Outagamie County Can Build New Courthouse Now

Report Robbery of Local Creamery Plant

A rather mysterious robbery at the Fairmont Creamery, W. Washington street, was reported to the police department at 6:15 Thursday evening by Robert Overton, an employee of the company. Mr. Overton claims that he locked up the building about 6 o'clock and started home and then remembered that his wife had asked him to bring a bottle of cream home with him. When he went back to the plant he says he saw three men in the office trying to open the safe. According to Overton's story these men took $2.75 from him and then ordered him to go down to the basement and stay there. While he was in the basement Overton says he heard the door slam upstairs and judged that the men had left, but instead of coming upstairs he crawled out of a narrow window, ran over to the Oldsmobile garage just south of the Fairmont building and called the police. Chief George Prim and Officer Deltgen immediately went to the creamery building. Meanwhile Overton having seen the men flee north jumped into a truck and started to follow. He had just started when, he says, two of the men ran between houses less than a block away from the Fairmont plant and the other ran across the street. All three disappeared and a thorough search by police officers and others failed to reveal any trace of them. No description of the intruders could be obtained from Overton except that one of them wore a soft slouch hat and that they had mufflers pulled up over their faces during the time they were robbing him of $2.75.

Cast Is Ready for the First Children's Production

Various social groups and classes were drawn upon for the cast for "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs," which will be presented by the theatre for children at Lawrence Memorial chapel Saturday afternoon. Interviews and try-outs were continued until suitable types for the various roles were found, and rehearsals, which have been under the direction of Mrs. F. Theodore Cloak indicate that an entertainment pleasing to both children and adults will be presented. The cast includes John Cinkiski, Getrude Farrell, Nona Nemacheck, F. Theodore Cloak, Robert Rechner, Agnes Jolin, Evelyn Long, Catherine Griggs, Janet Murphy, Ramona Sharp, Genevieve Thulien, Agnes Snell, Mrs. E. F. The Appleton Engraving Co. Will Move to Menasha

Word was received this morning that the Appleton Engraving company has acquired a site for a new plant in Menasha and will erect a building in the near future. The site purchased is on Water street and is now occupied by an old residence. Tenants of this house already have been given notice to vacate.

The Appleton Engraving company has been one of this city's industries for the last seven years, and has its plant in the old city waterworks building. Between twenty and thirty people are employed, most of them skilled artisans. The concern was originally located in Menasha, but was reorganized and moved to this city. The fact that a large volume of the company's business is done for Menasha patrons is one of the principal reasons for removal back to that city.

A modern building is to be erected by the company and the work of razing the old buildings on the site will be started soon.

Appleton Lions Enter Four Teams in State Pin Meet

Appleton Lions club has entered four teams in the state Lions bowling tournament to be held at Garot alleys, New London, between now and March 15. A fifth team probably will be added later.

All entry money will be set up for prizes, in addition to other awards planned by the New London club. Half of the money will be used for goodfellowship prizes, and the other half for skill in the team matches, doubles and singles. Len Cline, of the New London club, is secretary of the tournament. The local arrangements are being handled by W. E. Strassburger and David Smith.

To Defer Construction in Face of Present Conditions Would be Poor Economy

"Human lives and county records which could never be replaced by any amount of money are every day in imminent danger in the Outagamie county courthouse." This was one of the significant statements made by T. H. Ryan, chairman of the committee of county board members investigating the possibility of building a new courthouse at once. The committee favors immediate construction of a new home for our county government and Mr. Ryan has offered many pertinent and alarming reasons for this consensus of opinion.

The year 1931 presents the most opportune time of any from the standpoint of low cost for the construction of the new court house, the committee points out. Already conferences have been held with seven well known architects, who have drawn up tentative plans for a courthouse building.

These architects are agreed that for the county to build this year will mean a saving of about 25 per cent as compared with building prices in 1930, and they are reasonably certain that building costs will again be on the up-grade in 1932. Economists throughout the United States agree that the business depression has hit rock bottom and that from now on prices will slowly rise.

Then why not start at once on the construction of a new courthouse? The present building is a disgrace to Outagamie county and to the public officials who have to work there, Mr. Ryan indicated. Not only is it crowded to overflowing, but it is a firetrap and thus an ever constant threat of destruction to records which could not be replaced.

Thomas H. Ryan, chairman of committee conferring with architects on new court house building.

Get this statement, residents of Outagamie county — "If your courthouse were to burn to the ground tonight the title to every piece of property in Outagamie county would be in jeopardy tomorrow and subject to dispute!" Such a calamity could happen very easily. Some of the records in the register of deeds office must be kept in the basement—there is no more room in the office. Yes, there are a few vaults, but the space in them is pitifully inadequate for the volumes upon volumes of records which have been accumulating since the courthouse was built more than fifty years ago. And the vaults are by no means fireproof. Books of records involving millions of dollars worth of land deals stacked in the basement of an old, old building; some night a fire—it would need only a half hour's start in the old structure—everything gone. Not a pleasant picture that, but a practical one nevertheless.

It was only about six weeks ago that the state capitol building of North Dakota at Bismark burned to the ground. The legislators in North Dakota had just about completed plans for a new state house when the disastrous fire took place. Now they wish those plans had been completed years ago and that the building had been erected when the need for a new structure was first realized. Some of the records never can be replaced, and it will cost many thousands of dollars to duplicate those which can be reproduced. This was a very striking example of false economy, one which the citizens of Outagamie county cannot afford to follow.

Estimates for cost of constructing a new courthouse here as presented by the seven architects to the committee, vary from $500,000 to $850,000. The building would be a combination courthouse and jail, which is the plan followed by almost all counties throughout the country which are erecting new buildings. All the plans submitted contemplate the growth and needs of Outagamie county for at least the next 50 years and some for as long a time as 75 years. When the present structure was built back in 1880 there couldn't have been much of this idea of looking to the needs of the future. In fact the building must have been erected only to meet the needs of that early day. Certainly it must have been out of date and somewhat inadequate as early as 1900.

Some of the architectural designs submitted provide for erecting the building in two or three units while others call for putting up the entire structure immediately. The idea of the unit plan would be the retaining of the present courthouse and jail buildings while the first unit of the new structure could be built between them. Provisions were made in the other plans, however, which would enable the county to have working facilities while the new building was in process of construction.

