"I would like to call your particular attention to Item (w) on page 4, the gift of $500 from Miss Ada N. Martin in memory of her late sister, Miss Georgia Martin, to be added to the Julius E. Olson Scholarship Loan Fund.

"Georgia Martin served on our civil service staff as assistant registrar from 1907 to 1952. For more than forty-five years, she had helped guide and advise thousands of students in a friendly, understanding, motherly fashion.

"When she left her very vital work in 1952, friends and colleagues, to show their admiration for her devotion to students, gathered a purse which they presented to her.

"When she died last year, that purse was still intact. Now, her sister offers it to the University, something I know would have deeply pleased Georgia Martin.

"I recommend that we accept this gift, which will perpetuate the memory of a sincere and generous woman by helping students, her chief concern during her lifetime. By adding it to the Olson

PRESENTATION OF JOHN REICHERT RIESS PORTRAIT TO THE UNIVERSITY OF WISCONSIN
BY GOVERNOR WALTER J. KOHLER AT AN INFORMAL MEETING OF THE REGENTS OF THE UNIVERSITY OF WISCONSIN ON MARCH 5, 1954

PRESENT: Governor Kohler; Regents Werner, Arveson, Jones, Laird, Renk and Steiger.

The administrative officers of the University and the press were also present.

President Werner introduced His Excellency, Walter J. Kohler, Governor of the State of Wisconsin.

The portrait was unveiled, and Governor Kohler stated that it was a privilege to present this portrait of John Reichert Riess to the University of Wisconsin. He said that Mr. Riess was a relative of his and that Mr. Riess' daughter, the late Mrs. Minnie Riess Detling, was his cousin once removed. Governor Kohler said that Mrs. Detling, who was a graduate of the University of Wisconsin, was extremely proud of the University and had always shown a keen interest in the University. He recalled that John Reichert Riess had been a Regent of the University of Wisconsin from 1896 to 1902. He stated that Mrs. Detling would have been pleased to have this portrait of her father given to the University. Governor Kohler stated it gave him great pleasure to present this portrait of John Reichert Riess to the University of Wisconsin.

President Werner read the following statement in accepting the portrait of John Reichert Riess:

"Governor Kohler, it gives me great pleasure to accept, on behalf of the Regents, this portrait of one of our honored predecessors, John R. Riess, who served the University faithfully and well from 1896 to 1902.

"A long-time resident of Sheboygan and a distinguished member of the Wisconsin Bar, Mr. Riess was active in community and state affairs. It was the University's good fortune to have him as a Regent during the tenure of President C. K. Adams, a period of great physical and cultural expansion on this campus. During his period of service the Graduate School was established, as well as a School of History under Professor Frederick Jackson Turner. In 1897, the School of Education was set up, followed two years later by the appointment of a special inspector of high schools to help in integrating the University with the high schools of the state. The School of Commerce followed in 1900, a significant move because it involved a new emphasis: the introduction of the vocational concept into the activities of the college of liberal arts.

"The period of Regent Riess's service was in many ways like the period in which we serve today. Crowded conditions had forced new building:

the south wing of Bascom Hall was added, as well as the Engineering Building and the Library Building of the State Historical Society, which was to serve the University for more than fifty years.

"We are especially grateful for this portrait, for it represents not only a great Regent of the University, but a family whose understanding and support of the important work of this institution have become a tradition.

"This portrait is another lasting link between a great Wisconsin family and the University. While we are happy to have this portrait as a memorial to a man who served the University with distinction, it is especially appropriate as a remembrance to his daughter, Minnielein Riess Detling, who has provided the University with one of the largest bequests it has received in its entire history.

"On behalf of this Board, I extend to you our sincere thanks."

RESUME OF REPORT ON WORK OF THE COLLEGE OF AGRICULTURE BY DEAN R. K. FROKER AT THE INFORMAL MEETING OF THE REGENTS OF THE UNIVERSITY OF WISCONSIN AT 9:30 A.M., MARCH 6, 1954, IN THE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNIVERSITY

Dean Froker stated that he would like to report briefly on some of the recent developments and changes in the programs of the College of Agriculture and some of the problems that must be considered in planning for the future. A number of charts and maps were used to illustrate high points of his report.

