PREFACE.

In presenting to the public the MADISON CITY DIRECTORY, for 1866, I desire to express my sincere thanks to the several persons who have kindly aided me in the preparation of the matter with which the volume is filled.

If the work shall, in any way, tend to promote the general prosperity of the beautiful city of Madison, or shall prove of benefit or pleasure to its citizens, I shall feel amply rewarded for the labor and expense assumed in its publication.

I cannot expect that this Directory, being my first effort, will be free from errors; but asking the indulgence of the public for the unavoidable mistakes in this volume, I shall hope, at some future time, to be able to present one that will better meet the reasonable expectations of a generous people.

HISTORY OF MADISON.

The City of Madison is situated in latitude 43 degrees, 4 minutes and 20 seconds north, and longitude 89 degrees 20 minutes West from Greenwich, or 12 degrees, 20 minutes West from Washington. According to JOHNSON'S Atlas, published in 1862, Madison is about nine minutes or ten and one-third miles further west. The city occupies the greater portion of Sections 13, 14, 23 and 24, of Town 7 North from the base line or southern boundary of the State, and Range 9 East from the fourth principal meridian, these sections having their corner immediately under the western doorway of the rotunda of the Capitol.

This point is about seventy-five miles in an air line from Lake Michigan, about ninety miles from the Mississippi River, thirty-nine miles from the southern and two hundred and forty miles from the northern boundary of the State, at its nearest point on Lake Superior, and two hundred and sixty-four from the extreme northern limit of the State. It appears, therefore, that Madison is very near the centre of the State of which it is the Capital, on an east and west line, but far from the centre on a north and south line. Its relations to the population of the State are reversed. By the census of 1860, we learn that at that time, the population, north of a parallel of latitude passing through the northern boundary of Dane county, was 397,118, and the population south of that line 378,763, while the population east of a meridian passing through Madison, was 522,816, and west of that meridian only 253,065. It will thus be seen that Madison is not far from the centre of population, north and south, but that two-thirds of the inhabitants are east of this city.

There are, however, strong reasons for anticipating that this preponderance in the eastern part of the State will eventually be more than counterbalanced. We will content ourselves with mentioning two of the causes which seem destined to turn the scale in favor of the west.

First.—At present the products of the Southern States, which enter most largely into general consumption, cotton sugar and molasses, come to us by way of New York and the New England States, whither the raw material is taken for manufacturing and refining. This naturally builds up our lake ports and determines the commerce of the State towards them. Now when we consider that the present course of trade is fully four times as long as the course via the Mississippi River, and that it involves the very dangerous coastwise passage, and necessitates three trans-shipments, while none would be necessary by the river route, and when we further reflect that the Mississippi Valley affords every facility except cheap labor, for profitable manufacture, we are driven to the conclusion that not many years will elapse before the north-west and south-west will be enjoying those intimate business relations which nature seems to have pointed out as essential to the welfare of both sections. The cereals of the north-west will be directly exchanged for the more tropical productions of the south, and the great river of the continent will bear upon its bosom the burden of an unexampled commerce. The concentration of our own and the distribution of the southern products will call into being large and flourishing towns, on the hither bank of the Mississippi, and the tendency of trade will lead to the rapid developement of the western portion of the state. Trade has for many years pursued this very course, on the lower Mississippi, and as a consequence, we find all the important towns between St. Louis and New Orleans, on the eastern bank of the river.

Secondly. The other cause we propose to name, which will attract population to the western part of the State, is the greater area of soil, valuable for the purposes of tillage, which is due to the higher summer temperature in a given latitude, on the river than on the lake. The Mississippi is not niggardly in its favors. While its abundant waters invite traffic, its broad valley affords an avenue for the warm winds of the Gulf, which, in their season, beget the materials of traffic. It is now quite generally known that the results of careful thermal observations, continued through a series of years, show a higher temperature in the immediate valley of the Mississippi than in the vicinity of Lake Michigan. The isothermal lines determined by these observations, indicate as high a temperature during the growing and reaping seasons—from May to October inclusive—at Prescott, 120 miles north of Madison, as at Chicago, 90 miles south, and about the same at Superior City, in the extreme north-western corner of the State, as at Green Bay. It is true, indeed, that the winters are more intensely cold, but where the growing season is favorable, the severity of other seasons will not sensibly discourage settlement. Can we doubt that north-western Wisconsin will, ere long, become a populous agricultural region, when we know that its climate is as favorable and its soil more favorable to the production of cereals and esculent roots than Northern Illinois, Indiana, Ohio and Western Pennsylvania and Virginia, especially, when we take into account the inevitable growth of commerce on the Mississippi?

We feel justified, therefore, in predicting that Madison will eventually be found east instead of west of the numerical center of the State, and that it will, through its railroad connections become an important distributing and marketing point.

Madison is twenty-three miles from the western and nineteen miles from the eastern boundary of Dane County, of which it is the County Seat, and exactly midway between the northern and southern boundaries, being fifteen miles from each. It is thus at the geographical centre as it is the natural market and business point of a county containing thirty-five townships (one of them fractional) or twelve hundred and thirty-five square miles.

The site of the city is an undulating isthmus, between Lake Mendota, on the north-west, and Monona on the south-east.* The most elevated ground within the city limits is University Hill, the summit of which is about 125 feet above the surrounding lakes. The ground upon which the Capitol stands is about 75 feet, and the ridge that skirts Lake Mendota, about 80 feet above the level of the water. North-east of the Capitol each of the lakes is skirted by a ridge, perhaps thirty or forty feet high. Between these ridges the ground is flat and was formerly a very wet marsh. The efforts to reclaim this tract by draining and by lowering Lake Monona, have been but partially successful, though a considerable number of dwellings have been erected upon it. A similar tract, of less extent, lies south-west of the Capitol. Not many years ago this was almost wholly submerged. It is now sufficiently dry to be practicable for streets and to some extent for building purposes.

With these exceptions the entire site of the city is abundantly high, and so rolling as to afford perfect drainage and beautiful building sites. Much has been said and written about the beauty of Madison. HORACE GREELY, BAYARD TAYLOR, and other distinguished visitors have described the charming lake scenery by which we are surrounded in such glowing terms as to give Madison a national reputation. It is not our purpose to enlarge upon this topic. The visitor has only to survey the city and the surrounding country from the top of the Vilas House or the Capitol, or the main edifice of the University, to satisfy himself the world affords few more delightful prospects.

INDIAN TITLE.

The ground upon which Madison is built was, in common with most of the region included between the Mississippi, the Wisconsin and Rock Rivers, purchased from the Sacs and Fox Indians, in 1825, at which time those tribes relinquished all claim to lands east of the Mississippi River. The Sacs and Foxes were reputed among the early settlers to be peculiarly faithless and savage. At all events they seem to have repented the surrender of their old hunting grounds, and in 1831 we find them again on this side of the Mississippi greatly annoying the settlers and destroying much property. They were speedily driven back and entered into a new treaty with the United States, the terms of which were much the same as those of the treaty of 1825.

The next year they again returned to this side of the river, and, having induced a few Winnebagoes to join them, engaged in what is known as the Black Hawk war. Under the skilful leadership of BLACK HAWK they gave considerable trouble to the army sent to expel them, and continued their resistance for several months. As a result of this struggle the Indians were removed further west, a new treaty was entered into, and permanent tranquility was secured to Wisconsin.

It is probable that these tribes had occupied this region for a considerable period prior to the permanent settlement of Wisconsin, and that they were a warlike race of old, for we learn that nearly two hundred years ago the French, who rarely became involved in any difficulty with the aborigines, were obliged by force of arms to wrest from the Sacs and Foxes the privilege of transit between Green Bay and the Mississippi.

These savages have left but few traces of their occupancy. An occasional deep worn trail and here and there a small corn field constitute the only memorials of the rude life they led. One of the corn fields referred to may still be seen on the promontory on the east side of Lake Monona, near its outlet. This field, like others of its kind, will serve to exemplify the crude notions of agriculture as well as a singular want of perception of geometrical proportions that characterized our predecessors. They used the same hills year after year, disposed them at irregular intervals, and arranged them in no definite order. The earth was accumulated for the benefit of successive crops until the field (which was never enclosed) resembled a vast collection of ant hills. There is no evidence that the Indians of this region ever cultivated any other crop than maize. The absence of geometrical arrangement in agriculture is in striking contrast with the keen perception of symmetry evinced in the birch canoes, bows and arrows and ornamental bead work of these same savages.

Trails and corn fields are by no means the sole evidences of a former occupancy. Artificial mounds, those mysterious monuments of a forgotten age if not of a forgotten race, abound in the vicinity of the four lakes. In the earliest historic times the Indians seem to have been as destitute as they now are of any traditions respecting them. We should not be too hasty, however, in drawing the common inference that the mounds were the work of a more intelligent race long extinct, for even the most important events will speedily fade from the memory of a savage people, without literature and intent upon the gratification of present animal desires. While it may be more gratifying to the fancy it is questionable whether it is more agreeable to reason to refer these works to a remote age and a civilized race. Many of the mounds which abound in the vicinity of Madison appear to have been the sites of dwellings or villages. As such they were only the simplest kind of a floor, and may have been thrown together by a very rude people, as a protection against floods. Indeed the fact that they are composed almost exclusively of the loose surface soil would indicate that the implements used in their construction were of the simplest character. Other mounds were, perhaps as clearly, erected for sacrificial, and others for burial purposes. The great numbers of them found around the lakes indicate that this region was long a favorite resort for the aborigines as it naturally would have been, owing to the abundance of fish and water fowl. Not twenty years ago the shallow bays were literally covered, spring and autumn, with myriads of ducks. This, long after the rifle of the hunter had begun to frighten them from their wonted haunts. It is probable therefore that, when the silent arrow was the only weapon used against them, their numbers were limited only by the capacity of the lakes to feed them. The abundance of food and water must also have rendered this a favorite spot for deer and other large game, and the numerous marshes surrounding, most of which have been partially reclaimed by drainage, and the opening of the hide-bound soil on the adjacent hills, must have afforded an abundant supply of peltry. It is not surprising therefore that the savage bade a reluctant adieu to these "happy hunting grounds."

FIRST VISITS OF WHITE MEN.

LOCATION OF THE CAPITAL.

It is uncertain at what time the region of the Four Lakes was first visited by white men. After the establishment of the first French Trading Post at Green Bay, which occurred certainly as early as 1673, and according to some accounts as early as 1629, it is probable that the region now known as the State of Wisconsin was repeatedly traversed in nearly every direction by the hardy and adventurous French traders, and it is not unlikely that the Four Lakes, in common with other lake districts were more than once visited for purposes of barter. We have however no reliable accounts of such visits, and they are only inferred from the enterprising spirit and the peculiar occupation of the traders. These singular men were shrewdly silent in regard to their wanderings and explorations, especially when they extended to beautiful and fertile regions. It was part of their policy to discourage the immigration of those who were devoted to industrial pursuits and desirous to surround themselves with the refinements of civilization, as they anticipated therefrom competition and the general decline of their trade, which must inevitably follow upon the settlement of the country. Accordingly they represented the country between Lake Michigan and the Mississippi, as a wholly impracticable region, occupied exclusively by lakes and swamps. Indeed their pursuits, which lead them chiefly through the forbidding region lying in the angle between Lakes Michigan and Superior, would naturally lead them to form erroneous views respecting the country. However this may have been, it is certain that the early geographers adopted the views of the trappers and traders and embodied them in their works.

For the reasons referred to, explorations were discouraged, and it was not until some ten years after the Northwest Territory came into the possession of the United States that any effort was made to procure reliable information respecting the interior, and we have no positive knowledge that the Four Lake country was visited by white men before the year 1825, when it was probably traversed by Governor LEWIS CASS' exploring party, of which Hon. J. D. DOTY was Secretary. Attracted, doubtless, by the beauty of the spot as well as other considerations, Governor DOTY made another excursion hither in 1832, and in 1836, immediately after the establishment of the Territorial Government of Wisconsin, he, in company with Hon. S. T. MASON, of Detroit, bought the present site of the city for fifteen hundred dollars.

