomplished this by the lighting and by using a specially-built background that has a rounded cove at the base. Then we covered it with paper mill belting and extended that out onto the floor so there's no horizontal line at the baseboard."

George Olson, bridge builder

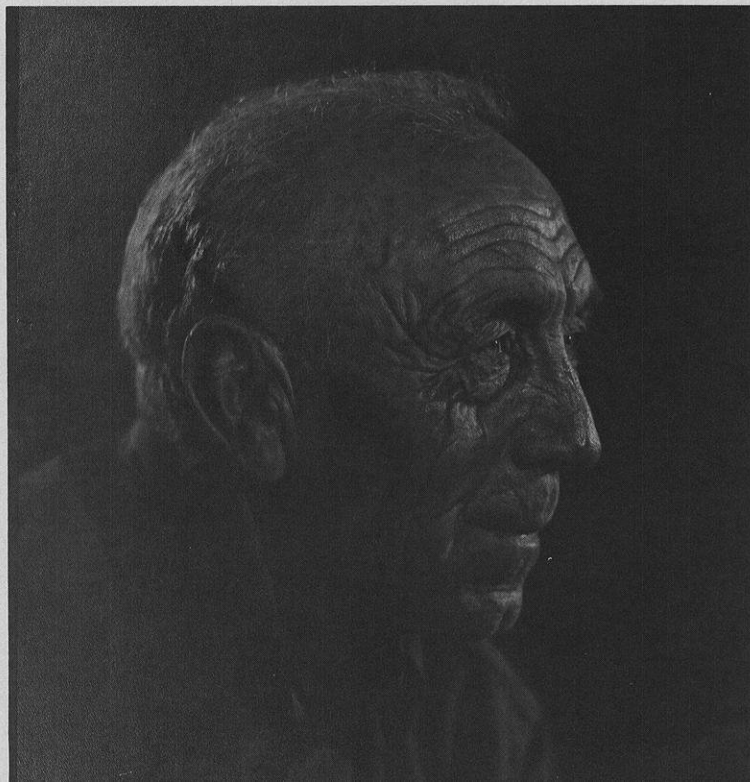

"George was a hard-working man. Any time there was a bridge to be built in Iowa County, he was right in the thick of it. That's what gave his face that wonderful leathery texture—being outdoors so much. His face was just loaded with character and he had nice deep skin tones.

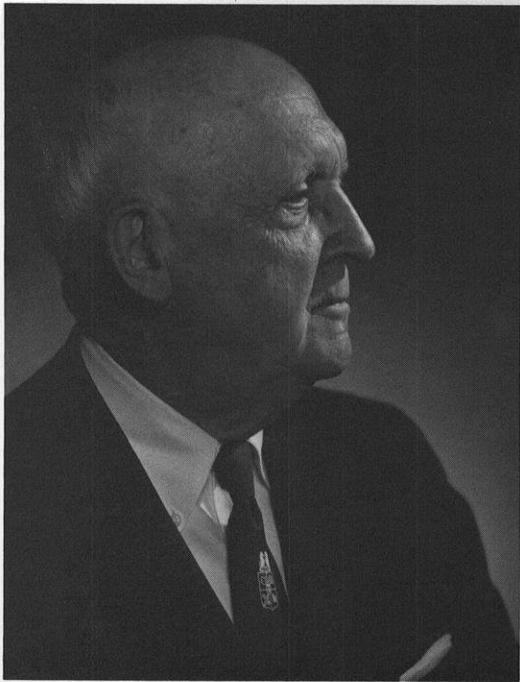

You know, when you have a face like this to work with, and you light it right, you can't avoid getting a good portrait."

