Hobbled by a knee injury in the Iowa game, Wisconsin's Jim Bakken returned to the lineup in the Michigan game just long enough to boot a decisive 19 yard field goal.

Badgers Nip Wolves, are Clawed by Wildcats

IT WAS ALMOST as dramatic a finish as Bill Mazeroski's ninth inning home run earlier in the month. 57,629 football fans with a king-sized lump in their throats roared mightily as co-captain Henry Derleth smashed in to block a last second field goal attempt and preserve the score board's status quo of the final one minute and fifty-eight seconds—Wisconsin 16, Michigan 13.

A 19-yard-field goal by junior quarterback Jim Bakken, hobbled with a knee injury since the Iowa game, provided the margin of victory though there were many that were fearful the boot would not hold up in light of Michigan's counterthrust that consumed the final one hundred eighteen seconds.

The field goal and the resultant victory for the Badgers seemed small consolation in retrospect—during the course of the game outstanding sophomores Hugh 'Pat' Richter and Ron Miller, end and quarterback, respectively, were sent from the field with crippling injuries. Richter suffered a broken collar bone on the third play of the game as he fielded a 36 yard pass from Miller to set up Wisconsin's first period touchdown, and Miller was carried from the field with both ankles sprained on the first play of the fourth period, five plays before the Badgers scored their second touchdown of the game.

Richter's loss, so early in the game, seemingly sent the Wisconsin team into shock, and led to many mistakes during the remainder of the first half of play. Fortunately, they re-asserted themselves in the second half, and responded brilliantly behind the play-calling of John Fabry, a 6-2, 190 pound sophomore who transferred to Wisconsin from Minnesota a year ago.

It was John Fabry who piloted the Badgers with rare poise to those fourth quarter points—ten of them—that wiped out a 13-6 Michigan margin.

John knew when he came onto the field, with Wisconsin in possession of the ball on Michigan's 19-yard-line, that he had to do the job. Miller wouldn't be back in case things went wrong. His first play was a short pass to co-captain Henry Derleth for six yards. He called on his other co-captain, Tom Wiesner, to power for five yards in two carries to the 'Wolves' eight yard line, and a first down; he called on sophomore Merritt Norvell for the next seven yards over Michigan's right tackle, and then Fabry carried the ball into the end zone himself on a quarter-back sneak for the tying score with 12:23 left to play. Erv Kunesch placekicked the extra point to tie the score, 13-13.

The Badgers forced the losers to punt from Wisconsin's 43 yard line five plays after the ensuing kickoff, and Merritt Norvell made a fair catch on the six yard line. From this point, Fabry, in a brilliant display of play calling, moved the Badgers 91 yards downfield to the Michigan three where, on fourth down, Bakken put his toe into the ball for the margin of victory.

The workhorse of the 'Badgers' backfield, Tom Wiesner, went to work and powered for two yards through the middle, then smashed over left guard for thirteen yards to the 21 where he was stopped by Paul Poulos. It was Wiesner around right end for 11 yards to the 32, and another first down.

Again, Wiesner pounded right guard for four yards. Fabry decided at this point to change the attack, and went to the air—you're right, he passed complete to Wiesner, and the "workhorse" scooted and twisted 27 yards to the Michigan 37 before being grounded by Ried Bushong.

Three more plays netted a first down on the 'Wolves' 22, as Fabry's third down pass to Erv Kunesch netted 11 yards. On second down, after Wiesner had lost a yard, Fabry made a great call, rolling out to the weak side, catching Michigan's flanker crashing, and drawing the benefit of a fine block by Don Schade, he scampered to a first down on the eleven yard line.

Fabry's first down pass was complete to Derleth on the five yard line, but Wiesner could pick up just a yard-a-carry in the next two downs, and on fourth down, Jim Bakken stepped back to the nine, with Fabry holding, and booted the ball squarely through the uprights for the winning points.

Michigan's ensuing surge down field was like a tidal wave, engulfing the hearts of all the fans, and loyal Badgers wiped many a bead of perspiration from their brow as they left Camp Randall, awed by "what might have been."

