Introduction

IN THIS directory we have endeavored to give the farmers of Iowa County a complete and reliable Home and County Directory with other valuable information which will make it valuable as a reference book.

The task of calling at every farm home in the county and collecting the information for this directory was a tremendous one. We have received splendid cooperation from the farmers and business men of the county, without which the publication of this directory would be impossible. In a very few cases we have found farmers unwilling to give the information requested. In some cases where the family lived upon a tract of land of less than five acres, the family has not been listed. This will account for a few names that do not appear.

A few mistakes are bound to occur in a directory that involves so large an amount of work, but we have spared no effort nor expense to make the information complete and accurate, and believe that the mistakes are very few.

We want to speak a word of appreciation for the advertisers whose liberal support has helped materially to bear the heavy expense of publishing this directory, and ask that you favor them with your patronage whenever possible.

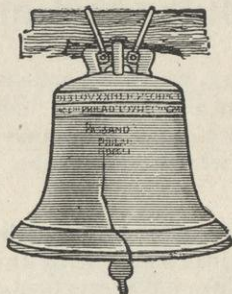

We believe that the publication of this directory will be a real service to the farmers of Iowa County, and in line with Prairie Farmer's Policy of service to the farmers of Iowa County. We hope that the increased circulation of Prairie Farmer in Iowa County, which has resulted, will help in the movement for better farming, better living, and more prosperity for the county, and that our many new friends will become permanent members of the big Prairie Farmer family.

The Song of the Lazy Farmer

THERE ain't no county quite like this in all the fertile state of Wisconsin; the place where ev'ryone is gay is right up here in Iowa. Most ev'ryone knows how to milk and that is why their wives wear silk; there ain't no cows as good as these that chews their cud beneath the trees. While other folks sell corn and oats, these here folks feed it to their shoats and to their dairy cows and that is why their cream and butterfat is putting money in their pants. I told Mirandy Jane perchance if I was young again I would come up here where the soil is good and start again, I couldn't fail where dairy cows fill up the pail.

In the summer time I surely wish I lived up here where I could fish most ev'ry day in lakes and streams; to hear these fellers talk it seems there's plenty fish in ev'ry lake, you have to watch out or they'll take the bait right out your boat, I'd like to go out now and git some pike. It's nice to have good dairy cows and pastures where they loaf and browse, but best of all is places where you sit and fish without a care, and rest and do not give a hoot, but sit and smoke a good cheroot. And now, let's give a cheer and say, hurrah, hurrah for Iowa!

IOWA COUNTY

Picturesque and Prosperous

IOWA COUNTY, nestling among the Blue Mounds in the southwestern part of Wisconsin, might appear to the casual passer-by as one which is quite picturesque and which would make an ideal summer recreation playground, yet not rate very high as a center of production of foodstuffs for the state and nation.

This impression would be erroneous, as Iowa county produces several million dollars worth of farm products annually. Although not one of the largest dairy counties in the state, the 63,900 head of cattle in the county are worth nearly $4,000,000. The cows of milking age, numbering 37,800, produce an average of 5,000 pounds of milk each a year, which is worth $3,855,600.

Cheese is the chief dairy product, there being more than 11,000,000 pounds of this food manufactured in the county every year. In fact 68 per cent of all milk produced in the county goes for the manufacture of cheese. The county's annual cheese output is equal to about one-thirtieth of the gross output of the whole state.

Seventeen per cent of the milk goes to creameries where nearly 700,000 pounds of butter are made every year. From these facts it is safe to say that Iowa county is an important agricultural county, with dairying the leading industry.

Eighty-four per cent of the county's area of 499,800 acres is farm land, and of this, 46 per cent is plow land. From the census reports it is seen that there are nearly three farm owners to every tenant. This in itself is a good indication of farm prosperity. Iowa county land is worth $25,605,237 and the farm buildings thereon are valued at more than $36,000,000. The farms average 178 acres each.

Corn is the principal grain crop, with 26 per cent of the plow land devoted to it. Oats is next with 21.9 per cent, and barley third with 6.4 per cent. Clover, timothy and alfalfa occupy 41.8 per cent of the plow land of the county.

The 44,810 acres of corn grown in 1927 were worth $1,091,571, while 37,860 acres of oats produced grain worth $640,591. Clover and timothy grow on more than 60,000 acres which yield an average of 2.1 tons per acre and produce a crop worth nearly $2,000,000.

Alfalfa is an excellent crop. It makes an average of 2.4 tons per acre, and in 1927 the 6,190 acres in the county produced hay worth $238,439. Other crops of the county include dry peas, canning peas, potatoes and wheat, but these are of minor importance.

Practically all grain within the county is fed to livestock. Some 45,000 head of hogs, or about 91 head for each 1,000 acres of area, are worth a little more than $600,000 a year. Sheep and lambs, 12,800 head of them, bring their owners $130,560 annually.

Poultry is an important industry. In 1927 there were 211,000 hens and pullets of laying age on Iowa county farms. During that year they laid 1,573,300 dozen eggs which sold for $393,300.

These are strictly agricultural enterprises. In addition, the quarrying of stone and the mining of lead add several thousands of dollars a year to the wealth of the county.

Iowa county farm folks are progressive. Sixty-seven per cent of them receive daily newspapers and 88 per cent of them have telephones. Autos are found on 92 of every 100 farms in the county and trucks on 27 of every 100. Eighteen per cent of the homes are lighted with electricity and 36 per cent of the farm women do their washing with power washers. Furnaces provide heat in 28 of every 100 homes in the county.

Pianos and radios are found in 33 per cent of the homes in addition to phonographs in 46 per cent of them, and 14 per cent of the farm children of the county are taking music lessons.

Iowa county ranks better than the average for the state in all forms of modern appliances and conveniences with the exception of phonographs. The average for the state is 47 per cent, while Iowa county is one per cent lower, with 46 talking machines to every 100 homes.

The history of Iowa county is rich in Indian legend and fact, and stories of the struggles of the pioneers who settled the region.

The territory around the Wees-konsan river was once occupied by a powerful race of Indians called the "Iowas." It was from these aborigines that the county derived its name; although it was occupied at the time of settlement by the Sacs, Foxes and Winnebagoes. When organized as a county under the territorial government of Michigan in 1829, Iowa county comprised about half of that part of the present State of Wisconsin below the Wisconsin river, but as the population increased and the need was felt for greater centralization in government, other counties were formed from the land comprised in its original boundaries, those of Dane, Green, Grant, La-Fayette and a part of Rock. After the formation of La Fayette, Iowa assumed its present form, being bounded on the north by the Wisconsin river, and Richland and Sauk counties, on the east by Dane, on the south by LaFayette and on the west by Grant county. Iowa county is nearly square, being about 30 miles long and 25 miles broad.

Concerning the arrival of the first white man in Iowa county reports are conflicting. Undoubtedly the country was unsettled before the year 1827 or only populated by roving tribes of Indians and trappers. One good result of the Winnebago war was to demonstrate the mineral wealth of this region and open the land for the pioneers who began to come in in great numbers soon after.

It is generally acknowledged that Ezra Laramie and a man by the name of Putnam were the discoverers of the lead mines. With a few other pioneer miners, they were located just below the spring and had thrown up two small log cabins. At that time there were a considerable number of Winnebago Indians here who outnumbered the whites by ten to one.

The first woman in the settlement was Miss Eliza Van Sickle, sister of an Indian trader of the same name. The next woman was Mrs. John G. Parish, a Kentucky lady who immigrated to the lead mines in the vicinity of Mifflin in the fall of 1827. Mrs. Thos. McRaney appeared early in the spring of 1828 at the Dodgeville diggings.

Among the first persons to improve the discovery were Gen. Henry Dodge, Jesse W. Shull (the founder of Shullsburg), John Ray, who afterward settled at Willow Springs in the present county of LaFayette, and Jas. M. Strode, of Galena, Ill., all of whom arrived at the present site of Dodgeville on the 3rd day of October, 1827.

General Henry Dodge was accompanied by his wife and children and four negro slaves. He immediately staked out an extensive mining claim which covered what is now the business section of Dodgeville. The next year, growing dissatisfied with the government's treatment of the miners, he moved to the grove which now bears his name, about four miles southeast of Dodgeville.

A mining camp consisting of 20 log houses, the homes of about 100 miners, grew up over night in this vicinity. A smelting furnace was built which was soon in constant operation turning out large quantities of lead in bars which was shipped from Helena on the Wisconsin river in flat bottomed boats to St. Louis.

