Present your summer merchandising program effectively by placing it regularly in the columns of the Appleton Review. Summer time offers many diversions and as a result the average person reads less. Unless your sales message is produced attractively in a setting where it stands out and is easily read, it loses in effect.

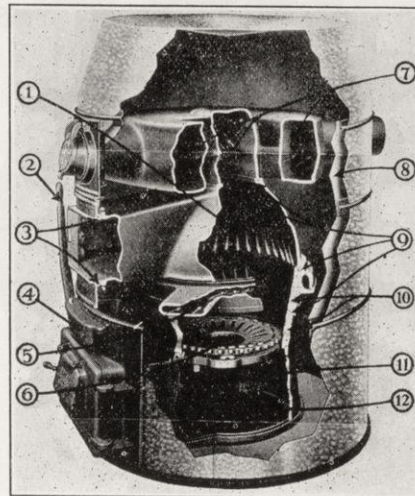

The smallest ad in the Review is never buried—each ad is next to general reading matter and is easily seen.

of the wailing wall in Jeru-saalem, cause of so much bitterness between Jews and Arabs.

The Arabs have one of their most important places of worship immediately adjoining the wailing wall, where Jews from all over the world gather to lament the fall of Jerusalem.

Arabs have been in possession of Jerusalem for centuries, ever since they beat the Crusaders. And, according to their Koran, it is their holy city also.

There is no universal national feeling in India. Mohammedans hate Hindus and vice versa. There are tens of millions of both. The native-born Indians in the British army fight for Britain against their brothers "loyally."

Three hundred million Asiatics in India are kept in hand by only 200,000
Britishers on the spot, fewer than one-tenth of 1 per cent.

Mr. Macaulay, head of the Canadian Sun Life Assurance company, expects

1932 surely, will see "the 1929 peak

The great gambling house at Monte Carlo is sad. Last year's profits amounted to only 575 per cent, lowest in years.

That compares well with the interest rate on a government bond, or dividends on legitimate industrial stocks.
But it isn't much for the gambling house.

That 575 per cent interests those that are foolish enough to gamble on horse racing, in gambling houses or otherwise. So-called "honest games" are arranged to yield "the house" a certain profit of about 40 per cent on every dollar bet. You can imagine what dishonest games make.

Many remember, when the Panama canal was suggested, how the gigantic sum staggered imagination.

We lent forty times that sum to Europe to help the processes of killing, and staggered nobody but little people that sold Liberty bonds far below par.

Now the War department studies the plans for a bridge over the Hudson river at Fifty-seventh street in New York.

It would cost $180,000,000, but that agitates no one.

We have passed into the billion dollar era. Mere millions attract little attention.

The Two-Fold Testimony of the Memorial

The expression which we give to our gratitude for the lives that have blessed ours, reveals to quite an extent the measure of our appreciative fineness, and when we think seriously about it, we know that our fidelity to our friends and to ourselves is one.

By the placing of a fitting tribute of memory, therefore, we do two most admirable things—we establish our cherished memories through the imperishable symbols we erect, and we go on record as possessing unchanging loyalty and everlasting devotion.

Many fine examples of artistic memorials are ready for your inspection in our display room . . . A thorough knowledge of our profession enables us to render understanding assistance to our clients in the selection of a family memorial.

A WARNING

A news item reports the first accident of the year at Leppla's Corners. A car driven by a Milwaukee man failed to stop for the arterial and the result was a crash in which an Appleton man and his daughter were injured. Fortunately no one was killed, but we sincerely hope that the county authorities will lose no time in taking the necessary steps to guard against any further accidents at this intersection, which has long been one of the most dangerous in the county.

OUR BY-ROADS

If you want real rest and re-creation for body and soul from your "for pleasure" motoring, leave off pounding the long monotonous stretches of concrete highways and turn off onto the by-roads. There is not a really bad road in the region now and the bits of beauty and vistas of lovely landscape are only a few miles out of the city in any direction.

There is a hilltop not far from Appleton from which you can have a view of miles and miles of lovely country in all directions. Dip down through the low country thick with blossoming shrubs and wild flowers, up over rocky ledges and sandy slopes and, if you pause to wander about a bit, you may find that a hen turkey has hidden her nest among the columbine and fern; but step carefully, else you will feel the prick of the cactus that grows wild within a score of miles of your own home town.

When you have that little fishing trip, picnic, family outing, or whatever it is that takes you into the open, don't try to "make time" on the way. Take that winding road along the river; you may see a statuesque crane standing at its edge; a squirrel will keep you company along the top rail of the old zig-zag fence; a flash of blue wing, or red, several golden warblers in a hawthorne tree; wild flowers, perfume and sweet air all the way, and a blessed absence of the hurrying, scurrying motorist who just has to "get there" before any one else and doesn't know why.

