PREXY WORKS TO MAKE FOUNDERS' DAY SUCCESSFUL

Stock Pavilion to Be Used For Observance; Date Not Fixed

That the university stock pavilion will be used for the local convocation to be held to commemorate Founder's day, was definitely announced last night by President Birge who is bending all his effort to make this seventy fifth anniversary of the founding of the university the most widely observed in the history of the institution.

Date is Indefinite

The exact date and the speakers for the convocation have not as yet been definitely determined, but the cooperation committee recently appointed by the Board of Regents is taking the matter under advisement and the details will be announced in a few days.

At the same time that the local meetings are being held in honor of Founder's Day, meetings, banquets and celebrations will be held all over the world, wherever a group of Wisconsin graduates has gone.

To Broadcast Meet

Arrangements are also being pushed to broadcast the meeting to be held at the stock pavilion, by radio, thus increasing the audience by thousands, according to committee men.

Student leaders when approached on the Founder's Day matter, declared that they felt the entire university would respond to the idea and would meet to celebrate the anniversary.

An informal stunt was given by the new initiates later in the evening.

50 FRESHMEN WILL GET SCHOLARSHIPS

Application Blanks May Be Obtained at Registrar's
Office Monday

Application blanks for the scholarships which are to be granted to 50 freshmen may be obtained at the Registrar's office tomorrow, according to an announcement made by Prof. Julius E. Olson, chairman of the committee on loans and undergraduate scholarships, yesterday.

"Applicants must be freshmen students, either men or women, who are registered as residents of Wisconsin; who have shown worth and ability, and who are in need of financial assistance," Professor Olson said yesterday.

"Students who are receiving a monthly bonus from the state are not eligible. Ability will be judged principally by the first semester's work."

"The application blanks will give definite information concerning the necessary steps to be taken. The blanks are to be filled out and returned to the Registrar's office during examination week," Professor Olson said.

"The announcement concerning the successful candidates will not be made until after the semester grades are available, which will probably be early in March."

These scholarships were established by the Board of Regents in 1913. They are not available for students in the Law school, the Medical school, the Graduate school or upper classmen in other col-

PENALTIES AWAIT NO-CUT VIOLATORS

The no-cut rule will be in effect at the beginning of the second semester as it has been before and after holidays.

Any absences contracted by a student which are not excused by the dean of his college automatically bar him from taking a final examination in that study. Students are urged to write down carefully the meeting places of their quiz sections and lectures and carry the card with them until thoroughly familiar with the new schedule. Any changes made in schedules after February 9, must receive sanction from the dean before they become effective.

Flipped Coin Calls Fire Department to S. A. E. Chimney Fire

George Lonergan '24, and Fred Mooney '24, were studying in their room at the Alpha Chi Sigma house at 621 N. Lake street Saturday morning when they saw smoke and flames issuing from the Sigma Alpha Epsilon house nearby.

Undecided whether they should themselves dash to the rescue, or call the fire department, they flipped a coin. Heads was the department, and heads turned up. The alarm was called in and the S. A. E.'s were notified that their chimney was burning.

The fire occurred just as the morning classes were over. The blaze was quickly extinguished by the department with only slight damage to the roof.

NEW POLICIES OF LIT PLANNED TO CREATE INTEREST

Will Share Profits With Union Board; Make New Appointments

The first new practice to be announced by Carl R. Hansen '25, newly appointed business manager of the Wisconsin Literary Magazine, is that 25 per cent of all profits will be turned over to the Union Memorial fund. This was decided at a meeting of the business and sales staff held yesterday afternoon.

Profs Ask Changes

Changes in policy of the magazine to afford a greater interest were advocated by Prof. Edward H. Gardner and Prof. Warren Taylor, both of the English department. Prof. Gardner stated that a large number of students have literary ways, but do not know it. He promised the staff of the Lit the cooperation of the English department in developing literary ways among the undergraduates. The solution offered by Professor Taylor was for a larger editorial staff, more extensive advertising campaigns and the use of more popular literary material.

Following the completion of a comprehensive sales plan, Vernon Beardsley '25, sales manager, announced the appointment of Katherine Kennedy '24, as manager of hill sales, Wilber Wittenberg '24, as assistant circulation manager and George Vaughan '24, as manager of sales promotion.

Butler Appoints Two

Several appointments have been made by Kenneth Butler '25, publicity director, including the appointment of Richard Yeo '27, for art publicity and Jack Bailey '27, for window displays.

Under Albert Deacon '26, distribution director, are seven "come-back" captains, including Doris Gormley '24, Isabel Leabel '26, Clara Eberly '26, Florence Killeen '26, Josephine Keech '24, Dorothy Strauss '26 and Janet M. Cumming '24. Nella Burgess '24, has been appointed bursar.

POTTER WILL PRESENT PEACE PLAN FEATURES

Prof. P. B. Potter will present the cardinal features of the $100,000 peace plan at 7 o'clock this evening at the Wesley Foundation.

Following this presentation there will be an open discussion on the merits of the plan which has met with a great deal of praise and also with a great deal of severe criticism since its publication.