The vicinity of Mineral Point was supposed by some to have been settled in the fall of 1827. However, John Hood and wife are generally accredited with having made the first permanent location. They came in the spring or early summer of 1828. This first place of abode was a hastily constructed hut. Other settlers came here and found good mines. Mineral Point's first furnace was erected two miles east of the Point. Several others were soon added. About two and one-half miles northwest of Mineral Point a mining camp was established by the name of Mosquito Grove. Barrettown, another diggings a little south, was established the same year.

Many furnaces were built in the county about this time. Mineral was likewise discovered in Linden in the fall of 1827 by Patrick O'Meara, familiarly known as the Dodgeville Peddler. By the way, Linden was then called Peddler's Creek.

The first store and general stock of goods in Iowa county were opened in Dodgeville in the spring of 1828. At that time it was the only place for 50 miles north or south that a single article was offered, excepting mineral. Quail and Armstrong were the pioneers of trade. In the early autumn, Wright and Guiard rented a log house in Mineral Point where they made the first sale of goods in that section.

To Dodgeville again is given the honor of having the first mechanical industry in the county in the form of a blacksmith shop which stood in front of what is now the Metropolitan garage.

In 1829 occurred the first marriage in the county when Miss Lucy Roberts the daughter of Elder Roberts, the first preacher in the county, was married to Joshua Brown. However, America Parish claimed to have been married as early as 1828 to Daniel Moore in the town of Mifflin.

The birth of the first child was in the town of Mineral Point, Mrs. G. D. Ferris gave birth to a promising baby girl who was baptized Hannah.

The first death occurred in 1827 among Henry Dodge's household, the victim being one of the negro slaves who voluntarily accompanied his master from Galena, Ill. The first white man to die was Jas. Journey, who expired in the spring of 1828.

In 1830 a man by the name of Walker built a small mill two miles northwest of Mineral Point for a Mr. Miller, who conducted it for two or three years, grinding grain into feed for animals and making corn meal. Not having adequate facilities to supply bolted flour, the people of the county were supplied from Galena.

On account of trouble with the Indians, a number of forts were built. Those in what is now Iowa county were Ft. Union, at Dodge's private residence, south of Dodgeville; Ft. Jackson, at Mineral Point; Ft. Napoleon, at Diamond Grove, in the town of Linden; Ft. Jones, in the Blue River District (town of Highland), and a block house at Helena. Other forts were scattered around at exposed places. For about four years the mining section lived in peace, when in May, 1832, rumors reached the lead region that Black Hawk had crossed the Mississippi with about 600 followers, many of whom were mounted, and had taken possession of Rock Island, thus violating the treaty of 1830 whereby the Sacs agreed to surrender their lands east of the Mississippi. Dodge's camp at Ft. Union and also Ft. Jackson at Mineral Point became scenes of great alarm.

At this critical time, Dodge held the military position of colonel of the Michigan militia, Wisconsin being then part of Michigan territory. He at once assumed command. For the next three months Col. Dodge was the central figure in the struggle to outwit Indian cunning.

Col. Dodge, together with his volunteers, defeated the Indians in the battle of the Pecatonica, fought June 6, 1832. Dodge immediately returned to Ft. Union and was soon after called to join forces with Major Atkinson in pursuit of Black Hawk. On July 21, 1832, he took an active part in the battle of Wisconsin Heights in which Black Hawk suffered defeat. Dodge helped the regulars across the Wisconsin in pursuit of the remnant of Black Hawk's band. Black Hawk himself fled to the Dalles of the Wisconsin. With the regulars at this time were Zachary Taylor, Jefferson Davis and Abraham Lincoln.

Col. Dodge was appointed the first county judge in Iowa county, the county being organized in 1829.

At Dodge's suggestion in 1836, Wisconsin territory was separated from Michigan and President Andrew Jackson elected him for its governor. The first session of the legislature was at Belmont, which was then situated in Iowa county, as Iowa county was not divided until after Wisconsin was organized as a territory.

The first agricultural society was established in Iowa county in 1857. The first fair was held October 1, 1857, and many of us remember the last few years of the Dodgeville fair. The Southwestern Wisconsin Agriculture society was established at Mineral Point some time after the one mentioned.

The first school in the county was taught in Mineral Point in 1829 by a Mrs. Harker and Beulah Lamb. The attendance numbered eight pupils and the schoolhouse was a wretched log cabin.

In 1828, Dr. Loofborrow appeared in Mineral Point but did not remain long. He was succeeded by Dr. Mannegan who permanently located at Mineral Point. Dr. Justine settled at Dodgeville during 1828.

From 1849 to 1851 the Asiatic cholera ran through some portions of the county, especially in Mineral Point and Dodgeville. In Dodgeville it was located principally in "Dirty Hollow." Dr. Sibley and Dr. Burrall fought the dreaded disease, and Dr. Sibley finally succumbed to the cholera.

While the business of the county was first transacted at Helena, Mineral Point soon became the county seat. The first county court house which was built of logs, was 24 feet square and two stories in height. This building was soon found too small for the county's needs. This old building was then moved back 40 feet and a more commodious building erected in its place. In 1855 petitions were presented to the legislature asking for the removal of the county seat to a more central location. Dodgeville and Linden were both suggested. Dodgeville received more than twice the number of votes for this than Linden did. Dodgeville was decided on.

This affair provoked an embittered struggle. Mineral Point fought the issue to the finish, and it seemed at times as though Mineral Point would win, but the legislature put it to a vote of the county and Dodgeville won out. The county records were removed to the present courthouse in July, 1861.

It is to this fertile, prosperous county of Iowa that PRAIRIE FARMER comes with this directory and it is the hope of Burrige D. Butler, publisher of PRAIRIE FARMER, that it will be a further contribution to the agricultural and domestic progress of the county.

Note: Credit for the historic sketch given above goes to Mrs. Nellie Whitman of Dodgeville. The above account is made up of excerpts from an historic sketch compiled by Mrs. Whitman and printed in the Dodgeville Chronicle of June 23, 1927.—Editor.

Protective Associations

After three years' experience with farm thieves, PRAIRIE FARMER has learned that farm stealing can be stopped. The most effective way is by organizing local protective associations. Thieves steer clear of territories which they know are organized, and where it is known that farm folks have taken steps to protect their property and catch thieves.

The records of protective associations which have been active do not always show a great number of thieves caught, but rather show that farm stealing has practically stopped since the organization was formed. Henry county, Illinois, is an excellent example of this sort.

Aggressive, county-wide anti-thief association, with memberships as nearly unanimous as possible, will put the last bar on the fence that will keep thieves out of the county.

A county organization can be formed in one of the following ways:

1. By organizing a new organization for that purpose.
2. By expanding some local anti-thief association to take in the entire county.
3. By centralizing the efforts of a number of local associations in a county executive committee. This can be done without disturbing the set-up of the local associations. All unorganized sections of the county should be organized.
4. By adopting a protective association project as the work of the year for community clubs which are already organized.

It should be remembered that this is an unselfish movement for the benefit of the entire county. It is not practical to protect one farm from thieves and leave the next neighbor unprotected. The only way that any farm can be made safe is to make the entire community unsafe for thieves. For that reason it is unwise to put any restrictions on membership. Even where the farm bureau takes the lead in forming a county protective association, for instance, it is not good policy to limit membership to farm-bureau members.

The membership fee should be kept as low as possible. A dollar a year ought to be ample for all purposes, including rewards. Some associations have an initiation fee of $1, and make assessments to pay rewards, a limit being placed on the amount each member can be assessed in any one year.

The following is the logical way to proceed in forming a county association:

1. Call together a small committee of interested persons to check up on existing organizations and to decide just what form the county association should take.
2. Hold a big public meeting, inviting every farm family in the county, bankers, poultry dealers, public officials and others. Secure capable speakers to tell what it is all about.
3. After securing a vote of approval from the public meeting, have a small working committee appointed to perfect the organization.
4. Appoint an active membership committee, with at least one member in each township and with an assistant in each school district. Conduct a quick, intensive membership campaign with the object of making membership just as unanimous as possible.

The county protective association should cooperate closely with the following persons:

- Sheriff, police forces and states attorneys.
- Poultry dealers.
- Bankers and other businessmen.

Starting a Protective Association

Illinois now has two state anti-thief associations, the Illinois Anti-Thief Association, of which Sydney M. Holben of Edinburg, Ill., is secretary, and the Illinois State Detective Association, of which Merton Parker of Gilman, Ill., is secretary. Indiana has one such association, the National Detective Association, of which George A. Stillwell of Ladoga, Ind., is secretary. We would suggest writing to one or more of these associations for their plan or organizing and for help in organizing.

In case it is desired to organize independently, the following form of constitution and by-laws may be made to fit local needs with slight changes.