There are miles and miles of beautiful by-roads in our county. Just a turn of the wheel, a few rods to go and you are in a shady lane, lilacs and wild plums over here, wild currants and raspberries over there against the old rail, or stump fence with violets and buttercups at their feet. Beyond, a wall of cedar and tamarack accented with slender, silvery birches; the lilting whistle of a redwing balanced on a swaying cat-tail.

The Review will publish for you this summer a series of these little tours of Appletonland. Some you can do in an hour; others will take several hours; morning, evening or mid-day, whenever you have time to go, they are always worth your while. Do at least one a week and discover your own region.

"THE MOST IMPORTANT THING IN EDUCATION"

Just now, when teachers are holding conferences with our children over what subjects they shall study next year; when school boards are considering lists of teachers, and other groups are talking revision of courses and curricula, some things said by E. G. Doudna, Secretary of the Board of Normal Regents, at the annual meeting of the Wisconsin Association of School Boards, held at Racine in April, deserve special attention.

Being asked to talk on the above subject, he said: "I did not select this title—it's custom made, not individually tailored. It reveals America's love of the superlative. If I could select the most important thing I should be famous. Applying the statistical methods of approved educational practice the answer is easy—athletics. More space, more time, more interest, more money. What else matters?"

"We have, however, not one educational system, but several—public, private, church, military, vocational, cultural, or what have you. In public education we have many systems, objectives, organizations. Professor Bode says we have an educational 'mess.' Certainly we have an educational lag as compared with the sciences which deal with the material facts of this machine age.

"What we need most, it seems to me, is not more science, or technique, or administrative organization, but a point of view, a program, a philosophy of education that will help young people to form programs of life and social patterns that will lead to a better world than they find. This can only be done when we recognize the importance of personality in teaching and a reasonable public attitude towards schools."

BIRDS OR BUGS?

The assertion is made that bugs could damage this country more in ten days than a foreign war could in ten years!

What prevents them? The birds! And when you learn what huge quantities of all sorts of pestiferous bugs they consume you begin to realize their value to humans.

From its beginning the Review has tried to instil love and guardianship for birds into the hearts of its readers, large and small. There are many bird lovers here and we hope to make many more converts to their cause.

The farmer, perhaps more than anyone, should realize that what he may do to help and encourage the birds will come back to him many fold, not only in aesthetic value but in "cold cash." The useful species (and most of them are useful) deserve the fullest protection and should be encouraged in every possible way to "stay on the farm." They will pay amply in the destruction of injurious insects, the various groups feeding upon practically all of them, so that hardly a single agricultural pest escapes. On one farm where counts were made it was found that birds were destroying a million wheat aphids a day.

A bird refuge may be established by several farmers with the assistance of the state conservation department, but each landowner can do a great deal for himself by providing nesting places, and feed and water when necessary. While nesting boxes are a help, planting hedgerows and fencerows provides natural nesting places near the feeding grounds—the farmer's fields and orchards. These shrubs and trees and seed-bearing plants do not need to encroach upon the cultivated fields and they add greatly to the attractiveness of the highways and the lands adjoining—an asset to the farm in several ways.

Country school grounds, cemeteries, golf courses and bits of woodland may serve as bird refuges. Protect them so far as possible from cats and other marauding enemies.

The providing of nest boxes and shelters of some sort for birds is centuries old. Houses for carrier pigeons among the ancients, shelves for swallows in Japanese temples, feeding and nesting towers maintained by the Brahmans of India; all go to prove that we are not working on a new idea. In Germany the economic value of birds is so thoroughly realized that municipal and provincial governments long ago took up the providing of nest boxes and other aids.

Do all you can to increase the bird population of your farm; enlist their services in your behalf. They will work hard for you and you won't have to put them on the payroll.

ARE YOU WEATHERWISE?

Pick up an old almanac and you can find a weather forecast for next Christmas right now. The only trouble is that it probably won't turn out to be that kind of weather.

Although the average rainfall and temperature for a given locality varies but slightly from year to year, the performance from day to day, or even from hour to hour, cannot be accurately foretold—except, of course, in California.

We talk about the weather any time and all the time. We listen to weather prophets and if they foretell dire things we seem to listen with more attention and credence. It means a lot to us—pleasure and disappointment, gain and loss, menace and amusement—many things in our outdoor living and playing depend upon it. So it behooves us to become as weatherwise as may be.

Now and then you will find in these pages some ways of becoming weatherwise. Paste them in your Review Scrapbook and see how amusing, or profitable, it may be to test their accuracy.

Gerald LeMais, 29, a former salesman for the West Side Tire shop, was sentenced to serve from six months to five years in state prison when he was found guilty of embezzlement. He had taken $75 to get married, but the girl refused to go through with the ceremony when she learned that he had stolen the money. His sentence was severe because it was not his first offense.