MUSICAL SORORITY ENTERTAINS GUESTS

Sigma Alpha Iota, professional musical sorority, will entertain several guests at a dinner Monday evening at the College club on Gilman street.

SYSTEM OF GRADE POINTS EXPLAINED

L. and S. Students Must Have 60 Each Two Years to Graduate

Grade point regulations in the College of Letters and Science require 60 credits and the corresponding number of grade points by the end of the sophomore year.

As 120 credits are required for graduation, 60 grade points must be secured the first two years, and the remaining 60 the last two years. Any excess of credits required to secure the 60 grade points necessary for the first half will not count towards graduation.

Twenty-five grade points and at least 25 credits are required for promotion to sophomore standing, 58 credits and 58 grade points are required for promotion to junior standing and 88 grade points and 88 credits must be made for the grade of senior.

LIGHTS TO SHINE ON MENDOTA RINK

Work will be begun this week to get the ice on Lake Mendota in condition for student skaters. A space will be set off, where the cracks will be filled in, and the ice kept free from snow.

"Electric lights will be put up soon and everything will be done to make the ice the best possible," George Martin, director of winter sports, said.

The Winter Sports club hopes to have an orchestra on the rink to furnish music for the skaters on Friday and Saturday nights, but no definite arrangements have been made up to this time.

NO NEW TOBOGGAN SLIDE THIS YEAR, SAYS GOODNIGHT

Rumors Say Coaster Is to Be Built; Jones Reticent;
Dean Denies

Despite rumors of a new concrete toboggan slide to be built this winter, T. E. Jones, athletic director, is reticent in making statements regarding the proposed construction of the slide.

Dean Goodnight said yesterday that the present slide will have to serve this year. He further added that no definite plans have been developed concerning the plan, as action this year is prevented by present weather conditions.

Makes Initial Cut

In place of the wooden slide torn down because it had become "too rotten for safety", the athletic department has made one cut in the earth at the same location on Observatory hill.

A guard is stationed at the top of the slide from 7 o'clock in the morning to 10 o'clock at night on week days and from 10 o'clock in the morning to 10 o'clock at night on Saturdays and Sundays, according to George Martin, grad, director of winter sports.

Perfect Ski Jump

The ski jump is nearing perfection under the care of the members of the Ski club. The wooden take-off at the top of Muir knoll has been put in fine condition. The men are now busy filling in hollows in the slope.

Snow, hauled to the place by the city's new snow-loader, was used to level the track between the drive and the lake, according to Martin.

DEAN RUSSELL TALKS ON ALASKAN TRAVELS

Thrills and new experiences of every kind greet the traveler in Alaska, according to Dean H. L. Russell, College of Agriculture. Alaskan conditions, was the subject of a very interesting illustrated talk by Dean Russell Saturday night before members of the "Get-a-Way" club at the Madison club.

INDUSTRIAL CLUB SUSPENDS SUPPERS

Owing to the press of pre-exam work, the Industrial supper will not take place. All activities of the Industrial club have been suspended until after the beginning of the second semester.

FACULTY DIFFERS ON PEACE PLAN

Profs. Hall and Henmon Take Sides on Bok Peace
Proposal

The Bok Prize Peace Plan is both supported and opposed by members of the faculty.

When asked what he thought of the Bok plan yesterday, Prof. Arnold B. Hall of the political science department said that it was a step in the right direction but that it did not go far enough. He said he was satisfied with this slow program.

"There is no inspiration in the Bok plan of solution," Prof. Vivian A. C. Henmon, director of the school of education, said. "In as much as it favors the League of Nations, I am opposed to the proposal."

Dr. A. B. Hall said that under the Bok plan the United States assumed none of the liabilities of the league and that we would not become involved in entangling affairs through the operation of the Bok plan. That only those persons who supported the doctrine of strict isolation would object to the plan, was the opinion he expressed.

Director Henmon said that certain natural human instincts would have to be killed off before we could expect world peace. He urged cooperation of all the forces of education and social institutions to try and prevent war.

CLOSE CHECK IS KEPT ON FUNDS

Leon Herreid '25 Reveals Financial Plan For Junior Prom

Three features of the financial policy for the 1925 prom as revealed yesterday by Leon Herreid '25, chairman of the finance committee, indicate the efforts of the prom chairman and his helpers to make this year's junior ball the most gorgeous of history without any increase in expenditure of money.

First, the plan is to make a profit on prom; second, an elaborate system of budgeting and book-keeping makes it impossible for any funds to be appropriated for insignificant items; third, the complete record of expenditures is kept in Dean Goodnight's office and is open to investigation by students or other interested persons.

Estimates were also made on the number of prom-goers and on the probable income from all sources of revenue. From these figures the price of tickets is being determined and will be announced in a few days.

HERRIOT TELLS OF EXAMS IN ENGLAND

Examinations in England are different from those in American universities, according to Max Herriot, who studied at Oxford on a Rhodes scholarship. He says the examinations are only scheduled for every two years. All students can choose the questions they intend to answer in the examination. This is a very good idea for it gives the students a wider range of questions to pick from, and a chance to make better grades.