Constitution

Associations organized and registered according to law may recommend members for appointment as deputy sheriffs. This section of the Illinois law reads as follows:

"Such companies shall have power to call to their aid the peace officers of the state in accordance with law in the pursuit and apprehension of criminals and the recovery of stolen property, and at any regular meeting of the company, such company may elect from their membership persons to be recommended to the sheriff for appointment as deputy sheriffs; but not more than ten such members shall be so elected and recommended by any company for appointment as deputy sheriffs in any county. In case of vacancy or vacancies on account of death, removal or resignation, such company may elect and recommend another member or members for appointment to fill such vacancy or vacancies."

In case of a large county where more than 10 deputies are needed, the county judge has authority to authorize the appointment of special deputies.

It is advisable for the association to insure its deputies against injury while on duty.

The Illinois law further requires that the association keep a copy of its constitution in a suitable book, with the names of all members and the date when they became members, also dates of withdrawal of any members.

The Indiana law covering the appointment of special officers reads as follows:

"Said corporation shall have power with the consent of the board of commissioners of the county wherein the certificate of association is recorded, to designate any or all members of the association who during their term of appointment shall have all the power of constables, and such association shall furnish the board of commissioners a list of the names of members so designated, and if consent is given the board shall enter upon its record an order reciting the names of such persons, and that the consent of the board has been given to such appointments, and the record so made shall authorize and empower the county auditor to issue to each member so designated a certificate of his appointment as constable; Provided: That such constables shall have power to pursue and arrest horse thieves and all other criminals against the laws of the State of Indiana, and to serve papers relating to the same, and to follow and pursue such criminals into and through any part of the State of Indiana; and in the absence of warrant shall have power to arrest and hold in custody without warrant and for such time as may be necessary to procure a warrant."

In Wisconsin, consult the sheriff as to method to follow in securing appointment of special deputies.

Suggested Activities for Protective Associations

Following are measures which a protective association can adopt which will help prevent stealing within the community:

1. Posting farms.
2. Offering rewards.
3. Marking property.
4. Installing burglar alarms.
5. Establishing means of quick communication.
6. Questioning strangers and suspicious characters.
7. Shooting matches.
8. Inspecting dealers' licenses.
9. Cooperating with game wardens.
10. Cooperating with chambers of commerce in passing on solicitors and agents.
11. Entertainment at meetings.
12. Advertising your association.

Posting farms of members is an effective way of advertising the fact that there is a protective association in operation in the community. Weatherproof signs bearing the name of the association and stating that this property is protected against theft, trespass and arson by "Such and Such Association" should be placed in a prominent place on the farm of every member.

Offering rewards will cause a would-be thief to think twice before stealing in localities where there is a price on the head of every person who commits a felony. Further, it is an incentive to all persons to help catch the thief when stealing has been reported.

Marking property: It is essential that a man be able to identify his property if it is stolen and recovered, in order to hold the thief. Also a mark of identification makes it easier to trace stolen property and catch the thief. For chickens, PRAIRIE FARMER'S Poultry Marker will serve admirably, and the PRAIRIE FARMER Hog Tattoo Marker will serve to mark hogs. Other means of identifying other property are easily worked out, except of course in the case of grain. However, tools, implements, etc., can easily be marked.

Installing burglar alarms will help catch the thief or scare him away, depending on the type of alarm used. If the silent type, which rings in the house of the owner, is used it is usually possible to apprehend the thief while he is at work. If the torpedo type is used the thief will be frightened away. These alarms are fully described on pages 11, 12, 13 and 14. It is up to the individual to try to protect his property as well as it is important for him to try to catch the thief if anything is stolen. Burglar alarms have been found very effective as farm protectors.

Establishing quick means of communication makes it possible to get officers of the association onto the trail of a thief within a few minutes after the theft is reported. If yours is a farmers' telephone line, arrange for a series of rings which will call all patrons to the phone to receive the general alarm. If it is not a farmer-owned line, arrange with the company to have the central operator give the warning signal on all lines in a given vicinity when requested to do so.

Questioning strangers and suspicious characters often causes a person who has come to the vicinity, for the purpose of stealing, to move on. Residents of any community are justified in asking any stranger what his business in the vicinity is, and asking him to show his credentials. It is a good plan to report the presence of strangers or suspicious characters to some officer of the law and let him do the questioning. Instances are on record where hunches which local people have had would have prevented bank robberies if they had reported the presence of certain persons whom they had seen in the vicinity.

Shooting matches provide an excellent means of training protective association members in the use of firearms, and in letting the world know that folks in the community have guns and know how to use them. This is also an excellent competitive feature for any organization to hold.

Inspecting dealers' licenses: In Illinois, Indiana and Wisconsin poultry dealers are required by law to keep accurate record of their purchases of poultry, and they must be licensed to operate as poultry dealers. It is important that this law be enforced, and an excellent project for a protective association to take up, is seeing to it that all poultry dealers in their vicinity are licensed and that they are keeping records in compliance with the law.

Cooperating with game wardens during and out of hunting seasons will eliminate much trespassing and the breaking down of fences and tramping of crops, as well as help protect game and birds, particularly birds which are of economic value. Help your game warden see to it that all persons who hunt provide themselves with hunting licenses, and that they comply strictly with the state game laws. Write the State Department of Conservation at your capital and get a copy of the state game laws. Then help your local game warden enforce them.

Cooperating with chambers of commerce: In most county seat towns, and in many other towns of considerable size are associations of business men. Many of these organizations have committees, the duty of which it is to pass on all solicitors and agents who wish to operate in the community. A system of this kind can be worked out in a rural community through the community club's protective association. If adopted, it will help save many dollars which otherwise unsuspecting folks might give to unscrupulous salesmen or agents.

Entertainment at meetings is essential if there is no community club or other social organization in your vicinity. Let your protective association serve also as a community club. A few minutes at each meeting will be sufficient time in which to dispose of the business of the protective association. Let the rest of the time be devoted to a program of entertainment. This should be largely home talent, but it is usually an easy matter to procure an outside speaker or entertainer of some note to appear on the programs occasionally. Picnics, ball games, horseshoe pitching, shooting matches and other forms of sport and entertainment can be included in the program for the year.

Advertising your association by means of the local newspapers will help prevent stealing in your community. Get the local editor to give news accounts of your meetings and any activity which your association may be sponsoring. Thieves are going to keep away from neighborhoods where it is known that an active farmers' protective association exists.

Cooperate with the Sheriff

The sheriff, states attorney, county and circuit judges should be asked to cooperate in organizing the association. In Montgomery and Macoupin counties (Ill.) the sheriff is president of the county association.

Whether this is done or not, it should be remembered that he is the chief thief-catcher of the county. He has the power to appoint members of the association as special deputies. There should be two of these in each township, selecting two of the most interested and aggressive men in the township.

The sheriff should have the telephone numbers and locations of these men on a card in his office, so that he can get in touch with them immediately when necessary.

Poultry dealers should be told about the association and its purposes, so that they can cooperate with it. It is a good idea to take them in as regular members. If any of them are not licensed under the law, or if they are licensed and not keeping records, the purpose of the law should be explained to them and their compliance with it urged. Most of them understand that they are liable for stolen property found in their possession, and that the license law and the protective association will benefit them as well as the poultry raisers. If any of them refuse to comply with the law after its purposes have been explained, proper legal steps should be taken to compel them to do so.

It is extremely important that every poultry buyer keep full records of all purchases.

The help that can be given by poultry dealers is illustrated by the action of the dealers in Geneseo, Henry county, Illinois, in agreeing not to buy poultry between 6 P. M. and 7 A. M. They can cooperate further by paying for poultry by check only, which gives a little more time for checking up on suspicious cases, and by questioning strangers carefully and reporting suspicious sellers to the sheriff or one of the special deputies for investigation.

A list of the names and addresses of all owners of Prairie Farmer's Poultry Markers will be furnished to all poultry dealers, together with the mark assigned to each one. This will make it almost impossible for a thief to sell marked poultry without getting caught.

Cooperate with Town Guards

Many county bankers' associations have a group of organized and armed "town guards" as a protection against bank robbery. Arrangements should be made for close cooperation between the farm guards and the town guards, under the direction of the sheriff.

The task of prosecuting thieves after they are caught falls to the states attorney. The whole plan for ridding the county of thieves should be explained to him, and his hearty cooperation secured.

The members themselves, in addition to paying due and assessments, should make note of all suspicious strangers and report facts about them to the nearest deputy. All thefts should be reported immediately to the nearest farm guard, together with any clues or suspicions.