W. J. Phillips, traffic officer for the state highway department, had a session with the county highway police last week and instructed them to pay especial attention to enforcing the new traffic laws regarding headlights and rear view mirrors.

The frost last Friday night did a great deal of damage throughout this section. Cabbage and strawberries suffered most heavily, and farmers estimate that the grain crops were set back at least two weeks.

A., Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, Red Cross, Legion Auxiliary, Volunteers of America, and club work carried on by the Woman's club.

"SON OF THE GODS" BRINGS DICK BARTHELMESS TO LOCAL SCREEN IN A POWERFUL ROLE

There have been many great Barthelmess pictures since the days of the unforgettable "Broken Blossoms" and "Tol'able David," but the greatest of them all is the latest, "Son of the Gods," which has just come from the First National and Vitaphone Studios to the Appleton theatre for today and Saturday.

Very rarely does the screen, even in its most brilliant productions, offer so perfect a combination of story, star, cast and setting. In "Son of the Gods" it is difficult to imagine how any of these elements could have been improved upon. Dick Barthelmess, one of the most appealing actors now appearing before the American public, has never exerted more forcefully the magic of his personality. Early in the story of the boy brought up as a Chinese, believing he is Chinese, living as an alien amid the scornful and uncomprehending Americans whose blood really flows in his veins, though he knows it not—early in this dramatic and moving tale Dick wins our sympathy, and, having won it, he retains it to the end. This role of Sam Lee will always occupy a high niche in the gallery of Barthelmess portraits—perhaps the very highest.

the role of a muleskinner who is almost fonder of his mule than he is of his girl, "Peanuts" Byron. John Boles and Vivienne Segal play the principal dramatic roles in this Warner Bros. production, which is an adaptation of the Stallings-Hammerstein II Broadway success, "Rainbow." Vincent Youmans did the music. Ray Enright directed.

Cost of motor car accidents in 1929 has been put at 850 millions.

Cleopatra is no doubt the envy of all other mules in Southern California even though she gets by on her bad looks. RUSSELL WICHMANN IN SECOND ORGAN RECITAL

A musical event of considerable importance to residents in Appleton and to which many have been looking forward, is Russell Wichmann's second organ recital. Owing to clashing of dates, some folks were prevented from attending the first recital, so now comes another opportunity to hear this talented young Appletonian. The recital will be given on the fine four manual organ at the First Methodist Episcopal church next Tuesday, May 27.

Russell has made wonderful progress under Prof. Wm. C. Webb, of the Lawrence Conservatory of Music, who thinks very highly of Russell's outstanding ability. A glance at the program will serve to show there are numbers calculated to test the technique even of the best organists, while at the same time it will be seen that an enjoyable evening can with confidence be anticipated. Russell Wichmann is only seventeen years of age, and holds several positions at the High school. He is the youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Wichmann, 525 N. Sampson St., and they are to be congratulated on having so talented a son, one who promises to go far in the musical world.

RETURNS FROM THE WEST

Dr. D. M. Gallaher has just returned from a trip to Spokane where he went to visit his brother. He was only gone ten days and spent most of that time on the train, but he did manage to get in some mountain fishing for trout and, according to his story, caught some real fish. But he got his biggest thrills watching the Indians catching salmon. They used pitchforks and any old kind of hooks to snag fish weighing twenty and thirty pounds and drag them up on land. They were concerned solely with results, not methods.

But the doctor is not satisfied with telling ordinary fish stories which might be duplicated by any one, so he has the following to relate: A good sized salmon was required by the authorities for exhibition purposes, so the game warden went down to the river, lassoed a thirty pound salmon, hauled it up on land and carried it alive and uninjured to the exhibition tank. Better let the doctor tell you that one, because he saw it done.

The Water Department Has Always Paid for Its Street Repairs

May 17, 1930.

Editor Review:—May I correct a misstatement of facts in your editorial of May 16, "Indifference or Incompetence."

There has always existed an arrangement between the water department and the city that when a leak in a water pipe occurs, we have the right to dig up and make the repair immediately. What else can be done? Please remember that some of the mains and services have been in use nearly fifty years and leaks will occur.

As far as the water department is concerned, a record has always been kept of places where streets have been torn up. Repairs not only to pavements but to dirt streets as well are made by the city street department and such repairs are billed to and paid for by the water department. Only yesterday a check of $289.23 was given to the city for repairs made during April.

I do not know what arrangements there exists with others, but as far as the water department is concerned repairs to streets have always been paid for by the department.

Very truly yours,

JOS. J. PLANK,

Chrm. of Appleton Water Com.