Three passes by quarterback Dave Glinka fell harmlessly to the ground as the clock moved closer to its final minute—wait, there's Dave Raimey scampering through Wisconsin's four man defensive alignment to the Michigan 47 and a first down. New life.

Glinka and his cohorts take full advantage of time outs available, and continue their pursuit of the Wisconsin goal line in a battle against time. Benny McRae scoots for five yards; timeout. Pass interference on Wisconsin gives the losers a first down on the Badgers' 43.

Glinka's pass to his fullback, Dave Tureaud over the center, gains 19 yards, and the husky Wolverine successfully runs out of bounds to stop the clock. A Glinka pass is incomplete, and seven more seconds tick preciously by. Glinka's pass to end Scott Maentz is good and Hess and Kunesch nail him on the Badgers' 11. The final Michigan time out with 26 seconds to play.

Another pass play as Glinka fades to throw—no, he's hit by Badger tackle Don VanderVelden, and pinned to earth by the onrushing Badgers. The seconds fleet, the Wolverines hurriedly line up in field goal formation—Halstead's kick is blocked by Henry Derleth, crashing in from his end position, the game is over.

No, Glinka has the ball; he passes it complete to end Bob Johnson, who makes headway toward the goal-line until he's finally pushed out of bounds by Billy Hess seven yards shy of "pay-dirt."

Two hours earlier, it had been a Wisconsin march of 69 yards in six plays to start the game that had caused the spectators to relax and assume that this would surely be Wisconsin's day all the way.

Merritt Norvell swept Michigan's right end for 24 yards to the Wolves' 45, and two plays later Miller's pass to Richter netted 36 yards and a first down on the eight. Three plays netted the score as Miller climaxed the drive on a one yard sneak. The extra point by Erv Kunesh was short, and with 11:38 remaining in the first period Wisconsin led 6-0.

A bizarre exchange of the football gave Michigan the tying tally with 3:36 remaining in the first period. A Michigan drive following Wisconsin's score reached the Badgers' 17 where Dave Raimey fumbled Glinka's hand-off and Don VanderVelden recovered the fumble on the 25. The Badgers fumbled the ball right back to the Wolverines, with end George Mans falling on the ball on the 22.

Glinka's third down pass from the 21 was intercepted by center Dick Baer on the thirteen and returned nine yards to the 22. Seemingly, the Badgers were out of a bad situation, and if they could sustain a drive, the tide of battle would be accomplished.

Alas, fullback Don Bangert slipped and fumbled Fabry's hand-off and Joe O'Donnell fell on the squirming football on the Wisconsin eight yard line. Four running plays tied the score as Raimey slipped out of the grasp of would-be Badger tacklers on fourth down on the one yard line and fell into the end zone. The extra point attempt was wide, and the score was knotted at 6-6.

Immediately, Miller reorganized the Wisconsin forces and sent them marching downfield to Michigan's two yard line before the losers braced and took over. Key plays in the march were completed passes by Miller to Kellogg for ten yards, to Derleth for 7, to Carlson for 17 yards, and a screen pass to Wiesner for thirty yards.

Midway in the second period, Fabry fumbled a pass from center on Wisconsin's 48 attempting to punt, and the series of plays that followed set up Michigan's second score. Glinka's pass to end John Freehan gave the Wolverines a first down on the 34, and after a running play sent Denny Fitzgerald to the 31, Glinka's third down pass was intercepted by Ron Carlson on the Badgers' nine yard line and returned to the 18.

Ted Rogenski picked his way for eleven yards to the 29, and Miller's completed pass to Bill Kellogg moved the ball to the 37, where on third down, center John Walker picked off Miller's aerial, and returned twenty yards to the Wisconsin 30.

Four plays provided the touchdown, with Benny McRae picking up twelve yards and a first down in two plays to the 18; Tureaud smacked the middle of Wisconsin's line for six yards, and Raimey slashed off left tackle and car-

*Wisconsin 0, Northwestern 21
November 5*

Northwestern's horde of purple-clad Wildcats clawed Wisconsin's injury-ridden Badgers into submission 21-0 this dreary November afternoon as 61,730 Homecoming celebrants watched on in dismay.