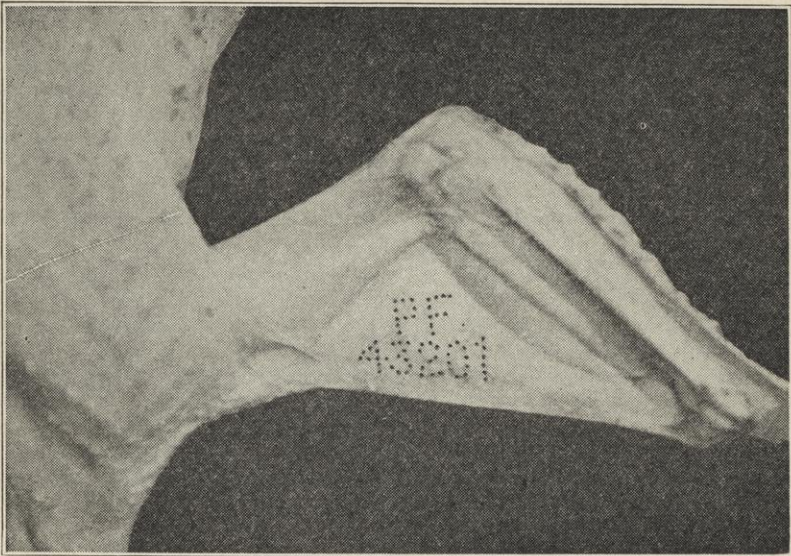

It is advisable to have a good gun, and have every adult member of the family do a little practicing now and then.

Mark Your Chickens

If every farm flock of poultry is marked with a distinctive mark which cannot be removed and which is registered with every poultry dealer and sheriff, it will be very difficult for a thief to sell stolen chickens without getting caught. The difficulty of identifying chickens has been one of the chief reasons for the popularity and comparative safety of chicken stealing.

We have made an extensive investigation of the problems connected with marking poultry. Legbands will not do because they can be removed. Small markers wired to the feathers tear the pickers' hands and are objected to by the dealers. Livestock tattoo markers do not work any too well on poultry, and no such marker on the market permits of enough variations to give each flock owner his own unduplicated mark.

Marking birds with paint is better than nothing, but is not a very good means of identification if too many people in a neighborhood do it.

With this mark stenciled on the wing, and the mark and owner's name registered with poultry dealers, thieves will find it hard to market stolen birds.

In order to solve this problem PRAIRIE FARMER put an inventor to work on it and he has devised an entirely new type of marker especially designed for poultry. It stencils an individual indelible mark in the web of the wing. This mark is permanent. It permits something like a million variations, so that we can furnish every farmer in our territory with his own unduplicated mark.

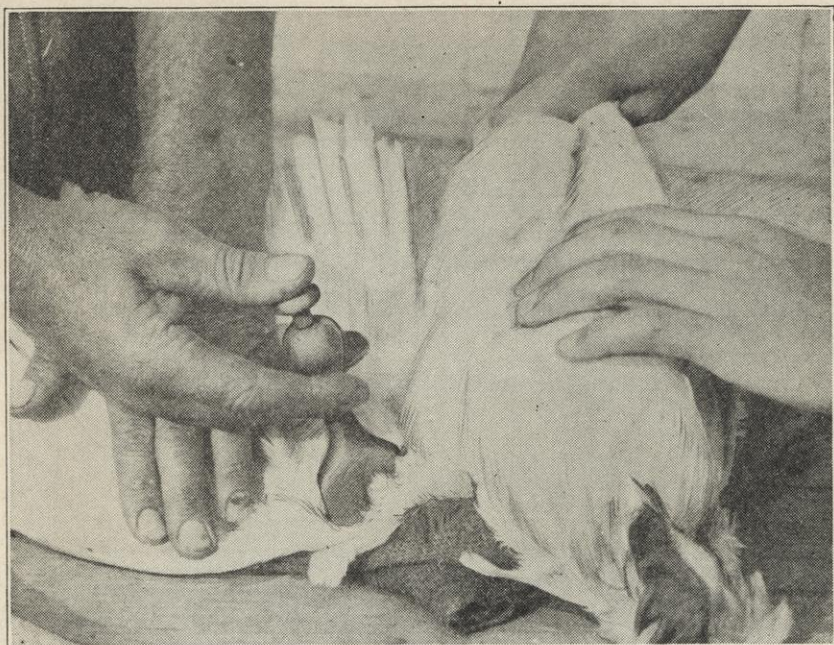

In order to guard against the possibility of marked chickens being discriminated against in the market we have made a thorough investigation, which included marking a large number of chickens for Armour & Company and Swift & Company, the largest poultry distributors. With the cooperation of these poultry distributors we have satisfied ourselves that marking does not decrease the market value of fowls.

All Marks Registered

We are printing registration lists giving the mark assigned to each farmer, together with his name and address. These registration lists will be placed in the hands of every sheriff and poultry dealer in our territory. This will make it possible for the poultry dealer to know at once when poultry is offered to him by anyone other than the owner. In connection with the poultry dealers' license and record law, this registration plan will make it extremely difficult for a thief to market stolen poultry without being caught.

This registration plan is a distinct service to the dealer as well as to the poultry raiser. It relieves him of the danger of being an unwilling buyer of stolen poultry and of the loss that may follow if stolen poultry is found in his possession. Under the law, stolen property always belongs to the rightful owner, no matter in whose possession it may be found.

PRAIRIE FARMER controls the patents on this marker, which was devised especially for us. We are having the markers made up in quantity for our readers, and are selling them at cost—$1.50 postpaid including full directions and enough indelible ink to mark 100 birds.

Stenciling the owner's private mark in the web of the wing. This mark is indelible and cannot be removed. Thieves will hesitate about stealing marked poultry, and will have a hard time disposing of it safely if they do.

How to Make a "Silent" Alarm

One type of burglar alarm is the so-called "silent alarm." Wires connect the poultry house with a small bell in the bedroom. If the door is opened after the alarm is set, the bell rings and awakes the owner. The thief is not alarmed, thus affording opportunity to catch him. It is safest to lay the wires in a pipe underground. This alarm is of course of no value when there is no one at home. This alarm is inexpensive. The parts for either type of "silent" alarm shown in the drawing can be bought at the hardware store, and easily installed by the following directions:

The simplest and cheapest type of "silent" alarm is what is known as the open-circuit alarm, as shown in diagram Fig. 1. This is essentially the same thing as an ordinary doorbell, the push-button contact at the door being replaced by contacts which are closed or made when a door is opened or a window raised. This is called an open-circuit system because under normal conditions the circuit is open and no current flows, until one of the contacts is closed when a door or window is opened. This completes the circuit and the electric bell rings.

Almost any type of battery can be used for this type of alarm although dry cells are by far the most common. The chief objection to the open-circuit alarm is that if either of the wires leading to the house is cut, the alarm, is put out of commission. If carried up to a considerable height on trees or poles, however, the wires are not so likely to be cut.

In some cases a false or decoy wire is run in plain sight, while the actual working wires are run out of sight along a fence or in an under-ground conduit. In either case, the wires around the building should be inside where they cannot be tampered with easily.

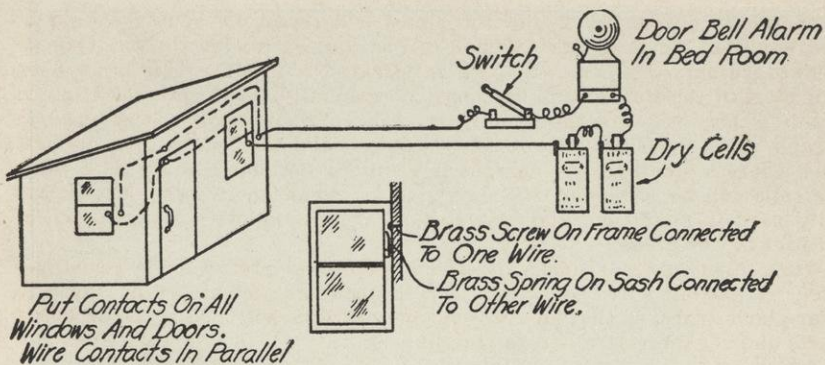

Fig. 1. Open Circuit Type.

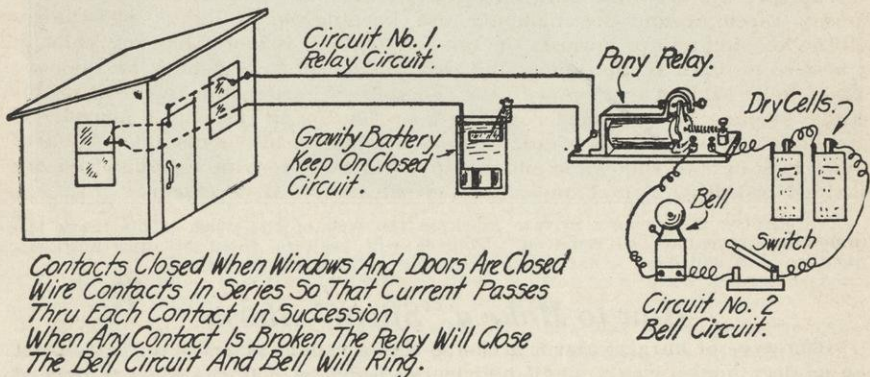

Fig. 2. Closed Circuit Type.