He Is for Conservation

Editor Review:—I enjoyed your editorial entitled "You Name Them" very much and am glad that some one has the courage to speak up and express opinions, even when prominent people are likely to have their feelings hurt. There are altogether too many people in this wonderful state of ours who are not satisfied with the legal limit placed on fish and game, but take all they can get. The game wardens cannot possibly be everywhere, and the public would not stand for stopping and searching every car returning from the fishing regions. The remedy lies with the sportsmen themselves. Fish and game are common property and no one man is entitled to more than his share. I would suggest, in this connection, that you reprint the attached editorial which was taken from the Marshfield News-Herald.

—Ike.

(Editor's Note:—The editorial in question also expresses our sentiments and we are reprinting it in this column:

Common Property

Fish and game of the state are the common property of all citizens, hence each citizen should consider that something has been stolen from him when game law violators exceed the maximums in hunting and fishing, and when they hunt and fish out of season. It may require many years to drive this fact home, but it is just as wrong to fish and hunt illegally as it is for a yegg to rob a bank, steal an automobile or any other piece of property belonging to another.

Judging from the stress placed on illegal fishing, hunting and trapping in Wisconsin by Director Kelleter of the Wisconsin conservation commission in his talk before the Marshfield Rotarians Monday, this phase of the commission's work is a difficult one. Mr. Kelleter deplored the lack of "conservation-mindedness" existing in some communities. He admitted that his wardens were not catching every violator.

The News-Herald has always felt that the only citizens of the state who have a right, if anyone has, to fish and hunt out of season are the settlers upon whose land wild game feeds. To the settlers, wild game is food; to the sportsman it is sport. The new settler, especially, should be entitled to hunt in advance of the season, one or two deer before they are frightened away by the army of hunters that flock to the woods upon the opening of the season. The settler helps to feed wild game, therefore he should be entitled to some of that game without buying a license and without waiting until it is chased from his land.

But that, in our opinion, is the only exception that should be made. Game law violators should be punished severely. It is time Wisconsin became one hundred per cent "conservation-minded." The best way to bring this about is through education, but if the method fails, then the law should be used.

It is far better to fail in a good cause than to succeed in a bad one.

The Crippled Lady of Peribonka

by JAMES OLIVER CURWOOD

INSTALLMENT XIV

Lucy-Belle, shocked into sickness, was taken to her home. But Claire remained. Men who saw her in the weird glow of the lights will never be able to forget the image of her face as it was photographed upon their memories. Her blue eyes were so wide open and staring, so filled with an unwavering sapphire flame that at times Derwent thought of her as a spirit-goddess instead of a woman. Could Paul have seen her he would have known that at last she had conquered her fear and repugnance of the wilderness. She had come with the first men before a trail was cut. Her dress and shoes were torn, her soft skin bruised and bleeding. Where the water crashed and thundered loudest out from between the chasm walls she stood unafraid, until Derwent twice drew her back from the nearness and danger of it. She resented his appeal to leave the search to others, and Derwent made it only once. A white face, watching for its dead—that was what men would remember. Eyes flamingly blue, hungrily searching the black stream as it came from the mountain. A fragile form that seemed tireless, as steel. A woman, and yet more than woman—an unforgettable spirit, a vision that was like tragic music, always to be remembered.

She did not give up with the first hours of evening, but continued to watch through the night. She did not move from the foot of the gorge and the pool, as if she were sure that whatever came to her would be found there. Derwent was frequently with her, and tried to talk, but her lips framed few words. Not until day came again did something give way in her, and hopelessness take its place. Then he took her home to Lucy-Belle.

"I waited too long," she said to him, and afterward, back with the searching men, he wondered what she had meant.

These searchers, could they have looked through the rock, would have seen a fire. It was the second night for Paul and Carla in a place where night and day were the same. Paul had found drifts of wood along the edge of the sand, mixed with pitchy pine, and a little spot in their world was illumined by light.

In the fire glow sat Carla, combing her long silky hair with her fingers. Paul watched her as she smoothed and braided the tresses, employing as great care as though she were in her bedroom at home. This was the third time she had given it such attention in their thirty-six hours of entombment. At other times he had held a light for her at the edge of the water while she bathed her face and hands, and once she said to him: "It is wonderful water, almost as soft as that which comes with rain." She spoke as if they might have been camping on one of the streams they loved, with the sky above and flowers about them. It was her utter acceptance of their fate as a thing of happiness which transformed what would have been a hell for him into a heaven. She had sat in the soft sand at his feet, a few moments before, with her head pillowed against his knees, and there she had unbraided her hair for him to caress, as she watched and pointed out for him the unusual and beautiful pictures that built themselves in the changing coals and crumbling embers of the fire.

Now she was a little distance from him, and no sense of dread or fear oppressed him as he followed the rhythmic movements of her slim white fingers braiding her hair again.

