5 CENTS

300 TO COME TO PROM FROM OUT OF TOWN

Preliminary Programs Out; Box Arrangements Are Completed

More than 300 out-of-town guests will be present at Prom this year, setting a new attendance record in this respect. Provisions have been made by the women's arrangement committee to take care of all out-of-town women. Each train that arrives in Madison is bringing its quota of Prom-goers, and many guests already are in town.

Prom preliminary programs came out yesterday, and may be procured at Morgan's, the University pharmacy, and at Chadbourne hall. Besides the order of dances, the programs include information concerning cab entrances and the schedule of events.

Provide Boxes

All who have not arranged to be in a particular box will be accommodated in the boxes of the various colleges on the second floor of the capitol. Practically all Prom parties have arranged for maids, and the women's arrangement committee has obtained 41 colored maids to serve in the boxes.

The photographs of all chairmen and others who are helping put Prom across will be displayed in the window of the Portrait shop, 608 State street, beginning tomorrow. The Portrait shop has been making all Prom pictures free of charge. These pictures also will be used in The Prom Cardinal.

Overall Prize Unclaimed

As yet no one has volunteered to don overalls for the grand march to receive the $5 prize offered. However, the Prom committee still is hopeful that someone will take up the offer at the last minute.

EX-STATE OFFICIAL GETS FACULTY POST

John S. Donald, formerly secretary of state, has been appointed extension specialist in agricultural economics and has been assigned to farm demonstration work, by the university regents. He has already assumed his new duties.

This work is done jointly by the college of agriculture and the United States government, and each pays one half of the present salary of $3,000.

CONVICT BELIEVES FAIR MIND READER COULD FREE HIM

Behind the bars of San Quentin penitentiary, California, languishes a "life term" who has so much faith in the mind reading powers of Marian I. Hill, Wisconsin university co-ed, that he has written asking Miss Hill to help establish his innocence.

The convict, who signed himself "No. 25,162," was convicted, he writes, partly on circumstantial evidence and partly because evidence tending to show his innocence was barred on technical innocent.

He read about Miss Hill's apparent ability to read minds by feeling the wrist muscles of other students in recent experiments conducted in the university psychology department.

Feminine Charm Factories Work Overtime as 600 Co-eds Furbish up Beauty for Prom

Beauty shops are the busiest corners in town this week.

With the arrival of the long-deferred Prom comes the necessity for every co-ed to enhance her natural charms with the aid of a few artificial ones—a shampoo, a dazzling marcel, a "facial," or a manicure.

"This is about the busiest season we have all year," said the manager of one beauty parlor. "We have eight operators at work all the time. Each one specializes in her own particular branch of work, although all of them are experts in more than one kind of treatment."

"The marcel is the most popular aid to beauty," said the manager of another shop. "We will give from 40 to 50 marcelles a day during Thursday, Friday, and Saturday. We have two girls who do marceling exclusively, and they can give 20 or 22 marcelles apiece in a day. Their schedules for the week-end are already full, and they will work steadily the entire day with only a few minutes off for lunch."

It is estimated that more than 600 girls will visit the beauty parlors of Madison this week-end. And when they emerge—yea, verily, great will be the radiance thereof. And how can mere man hope to resist them?

R. O. T. C. READY FOR INSPECTION

General Staff Officers Come to Establish Rating of Badger Regiment

From Col. Roswell Howett down to the smallest frosh rookie in the last "pewee" squad, members of the Wisconsin R. O. T. C. regiment are "on their toes" in readiness for the inspection and review to be held this week by a board of general staff officers, to determine the efficiency standing of the Wisconsin R. O. T. C. in comparison with contingents in 14 other universities to be examined for distinguished rating.

The inspecting officers will include Col. F. J. Morrow, Major James F. McKinley, and Capt. E. Hunt.

The schedule of events will start tomorrow at 8 a. m. and finish Friday afternoon. Inspection will consist of review of individual companies, review of the regiment, close and extended order, field problem, inspection of facilities, materiel, and equipment, map reading, hygiene and first aid, nomenclature and care of the rifle, and the manual of arms. Inspection will take place on the lower campus and in the armory.