In February, 1837, the Territorial Legislature, then in session at Belmont, (which is now in Lafayette County) located the capital at Madison, and during the same month MOSES M. STRONG staked out the center of the village.

About the same time the General Government appointed J. D. DOTY, A. A. BIRD and J. F. O'NEIL as building commissioners to erect a capitol building.

On the 14th of April following, Mr. EBEN PECK arrived with his family and began building a log house, as a boarding house for the Commissioners and laborers. This house was the first built in Madison, and Mr. PECK was the first settler.

FIRST SETTLEMENT—BUILDING OF THE CAPITOL.

On the first of June, A. A. BIRD, Acting Commissioner, started from Milwaukee, (in company with about forty workmen,) with a train of four wagons loaded with provisions, tools and such other things as would be most needed. It would appear that the journey was not the most pleasant imaginable. There was no road, and the party were obliged to make one for themselves. They chopped their way through the forests, built long "corduroy" over swamps, and forded streams. They forded Rock River at Johnson's Rapids, near where Watertown now stands, and the Crawfish, at Milford. Nearly the whole journey was performed in the rain. The first time they saw the sun was just as they emerged from the openings upon Sun Prairie, which owes its name to that circumstance. What with rain and breaking roads and fording streams, the party did not arrive at their destination till the tenth of June, having been just ten days on the way. Among the party that accompanied BIRD were DARWIN CLARK, CHARLES BIRD, DAVID HYER, and JOHN PIERCE with his family. These settled in Madison, while most of the others went away after the completion of the Capitol.

On the same day that BIRD's party reached their destination, SIMEON MILLS arrived from Chicago, in the capacity of Deputy Postmaster, JOHN CATLIN having been previously appointed Postmaster at this point. Mr. MILLS immediately put up a block house, fifteen feet square, which he used for a post office and store. Mr. MILLS has therefore the honor to have been the first merchant of Madison. About the end of June or first of July, JOHN CATLIN reached here. He was the first lawyer in Madison.

On the Fourth of July, 1837, the corner stone of the Capitol was laid, with due form and ceremony, the occasion being celebrated by speeches and toasts.

About this time the first framed building—an office for the Building Commissioners—was completed. The boards for this as also for the first framed dwelling, built by Commissioner BIRD, were sawed by hand. This mode of lumbering, however, was not long in vogue, as in early autumn a steam mill was completed. This mill was located on the bank of Lake Mendota, a little west of the foot of Butler street. Much of the lumber used in building the Capitol was sawed here.

Owing to the lack of facilities the work upon the Capitol progressed but slowly. All tools as well as all materials, that could not be found in the vicinity, had to be hauled from Milwaukee, and this was a tedious operation for a considerable time, or at least until the streams and marshes were bridged, and the roads improved. The stone used was brought from the bluff, on the north side of Lake Mendota, on a flat boat or scow built for that purpose. Still the work went on as well as could be expected, in view of the difficulties encountered, and the building, though unfinished was in a condition to be used by the legislature in the winter of 1838 and 9. The building was not completed until the winter of 1845 and 6, and in fact the basement was not finished off until after the admission of the State to the Union, which occurred in 1848. The total cost of the building up to 1848 was $50,000, of which the General Government gave $40,000, in two appropriations of $20,000 each, and the Territory $10,000.

As this building has now been almost entirely destroyed, a brief description of it may not be inappropriate. The old Capitol occupied the space included within the interior angles of the new structure. The ground plan was one hundred and four by fifty-four feet, laid out to the cardinal points, the longer dimension being from north to south. The building was two stories high, with a basement the full size of the structure. It was traversed above and below, from east to West, by a hall twenty-four feet wide. On the first floor were six rooms, occupied by the Territorial officers, the U. S. District Court and the Public Library; the Library was separated from the Executive Offices by a narrow hall running from the main hall to the south end of the building. On the second floor were the halls of the Council and House of Representatives, the former on the south and the latter on the north side of the hall. West of these chambers were four rooms which were used for committee rooms or occupied by Territorial officers.

The basement was not finished off until after the admission of Wisconsin to the Union. As the business of the State increased, not only was the basement occupied, but rooms on the first and second floors were thrown together, and some of the State Officers secured places of business in the city. Not to notice these changes in detail, it will suffice to mention the arrangement of the building, just before the completion of the first wing of the new Capitol. On the first floor was the State Library, in which the Supreme Court held its sessions; the Executive office, consisting of two rooms, and the offices of Secretary of State and State Treasurer. On the second floor were the Senate and Assembly Halls. In the basement was the consultation room of the Judges of the Supreme Court and the office of the Superintendent of Public Property.

The old capitol was, after its completion, a far more substantial structure and possessed more architectural beauty than the present capitol of the older and more populous state of Indiana.

We will now resume the record of events in their chronological order. In September, 1837, Mr. JOHN STONER arrived with his family, being the third settler of Madison. During the same month divine services were held for the first time here by the Rev. Mr. STEBBINS, then Presiding Elder of the M. E. Church in the Northwest.

In the spring of 1838, SIMEON MILLS, A. A. BIRD, WM. H. WHEELER and others brought on their families and became permanent residents. During the summer of this year the City Hotel was built on the ground now occupied by the Vilas House, and during the same season the U. S. District Court held a session in its sitting room, Judge CHARLES DUNN presiding, and Judges FRAZIER and DAVID IRVIN associates. This building now stands on the southeast side of Clymer street, between Wisconsin Avenue and Pinckney street.

On the 8th of November, 1838, the Wisconsin Enquirer, edited and published by J. A. NOONAN, first appeared.

The first white child born in Madison was WISCONSINIA PECK, born in the fall of 1837. The second was MADISON STONER, born in 1838.

The first physician of Madison was ALMON LULL, who came in 1838.

During the second winter the population was one hundred. The Enquirer of May 29th, 1839, states that the village then contained two stores, three hotels, three groceries, a steam mill and twenty-six other buildings, in all thirty-five. From the same source we learn that the prices of provisions were as follows, during the winter of 1838-9: Corn $1.25, oats 75 cts., and potatoes $1.00 per bushel, butter 37 1-2 to 62 1-2 cts., and pork and beef 7 to 12 cts. per pound, and eggs 37 1-2 to 75 cts. per dozen.

The first celebration of the anniversary of the National Independence took place on the 4th of July, 1839. JOHN CATLIN was President, A. A. BIRD and SIMEON MILLS, Vice-Presidents, and E. BRIGHAM, Marshal. The Declaration of Independence was read by GEO. P. DELAPLAINE, and an oration was delivered by WM. T. STERLING, Esq.

In 1846 the first Church edifice was erected in Madison by the Congregational Society, on Webster street, between Washington Avenue and Main street.

In the winter of 1847-8 L. J. FARWELL began the improvement of the water-power at the outlet of Lake Mendota. By building a dam immediately at the outlet, by straightening the course of the Catfish, which was naturally very tortuous, and by removing a dam which had been built some years before a short distance below the outlet of Lake Monona, a head of between four and five feet was obtained, which, owing to the vast reservoir formed by Lake Mendota, afforded a power sufficient to drive six runs of stones of two feet diameter. The mill was not begun till the following season and did not go into operation till the fall of 1850.

This year also the line of telegraph was completed to this point and A. C. INGHAM and B. F. HOPKINS were the first operators.

The year 1849 was marked by no great improvements. A number of private residences were put up, and work upon the Court House begun. This structure, which will compare favorably with any other county building in the State, was not completed till the latter part of 1850.

The most notable improvements during the year 1851 were the fine stone dwellings of L. B. VILAS and J. T. MARSTON. That of Judge VILAS was at that time esteemed the best private residence in the State.

In 1852 the prospective railroad connection with Milwaukee began to tell upon the prosperity of Madison. The fine stone block on Pinckney street now occupied by the State Bank of Madison was erected by MARSHALL & ILLSLEY, and there was issued the first bank note under the general banking law of Wisconsin. SIMEON MILLS and JOHN CATLIN put up the large stone block on King street, known as MILL's block. The marshy tracts northeast and southwest of the Capitol were drained and on the one northeast of the Capitol a large number of trees were set out by Gov. FARWELL. A joint stock hotel company was formed, and the foundation of the Capitol (now the Vilas) House was laid, and the first story erected. Messrs. VILAS, FAIRCHILD and FARWELL bought it in this unfinished condition in the spring of 1853 and completed it the following fall.

In 1853 Col. J. C. FAIRCHILD built the stone block on the corner of Main and Pinckney streets, the Presbyterian and Baptist Societies built handsome and commodious church edifices, the Catholics laid the foundation of their Cathedral, and the Milwaukee and Mississippi Railroad Company began the construction of their depot buildings. At this time there were not more than half a dozen houses between the Court House and the depot grounds, and those grounds in common with the whole tract between the freight depot and the lake was covered with a dense thick-et of poplar and crab and plum trees.

The year 1854 was a memorable one in the history of Madison. The railroad bridge across Lake Monona which had been begun the previous year was completed in the spring and in May the first train of cars came across, and on Tuesday the important event—the connection of Madison with Milwaukee by railroad—was celebrated with great enthusiasm. The fact that three hundred and fifty private dwellings were put up this season will serve to show the effect of the railroad upon the prosperity of the place. Among the improvements of a public character we may mention the fire-proof County buildings which were erected this year, and Bruen's block, corner of Washington Avenue and Pinckney street.

In 1855 the Water Cure establishment on the south side of Lake Monona was erected. It was constructed so as to afford every facility for the most varied Hydropathic treatment, and it was hoped for this reason, as well as from the very great beauty and quietude of its location, that it would attract many patients. Either because of a want of faith in the system of Hydropathy or for some other reason, the institution met with no great success and has not for a long time been occupied as a Water Cure establishment.

A Gas Company was formed and gas works erected this season. The latter were located on the low ground N. E. of the Capitol. This enterprise in the hands of the company did not succeed as well as had been anticipated. The works were at length leased from the company by Hon. B. F. HOPKINS, of this city, under whose energetic and skillful management the gas was soon conducted through the whole city, and the enterprise became a decided success. Three fine business blocks were put up, one by Mr. MAIN, one by Mr. MILLS, and a third by Mr. NOLDEN. Among other fine residences built this season, the most notable were those of Mr. KENDALL, Mr. JARVIS and Gov. L. J. FARWELL. The last named is the large octagonal building on the north shore of Lake Monona, since known as Harvey Hospital. Much attention was bestowed, this year, upon side walks, many miles of which were laid in different parts of the city.

In 1856 Madison obtained a City Charter, and Col. J. C. FAIRCHILD was elected the first Mayor, and the following named gentlemen were elected the first Board of Aldermen:

1st Ward.—P. H. VAN BERGEN, THOMAS HERON and A. E. BROOKS.

2d Ward.—N. B. VAN SLYKE, D. J. POWERS and JOHN N. JONES.

3d Ward.—C. G. MAYERS, ADAM KRANTZ and A. S. WOOD.

4th Ward.—S. M. VAN BERGEN, JOS. HOBBS and TIMOTHY KINNEY.

WILLIAM N. SEYMOUR was elected the first Clerk.

The City Hall, on the corner of Wisconsin Avenue and Mifflin street, was built in 1857 and 1858, at an expense of $28,000.

During the year 1856, the stone block of Messrs. Fox and ATWOOD was erected on the corner of Main and Carroll streets, now known as YOUNG'S Block; P. H. VAN BERGEN'S Block, corner of Clymer and Pinckney streets; R. S. BACON'S Block, corner of Pinckney and Mifflin streets; BILLINGS & CARMAN'S Plough Factory, Engine Houses, and several fine residences.