~SIMPLE BURGLAR ALARMS~

Because of the greater security afforded, many owners prefer the closed-circuit type burglar alarm, such as is used in banks and warehouses. This consists of two separate circuits, as shown in Fig. 2, and is somewhat more complicated and expensive in first cost and in operation. Circuit No. 1 is a closed circuit running through the door and window contacts on the poultry house, through a No. 18 insulated wire to a set of gravity batteries located in the house, from there to the coil of back contact relay, and from the other end of coil back to the poultry-house contact. Circuit No. 2 runs from one side of the relay contact to two ordinary dry cells, from there to an alarm bell, and from that back to the other contact on the relay. The door and window contacts are arranged in series so that the current in circuit No. 1 goes through them one after the other and through the coil of the relay. As long as this current is flowing, the coil remains a magnet and holds the relay lever away from its contact so that no current can flow in circuit No. 2. However, if any break is made in circuit No. 1 due to opening a door or window or by cutting a wire, the current in No. 1 stops, the relay coil loses its magnetism, and the coil spring pulls the relay lever over against contact C.

This completes circuit No. 2 and the alarm bell rings. A switch should be placed in circuit No. 2, so that the bell can be shut off during the day time.

Two ordinary dry cells are used in circuit No. 2, since this is an open circuit most of the time and is used only occasionally. The cells used in circuit No. 1, however, are the gravity type of cells similar to those used in telegraph work, since they are on closed circuit and these cells give the best results where a small steady current is required for many hours at a time. Other cells can be used, but will not give as cheap operation. The relays usually used in simple burglar-alarm work are wound with a resistance of about four to five ohms.

With either of the systems described, additional protection is sometimes secured by putting wires or strings across openings and attaching these to burglar-alarm traps, so that any pull on these strings will also make or break contacts and set the alarm bell to ringing.

What to Do when Alarm Rings

If you are using a "silent" alarm, when it rings do not light the lamp. Get up quietly, get your gun, and slip out a door away from the chicken house. Circle around the chicken house, keeping out of sight. The thieves will be keeping an eye towards the house. If there is more than one thief, it is best to go back to the house and call the sheriff or a deputy or someone else to help. If you feel equal to the job yourself, order him to throw up his hands, keeping behind some cover as a precaution in case he is armed. If he makes a move to draw a gun, or does not put up his hands at once, shoot him. It is best to shoot low enough to avoid fatal results although you are justified in killing a thief under such circumstances if necessary.

If you have electric lights, have a large light in the yard which can be turned on from the house in case of alarm.

A New Kind of Thief Alarm

Here is a new alarm that will frighten a thief out of a year's growth. It fires three timed torpedoes that sound like a repeating shotgun. Mr. Thief opens the door of your chicken house—without a sound the time fuse is automatically set off—a half-minute later, just as he is about to grab a big fat hen—BANG!—the first torpedo explodes right outside the door. He thinks the owner is after him with a shotgun—he is sure of it when he hears the second and third shots fired.

Safe and Easy to Install

The torpedoes used are just three Fourth of July cannon crackers attached to a time fuse. They are set off inside of a solid cast white brass housing that is bolted to the outside wall of your building. Complete directions and all necessary material comes with each outfit. It takes only a few minutes to install an alarm.

The new Prairie Farm Thief Alarm can be attached to your chicken house, shop, granary, garage, store, or anywhere that doors or windows need protection from thieves.

Low Cost Burglary Insurance

The Prairie Farm Thief Alarm is so simply constructed that it can be sold for the low price of $3 complete ready to install on any building. It is the cheapest way to stop stealing. It guards your property while you sleep. It gives a loud, startling alarm that will wake you if the doors or windows are disturbed by thieves. It is made of solid cast white brass, will not rust and will last a lifetime. It can be reloaded as many times as necessary and at a small cost.

The Prairie Farm Thief Alarm

BANG! BANG! BANG!

A patent device automatically fires all three torpedoes in case the thief tries to hammer or pry the alarm apart. This makes it just as well adapted to use on brooder houses and other small buildings as it is on the regular poultry house, shop or garage. Turn the lock switch on at night and alarm is set. Insert the steel key in the morning, turn the switch off and you can open the doors or windows without discharging the alarm.

"Nothing will be stolen after that alarm starts firing" said R. C. Saunders, chief thief-catcher of the Illinois Bankers' Association, after inspecting alarms of this type. "The thief won't be there. He will run right out from under his hat."

We have tried out every burglar alarm we could find on the market. They were all expensive. We developed a simple effective gong alarm ourselves, but it cost $6.50 to make it. Finally we developed this torpedo alarm and after several months of experimenting have perfected it and found it entirely practical and effective. This alarm is so simple that it can be installed in 30 minutes. The only tools necessary are a brace and bit and screw driver. It is inexpensive in upkeep as it is only necessary to replace the flashlight dry cell three or four times a year. The alarm can be reloaded as often as necessary and the cartridges cost only 50 cents.

Alarm Costs Only $3.00 Complete

It is ready to install on your chicken house, shop, granary, garage, store, or anywhere that doors and windows need protection from thieves.

The price of the alarm, including one cartride containing three timed torpedoes, battery, lock switch, one door trip with 25 feet of double strand insulated wire for making connections, one single-shot test cartridge to be used when alarm is installed prepaid $3.00. Extra door or window trips, are 25 cents each and extra cartridges for regular use in alarm 50 cents.

Prizes for Protective Associations

PRAIRIE FARMER will offer silver loving cups and $100 in cash to the local protective associations in Illinois and Indiana which accomplish the most in a year's time toward preventing stealing from the farmers within the communities where they are organized. There will be prizes of $50 for the associations which show up second best for the year. The contest begins June 1, 1929, and ends June 1, 1930.

Any regularly organized protective association in PRAIRIE FARMER's territory of Illinois, Indiana or Southern Wisconsin may enter the contest, or any community club in PRAIRIE FARMER's territory which will take up protective association work as a project may compete. Complete sets of prizes will be offered in Illinois and Indiana, but Wisconsin organizations will be considered as competing for the prizes offered in Illinois.

Following is the score card which will be used in judging the associations which enter, and an entry blank for entering the contest. Additional copies of the score card, the entry blank and of this booklet will be sent on request.

Reward Rules

Effective May 1, 1928

These rules supersede all previous rules.

EFFECTIVE May 1, 1928, PRAIRIE FARMER'S reward rules will be revised to read as follows. These revised rules supersede all previous reward offers made by PRAIRIE FARMER.

1. Prairie Farmer will pay a reward of $25 to the person or persons chiefly responsible for the capture and conviction of anyone stealing property of any sort from a Prairie Farmer subscriber, setting fire to any building or other property belonging to a subscriber, or committing any crime against the person of a subscriber or a member of his family. In case a thief is convicted and sentenced for stealing poultry marked with Prairie Farmer's Poultry Marker, the reward will be $50.

2. Application for reward must be made within two weeks after thief is captured.

3. Rewards will be paid when thief is convicted and sentenced.

4. Thief must serve an actual prison, reformatory or penal farm sentence. No reward will be paid where the thief is given only a jail sentence, a fine, or a suspended sentence.

5. Only one reward will be paid in each case, even though more than one thief may be captured.

6. Rewards will be paid to the persons primarily responsible for the capture and conviction of the thief or thieves. In case two or more persons are equally or partially responsible, the reward will be divided. The decision of Prairie Farmer's investigator as to whom rewards are due shall be final.

7. Rewards will be paid only in case property is stolen from a paid-up subscriber to Prairie Farmer.

When reporting the capture of thieves, please give the following information:

1. Name, age and address of the thief.

2. Name and address of person whose property was stolen.

3. Dates of theft and arrest.

4. Name of person chiefly responsible for the arrest.

5. Tell briefly the events which led up to the arrest of the thief.

During the past three years PRAIRIE FARMER has paid out nearly $15,000 in rewards, which were paid for the capture and conviction of more than 600 thieves who had been stealing from our readers.

The primary object of our campaign against thievery on the farm, however, is not to put thieves in prison, but to prevent stealing. When your property has been stolen there is some satisfaction in having the thief punished. But it is much better not to have the property stolen.