A CORRECTION
The headline of yesterday's Cardinal story reviewing the recital given by Louise Lockwood, Signe Holst and Leland A. Coon in Music hall last Thursday evening incorrectly stated the musicians to be students. They are members of the Music school faculty.

All reporters on the Cardinal must turn in their string books by Monday to Frances Warren. Those who have already handed in their books may get them again Monday.

COLLEGIANS' RECORDS TO BE RELEASED HERE

Records made by Al Thompson's Collegians will be released about February 1, according to a notice issued by the University Music shop which sponsored the recording.

No other university orchestra, except the Pennsylvanias, have produced phonograph records before. The trial recordings were made at the Gennet laboratories of Richmond, Indiana during Christmas vacation under the direction of Karl W. Emanuel '25 and Clifford Benson '25 while the eight-piece orchestra was on a tour playing in several large cities.

The pieces which will soon be offered to the public are "Long Ago" a foxtrot, and "You'd Better Keep Babying Baby". Test records have already been received at the Music shop.

SNOW FORCES STUDENT AUTOS INTO GARAGES

Snowdrifts are now more common than autos in the parking place back of Bascom hall. Barely a dozen cars come every day to perch on the snow. Where last fall 200 Fords and other cars once stood in orderly rows, a few closed automobiles now huddle shivering together. Most of the vanished throng of cars were driven home at Thanksgiving and at Christmas when a sinking mercury foreshadowed frozen radiators. The remainder have been put in public garages.

Dr. R. T. Ely of the economics department spoke on "Experience as a Visitor in Germany and as a Teacher in the United States" at the testimonial dinner of the Ely club held at 6:15 o'clock last night in the University club. George S. Wehrwein, research associate in land economics, and Selig Perlman, associate professor, also spoke.

Michigan College Students Demand Removal of Laird

Students of Albion college yesterday demanded the removal of President John W. Laird at a stormy meeting in the college chapel. He was hissed and booted by 550 students who accused him of "gross incompetency."

Robert Stewart '23, is business manager of Albion college. He assumed the position last fall following graduation from Wisconsin.

The basis of the trouble was cross charges about the expulsion of a girl from school. President Laird claimed she was expelled because of a wild party. The students claimed she was expelled because she lodged charges against the president with Bishop Theodore Henderson of the Michigan area church.

All 37 Students Will Work For Two Months in Small Libraries

School will be suspended in the Library school during February and March in order that the 37 students enrolled may go out into 28 Badger communities and practice the theories they have learned in the class rooms.

Besides in the libraries throughout the state students will work in the Wisconsin Free Library commission for the extension circuit, book selection department legislative library or traveling library.

Although removed from the university campus, the Library school conducts its work on the semester basis as do the other colleges. The students are busy now preparing for the examinations which are held there for one week beginning Jan. 21.

Only 10 of the 31 enrolled are from Wisconsin. Michigan and Iowa rank second. Kwo-Chuin Liu from Nanking, China, enrolled as a graduate student in L and S, is the only man enrolled this year.

Ignace Paderewski will give a special recital January 27, for the Illinois Children's Aid.

Students to Welcome Welcott Barstow at First Congregational

The Rev. Robbins Wilcott Barstow of Concord, N. H., who has recently accepted a call from the First Congregational church here, will conduct the services at his new church this morning. His sermon will be on the subject "Creative Christianity."

The new minister is only recently out of college, having graduated from Dartmouth in 1913. While at college he was a member of a mandolin club and the track team, winning his coveted "D" as a mile runner.

During the war he was a chaplain in the army. Since the war he has served as chaplain in the Concord Post of the American Legion. The Rev. Mr. Barstow has had considerable experience in Turkey. He will assume his regular duties here early in April.

Regional Student Convocation to Be Held

On February 9-10

A regional student conference on the subject of extra-curricular activities will be held February 9 and 10 at Riverside, Ill.

In these days when committee meetings succeed classes, and classes follow mass meetings, the life of the college student is so filled with activities that he sometimes rushes about from one form of motion to another without time to reflect upon the value of any of them, according to Wilma Anderson, of Rockford college, who is in charge of the registration.

This conference which will be held at the Social Workers' Country club is under the auspices of the National Student Forum. Two delegates from each college will be represented at the conference.

INSTRUCTOR WILL GO ON ORIENTAL TOUR

Miss Caryl Rice of the Physical Education department is leaving on January 23 for a trip around the world with a party of four. She has been granted a leave of absence for the next semester.

BADGERS TROUNCE FROSH TRACKMEN BY 72 TO 27 SCORE

Don Jones Gets New Pole Vault Record in Annex

By winning seven first places and enough second and third honors to total 72 points, Wisconsin's 1924 indoor track team easily defeated the freshmen in a cinder path meet at the gymnasium annex yesterday afternoon. The final score stood 72 points for the varsity and 27 for the freshmen.

Donald Jones smashed the annex record in the pole vault when he cleared the bar at 12 feet eight inches. The former record of 12 feet six inches was established by John Gold in 1913.