You would never believe as the game unfolded that here, in Northwestern, was a team that had not won a Big Ten game until today—their triumph over Indiana a week previous was a “no-count” game as a result of a conference ruling this past summer—and the ease with which the job was accomplished made General Sherman’s march through Georgia appear amateurish in comparison.

The Wildcats came to play football—rock ‘em, sock ‘em football—in the fashion it’s played every Saturday in the Big Ten. The Badgers were on the receiving end of bone crunching blocks, teeth-jarring tackles, and the completeness of the Northwestern attack had settled the decision by mid-way in the second period.

While the offense struck with lightning-like thrusts to dent the Badgers’ armor, the Wildcats defensive play was as savage as any seen on Camp Randall’s historic turf in many a moon. Wisconsin was held to a net rushing yardage of 15 yards in 21 rushes all afternoon, the lowest total a Milt Bruhn-coached Wisconsin team has ever compiled in a game during his five year tenure as coach. Only once before, against Michigan State on November 2, 1957, has Wisconsin’s running attack been so stymied—on that day the Badgers had a net total of 53 yards rushing in forty carries.

The Badgers running game, hampered as it was by injuries to key players, netted a lone first down by rushing, and that didn’t come until the first play of the fourth period when quarterback John Fabry rolled out for a 22 yard gain that carried the Badgers into Northwestern territory for the first time since the opening minute of battle. You have to go way back to November 9, 1946 in another Homecoming battle—against Iowa—when the Badgers were held to a single first down by rushing and a total of 41 yards on the ground. At least to-

Tension was rife in the Badger camp on the sidelines as Michigan was threatening near the Wisconsin goal during the closing seconds of the game at Camp Randall ried three Badger defenders into the end zone. Freehan added the extra point for a 13-6 Michigan lead 3:47 before halftime.

A fumble by McRae on Michigan’s first running play of the second half following Derleth’s kickoff, gave Wisconsin possession on the Wolves’ 38. Tom Wiesner, who recovered the fumble, gave the pending march impetus with an eight yard smash off left tackle, and gained the first down by plunging two yards on a fourth and yard-to-go situation.

A Miller to Carlson completion put the ball on the 15, and four plays later, Wiesner was stopped for no gain as the Wisconsin drive stalled on the Michigan 6. It looked gloomy at the time—for the Badgers weren’t taking advantage of their opportunities.

Michigan’s counter-march moved the ball out to their 39 yard line, where Wisconsin braced, and on fourth down Ried Bushong punted 42 yards out of bounds on the Wisconsin 19 yard line. Norvell’s running netted a first down in two plays on the 33, and Miller’s pass completions—to Kunesh for eleven, and to Wiesner for 25 yards accomplished first downs on the Wisconsin 44, and the Michigan 31.

Wiesner’s plunge through right tackle gained two yards, and Miller’s third down pass to Wiesner gained seven yards and left the Badgers a yard short of a first down on the 22 yard line as the third period ended. On the first play of the fourth period, Miller picked up the first down on a quarterback sneak, and was carried from the playing field with an injured ankle.

Enter John Fabry.

The complexion of play in the second half was dominated by Wisconsin, and the Badgers ran 37 plays to the Wolverines’ 15 until the final Michigan drive; and the Badgers outgained the losers—205 yards to 104, with 52 of those yards coming in the final ten plays of game for Michigan.

day against the Wildcats they added seven first downs by passing.

Even Wisconsin's passing attack—the second best in the United States—was not up to par, and while John Fabry and the injured Ron Miller threw 28 passes, only twelve were complete, good for a net total of 103 yards. The effectiveness of the rush put on Wisconsin's quarterback all afternoon can be borne out by these statistics: a Fabry pass was deflected by an onrushing Northwestern tackler and caught by Fabry for a 12 yard loss; later another Fabry pass, intended as a screen to halfback Gerry Nena was diagnosed correctly and the resulting loss of yardage was eight; another attempted screen pass to fullback Tom Wiesner by Ron Miller lost two yards; and a lateral pass play, Miller to Bangert, went astray with the resultant loss of eleven yards charged to Miller.