8 NEW PROFESSORS FOR SUMMER SESSION

Eight professors from other institutions will teach in the 1920 summer session. They are Miss Maud M. Babcock, of the University of Utah, public speaking; Prof. George L. Clark, University of Missouri, law; Prof. Judson A. Crane, of the University of Pittsburgh, law; Dr. Henry N. Goddard, of the Wisconsin state department of education, education; Prof. Harry F. Harrington, of the University of Illinois, journalism; Dr. Edgar H. McNeal, of Ohio State university, history; Dr. Junius L. Meriam, of the University of Missouri, education; and Dr. Charles H. Woolbert, of the University of Illinois, public speaking. The session opens June 28, and continues until Aug. 6.

QUARANTINE RAISED ON ALPHA PHI HOUSE

The Alpha Phi quarantine was lifted late yesterday afternoon after having been on for more than two days, as a result of Ernestine Jennison having contracted a light case of diphtheria. Miss Jennison is doing well and there are no indications that any of the other girls have contracted the disease.

VARSITY 'FLU' MORTALITY LOW

Only One Death for Every 157 Cases, Medical Re- ports Show

The university death rate during the influenza epidemic this year was only 1 for every 157 cases of the disease, while that in the state was 1 in 12.7 cases, according to the statement made by Dr. J. S. Evans, head of the university medical department, at the symposium on the 1919-20 epidemic of influenza held by the University of Wisconsin Medical society last night at Science hall. All who died were infected in the first five days of the epidemic, he asserted.

"January 23 was the first day of marked disease," said Dr. Robert Oleson, of the state board of health. "Between January and March there were 42,793 cases in the state."

"The results of our survey show that general living conditions, such as sanitation facilities, have no relation to the spread of the disease; that people profited by their experience of 1918 and took precautions against infection; that many physicians were negligent in placarding, quarantining, and reporting cases; and that we are still much in the dark as to how the disease is spread."

MAY BE A SHORTAGE OF CAPS AND GOWNS

Senior caps and gowns will be handled by the Co-op this year. E. J. Grady, manager, urges that seniors place their orders promptly, since there may be a scarcity. Women to be in the Swingout June 4, must get their orders in by May 21. All others wishing gowns for commencement should speak for them before June 1.

HARESFOOT MAKES $300 GIFT TO UNION

Haresfoot club yesterday gave $300 to the Memorial Union fund. In addition the club has agreed to assume most of the expense of fitting out the stage of the new building when it is completed. Another large subscription which came in yesterday is $325 additional from Barnard hall.

PUSH CAMPAIGN TO BEAUTIFY BADGER CAMPUS

Many New Flowers and Shrubs Set Out; Improve- ments Planned

By ADRIAN SCOLTEN

Prior to the 1920 debut of vernal millinery and before most flowers had even thought of coming out of hibernation, the tulips in front of Lathrop hall were poking their noses through the crust of earth.

The advance spring opening of the tulip patch is only a phase of developments in the work of a league which is going to make the Wisconsin campus a charming garden and Madison the most beautiful city in all the world. The background which nature has provided makes the task comparatively easy, but there is plenty of work to be done. Professor Frank A. Aust, landscape gardening expert is responsible for the formation of the league.

Keystone Joins League

Organizations which already belong are the University Board of Regents and Keystone, composed of presidents of all university women's organizations. The city of Madison is represented by the Girls' Civic league, the Kewanis club, the Chamber of Commerce, and the Park and Pleasure Drive Association.

Members of the league are anxious to get the support of all students, and it is hoped that the student senate will co-operate in becoming an important factor in the beautifying plans.

Co-eds Are Flower Bandits

Those who know say that students are marring landscapes, with waste paper, banana peelings, empty (pop) bottles, picnic bon-fires and by such practices as cutting across beautiful expanses of green grass. It is even said that there are kleptomaniacs among the co-eds, who against campus rules, pluck the tame and wild flowers.

Professor Aust who for three years has been doing everything possible to make the campus more beautiful and who originated plans which have been carried out year by year, makes the startling statement that the only wild flowers on the campus which have not been planted are dandelions. And dandelions are the only flowers that students do not pick.

The Department of Horticulture has just planted 500 lady slippers, 500 violets and as many dachmums

SERVICE STRIPES FOR ALL WEARERS OF OLD CLOTHING

Service chevrons for wearing old clothes.

That was the novel proposal of Prof. W. H. Kiekhofer of the economics department in a lecture yesterday.

"The overall fad won't accomplish any saving so long as overalls don't actually supplant other more expensive clothing," he said. "It would be more economical to wear ordinary clothes a long time."