"About ten years ago we spent approximately $25,000 in repairing this old building, and now what have we got to show for it?" said Mr. Ryan. "We are in more desperate circumstances than ever before because of the increased congestion and the lack of proper sanitation and ventilation."

Continuing the argument that it is poor economy to delay working on what should be done at once because of the immediate expense involved, Mr. Ryan pointed out that if the county should delay building for five years and a disastrous fire should come which might easily cost the lives of one or two people and cause the destruction of county records, the county would have to pay out sums of money in liability and other expenses which would run up into the hundreds of thousands of dollars in addition to building a new courthouse.

Another item of economy which would mean a saving to the taxpayers if the courthouse were built now is the fact that the courthouse and jail would be housed in one structure. The building could be operated a whole lot more economically than two. The reasons for this are apparent. The item of heating only one building would save the county hundreds of dollars, perhaps thousands, every year. Then it costs a great deal less to keep one building cleaned than it does for two.

It is difficult for many people to look at anything but the original cost of such a building. Half a million or three-quarters of a million dollars looks like a pretty big fistful of money to the average taxpayer and it is a pretty fair sum. Everybody is perfectly willing to admit all that. But, on the other hand, what is it costing the men and women of Outagamie county to keep the present establishment going? There are two buildings to be kept in repair, to be heated and to be cleaned. They are old and inconveniently arranged so that the expense of keeping them in the best condition possible (we did not say "good condition" because it can't be done) is getting to be a greater burden on the taxpayers every day. More and more repairs and make-shift arrangements will be necessary as time goes on. Over and above all is the ever present peril of fire, a danger which grows greater every day as the transaction of county business increases and as the great files of records grow larger and larger.

How are the funds for a new courthouse going to be raised so quickly, many people will ask. Mr. Ryan and his committee favor a bond issue of about $400,000 to be passed by the county board at its session next week. But first of all there already is a fund, amounting to approximately $110,000 laid aside by the supervisors for the building of a new courthouse. This with the proposed bond issue would bring a sum of more than $500,000 which would be enough to go to work with, in fact nearly enough to complete the whole job, according to some of the plans submitted.

A sum of $75,000 or $100,000 might be added to the county tax levy for the next two or three years. This would not be a burdensome addition in a county the size of Outagamie. It would not be a great many years before the bonds could all be paid off and the people of this county would have a building which they not only could be mighty proud of but one entirely safe and sound in every respect. Now they are flirting with danger of the most serious kind imaginable.

Our next article will describe in more detail the congested conditions in various departments of the present courthouse.

City's Financial Status Is Better Than a Year Ago

A decided improvement in the affairs of the city is shown in the report of the auditor, Willard Schenck, who completed examination of the books of the city clerk and city treasurer February 9. The total cash on hand January 1, 1931, was $135,000 more than a year ago. The cash account on January 1, 1931, showed a credit of $227,479.98 as against $91,549.72 on January 1, 1930. The general fund balance on January 1, 1931, was $56,020.43 while on January 1, 1930, it was $5,855.84.

A net decrease in expenditures was also revealed. During 1930 the operating expenses totaled $610,735.79 while in 1929 they were $726,075.72, or $115,339.93 more than the succeeding year. A considerable decrease in costs is shown in spite of the fact that the 1929 costs were swelled by the construction of the Wisconsin avenue subway, the net cost of which was about $34,000.

In compiling the figures for comparison, an effort was made to include all bills so that a true statement of the city's condition could be obtained. However, some overlapping is unavoidable, but regardless of this, there is a splendid improvement in the general condition of the city.

The auditor in a letter to Mayor Goodland commented on the splendid condition of the records of the clerk and treasurer. The books of the public school and water departments were not included in this audit, but funds in custody of the treasurer were audited and verified.

Nine Legionnaires turned out for the preliminary shooting tryouts held at the Armory after the boxing bout Thursday evening. Six men who rate the highest will be selected for a rifle team whose standing will be forwarded to headquarters for consideration in the selection of a team to represent the state at the national shoot later in the season. The final tryout will be held Saturday evening. Those who entered the preliminary contest Thursday evening were Helm Hussner, C. O. Baetz, Stanley Staidl, Les Smith, Cloyd Schroeder, Dr. Theodore Knapstein, Floyd Kessler, Dr. H. L. Playman, and Cliff Radder.

The boys are being held at the county jail under bonds of $1000 each. They are alleged to have stolen cigarets, candy, and tobacco worth $37.

The Conservatory Symphony orchestra will present a concert at Memorial chapel Monday evening. The orchestra has a complement of forty pieces and is directed by Percy Fullinwider. Monday's program will open with "Prometheus," by Beethoven, which the director claims has not been presented in the city in the last twenty years, if ever.

GIVE US INFORMED SUPERVISORS

Appleton, Kaukauna and other cities represented in the newly organized League of Municipalities of the lower Fox River Valley are confronted with a problem that should have action by this body in time to present remedial legislation at Madison.

This matter deals with the system by which no city official is a member of the board of supervisors of Outagamie county. Appleton has no representation direct from the common council. Members whom we elect to the county board are chosen from various wards independent of the city government.

Result: While we have men representing us on the county board who are as conscientious and capable as those in our city council, yet they lack the background necessary for dealing with the problems of the county from the city's angle. No man can use his best judgment on city matters unless he is sitting as a member of the common council and knows the inside details of all important matters.

Appleton is at enough of a disadvantage with only six men on the county board, to say nothing of having men there who are entirely apart from our local governing body. The law should be so changed that one alderman from each ward also should serve as a supervisor. There is no conflict of meeting dates and an alderman could serve in both capacities without having one office interfere with the other. Even the mayor of the city should sit on the county board.

Such a step is logical. Rural townships have seen the wisdom of it. The town chairman is the county supervisor. He knows the problems of his local governing unit and can carry mature judgment to the board sessions and govern his actions by the needs of his constituents. Appleton and other cities have taken issue seriously with the county at times. If men properly equipped to represent the city could take the floor in county sessions, there could be better understanding and closer harmony. The farmer's side is always heard in no uncertain terms. Likewise the city should be able to stand firmly for its best interests.

Changes in the laws making it mandatory for aldermen or other city officials to be elected as county supervisors will be a long stride towards more satisfactory government. The league of city officials would do well to bring this about while the legislature is in session.