In the races the 40-yard dash, 880-yard run, and the two mile run were closely contested, while the best marks of the field events were in the pole vault and broad jump.

The freshmen surprised Wisconsin's speed stars when Schilke broke the tape ahead of Hilberts and Vallely in the 880-yard run. Schilke, under the tutelage of Coach George Berg, made the distance in two minutes, 62-5 seconds. Schwarze again defeated the varsity weight men, when he put the shot 43 feet 11 1/2 inches, while Kubly, running for the freshmen, won the two mile race by leading Perry, Finkle and Piper.

McGiveran was the high point getter for the first year men, with two first places, and Zilisch, by finishing first in the high hurdles and taking second place in the broad jump, was high scorer for the varsity.

Students May Yet See Passion Play

Actors in Madison

Whether Anton Lang will visit the university has not yet been decided, according to the Rev. E. J. Meyer, rector of the Holy Redeemer church. A week ago yesterday Father Meyer sent a letter to Lester Thompson of New York, who has charge of arranging the schedule of the famous player of the Christus of the Oberammergau passion play, asking Anton Lang to come to Madison.

"I expected the answer yesterday, but it did not come. I am very hopeful of the prospects of bringing the visitor to Madison," Father Meyer said yesterday.

To visit in the home, the player was the good fortune of the Madison rector in 1910. The economic depreciation of the mark has forced the players to come to America and sell their products. It is said that unique examples of wood carving are found in the collection which has been on exhibition in New York.

Iowa's Big Five Is Defeated By Michigan 23 to 18 OTHER SCORES

Purdue 37, Minnesota 27.
Chicago 29, Indiana 24.

(Special to The Cardinal)

ANN ARBOR, Mich. Jan. 19.—Outplaying the Hawkeyes from the tip-off, Michigan scored its second conference win tonight by the count of 23 to 18. The Wolverines exhibited vastly improved play, holding an edge over the Iowans in passing, shooting and team work throughout the game.

At half time the Wolverines led 16 to 10, while in the second period, Iowa braced but was never able to overtake the flying Wolverines.

Michigan's fast pair of guards, Kipke and Cherry, were largely responsible for the victory, presenting an inspired defense and registering a total of 15 counters.

VARSITY DEFEATS FROSH MAT MEN

Score Another Victory, 15 to 10, Over Yearlings Saturday

Varsity mat artists were again victorious over the frosh when they gathered 15 points against the first year men's 10 in Saturday afternoon's match.

The freshmen won their counts through the good work of Saunders who threw Goodman of the varsity; Tappert, who was given 2 points for his advantage over Pelegrin, varsity; and Truebell, who was awarded 3 points for successfully defying Gregor before Coach Hitchcock called their bout a draw because of a slight wrench of Gregor's right arm.

The best match of the meet was fought between Pelegrin, varsity and Tappert of the frosh. Six minutes passed before either man was able to throw the other off his feet. At the end of the sixth minute, however, Pelegrin finally succeeded in sending Tappert to the mat. But Tappert swung back on his opponent and obtained an advantageous hold from which Pelegrin could not extricate himself for over two minutes. The bout was called at the end of the twelve minute period; the decision going to Tappert.

BREWER CITY "Y"

DEFEATS VARSITY IN CLOSE BATTLE

Badger Gymnasts Lose By Failure to Score on Rings

Showing a well balanced team which scored points in every event and nosed out its opponents in three of the five events, the Milwaukee Y. M. C. A. gym team won from the varsity team by a score of 481 to 445 1/2.

The "Y" team stepped out in the lead early in the meet and annexed a considerable lead in the horizontal bars. Capt. Stevens came back strong in the side horse and almost evened the count, but the "Y" aggregation scored a slam in the rings and ran up an almost insurmountable lead.

Capt. Stevens and Schmidt tied in tumbling, with a score of 33 1/2 apiece. The Y retaliated by taking the parallel bars and clinching the meet, although Schmidt copped first for Wisconsin.

This is the second meet between the varsity and the Y. The latter won the first meet by a narrow margin after Koch had taken a fall from the rings and lost the event.

Wisconsin was strong in the side horse and tumbling, but was unable to accumulate enough points in these events to overcome the lead run up by Milwaukee in the other events.

Capt. Stevens and Schmidt started for Wisconsin, the latter winning three firsts and the former two. Schmidt was high point man for the meet and showed better form than any man on the mats.

Wisconsin had little difficulty in taking the fencing events, taking the foil 26 to 19, and the sabres 14 to 8. Reinhold and Thompson for Wisconsin defeated Olsen and Evans in quick succession.

Horizontal bars: Schmidt, (W), first; Zarse, (Y), second; Zarnow, (Y), third.

Side horse: Stevens, (W), first; Zarnow, (Y), second; Gruenwald, (Y), third; Kress, (W), third, tied.

SERIES TICKETS SELL DAY BEFORE NEXT GAME

The few remaining tickets for the basketball games to be played in Madison will be placed on sale as series tickets on Monday, Feb. 11, according to Paul F. Hunter, director of ticket sales.