"Why not award service stripes for the length of time clothing is worn, adding an extra stripe for an extra period of wear?"

CAN you imagine what Lela Hendricks was doing yesterday on State street, with that freckle-faced enfant hanging on to her skirts? Lela says she bought him three pounds of candy during the afternoon but he simply wouldn't leave her.

THOSE Chi Os simply can't help being attractive.

THIS following came over us as we took a shower yesterday in the luke-warm water of the gym. It's meant to be a sequel to Sunday's outburst; it's titled:

PARADISE REGAINED
Now Florence was entirely too clever
To let Freddy stand in her way,
And she vowed and she swore
That she'd have a Prom date
Fore the end of another long day.

She arose in the morning with plans in her head,
Her toilet she made with great care.
A manicure, new blouse, shining shoes, and red lips,
And a permanent wave in her hair.

Then she took down the list of prospective
Men who could dance rather well;
Seventeen men who she'd vamp and she's tag,
Seventeen — and each one a swell.

Teddy she met in her French class,
She was bored and blase as could be.
He fell for her smile, led her on for a while,
Then announced he was taking Margery.

In the libe she met little Johnny,
And fed him her line, wild and hot.
But he wouldn't rise, only looked in her eyes,
And whispered, "I'm going with Dot."

Another good bet was old Charlie,
A man with a new wooden leg.
But she'd made a mistake, he'd long had a date;
His Prom girl was going to be Peg.

Fair Florence was down in the deeps you can see,
Discouraged, heart-sick and alone.
She sat in her room, the picture of gloom,

When a call came for her on the 'phone.

Absent-minded she patted the puffs on her ears,
And rushed to the phone down below.
She didn't care just who the man was,
Whoever,—she'd not answer, "No."

"Hello, is this Florence?"
"Uh-huh"
"This is Jack" (she's have hugged him if he'd have been there).
"And what are you doing this week-end?"
"Not a thing, you lovely old dear."

"Not going to Prom?" "No, I'm not, Jack."
"Well, will you do something for me?"
Would she? He'd never need asked again,
If he'd only been there to see.

"Of course, I'd be GLAD to. Just ask me."
At last she had gained her great chance.
"Well, listen, my mother is up for a while;
"Show her 'round town, will you, while I dance?"

L'Envoi
Never try to catch a man, by going after one.
For if you'll only wait awhile,
A man is sure to come.

WELL, there it is. Pennell Crosby says it's all right, so we'll let it ride. Candidly we have our doubts.

BUT rest easy. We won't get another spell like it for months.

"What do you do," asked Ted, "if you ask to sit on the steps, and all she gives you is a vacant stair?"

PLAYS TO FEATURE FRENCH EVENING

French students of the university will present two farces at the "Soiree Francaise" to be given by them in Lathrop concert room May 19. "Farce du Cuvier," and "L'Anglais tel qu'on le parle," will be played in real French style. Mademoiselle Marguerite Treille and Emilie DeJean and others will take part in the cast.

French songs and music by the girls of the French house will add to make it a true French evening.

Proceeds from the performance will go to the French war orphans' fund.

REHEARSALS SOON FOR SENIOR PLAY

Good material for the cast of the senior play has been produced as a result of the tryouts held Monday and yesterday, according to Ray Holcombe, chairman.

Students from the three upper classes combined to fill the cast, which will be announced later.

Rehearsals for the play, which is to be given in the open-air theater as soon as eligibility of proposed players can be determined.

START CAMPAIGN TO BEAUTIFY CAMPUS

breeches and trilliums. Those who love beautiful landscapes sincerely hope that these flowers will not be imprisoned in vases to pine away and die long before their time has come.

This year it is not possible to have stationed all over the campus, and the seven men who do have authority to arrest anyone caught stealing flowers wish to turn this authority over to the student senate.

Three years ago the landscape gardening plans began to materialize into the improvements which now are admired by all. Two years ago the Mills street garden was put in. Last year the perennial border on Dean Henry's drive appeared. This year the wild flowers made their debut. Before the end of the summer just west of the university wood a native shrub garden will be started with the expectation that representatives of every native shrub in the state soon will be growing there and that their name will be attached. The money for all this was appropriated three years ago by the Board of Regents.

Hash House Lingo "Stumps" Even Professors; Interpreter is Needed to Unscramble the Code

By ALICE B. MUNRO

"Sunny side up, a pair."

"Bowl of red, buttered three times."

