HUGE AUDIENCE IS ENTERTAINED BY SHAW'S COMEDY "CANDIDA"

By COSSIE"

Torrents of cold rain were of little consequence to the eager crowd that filled Music hall to overflowing last night when the Shakespeare Players of New York made their Madison debut in George Bernard Shaw's comedy, "Candida".

"Twelfth Night" will be dramatized by this itinerant group of players to-night at 8:15 in the Open air theatre in the rear of Bascom hall. On Saturday afternoon they will appear in "The Taming of the Shrew" and at night in four one-act plays.

Although put at great disadvantage by the inadequacy of the Music hall stage, the players accomplished their roles in a fashion so masterly, so able that the whole interpretation of George Bernard Shaw's famous comedy can be said to be unusually delightful. The warmth with which each act was accepted will attest to that.

Brimming with marital complications, clever repartee, and interesting characters, "Candida" is one of Mr. Shaw's most popular plays and lends itself most readily to dramatization. Not only because of its appeal to the instinct for something modern but also because of its concern for interests that are vitally human does it win great favor.

There is about the play "Candida" a certain amount of humor, a wealth of interesting situations, that only the most able cast can convincingly portray. The money-grabbing scoundrel father of Candida might easily be so overwrought that it would lapse into farce. But in the person of Harry

CONDUCT TOUR TO MERRILL SPRINGS

The first of a series of excursions for summer session students will be conducted to Merrill Springs tomorrow. The boats will leave the Park street pier at 9 o'clock and return about 5.

The tour will be in charge of Charles E. Brown, curator of the Historical museum. Miss Louise P. Kellogg, member of the research staff of the Historical society, and other speakers will lecture on the pioneer and Indian history of the region.

Ask Registration of Names
Registration for the trip is limited to 200 persons. Everyone wishing to go is expected to leave his name at the registrar's office as soon as possible.

The first stop in the tour will be at the state hospital. Here the excursionists will be shown the hospital, and the Indian mounds, one of which is the largest in the world.

Will Visit Mounds

From here they will go to Farwell Point to see a group of seven large mounds. Bernards park, Morris park, and West Point will be visited. West Point is the earliest site of Madison. The springs and Indian mounds at Merrill Spring will be visited.

LOWMAN'S BASEBALL TEAM PLAYS TUESDAY

The baseball game which was scheduled for last night between the Lake street team and the Wisconsin team will be played next Tuesday, July 11, at 6:15 p. m. on the lower campus.

Coach Guy S. Lowman announces that a game will be played Thursday, July 13, at 4:30 between the Lutheran team and the Summer session. The schedule is subject to change only on account of the muddy condition of the lower campus.

THRILLS MARK WESTERN TRIP OF GEOLOGISTS

Playful Bear Holds Up Party
On Yellowstone
Trip

PRAISE FOR DR. LOBECK

Full of enthusiasm and praise for Doctor A. K. Lobeck, the members of the first University of Wisconsin and Columbia University field trip have returned from two weeks in Yellowstone and Glacier parks and other points of geological interest in the Rocky Mountain region.

There were 31 geologists in the party, representing the states of Wisconsin, Illinois, Ohio, Indiana, Michigan, Kentucky, New York, Massachusetts, and Georgia.

Many from Wisconsin Attend.

The members from Wisconsin were Doctor A. K. Lobeck, Ralph Brown, Misses Genera Loft, Helen Davis, Ruth Dickover, Mary Eldrich, Elizabeth Simmons, Herbert Nicholson and Herbert Taylor. The object of the trip was the study of actual geological formations as found in the Northern Rockies.

Aside from the topographical knowledge secured, the trip was not without its thrills. Passing through an unfrequented portion of the Yellowstone in cars the entire party was held up by a huge bear which ambled onto the road and placing his fore paws on the front proceeded to stop its progress by fender of the leading car. When all seemed lost a member of the party produced a quantity of candy which proved to be just what Bruin was looking for. His hunger appeased, the bear allowed the geologists to continue their peaceful search for rocks.

Plan Trip Next Summer.

The trip was in every way successful and a second trip is planned for next summer. It will be necessary however to secure a large enough enrollment to make it worth while. Those who went this summer predict a much larger enrollment for future trips.

Doctor Lobeck left the rest of the party at Chicago and continued east to New York where he will teach geography at Columbia University this summer. After the summer session there he will conduct a trip through New York and all the New England states with special attention to the mountains in those states.