In 1857, the Episcopal Church edifice, on the corner of Washington Avenue and Carroll street was commenced. The German Catholic Church, on Johnson street, between Carroll and Henry, and the German Evangelical Lutheran Church, on Main street, between Broome and Bassett streets, were erected.

For several years subsequent to 1857, but little was done in the way of public or business buildings. In 1858 the Railroad Company erected their new Depot and Hotel. In 1860, DUNNING'S and GILMAN'S Blocks were erected.

In 1862, KLAUBER and FAIRCHILD'S Block and BEMIS & BOUDLER'S Market, on Pinckney, between Main and Clymer streets, DEANS' Block, corner of King and Pinckney streets, and OTT'S and KLAUBER'S Blocks on Pinckney street, were erected. The Norwegian Evangelical Lutheran Church, on the corner of Hamilton and Butler streets, was also erected this year.

In 1863, MILLER'S Block, corner of Carroll and Hamilton streets, GROVES' rectifying establishment, on Webster street, and Turner's Hall, were built.

In 1864, SULLIVAN'S Block, on Carroll street, FAIRCHILD'S, on Main, between Wisconsin Avenue and Pinckney street, were built. The N. W. Railroad was completed to Madison, and Harvey Hospital was established in the mansion erected by Gov. FARWELL, and large additions made to the building. The German Episcopal

Methodist Church was built this year, on the corner of Mifflin and Webster streets.

In 1865, KOHNER'S beautiful block, on Main street, near Pinckney, was built, and Harvey Hospital was secured as an asylum for children of deceased soldiers. This year also was built "Immanuel's Church," by the German Evangelical Society, on the corner of Pinckney and Hamilton streets. Late in the fall of this year the first NICHOLSON pavement was laid, on Main street, on the south-east side of the Park.

The following is the population of the town at the several periods named:

MANUFACTURING.

The manufacturing interests of Madison are, as yet, not very extensive; the cost of motive power having operated to discourage enterprises in this line. In addition to the flouring mill built by Gov. FARWELL, as already mentioned, there is a steam flouring mill at the foot of East Canal street, built by Mr. F. BRIGGS, in — in connection with a distillery, and now owned by Messrs. MANNING & MERRELL. It has one run of stones and employs 6 hands.

Attached to the FARWELL mills, before mentioned, and now owned by Mr. BRIGGS, is a woolen factory driven by the water power, and recently put in operation. It contains the best modern machinery, employs from 16 to 20 hands and turns out 125 yards of woolen goods per day. This water power, it is thought, is still not more than half employed. Its capacity has never been fully tested and has probably been under rated, from the size of the stream which flows through the Lakes. By the immense reservoir afforded by the Lake, large quantities of freshet water is stored up for after use, and thus the power must be increased far beyond that which would be afforded by the natural flow of the stream. The first iron foundry was built on the corner of State and Gorham streets, by W. SKINNER, in 1851. It was sold by Mr. SKINNER, in 1859, to Mr. W. S. HUNTINGTON, and by him sold to the present owners, N. L. ANDREWS & Co., in 1864. The firm manufactures castings and machinery, and employs from ten to fifteen hands.

The foundry of E. W. SKINNER & Co. is located on the shore of Lake Mendota, near the University grounds. The original building was erected for a steam saw mill in 1853, by DANIEL GORHAM. The mill was bought by I. E. BROWN in 1856, and changed to a foundry. It was purchased by P. H. TURNER in 1859, and by him sold to E. W. SKINNER in 1860. In 1864 O. S. WILLEY became a partner, and in December, 1865, the name of Hon. S. D. HASTINGS was added to the firm. The business of the establishment was at first directed chiefly to the manufacture of reapers and grain drills, and in May or June of 1862, the first car load of reapers was shipped out of Madison. It has passed from the manufacture of reapers and grain drills to the manufacture of sugar mills. During the past two years it has kept a force of fifty men employed, besides canvassers all through the Northwest. Sugar mills are shipped from this establishment to all the eastern and middle States. The revenue tax on their manufactures amounts to about $600 per month. As an indication of the growth of the sugar mill business and the great extension of the Sorghum culture, it is interesting to note that this establishment built in 1861, one mill; in 1862, 11; in 1863, 100; in 1864, 250, and in 1865 upwards of 500. It is believed that these mills will be found as useful in the manufacture of cane sugar as in the manufacture of Sorgum, and this company propose to extend their trade to the sugar-growing regions of the South, and we doubt not they will receive a rich reward for their enterprise. Indeed, if the North would turn its attention to the manufacture of sugar mills and the like, for the South, and let the South raise our sugar, we should, with less labor, get a much better article of sweetening than the miserable pumpkin molasses which we manage to extort from the bastard cane called Sorgum. In the line of sugar, the sun of the South will do for us, gratuitously, what no amount of labor can ever accomplish in the North.

X The "Capital Iron Works" are located at the corner of Wilson and Ingersoll streets and owned by J. E. BAKER, who commenced operations in 1865. The establishment is devoted to the manufacture of agricultural implements and repairing all kinds of machinery—and employs ten hands.

X The first planing mill was built by HENRY C. PARKER, on the corner of Wilson and Blair streets, in 1852.

X In 1856 a planing mill and sash and door factory was built by JAMES CAMPBELL, on Washington Avenue, between the Capitol and the R. R. Depot. It is now owned by ASA BURGESS, and employs ten hands. The foregoing comprise the principal manufacturing establishments in which machinery is employed.

The most extensive establishments for the manufacture of cabinet ware are those of Mr. DARWIN CLARK, the oldest, FISHER & REYNOLDS, and J. M. HAIGHT, successor of CHURCH & HAWLEY. The last named establishment at one time, when carried on by CHURCH & HAWLEY, did the largest business, employing steam power upon some parts of their work.

It is believed that when the vast beds of Peat which lie in the vicinity of Madison come to be worked and the product brought into market, it will so cheapen fuel as to give a new impulse to the manufacturing interests of the town.

WISCONSIN STATE AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The Wisconsin State Agricultural Society was organized at Madison, on the 12th of March, 1851, since which time it has continued in the active discharge of its important functions, as the guardian of the industrial interests of the State. Its Annual Exhibitions and published volumes have awakened an interest in agricultural improvement, diffused a large amount of valuable information among the people, stimulated all branches of industry to the attainment of a higher degree of excellence, and thus largely contributed to the progress of the State; while, at the same time, it has served to give our young commonwealth a creditable industrial position among the States of the Union.

EXHIBITIONS.

Since its organization it has held eleven General Exhibitions, awarded and paid scarcely less than $30,000 in premiums, distributed, large quantities of valuable seeds and cuttings, collected a valuable library, and published six highly creditable volumes of Transactions, hundreds of copies of which have been distributed in other States and in foreign lands. The following is an exhibit of the place and date of its Fairs, the number of entries and the amount of receipts and expenditures for the several years since 1850.

In 1861, on the breaking out of the War of the Rebellion, the Society patriotically tendered its expensively and handsomely fitted grounds at Madison (since known as Camp Randall) to the State, for its use as a military encampment, and, as a consequence, during the continuance of the war, until 1864, was unable to resume the holding of its annual exhibitions.

Expenditures,.....	8,330 52

At these several Exhibitions addresses were delivered in the order of occurrence, by JOHN H. LATHROP, LL. D., Hon. LEVI HUBBELL, Gen. WM. R. SMITH, Hon. E. W. EDGERTON, Pres't, Hon. HARLOW S. ORTON, Hon. A. C. BARRY, Prof. J. B. TURNER, of Illinois, Hon. CASSIUS M. CLAY, of Kentucky, Hon. ABRAHAM LINCOLN, of Illinois, Gov. A. W. RANDALL, Ex-Gov. JOSEPH A. WRIGHT, of Indiana, and by Hon. J. R. DOOLITTLE, Hon. TIM. O. HOWE, Gov. J. T. LEWIS, Ex-Gov. RANDALL and Major General W. T. SHERMAN.

In 1862, in view of the fact that the Society was unable to hold its accustomed Exhibitions, the standing appropriation of $3,000 per annum from the State was withdrawn; so that now the Society is compelled to rely on its own resources. It is steadily growing in popularity, however, and there is scarcely room for doubt, that the State will acknowledge the importance of the interests it so ably represents by reinstating the appropriation; thus placing it in the power of the Society to extend its labors and increase its usefulness.

THE LEADING OFFICERS OF THE SOCIETY

Since its organization have been as follows:

Presidents—Hon. E. W. DRURY, Fond du Lac; Hon. HENRY M. BILLINGS, Highland; Hon. E. W. EDGERTON, Summit; HARVEY DURKEE, Esq., Kenosha; Hon. J. F. WILLARD, Janesville; Col. B. R. HINKLEY, Summit; and Hon. DAVID WILLIAMS, Springfield.

Secretaries—A. C. INGHAM and ROYAL BUCK, A. C.

INGHAM, GEO. TIFFANY, Hon. D. J. POWERS, Dr. J. W. HOYT, all of Madison.

Treasurers—Hon. CHAUNCY ABBOTT, Hon. SIMEON MILLS, SAMUEL MARSHALL, Esq., Hon. D. J. POWERS, and Hon. DAVID ATWOOD, all of Madison.

THE OFFICE OF THE SOCIETY,

Known as the "State Agricultural Rooms," is, at present in Porter's Block, but will be removed in April, 1866, to the State Capitol; the north side of the west wing having just been assigned to it by the Legislature. It is the design of the Society when thus established in these more spacious apartments to zealously carry forward the work of forming a valuable collection of the ores, building stones, timbers, plants, agricultural products, &c., &c., of Wisconsin; thus illustrating, in an interesting and very instructive manner, the resources and industrial progress of the State.

STATE UNIVERSITY.

This institution is indebted for its endowment to the munificence of the General Government, which granted in trust for University purposes to the State of Wisconsin, seventy-two sections, or 46,080 acres of land. The State accepted the trust and embodied in its constitution the following clause:

"Provision shall be made by law for the establishment of a State University at or near the seat of State government, and for connecting with the same, from time to time, such colleges in different parts of the State as the interests of education may require."

In pursuance of this requirement the first State Legislature, held in the summer of 1848, vested the government of the University in a Board of Regents, to consist of a president and twelve members, to be elected by the Legislature and hold office for the term of six years. This legislature also located the University in Dane County, and appointed a commission for the sale of the University lands and the investment of the proceeds.

The first meeting of the Board of Regents was held October 7, 1848, at which time it was decided to open a Preparatory Department for the reception of pupils, in February, 1849. J. W. STERLING was elected Professor of Mathematics and appointed to take charge of the Preparatory Department at the time designated, at a salary of $500 per annum. The present site was selected, and a committee appointed to negotiate the purchase, which was consummated the following year. The tract, which was bought of Mr. ANSON VANDERPOOL, was the N. W. 1-4 of Sec. 23, T. 7, R. 9, excepting Block 9, of the village of Madison. The price stipulated was $5 per acre and the taxes of the year 1849.

At the meeting above mentioned Hon. E. ROOT was appointed agent of the Board, to procure information touching the organization of the University, and to report drafts of plans for buildings. In furtherance of these objects he was authorized to visit the University of Michigan. At the same time JOHN H. LATHROP, L. L. D., was elected Chancellor, and his salary fixed at $2,000.

At a special meeting of the Board, held Nov. 21, 1849, the several chairs of instruction were established and defined, action was taken with a view to securing a cabinet of Natural Science, and a Normal Department was instituted, in which instruction was required to be given to teachers' classes during five months in each year.