"There are only a small number of tickets left in each series," said Mr. Hunter yesterday, "and to avoid that howling mob which scrambles for the handful of tickets on the night of the game, we are going to sell the rest of the series game."

"There is no doubt but that the Wisconsin team will play to a capacity house at every remaining game, and I think there is no doubt but that we will sell all the remaining tickets on Feb. 11."

The remaining tickets are: Series A, Illinois, Feb. 16, and Ohio, March 8; series B, Butler, Feb. 12, Chicago, March 15; series C, Northwestern, March 1, Iowa, March 11.

THE ROMANCE OF WISCONSIN

SEVENTY FIVE years ago, in a little room somewhere in what is now the business district of Madison, seventeen earnest Wisconsin youths met together to form the first university class in this state and to receive instruction from John W. Sterling, the University of Wisconsin's first professor—a man who for thirty five years gave his best in the way of service and devotion to a struggling and infant project, and who, through his intimate contacts with those early student pioneers, came to be known as "The Father of the University."

In this early group was Levi Booth of Madison, the first graduate of the university as well as the first man ever enrolled. Charles T. Wakeley of White-water was another member of that early class, and four years later these two received the first baccalaureates, conferred from this institution. One can see them now as they stood, solemnly taking their degrees, probably much in the same manner as that of today, but under what different conditions! Very probably the degrees were conferred by John H. Lathrop, the first chancellor of the university, who served ten years, and who although he belonged to the old school in regard to specialization in education, nevertheless, bore the brunt of those early days of trouble when state opposition to an institution of learning was rife on all sides, either because of jealous opposition by other state cities or because of disagreement in policy.

And then, under what different conditions those men went to school. We have to picture them going to classes in the little old red brick building downtown which was the Baptist church and which now forms the core of the present telephone building opposite the capitol square. Or we can imagine them studying in their rooms in our own North Hall, which still stands, but which in those days was the student dormitory. At that time the building was arranged in two sacks, each warmed by a hot air furnace. Some years later, however, the furnaces were removed and each student had his own stove for which he had to furnish his own wood. Behind the hall were piled cords and cords of wood, ready to be used by the students. In old North hall, which plays such a romantic part in the history of the school, the fourth floor had the public rooms, six in number, and the first three floors were occupied by twenty four suites, each consisting of a study and one or two bedrooms, the whole estimated to accommodate about sixty-five students. Later, it is told that ninety students were sheltered in this building. It continued in use as a men's dormitory for thirty years, until when in 1924 after the burning of Science hall, it had to be converted to class room use; and never since has the university been able to outstrip the demand for class room space sufficiently to provide dormitory room.

But here was the common center of student life—in old North hall. Here the men for years continued to live and study and held their discussions and played their pranks. Here was Wisconsin spirit born, and though those early students had little thought of the greatness to which the institution would some day arrive they dreamed their dreams, and as old "alums" tell, they had their school spirit even then.

Across from North hall, by 1855, South hall had been built, and here in the south end of the buildings, the members of the faculty and their families lived. And in the north end were harbored the embryo library, a laboratory on the first floor, a cabinet of natural history on the second, and a "philosophical chamber." And then on the first floor there was a large dining room or "mess hall" where the students received their board on the club plan.

This was the university in 1855. The hardships that those men had to endure in those days precluded any possibility that they had come for anything but an education. A sincere earnest lot they were, many of them almost penniless and desperately put to it to find means to stay here. Rooms in the dormitories were "$5.00 per term (including wood and janitor service)". In the "mess hall," "expenses of the table need not exceed 80 cents per week to each member of the association," according to the catalogue of the time. John Muir writes, that at the time he managed to live on an expenditure of fifty cents a week for food so that he could save the rest for books and apparatus. The total expense of a year at college was estimated at $118. And yet these men found it difficult to come to school. Many of them were farmer boys, and it took a great deal of sacrifice to spare the boy from the home work and send him to college. And these men realized the sacrifice, and desired all the more earnestly to get the most out of their schooling.

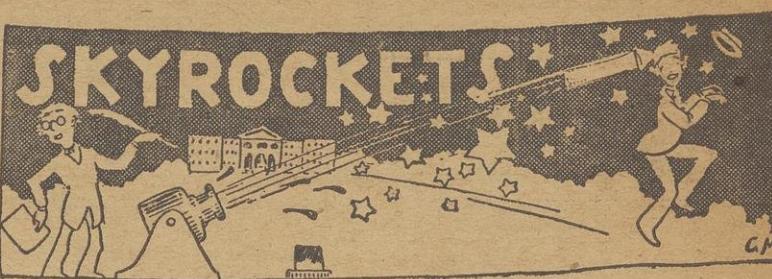

And yet they had their moments of diversion. Quoits had just begun to come in, foot racing, leaping, boxing, wrestling, swimming, even a little cricket, all were present, and even "boorish pranks" are reminiscently recalled by chuckling graduates of this period. And then they had their discussions in their dormitories and common rooms. Who knows? Perhaps they sat around Levi Booth's wood stove and wondered what the institution would grow into. Perhaps they argued as to whether it would exist. Some dreamer might have suggested that at some time there would be six or even seven buildings on the "College Hill" and there might be two hundred or more students. And a few years later, another group might have sat around that same stove in Bishop Fallows' room and discussed the approaching war, for instance, and how it would affect the institution and how many men would leave school to back Abe Lincoln and the Union. Or before that, we might imagine John Muir, poring over his books, but feeling all the time a greatness of some kind here at Wisconsin.