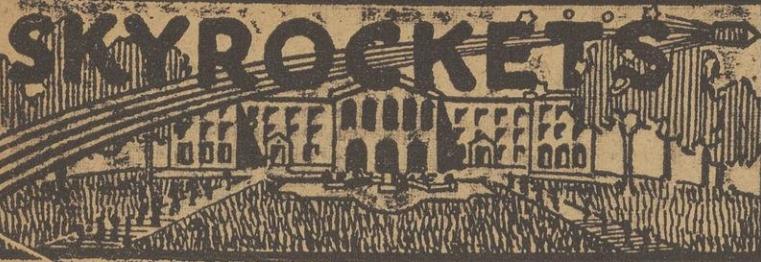

Hold Vesper Service Sunday Evening at 7

It is expected that more than 800 persons will be in attendance at the Vesper service to be held Sunday evening, at 7 o'clock, in the open air theatre to the rear of Bascom hall. The Rev. Stanley M. Cleveland, Episcopal student pastor, will preach.

The Rev. A. J. Soldan will lead in scripture reading and prayer, and Prof. E. B. Gordon will conduct the musical program. Olive Brown will direct the university quartet in special music.

On the following Sunday, July 16, Rev. M. G. Allison, Presbyterian student pastor, will deliver the sermon and The Rev. J. B. Gleason, Baptist student pastor, will read the scripture and lead in prayer. The choir of the Grace Presbyterian church will furnish the music.

In the event of rain, services will be held in Music hall.

HOW INTERESTING.
"Babbitt," says Strangler Lewis,
"is better than 'Mange Street,'"

AND we hope that when the newly chartered Lyons, the Kiwanis, Rotary and Chamber of Commerce have finished "Babbitt," they will turn their attention to providing picture post cards for the summer tourists.

TODAY'S SUGGESTION.
That the pronunciation of Ma-honey's be changed to Mayonnaise, because wherever one passes there much dressing is in view.

DANCING AT MIXERS

THERE have been numerous inquiries with regard to all-university mixers for summer school students. The number of inquiries alone proves that this element of university life is being missed.

The Y. W. C. A. is to be commended for its mixer of Monday evening. However, it is quite apparent that such mixers cannot replace the all-university mixer; they are necessarily limited to fewer numbers and they attract a much smaller group of students. It is also clear that the informal social gatherings, although highly commendable in themselves, fail to take the place of the university dances.

Probably the most noticeable thing at the gathering last Friday evening, and likewise at the Y. W. C. A. mixer, was the great preponderance of women students. With full recognition of the fact that many of the women may have been actuated by higher motives, we still believe that the majority of them attended for the opportunity of meeting the men students—the same was true for those men who were present.

The defect lay, at least with respect to the social gathering in the lack of appeal to the men of such a character of mixer—in a nutshell the lack of dancing. There seems to be no definite indication why the university mixers are discontinued during the summer months—perhaps it is but the moral prejudice against dancing. If this be the reason, it seems to us that we are but dodging one evil to meet a greater one, or that the remedy, if the social gatherings were designed as such, is insufficient.

The lack of these mixers force the students to dances or other diversions of a far more questionable character, and as long as we have the choice between two evils, if dancing may be called such, let us choose the lesser one. The majority of us will gladly welcome a weekly all-university mixer where dancing is the chief form of entertainment.

JUST BEING HUMAN

THAT the social activities of the regular term are missed during summer school is putting it mildly. The change from a hustling year of social affairs to a summer of lazy calm is noticeable to everyone who spends the entire year in Madison.

The first reaction is perhaps to feel that we have lost something especially pleasant that we formerly had enjoyed.

But after a week or two of the peaceful, rather uneventful life of the summer session we sense that much of what formerly we thought indispensable was really artificial. We acquire a perspective of the work and social life of the previous year and we see that much of it was not worth while; that time was spent in some useless endeavor to advance social rating, to learn a new dance step, or to make a new society or form a new club. What was perhaps most worth while was neglected entirely—the art of making friends and being human.

Just being human is an art in itself. But during summer school we can at least approach sincere friendships. The petty animosities and jealousies of the regular term are lacking. There is nothing to disturb the formation and continuance of associations that we some day may count among our most priceless possessions.

The wealth of any individual is counted, not on how much money or land he may own and govern, but how many are his friends.

To get friends or to be a friend needs no other recipe than just to be human, to understand another's needs and another's problems and pleasures.

If we can succeed in doing that we will have gained more real worth and pleasure from the school year than as though we had successfully engaged in every social event, every activity that an entire school year had to offer.

KNOWING OUR PROFESSORS

Man loves to classify things. He finds pleasure and satisfaction in taking an object or idea and relating it to other objects and ideas. He looks for relationships and from his observations makes conclusions that guide him in future cases of similar nature. He evolves types and tries to identify each person as one of an orthodox type. Literature, art, conversation, and actions spread the characteristics of each type until most everyone has a common basis for classification and recognizes the distinguishing features.