If it were madness which possessed him it was a beautiful madness, a sense of joyous living where there should have been despair. At first the fighting part of him had instinctively struggled against it, but now he accepted it fully, until, seeing Carla as she was, death seemed vague and far away and the glory of life very near. They had made no effort to hide from themselves the coming of the end, and Carla thought of it as a beautiful thing, a little journey, which they were making gladly together. Never had Paul believed so surely in a God. He had found himself fond of telling her how he loved her hair more than any other physical thing about her, and she had said: "I am going to spread it out so you may put your face in it when we lie down to sleep." This was the way she spoke of what was to come—as sleep. To drift off like this, his arms about her, seemed to Paul the fruition of a great privilege and joy, and not a triumph of fleshly dissolution. He had told her little stories about his mother and of the time they had spent sun-filled hours in the Indian burial place at Brantford, where the proudest of her forest ancestors were buried.

"I could not understand her then, when she told me how gladly she would give her life, were it not for me, to live for a single year the glorious freedom of Molly Brant," said Paul. "But I do—now. In that one year she knew she would find some thing which would more than make up for all the other years she might live, just as every hour here with you is more to me than ten thousand back there."

As he said these things, and believed and felt them, there was in him a will to live which would not utterly extinguish itself. It was scarcely more than a spark, a smoldering ember that was bound to die, for his eyes, his brain, and every faculty of reason which he possessed told him there was no hope of finding a way beyond the walls which shut them in. A few minutes before, when Carla had sat at his knees, with his fingers feeling the warmth and sweetness of her hair, this spark had leaped into flame. It still remained as Carla yielded at last to his demand, and gave herself to the bed he had made for her, with his coat for her pillow.

"It seems almost a sin to sleep," she said; and if slumber were near or even the necessity for it, he could find no shadow of it in her face. She might have risen from her bed an hour ago, so freshly clear and lovely were her eyes, so deep their lustrous content and happiness when she looked at him. Yet, after a little, her lashes drooped as if to veil the love behind them, and lay in velvet darkness against the whiteness of her cheeks. For a while Paul sat close and watched her, and with each breath the flame in him grew stronger, the demand that something happen, through force of God or man, to break down the walls of death which environed her.

Alone, with Carla's unconscious form lending faith and inspiration to his thought, he fixed his attention, as a dozen times before, on the smoke which rose from the burning wood. Where did it go?

Hours ago he had asked himself this question, and until he had discovered a thin fog of smoke settling over the water, and drifting away with the rush of it, his blood had run swiftly with a thrill of hope. And now, in spite of the fact that he knew where it went, the question remained, as if a voice inside his head had been trained to ask it, parrot-like, and could not be made to stop.

In and Out Of The Kitchen

Hurried Breakfasts

Breakfasts eaten on the run are decidedly unhealthful. Yet they are the general rule in many families. How about yours? A good deal of harm can be done to one's physical makeup and one's disposition by hastily gulping breakfast and then rushing off to school, business, or an engagement.

Why not insist on the family arising half an hour earlier if need be so that they may eat sanely and fairly substantially instead of swallowing a few bites in a nervous hurry?

Breakfast comes after the longest period of fasting and should give essential nourishment for the day's work.

A "roast thermometer" for household use is now being manufactured and marketed in the United States.

It has long been the laboratory practice of the Home Economic Bureau of the Department of Agriculture to use such thermometers in meats to tell when they reach a certain stage of doneness. It is inserted in the center of the cut and indicates when to take the roast from the oven. Temperature ranges for "rare," "medium" and "well done" are clearly marked.

Large roasts, whole hams, need no longer be brought to the table with the fear that they are underdone or overdone, if cooked by one of these meat thermometers.

A radio set in the home is a practical benefit to women, especially those who do not get out of the home a great deal. Let your radio help you and teach you as well as entertain you. You will find your work more interesting and easier when you apply some of the helpful hints to the daily routine.

If you hold the ends of faded cut flowers under water while cutting off part of the stems you will often find that they freshen up a great deal. This treatment applied to fresh flowers will keep them much longer than usual.—R. S.

If you wish to prolong the usefulness of oilcloth or linoleum, clean it thoroughly and then rub liquid wax into it occasionally. Polish well with a soft cloth or piece of flannel wrapped round a flat-iron. This treatment provides a protecting finish and makes them easy to keep clean. They look nice and wear much longer.

I save the little glass jars in which sandwich filling, mayonnaise and peanut butter are sold and store spices, seasonings, seeds and other small things in them. They are kept clean and fresh and dry. I can tell at a glance how much there is on hand of each and there is no array of unsightly packages in the cabinet.—E. M.

Every family should possess at least a few good pictures. They make a lasting impression on children whose likes and dislikes are largely formed in youth right at home.

Our Gardens

Until Yesterday

In seven years I had never met my neighbor,
Until yesterday I spoke to her through the fence—
And today she has sent me a wheelbarrow full of lilacs
And more than enough iris to brighten my garden.