A chart was displayed showing the distribution of the College of Agriculture budget between the functions of instruction, research and extension.

Dean Froker explained a chart indicating the principal features of the College of Agriculture which distinguish it from other colleges of agriculture. These features are:

- (1) The joint appointment of staff members for work in both instruction and research and, to some extent, in extension work;
- (2) The existence of departments involving both basic and applied work, as is the case of bacteriology, for example;
- (3) The inclusion of extension specialists in the departments of the college.

A chart was explained covering resident instruction. This chart showed a student enrollment of 606 students for the agricultural long course, 562 for home economics, 542 graduate students majoring in agriculture and home economics, and 162 students in the farm short course. This chart showed that responsibility for farm and home week, field days, and special conferences are shared by the entire staff of the College. A chart on Experiment Stations showed that the financial support was 48% from State funds, 12% from federal funds, 10% from gifts and grants, and 30% from farm sales. Projects undertaken by the Experiment Stations cut across departmental and college lines; include several regional projects; include joint projects with the United States Department of Agriculture; and include a few projects which are jointly undertaken with other departments of the state government, such as the Wisconsin Conservation Department.

Dean Froker displayed a copy of "What's New in Farm Science" which is a bulletin issued twice a year by the College of Agriculture and stated that copies were available for the Regents.

Dean Froker explained a chart and maps showing how the College of Agriculture, through its branch stations and farms, is serving the entire state. A map showed the location of the branch stations and the various soil types in Wisconsin. Dean Froker mentioned that the Coddington Experiment Station probably should be sold. He explained the types of work being conducted at the various branch stations and also at the Emmons Blaine Farm and the Foundation Seed Potato Station in Oneida County.

Dean Froker explained a map showing the different growing seasons (number of frost-free days) in Wisconsin over a forty year average; and a map showing the relative maturity zones for hybrid corn in Wisconsin.

Pictures of the various branch experiment stations were passed around for examination by the Regents.

Dean Froker explained a chart on the cooperative extension service which involves statewide cooperative services between the county, state and federal government. It includes providing information on agricultural production and marketing, on home and farm programs, and 4-H Club work. There are about 43,000 members and 7,300 volunteer adult leaders in the 4-H Club program in Wisconsin. A chart showed the source of cooperative extension funds in Wisconsin as being 40% from the counties, 24% from the state, and 36% from the federal government.

Dean Froker explained a chart listing the recent developments and changes in the College of Agriculture. There have been many major changes in staff resulting from retirement and death of a number of the outstanding members of the faculty, and by the appointment of new staff members. There have been organizational changes, such as the change in home economics from a department to a school under the College of Agriculture. The various areas in the program of the College of Agriculture which have been strengthened include the branch stations, which have been developed to be a more vital part in the research and demonstration programs of the College; improvements in disease control work, relating to both animals and plants; insect control work; weed control work; horticultural work; field and forage crop programs; livestock feeding, breeding, housing and management; and processing and marketing work.

Dean Froker reported that some of the principal problems ahead of the College of Agriculture include:

- (1) Special attention to dairying, including production, processing and marketing;
- (2) Special attention to the meat animal program;
- (3) Strengthening work in forestry;
- (4) Improving the training of extension workers; and
- (5) Relocation of the University Hill Farms.

Dean Froker hoped that Dean Zuill would be invited to report to the Regents on the work of the School of Home Economics.

Dean Froker discussed briefly the work in production and marketing and explained the work which is being done in cooperation with cheese plants in the state in connection with standardization of cheeses, mechanization of cheese making, including changes in types of cheeses being made. He reported on a new soft-ripened, cheddar type cheese which has been developed by D. M. Irvine and W. V. Price of the College of Agriculture, and distributed samples of this cheese to the Regents. He reported that one of the principal characteristics of this new type of cheese was that it can be made largely by a mechanized procedure.

In replies to questions, Dean Froker reported that in the field of packaging and marketing of milk they were working on the concentration of full milk to reduce its bulk for marketing, which is a large cost factor in the final price to the consumer; and that they also were working with the canners and other food processors in the state.

Copies of a soil map of the State of Wisconsin were distributed to the Regents.

Dean Froker left the meeting at 10 A.M.