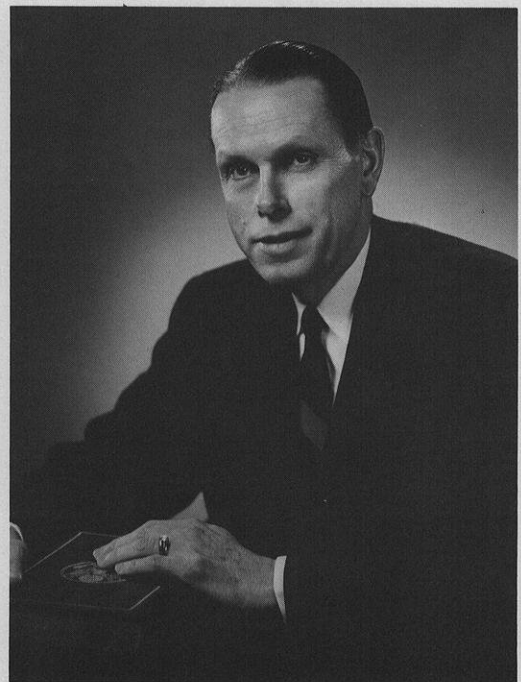

Gibbie Johnsrud, truck driver

"Gibbie is a good-natured, easy-going, jolly sort of fellow. I like to kid him about being Norwegian. He grew a beard long before anyone else was doing it because he said it kept his face warm. One day I met him on the street and said, 'Gibbie, come in and let's get a few negatives of you.' I often do that when I see a face that's interesting or someone who appeals to me and I think I get some of my best shots that way."

Dr. Fred H. Harrington

Dr. John C. Weaver

The Late President John F. Kennedy

"When John F. Kennedy was campaigning for the presidency, he spoke in Dodgeville, and we arranged for him to stop at the studio. I knew he'd be in a hurry so I had a newsman stand in for him while I set up the lights and got the focus. When he came in, he stopped in the dressing room just long enough to check his tie and hair. As he posed, he was very serious and preoccupied so I said, 'Let's have that Democratic victory smile,' and that's the smile I caught. I don't think I had more than three minutes and just got three shots before he said, 'That's all' and had to move on. Now when the high school kids come in for their pictures and I tell them they're sitting where President Kennedy once sat, they're really thrilled."

ACADEMY NEWS

NEWS NOTES

Congratulations are in order for John A. Beale, active member of the Wisconsin Academy since 1954. Mr. Beale was recently chosen president-elect of the Society of American Foresters (SAF). Mr. Beale is a deputy secretary of the State of Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources. Following completion of a two year term as president-elect of SAF, he will serve as president of the organization during 1974 and 1975.□

Dr. H. Guyford Stever, president of Pittsburgh's Carnegie-Mellon University, has been appointed Director of the National Science Foundation, to succeed Dr. William D. McElroy, who is resigning as of February 1, 1972.

Dr. Stever became president of Carnegie-Mellon in February, 1965, after more than twenty years on the faculty of Massachusetts Institute of Technology, where he achieved national prominence in aeronautical engineering and space technology.

Born in Corning, New York, on October 24, 1916, Dr. Stever received his A.B. degree in Physics from Colgate University and his Ph.D. from California Institute of Technology. He joined the faculty of MIT in 1941, and except for the period 1942 through 1945, when he served in the Office of Scientific Research and Development in London, he served on the faculty of MIT until his appointment as President of CMU. While at MIT he held various positions including department head and associate dean of engineering.□

A two-year study on the continuing growth of knowledge industries and knowledge occupations in the United States has been funded by the National Endowment for the Humanities, an independent agency of the federal government.

Principal investigator is Dr. Fritz Machlup of the Department of Economics at New York University. The study will be an extension of Dr. Machlup's work begun in his book, The Production and Distribution of Knowledge in the United States, published in 1962. Purpose of the study is to determine how much of the U.S. annual Gross National Product, in both percentage and absolute amounts, results from knowledge industries and occupations.

In 1958, the last year for which Dr. Machlup has figures available, about 29% of the adjusted Gross National Product was spent on knowledge production and about 31% of the labor force was employed in knowledge occupations.

Knowledge industries include education, research and development, communications media, information machines, and information services. Calculation of knowledge occupations is based on the labor force employed in all capacities in the knowledge industries.□

Fourteen Wisconsin institutions of higher education were among the 628 colleges and universities which recently received a total of $11,975,407 under the National Science Foundation Institutional Grants for Science Program.