Injuries certainly played havoc with the Badgers. A week earlier the loss of end Pat Richter for the season with a broken collar bone, and the loss of Ron Miller with a pair of sprained ankles deprived the Badgers of one of the deadliest passing combinations in recent Big Ten football history. True, Miller played today, but the loss of Richter was evident—Northwestern could gamble on defense by using an eight man rush most of the afternoon with no fear of being crossed up by Richter's sensational receiving ability. You say Michigan was unable to stop Wisconsin's passing attack even after Richter left the game. That's true, but Michigan had practiced an entire week against the Badger's pass patterns utilizing Richter, and found adjustment difficult during the playing of the game. Not so, Northwestern. They had a full week of work concentrating on rushing the passer—Wisconsin's Fabry and Miller—knowing full well that they need pay no attention to Pat Richter. They were right; 61,730 agree with their strategy. It stopped Wisconsin cold on this overcast day.

A pre-game injury to left halfback Merritt Norvell—a ruptured blood vessel in his leg—eliminated Wisconsin's second best runner, and finest blocker, from its attack, and a dislocated knee cap sent sophomore Ted Rogenski, Norvell's replacement at left half, to the sidelines for the season on Northwestern's first touchdown march in the first period.

Northwestern	7	14	0	0—21

The savagery of the Wildcats' play cost Wisconsin the services of co-captain Henry Derleth near the end of the first scoring drive, and he never returned to action. Others shaken up, though they later played, included tackle Don VanderVelden, and ends Bill Kellogg and Ron Carlson. In addition, end Ron Staley and the Wildcats' Wayne Chamberlain, a guard, were eliminated from the game for getting into a brief scuffle in the second period.

The loss of Norvell and Rogenski forced Coach Bruhn to switch defensive back Gerry Nena to left halfback on offense, a position he had not played since the Purdue game, and while Nena admirably filled in, his lack of work at the position was apparent.

Northwestern was in control of the game all the way, especially in the first half. The Wildcats had the ball for 39 rushing plays to pick up 201 yards in their first half forays, and added 56 yards on three completions in five attempts. Their scoring marches covered 84 yards in 19 plays at 3:31 left to play in the first period; 46 yards in five plays at 14:47 left to play of the second period, and 66 yards in eight plays with 8:38 remaining in the second period. The Wildcats rolled up 15 first downs, thirteen of them on the ground.

Meanwhile, the Badgers ran seventeen plays all told in the first half, for a net gain of 29 yards—eight passing, twenty-one yards on the ground. The only first down for the Badgers was on a Miller to Staley pass, good for 11 yards on the first play from scrimmage following Northwestern's second touchdown.

The teams sparred gently the first time they had the ball as an overture to the Wildcats' sudden surge of power. Bakken punted 36 yards when the Badgers couldn't gain following the opening kick-off, and sophomore Larry Wood's fumble on the second Northwestern running play was recovered by Henry Derleth on the Wildcats' 46.

Co-captain Tom Wiesner smacked through center on first down, cut toward the sideline with the help of good blocking and raced down field to the 20 yard line where he was hit, and his fumble was recovered in mid-air by center Larry Onesti who was downed on the Wildcats' 17 yard line by Badger end Ron Carlson.

The Wildcats marched relentlessly down field in a nineteen play march that culminated in their first score. The passing of quarterback Dick Thornton played an important part in keeping the march alive as he hit end Elbert Kimbrough twice on third down plays for 11 yards and nine yards, respectively, while the plunging of fullback Mike Stock ate up thirty-eight yards in eight carries, including the touchdown thrust from the three yard line.

The Wildcats picked up first downs on their own 31 and 42 yard lines to start the march, and continued the attack with first downs on the Wisconsin 46, 30, 18, and 3 yard lines. The key play was a fourth down pitch-out from the Badgers' eleven yard line as Albert Kimbrough couldn't hang on to the ball, it bounced crazily forward to the three yard line where his brother Elbert fell on it for an eight yard gain and a first down. Stock pounded into the end zone on first down for the score, and then stepped back and booted the extra point.