OUSTING THE POOR MAN'S BANK

Finance companies dealing in small loans are the target of every legislature. Frequently there is a demand that they be legislated out of business.

These companies have found a place in our communities and are serving a type of patronage not courted by the banks. Perhaps the difficulty hinges on the seemingly high interest rates borrowers must pay. It therefore behooves these companies to consider remedies before the state feels it must take a hand.

It will be seen, however, that the interest rates are not unusually high. A philanthropist in Kansas City years ago established a place where needy people could obtain small loans. He did it without the idea of making any profit, and built the establishment to large proportions. He proved the need of such a place.

It is interesting to note that his experience taught him an interest rate of 2½ per cent a month was not too high. A return of this amount was needed to carry on a venture of this kind and cover the cost of handling these many small items. If a rate therefore could be adopted on a basis of this kind, the public would be satisfied to let these establishments alone and they might have peace from the football of state politics.

THE DANGEROUS FARM

Safety in industry, safety in traffic and safety in the home have had so much emphasis in recent years that many a death or injury has been saved because ordinary care was exercised.

One industry of mammoth proportions, that of farming, needs the same zealous application of logic. Accidents with tractors, hay loaders, threshing equipment, mowers, binders, ensilage cutters and other devices are frequent, often fatal. A general indifference to danger is usually the cause.

Each winter there should be safety mass-meetings of farmers, just as there is in industry. Well informed speakers should point out the hazards connected with farming, and show farmers how ordinary precautions will save many a life and limb. Once a man is made keenly alert to the dangers in his path and becomes eager to practice safety, there will be a marked difference in the annual reports of such casualties.

Any farmer can use his own common sense. He can inspect his equipment to learn whether it is in safe condition. He can place safeguards where danger lurks. He can give his helpers a training in careful handling of equipment. He can pick up the tools, refuse and other objects lying where they court injury. He can resolve that no carelessness on his part will cause death or harm to anybody. It is time to talk farm safety.

FARMERS MUST ACT

It is a common saying that when the farmer prospers, everybody prospers. This is true of Appleton and vicinity, where there is such an extensive interchange of trade. When the farm buying power is cut, the merchants of Appleton feel it keenly. Any movement which helps the farmer helps the city as well.

For this reason it is hoped that the farmers will see the wisdom of joining with the Pure Milk Products Co-operative Association now in formation in this locality. One of its principal objects is to see that the farmer receives a fair market price for his milk. No individual can do this alone. There must be an organization of sufficient size to demand what the farmer deserves.

Farmers are up against the same situation as the independent merchants in the city. The control of the cheese industry has passed into the hands of several large syndicates owning or controlling cheese factories everywhere. Likewise the control of the butter industry is passing into the hands of these large corporations. The condensed milk companies also control a large part of the milk output and exert their power.

Some such co-operative organization as the state proposes will place the milk producers on an equal footing with these large corporations. Immense buying power and expert management are essential if the dairymen are to survive.

Every householder knows that the products of the farm have reached a lower price range than almost any other commodity. Butter, eggs, milk, meat and poultry are examples. Research shows that these products are being sold at less than the cost of production. Such a condition is far from satisfactory and will seriously affect the farming industry if it continues. The farmer is entitled to a fair return on his investment and labor. Organized effort will place him in a position to demand a price which will give him a profit.

Without some assured outlet for milk through an organization which farmers control, dairymen will always be at the mercy of the big interests. If the condensary cuts the price, the farmer will turn to the cheese factory, only to find the same situation there. The creamery likewise will give him no encouragement. He must submit to whatever prices they choose to pay or have no market for his milk. The dairy co-operative will protect him against such conditions by marketing milk where it will bring the best return.

Success has come to many similar organizations. The day of the individualist has passed. The farmer who does not link himself with larger commercial interests is sure to find his future a difficult one.

Carl A. Greunke, Appleton, was awarded $1,800 damages from the North American Airways, Inc., operators of the George A. Whiting Airport, by a jury in circuit court Tuesday afternoon. The case was not contested by the company, but under the law it was necessary for a jury to ascertain the amount of damages to which the complainant was entitled. Greunke originally asked for $2,000 damages for his airplane, which was wrecked when it was struck by a plane operated by Elwin West, an employe of the company. The case had been tried in circuit court, and Greunke was awarded $1,650. An appeal was made to the supreme court, which ordered a new trial.

The case of George Stein against W. I. Johnson, Appleton, in which testimony had been completed Wednesday morning, was settled out of court when a settlement of $35 was agreed upon. The suit was the result of an automobile accident in which cars, driven by the two men, figured. In a lower court Stein had been given a verdict for $100 damages, but Johnson appealed the case.

Retail merchants are making elaborate preparations for the spring opening to be held probably March 12, 13 and 14, according to preliminary plans being discussed by the special chamber of commerce committee. The committee met this morning to continue its discussion. Plans for decorating the light poles on College Ave. and conducting window display contests have been tentatively decided on. John Mullen is chairman of the committee, which also includes H. M. Goldberg, Wayne Jones, and Raymond Eichelberger.

Joseph Jacobson has been instructed to appear in municipal court on February 20 to face a charge of failing to stop and give assistance after injuring pedestrians. Jacobson's car struck Mr. and Mrs. John Skalmusky, Kaukauna, Sunday evening, seriously wounding Mrs. Skalmusky, who is confined to St. Elizabeth hospital with a fractured skull. Mr. Skalmusky sustained body bruises. Jacobson is alleged to have tried to speed away after striking the couple, but was halted by another autoist who witnessed the accident and forced him to stop. Jacobson furnished bail in the sum of $1,000.

Outagamie county's share of state taxes will exceed state aid assigned to it by $29,189.97. The total amount of taxes to be paid the state is $143,375.63, divided as follows: Public school tax, $85,413.90; forestry tax, $6,221.21; charitable and penal institutions, $23,037.64; and school district loans, $28,702.88. State aid which amounts to $114,245.66 includes $9,996 for common schools; $58,269.89 public schools; $30,692.40 insane asylum; and $15,217.37 sanatorium.

Appleton will extend an invitation to the state hockey players, through the Blue Streaks who will participate in the state tourney at Fort Atkinson next weekend, to hold the 1932 meet in this city. The invitation will be extended by Mayor John Goodland and Kenneth Corbett, secretary of the chamber of commerce.