Wisconsin's share of the NSF funding came to $179,965 and was distributed as follows: Beloit College ($8,389), Carthage College ($1,674), Holy Family College ($1,674), Lawrence College ($8,615), Marquette University ($15,171), Medical College of Wisconsin ($8,992), UW Center System ($1,674), UW-Green Bay ($1,674), UW-Madison ($93,572), UW-Milwaukee ($14,886), UW-Oshkosh ($5,022), UW-Parkside ($8,521), UW-Platteville ($1,674) and UW-Stevens Point ($8,427).

The NSF institutional grants are awarded annually and are designed to "help maintain a strong academic base for science, mathematics and engineering." The size of individual institutional grants is based on the amount of federal research awards received during the preceding fiscal year.

The UW-Madison campus was one of 31 institutions which received a grant of more than $75,000. The grant to the Madison campus was the eighth largest in the nation, the largest grant ($121,344) going to the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Since the beginning of the NSF Institutional Grants for Science Program in 1961, 1,009 different colleges and universities have received awards — 70 for the first time this year.□

Controversy over the use of the pesticide DDT continues unabated.

Nobel Prize-winner Dr. Norman Borlaug has been making the argument in the U.S. and abroad recently that, if the U.S. bans DDT, less developed nations will also ban it — even though, he asserts, such a ban would doom their own crops.

Dr. Borlaug won last year's Nobel Peace Prize for his development of improved strains of wheat.

In reply to Dr. Borlaug's argument, Dr. Charles Wurster of the Environmental Defense Fund argues that DDT is not essential to world food production and that the pesticide can upset natural systems so badly that crop yields actually diminish.

The use of DDT on food crops is banned already in the U.S. The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency is considering a ban on its remaining uses, mainly on cotton.

At a Washington news conference this fall, arranged by a major DDT manufacturer, Dr. Borlaug said "so-called ecologists" were out to eliminate not only DDT but virtually all chemical pesticides, weed-killers, and "even fertilizer."

Dr. Wurster believes that Dr. Borlaug is "one or two decades out of date." He said that the long-lasting and powerful DDT not only attacks crop pests but also kills off the parasites and predators which would otherwise keep these pests within natural limits. The pests themselves, he further noted, may develop resistance to DDT. The use of DDT on cotton in Tampico, Mexico, led to such a resurgence of pests, Dr. Wurster said, that it "drove the farmers right out of business."□

Senior scientists of the United States — those persons with at least 5 years of research experience or a doctorate of at least 5 years standing — wishing to make short visits to India in order to work with Indian colleagues on projects of mutual interest may receive travel support under the India-United States Exchange of Scientists Program. This program offers opportunities to work in new environments with unique research materials and to make long range plans for collaboration with Indian research centers. The national agencies responsible for administering the exchange program are the National Science Foundation (NSF) in Washington and the Council of Scientific and Industrial Research (CSIR) in New Delhi.

American participants in the exchange program are selected by the NSF with the concurrence of the CSIR. The participants are individuals with fields of specialization in the mathematical, physical, medical, biological, engineering, and social sciences, and the history and philosophy of science. Also included are such inter-disciplinary areas as geochemistry, meteorology and oceanography.

Selections will be made on the basis of the potential benefits of the exchange visit to the research activity of the visitor as well as his host and the prospects for increased scientific and technical cooperation between the two countries.

JUNIOR ACADEMY

Following decisions made at the State Committee Meeting of the Wisconsin Junior Academy on November 4, this year's spring meeting will have a new format and emphasis.

Previous meetings have been in the form of a paper presentation program running most of the day. This year, district winners will take part in a seminar at which they will discuss their research with other participants present. A session leader will moderate the program. It is hoped that the seminar format will be used as a tool of information exchange, raising suggestions for future research possibilities, alternative techniques, and areas of improvement or further applications.

Two seminars will be held in the morning, with participants being randomly assigned to one of the seminars. Unlike past years, there will be no judging of the papers at these sessions.

Awards will be made on the basis of a written paper and informal discussions between students and the state committee members. Those students wishing to compete for scholarship awards will:

- (1) Submit a written paper of their research work to the state committee upon arrival at the meeting.
- (2) In the afternoon, meet with the committee informally and individually to discuss the research.