"Stacks, liberty a pair."

"Roasted egg four, one without, to ride."

These cryptic remarks, passed nonchalantly through a small window by a loud-voiced, white-garmented gentleman, resulted last night in the donation to a hungry circle of students and professors of:

Two fried eggs, not turned over. Tomato soup and three orders of buttered toast.

Pan-cakes and two Hamburgers. A fried egg sandwich between toast, and Hamburger without onions.

Ham and eggs, and two orders of buttered toast.

No, gentle reader, this is not a scene from an insane asylum. It occurs daily and nightly in Lawrence's lunch, Frank's and Chili A's. There is no course in college that gives one a line on this lunch-counter slang. Anyone who wants to master the choice bits of the bold, colorful dialect, with which to entertain the cook at home, must sit near the window and keep his ears open while ordering unusual things. He will soon gather the following fundamentals of the lingo:

"Four," after anything, means a sandwich.

"To ride," means to take out.

The missing words in "ham and —" and "one without —" are respectively eggs and onions.

"Liberty" is a patriotic substitution for Hamburger.

But it is a full time job to learn all the words of this language, and one's admiration grows for the waiters, who never seem to need a moment to think of the most intricate orders.

PROM MUST BE REPRESENTATIVE

PREPARATIONS are completed for the year's greatest social event, the Junior Prom. Every element which contributes to the success of such an occasion has been supplied.

The Prom chairman and committees have done everything in their power to make this evening memorable for its enjoyment. Now the question is: Will the Prom-goers do their part? Will they co-operate in making the Prom truly representative of the University of Wisconsin?

In former years, complaints have been made of drinking and immodesty in dress. Reflections have been cast on the character of the whole event because of the conduct of a few men and women. Whether the extremes in dress which have appeared were the result of thoughtlessness or not, their effect was to cast discredit on the university. The drunkenness of two or three men has been sufficient to attach a stigma to the event and to the student body.

This year steps have been taken to make impossible a single instance of drinking, and modesty in dress has been frequently and strongly urged. Girls need not be prudes, but they need not wear gowns which seem to say, "One more struggle and I'll be free!"

Among the guests at the Prom will be the governor and his staff, and the legislature of the state. They expect to find in the Prom an accurate reflection of university life. Their judgment of the university will be based on their observations, that evening, of the conduct of its students. No opportunity is afforded them for an adequate investigation of the conditions of student life. To them, at least to the great majority, Prom has been, and is, the social life of the university.

Never in the university's history has it been more important that a favorable impression be made. New buildings must be erected to house the hundreds of additional students who are now crowding every available room on the campus. Additional housing facilities must be provided by building dormitories, for men and women. Faculty salaries must in many instances be raised, if a standard of instruction worthy of the university is to be maintained. The improvements require appropriations by the state legislature. It must not be prejudiced against the genuine needs of the university by a single instance of conduct or dress unworthy of Wisconsin students.

At any time, it is a disgrace to the student body when individuals bring discredit on the Prom. This year, any action to which objection could be made would be doubly selfish; the appropriations which the university must receive would be endangered. The 1921 Prom should and must be worthy of the university and the student body which it represents.

MAKING HONEY WHILE THE SUN SHINES

THE United States Department of Agriculture is encouraging the keeping of bees, for everywhere in this country there is a scarcity of sugar and honey is a satisfactory substitute.

Right now the bees are gathering pollen. During this summer tons and tons of honey will be wasted only because there are no bees to manufacture the honey. Those who can should become bee-keepers, suggests the College of Agriculture.

Bee culture is a light and pleasant occupation which should appeal to many of the disabled soldiers, as well as to other students. Many might profitably attend the practical course in bee-keeping offered by the College of Agriculture. Demonstrations on modern bee-keeping will be given, and from now on the work will be extremely interesting. Only 14 are enrolled in the course.

Only one-twentieth of the honey nectar produced in Wisconsin is ever touched by a bee. All authorities agree that bees can be raised without a large investment of money and that the knowledge required and the work necessary is not extensive. One swarm of bees should yield 50 pounds of surplus honey. Many swarms yield much more. The present retail price of honey makes bee-keeping extremely profitable. The work connected with raising bees is light if several swarms are kept in the same place.