Jan. 15, 1850, a plan for University buildings, drafted by J. F. RAGUE, architect, was submitted to the Board. A central edifice and four dormitories were embraced within the scope of this plan. The central building was to be 150 by 60 feet on the ground, and to contain thirteen public rooms and two dwellings for officers. Of the dormitories, two were to be on each side of an avenue, two hundred and forty feet broad, leading from the front of the main structure in the direction of the Capitol. Each dormitory was to be 110 by 40 feet on the ground, four stories high, and to contain thirty-two studies, each 14 by 15 feet, and each study to have attached two bedrooms and a wood-room. It was estimated that these buildings, together with sundry improvements to the grounds, would cost about $90,000. The actual cost of two dormitories and the University Hall is shown by the books to have been $101,631.57. The plan was so far approved that the erection of one dormitory in accordance with it was authorized.

Jan. 16, 1850, JOHN H. LATHROP, L. L. D., was inaugurated into the office of Chancellor. The day following Gen. RUFUS KING was authorized to prepare and issue a circular for the purpose of obtaining donations of books for the Library.

At the time designated by the Board, Prof. J. W. STERLING opened the preparatory school in the building owned by the Madison Academy, opposite the Presbyterian Church, on Wisconsin Avenue. The lower story of this building was occupied from February to August, 1850; and here the first collegiate class completed their preparation. In the fall of 1850 the first dormitory building was completed, and the third session of the preparatory school was held there. The first class then entered upon the college curriculum and Chancellor LATHROP began the discharge of his duties as instructor.

In July, 1850, the Board directed that a part of the Vanderpool purchase, not needed for a site, be laid out into village lots and put in market. Enough was realized from this operation to replace the original cost of the tract and yield a profit of $7,682.70 besides.

During the same year a valuable donation to the Library was made by Hon. HENRY DODGE, then U. S. Senator from this State, and Chancellor LATHROP made a conditional donation of his private library to the institution.

Aug. 5, 1852, O. M. CONOVER was elected to the Chair of Ancient Languages. Mr. CONOVER had been connected with the University, in the capacity of tutor, since the fall of 1850. At the time of the election of Mr. CONOVER the instructional force was increased by the employment of S. H. CARPENTER as tutor.

In September, 1853, Prof. E. S. CARR was employed to deliver a course of lectures on Chemistry and its application to the Arts.

In February, 1854, S. PEARL LATHROP was elected Professor of Chemistry and Natural History. At the same time an appropriation of $500 was made to purchase Chemical apparatus, $400 to purchase Philosophical apparatus, and $200 for the increase of the Library.

September 7, 1854, DANIEL READ was elected Professor of Mental Philosophy, Logic, Rhetoric and English Literature, though he did not enter upon the discharge of his duties until August, 1855.

July 24, 1855, Prof. E. S. CARR was elected to the Chair of Chemistry and Natural History to supply the vacancy created by the death of Prof. LATHROP. Professors CARR and READ delivered inaugural addresses on the same occasion before the legislature in the winter of 1855-6.

In February, 1855, the Department of Medicine was ordained by the Board and Dr. ALFRED L. CASTLEMAN was elected Professor of the Theory and Practice of Medicine. The July following Dr. D. COOPER AYRES was elected Professor of Obstetrics, &c., and Dr. GEO. D. WILBUR, Professor of Materia Medica. In January, 1856, Dr. L. W. THAYER, Jr., was elected Professor of Anatomy, and in July of the same year the following additions were made to the Medical Faculty: Dr. JOSEPH HOBBS, Professor of Surgery; Dr. ALEXANDER SCHUE, Professor of Institutes of Medicine; Dr. J. MERCER McCABE, Demonstrator of Anatomy. Dr. CASTLEMAN, at the same time, resigned the Chair of Theory and Practice of Medicine, but was re-elected in January, 1857. Dr. McCABE seems to have declined the honor conferred in electing him Demonstrator of Anatomy, and at the time of Dr. CASTLEMAN'S re-election the void was filled by the election of Dr. JAMES H. LEWIS.

The Medical Department would appear to have perished for want of nutriment. It was thrown almost entirely upon its own resources from birth. At one time an appropriation of $2,000 was voted for its benefit, but after $600 of this amount had been drawn the appropriation was rescinded, and from that time the Board seems to have done little else in regard to the Department of Medicine than to institute semi-annual inquiries as to the use made of the $600 above referred to, and request the parties who drew the same to return it to the treasury. Aside from a course of lectures delivered by Dr. CASTLEMAN no instruction was given under the ordinance establishing this department. Something akin to this was revived in 1859, when the Chair of Physiology and Hygiene was established, not as a separate department, but simply as an accessory to the common course. DAVID B. REID was elected to fill this Chair, with a salary of $1,500. This gentleman remained something more than a year when the specialty became fully ventilated and the Chair was soon after vacated.

The Department of Law enjoyed a still more ephemeral existence. It was established by ordinance of the Board, in January, 1857, and Hons. E. G. RYAN and TIMOTHY O. HOWE were elected to fill two of the Chairs. It is not of record whether these gentlemen accepted the appointments or not. We find a minute to the effect that at the time of their election the sum of $500 was appropriated to the department. And there the matter ended.

In 1854, the second dormitory was erected, and was ready for use during the fall term of that year.

July 1855, Dr. J. P. FUCHS was elected Professor of Modern Languages. He occupied this Chair one year, when, on the 25th of September, 1856, his resignation was accepted. January 29, 1857, Dr. AUGUST KURSTIENER was elected to fill the vacancy. In November, 1857, DANIEL READ was elected Professor of Normal Instruction. No further changes in the instructional force were made until June, 1858, when a general reorganization was instituted, and in July all the Chairs were declared vacant, Chancellor LATHROP's resignation was accepted, and the following Faculty was elected:

HENRY BARNARD, L. L. D., Chancellor.

J. H. LATHROP, L. L. D., Professor of Ethical and Political Sciences.

DANIEL READ, Professor of Mental Philosophy, &c.

J. W. STERLING, Professor of Mathematics, &c.

J. D. BUTLER, Professor of Ancient Languages, &c.

E. S. CARR, Professor of Chemistry, &c.

J. G. PICKARD, Professor of Modern Languages.

By this action Professors CONOVER and KURSTEINER were thrown out and Professors BUTLER and PICKARD chosen in their stead. The Chair of Modern Languages again changed hands in July, 1860, when Professor J. P. FUCHS was elected to fill that professorship.

On the 27th of July, 1859, Chancellor BARNARD was inaugurated. In June, 1860, he placed his resignation in the hands of the Board. The Board, however did not accept until January, 1861. In the mean time the Chancellor was occupied in closing up his affairs at the east, or detained there by sickness, so that he was not at any time actually engaged in giving instruction in the University, nor did he for any considerable period engage at all in the performance of the duties of his office.

The University was without a Chancellor from the time of Dr. BARNARD'S resignation until June, 1865, when Hon. J. L. PICKARD was elected Chancellor. He however did not accept, and the office is still vacant. During all this period the internal administration has been confided to Prof. J. W. STERLING, who was made Dean of the Faculty, in June, 1860, and continued in that capacity till June, 1865, when he was elected Vice Chancellor. This last honor, however, seems to have been a barren one, since it carried with it no extension of powers. Indeed, from the first the Deanship has been a post of honor, responsibility and onerous duties, with no corresponding or adequate reward.

In March, 1863, a Normal Department, for the benefit of both sexes was opened for the reception of students, under the charge of C. H. ALLEN, who, in the January preceding had been elected Professor of the Theory and Practice of Elementary Instruction. In June, 1865, Prof.

ALLEN tendered his resignation, to take effect at the close of the academic year then current. His resignation was accepted, and the department passed into the hands of Prof. J. C. PICKARD. This branch of the University flourished under the administration of Prof. ALLEN, so far at least as numbers are concerned, and it continues to give promise of abundant success.

The policy of admitting young ladies to the University at first met with no little opposition on the part of the alumni of the institution and those pursuing the collegiate course, who supposed it would detract from the dignity of the University. This hostility, however, speedily abated as it became apparent that the new policy was conferring in the respectability of numbers benefits more than counterpoising the offense it gave to scholastic exclusiveness.

It has been stated that efforts were made at an early day to secure donations to the Library. These efforts were to some extent successful, but the supposed wealth of the institution doubtless had the effect to restrain public liberality, and the donations of Senator DODGE and the conditional gift of his private library by Chancellor LATHROP, were the only important results of the attempt to secure a library by donations. Owing to the condition of the University finances, appropriations for library purposes have been quite limited. So far as they appear upon the minutes of the Board they are as follows:

February, 1854 .....	$ 200 00
January, 1857 .....	1,250 00	1,450 00
July, 1859, (annual) .....	800 00
Annual appropriation up to July, 1865, would amount to .....		1,800 00
Total to date .....		$3,250 00

It is stated that for two or three years past the annual appropriation has not been drawn, so that from six to nine hundred dollars should be deducted from the above amount, leaving the actual amount expended for library purposes only $2,350 to $2,650. It should be stated that the Board has felt at liberty to make sparing appropriations for this purpose because the State and Historical Libraries have been so readily accessible to both students and professors.

The cabinet of Natural History, &c., has received more attention than the Library. There were no other collections in the place to which students could have recourse, and this created a necessity for more attention and liberality than even bestowed upon the library. Through the active enterprise of Hon. H. A. TENNEY and the liberal spirit of the Board a considerable collection had been made prior to 1856, at which time an appropriation of $600 a year for two years was made by the Board. In 1857 Hon. L. J. FARWELL presented the somewhat valuable collection, known as the Madison Museum, to the University. In 1859 the total amount that had been expended in this direction was $5,293.61. Of this amount a considerable portion was used in the purchase of chemical and philosophical apparatus, so that the entire outlay for cabinet proper did not probably exceed $3,500. Since that time it does not appear that any considerable appropriations have been made for cabinet purposes, and the entire expense of the collections to the present time has probably not been greatly in excess of the sum of $5,000.

The collection comprises enough specimens in mineralogy, geology and natural history, to render the cabinet of great value to the student. It is doubtless the best public collection in the State, though it is of course still deficient in many respects.

The University has a fine assortment of chemical and philosophical apparatus sufficiently extensive to illustrate most subjects with which the student has to deal. The importance of a laboratory large enough to afford students an opportunity to become expert manipulators has long been appreciated, and such facilities will undoubtedly be afforded so soon as the finances shall warrant.

In 1857 a contract was entered into with JAMES CAMPBELL to erect the central edifice, for the sum of $36,500. The building was, in its principal features, in accordance with the original plan submitted in 1850 and drafted by Mr. RAGUE. It was completed in 1858. It contains the lecture and recitation rooms, with their apparatus, the library, cabinet, chapel, and the halls of the literary societies.

The structure would doubtless prove too small in case the University should flourish at all in proportion to the expectations of its friends or to the larger and more prosperous institutions of the country. It is, however, a rather imposing structure, and adequate to the present wants of the institution. It occupies the highest ground in the vicinity of Madison and its summit commands an extensive and lovely prospect.

The original endowment, as before stated, was made by the General Government, and consisted of seventy-two sections of land. At a subsequent time Congress made a new grant of the same amount of land, which would raise the endowment to one hundred and forty five sections, or 92,160 acres. At the close of the year 1859, 74,617 acres had been sold at an average price of about $3.00 per acre, yielding a fund of $224,536.51. To this is to be added the amount realized from the sale of grounds adjoining the site, or $7,682.70, making the gross proceeds of sales up to that date $232,219.21.

The total indebtedness in June, 1860, was $95,146.81

It appears from the report of the Secretary of State for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1864, the entire debt had been cleared off before the end of that year, but the showing in other respects is not so favorable. It appears that about 17,000 acres of land still remained unsold, while some 23,000 acres previously sold had been forfeited for non-payment of interest. The productive fund was thus reduced to $157,170.25. Should the 40,000 acres now on hand be disposed of as advantageously as was the balance of the original estate the productive fund would be swelled to about $280,000, which, at seven per cent. would yield a yearly revenue of $19,600. As it is the revenue amounts to only about $11,000, and this is to be reduced by deducting $1,000 paid the State for administering the fund, leaving only $10,000 available for University purposes. It may be safe to add to this income $2,000 derived from tuition fees, &c., making a total revenue of $12,000. After paying the salaries of six professors and two or three assistants, purchasing fuel for three large buildings at the high prices now prevailing, and making outlays for necessary repairs, it is impossible that there should remain any considerable surplus to expend in enlarging the library and cabinet and procuring the needed apparatus and accessories of the lecture room.