From this two step process, scholarship recipients will be selected. Application for scholarships is optional for district winners.□

The Biology Honor Society of the James Madison Memorial High School and the Wisconsin Junior Academy of Science will co-sponsor the 5th annual JMM Science Symposium on Saturday, January 15, 1972 at James Madison Memorial High School, 201 South Gammon Road, Madison.

Madison and south central Wisconsin will have an opportunity to participate in the following: planetarium presentation; Wisconsin caves and caving; geology of Wisconsin; cold temperature engineering; and paper presentations by students. In the afternoon, students may choose to attend two of the following: mountain climbing; backpacking; rockets; physics; chemistry; or movies.

Students who have completed projects and wish to present a 10-15 minute oral paper are encouraged to do so. The students' names and abstracts of their presentations should be sent in advance to the Junior Academy of Science, 5001 University Avenue, Madison, Wisconsin 53705. Students presenting papers will receive recognition in the form of certificates and a subscription to a science magazine. □

IN MEMORIAM

Dr. William D. Stovall, emeritus professor of preventive medicine in the University of Wisconsin Medical School and former director of the State Laboratory of Hygiene, died November 18 in Madison. Dr. Stovall has been called "one of the state's all-time medical greats."

A member of the University faculty for 47 years, Dr. Stovall received his medical degree from Tulane University in 1912. At the time of his death he was a special assistant to the dean of the U W Medical School. During his long career he had served as director of the School of Cancer Cytology, director of the State Laboratory of Hygiene, president of the State Medical Society's Charitable, Educational and Scientific Foundation, and member and chairman of the State Board of Public Welfare.

In 1940 he was awarded the State Medical Society's highest recognition, the Council Award, for serving the science of medicine with outstanding distinction. He was also winner of the 1964 UW Emeritus Faculty Award.

Dr. Stovall was widely known for his work in the field of Papanicolaou tests, commonly called the "pap" smear test, a method of cancer detection. When the "pap" test was first introduced in Wisconsin during World War II, Dr. Stovall set up a cyto-technology course to train people to administer and read the results of the test.

In addition to his other tributes, the Stovall Hall of Health in the Museum of Medical Progress in Prairie du Chien was dedicated in his honor in 1962. Stovall Hall in Madison's Central Colony and Training School also was named in his honor.

A statement released by Dr. George Behnke, president of the State Medical Society of Wisconsin said: "No other single physician has been more responsible for elevating the standards of all phases of medical care and education than Dr. Stovall, who served his profession and the citizens of Wisconsin with dedication for well over 50 years."

Dr. Stovall, a member of the Wisconsin Academy, also belonged to the Madison Literary Club, the Professional Club, Phi Delta Theta, Alpha Kappa Kappa, and Sigma Xi. He was a member and former state chairman of the American Society for the Control of Cancer, a member of the American Medical Association, a board member of the American Cancer Society, and past president of the State Medical Society. □

Walter Bubbart, a landscape architect and former vice president of the Wisconsin Academy, died October 1 in Waupun. A resident of Milwaukee, he was active in setting up the Milwaukee County park system and at one time served as the Milwaukee city surveyor.

Mr. Bubbart graduated from the University of Wisconsin where he participated in the famous Meiklejohn experimental college. An avid naturalist, he worked for public recognition of John Muir, a campaign which resulted in the establishment of the John Muir State Park. He also was a strong advocate of cleaning up the Rock River basin, a project currently in action, and of the preservation of the Aztalan site, which has since been made into a state park.

At the time of Wisconsin's centennial Mr. Bubbart was put in charge of visits to historical sites and continued for several years to take busloads of people to see significant places and persons across southern Wisconsin. He was a member of the State Historical Society and for a number of years made it a point to own a single share of stock in every railroad and other corporations in the state so he could attend their annual meetings as a spokesman for social responsibility. □

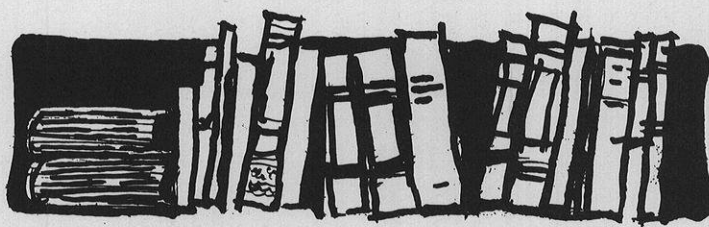

JOURNAL OF COLLEGE SCIENCE TEACHING, Vol. I, No. 1, National Science Teachers Association, 1201 16th St., N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036, $8 per year to NSTA members; $10 per year to non-members; published quarterly.