—Witter Bynner.

That is one of the lovable things about a little home garden. It is apt to prompt the sort of little neighborly acts that sweeten life and make it a bit easier.

So don't just "make" your garden this year and then spend the rest of your summer leisure playing golf or bridge. Tend that garden. Exchange ideas and experiences and seeds and bulbs and plants with your neighbors, over the back fence.

The garden itself bears close acquaintance well and a visit to it in the early morning not only reveals the happenings of the night but is a delight in itself.

Don't make your garden so large that it will be a burden. A small garden intensively cultivated is better than a large one allowed to go wild. Frequent stirring of the soil with a steel rake or other tool, especially during dry weather, will stimulate growth and control weeds. The roots of plants require air as well as moisture, and frequent stirring of the surface soil admits the air and at the same time conserves moisture by forming what is called a soil mulch, preventing the escape of moisture.

* * * Watering

Properly applied artificial watering proves a decided advantage, especially to some plants. Frequent light sprinkling of the garden is injurious. The proper method is to soak the soil thoroughly about once a week, preferably during the evening and then loosen the surface by cultivating the following morning or as soon as the soil is dry enough to work. No more water should be applied until absolutely necessary, then another soaking should be given.

A sprinkling can, garden hose, or overhead sprinkling system may be employed. Perhaps the best method of applying the water is to open slight furrows along the rows of plants and allow the water to flow gently along these furrows and soak in.

After the water has all soaked in the wet earth should be covered with dry, to prevent baking. This suggests a good method where seeds are to be sown in dry weather. Open a slight furrow and fill with water; then, after the water has soaked into the soil, the seeds may be sown and covered with dry earth. This insures a good stand of plants, as the moisture feeds upward in the soil, like oil in a lamp wick.

they love and carefully transplant it to their home garden. We feel that these are doing a good deal towards the perpetuating of species of wild flowers that are in danger of extermination in some regions by the encroachments of cultivated fields and pasture lots. Our Friendly Neighbors

Of the birds whose songs (?) were given last week the first, who says: "Bury—bury it—deeper—deeper—hurry up, hurry up, hurry up. N-o-w what? See, see, see!" is 11½ inches long. The male is reddish-brown above, like burnished copper; grey with brown spots on the under side.

Long, curved beak which is so useful in thrashing about among the leaves and moss when hunting for bugs. Your first impression is his length—long body, long beak, long tail. A great bug and spider destroyer! The female of the species is lighter in color.

The nest is a rather careless structure of twigs and rootlets placed in hedges, thickets or thorn bushes. Last summer one built very close to the ground in my neighbor's barberry hedge. They are not always so trusting. Eggs—four or five, bluish white with fine red-brown dots.

The second bird—the one who always seems to say: "Whit-t-o-o-weet, whit-t-o-o-weet!"—is eight inches long. The male has a black head and back, is reddish-brown on the sides and white below. Tail is black at the top and white at the end. The female is more brown than black and hard to see among last year's oak leaves.

A bird of the swamps, brush, pastures and open woodlands. A ground bird; usually found scratching (with both feet) among the leaves for bugs and insects. Makes a nest on the ground (rarely in bushes) with strips of bark, grass and leaves. Eggs, white with brown speckles.

Oh, a striking fellow he is and has avored me many springs with a going over of my dooryard and a bath in the tub!

"The orioles are here—more than I've ever noticed before," a man said to me yesterday.

Do put out material for their nests. You can help them a lot and perhaps they'll build their lovely nest in your elm! And, oh, the good they do! You cannot imagine the number of ants they eat; and worms—awful fuzzy ones, tent caterpillars and all kinds.

They are so beautiful! Isn't that worth a lot to you? See them in the old apple tree, first looking into every curled up leaf, then into all the blossoms. Watch closely. Sometimes a green worm is dislodged and rapidly lets himself down by a web, but Colonel Oriole is after him and gets him every time.

Material for nest building is so scarce in a city, so you can help by placing string on the fence, on the clothesline, even on the porch rail. Cut the pieces about two feet long. Madam will get them almost before you've turned round—she needs so much. She's particular, too; will use only white—just the ordinary twine which is tied about the parcels from the grocery!

I have supplied three orioles this spring, with help from my neighbors, and often have furnished the entire supply for a nest. One such was broken off, branch and all, one autumn and what a delightful gift it made to the kindergarten!

Bird Editor, Appleton Review:—Is the bird which says: "Bury it—deeper—deeper . . .," a cat bird?

No, this bird talks plainer and more emphatically, and never says: "Mew." Try again, after reading the description given in this issue.

Poems

Poppies in the Wheat

"Along Ancona's hills the shimmering heat,
A tropic tide of air, with ebb and flow,
Bathes all the fields of wheat until they glow."