Mike Piette, Appleton, filed a petition in bankruptcy in federal court in Milwaukee recently. Secured claims are given at $3,216.50 and unsecured claims at $2,959.15. Assets consist of a home-stead, household goods, and a car, claimed exempt. The petition is in the hands of Charles H. Forward, referee in bankruptcy, for administration.

Loring Campbell and Miss Charlotte Bothwell, novelty entertainers, will give the tenth number on the Lyceum program at the Appleton high school Thursday. Miss Bothwell is a piano-accordion artist, and Mr. Campbell will perform magic and ventriloquism acts.

Mrs. Edna Whitman, River Road, is at liberty under bonds of $100 for appearance in municipal court February 20 to answer charges of embezzlement and larceny as bailee. J. L. Stelpflug, a grocer at Appleton Junction, is the complainant. The woman is charged with having taken ten pounds of sugar valued at 52 cents and a pound of butter valued at 31 cents.

The chamber of commerce received a response from the Tapager Construction company of Albert Lea, Minn., low bidders on the Appleton postoffice job, to an inquiry asking if local labor would be given preference in construction work if the contract is awarded to the Minnesota concern. Assurance was given that Appleton labor would be given first consideration. Bids for the new postoffice were opened at Washington Monday, and it is believed the award will be made within the month.

An inheritance tax of $82,075.85 was paid to Miss Marie Ziegenhagen, county treasurer, on the estate of the late Albert W. Priest, who died a year ago. While the inventory of the estate has not been filed, it is estimated in the petition for probate at close to a million dollars. The county will retain 7½ per cent, or about $6,156, of the tax, the balance going to the state.

Anton Van Bommell, Little Chute, was to have been given a preliminary hearing before Judge Theodore Berg in municipal court today on a charge of failing to provide for his three minor children. Van Bommell was arrested on complaint of Anton Janssen, village president. He was given a preliminary hearing Tuesday, and held at the county jail under $500 bonds.

Brooding over ill health is believed responsible for Mrs. Hulda Pingel, 68, 402 S. Walter Ave., taking her life at her home early Thursday morning. She had taken a bench to stand upon, and stepped from it after fastening a rope about her neck. Knowing Our Children Better

By

Edith D. Dixon

The Scrapper

"My little girl of six years scraps with everybody whom she comes in contact with — playmates, babies, older children, adults — it makes no difference who. What shall I do to break her of this?"

This comes from an irate parent. I am inclined to suggest that first of all she change her own attitude toward the child. There is no child who cannot get on with some one and the adults in charge must take a more constructive point of view, asking themselves not how can they break her of quarreling with everyone, but how they can help the child to be more cooperative.

I do not know this little girl but I can guess that she is not very happy. She probably realizes that people do not like her and this makes her more antagonistic. Perhaps she has not learned to respect the rights of other children and wants always to have her own way. That is not her fault; all children want their own way, but their parents have to teach them, not by talking but by practice, that it is necessary to give in to others, to share with others, and to plan for others some of the time if you want to be accepted by them. Has this little girl been permitted to invite other children into her home and plan for them a pleasant afternoon? Has she been told beforehand what her duty as a hostess would be?

This child may have executive ability and is not getting sufficient outlet for its use. Perhaps she needs more opportunity to plan and do things for herself, to do things about the home, to take responsibility.

Perhaps she is playing with too many children at once. Some children become over-excited by a large group.

Perhaps she is ridiculed or teased at home so she "gets even" by bullying or quarreling outside.

Perhaps she is handicapped physically and cannot do the things that her playmates can do. This would make her feel inferior and tend to develop a general antagonism toward the group.

Every child needs to be taught to excel in something so that he has a contribution to make to the group. This will help him to build self-confidence, the lack of which lies at the bottom of both over-timidty and over-aggressiveness.

The Plains of Abraham

A Masterpiece of Fiction by James Oliver Curwood

INSTALLMENT XVI

Bending low over the doomed man she whispered:

"Hepsibah—Hepsibah Adams—I am Toinette Tonteur."

Shindas waited with Ah De Bah as the gloom thickened about them. After a time, they saw Wood Pigeon going toward the circle of fires. Shindas stopped her, and in answer to his question she told him Toinette was weeping beside the white man and that the dog was with her.

A fresh outcry told them that at last the time had come, and Ah De Bah went to the tepee and held back the flap. He spoke to Toinette, calling her Soi Yan Makwun. There was no answer. He spoke again and entered. After a brief interval, his voice rose in a demand for Shindas, and the young Seneca answered it. Ah De Bah was hunting like an animal in the blackness. The tepee was empty. Toinette and Hepsibah Adams were gone.

Shindas did not speak. There was no light to reveal his face as he went to the edge of the river and saw that a canoe was gone. He grunted his wonder when the Tall Man joined him. The canoe had been launched within fifty paces of them, and they had not heard a sound. Words of self-abasement fell from Ah De Bah's lips. He and Shindas were like two children, and every man and woman in Chenufcio would taunt them because of the ease with which the escape had been made. But the missing canoe could not be far distant. The fugitives, one of them blind, could not possibly succeed in their flight. The night would see the white man given to the stake, and now that Silver Heels had proved herself a serpent in the tribe and a traitor to Tiaoga, she would probably die with him.

Ah De Bah made queer sounds in his chest as they ran to Tiaoga and the expectant people with him. He not as calm as Shindas when they arrived. It was Shindas who announced the deception of the stranger whom they had accepted as the true spirit of Soi Yan Makwun. Tiaoga was coldly and terribly still. His face changed before their eyes. The furies in it grew deeper, and it became as hard as stone in the fields. Then words came weighted with the decision of death, rising until they swelled in a passion that was like a fire consuming everything in its path. He declared that his honor and the honor of his people lay in his hands. He called on Shindas and Ah De Bah to go with him to recapture the fugitives, for this was a duty imposed on him first of all. Before the night was much older, the fire stake should have its triumph. He had forgotten the blind man, for a man without eyes was already dead. He would give to the flames the white girl who had betrayed them.