What the College Editors Say

REMEMBER THE INTERIORS

Some of the interiors of the buildings on the campus are a disgrace. For some time a campaign has been raging to make the campus beautiful. Signs warning pedestrians to "keep off the grass" and "use the walks" have been posted to aid in the project, yet nothing has been done to drive out of existence the habit many of the students have of defacing the interior of the edifices which are every bit as much a part of the campus.

How often have you seated yourself at a desk or the one-armed chair commonly used in the classrooms, prepared to scribble off an examination, only to find that it was impossible to write legibly because of the numerous nicks, ruts and conglomeration of emblems and initials carved on the surface beneath the paper? How often have you cast your eyes around the room to find the unpleasant sight of figures or cartoons drawn by some thoughtless person on the wall or white-washed post near you?

The ancient adage, "Fools names are fools faces," states more truth than fiction. The average student at the university certainly does not decorate the walls of his home with so-called humorous caricatures or the emblem of his favorite lodge or society.

Why, then, should the college student of today act like a child? Such pranks can be overlooked in a grammar-school pupil and a hand-slapping by way of reproof be administered in such cases, but it is hard to justify or forgive those foolish and childish tricks of some Ohio State students. Individual pride in the institution of which he or she is a part should be the motto of every loyal Ohio Stater.—Ohio State Lantern.

ALUMNI SECRETARIES MEET AT ANN ARBOR

The Wisconsin Alumni association will be represented at the combined conference of Associations of Alumni and of Alumnae Secretaries and the Alumni Magazines Associated, to be held at the University of Michigan on May 13, 14, and 15, by Robert Crawford, alumni secretary of the university and second vice-president of the Association of Alumni Secretaries. Eminent American Novelist Passes Away at 83

NEW YORK — William Dean Howells, the novelist, died here yesterday.

Mr. Howells returned a few weeks ago from Savannah, where he had spent the winter. While in the south he was stricken with influenza and never had fully recovered from its effects.

At a dinner given in New York in 1912 to honor Mr. Howells upon his 75th birthday, William Howard Taft then president, lauded the guest as "the greatest living American writer and novelist."

He was the dean of American letters; poet, essayist, dramatist and editor, as well as a weaver of fiction.

Beginning his first book, "Poems of Two Friends," just before the Civil War, Mr. Howells had completed and published 71 volumes at the time of his death, besides acting as editor of various publications, crossing the ocean eighteen times in search of material for his novels, and writing essays, criticisms and magazine articles.

Was Born in 1837

Born in Martin's Ferry, O., in 1837, he served his literary apprenticeship as a composer, reporter and editor on his father's newspaper.

"Inwardly I was a poet," said the eminent novelist in reviewing his early experiences, "with no wish to be anything else, unless in a moment of careless affluence I might so far forget myself as to be a novelist."

When 23 years old he traveled to Boston to make the acquaintance of Longfellow, Hawthorne, Emerson, Holmes and Lowell. Though a boy among masters, he became their intimate, learning their literary traditions and preserving many of them throughout his long life.

Appointed By Lincoln

At the age of 24 he was appointed by Pres. Lincoln as United States Consul at Venice. He combined his consular duties with literary work, and produced his celebrated book, "Venetian Life."

In 1865, he came to New York with his wife, who was Elinor G. Mead, of Vermont, and whom he had married in Paris in 1862. For two years he wrote editorials for the New York Nation, the Times and the Tribune, and then moved to Boston where as assistant editor he began his association with the Atlantic Monthly, succeeding James Russell Lowell as editor in 1872. At the age of 44 he retired to devote himself to his novels, which he produced for many years at the rate of two a year.

Never Attended College

Dr. Howells—he had received degrees from Yale, Harvard, Oxford, and Columbia universities though he had never attended college—was a keen student of current events. He avowed his belief in socialism.

"I cannot see," he declared, "that the remedy for existing conditions lies anywhere else. But if it is to be a remedy it must come slowly. Violent revolutions do not permanently solve these problems."

On the subject of woman suffrage his opinion was decided:

"It is one of the most important developments of this generation and one of the most hopeful. The men have made such a mess of things that if the women do not come to the rescue I'm sure I don't know what is to become of us."

HOWELLS RESTS SECURE IN HIS FAME--LEONARD

THE following, an estimate of William Howells, who died yesterday was written by Prof. William Ellery Leonard, poet, author, and member of the English department.—Editor's Note.