We have therefore made a thorough study of methods of preventing thievery, and have summed up our conclusions in the following recommendations:

1. Mark your poultry with an identifying mark which is registered with all poultry dealers and sheriffs.

2. Enforce poultry dealers' license law.

3. Organize county-wide anti-thief associations.

4. Install burglar alarms.

5. Learn to shoot, and do not hesitate to do so when necessary.

The change in our rules is in line with our policy of urging farmers to prevent stealing rather than to depend on punishing the thieves after the damage is done.

Send for a copy of our booklet, "How to Stop Stealing."

Hallowe'en Party Suggestions

Surprises, ghosts, Jack-O-Lanterns, spooky going's on, scares, etc., are all a part of Hallowe'en and go to make up the successful party. A progressive Hallowe'en Dinner might be a good idea if the guests do not know it is a progressive dinner, and if they are kept in suspense, and do not know at whose home the dinner or party is to be held. An invitation such as the following might be used:

Hallowe'en is the night when all ghosts walk
When goblins and witches might even talk
When black cats and bats and owls, and such Parade on the streets—They won't hurt you much
If you meet us at the Cross Roads and Creek
Near the old red school house at half-past six.
A Big Jack-O-Lantern will guide you on.
If you can't come at all, please phone, "Ring Two,"
The crowd will go on and not wait for you.
The eats will be hearty, and fun galore
You'll meet your best friends, you can't wish for more.

Pages 165-166 are unavailable.

As they finish this game a knock is heard at the door and the Jack-O-Lantern guide enters and bids them hurry. By this time they realize that it is a progressive party and are only too glad to follow their guide through lanes and by-ways to the next house where they expect the main course of the meal will be served. It proves they are right, and they gladly seat themselves in the dining room to eat Chicken a-la-King on toast, Chicken Pot Pie, or any roast, potatoes and some vegetable with brown bread and butter. This part of the menu might be simpler if a one dish meal is served, some casserole dish, a boiled dinner, or cabbage, potatoes and meat balls or corn beef boiled together. A game should be played after this course in the dinner. One which will bring on a gale of laughter is the following:

Suspend horizontally from the ceiling a stick three feet long. On one end stick an apple, upon the other tie a small bag of flour. Set stick whirling. Each guest takes a turn in trying to bite the apple-end of the stick. It is amusing to see guests receive dabs of flour on their faces. The guests who first succeeds in biting the apple gets a prize.

When this game is over they expect their guide to again lead them to the dessert course which he does, and for dessert, any typically Hallowe'en dish may be used, such as doughnuts and cider, appletaffies, baked apples with marshmallows, salted nuts in paper Jack-o-lanterns, or pumpkin pie and coffee.

Following Are a Few Suggestions

Hallowe'en Wills. Plan your stunts so that just at midnight a ghost story shall be told. A few minutes before this, tell your guests that as there is no telling what terrible things may happen on Hallowe'en all should be prepared by making their wills. Pass wide sheets of paper numbered from one to five in three columns across the paper. At the top of the sheet is written "The last will of——." Each guest is to write his name, and in the first column a list of five of his most valued possessions. The papers are then to be folded so that this list is folded under and the papers are then to be passed to the right. A list of five persons is then to be written and the papers again folded and passed. Finally a list of five uses is to be written and the papers again passed to the right. They are then unfolded and read. It may be very enlightening to learn that John Smith wills his set of golf clubs to Mary Smith to use repairing a broken window.

Fortunes. On pieces of white paper write with baking soda mixed with water or lemon juice such names as doctor, lawyer, dentist, farmer, banker, chicken thief, merchant, chief, etc. It is much better to have names written on the slips before the guests arrive so they will be thoroughly dry when passed out. When playing the game, have all the guests seated on the floor and turn all lights very low. Go from guest to guest with a lighted candle. Each may know the occupation of his future helpmate by holding the blank paper above the candle. The heat from the blaze will turn the word brown.

A Good Stunt

The following is taken from a Hallowe'en booklet published by the Eldridge Entertainment House:

"Hallowe'en charms may be tried by the ghosts, but they refer to things in the past, not in the present, as now they are but ghosts. Instead of a witch to tell fortunes, the ghost of a witch divulges the manner of their death. She is a typical witch, but all in white with a white cat and a white kettle. The predictions are on red paper for the boys and black for the girls. The writing is in white.

"The witch stirs the brew and mutters incantations, then gives a weird laugh and says: 'If you would know how you came to die, draw to this ghastly cauldron nigh.'

"As each steps up, he is allowed to take the witch's spoon and fish up a paper of the right color.

"Following are some sample verses:

For Boys

1. Caught with the goods—State's prison ahead,
 Your own revolver shot you dead.
2. I hate to tell, but alas! 'tis true,
 Too much mince pie was the death of you.
3. Murder, and death on the gallows!
 Oh, dear! Can that be true?
 It must be, for that's what the fates
 Inscribed here about you.
4. By a driftwood fire, on an island drear,
 In the midst of the ocean blue,
 Cannibals picked your poor old bones,
 And that was the last of you.
5. A lonely old bachelor, all by himself,
 With never a true friend by,
 And a big box of gold clasped close to
 your breast,
 A miser's death did you die.
6. The other ghosts will sigh, I'm sure,
 When your awful fate they know,
 You swooned away and died of fright,
 Because you stubbed your toe.

For Girls

1. You drooped and languished, day by day
 For your lover had wooed, and ridden away.

2. You died, my dear, in a temper fit,
 For another girl winked at your beau.
 Yet, she didn't get him after all,
 For you took her along, you know.
3. Like her of the ballad, a chest was your doom,
 Where you'd hidden away from your handsome groom.
4. You were quite frivolous, my dear,
 And danced yourself to death;
 And now you dance in graveyards dim,
 While mortals hold their breath.
5. All good things you had on earth—
 Of riches a golden heap,
 Health, love and beauty, a long, long life,
 And died at last in your sleep.
6. A prim old maid, with parrot and cat,
 You never died. Now, how was that?
 You just were missing one windy day,
 For you'd dried up and blown away."

A Tale at Midnight

Just at the stroke of twelve the light should be turned very low and the guests seated on the floor in a circle. A sheet is spread out and each one is asked to hold it in his left hand and keep his right hand under the sheet. A ghost appears and takes his seat in the circle and after a slight pause, in low sepulchral tones, begins to tell:

It is the truth and not a myth
That once there lived a man named Smith
Alas, it was his bitter lot
To murdered be quite near this spot.

(Groans and pauses.)

Now we have with us his remains
So first I give to you his brains.
(Passes under the sheet to the person on his right a sponge dampened with ice water.)

Now next I pass as you surmise
The murdered victim's mournful eyes.
(Passes two grapes from which the skins have been removed.)

His veins through which flowed blood so red
Are now all clammy, cold and dead.
(Passes two or three long pieces of cooked macaroni.)

And now your shuddering touch reveals
The teeth with which he ate his meals.

(Passes kernels of corn.)

And next your startled nerves prepare
To touch the late lamented's hair.

(Passes corn silk, or hair.)

The ear with which he often heard,
Alas, now hearkens not a word.

DIRECTORY OF IOWA COUNTY

(Passes a fig.)

His hand no longer yours can hold;
Alas, it now in death is cold.
(Passes a kid glove filled with wet sand.)
And now his sheeted ghost in white
Is standing in your midst tonight.

(Ghost rises and stands a minute.)

Ere he departs with woeful groans
Just list the rattling of his bones.
(Starts to walk out and as he goes suddenly rattles a watchman's rattle.)

Games

The Murderer's Dagger. All the players are seated in a circle. The first player hands a dagger-shaped paper knife to the person on his left saying, "Take that!" to which is asked, "What is it?" answer, "A dagger." The second player then hands it to his left hand neighbor with the same remarks. This is repeated around the circle. After it has reached the original player it continues around again, but this time the second player on receiving it says, "There is blood on it," to which the reply is "Sh!" The next time around is added the question, "Who did it?" and the answer is a very impressive shrug of the shoulders. The last time after the shrug the second player asks, "How did he do it?" to which the first player with much realism makes the motion and a noise indicative of cutting his throat. It is very necessary to the success of this game that the first two players know how to do it well.

The Mermaid's Fortune. Each guest is given ten to fifteen letters cut from newspapers. At a sign of the hostess one after another places his letters in a tub of water and with a long wand gives the water one vigorous stir. When the water has become still the letters will foretell the future, either the initials of the future mate or some important event will be indicated. The hostess can use her imagination as far as she likes. Each lot of letters is removed before the next fate is tried.

The Three Fates. The players are seated in a circle on the floor. Three ghosts appear. One whispers to each in turn the name of future sweetheart, the second ghost whispers a meeting place, and the third ghost an event in the future. Each must then in turn reveal the future as told him by the ghosts. Thus Mary Smith tells that the name of the one who is to be her life partner is Frank Brown, that they will meet waiting for a trolley car, and that they will be separated by a quarrel about the location of their new home, but will be reunited after two years.