The fires burned down until they were eyes in the night. Hours passed, and the Senecas listened in the stillness as if oppressed by fear. At last they heard the chanting of a voice coming nearer as fast as a canoe could travel. It was the death song with which Tiaoga had grieved for his daughter, and the savages were moved by it as leaves are moved by a wind. The suspense was broken, for in the song of grief was also a note of triumph which brought the message that Tiaoga had been successful in his pursuit. Fresh fuel was piled on the fires, and the flames leapt high. When Tiaoga and his companions came from the river, they brought no prisoner with them. Yet a fierce light shone in their countenances as they entered the illuminations, and beginning his death song again Tiaoga snatched a burning brand and flung it into the midst of the pitchy material about the torture stake. In a moment a winding sheet of flame licked its way up the pole, and around this Tiaoga danced, finishing his song to the crackling of the pitch. He described how they had overtaken the fleeing ones at the edge of the Great rocks beyond which the water thundered in a maelstrom. The blind man had fought with a hatchet he had stolen from Ah De Bah's tepee until another blade was sunk in his brain to quiet him. He was a devil in his blindness, and Tiaoga pointed to Shindas, who held back his buckskin shirt to show a long and bleeding gash. The white man was dead, and his body, weighted by the darkness of his soul, was gone forever in the deep waters beyond the rocks.

But the unclean one who had tricked them, the girl whose evil spirit had come to bring dishonor upon them and to desecrate the soul of Soi Yan Makwun, they had taken alive. Tiaoga's face grew livid. His soul had gone so black when they caught her that he could see only death, for he heard his daughter's voice crying to him for vengeance. So he had killed the treacherous one. He had killed her at the command of Silver Heels, whose spirit was singing to him. He had killed the white girl with his own hands and had flung her body to disappear with that of the blind man.

Suddenly Tiaoga drew from its hiding place next his breast a thing which brought a gasp to the lips of those about him. All recognized it as Toinette's beautiful braid of hair streaming from the bleeding scalp the savage held above his head.

Tiaoga became more than ever a fiend in the flesh as he danced about the stake. Flecks of blood from the red scalp struck his face. At the height of his madness he flung it into the heart of the pitchwood fire.

Soi Yan Makwun was avenged and the demand of his people answered.

At noon of the second day of his journey Jeems came to the village of Kanestio, whose chief was Matozee, or Yellow Bear. He had traveled the seventy miles in thirty hours, and was determined to return as quickly, for he was troubled deeply by the thought that Toinette was alone at a time when the sentiment of the Indians was turning against them. Why he and not a tribal runner had been sent to Yellow Bear puzzled him, and the fact that he bore a message of small importance increased his uneasiness.

He had scarcely reached Kanestio when his weapons, a knife and hatchet, were taken from him and he was brought to Matozee. This individual, who was killed at Lake George the following year and who was a boy in appearance though the French held him among the bravest fighters of the Six Nations, informed Jeems that he was a prisoner. He said Tiaoga had defaulted in a payment of corn that was due, and Jeems was to cover part of the obligation. Matozee tersely explained the agreement between the chiefs. If Jeems attempted to escape and was caught by his warriors, he would be killed; if by any chance he succeeded in getting back to Chenufcio, then he would answer to Tiaoga with his life. A dead line was drawn encircling the tepee in which he was to live, and he found himself under a surveillance little less strict than that accorded to a prisoner whose fate was to be torture or death.

The fourth afternoon he perceived an excited gathering of women and children some distance from him but paid no attention to it. Depressed by fears which had become unbearable, he was determined to gain his freedom before another dawn. Increasing cloudiness during the afternoon and a promise of storm with the beginning of evening added to his hopes for success. Thunder and rain came with darkness, and he feigned sleep at an early hour. It was almost midnight when he sat up and listened to the downpour. He was about to rise to his feet, certain that no Senecas would be lying in the deluge, when he heard the sudden rustle of the skin flap to the tepee as it was drawn back and someone entered.

In a moment a small voice whispered his name. Cold hands found him as he held out his arms. He felt a child's drenched form.

Then came choking words half smothered in the heat of the storm: "I am Wood Pigeon. I ran away from Chenufcio three days ago. I have come to tell you Silver Heels is dead."

Lightning flashes which accompanied the storm that night revealed a solitary figure hurrying through the wilderness toward Chenufcio, a figure which sped until it was winded and then continued at a slower pace with a persistence no beat of rain or blast of wind could halt.

The traveler was Jeems. Wood Pigeon had repeated the message Toinette entrusted to her a few minutes preceding her flight with Hepsibah Adams, and no blackness was so thick that it hid from him the tortured faces of his wife and his blind uncle as they beckoned him to vengeance.

Even vengeance seemed futile and inadequate. Hope did not rise in his breast. He had hoped when he knew his mother was dead, he had hoped as he sought for life among the ruins of Tonteur manor, he had never quite given up hope that his uncle was alive. But now it was impossible for him to find that saving grace within his mental reach. As he went on, he was slowly dispossessed of the power to hate, though every sinew in his body was bent with implacable resolution in its mission of death. He would kill Tiaoga. He would kill Shindas. There would be only justice and no gratification of the flesh or the spirit in his act. A greater and more encompassing thing than the impulse which had sent him from Matozee's village began to choke him with a force that was sickening. It was his aloneness. The vastness of the world. The sudden going of the one who had remained to make it habitable for him. Without Toinette there was no reason for its existence, no reason why it should continue to give him the warmth of life. Toinette was dead. It was a fate predestined from the beginning, something he had always feared vaguely. Nothing counted now; to kill Tiaoga and Shindas would not cause a rift in the hopelessness which lay ahead of him.

He advanced with a speed which would have exhausted him at any other time. As the hours passed, an explanation for this haste gathered in his consciousness. He was going home. That in all of its significance was the cabin in which Toinette and he had lived. Their home. A thing that had not gone with her body and yet was a part of her which he would find as he had left it when he came to the end of the trail, unless Tiaoga had destroyed that, too.

He reached Chenufcio. The place gleamed with pools of water. Suspicious dogs appeared to identify him, but the people were asleep. He found his cabin with the door closed as it would have been if Toinette were asleep inside. He could feel her presence when he entered. But she was not there. He made a light cautiously and screened it so that eyes outside could not see. The floor, the walls, the room were illumined faintly. He began to put his hands on things, to gather them here and there, making a bundle of his treasures on the table—her things. When he had prepared the bundle he armed himself with a knife and a hatchet and his bow, then extinguished the light and went out, closing the door behind him.

He sought Shindas, for his plan was to kill him first.

What Shall We Have For Dinner Today?