One of our best known types is the college professor. He is a personage just as surely as the politician, the Irishman, and the policeman. His defects have been exaggerated and his good qualities of several generations ago have been handed down as part of his makeup today. Like many conceptions of types, the college professor is overdrawn. His eccentricities have been told by those who knew him and these qualities were taken up by those who knew him not and portrayed to excess. The college man or college graduate accepts the popular conception of the professor because he sees the eccentric qualities, but thinks little of them because he has seen the better side of the man. The man who has never been to college has to accept the impressions given him by writers and cartoonists. He gets the wrong idea, and liking the slams and humor usually associated with the type professor with his bald head, shiny clothes, Harvard accent, brief case, perennial tie and his proverbial quality of forgetfulness, the average reader accepts the college professor as a sort of kindly creature who eternally lives in the shadow of the Parthenon and tells his children fairy stories in Greek and Hebrew.

We do not know our professors. We regard them as policemen, judges, avenging angels, tutors, and accountants, but fail to know them as ordinary human beings with understanding and a desire to be friends. Many students attend classes for half a semester and never know the name of their instructor. Sometimes the student shows an extraordinary desire to become friendly near the close of the term, but his actions are so obvious that everyone knows that he has an ax to grind. If we do not know or try to understand our professor, how can we expect him to understand us?—Ohio State Lantern.

Leake Lectures On Science and Church

That the dogmatism of the early Christians retarded the progress of science throughout the Middle Ages was pointed out by Prof. C. D. Leake in his lecture on the History of Science Thursday in the auditorium of Science hall.

The subject of his lecture was "The Continuity of Science: The Mediaeval Church and the Arabs."

He showed that the Christians of the Dark ages opposed all investigation beyond the assertions of the bible, and considered the scepticisms of the Greeks as sinful.

"Red Bird" Play Is Reviewed By Prof. Leonard

BY MADELINE A. GULLION.

"Two for one," the law of the Winnebago Indians furnished the basis for Professor W. E. Leonard's drama of Wisconsin history, "Red Bird," which he read yesterday afternoon in the lecture room of the Law building.

This drama which supposedly takes place about 1830 is concerned with the revolt of the Winnebago Indians against the whites. Although the actual events took place farther north, Professor Leonard places the setting nearer Madison at Devils Lake and The Dells.

Blue Heron, a Winnebago Indian, has been given over to the whites as a hostage. A Scotch traitor spreads the rumor that the white people have hanged this Indian.

Red Bird, the chieftain, kills two white men for revenge.

Major Whistler promises to spare the tribe if Red Bird surrenders. The troops gather at Devils Lake and Red Bird come prepared to lie. He realizes that he has broken the law of Wisconsin but has kept the law of the Winnebago.

Red Bird is tried and is found guilty. He is put in the guard house where the scene of the play takes place. The sergeant, a pathetic rather than a humorous character as many interpret him allows Red Bird to have one look at the Father of Waters. Red Bird sees what he thinks is the spirit of Blue Heron on the bluff. The sergeant tells him that Blue Heron was not hanged but set free. Red Bird who has wasted away in his prison collapses on his pallet. Major Whistler returns with word that Red Bird is to be set free but he comes too late. Red Bird has taken the home trail.

"Red Bird" was presented recently by the Curtain Club both here and at Baraboo.

Our Pre-Expansion Sale

Beginning Friday Morning

---extensive alterations and remodeling of this store demand complete clearance of all present stock at emergency reductions

A FIFTEEN year merchandise momentum finds us entirely outgrowing our present quarters. We must have more room. We must have greater selling facilities. We're not going to retard that growth. We're going to stimulate it by meeting the situation with all the scope for greater business that the public's recognition of our values and endorsement of our policy has developed.

We're adding another floor to our business—expanding to the second floor of our present store. But that's not all. Our first floor, too, is going through a complete process of improvement in store service, selling accommodations and impressiveness of display.

Before our greater store can become an accomplishment our present stock must be disposed of.

In other words, we have only a few weeks in which to clear away a vast variety of merchandise that would ordinarily take two or three months selling. We have to quicken the process. We know there is only one way we can induce your co-operation. That is by making the economies and money saving opportunities so irresistible that you will find it to your interest to buy at once, to buy all your needs here, to buy more than usual quantities. To get right into the spirit of these emergency reductions and take your full share of the greatest reductions Madison has ever known on America's finest apparel for men and boys