Like flashing seas of green, which toss and beat
Around the vines. The poppies lithe and fleet
Seem running, fiery torchmen, to and fro
To mark the shore.

The farmer does not know
That they are there. He walks with heavy feet,
Counting the bread and wine by autumn's gain,
But I—I smile to think that days remain
Perhaps to me in which, although bread be sweet
No more, and red warm my blood in vain,
I shall be glad remembering how the fleet,
Lithe poppies ran like torchmen with the wheat.

—Helen Hunt.

My Home

'Tis a little house in a valley
Snuggled near to a rocky hill.
And a spring bubbling onward
Over a rocky rill;
There's a little old apple orchard
Where springtime blossoms of white
And delicate pink as the seashells
Those blossoms a beautiful sight.

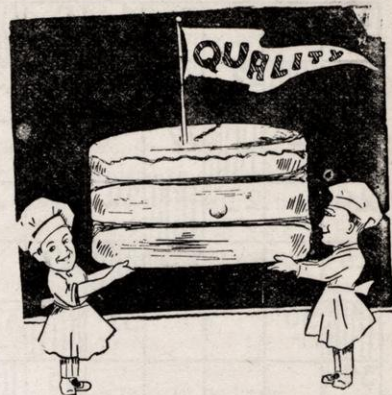

In front is an old-fashioned garden
Where the choicest flowers grow;
A pathway of roses and hollyhocks
And many others I know.
Oh! I smell the sweet scented clovers,
Their fragrance a spicy delight.
How I love that home in the valley,
That little old home painted white.

I love it in the early morning
When the sun o'er the hilltops peeps;
After the moonlight of evening
Has bathed my home in sleep.
I love the low of the cattle
Near the gate beyond the hill;
And even the old crowing rooster;
I seem to hear him still.

I'm going to leave my city home
Tonight and travel fast
To live my childhood o'er again,
Those happy days now past.
In sweet dreams I will travel,
Swinging on gates of memory,
Living my childhood days again
In all their pure simplicity.

SIGMAN ANNOUNCES HIS CANDIDACY FOR DISTRICT ATTORNEY

Samuel Sigman, who has been taking an active part in local politics during the last few years, has issued the following statement, announcing his candidacy for district attorney at the September primaries:

"I announce my candidacy for district attorney at this time to assure my friends that I will be in the race at the September primary election.

"It would be the usual thing to say that friends urged me to run. Taking the expression from ex-President Coolidge, 'I choose to run.' While many of my friends were kind enough to suggest that I become a candidate, I declare my intentions to seek the office of district attorney because I feel that I can render a service that merits the support of the voters of this county.

"My position on all public questions is a matter of record. I have never hesitated to take a stand. Once I have made sure that I am on the side of truth and justice, and that it is in the interest of the common people, I do not care what others may do. I shall not yield to any powers for the voters that I may gain thereby. I have no alliances with any political boss or clique.

"I place my candidacy in the hands of the voters. To them I will gladly be responsible for the confidence that I enjoy from them. If elected I will endeavor to prove worthy of their trust in me.

"SAMUEL SIGMAN."

SUMMER CARE OF FURS

By Ted Meagher

Because furs are among the most costly garments the average woman buys, a word as to their care is not amiss at this time when they are being put away.

Furs stored in hot closets or cedar chests do not thrive under the wetting influences of warm atmosphere. A fur coat, when new, has much of the natural animal oil still intact in the pelt. When a coat is stored away without being cleaned, the oil may be absorbed from the pelt. Consequently the skin becomes like paper and rips and tears easily.

Storage vaults built especially for furs are best for their care. They are spacious to permit air space between garments. The vaults are kept cool and well ventilated so the furs are not affected by hot summers. Each garment is cleaned scientifically before it is placed in storage and all repairing or remodelling is done at that time.

HIGHWAY PATROLMEN LAID OFF

In accordance with its policy of economy twenty highway patrolmen, who had been operating on county highways, were laid off Tuesday. This was considered advisable because the roads are in excellent condition at the present time. Patrolmen on the state trunk highways cannot be laid off because a state law prevents. The men will be recalled as soon as needed.

High School Notes

By Wilhelmine Meyer

Last Wednesday the Girl Reserves held a picnic for all the ninth grade girls of the city, at Pierce park. The club for the past three years has held some sort of party to help the ninth graders get acquainted with the high school girls.

Next Monday the senior class will present its annual play. This year the play will be "Life's Like That," which has been written by Miss Ruth McKennan, dramatic coach, who is also directing it. Those who are taking part in the dramatization are Jean Shannon, Loyal Fraser, David Trittin, Monica Cooney, Betty Meyer, Russell Wichman, Janette Hughes, Bob Mortimer, Cecile Blick, Lawrence Oosterhaus, Roberta Burns, and Art Roemer. There will be excitement: an unknown man, robbery, a detective agency is formed, love affairs, and—well, we leave it to you. The play will begin at 8:30, at the Lawrence Memorial chapel, May 26. Reserved seat sale began at Belling's Drug store yesterday.