By WM. ELLERY LEONARD
Howells has long possessed and long earned the title of Dean of American Letters. His literary career began with the pilgrimage eastward, about the time Mark Twain and Bret Harte made the same pilgrimage. He has told the long story in "My Literary Passions" and in "Literary Friends and Acquaintance." His connection with the higher journalism began back in '71 when he became the third editor of the Atlantic, succeeded by Aldrich who died some fifteen years ago. For many years thereafter he sat in the "easy chair" of Harpers' Magazine.

In these activities alone he exercised no mean influence on American life and letters, particularly in the critical articles in Harpers' introducing to America the work of foreign naturalistic writers like Tolstoi and the Spanish Galdos.

His significance as a novelist is mainly that of the founder of naturalism in this country, a nationalism on the levels of ordinary American life, dealing with typical middle class countrymen of ours and with typical American situations and problems. His naturalism had nothing unnatural or sordid, and he left in the main the eccentric American and the American abroad to Henry James.

He is secure in his fame—and has done a long day's work, to the honor of what is best in our nation.

SOMETHING ABOUT

"Should A Woman Tell?"

It is a tense, human and infinitely appealing story of a woman confronted with one of life's greatest dilemmas. Meta Maxon, daughter of hardy, somewhat grasping parents, never, until circumstances led her out into the world of wealth, knowing the ways of men, came to a point in her life when she must herself make a great decision.

She found in the young, idealistic artist living in the little New England town in order to sketch the rugged grandeur of the coast and sea, the one real romance of her life. Yet there was something which Meta felt Albert should know. She was aware he himself—for he had candidly confessed it—had not led a life entirely blameless. But she was no less aware that men regard a woman's mistake as unpardonable, and their own as joyous escapades. To tell him would mean to lose him. To keep her secret would mean a life of uneasy happiness, unutterably miserable.

How this woman chose to act is told with all the skill and finish characteristic of Screen Classics, Inc., productions, enacted by an all-star cast, starring Alice Lake, supported by Jack Mulhall, Frank Currier and a notable cast, at the

ELEGY

By Jules Massenet

Too frequently the losing of friends is the only means that will make us realize the value of those who are closely bound to us. Massenet's Elogy is a touching tribute to the blighting effect which may result from the death of a loved one. It is probably the most beautiful song in the French language.

Jules Massenet, born in 1842, is chiefly known as a composer of opera. Most of us have heard the celebrated violin number called Meditation, which is part of his opera Thais. He was one of the few French composers who, in addition to songs and arias in operas, wrote independent and detached songs for voice and piano. While Germany, Russia, and Norway have produced great song writers such as Schubert, Schumann, Franz, Liszt, Rubinstein, Tchaikovsky, Grieg, and others, France has but very few—Massenet and Godard being the principal ones.

An Elogy is a lament for the dead. In this beautiful composition addressed to a departed loved one the words, strongly reinforced by the wailing, sobbing melody, describe the darkness which grief causes even in the glory of springtime. The accompaniment, with its frequent echoing of the sung melody, adds a suggestion of the broken sobs and spasmodic breathing. This song of spring—blighted and dreary—is in strong contrast to the one by Grieg which we shall study next.

SOPH COMMISSION LAYS OUT PROGRAM

At the Y. M. C. A. last night, Secretary F. E. Wolf outlined comprehensive plans for next year's Sophomore commission. There was a general discussion of the different fields which the commission will have to cover during the year 1920-21, and the scope of the work of different committees was determined.

The need of whole-hearted support of the activities of the commission on the part of next year's sophomores, and the value which will result from the work was pointed out.

An appeal was made to all present freshmen who wish to give concrete proof of the Wisconsin spirit to the frosh of next fall, to hand in their names to "Dad" Wolf before the summer vacation.

AIM TO OUST FRATERNITIES IN LEGISLATURE

Group of 75 Meets to Wage
Fight on Greek Letter
Chapters

A movement is under way at the university to bring the fraternity and sorority question before the legislature again.

At a meeting recently attended by about 75 students it was decided to start a movement to eliminate fraternities and sororities from the university. It is planned to take the matter before the next legislature and it will be argued that fraternity life has become a menace to the institution.

It is said that the non-fraternity advocates will hold that snobbishness is engendered by the fraternities and that for that reason the Greek letter societies should have no place in a democratic institution such as the university. It is said that it will also be contended that the grade of scholarship among Greek letter students is lower than that of non-fraternity students.

It is understood that further meetings are to be held to make plans for continuing the anti-fraternity campaign.