In fact, it was John Muir, who when he left Wisconsin said, as he described the day he departed, "From the top of the hill on the north side of Mendota I gained a last wistful lingering view of the beautiful university grounds where I had spent so many hungry, happy days. There with streaming eyes I bade my blessed Alma Mater farewell."

And this is the spirit which typifies the graduate from Wisconsin. In these words are found the secret for that romance which is in Wisconsin. Now there have followed on the heels of these early pioneers, a long line of graduates numbering into the thousands, each individual of whom feels for his institution a love and affection which he cannot adequately express. And this, after all, is the real romance. The story of the development of the university and the interesting events can be told and have been admirably told by Prof. J. F. A. Pyre in his book "Wisconsin" (which every student and alumnus should read), but in these other thousands and in their unexpressed thoughts is the real seat of the romance. There is the expression of the power and the worth of Wisconsin.

It was seventy five years ago, on February 5, 1848, that those men met in their first convocation. Now those thousands of alumni who have followed from year to year are planning to meet in a great Founder's Day celebration, all over the country, wherever Wisconsin has sent an alumnus.

And at Wisconsin, too, the present students will add another chapter to that romance and will commemorate its origin, by a tremendous massmeeting and convocation held next month in the Stock Pavilion. Then there were seventeen. Today there will be four thousand—all eager and anxious to do homage to those men and to express their present devotion to the greatest university in the land. Instead of a small room on the top floor of North hall with a group of eager students gathered around a wood stove, there will be a spacious auditorium with a vaulted roof and seats a half a block from the speaker, but there will be the students—just as eager and earnest, however, as those in that other group.

Business vs. Marriage is Problem of "Bread"

"Bread" by Charles G. Norris. E. P. Dutton, publishers.

J. P. R.

Like "Brass" and "Salt", "Bread" presents a problem. However it does not solve the problem to any degree of satisfaction. It is the problem of the struggle for existence and of the relation of woman to the home and to business.

For the practically penniless young girl Mr. Norris offers, in "Bread", two alternatives, marriage and business. And marriage for a girl means children, a constant wearing struggle to pay the grocer, the dentist, and the landlord; an eternal "battle for bread"; a warning against want, with want always painfully near. It means the denial of many longed for and needed things, and it means a complete financial dependence upon the husband with always the haunting thought present that in case of his death there would be no way of supporting the family.

The other alternative, business, means financial freedom, economic independence. It means being able to live, to dress decently, and to have a few pleasures without going into debt for it. But this financial independence makes a girl regard marriage with indifference. She hesitates before marrying a man who may be earning only a little more than she herself earns. She goes into marriage with misgivings and a critical attitude. She constantly compares the hardships of her married life with the freedom of her old; and there is always the thought present that if marriage does not work out there is a good job waiting for her somewhere. There is also in the married ex-business woman a disinclination to have children, for while it is conceivable to leave a husband, deserting a child is another matter.

Alice Sturgis, one of the two Sturgis sisters in "Bread" follows the first route. She marries, has children, and works and toils with no relief, or any sign of it. Mr. Norris tells us that there is joy in the comradeship of husband and wife in their depressing struggle. It is hard to see the joy of it, at least he failed to make it convincing.

Jeanette Sturgis, the older sister and the chief character of the book, goes into business. After a short happy business career she tries marriage. But marriage and four years of dependence and deprivation and the indifference to it all of her husband, make her take the easiest escape and return to her work. After twenty-five years we are asked whether or not she has done the wisest thing. Whether a woman should enter business and by gaining independence lose her respect for marriage, dependence, and children, or enter marriage without the easy escape of business open to her.

Incidentally we are also presented with the problem of women's wages, which are, it seems, from one half to one third the amount that men are paid for the same work; and we are brought face to face with the argument of the typical employer that a woman works only for "pin money", regardless of the fact that she may be supporting one or two other people on her income.

The book covers a tremendous space in time, twenty-five years or so, and it therefore necessarily omits much that happens within that time. It is Jeanette Sturgis who is most carefully developed. She appears as beautiful, clear-headed, and capable in everything. We follow her with interest through her experiences and reactions. But on the whole it is not the characterization but the story itself and the fact that it is typical of so many Jeanette Sturgis' all over the country that holds our attention. The "problem" is not obtrusive enough to be offensive. Read it, you will be interested, and you will wonder.

Amelita Galli-Curci will sing in London for the first time next season. The only appearance she will make in America that season will be in a few performances with the Metropolitan Opera company in January and February 1925.

MEIKLEJOHN'S "FREEDOM AND THE COLLEGE" TOUCHES STUDENT LIFE

FREEDOM AND THE COLLEGE, by Alexander Meiklejohn; The Century Company.

