VIVACE.

MODERATO.

A Husband wanted! hear me tell, My wants to you, gents, I beseech; For

I will just be my own belle, Turn my own crier to all and each.

Then hear me state the sort of man-, The qua-li-ties he must possess-, The re-quisites, be-fore he can, Join me in dou-ble bles--sed--ness! For-give me if I am ex-pli-cit, In my plans to get a mate; For sure 'tis oft' a dang'rous vi-sit, Making the "U-ni--ted State".....

SECOND VERSE.

A Husband wanted! he must be, Most rea-dy at my beck and call, Quite pa-tient, pleasant, light and free, And take me to each rout and ball.
Then he must drive such thoughts a-way, As strict e-co-no-
-my all hence, And if I or-der, he must pay, But ne-ver hint at the ex-pence: Then he must let me keep my car-riage,
Have my jewels-trinkets-gold; The portion brought by me at marriage,
Must of course, be un-con-troull'd..... A Husband, &c. §.

THIRD VERSE.

A Husband wanted! not morose, Not ob-sti-nate, Ill-natur'd, blind; But e-ver smi-ling and jocose, Con-ce-ding always and most kind;
Then if he e-ver jealous grows, He must never shew his spleen, Tho' there be a score of beaux, Round about me flirt-ing seen; But he him-self must not phi-lan-der, Deal-ing out the old excuse, Of "what is proper for the gander, Al-so good is for the goose"..... A Husband, &c. §.

FOURTH VERSE.

A Husband wanted! Social rubs, When wanted he must al-ways play, Nor e-ver think in noi-sy clubs, To pass the marriage hours a-way.
His en-gagements he must waive, Stu-dy all my words and looks, Be my most o--be--dient slave, Buy my mu-sic and my books; Let me have what I de-light on, Daring not to hint I'm wrong, In sum-mer let me go to Brighton, Margate, Chel-ten-ham, ^{and} Bo-----logne..... A Husband, &c. §.

FIFTH VERSE.

A Husband wanted! slight and slim, His forehead fair and bright his glance, In language sparkling, light of limb, And moving graceful in the dance.
He must have a voice to sing, - Rea-dy tact to guess charades, Join a ga-lop, join a fling, Now Johnn Strauss' and now Mu--sard's! Then he must not dare to chide me,
If my soul to mu-sic flocks, Of course he'll joyful-ly provide me
At the Op'ra with a Box..... A Husband, &c. §.