Were the fund yielding $20,000—the extreme limit—and were there five hundred students, paying $6,000 annually, the revenue would still be so small that the institution would fail to meet the extravagant expectations of those who greatly wonder why the State University does not compare in advantages with the great colleges of the land. It is to be hoped therefore that neither the State nor private citizens will long excuse themselves from the exercise of a large generosity on the ground of the supposed wealth of the institution.

It may be interesting to note the intentions of the framers of our constitution respecting the University. They hoped and meant that it should eventually become a University proper, devoted to professional instruction and to the advancement of such as desired to push their scientific studies beyond the limit established in colleges. They further intended to make all colleges in the State tributary and in a manner under the supervision of the University. This is readily gathered from the clause before quoted which declares that "Provision shall be made by law for the establishment of a State University, * * and for connecting therewith, from time to time, such colleges in different parts of the State as the interests of education may require." It is part of the private history of the convention that this matter was carefully canvassed, in committee, and a plan was formed which was designed to give the University a kind of authority over other institutions of learning in the State, and to render its endorsement an object of ambition to all who might be pursuing a liberal course in any college within the State; and this plan was embodied so far as it could be with propriety, in the clause of the constitution above quoted.

For some reason the legislature seems to have lost sight of this design, and merely provided that the Board of Regents might receive colleges into connection with the University upon application of their boards of trustees.

It has probably not been at any time practicable to carry out the design of the convention to the exclusion of the college studies, as there have been no adequate sources from which it could draw students, for the professional and advanced scientific course. It is equally true that the finances have never warranted an attempt to sustain the double character of a college and a University, so that it has been hitherto as it is likely to remain for some time to come more strictly a college than a University.

Should the institution prosper financially and should the legislature take such action as would place it at the head of the educational interests of the State in point of authority, the hopes and purposes of its founders may yet be realized. As a college it well deserves the cordial support and fostering care of the people, and these it must receive if it is ever to reach the eminence it ought to occupy as a seat of learning.

GENERAL EDUCATION.

The School House is one of the first objects of concern in every "Yankee" community, though in its structure there is rarely that care bestowed upon its arrangements which the health and comfort of the pupils demand. The first school house in Madison was a small wood building on the corner of Pinckney and Dayton streets, below the present State Journal office, built in 1839. It was occupied for a time as a school room and then as a dwelling, and has disappeared. The second school house was the brick one still standing and occupied, built on Butler street, near Washington Avenue, N. E. of the Capitol Park. It was built in 1845, and was a large and commodious one for the time when it was erected. While little was done to provide public schools previous to the organization of the State government, the wants of common school education were well supplied by the enterprise of individuals in establishing private and select schools which were generally patronized in preference to the public school.

In 1846-7 the brick Academy was built on the corner of Wisconsin Avenue and Johnson streets, and for several years was occupied as a Female Academy, under the care of Miss MATILDA HOWELL.

In 1855, the legislature enacted a law establishing a Board of Education for the village of Madison, and on the 20th of February, of the same year, the first board was elected, consisting of SIMEON MILLS, W. B. JARVIS, L. J. FARWELL, J. Y. SMITH, D. H. WRIGHT and W. A. WHITE. The Board established three grades of schools: the High School, the Intermediate and the Primary, under the immediate supervision of a Superintendent and the general supervision of the Board, and the system has continued, without material change, to the present time. The Board was authorized by the act of incorporation to borrow $10,000 on the credit of the Village, and the Board of Trustees of the Village was authorized to issue bonds for the amount, for the purpose of erecting Union school houses. But the Board of Education were unable to induce the Board of Trustees to issue the bonds, the latter being of the opinion that $10,000 was a larger debt than the village ought to incur at one time, and nothing was done in the way of building that year.

In 1856, the village having become a city, the Common Council appropriated $24,000 for the erection of school houses in the four wards of the city. In 1857 large two story school houses were built in the first and third wards, containing the usual appartments of what have been called Union School houses. The total cost of these buildings, (built of stone) was $9,500. The city finances soon became so involved that further building was suspended and the second and fourth wards are still without these facilities. The brick Academy before mentioned, has, however, been purchased by the Board of Education and used for the accommodation of the High School.

It appears from the report of the Board, for the year ending Dec., 1863, that the total valuation of school property in the city, including buildings, furniture and grounds, was then $26,791.62. The number of seats in all the public school buildings was 709, while the number of pupils enrolled for the fall term of 1863, was 826. It is intended by the Board to erect a new school house in the Fourth Ward, during the summer of 1866, which shall be superior to either of the others, and which will increase the total number of seats to about 1000. For the names of the present Board and other school officers, see Directory.

Among the private educational enterprises, that of Mrs. TAPPAN is worthy of note. Though other studies have much of the time formed a part of the course of instruction, the study of music, vocal and instrumental, has been the prominent feature of her school and has usually embraced a large number of pupils. Her superior qualifications both as a pianist and vocalist have rendered her school deservedly popular and highly useful.

Miss GRISWOLD, for a time connected with Mrs. TAPPAN, still conducts a private school, with good success, in the large brick house on the corner of Washington Avenue and Butler street, two blocks N. E. from the Park.

The Catholics have a large and flourishing school at their fine stone church, on Main street.

COMMERCIAL COLLEGE.

This School was opened by Mr. R. S. BACON, in January, 1856, who sold to Mr. D. H. TULLIS, in the Fall of 1858. It was continue without interruption, under the care of Mr. TULLIS, until early in 1865, when by mutual arrangement, it passed into the hands of Messrs. WORTHINGTON and WARNER, by whom it is still continued, in YOUNG's block, corner of Main and Carroll streets. Like other institutions of the kind, the main object is, to give a thorough course in the science of book-keeping, preparatory to entering upon mercantile and other business pursuits. In addition to book keeping, instruction is also given in the art of operating the telegraph, and occasional lectures on Commercial Law are added. To make these schools worthy of the name they bear, and to secure to young men a thorough business education, students should not only be perfectly trained as accountants, but well drilled in the main principles of Commercial law and political economy. Those who propose to engage in trade, should, of all others, next to the statesman, make themselves familiar with the laws of trade in the economic sense. It would enable them, in most cases, to shun the rocks upon which so many fortunes bravely made, have finally been wrecked.

HOSPITAL FOR THE INSANE.

This institution is located on the north bank of Lake Mendota, three miles from the city by a direct line across the lake, and six miles by the carriage road. The grounds embrace one hundred acres purchased by the State from L. J. FARWELL, in 1854. By an act of the Legislature, approved March 30th of the same year, the Governor was authorized to appoint Commissioners to prepare plans and let a contract for the erection of a Lunatic Asylum, substantially upon the plan of the Asylum in Worcester, Mass., both in respect to design and expense.

In pursuance of this act, Gov. BARSTOW appointed S. G. BUGH, D. S. VITTUM and A. S. SANBORN, Commissioners, and Dr. G. R. McLANE was appointed Superintendent. On the 31st of October the contract for the erection of the building was awarded to ANDREW PROUDFIT, and the work was commenced. Upon the assembling of the Legislature of 1855, however, the question was raised as to whether the Commissioners had acted in conformity with the law, either in respect to the plan of the building, the cost of construction, or the manner of letting the contract, and the whole subject was referred to a select committee for investigation.

This committee found that the plan adopted by the Commissioners was much more extensive than had been authorized, and bore no particular resemblance to the Worcester Asylum, which the legislature had adopted as a pattern. They also found that the work had been contracted by the piece, with no footings or statement of the aggregate amount, and consequently the total amount for which the State would be liable under the contract, was entirely uncertain. The committee procured the assistance of architects and builders, who made an estimate of the cost of the proposed structure, upon the basis of the rates agreed upon in the contract, and the result of their figures was $452,140.42, while the cost of the Worcester Asylum, to which they were limited, was less than $100,000. The result of the investigation was, that the legislature annulled the contract; and here the question of an Asylum for the Insane rested for two years.

By an act approved March 6th, 1857, the enterprise was revived under the name of Hospital for the Insane. Under this act, L. J. FARWELL, JOHN P. MCGREGOR and LEVI STERLING were appointed by the Governor as Commisssioners, with authority to mature plans and contract for the erection of a building, the cost being limited to $100,000. The Commissioners not being restricted to any model, adopted a plan which could be built in part and subsequently extended as the demand for accommodations increased. They called for proposals for the erection of such portion of the plan as they supposed would come within the expense limited by the legislature, and which they estimated would accommodate 75 patients, and the contract was awarded to NELSON MCNIEL, at $73,000. This contract was exclusive of certain arrangements which entered into the plan and which the Commissioners supposed could be added for the balance of the sum limited.

Mr. MCNIEL progressed but slowly with his contract, and finally failed entirely and threw it up, which caused much delay in the completion of the building, and it was not until some time in 1860, that it was turned over to the Board of Trustees, for the reception of patients, and then it was found that provision had been made for the accommodation of only 32—the Commissioners seeming to have arranged the apartments not so much with a view to furnish accommodations for the unfortunate persons for whom the Institution was designed, as to fit up a fine establishment for those who were to have them in charge.

On the 20th of May, 1860, the Trustees elected Dr. JOHN P. CLEMENT, as Medical Superintendent, and he appointed Dr. JOHN FAVILL as his assistant, and the first patient was admitted to the Hospital on the 14th of July, of the same year. It had already been ascertained that the number of insane persons in the State, of both sexes, exceeded 200, and the Trustees were obliged to apportion the few that could be accommodated, among the counties presenting the most urgent cases, from one to three to each, while many counties were necessarily excluded entirely. Keen was the disappointment of many who had friends bereft of reason, and who had been looking long and anxiously to the completion of the Hospital, when, as they supposed, they would have a right, as citizens of the State, to share in its munificence. In view of the pressing demand, the Medical Superintendent, with the Executive Committee of the Board of Trustees, consisting of Dr. A. I. BENNETT, SIMEON MILLS and THOMAS HOOD, set about rearranging and economizing the apartments, and so successful were they in their efforts that on the 17th of December, of the same year, 89 patients had been received and only eleven discharged.

Still the capacity of the Institution was far from meeting the wants of those suffering from mental disease, and by an act approved March 11, 1861, the legislature authorized the enlargement of the building, by which its capacity was considerably more than doubled. In this case the law wisely placed the work in charge of the Trustees, with authority to choose an Executive Committee to act for the Board, and Dr. A. I. BENNETT, SIMEON MILLS and THOMAS HOOD were appointed said committee. The legislature appropriated to the object $40,000. The contract for the mason work was awarded to JOSEPH PARKINS of Dane County, at $20,500, and the carpenter and joiner work to MESSRS. BRADLEY & NORTON, of Racine, at about $9,000. This was exclusive of heating and gas apparatus, sewerage, &c., which absorbed the balance of the appropriation. In this instance the State was more fortunate than in the former ones in deriving benefits commensurate with the money appropriated. The work was executed with a good degree of promptness and in the summer of 1862 was ready for the accommodation of patients.

In April, 1864, Dr. A. H. VAN NORSTRAND was elected Medical Superintendent in place of Dr. CLEMENT, and now holds that position, with Dr. J. W. SAWYER as assistant physician. Mrs. MARY C. HOLLIDAY has occupied the position of Matron from the opening of the Institution to the present time.