Wisconsin's offense lost twelve yards in three plays following the kickoff, and Fabry's punt was downed on the Badgers' 46 yard line. It took the Wildcats five plays to score again. A pitchout to halfback Bob Snider gained eight yards, and fullback Jim Knowles gained three for a first down on the 35. Right halfback Ray Purdin went around left end for four yards to the 31 as the first period ended.

Snider went around Wisconsin's left end for fourteen yards to the 17 where Nena forced him out of bounds. From here, Purdin swept Wisconsin's right end for the remaining yardage without a hand being laid on him for the score. Stock again converted the extra point.

The Badgers picked up their lone first down of the first half on Miller's pass completion to Staley—it was Ron's first appearance of the game, and momentarily raised the hopes of the Badger fans, but the attack bogged down immediately and Jim Bakken punted 45 yards to quarterback Dick Thornton on the Northwestern 27, and he returned seven yards.

Thornton concentrated the Wildcats' running attack on the middle of Wisconsin's line, with fullback Stock gaining ten yards in two carries, Thornton 9 yards in two, Albert Kimbrough six yards in one, and Purdin five yards in one to move the ball to the Badgers' 36. After a second down incompleting pass, Thornton rolled out to his right, fired a pass high and long, and Albert Kimbrough clutched it at the ten yard line, and, though Dave Bichler clung to him the last eight yards, he fell into the end zone for the score. Stock again converted for the 21-0 lead that eventually became the final score.

Albert Kimbrough left the game at this point with a pulled leg muscle, never to return, but his services were not needed.

Jim Bakken's punting proved to be the lone bright showing in the day's game. The Madison junior averaged 42 yards on eight punts for the game. His punts of 54 and 53 yards late in the second period helped to contain Northwestern deep in its own territory. The Wildcats never reached inside Wisconsin's 21 yard line the rest of the afternoon on offense. On the game's last play, Fabry's pass was intercepted by Mark Johnson, and he returned 62 yards to the Badgers' eight yard line as time ran out.

Wisconsin's third period attack was limited to a minus nine yards on five rushing plays, and two attempted passes were incomplete, while Bakken punted twice for a 46 yard average. The Badgers' defense, with some adjustments, and hitting harder, stalled the Wildcats, too—holding the winners to 75 yards in 33 rushes, and an additional 22 yards on two completions in four passing attempts, for the entire second half.

Wisconsin's only moments of glory on offense came in the fourth period. Fabry started the quarter out right with a 22 yard romp to Northwestern's 44 on a keeper around his own left end. Following a twelve yard loss on a fumble while trying to pass, Fabry hit Bichler with an aerial good for 27 yards to the Wildcats' 29, and followed with a strike to Bill Kellogg for 15 yards to the Northwestern 14. The drive then lost its momentum—going backwards instead in three plays to the 43. Bakken then punted out of bounds on the 18.

Billy Hess returned Thornton's ensuing fourth down punt 12 yards to the Wildcats' 47, but after Fabry tossed a 13 yard completion to Wiesner, the attack stalled, and Bakken punted out of bounds on Northwestern's five yard line. The Wildcats, content to play control football, ran for first downs on the 19 and 42 yard lines before the Badgers braced, and Dave Cox punted dead on Wisconsin's 32 yard line.

Fabry again went to the airwaves with success against Northwestern reserves throwing four straight completions to move the Badgers down field. The completions were to Nena for 17, to Carlson for 10, to Wiesner for eight, and to Bangert for 13 yards, and a first down on the Northwestern 20.

The Badgers were then confronted by the Wildcat regulars, and changed tactics. They used three rushing plays to reach the 13, for their deepest penetration of the day. But a fourth down pass was incomplete and ended the threat.

The loss was the second straight for Wisconsin at a Homecoming celebration (they lost 9-6 to Illinois last year), and only the second win for the Wildcats over Wisconsin since 1948 (the other by 17-7 in 1956).
