SOME FACTS CONCERNING THE SUMMER WEATHER

June brought us pleasant weather, with temperatures a little below the average. The first six days of July were similar--bright and sunny with cool breezes. But July 7 marked the beginning of a period of intensely hot weather. There have been eight consecutive days during which temperatures of 100° or higher have been recorded. The maximum temperatures for these days, as recorded by the U.S. Weather Bureau thermometers at the Yerkes Observatory were;

July 7	105°
8	104
8	100
10	104
11	107
12	104
13	108
14	110

The former record was in July 1934 when there were six consecutive 100° - days, and the highest temperature was 108°.

July has had very little rain. On the 5th there was one-hundredth of an inch; on the 11th, seven-hundredths, or a total of eight-hundredths of an inch for the month.

What a year of extremes! About five months ago this region was experiencing weather which broke all former records for duration and intensity of cold and for the amount of snow. It would be pleasanter we think, if these extremes of heat and cold could be evened up somewhat, but there does not seem to be anything that we can do about it.

THE MURDER AT CONWAYS'

(2nd Installment)

We were sitting on the porch after dinner Monday evening when Bill Yerkey took out his bill-fold and flashed a bunch of money. Not in a smart way, he wasn't that sort. He had been playing in an orchestra and broadcasting in Denver after the University had closed, and he was proud of the money because he had earned it. It was a foolish thing to do. I remember thinking so at the time.

"A girl tried to make me for that yesterday", and he laughed at the recollection. "It was this way". He leaned forward and addressed Mrs. Conway. "I stopped at a cabin for some information and a classy dame with hair as red as mine came to the door. She gave me a sweet smile, but the man, who was gathering up some fishing-tackle, wasn't so glad to see me and didn't mind showing it. The girl invited me in, but that fellow didn't warm up at all. I thought she was being nice to me to make him jealous."

"I'd driven about five miles when I missed my gloves and went back to get them. The girl was alone, and will you believe it? That dame got very sweet and the first thing I knew she had her arms around my neck. I don't like to have dames paw me and I shook her loose in a hurry. Mad? Say she was lightning and a rattle-snake all in one. And did she cuss? I got out of there in a hurry."

"I'm going to tell my husband that you insulted me", she cried after me. "My life wouldn't have been worth a dime if that husband had come back. I think she was trying to get my money. One hand went toward my hip pocket."

"How did she know you had money? I asked."

"Oh, just guessed it, I'd say."

"I think you were lucky to get away without a stray bullet", observed ed Mr. Conway. "It isn't safe to let anyone even guess you have money."

"I guess you're right. Would any of you mind if I played my banjo?"

"Jean Conway jumped up and clapped her hands. Oh, do play, she said".

It looked to me as if Jean had fallen for this Bill Yerkey. Any girl would. He was irresistible. Lawrence had nothing to say. He sat back in the corner apparently very angry and consumed with jealousy.

Bill seemed so naive about it all. He talked and laughed, and played his banjo. The rest of us were not very interesting to one another, but Bill was alive and young and life to him was a grand adventure. He talked well. He told of his home on Long Island, of his father and of his new step-mother.

"Dad just naturally hasn't any defense against the wiles of a woman, he said." "This is his third try. My mother died five years ago. Dad was terribly in love with her, and very lonely. He was easy picking for any woman. The first one he married was a tramp. She was a beautiful woman, but nevertheless a tramp. She tried to make love to me. I told Dad and he divorced her in a hurry. She vowed she would shoot me if she ever saw me again. So I came West and I'm not going back home 'Til this comedy of errors is played out... Dad sends me money-plenty-but I'm saving some. I want to be a doctor and that takes a lot of money." "Where are you going now?" asked Jones, "up to Estes Park. Going to play in an orchestra. Must be up there the last of this week."

I know we all envied him his good looks, his poise, his attractiveness, his exuberance, his attitude toward life. I was forced to think that someone had envied him his money.

Mr. and Mrs. Conway retired about ten o'clock. He was going fishing in the morning and was getting up very early. The others drifted upstairs and Bill and Jean and I had the porch and the moonlight to ourselves. It must have been after eleven when he asked Jean to drive down to the telegraph office. He wired his father every night, he said.

I went up to my room and some time after I heard a car come to a stop at the curb. Then Jean's and Bill's voices. The lights went out on the porch and Bill came up to his room, and heard him moving around and singing softly to himself.

It must have been after twelve before everything quieted down. I was roused from my first sleep by some unusual voice. I lay and listened intently. All seemed quiet and presently in the distance I heard the hoof beats of a galloping horse. I fell into a deep unconscious of the fact that in the next room a murder had been committed and that handsome Bill Yerkey lay dead in a pool of blood.

I was sorry afterward that I had not investigated the noise that awakened me. How different every thing might have been. In the light of future events I have reasons to believe I might have saved Bill's life if I had but opened my door or turned on the light.

BOARD OF REVIEW HAD FEW COMPLAINTS

The Board of Review which met on June 29 and has had a couple of adjournments, will have its final meeting on Friday evening this week at 6:30 at the Library. It will hear no new complaints but make final disposition of some that have been investigated.

There seems to be some misunderstanding as to the real purpose of the Board of Review. Most of those appearing before it, come to complain about the amount of their taxes. The Board simply meets to review the assessment roll as turned in by the Assessor.

Any Tax Payer has the privilege of appearing at the meeting on the designated date and asking the amount of his assessment, and if he thinks, in his judgment, the valuation placed by the Assessor is too high,
he can make a sworn statement
to that effect and the claim
will be investigated by the Board.

The Law in Wisconsin states
that all properties shall be assessed at full value. If the local Assessor does not do so,
the board of equalization raises
them to that amount for county
and state taxes.

WILLIAMS BAY WATER DEPARTMENT REPORTS HEAVY USE OF WATER.

Caryl H. Ripley, Supt. of Waterworks reports that a year ago the water Dept. of Williams
Bay had 195 meters in service.
Today the number is hearily doubled with 385 measuring water for
its patrons..

On Saturday July 11, 427,000
gallons of water was pumped by the Williams Bay water dept. which is more than is pumped by the city
of Elkhorn in one day.

IF YOU HEAR THE SIREN!

Two things to keep in mind
if the Fire Siren blows- First-Turn off the water if you are using it for sprinkling. Tho Williams Bay is very fortunate in having an adequate supply of water for normal usage, there might be some difficulty in keeping the tank filled up in case of several streams of water having to be played on a fire. Second- Do not chase a fire in your automobiles. The habit of scores of cars rushing
to the scene of a fire causes possibility of accidents. It is really contrary to law. If you must go to a fire, please wait until the fire engine has a good start and under no circumstances pass around it. It is more important that the firemen get to the fire than you.
It is best that when hearing
the siren, all traffic at the center of the village halt until the fire engine gets underway.

MONEY FOUND AND RETURNED TO OWNER.

Mrs. A.C. Ohl is lucky that a five dollar bill which she lost in the business section
last Friday was found by Warren Rasmussen, a neighbor
boy and returned to her.