By E. H. S.

There is so much doing in the natural run of things at a university, especially during the examination, period that students really have little opportunity for reading. Too often they complain that they "haven't read a book for just ages."

Now and then, however, a book comes along which every student should feel bound to read either because it is highly interesting or because it pertains very closely to them and their actions and modes of living or both.

Mr. Meiklejohn's book belongs in the last named category. In it a student will find sympathy with his ideals, ideas, actions; in it he will find much to think about, much that will whet his imagination and rouse him on to finer achievements; in it he will find beautiful expression which sometimes mounts to the highest realms of poetry.

Perhaps you know that it is a series of essays—originally delivered in lectures during the administration of the author at Amherst. They deal with the world in its relationship to the college, with the college in its relationships to the world and with every part of the college in relationship to every other part.

No, we are wrong; every part of the college is not discussed, the mechanics are left out as being trivial in comparison to greater things, in comparison to theories and what a college does and should stand for.

"The Next Hundred Years," delivered at Amherst on the occasion of its celebration of its centennial, is typical. In it is discussed the future of the country and the future of the college as it depends upon the future of the country. It, in a way, predicts the fall of racial aristocracy and the rise of democracy within our colleges; that our people are coming to care for individual lives and that the college will set the standard high and lead people on in the achievement of their ideals; that people will learn to have faith and that the colleges will keep faith in the coming years.

And through it all, as through the other chapters, runs the theme of independence and of freedom. "The time of questioning has come, I think, for us. In all the arts of peace as well as those of war we must put on the garments of a man. We can no longer merely learn what others have to teach. We must be independent, must be masters of our spirit, must make a culture of our own."

That is the spirit with which Mr. Meiklejohn addresses his readers. And again: "There are two ways of facing life, two kinds of wisdom for mankind. One is the way of dread, the other the way of confidence. One rests on fear and cunning; the other on hope and faith. One is for man, the beast; the other for man the spirit." And all the while he is asking: Which shall it be, will you become man the beast or man the spirit?

It is nothing sensational; Mr. Meiklejohn is not in sympathy with sensationalism. It is quiet discussion, beautiful in logic beautiful in expression, beautiful in ideal.

"Are we a Christian people? Yes, but we do not act as Christians say that Christians should. We play at game in colleges. But do we really play; have we not made of games a something else which robs them of their meaning? We make machines to help us in our work. Are they not using us; are they not making us their instruments for ends which no one has conceived? If insight is to come from college teaching, this teaching must have unity and meaning in itself. But in our college teaching as we have it now there is no unity or meaning. The college courses must be reorganized, be made to suit its present purpose. Where shall we find a college that has enough freedom in its spirit to do the things that must be done?"

These are the questions, as is indicated in the introduction, which are discussed in the text. If you are interested in athletics and what student is not you will find the chapter one "What are College Games For?" immensely interesting and somewhat entertaining. "Is Our World Christian," if in one or two instances a bit illogical to our way of thinking, is a splendid discussion on the Pharisees of today.

But come, there can be no haggling. Every student ought at least to be interested in his attaining freedom, freedom in its every sense; ought to be interested in the movement which is rumbling through the country, from Amherst (though it may be dying there) to Reid, a movement for a liberal college, for excellence rather than shoddiness in education. And so he can ill afford not to know what this Scotchman has to say, this Scotchman who writes like his countrymen and who is full of youth's views and hopes and ideals.

Arthur H. G. Julier Produces First Novel

"The Man with the Face" by Arthur H. G. Julier, The Stratford Co. Publishers, Boston, Mass.

H. D. S.

First and most important of all to us is that Mr. Julier is a graduate of Wisconsin. Secondly he is a physician, and thirdly, he has written a "first novel". There is no doubt that Mr. Julier has a liking and a feeling for literature, perhaps not the highest kind of literature, but most assuredly for popular literature, and he has written an interesting mystery story.

The "Man with the Face" is the story of a man who starts out anew in this world, after he has been transformed, secretly, of course, from one of the ugliest specimens of humanity into a dashing, beautiful hero. The plot, although old, is good, and the manner of putting it over interesting.

While we were reading the first part of the book, we were rather exasperated; the book shows too many signs of an unexperienced writer, but suddenly, after Mr. Julier had fully introduced his characters and had acquired a pleasant and swift pace in the narration, we became pleased with the story. After we had finished the two hundred page mystery, having found the expected ending and the happy marriage, we were pleased with the book.

We fear that Mr. Julier took too much pains with the book. We have a sneaky feeling that he read a book on how to write, that in that book it said that dialogue and conversation was one of the main factors in any narrative that Mr. Julier took the suggestion too seriously and so made the entire story conversation, to much of it.

The few patches where he has used a little description are good, and really, description, realistic and clever description, is that the reading public of today is clamoring for. If we had known whether the hero ever looked out of a window, or the heroine had used red roses, red fragrant roses, instead of only roses, we would have been pleased much more than we were. As it is, the book could be dramatized in an instant. All a clever young writer would have to do would be put the several chapters of the book into scenes and acts, and he would have a presentable mystery play.