It appears from the report of the Superintendent for the year 1865 that there were admitted to the Hospital, during the year, 87, of whom 44 were males and 43 females. The whole number receiving the benefits of the Hospital during the year was 257. Discharged during the year, 80; leaving in the Institution, on the 1st of October, 1865, 177—89 males and 88 females.

The capacity of the Institution is still very inadequate for the accommodation of all who need care and treatment, and, it being a Hospital rather than an Asylum, the hopeless cases must often be returned to their friends or to the County poor houses or jails to make room for more recent and hopeful cases. The census of 1860 shows that there were then 540 insane or idiotic persons in the State, and the number must be considerably greater at the present time, while the present accommodations are scarcely sufficient for 200.

During the legislative session of 1865, numerous petitions were presented to the legislature asking that further provisions be made for this unfortunate class, and a bill for the enlargement of the present Hospital passed the Senate, but failed in the Assembly in consequence of a disagreement amongst members as to the relative expediency of enlarging the present establishment or building a new Hospital in some other section of the State. The subject is now before the legislature of 1866, and it is earnestly hoped that considerations of humanity will so far preponderate over sectional interest that the much needed provision will be made, in some form and on a scale which will make the Institution or Institutions not only the resort for temporary treatment, but the Asylum—the home of the most unfortunate class of sufferer, the hopelessly insane.

STATE HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

We find the germ of this Society in a small meeting of citizens of Madison and persons from other parts of the State, held at the American Hotel, in Madison, Jan. 29, 1849, of which J. Y. SMITH was Chairman and E. M. WILLIAMSON, Secretary. This meeting resolved to call a general meeting in the Senate Chamber the next evening to consider the expediency of organizing a State Historical Society. At the meeting on the 30th, Prof. ELEAZER ROOT was called to the Chair, and Gen. WM. R. SMITH chosen Secretary. A constitution was formed and adopted, and numerously signed by those present, after which the Society proceeded to the election of officers. NELSON DEWEY, the Governor of the State, was elected the first President, I. A. LAPHAM Corresponding Secretary, and Rev. CHARLES LORD, Recording Secretary. One Vice-President was also chosen for each of the 25 counties then organized.

The Society held annual meetings at which able historic discourses were delivered, but during the first five years of its existence it accomplished next to nothing in the way of historical collections—so little that in 1854 the library contained only 50 volumes, and all but three of these were State laws, journals and documents, and were deposited in a small cupboard 3 by 4 feet.

In 1853 the Society was incorporated by an act of the legislature, and in 1854 it was reorganized under the charter. In the reorganization Gen. W. R. SMITH was elected President, LYMAN C. DRAPER Corresponding Secretary, and Rev. CHARLES LORD Recording Secretary. This formed an important era in the history of the Society. Under the energetic and untiring efforts of the Corresponding Secretary, Mr. DRAPER, it made rapid progress from this time onward, in the objects for which it was formed—the securing of Historical Collections. He opened correspondence with other Societies and with individuals throughout the country, soliciting donations and exchanges from every available source as well as written contributions and relics relating to the history of our own State, and the result was that collections rapidly accumulated. At every meeting of the Executive Committee, which recurred several times in a year, the members were surprised at the amount of labor accomplished and its visible results. Small appropriations have been made from the State Treasury for the purchase of such works as could not be obtained by donation or exchange, and these have been expended with great care and discrimination and added much to the value and interest of the collection.

In 1855, DANIEL S. DURRIE, Esq., was chosen Librarian of the Society, but for some two years his duties were but nominal and rendered without compensation. In 1856 it became obvious that the Society must have rooms specially devoted to its use and a small apartment in the basement of the Baptist Church, on Carroll street was first obtained and soon it required and obtained the use of nearly the whole basement of the church. In 1857 the collections had become so large and of so much interest that Mr. DURRIE devoted his whole time to the duties of Librarian, in which position he has been continued by the votes of the Society to the present time. With the care of the rooms and collections, indexing the volumes by subjects, and assisting in carrying on the vast correspondence of the Society, he has performed a vast amount of labor upon a small salary.

Chiefly as the result of the labors of the Corresponding Secretary and Librarian, the Society has become a success beyond any thing of the kind of its age, in this, or probably any other country. The library now contains 21,366 volumes, bound and unbound, of which 1136 are bound newspapers; 138 of these were published in the last century, several of them by Dr. Franklin, and one in the previous century; over 400 Atlases, maps and diagrams of ancient date, illustrating the vagueness of the ideas concerning the American Continent, which prevailed 200 years ago.

One of the most attractive features of the collections is the picture gallery. It consists of 60 fine oil portraits of early pioneers of the State, Wisconsin Governors, and other prominent men, and of several Indian Chiefs, all remarkably true to the life and some of them showing high artistic finish. The Society has also made good progress in the collection of a Cabinet of ancient and modern relics, both of nature and art and which promises to become, ere long, an object of very great interest.

The Society, as will be inferred, is not an institution of the State Government, though the State has generously fostered it by a small annual appropriation, for several years past, to aid in sustaining its management and to augment its collections; but its management and control is wisely retained in the hands of private citizens, residing in all parts of the State, and associated under their charter.

Within the last three or four years the rooms of the Society, never very suitable from their underground position, low ceilings, and want of enclosed alcoves, have become more and more crowded and insufficient for the proper display and protection of the collections, and in 1865 the legislature manifested its interest in the enterprise and their appreciation of its usefulness to the State, by appropriating to its use the entire second floor of the south wing of the Capitol and ordering it fitted up in an appropriate manner, and in January, 1866, the effects of the Society were removed and tastefully disposed in their new and elegant depository. On the evening of the 24th of the same month the rooms set apart by the munificence of the State, were formally dedicated to the use of the Society, by an eloquent address by ex-Gov. SALOMON, of Milwaukee, and other appropriate proceedings, and the occasion was one of unmingled satisfaction to the founders and early friends of the enterprise, and of deep interest to the large assembly convened upon the occasion. We know of no enterprise, of the like magnitude, which reflects so much credit upon the State as this. While its cost, in money, has been but trifling, its usefulness is beyond estimate. It will be a favorite and profitable resort for State officers and members of legislatures, Professors and Students of the University, and the curious and studious of all classes; and future generations of citizens will bless the forethought which provided such a reservoir of knowledge. No stranger should visit Madison without spending a day at the Historical Rooms, where he will always find a cordial welcome.

THE NEW CAPITOL.

Very soon after the organization of the State Government, the Capitol became inadequate to the proper accommodation of the several departments which the organization brought into being, and the business of which rapidly increased with the growth of the State. Still, by renting some rooms in other buildings, it was made to answer the purpose for ten years after Wisconsin became a State.

In 1857 it became apparent that a new capitol must be built without further delay, and this necessity gave rise to a proposition, in the legislature of that year to remove the seat of government from Madison to some other point. Whether there was any real danger of the success of the proposition or not, the people of Madison became alarmed and voted to donate to the State $50,000, in City bonds, to aid in the construction of a new capitol upon the old site.

This proposition was accepted by the legislature and by an act, approved February 28th, 1857, the Governor and Secretary of State were authorized to adopt a plan and contract for the erection of the east wing of the building. The plan was drawn by Messrs. KUTZBOCK & DONNELL, and the contract for the east wing was let to A. A. Mc-DONNELL, and first occupied by the Assembly in 1859. Messrs. KUTZBOCK & DONNELL were appointed Architects.

By an act, approved March 9th, 1861, the construction of the West wing was authorized, under the direction of the State officers, and the contract was awarded to Messrs. HARVEY & MOXLEY. At the session of 1863, the Assembly (according to the design) took possession of the West wing and the Senate of the East wing.

By act of March 26, 1863, the erection of the North wing and the laying of the foundation of the South wing, and of the Rotunda, were provided for and the North wing was first occupied the winter following.

By act of April 2d, 1864, provision was made for the completion of the South wing and raising the walls of the Rotunda to the roof of the wings. The South wing was first occupied by the State Historical Society, in January, 1866.

The erection of the Dome and finishing the Rotunda only remain to complete the structure, and this will probably be done the present year.

The East and West wings were built on either side of the old capitol, which was not removed until these two wings were ready for use, and the occupancy of the building has never been interrupted. For the North and South wings, Mr. J. LIVSEY, HARVEY, MOXLEY and MOULTON, were severally contractors upon different parts of the work.

The diameter of the structure from North to South, is 250 feet, and from East to West, 275 feet. Its extreme height, according to the design, will be 221 feet. It is built in the Corinthian order of architecture, and though plain in its exterior finish for that order of architecture, its internal finish is more elaborate, presenting an appearance of elegance and comfort, in broad contrast with the the smooth, dripping stone surfaces and cavern-like appearance of the interior of the Capitol, at Nashville, Tenn. The building has not the massive quality which should characterize public buildings of this description, and will hardly be able to sing the song of a thousand years. But this defect was, in a great measure, at least, unavoidable from the absence of massive building material within available distance. Still the new Capitol will long remain a credit to the State and the crowning ornament of the most beautiful town in the United States.

THE MADISON PRESS.

The following paragraphs are extracted from an interesting historic sketch of the Dane County Press, written by Hon. DAVID ATWOOD, of the State Journal, and published in the proceedings of the Wisconsin Editorial Convention, of 1865. The notices of the subsequent career of the ex-members of the Madison Press, are omitted, and the names of some of the less successful enterprises are barely mentioned—these being the only respects in which the sketch seems to admit of condensation.

WISCONSIN ENQUIRER.

“This was the first paper established in Madison, and the first number made its appearance on the 8th of November, 1838. JOSIAH A. NOONAN was the editor and proprietor. It was a six column weekly, and commenced its career full of spirit and energy. In the introductory I find the following paragraph:

“With party politics we shall not for the present take any very active part, believing that there is nothing in the situation of the Territory that makes it necessary for the newspapers in it now, to burden their columns with labor-ed discussions of the common political questions of the day. Whenever we do enter the political arena, however, we shall be found advocating the principles and measures of the Democratic party.”

“The paper was not long free from politics. The greatest strife, however, was of a local nature. Parties at this day, had not become fully organized.

"April 6, 1839, Mr. C. C. SHOLES became a partner with Mr. NOONAN, and the paper was published by NOONAN & SHOLES. For a time, both of the proprietors being absent, C. L. SHOLES had the management of both the editorial and business departments of the establishment.

"November 30, Mr. SHOLES retired, leaving Mr. NOONAN again sole editor and proprietor. At this time another column was added to each page, making a seven column paper.

"July 8, 1840, Mr. C. C. SHOLES again became a joint proprietor with Mr. NOONAN as editor and publisher.

"December 5, 1840, Mr. NOONAN retired from the office, leaving Mr. C. C. SHOLES sole editor and proprietor.

"April 10, 1841, Mr. GEORGE HYER became a partner with Mr. SHOLES, and the paper was conducted by SHOLES & HYER.

"June 9, 1841, Mr. SHOLES retired from the office, leaving Mr. HYER sole editor and proprietor.

"February 23, 1842, GEO. HYER retired from the office, and J. GILLET KNAPP became sole editor and proprietor.

"July 2, 1842, Mr. KNAPP retired, and Mr. HARRISON REED became the editor and publisher. Up to this time the Enquirer had been Democratic in politics, so far as it had been anything; its special point was anti-DOTY. On assuming control of the establishment, Mr. REED changed the spelling of Wisconsin, at the head of the paper to "Wiskonsan," and the position of the paper to that of a strong supporter of DOTY.

"September 2, 1842, Mr. REED retired, and DAVID LAMBERT succeeded him in the editorial control of the paper—Mr. REED, however, continuing as publisher. In his introductory Mr. L. expressed his dislike of both parties, but pledged his support to the then National (TYLER) and Territorial (DOTY) administrations.