CREAMED DISHES

No matter what her years of experience in the culinary art—whether they may be many or summed up in a twelvemonth, the housewife always turns to creamed dishes. Creamed dishes need no promotion campaigns. They speak for themselves. At little cost they supply the nutritive value needed; they increase the amount of food serving; they are a means of camouflage for left-overs; they can be put together with little time and effort.

The connoisseur of creamed dishes will tell you that the secret is in the making of a perfect white sauce. It must be well blended, free from lumps, thoroughly cooked and seasoned according to use. The thickness of your cream sauce is dictated by its special use—a thin sauce for soups, a medium sauce for the usual creamed dishes, a thick sauce for croquettes. To insure perfect blending, combine your butter and flour to a creamy consistency, then add the vegetable stock or water boiling hot and lastly pour in the evaporated milk gradually. If it is necessary to keep the cream sauce hot for late-comers home, set the cooking pan in hot water. Add a few small pieces of butter which will melt gradually. Keep covered.

The housewife who has made her cooking an art always cuts her vegetable, chicken, meat or fish in fine pieces for a creamed dish.

Asparagus Ring

- 2 bunches asparagus tips
- 2 tbsp. butter
- 3 tbsp. flour
- ½ tsp. salt
- Pepper
- ½ cup evaporated milk
- ½ cup water or chicken broth
- 4 eggs, separated

Cut asparagus in one inch pieces. Make a white sauce of the butter, flour, salt, pepper and milk, diluted with water. Pour sauce on to well beaten egg yolks. Cool, fold in stiffly beaten egg whites and the asparagus. Place in well-greased ring mold, set in a pan of boiling water and bake in a slow oven (300 degrees F.) until set, about 40 minutes. Remove to hot platter, place cooked peas or cauliflower in center and serve with white sauce. Yield—8 servings.

Creamed Crabmeat

- 1½ tbsp. butter
- 2 tbsp. flour
- Dash pepper
- ½ tsp. salt
- 1 cup boiling water
- 1 cup evaporated milk
- 1½ pts. canned crabmeat
- 1 tbsp. lemon juice

Prepare a white sauce of first six ingredients. Remove bones from crabmeat and season with lemon juice. Add to the white sauce and heat thoroughly. Serve on toast or in patty shells. Yield: 12 servings.

Tuna Fish Pie

- 4 tbsp. butter
- 1 slice onion

- 3 tbsp. flour
- ¾ tsp. salt
- 1/3 tsp. pepper
- 1¾ cups water
- 2 chicken bouillon cubes
- ½ cup evaporated milk
- 1 12-ounce can tuna fish
- 1 cup sliced celery
- 1 cup diced potatoes
- 3 hard cooked eggs
- Baking powder biscuits

Cook butter and onion in sauce pan slowly 5 minutes, without browning. Add flour, salt, pepper and blend well. Then add water and bouillon cubes. Stir until sauce boils and add evaporated milk. Put alternate layers of sauce, tuna fish, celery, potatoes and hard cooked eggs in a buttered baking dish. Cover with tiny baking powder biscuits. Bake in a hot oven (425 degrees F.) 15 to 20 minutes or until biscuits are brown and pie is very hot. Yield—6 servings.

Creamed Meat Balls

- 1 lb. round steak
- ½ lb. pork
- 1 egg, well beaten
- 1 tsp. onion juice
- ½ tsp. salt
- Pepper
- Evaporated milk

Put meat through food chopper three or four times. Add eggs and seasonings and mix thoroughly. Add milk to make the right consistency to mold into cakes about ¾ inch thick. Saute in hot fat until well browned on both sides. Remove the meat cakes. Add 3 tbsp. flour to the fat remaining in the pan, stir until well browned. Add 1 cup evaporated milk, diluted with one cup of water. Return meat cakes to gravy and finish cooking over a low fire. Yield—6 servings.

Mrs. George Haack and son, Vernon Haack of Kaukauna, are in St. Elizabeth hospital suffering from injuries received Thursday afternoon in a collision at the intersection of N. Lawe and E. Washington streets. Mrs. Haack was driving east on E. Washington street and the other car, driven by O. H. Rasmussen, Oshkosh, was going south on N. Lawe street. Both Mrs. Haack and her son were cut and bruised. They were taken to the hospital by C. J. Quinn, Appleton.

Our Gardens

How To Keep Cut Flowers

To many of us "the sweetest flower that blows" will always be the rose. Styles change—even in roses. But the rose, whatever its form and color, will always be dear to American hearts, and it is because of this sentiment that rose growing has developed into such a tremendous industry in this country.

Chicago is conceded to be the center and capital of the cut flower industry of America. When we say Chicago, we mean, of course, the Chicago area—a radius of fifty miles or so from the loop—which sends its cut flowers to the revelers at the Mardi Gras, to the towns and cities of the Rockies, up to the northern borders and out to the great social functions of the east. The trade of this section in cut flowers alone (not including blossoming potted plants) is conservatively estimated at over $16,000,000 annually.

Many acres of glass-roofed buildings are devoted to this business; one establishment alone covering ten acres, 36 miles of steam pipe, with boilers of 3,600 horsepower capacity using 10,000 tons of coal a season. This plant uses 6,000 tons of fertilizer and pays $2,500 for spraying materials. Picture, if you can, a million blossoms on hundreds of thousands of plants under this huge glass roof!

Whatever your present favorite, President Hoover, Talisman, or one of the long list now scratched off the social register of roses but still loved by many of us, you do want to know how best to preserve them when you are lucky enough to have a single bud, a tiny cluster, or an armful of the beauties in your possession.

Out of his years of experience on the care of cut flowers and especially the care of cut roses, the head of one of these rose-growing institutions gives us this advice by which we may profit when fresh greenhouse roses come to us.

Really fresh roses are in the bud stage. They should be put immediately into fresh water deep enough to come well up on their stems.

Water must be absorbed by the rose stems in order to reach the blossoms. The cut ends of the stems become clogged with bacterial growth and stop the intake of water. So the stems should be freshly cut, with a slanting cut, each day. Use a sharp knife, scissors compress the tissues and close the pores.

A few drops of formaldehyde in the water will help keep the stem tissues open. Roses should never be left in drafts, as this wilts them more quickly than lack of water. Put them in a cool place at night, plunged deeply into fresh water.