Yesterday Miss Ruth Saecker's chemistry students visited the bleaching department of the Kimberly-Clark paper mill.

The G. A. A. picnic, which was postponed from last Friday, will be held this Friday after school, at Pierce park. Entertainment will consist of track events, baseball, tennis and other sports.

Wednesday of next week Mr. Hales of the Fox River Valley Safety council will speak before the students in the assembly.

The last Lyceum number of the year will be Mr. Isaac Greyearth, an Indian, who will probably speak to the students next Tuesday morning.

May 29 will be a Red Letter day at High school. Classes will end for the day at twelve o'clock. At 2:30 the class day exercises will take place before the main door or in the assembly in case of bad weather. The public is invited, and all Harris street will be roped off for the bleachers. A pageant will be presented depicting the work of the class of 1930. The American Legion athletic award, the craftsmanship shield, and the school spirit cup will also be awarded. At 4:30 the Clarion annuals will be distributed. At 6:30 the annual senior banquet will be held in the gymnasium.

A. H. S. ATHLETICS

By John Reeve

Orange track men will compete in their last home track meet at Whiting field tomorrow afternoon. The event will be a triangular meet between Oshkosh, West Green Bay, and Appleton.

The High school tracksters lost to the Lawrence frosh last Friday by one and one-fourth points. In the same meet Oshkosh trailed behind and all indications are that the "Terrors" will again show well against the invaders.

West Green Bay will probably figure in field events Saturday as they made a showing in the conference relays held at Manitowoc three weeks ago.

The conference meet will be held May 31 at Marinette. East Green Bay and Manitowoc are very well rounded whereas the local team is weak in some field events. Because there will be no dual meets with either of the outstanding schools only time will tell how the Orange will come out in the finish.

McKINLEY NOTES

By Mamie Chall

Friday evening the girls' baseball team of McKinley Junior high beat the girls' team of Wilson Junior high by a score of 9 to 8. Batteries for the winning team were Mamie Chall and Lillian Oertel, for Wilson Julia Devoe and Stella Murphy.

The McKinley school has long boasted that it has one of the most beautiful school grounds in the city. Friday, during class meeting, the 9X section planted two cedar trees near the west entrance. The trees are about seven feet in height and add much to the attractiveness of the school grounds.

Friday, during assembly period, the girls heard a very interesting talk on Camp Onaway which was given by Miss Marjorie Kranhold of the Appleton Woman's club. Several girls from McKinley are planning to attend the camp at Onaway this summer.

The Florence Nightingale Troop No. 3 conducted a hot dog sale Wednesday noon. The receipts totalled about $2.00.

For the past three years the Boy Scouts of McKinley Troop No. 11 have Grapp. Another year they visited a lumber camp and learned much about selective cutting of timber. This year they will go to the Dalles of the Wolf river, leaving Friday afternoon and returning some time Saturday. This trip will also be a practice trip for the Boy Scouts Camp O'Ral to be held June 14 and 15 at Erb park. They are to learn how to pitch tents and cook meals over camp fires. Mr. W. T. Fox, Mr. George Cooper and Mr. Donald Bowker will be in charge.

ROOSEVELT NOTES

By Jean C. Owen

Final plans for the ninth grade farewell party have been completed. The party is to be held May 23, in the gym at 8 o'clock. The Brokaw hall orchestra, directed by Mory Johnson, is to furnish the music. The gym is to be decorated in three colors, orchid, green and coral. Yellow butterflies are to be scattered about. Colored lights are to be used as the lighting system to reflect on the crystal ball which will hang in the center of the room. Light refreshments will be served by several eighth grade girls. Miss Allen is chairman of the entertainment; Miss Broderick, refreshments; Miss Jackson, finance; Miss Schultz, decorations; and Miss Kopplin, clean up. All of the ninth grade advisors are to assist with hopes that the party will be a huge success. Admission per student is forty cents.

A carelessly dropped cigarette started the fire which left the above scene of desolation in its wake. In this section it was only a grass fire, but note how it killed the young trees.

CHEAP TRANSPORTATION

John Nagelschmidt, Pittsfield, Mass., bid $2 at a used car auction and got an "old bus" of uncertain years and model. Going over the car John covered 61 cents under cushions and cracks supposedly jiggled out of the pockets of previous owners so that purchase cost him only $1.39 net. At cost of only gas and oil he drove the car nearly 1,000 miles before it collapsed completely like the old "hoss shay." At Daytona, Fla., John Rockefeller gave Nagelschmidt a brand new dime thereby reducing his liabilities to only $1.29. Now all John has to do is to find a way to get back.