"January 5, 1843, Mr. REED withdrew entirely from the office, and Mr. LAMBERT became sole editor and publisher. During this winter the paper seems to have had a feeble existence, appearing about half the time on a small sheet, and printed on a very poor quality of paper. Strong symptoms of a decline were visible in the appearance of the sheet from week to week.

"June 7, 1843, the office was conveyed, by Mr. DAVID LAMBERT, to BARLOW SHACKLEFORD and HENRY A. LAMBERT. From this date I have been unable to trace the Enquirer. From a notice, however, in the Madison Express a week or two after this date, announcing its suspension, I infer that no papers were issued after the assignment to Messrs. SHACKLEFORD & LAMBERT, or, if any, not more than one number. It will be seen that, in an existence of something less than five years, the Enquirer experienced twelve changes of proprietorship. During most of the time the paper was very well printed, and gave evidence of a good degree of ability in its editorial columns; more than is usual in small country places.

THE MADISON EXPRESS.

"The Madison Express was the title of the second paper established in Madison. The first number was issued on the 2d day of December, 1839. W. W. WYMAN, editor and publisher. It was a neatly printed six column weekly paper, starting off in supporting the then Territorial administration, and claiming to be devoted to the advancement of the best interests of the people.

"July, 1840, the Express was enlarged to a seven column paper, and came out decidedly in favor of the Whig party, raising the name of WM. HENRY HARRISON at the editorial head—declaring for HARRISON and reform. We note no changes of proprietorship for several years. During the term of the Second Constitutional Convention, in 1847-8, and the last Territorial legislature, the Express was issued tri-weekly. The paper continued with varied success, until May, 1848, when it was temporarily suspended. For five months the office remained idle, except to do a small amount of job printing—no paper being issued from it.

“October 9, 1848, the office was purchased by DAVID ATWOOD and ROYAL BUCK, and the publication of the Express was at once resumed, under the title of Wisconsin Express instead of Madison Express, under the management of ATWOOD & BUCK. During the short time then previous to the general election of that year, but a five column paper was issued, which was sent for four weeks to all the old subscribers of the Express, and to many others, free of charge. It was intended only as a campaign sheet, and warmly urged the election of ZACHARY TAYLOR and MILLARD FILLMORE to the Presidency and Vice Presidency of the United States.

“November 16, 1848, the Express appeared in its full size (seven column weekly), printed on entirely new type. The publication was regularly continued without change till July 2, 1850, when ALVIN E. BOVAY became associated with ATWOOD & BUCK in its publication, but he only remained in the establishment four weeks, when ATWOOD & BUCK again resumed full control. During the session of the Legislature, in 1852, the Express was issued daily as well as weekly.

“June 1, 1852, the Express office was consolidated with that of the Wisconsin Statesman, and the names of both of the old papers were dropped, and the consolidated paper appeared under the title of the Wisconsin State Palladium. For further particulars see history of the Palladium.

THE WISCONSIN DEMOCRAT.

"This was the title of the third paper established in Madison. It was a six column weekly. The first number was issued on the 18th day of October, 1842. J. GILLETT KNAPP and JOHN DELANEY editors and proprietors. It was a radical democratic states rights paper.

"February 9, 1843, JOHN P. SHELDON and GEO. HYER succeeded Messrs. KNAPP & DELANEY in its publication, and the paper was continued without further change till March 14, 1844, when it was suspended. The printing material was afterwards purchased and used for printing the Argus.

THE WISCONSIN ARGUS.

"The first number of this paper was issued in Madison, on the 22d day of April, 1844—S. MILLS & Co., Proprietors. The members of the firm were SIMEON MILLS, JOHN Y. SMITH, and BENJAMIN HOLT. Mr. SMITH had the entire control of the editorial department of the paper. It was a neatly printed six column weekly, edited with ability, and bore at its mast head the names of POLK and DALLAS. In its democracy, at this time, it was emphatically in favor of free trade, a hard money currency, &c.

"December 22, 1846, H. A. TENNEY, Esq., who had been connected with the Jeffersonian, at Galena, Illinois, purchased an interest in the Argus establishment, and became a joint editor with Mr. SMITH—S. MILLS & Co. continuing as publishers.

"February 15, 1847. the Argus was enlarged to a seven column paper, and at this time the name of Mr. MILLS disappeared, and the name of the publishing firm was TENNEY, SMITH & HOLT. During the second Constitutional Convention, in 1847-8, and the last territorial session of the Legislature, in 1848, the Argus was issued tri-weekly as well as weekly.

"August 21, 1849, DAVID T. DICKSON purchased an interest in the establishment, and the firm name was changed to TENNEY, SMITH, HOLT & Co. This arrangement continued till the spring of 1851. In April of that year, Messrs. SMITH, HOLT and DICKSON disposed of their interest in the Argus to Messrs. S. D. CARPENTER and H. A. TENNEY, who became joint editors and proprietors of the paper.

"For several years, the Argus had been the leading paper in the State, of that branch of the Democratic party, familiarly called "Old Hunkers," the Democrat at Madison, leading the other branch, known as "Tadpoles." The Argus was a lively and ably conducted paper. It carried its party through many hard fought political contests, with marked ability and success. The division of the Democratic party above alluded to, was occasioned by a difference of opinion respecting several of the provisions of the first Constitution, and the discussion during the canvass for and against the adoption of that instrument. The Argus and its followers, the "hunkers," opposed its adoption, aided by a large portion of the old whig party; and the "Tadpoles" supported it. The division thus created, was continued within the ranks of the party, for several years, but not so strong as to lose the power in the State—except in a single term of Governor (FARWELL)—until after the organization of the Republican party.

THE ARGUS AND DEMOCRAT CONSOLIDATED.

“June 15, 1852, Mr. TENNEY retired from the establishment, and the two Democratic papers of Madison—the Argus and the Democrat, were merged in one, and BERIAH BROWN and S. D. CARPENTER became joint editors and proprietors of the consolidated paper, which retained the names of both of the old ones, and appeared as the Argus and Democrat. A daily was permanently established at this time. It was a five column sheet, neatly printed. The Argus was issued daily during the previous session of Legislature.

“April 7, 1853, Mr. CARPENTER retired from the establishment leaving the sole management with BERIAH BROWN.

“July 24, 1854, the daily was enlarged to a six column paper, and Mr. ELIAS A. CALKINS became associated with Mr. BROWN in the editorial management of the Argus and Democrat.

“April 30, 1855, Mr. BROWN disposed of the establishment, and E. A. CALKINS and JAMES K. PROUDFIT became the editors and proprietors.

“January 2, 1856. The daily was enlarged to a seven column sheet.

“January 2, 1857. The daily was enlarged to an eight column sheet.

“May 12, 1857. Mr. PROUDFIT disposed of his interest to Mr. GEO. WEBB, and the paper was continued by CALKINS & WEBB.

“November 20, 1857. The daily was reduced in size to a seven column sheet.

“January 3, 1859. BERIAH BROWN again became connected with the paper; the publishing firm was changed to GEO. WEBB & Co., and BROWN and CALKINS were the editors.

"April 6, 1859. Mr. BROWN again retired from the paper and CALKINS and WEBB assumed full control.

"June 16, 1859. All names of editors or publishers disappeared, and the paper seemed to run itself.

"In the summer of 1859, the Argus and Democrat was discontinued, and the printing materials of the office were purchased by the Patriot and State Journal offices.

REVIVAL OF THE ARGUS AND DEMOCRAT.

"April 2, 1860, Messrs. E. A. CALKINS and M. CULLATON bought a new office, and ostensibly revived the publication of the Argus and Democrat. A daily and weekly were established. The daily was a six column sheet. The name of the firm was E. A. CALKINS & Co.

"December 6, 1860, daily enlarged to a seven column sheet.

"Early in 1861, Mr. CALKINS sold out his interest to JOHN Y. SMITH, and SMITH and CULLATON continued the publication. At this time Mr. H. K. SMITH became an associate editor. Up to this time the paper had been Democratic in politics. Mr. SMITH devoted his energies to the currency question mainly, rather leaning towards the Republican organization generally, and warmly supporting the war policy of the Government.

"October 23, 1861. The daily was reduced in size to a six column paper.

"January 4, 1862. The daily was discontinued. The weekly was continued till June 10, 1862, when it went out without announcing its own demise. The revived Argus and Democrat had an existence, not marked with very brilliant success pecuniarily, though it was a spirited paper, of two years and three weeks. The material of the office was rented to Messrs. ROBERTS & Co., a few months, on which they executed the State Printing till the following January. Afterwards the large Power Press was sold to the State Journal Office, and the balance of the material to Messrs. W. J. PARK & Co., who had become the State Printers.

WISCONSIN DEMOCRAT.

"This paper was established January 11, 1846, by BERIAH BROWN, editor and publisher. It commenced as a six column paper, Democratic in politics, and was published weekly.

"January 16, 1847, the Democrat was enlarged to a seven column sheet. It was subsequently reduced to a five column paper, then increased to six columns, and was consolidated with the Argus, June 15, 1852. The new paper took the name of Argus and Democrat, by BROWN & CARPENTER. The Democrat was published daily during the sessions of 1851-2.

"The paper was a radical Democratic sheet, evincing at times marked ability. Mr. BROWN was the leading editor of what was called the "Tadpole" branch of his party, during its existence.

WISCONSIN STATESMAN.

"The first number of this paper appeared in Madison, on the first day of August, 1850—W. W. WYMAN & SONS (W. H. and A. U. WYMAN) publishers. It was an eight column weekly, well printed—Whig in politics. It belonged to what was known as the Silver Gray branch of the Whig party. For a time WILLIAM WELCH, Esq., was connected with the editorial management of the Statesman.

"In the winter of 1852, WM. A. BUGH became connected with the Statesman, and it was under the charge of WYMAN & BUGH, until June 1, 1852, when the office was consolidated with that of the Wisconsin Express. The result of the consolidation was the establishment of the Wisconsin State Palladium. The Statesman was published daily during the legislative session of 1852.

WISCONSIN STATE PALLADIUM.

"This paper was established on the first of June, 1852, ATWOOD, WYMANS and BUCK, editors and proprietors. A daily and weekly edition was at once issued from the office. The daily was a neat five column sheet, and the weekly was a large eight column paper. The subscription list to the weekly, including those of two old papers, was quite large; but as the business was done almost wholly upon the credit system, the profits were small. The Palladium was really the continuance of two papers—the Express and the Statesman. At this time, those two offices were consolidated, the names of both the old papers dropped, and the Wisconsin State Palladium adopted as the name of the new issue. The new firm did not work harmoniously, and the daily and weekly Palladium only had a brief existence of eleven weeks, when its publication was suspended, and the material of the office soon passed into different hands, forming parts of several printing offices.

WISCONSIN STATE JOURNAL.

"This paper was established at Madison, by DAVID ATWOOD, in September, 1852. The first number of the daily bears date September 30, 1852, and was a five column paper. It might very properly be considered as the continuation of the Express, Statesman and the Palladium, as it was the successor of those papers, and by one of the publishers of them. The office was entirely new, the type, presses and all the fixtures having been purchased expressly for the establishment of the State Journal. It commenced its career as a Whig paper; but on the re-organization of parties, became an advocate of the principles and measures of the Republican party.

"May 1, 1853, Mr. HORACE RUBLEE became connected with the Journal as an associate editor.

"May 1, 1854, Mr. RUBLEE purchased an interest in the office and became equally interested in the publication and editorial management of the paper, with Mr. ATWOOD. At this time the daily was enlarged to a six column sheet.

"May 1, 1855, Mr. GEORGE GARY became associated with Messrs. ATWOOD & RUBLEE in the management of the Journal.

"February 1, 1856, Mr. GARY retired from the office, leaving the entire management with Messrs. ATWOOD & RUBLEE again. About this time a tri-weekly edition was commenced, in addition to the daily and weekly editions.

"June 1, 1857, the daily and tri-weekly papers were enlarged to seven columns to the page of each.