Of course, the dry air of most of our homes does its share in withering the petals. The outside ones may be carefully peeled off as they fade. With careful treatment of our cut flowers their endurance is surprisingly lengthened.

A well-stocked emergency shelf provides for unexpected guests.

Skill in Repairing Marks the G. R. & S. Motor Co.

A versatile and capable concern is the G. R. & S. Motor Co. The "G" in the firm name stands for George Greisch, who, in addition to being an auto mechanic of no mean ability, is a blacksmith trained in the old school, an art which many believe to be practically extinct. He has a real old-fashioned smithy, brought up-to-date, in the back of the garage and is always ready to tackle any job, no matter how small and trifling it may be.

The "R" stands for Ferdinand Radtke, an exponent of another of the old handicrafts now largely displaced by machinery. He is a real woodworker and can build anything from an elaborate radio cabinet to the tiniest bird house. His specialty is the repainting and straightening of auto wheels, whether of wood, wire or steel. A broken wooden spoke is replaced in the minimum of time and the wheel put back in place as good as new. Repairs of the wooden parts of auto bodies are right in his line.

And last, but by no means least, is the "S" which stands for Ed Sieg who acknowledges no peer in his ability to diagnose the troubles of internal combustion engines and prescribe the proper remedies. He knows just where every sort of body squeak originates and is applying the remedy before the client realizes that he has started work.

This combination of blacksmith, woodworker and auto mechanic enables the firm to render all-round service to the harassed driver. Because they do not sell cars they never have an axe to grind and are always whole-heartedly ready to tackle any job. A visit to their shop on E. Washington street is just as likely to reveal them working on the repairs of some school girl's bicycle as to be occupied with the inner workings of a Cadillac or a six ton truck.

Joseph Freund, Grand Chute farmer convicted of robbery, larceny, and concealing stolen property, will be taken to Waupun Saturday morning to begin his sentence of from one to three years. Freund was tried in municipal court in January, and found guilty by a jury that deliberated five and one-half hours. The trial attracted one of the largest crowds that ever witnessed a trial in the county. Freund was arrested upon complaint of Emil Smith, a neighbor, who charged that he stole a calf and slaughtered it. Freund denied the charge, asserting that the carcass of a calf found upon his premises was that of one of his own calves. A petition for parole was denied by Judge Berg.

L. E. Vandenberg was awarded $2,241 from the Appleton Lumber and Fuel company by a jury in municipal court Wednesday night. The jury deliberated five and one-half hours. Vandenberg sued for $10,000 damages, claiming to have been evicted from a building owned by the company, and on which he claimed he had an oral lease. The lease was alleged to have been made with August Knueppel, then president of the company, prior to his death. Damages were asked by the plaintiff for expenses incurred by moving, loss of business and good will. The jury allowed $1,441 for expenses of moving and $800 for loss of business and good will. Vandenberg operated a concrete block business. The company's counter claim for $92 for work on the building claimed necessary as a result of Vandenberg's removal, was denied by the jury.

A scrap book of activities of the Girls' Athletic association of Appleton high school was planned at a recent meeting of the association. Lillian Oertel and Mae Zerbel will have charge of the book, which will contain newspaper clippings, pictures, and records of the organization.

Miss Eunice Campshure, a member of Miss Edna Bentson's junior typing class, made the highest record in a 15-minute test recently. She wrote 34.2 words per minute. Tests will be held every two weeks to improve accuracy and efficiency of the students.

The Civic council will meet at the Y.M.C.A. Monday evening to receive reports on projects the council is interested in. Plans for the annual meeting and election of officers to be held in April will be discussed.

Mrs. Dorothy Gray Miller was granted a divorce from her husband, Earl F. Miller, by Judge Theodore Berg in municipal court Thursday. Mr. Miller filed suit for divorce from his wife October 11, 1930. Mrs. Miller later filed a counter suit. The case went to trial on January 7 and continued until January 12 when the defendant's attorney became ill. Thursday Mr. Miller filed a notice that he would withdraw his suit for divorce and would make no objection to Mrs. Miller's request for a decree. Mrs. Miller accepted a settlement of the home at 903 E. Alton St., and $1,000. The household goods were divided.

McKinley Building Transformed From Run-Down Plant to Modern School

Everyone who was familiar with the old Fourth Ward school building as it was about ten years ago and is still familiar with the same school, now called the McKinley school, will agree with the statement that nothing short of a miracle has been accomplished by the board of education in making a modern school out of a very old, decrepit and worn-out plant. In the 1922 survey of the city schools the Fourth Ward building received one of the lowest ratings of any school in the city.

When the survey was made the McKinley building was poorly lighted, poorly ventilated, the basement was dark and dirty and the conditions from a standpoint of sanitation were about the poorest of any school. The boys and girls' toilets were not anywhere near up to standard.

Many big tasks had to be performed on this building in the Fourth Ward and so when the union system was inaugurated the work was begun and has been carried on almost constantly each summer since until now the building is a model for cleanliness, well lighted classrooms, and adequate and satisfactory ventilation. Probably some of the most significant changes have been wrought in the McKinley school basement where the old dirt and wood floors of days not so long gone by have all been replaced by concrete. These concrete floors have been beautifully finished off with a smooth gray paint. They are kept spick and span at all times—clean enough to serve as a table for a meal.

The old dusty coal bin has been converted into a fine shower bath room for boys. Here one sees some of the finest shower equipment to be found in any school building in Appleton. The same is true of the new shower room for the girls in the McKinley building. The girls' shower room and girls' toilets are modern in every respect and are splendid examples of the up-to-date uses an old building can be put to. The shower room is light and spacious and is equipped with a sound-proof ceiling.

The McKinley building is one of the four in which new heating plants have been installed since the union system came into being. Here, as in the other three buildings, thousands of dollars had to be spent to install a modern heating plant which would take care of the needs of the building for many years to come.

Sanding of the floors and redecoration of class rooms has been carried on extensively throughout the McKinley building. Some of the classrooms had to be altered considerably. A very attractive school library has been installed and also a rest room for teachers. The new heating plant necessitated the building of a new chimney.