Ghost Party Invitation

There are some traditions, you probably know,
For Hallowe'en parties, that just "khost" show
That strange apparitions will always appear
They know of my party and "specter" be here.

So I write
To invite

You to my party on Hallowe'en night.
The door will be closed and remain shut tight
To all comers not clad in ghastly white.
8 O'Clock DEAD N. GONE

Decorations

For a ghost party the house must be prepared in advance to make everything as ghastly as possible. If the home, hall, church, school or other place where the party is to be held is electrically lighted, this simplifies matters. Blue crepe paper over the bulbs will give a very ghastly hue to the rooms. Blue crepe paper covering globes of acetylene or kerosene lights, if placed carefully so that they will not burn, will give the same effect.

Ghastly foot-prints may be placed on the walk leading to the house. They can be cut from white paper, or if the walk is cement they may be drawn with white chalk.

The porch light may be the foundation for the first ghost. Make a pumpkin face of crepe paper over the light and hang a sheet beneath it. If possible have it fixed so the guests must push the drapes of this ghost aside in order to enter the house.

When the guests arrive have the house in darkness with the exception of one or two windows which are illuminated by the ghastly blue spoken of above. From one of these windows a ghost face made of a pillow slip tied over a jack-o-lantern face, peeks from the lower right hand corner. There should be ghosts throughout the house. Brooms, floor lamps, doorways, should all be draped as ghosts. With sheets and crepe paper this is easily done. A ghost might be peeping out from behind the sofa and one on the floor underneath. A piece of white cardboard cut to resemble a head with the features painted on with black ink and wire to hold it in place will make a fine ghost. Fringed crepe paper will make good enough hair for any ghost.

The first room the guests enter is pitch black, no light whatever. Have a ghost ready to greet the guests as they enter one by one, the door closing after each one. Silently the ghost puts out his hand to shake the guest's hand. The ghost's hand is made of a white kid glove stuffed with wet sand. This should be filled in the morning and allowed to lie on ice all day. This will make it cold, damp and clammy. The guest proceeds to shake the ghost's hand which drops off and falls to the floor.

The ghost stoops over, picks up his hand and replaces it without a word, and proceeds to lead the guests to a door which opens silently and closes after the guest, leaving the ghost free to allow another guest to enter. Second guest goes through the same performance.

In the second room there is no one, but a light can be seen through the crack in a door, and finally the guest gets up courage enough to open the door. This room though lighted, (in blue) is absolutely empty. On chairs and table, or beds (depending on what room it is,) are coats and hats of guests who have come before and the guest realizes that he must remove outer garments here, and doll up for the rest of the party. When he has finished a ghost walks in and taking him by the hand gives him a card on which he reads, "Follow Me to Dead Man's Chamber."

There is nothing for the guest to do but follow, and he is taken downstairs into the basement which is very dark, and as he enters a sure-enough skeleton rises to meet him, extending a bony hand in greeting. This skeleton is easily made by letting someone wear a black robe or domino, on which the outline of a skeleton has been drawn in white chalk, or phosphorus, which will shine in the dark. The skeleton gives each guest that comes a card or small piece of paper which is pinned to the guest's back and the guest then told, "You are dead, but who you were when you lived on earth you will have to find out. Your name is on your back, others can read, but you cannot. Only by asking questions of others can you find out who you are. When you think you know who you are come and tell the skeleton and he will verify your guess. If you are right your name will be written down in his big black book. You will be timed from the time your name is pinned on your back until you find out who you are. Prizes will be given to the two finding out who they are in the shortest time.

The guest then proceeds into the living room where the guests who have come before are assembled, all busily asking each other questions in their endeavor to find out who they are.

Refreshments

Serve ghost refreshments first which might consist of "ghostly broth," nothing but water; ghost of a chicken, a white feather; ghost salad, bits of paper leaves and absorbent cotton; and ghost pudding, bits of white cloth cut very fine. The hostess then says, "One more course, and your ghostly appetites will be sated. Bring in the syllabub." This is the dessert served in sherbet glasses and consisting of frothy soapsuds.

The hostess then arises, but as her guests start to do so, motions to them to remain seated. She then observes, "Suppose we play we're alive again, just for one night." Real refreshments can then be served.

Doughnuts, pumpkin pie, mince pie, and apple cider make good Hallowe'en fare.

The same games may be used in the ghost party as those used in the Hallowe'en Progressive Dinner party.

A Kuntry Skul Party

Write the invitations for this party on wrapping paper and here is a suggested wording for it:

Hear the call of the old school bell
Don overalls or gingham, do tell
And back to the school days, days of real fun

We are all going and of course you'll come.
Or you may prefer this form for the invitation:

Turn backward, turn backward, Oh Time
in Thy flight
Take me to school again, just for tonight.
Then don overalls and gingham too,
Prepare for games both old and new.

Instead of wearing gingham and overalls, women might wear middie blouses, and plaited skirts, and the men, Buster Brown collars and big bow ties, or even knee trousers.

The room in which the party is to be held should be supplied with either a large blackboard or a large sheet of wrapping paper, a teacher's desk and chairs placed in a row. A dunce's stool conspicuously placed in one corner may be the cause of much amusement. A large part of the success of this party depends upon the teacher since much of the wit and humor of the evening depends on the many impromptu stunts that are added.

The teacher rings the bell and school opens. The girls have assembled in one room, the boys in another. When the bell rings, the piano plays some march, and the children march in from opposite directions, and take seats anywhere.

The morning exercises begin with the singing of the song, "School Days, School Days, Dear Old Golden Rule Days."

A good way to start the regular classes for the morning is with an arithmetic lesson. Choose some method for dividing the room into at least two parts. Have ten persons from each division write one number on the board, not larger than the number nine, and have the eleventh person add the figures. The side getting a correct answer first scores ten on the examination. Of course the side scoring one hundred first, is considered perfect in arithmetic and there is no longer a need for this class, so it is disbanded.

The language lesson is the next thing on the program and may be either written or oral. The subject for this will be "The Most Exciting Incident in my School Life." If these compositions are written, a time limit should be placed for their completion and they should be collected and read for the amusement of the school.

The reading lesson might follow this. The teacher calls up a few star pupils and hands out a list of tongue twisters to be read rapidly. If she thinks best, she may line up the entire class and make each one read, urging them to greater speed and sending them to the foot for making mistakes. Here are a few: Two toads teetotally trying to trot to Trexburg. Five fantastic Frenchmen fanning five fainting females. Six slippery snakes sliding slowly southward. Nine nautical Norwegians nearing neighboring Norway. Ten tiddling tots trying to train their tongues to trill. She stood at the gate waiting for slick strong Stephen Stringer, who snared six slick, sickly snakes. Or, some of the more common ones like, She sells sea shells at the seashore. Or, Peter Piper picked a peck of pickled peppers, and so on.

A gymnastic lesson just before recess would be appropriate. Instead with his gavel. Senator Hiram Cornborer and Penny Pincher move to the defendant's table—Senator Cornborer addresses the judge.)

Senator Cornborer—If it pleases the court, I wish to ask a delay of the proceedings. One of the important witnesses ain't here yet.

John Turnipseed—Sorry if I kep' you waitin', Hi. I went to see the Editor of PRAIRIE FARMER about this case an' he says if we convict them there thieves there (pointing), the boys is all set to git the fifty dollar reward—so I went to git Hank Wilson to come along as a witness—he might know something—

(Lazy Farmer leans over toward Slim at his right and speaks to him.)

Slim (in a monotone) Hear ye! Hear ye! this here court will be in order.

(Enter from right "Slipme" Slick, who goes over to the prisoners and whispers earnestly with One-eyed Pete. Pete nods his head. "Slipme" Slick turns to the Judge.)

"Slipme" Slick—Judge, may I have a private conference with these gentlemen?

Justice Lazy Farmer—It's my opinion that you may pervided it don't take all day. The fish is bitin' in the crick, so hurry up—you can—you're slick.

(The prisoners, guarded by Spud, and led by "Slipme" Slick, move over to right side of stage, front, where they confer.)

"Slipme" Slick—For twenty bucks each—

One-eyed Pete—Not twenty smackers! (The others shake their heads.)

"Slipme" Slick—Twenty each—Cash now.

(The prisoners shake their heads—look at each other and One-eyed Pete whines.)

One-eyed Pete—Now, "Slipme"—I mean, Attorney Slick,—ye—

"Slipme" Slick—Twenty each, or I'm off.

(One-eyed Pete and Jerry, The Gun, nod, but Jimmie, The Gyp, shakes his head.)