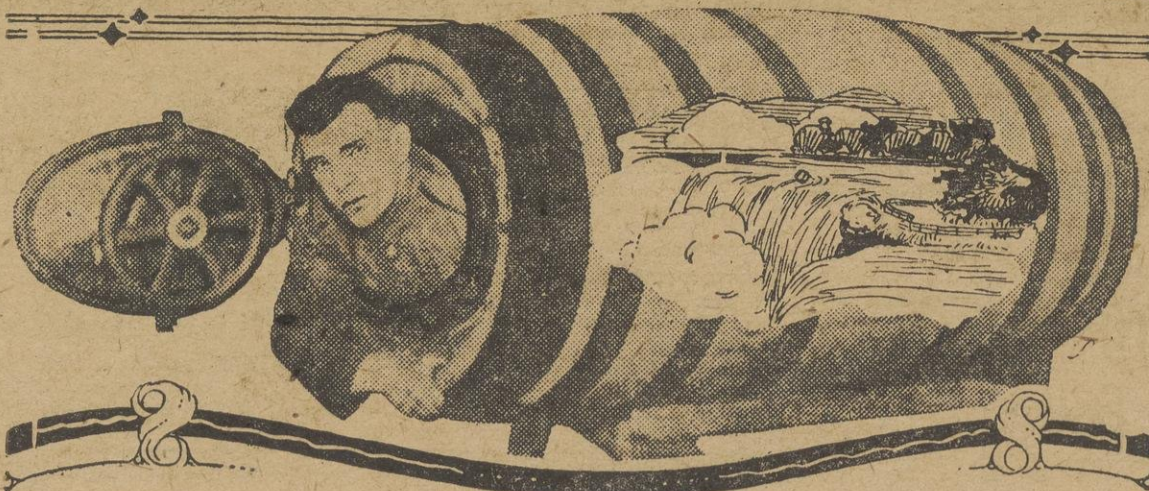

TO PUBLISH SERIES ON FACTORY STUDIES

Comments by the factory managers and workers concerned are combined with the ideas of academic experts in the Wisconsin series of 30 articles on "Industrial Government Experiments" now being written by members of the economics department after a study of systems tried in 30 American factories. The first of the articles recently appeared in The Independent.

The 30 industrial experiments were investigated last summer by an "itinerant" commission of economics from the university under the leadership of Prof. John R. Commons. Each experiment is written up by one member of the commission, but, to give him all points of view, all members of the party took notes in each plant.

The series of studies of 30 plants will be published in book form in the fall. In the meantime, The Independent is publishing articles concerning the plants.

Not 'Ham Actors,' But They Present an Egg Drama

The erring wife, who had a craving for an egg, having tasted one in her youth, the cruel but law-abiding husband, who would not get her the egg, and the food-control officer who was ensnared into giving her the egg, were the characters in the one-act farce comedy presented at the joint meeting of Edwin Booth, Red Domino and Twelfth Night, held last night in Lathrop parlors.

The play was written by William De Mille, and is entitled, "Food—a Tragedy of the Future." The time is in the year 1962, when food conditions have become such that meals consist of a cracker a day, and milk is a great luxury.

The cast included Dorcas Hall, Earl Heasle, and Lawrence Chapman. All the parts were well taken. Much credit is due, also, to Flora Filtzer, president of Red Domino, who coached the play.

Added features on the program were a dramatic reading by Frances Ryan, and a poem in Italian dialect, "Da Spring Eas Come," by Augustus Daly, read by Edith Royce.

EMULSIONS, THEME OF CHEMISTRY TALK

"Mayonnaise dressing is nothing but a colloidal emulsion of oil in vinegar with the albumen in the egg serving as an emulsifying agent," said Prof. Henry N. Holmes, head of the department of chemistry at Oberlin college, in his lecture in the Chemistry auditorium yesterday afternoon. This case is a good example of the class of colloids discussed in the lecture on "Emulsions."

Emulsions are one class of colloids which are defined as one liquid suspended in another the particles being in the limits of colloidal size, he explained. An emulsion can be made easily by mechanical shaking, but it takes more to preserve one than to make it originally. The commonest emulsifier, is alkali soap. By destroying the emulsifier, the emulsion can be broken. In the case of soap, this is ammoETAOI case of soap, this is accomplished with hydrochloric acid.

The third lecture on "Gels," will be given today at 4:30 p. m.
