The libraries provide public access to a wide range of material, including online exhibits, digitized collections, archival finding aids, our catalog, online articles, and a growing range of materials in many media.

When possible, we provide rights information in catalog records, finding aids, and other metadata that accompanies collections or items. However, it is always the user's obligation to evaluate copyright and rights issues in light of their own use.

Double-Pail and Joe Fox

Double-Pail and Fox agreed to go hunting and Fox understood that at that time they break twigs or rather I should say they break branches as they eat nuts. Now Double-Pail was a little hard of hearing. He said, "You should be the one to hear where the noise will come from and tell me."

So he listened and after a short while he heard nearby a sound of branches breaking. So he told his friend and right away he went straightaway. It wasn't far and the sound came again. So immediately he told his friend. The he himself took the lead and the almost got there and they say he was coming stooped over as he made an effort. When he got to where it was breaking branches, he took a shot at the bear. They say there was a lot of noise when the bear fell.