"May 1, 1859, Mr. HARRISON REED became connected with the paper, and it was published by ATWOOD, RUBLEE & REED.

September 7, 1859. The weekly Journal was enlarged to a nine column sheet.

"May 1, 1861. Mr. REED retired from the office, leaving Messrs. ATWOOD & RUBLEE again in full control. No other change has taken place in the proprietorship of the Journal, and ATWOOD & RUBLEE continue as its editors and publishers, assisted at this time, in the editorial department, by HARLAN M. PAGE. At different times there have been connected with the Journal, as local or associate editors, Messrs. A. J. TURNER, now of the Portage Register, L. J. BATES, now of Michigan, H. K. SMITH, and JAMES ROSS.

"In September, 1863, the form of the weekly Journal was changed to an eight page paper, each page containing six columns or forty-eight columns in all.

WISCONSIN PATRIOT.

"The first number of this paper was issued in Madison, on the 17th day of June, 1854. J. T. MARSTON and H. A. TENNEY editors and proprietors. It was a neatly printed seven column weekly, and supported the regular Democracy with force and ability.

"October 14, 1854, Mr. TENNEY disposed of his interest to S. D. CARPENTER; and shortly after Mr. MARSTON also disposed of his interest, and withdrew from the establishment.

"November 1, 1854, the daily Patriot a five column paper, was established by Messrs. CARPENTER & Co.

"November 20, 1854, S. D. CARPENTER was announced as political editor, and S. H. CARPENTER as local editor and publisher.

"February 12, 1855, the daily was enlarged to a six column paper.

"July 17, 1855, S. D. and S. H. CARPENTER were announced as joint editors—S. H. CARPENTER continuing as publisher.

"January 29, 1856, S. D. and S. H. CARPENTER were announced as joint editors and publishers.

"July 28, 1856, the daily was enlarged to a seven column paper, and S. H. CARPENTER retired from the establishment, having disposed of his interest to ROLLA A. LAW, Esq. S. D. CARPENTER and R. A. LAW were announced as editors, and ROLLA A. LAW as publisher.

"August 2, 1856, the weekly Patriot was enlarged to an eight column paper.

"September 29, 1856, the daily Patriot was enlarged to an eight column paper.

"July 2, 1857, R. A. LAW retired from the office, leaving S. D. CARPENTER sole editor and proprietor.

"August 24, 1857, Mr. JOHN T. MARTIN became a joint publisher with CARPENTER, the name of the firm being CARPENTER & MARTIN.

"December 1, 1857, the daily was reduced to a six column paper.

"April 16, 1858, Mr. MARTIN withdrew from the establishment, Mr. CARPENTER leasing the office for two years. About this time the name of JAMES ROSS appeared as the local editor.

"April 4, 1859, Mr. GEORGE HYER purchased an interest in the office, and the paper was continued by CARPENTER & HYER as joint publishers. About this time BERIAH BROWN became associated with the Patriot as editor but continued in this connection only a few months, when he retired from the position, leaving CARPENTER & HYER in full control. The paper continued in the same hands without change—except that S. D. CARPENTER withdrew from the editorial department of the paper during the political campaign of 1861—leaving Mr. HYER sole editor, till the spring of 1864, April, I think, when the partnership of CARPENTER & HYER was dissolved, and the office was leased to PETER STOUT, J. B. HYER and W. W. BIRD, who continued the publication of the daily and weekly

Patriot. In the mean time, the weekly had been changed to an eight page paper, and the daily had been reduced in size to a six column sheet. Soon after the new arrangement, A. B. BRALEY, Esq., assumed the editorial management of the Patriot and continued in this position till the close of the presidential campaign of 1864. The Patriot gave a vigorous support to Gen. McCLELLAN for the Presidency. At the close of the campaign, Mr. B. withdrew from the editorial charge of the paper.

"November 14, the publication of the Patriot was suspended.

THE WISCONSIN CAPITOL.

"This paper was established in Madison, and the first number of the Daily Capitol made its appearance on the 17th day of April, 1865—E. A. CALKINS, editor, and W. J. PARK & Co., publishers. A daily and weekly paper is issued from the office. The daily is a seven column sheet, and the weekly an eight column paper. It has not become identified with any political party as yet.

THE WISCONSIN DEMOCRAT.

A paper bearing the above title was established in Madison, on the 11th day of October, 1865, by GEO. HYER and D. W. FERNANDEZ, under the firm of HYER & FERNANDEZ. It is published daily and weekly—the former being a six column and the latter an eight column paper. It is democratic in politics.

WISCONSIN JOURNAL OF EDUCATION.

"In January, 1858, this monthly publication was removed from Racine, where it had been issued for about six years, to Madison. It contained forty pages of matter, devoted wholly to the cause of education; was neatly printed, and proved a valuable periodical to teachers and all others connected with the education of children. It was ostensibly published under the direction of the Wisconsin Teachers' Association, but really by Mr. A. J. CRAIG, who had the whole management of the Journal, both as editor and publisher.

"June, 1860, Mr. CRAIG withdrew from the conduct of the Journal, and was succeeded by Rev. J. B. PRADT, by whom the publication was continued until July, 1865.

THE WISCONSIN FARMER.

"Early in the year 1855, Messrs. MARK MILLER and S. P. LATHROP, who had been publishing for some years the Wisconsin and Iowa Farmer and Northwestern Cultivator, at Janesville, removed the office of that monthly to Madison, where they continued the publication till about the close of the year 1855, when Messrs. D. J. POWERS and E. W. SKINNER purchased the interest of Mr. MILLER. It was enlarged in January, 1856, and the words "and Iowa" dropped from the title. It contained forty-eight pages of closely printed matter in each number, devoted to Agriculture, Horticulture, Mechanic Arts and Education. It was edited with spirit and ability, and obtained in 1857 a circulation of 10,000 copies. In January, 1857, Dr. J. W. HOYT became connected with the editorial management of the Farmer. During the year 1857 the Farmer was published by Messrs. POWERS & SKINNER, assisted in the editorial department by Dr. HOYT.

"January 1, 1858, Mr. SKINNER retired from the Farmer, and Messrs. POWERS & HOYT became joint editors and publishers. This arrangement continued through the years 1858 and 1859. At the commencement of the year

1860 the publishing firm was D. J. POWERS & Co., Dr. HOYT remaining in the editorial department. (The company, at this time, was Messrs. ATWOOD & RUBLEE, of the State Journal.)

"In February, 1861, D. J. POWERS & Co. disposed of all interest in the Farmer, and the publishing firm became J. W. HOYT & Co., being J. W. HOYT and ALBERT WOOD. This arrangement continued through the year 1861, when Mr. WOOD disposed of all interest in the Farmer, and Messrs. HOYT & CAMPBELL became the publishers, (J. W. HOYT and C. M. CAMPBELL.)

"In the January number, for 1865, a slight change is indicated, Mr. HOYT is announced as editor and C. M. CAMPBELL as publisher, and this arrangement continued until the death of Mr. CAMPBELL, in November, 1865, when C. H. ALLEN assumed the place of publisher, with Dr. HOYT as editor. The Farmer has experienced several changes of proprietorship, and has probably never yielded a large profit to any one connected with it, but it has always been an able and interesting agricultural publication, well adapted to the wants of the great West. Mrs. J. W. HOYT has aided materially in the editorial management of the Farmer for several years. Many gracefully written articles from her pen have appeared in it from time to time.

"DE NORKES VEN."—THE NORTHMAN'S FRIEND.

"The first paper established in Dane County, printed in a foreign language, was one bearing the above title, in the Norwegian language, by OLE TORGERSON. The first number appeared in July, 1850. It was neatly printed, and edited with care and ability. In politics it was Whig. The support was limited, and after a few months it was discontinued for want of sufficient encouragement. This was the second paper in the Norwegian language established in the State.

“DER NORSKE AMERIKANER.”—THE NORWEGIAN AMERICAN.

“This paper was established in Madison, in December, 1854, by ELIAS STANGELAND, Esq., and was continued to be published by him till May, 1857, when it was discontinued. It was Democratic in politics, and was edited with spirit and ability. Its circulation was small and the office did not pay expenses.

“NORDSTREREN.”—THE NORTH STAR.

“This paper was started in Madison on the first of June, 1857, by the “Scandinavian Democratic Press Association,” and was continued till December of the same year, when it was suspended, until the fall of 1858. The establishment was rented in August, 1858, to H. BOR-SCHENIUS, Esq., who revived the publication of the paper and continued it for a year or two, when it was discontinued. It was a Democratic paper, and had a fair circulation.

THE EMIGRANTEN.

“This paper was established at Inmansville, Rock County, in 1852, by the “Scandinavian Press Association.” It was at first Democratic in politics, but subsequently became a strong Republican paper. In the fall of 1857, the Emigranten office was removed to Madison, where the paper has been published ever since. For several years past it has been under the exclusive charge of C. F. SOLBERG, Esq. It has a large circulation and is an ably edited paper.

"Besides these papers, there have been one or two religious periodicals published in Madison in the Norwegian language, but I have no particulars in regard to them.

"Of the German press at Madison, I have been enable to obtain but little information, and that of a very general character. There was the Staats Zeitung, Democratic, by AUGUST KRUEER, which was published a year or two. Mr. K. was an accomplished writer and speaker. He died a year or two ago. The Madison Zeitung, Republican, was published a year or two by different men. Messrs. FUCHS & LINDEMANN had charge of it for a time in 1857, I think, then E. RULLMANN, &c. It was never well supported, and did not half pay expenses, though it was an ably conducted paper. The Madison Demokrat was established in 1858, by SIMON SICKLES. It was continued, several different persons being connected with it, at different times, till 1860, when it was discontinued. This is about all the information I have been able to obtain of the German press of the county. No paper is now published in that language in the county."

The following named papers and periodicals were started in Madison, but were soon discontinued for want of support, some of which deserved a better fate:

The Madison Capitol, in the winter of 1855, J. NOLAN, editor, and L. POLAND & Co., publishers.

The True American, in the spring of 1855, edited by an association and published by J. A. SOMERBY & Co.

The Western Fireside, in January, 1857, S. H. CARPENTER, editor and proprietor.

The Higher Law, in January, 1861, HERBERT REED, editor and proprietor.

Educational. The North Western Journal of Education, Science and General Literature, in March, 1850, O. M. CONOVER, editor.

Free School Journal and Teachers' Advocate, July, 1850, J. L. ENOS, editor and proprietor.

Students' Miscellany, 1857, by the Students of the University.

Temperance. The Old Oaken Bucket, in 1850 or 1851. Organ of the Sons of Temperance. Dr. J. W. HUNT, publisher.

WISCONSIN STAATS ZEITUNG.

A weekly German paper, bearing the above title, was established in Madison, in October, 1865, by C. LOHMANN, and is still published. It is a six column paper, and in politics is democratic.

Premium Adjustable Cane Mills.

E. W. SKINNER, & Co., - - - - - MADISON, WISCONSIN.

All the mills manufactured by us contain the adjustable lever principle. These mills have been before the public for the last six years, and have been so generally introduced in nearly every county in the Northwest, that it is hardly necessary to call attention to the many prominent points of improvement and advantage combined in these popular mills. Our mills are superior for their simplicity of construction and manner of applying the pressure, ease of draft, convenience of work in all its parts, and for perfect work.

THE GEARED MILL,

With separate power and bagasse carrier, is becoming very popular among sorghum growers. Now that the raising of cane is entered into as a permanent business, the first cost is not so much a question with the purchaser as the utility of the machinery which he selects. With this machine the bagasse can be emptied into a cart by the apron, or be drawn away by a drag. It also enables the operator to have the cane delivered from the wagon close to the feed-table, thus saving a man's time in tending. It is more especially adapted for large works than the sweep mill. It is bolted to a wooden frame, and arranged to attach bagasse carrier and feed-table.