"Slipme" Slick—Come across!

(One-eyed Pete takes off his shoe, takes from it two $20 bills, handing them over to "Slipme" Slick.)

(Spud herds them back to the defendant's table and "Slipme" Slick addresses the judge.)

"Slipme" Slick—Judge, I have the honor to represent these two gentlemen—Mr. Pete Hardnail and Mr. Jerry Shooter. The third, that low-down chicken thief, Jimmie The Gyp, I would not think of defending.

Justice Lazy Farmer—Now that every-one's in place, I think we sure should start the case. I've got to ketch some fish today. Now, Hi, what have you to say?

Senator Cornborer—Your Honor—the plaintiff—our well-known and much esteemed farmer friend, Penny Pincher—

(Penny Pincher straightens up and swells at the praise, while Slim speaks in an aside to Annie.)

PRAIRIE FARMER'S HOME AND COUNTY

Slim—Esteemed—Ha! Ha!

Justice Lazy Farmer—Order in the court. Hi, you proceed—that he's esteemed, we're not agreed.

Senator Cornborer—Anyhow, Penny Pincher had 62 hens and 3 ducks surreptitiously purloined—

Justice Lazy Farmer—Unless you want to get in a hole, I'd recommend that you say stole.

Senator Cornborer—Stole by those three criminals—

"Slipme" Slick—I object—

Justice Lazy Farmer—The objection don't look good to me. I'll bet they're criminals, by gee—

Senator Cornborer—Criminals—at midnight last Sunday, our first witness is the plaintiff—

Justice Lazy Farmer—Git him up there in that chair an' make him answer questions fair.

Justice Lazy Farmer—Will you tell the truth while in that seat? Do you swear and vow, so help you Pete?

Penny Pincher—Yep.

Senator Cornborer—What's your name?

Penny Pincher—Penny Pincher.

Mirandy (aside to Annie) The old skinflint's named right.

Senator Hiram Cornborer—Occupation?

Penny Pincher—What's thet?

Senator Hiram Cornborer—What do you do?

Penny Pincher—Try to git some work outen them lazy hired men, Slim, there, and Spud Haystack.

Senator Hiram Cornborer—You keep any chickens?

Penny Pincher—Yep. Try to keep 'em.

Senator Cornborer—On last Sunday night did you have 62 hens and three ducks stole?

Penny Pincher—Yep—by the pesky thieves over—

"Slipme" Slick—I object to his calling these two gentlemen thieves. That third crook—(pointing to Jimmie, the Gyp.)

Justice Lazy Farmer—Git down to business, Hi, I say—Or else this case will take all day.

Senator Hiram Cornborer—I'm through with Penny Pincher.

Justice Lazy Farmer—(to "Slipme" Slick) If you want to question, speak up quick—You gol darn lawyers make me sick.

"Slipme" Slick—I pass him up—

(Penny Pincher leaves the witness chair, resuming his place at the table.)

Senator Hiram Cornborer—I'll next call John Turnipseed.

(John takes his place in the witness chair.)

Justice Lazy Farmer—John Turnipseed wields a mighty pen, but what does he know about Penny's hen?

John Turnipseed—I bin to see the Editor of PRAIRIE FARMER, an' he said for me to come up to this trial and write him a piece about it fer the paper—

"Slipme" Slick—I object to the testimony as improper,—irrelevant and—

John Turnipseed—Shut up, 'til I tell the Judge—an' he said ef we got together in a Protective Association—

"Slipme" Slick—I object to the testimony as improper, irrelevant, and—

John Turnipseed—You keep your clam trap shut or I'll bash you over the head—

(John starts from his chair, but Slim pushes him back and prevails upon him to sit.)

John Turnipseed (cooling off) You'll have to 'scuse me, Judge. That feller makes me plumb mad—Can't you keep him shut up? As I was sayin', an' Hank Wilson will bear me out in this, we're willin' to make a Protective Association, and put up as much as 50 cents per each of us, if everybody else will come in an' have about $50 reward.

Spud—You git into that, ole Penny Pincher.

John Turnipseed—An' print pieces in the paper—an' post notices so the thieves will keep away—

Spud—I'm agin the pieces an' the notices—with all my disguises it's a pipe for me to ketch the thieves. I'm strong as mustard for the reward idea.

Justice Lazy Farmer—The idee's good, but I guess by gee—these fellers won't steal no hens from me.

Mirandy—We'll join—you count us in—Justice Lazy Farmer—I'd rather let my neighbors pay, but it 'pears I ain't got much to say. So, now let's get on with the trial. I gotta fish some afterwhile.

Senator Hiram Cornborer—I'm through with John—

"Slipme" Slick—I pass him up.

One-eye Pete—Ain't you goin' to do a lick of work—

"Slipme" Slick—It's nothing to me—I got your cash!

(The two prisoners start up and attempt to choke "Slipme" Slick, who cringes as they attack him and Spud shoots twice into the air, then puts down his gun, grabs the two prisoners and is forcing them to their chairs, when Jim the Gyp seizes Spud's gun from the table and is about to fire when Slim rushes over, grabs him from behind, pinioning his arms. Finally quiet is restored and John Turnipseed leaves the witness chair.)

Justice Lazy Farmer—(to Spud) If they rare agin, don't take no chance—just shoot the hen thieves in the pants—whose next, Hi, to tell us what is what about the hens that them thieves got?

Senator Hiram Cornborer—Annie knows somethin'.

(Annie takes the witness chair and from her basket takes a peculiarly marked hen—then waits ready to answer questions.)

"Slipme" Slick—I object—one chicken in the witness stand at a time is enough.

(Slim steps over and squares off at "Slipme" and Justice Lazy Farmer beats on the bench with his gavel. Spud pushes Slim back to place and threatens "Slipme" Slick as he goes back to his place. Order is restored.)

Senator Hiram Cornborer—Tell us what you know, Annie, in your own way, but first, what is your occupation?

Annie—Mostly baking pies for Penny Pincher's two hired men, Slim (she glances affectionately at Slim—then turns to Spud) and Spud—I work there.

Senator Hiram Cornborer—What about this old hen?

Annie—She is one of the 62 those fellows stole from us. She's how I could tell the bunch. You see, Old Speckle, here (Annie pets the old hen) I'd know her any day. She's the pet.

One-eyed Pete—I tole youse guys not to take no speckled hens. They're a dead give away every time.

Jerry the Gun—How's a guy agoin' to tell when a henhouse's as black as the inside of a coffin?

Jim, the Gyp—Lay off talkin' about coffins—

(Spud slaps them over the head and order is restored.)

Senator Hiram Cornborer—I'm through with Annie.

"Slipme" Slick—I pass her up—anyone would.

(Slim jumps across the room and half chokes "Slipme" before Spud can pry him loose. Slim then escorts Annie to her chair and returns to his post at right of the Judge's bench.)

Justice Lazy Farmer—Well, Hi, you've won your case most handy, but I reckon you'd better swear Mirandy—if she don't get her chance, by gee, she'll never bake no pies for me.

Mirandy—Just leave me out, Hi, get done with this quick. They won't be no livin' with Lazy unless he gets in some fishin' today.

Senator Hiram Cornborer—Hank Wilson—take the the stand.

(Hank Wilson takes the witness chair.)

Senator Hiram Cornborer—Hank, what do you know about these chicken thieves?

Hank Wilson—These thieves stole Penny Pincher's hens and three ducks. Them fellers are the lowest down, meanest, sneakin', miserable pups—stealin' chickens at night when honest folks is asleep.

Slim—(aside) Penny's honest, but gosh, he's tight.

Hank Wilson—An' they should a-been shot. Kin you sentence them to be hung, Lazy?

"Slipme" Slick—I object to the testimony as improper, irrelevant, and—

Senator Hiram Cornborer—I'm through with the witness.

"Slipme" Slick—I pass him up.

One-eyed Pete—When I git done with this stretch, I'm goin' to be a gyp lawyer. Chicken stealin' is like breakin' rocks 'long side of the way he gits his'n.

(Hank Wilson leaves the stand. Justice Lazy Farmer sentences the prisoners.)

Justice Lazy Farmer—I tell you that I'd like, by heck, to hang them fellers by the neck. Chicken thieves is the meanest kind, a-shootin' them from the behind would be a sentence much too mild. Losin' chickens makes my neighbors wild, but the best that I can do, it's clear, is give each one 'bout 14 year a'breakin' rocks up at the prison for takin' hens that ain't his'n. Slim, you and Spud git your old Liz and rush 'em up where the pen is, and all you folks can go back home, but as for me, I'm goin' to roam, down to the crick, I'm a fish charmer, and John, you write a piece for PRAIRIE FARMER.