"How can we approach the teaching of science — or, if you will, the planning for the learning of science — so that students, subject matter, and the psychosocial matrix can be brought into orderly and productive patterns?"

Leo Schubert, editor-in-chief of this latest addition to the ranks of scholastic publication, poses the question in a Volume 1, Number 1 (Oct., 1971) editorial, "The Beginnings of a New Journal." The mission of the Journal of College Science Teaching, Mr. Schubert continues, is to "... seek out these patterns and to present conceptual models and materials for them."

Proposed editorial guidelines of the quarterly publication call for: (1) an interdisciplinary focus, (2) emphasis on the non-disciplinary nature of science, (3) recognition of science as a humanistic venture, (4) inclusion of information on the psychology of learning, and (5) discussion of the "societal and public-interest fallout" aspects of science.

The debut issue of JCST is attractive in content as well as format. Content is broken down by features and departments, the latter including national and legislative news, innovations, abstracts, audiovisuals, books, and equipment and new products. The lead feature article is a thoughtful essay by Harvard Physics Professor Gerald Holton titled "Improving College Science Teaching: Lessons from Contemporary Science and the History of Science." Dr. Willard F. Libby, Nobel Laureate in chemistry and director of the UCLA Institute of Geophysics and Planetary Physics, contributes his insights on "A Relevant Education."

JCST arrives on the education scene at a time when increasing attention is being given to the teaching responsibility of college and university faculty. It promises something more than a mere "how-to-do-it" approach and lives up to that promise quite adequately in this, its first outing. □ —JB

THE RED MAN (a monthly magazine of the Carlisle, Pa. Indian Industrial School, 1909-1917). Johnson Reprint Corporation, 111 Fifth Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10003. Vols. 1-9, cloth bound, $250; per volume, cloth bound, $30.

Originally published between 1909 and 1917 by the students and staff of the Carlisle Indian Industrial School, The Red Man is one of a number of titles on the American Indian which has been re-issued through the efforts of the Johnson Reprint Corporation.

The Red Man should prove of special interest to present-day historians, anthropologists, sociologists, and educators. Started as a publication of trade news of interest to the students, including reports on graduates, their occupational and personal doings, the monthly magazine evolved into a printed forum for Indian ideas and a repository of primary information on Indian mythology and crafts. Featured were Indian tales, legends, autobiographies, artwork and photography. A sampling of Indian student contributions: "Arapaho Tradition of Creation," "Iriquois Burial Customs," "Origin of Names Among the Cherokees." Staff and guest contributions included such items as: "The Soul of the Red Man," "Where Do The Indians Come From," "Court Decisions Relating to Indians."

The Carlisle school was the result of a persistent campaign on the part of Army Lieutenant Richard Henry Pratt, who had worked with Indian prisoners of war placed in his charge by the War Department in 1876. Carlisle is a good example of the well-meaning, if self-serving, efforts of the White Man to "educate the Indian." As such, its Red Man publication provides an interesting historical perspective to the current concerns and aspirations of the true Native American.

Pratt's successor at Carlisle, Superintendent Friedman, once noted: "Winning the Indians to civilization depends on teaching them industry, clean living, right thinking and patriotism." In 1917 the school ceased operation when its entire male student population joined the American forces in World War I. □ —JB

About The Cover

"The Vine" by Edgar L. Obma — Anthony Logue was about four or five years old when the cover photo was made. He had come with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Logue, members of the Taliesin Fellowship, to an Easter breakfast at the Herb Fritz residence and studio. To Anthony's delight, the Fritz's had a wonderful child-size playhouse to explore. As he poked his head out the window and snatched for a trailing vine in a gesture of little boy exuberance, Mr. Obma captured the essence of this happy experience. "To me, it's a spring picture," Mr. Obma says, "with a sense of joy and of things that are growing."