Another thing in which the author falls short is in the introduction. The first four chapters, which really have no connection with the story, could have been condensed as retrospective narration into a few paragraphs of one of the later chapters. However, we do not expect Mr. Julier to become a second Conan

The Stribling of "Fombombo Shows Mixture of Traits"

Fombombo—by T. S. Stribling. The Century Co., New York—$1.90.

When T. S. Stribling's "Fombombo" appeared in book form this fall, reviewers pounced upon it and hailed it as a worthwhile and vivid piece of adventure-writing—remembering, of course, that Stribling was the author of the highly successful and utterly different tale, "Birthright."

I read "Fombombo" during the summer as a serial in the magazine, "Adventure" and I mentally pigeon-holed the story as a rather ordinary melodrama, with a doubtful drawing of Venezuela for background. I am not convinced, upon second reading—with the writer's name more prominently displayed in my mind—that I was wrong.

The novel gains its title from a South American revolutionist of the type we associate with the bad men of all Latin-American pieces—cruel to men, and changeable, in regard to women; quite the traditional villain, in fact. His wife, beautiful and far from being a model of veracity, is the heroine, with a traveling salesman for a hero. The latter is the real character in the book; real, that is, both to the people around him and to the reader. He is always anxious to do the right thing, as expressed in his oft-quoted rhymes of modern business.

Stribling of "Fombombo" is not Stribling of "Birthright". This Stribling is a mixture—a combination of the typical things in Richard Harding Davis, Sinclair Lewis, Fedor Dostoevsky—and T. S. Stribling. If you want romance and intrigue, they're here. If you seek character-portraits, or scenes of horror, or war, or salesmanship, or even religious discussion, "Fombombo" is respectfully submitted.

Sessue Hayakawa, the favorite Japanese movie actor, is appearing in London in a piece called "Samurai" by William Archer, dean of English dramatic critics and author of "The Green Goddess."

Theater managers do not have to permit Mexicans to sit in the parquet of theaters, according to a recent decision of the California courts.

The Denishawn dancers are now making a tour of the South, and are booked solidly until the end of April.

Doyle, but we hope that he likes to write and he will keep on writing. He most probably can turn out very clever and interesting mystery stories. Undoubtedly he has the stuff, but as yet it is latent.

Home-run King Meets "Red" Journalist—Complications!

"The Sun-field" by Heywood Broun. G. P. Putnam's Sons.

D. M. J.

In "The Sun-field" Heywood Broun writes an amusing story around the meeting and marriage of a home-run king of big league baseball and a staff member of a radical journal of opinion, sketched against a background of baseball field and training camp and an atmosphere in keeping with the heroine's affiliations with "To-morrow".

The story is entertaining, if superficial, but no one who enjoys spending an hour or two once in a while in pleasantly light reading would object to its superficiality, as long as Mr. Broun does not show an attempt to make it seem otherwise. And the novel seems to indicate that he has made a survey of the complications that would arise out of such a marriage and has selected those portions that would amuse the reader most.

Then, too, it is written in a familiarly conversational style, which tends to make it seem superficial. A situation described in a conversational manner or a characterization made by a character who is allowed consciously to describe himself are necessarily held within the limits of conversation.

Not that I mean to imply that Mr. Broun keeps within the limits of the "polite conversation" of the etiquette books of a few decades ago. Quite the contrary. He is writing of a contributor to "To-morrow". But the less obvious aspects of a situation or characterization can rarely be revealed conversationally except as they are revealed for effect.

One feels that there are other turns in Judith's nature than those she reveals in the statement of her opinions. Highly diverting as her opinions are, one feels nevertheless, that the picture of Judith is not complete. Mr. Broun never allows us to catch Judith unawares. She is always on guard, with an epigram she intends to incorporate in her next article for "To-morrow". As a modern heroine, she can discuss herself with the same frankness with which she talks of Oedipus complexes. What she reveals about herself is sometimes illuminating, yet she selects revelations as bon mots rather than as revelations of Judith.

Part of the amusing quality of "The Sun-field" lies in the treatment of the old comedy tricks in a new way. For instance, the trick of letting the characters misunderstand each other so that the reader may enjoy the humorous possibilities of the resulting complications, is fairly well worn.

Mr. Broun uses a new kind of misunderstanding. It is the complete failure of Tiny Tyler to understand his wife Judith. When Tiny returns to Judith after a prolonged absence during which he has managed to lose all of his money in gambling, to get himself arrested for drunkenness, to be named as co-respondent in a divorce case, and to make a fool of himself in vaudeville, he expected to be properly chastised as an errant husband.

When Judith waves the rest aside and tells him she doesn't like his cheap vaudeville stunts and furthermore, refuses to be a good influence for any man, even a repentant husband, she fails to be intelligible to Tiny. Here is a paradoxical situation that does curve the lips into a smile even though its tragic implications are partly comprehended.

Characteristic of "The Sun-field" is the bid for amusement even in its tragic overtones.