Numerous exterior improvements also have been made at McKinley. It was necessary to build a new sidewalk along the west side of the building and also to have some new sewers put in. Extensive repairs were made to the roof. There is no other school building in the city where such an extensive program of repairs, alterations and improvements has been successfully carried out as at McKinley. Starting in on what looked like rather a hopeless task the board of education has made of this Fourth Ward building one of the most pleasing and convenient schools, as well as one of the most sanitary in the city. It cost large sums of money to undertake a program of this kind and it meant some increase in tax levy and school budget. But how many people who send their children to the public school in the Fourth ward are not pleased that they can point with pride to their school instead of being half afraid to let their children go because of the run-down, unsafe, and insanitary condition of the building? Is it not worth an increased tax levy for a period of a few years?

And now we come to the old Third district which contains the Jefferson school in the Third Ward and the Washington school in the Fifth ward. It is in these two buildings that the greatest amount of work remains to be done to bring Appleton's public schools as close to 100 per cent as possible to standards set by the survey of some years ago. At the Washington school a considerable amount of work has been done. The woodwork on the outside of the building has been painted, new treads have been placed on the staircases and some of the floors in classrooms and corridors have been sanded. The classrooms have been brightened up by coats of light colored paint and the roof of the building has been extensively repaired.

Over at the Jefferson school some of the classrooms have been redecorated and a few minor repairs have been made. This school, more than any other in the city, is now in need of repairs, improvements and alterations to bring it up to the same level of quality as most of the other buildings. A new heating and ventilating system is needed and the basement must soon be modernized and painted. The weak points in this building are the next object of attack by the board of education and there is every reason to believe that within two or three years it will be classed among the top notchers in Appleton's school buildings. It takes time to carry on so vast an improvement program as faced the first union system school board. More important than that it takes money. Many people have wondered why it has been taking an increased amount every now and then. If they could see for themselves the great changes for the better which have been effected in school buildings throughout the city they not doubtless would wonder why it has not taken a great deal more money than it has. Four new heating plants in a six-year period is in itself an item which runs well up toward six figures.

Safeguards, new ideas in sanitation, pleasanter classrooms, a more cheerful environment all these things have been taken into consideration in improving Appleton's schools. It has been costly—yes, but it has been worth much more than the cost.

In our final article of this school series we shall discuss the economies practiced by the school board in the operation of Appleton's schools and particularly the work of Mr. William J. Egert, member of the board, who takes active charge of the mechanical operation of all the public school buildings of the city.

(Editor's Note:—Miss Ida Gleason is the teacher in the school for the deaf at the Lincoln building instead of Miss Anna Sullivan, as stated in last Tuesday's Review.)

It's the Truth—Lawrence Coeds May Smoke

If you should go into a restaurant within the next few days, especially if it's one near the Lawrence campus, do not be surprised if you notice an unusually large number of women smoking.

The lid is off—and Lawrence college co-eds may now puff away at their Old Golds, Luckies and other brands just as much as they are a mind to, providing, of course, that the smoking is done elsewhere than on the campus and in college buildings. Heretofore the luckless co-ed who was caught in the act of enjoying a cigarette was subjected to rather strict disciplinary measures—only a few years ago these measures were very strict indeed. It didn't make any difference, either, where the young lady smoked—if she was caught it was just too bad.

Now the board of trustees has said, "Go ahead, girls, and smoke all you want to, but please don't do it in our yard."

of the church, owned by Miss Margaret McCormick. The property was acquired for a parsonage, though the church council has not definitely decided whether the old home will be remodeled or torn down to make way for a new structure. The church will not take actual possession of the property until July.

Outagamie county Christmas seal drive netted the largest amount this last season that has ever been raised by this means in the county. The total receipts were $1,886, about $169 more than last year, when a high mark had been established. The quota for the county was $2,000, the same as has been set in previous years, though it has never been reached. Part of the money raised in the last drive will be used to defray expenses of a clinic for high school and Vocational school students. Mrs. L. J. Marshall, chairman of the health department of the Woman's club, and Mrs. Paul Hackbert, vice chairman, had charge of the seal sale.

Valley Boxers Cop Four Matches from Invaders

A capacity crowd saw one of the best boxing cards ever staged in this vicinity when Jabber Jung's Chicago boxers went up against boys from the Fox River valley and only gained one decision in six, losing four and forfeiting the fifth when the judges called for a fourth round after Clarence Miller had fought the third round with a broken thumb.

Don Delair of Green Bay took the first decision from Walter Blaino. Delair is a comer and is going to be good at close range work. The second bout went to Ted Barry of Chicago after three exciting rounds with Norbert LeFebre of Green Bay. Both boys were green but exceedingly willing.

In the 156 pound class Claude Sackett of New London carried off the decision over Bob Groshek after four rounds of as earnest and sincere mixing-it as the most rabid fans could ask. Both boys were in there giving all they had and taking all the other fellow had to hand out, but Sackett, more stockily built, was better able to absorb punishment and was in better shape at the finish of a hammer and tongs affair.

Zep Taurig of Manitowoc and Tony Pernice of Chicago staged what was undoubtedly the best bout of the evening. It was a hair raiser from start to finish and the mix-ups were fast and furious with a knockout seeming inevitable. However, several knock-downs, impartially distributed, were the best the boys could achieve. The decision went to Taurig and was well earned. He made an excellent showing and with proper handling will go a long way.

Herbie Thompson of New London was lucky to get the decision over Clarence Miller. The fight was the sort of hammer and tongs affair the fans have learned to expect when Herbie is in the ring, but Miller had decided the best of it until he broke his thumb early in the third round. Thompson quickly sensed the change in his opponent's fighting and bored in winning the round by such a wide margin that the judges called for a fourth round. However, when Miller's manager learned that the boy had fought the entire last round with a broken thumb, he forfeited the fight to Thompson.

Hans Ahl of Oshkosh and Tony Delisio of Chicago furnished the windup. Delisio put up just the kind of a scrap that Ahl likes. He was constantly boring in and taking all that Ahl could give him. Ahl received the decision at the end of the third round, but his margin was by no means great.

The Viking basketballers returned from a two game invasion of Illinois where they broke even in their contests last weekend. The first game on the trip found the Blue and White on the small end of the score against Monmouth. The final showed the Vikes with 22 points against Monmouth's 30. In this game Willy Haase made four baskets and three free throws to lead the local scorers. The second game was with Knox at Galesburg, Illinois. Lawrence made 21 to Knox's 20 points. Benny Rafter, former Appleton high school star, sunk a free throw in the final minutes of the game to clinch the victory.
