UW SPORTS NEWS SERVICE

WISCONSIN's Badgers closed their 1958 campaign with sparkling triumphs over Illinois, 31-12, and Minnesota, 27-12, to capture second place in the Big Ten, and a high national ranking in the final football polls. The only Badger loss was to the eventual champion, Iowa, in the season's fourth game, and the second Big Ten clash. A tie with Ohio State the following week then eliminated the possibility of a 6 won, 1 lost record that would have won the championship.

Ten seniors, ably supported by underclassmen teammates, made this Wisconsin's finest season overall since the 1951 "Hard Rocks", though that team finished third in the Big Ten with an identical 5 won, 1 lost, 1 tie record, behind champion Illinois and second place Purdue.

It's been a great season, and let's hope for many more.

November 15'

THE UNIVERSITY of Wisconsin's football team changed the script this overcast November afternoon and won a 31-12 decision from an Illinois team that was primed to upset the Badgers and knock them out of second place in the Big Ten race. A Dad's Day gathering of 45,937 sat in Memorial Stadium as the Badgers moved by air with startling rapidity to establish an early bridgehead, then matched scores with the Illini the remainder of the way for an easy win.

The Badgers moved easily via the air lanes off a spread formation utilizing the double winged T, a type of attack that found the Illini vulnerable. Both quarterbacks, Dale Hackbart and Sidney Williams, took advantage early of the Illini weaknesses to give the winners a 15-0 first quarter edge.

Single tallies in the second and third periods were recorded by both teams, with Illinois never coming any closer than 15-6.

The Badgers received the opening kickoff and in just seven plays had marched 68 yards—no, it seemed they flew—to their first score with the game just two and one-half minutes old.

Ron Steiner returned the kickoff 20 yards to the Badger 32 and the attack was underway. Jon Hobbs bulled for two yards, slammed for seven more, then Dale Hackbart tried a sneak for a first down, failing by an inch or two. A fourth down gamble netted the first down—those first ten yards were the hardest all afternoon—and the Badgers dropped their bulldozing tactics. They moved and moved fast. Jon Hobbs broke off the Illini's left end, lateraled back to Steiner, who turned the corner, and rambled 49 yards to the seven yard line where he was bounced out of bounds.

Jon Hobbs bulled over left guard for three yards, then Hackbart ended any suspense on the part of Badger fans by using the option play to go outside Wisconsin's left tackle into the end zone. 12:30 remained to be played in the quarter, and this was one of the Badgers' quickest scores on a march all year. Paul Shwaiko added the extra point, and the score was 7–0.

The Illini battled back, using their air power to march 52 yards in six plays to Wisconsin's 23 where a second down pass by quarterback John Easterbrook was intercepted on Wisconsin's 17 by Jerry Stalcup. The march started with Easterbrook throwing complete passes to halfbacks Marshall Starks for 12 yards, and to DeJustice Coleman for 17 yards, to move to the Badgers 46. Two running plays gained nine yards, then Easterbrook tossed his third straight completion to the most-feared of 1958 Illini, left end Rich Kreitling, for five yards and a first down on the 32. His fourth pass was also complete, to Coleman for nine yards, and the ball was on the 23.

A good rush by Wisconsin's left side of the line, led by Dave Kocourek, hurried Easterbrook, and the five-foot-nine, 150 pound field general passed into Stalcup's waiting grasp on the 17.

Wisconsin moved just six yards in three plays, punted short, and Illinois had position on its own 49 yard line. Easterbrook engineered a first down on the Wisconsin 39 using three running plays, then saw the potential drive falter on an incompletely long pass to Kreitling, and a 13 yard loss attempting to pass when smothered by left guard Jim Fraser. The team's exchanged punts, with Illinois in position to start a move from its own 44 with less than four minutes to play in the quarter.

The Badger defense had other ideas. Yes, the Wisconsin defense played an important role in this game, though the statistics would indicate otherwise.

Wisconsin yielded 170 yards to the Illini air game, but gave up just 89 yards on the ground, and helped nullify the effectiveness of the passing attack by intercepting four Illinois passes and running them back for 57 yards.

It was an interception of a Russ Martin pass on a second down play by Sidney Williams and a 19 yard return that gave the Badgers position on the Illinois 46 with 2:35 left to play in the quarter. Six plays netted the score, with Williams looking like the Yankees' Bob Turley as he pitched strikes to Eddie Hart for 16 yards and a first down, 12 yards to right end Henry Derleth for 12 yards and a first down, and on a third down situation to left end Jim Holmes for ten yards and another first down. Williams worked exclusively off the spread on this series, and with the ball on the four yard line, the senior quarterback went outside left tackle—a big hole was opened for him—and the Badgers had a 13–0 lead, with 13 seconds to play.

Paul Shwaiko added the extra point, but Illinois made contact before the pass from center, and an automatic penalty moved the ball to the one yard line. Williams handed off to Billy Hobbs who tallied the two points easily for a 15–0 lead.

The first portion of the second period was a stalemate. An Illinois drive fizzled on the Badger 46. A counter-attack by Wisconsin failed on the Illinois 36, when a fake punt play saw Jon Hobbs dropped for a three yard loss. The Illini, after a five yard delay of game penalty, then moved 66 yards in seven plays to score with 5:43 left to play in the half.

Six consecutive running plays netted the Illini two first downs with left half Marshall Starks doing the big gaining with romps of nine, eleven, and three yards, and fullback Jack Delveaux crashed the Badger line for six and three yards to the Wisconsin 31.

Easterbrook faded to pass, was rushed hard, eluded Wisconsin's left end and linebacker, and tossed toward the sideline near the ten yard line, where Starks grabbed the ball out of the air behind Hackbart's outstretched hands, gathered it in, and stepped into the end zone. The Illinois attempt to run for the extra points failed, and Wisconsin led 15-6.

On the second play following the kickoff, Williams hit Billy Hobbs on a short pass off the double winged T, and the Eau Claire junior went 62 yards before he was brought down from behind on the 13 yard line of Illinois. The play constituted the longest non-scoring pass play in Wisconsin's football history. An immediate score was not realized as a fourth down Williams pass was intercepted by Bill Burrell, Illinois guard, on the six yard line.

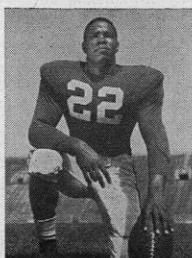

Again, the defense gave the Badgers inspiration. The Illini were pushed back to their one-foot line, where on fourth down a good rush on the punter, Delveaux, resulted in a 14 yard punt, and the Badgers had good position for their third touchdown.

One play netted the tally as Hackbart fired a pass to Eddie Hart on the three yard line, and the Kenosha junior shook off a tackler and crossed the double stripe. Hackbart ran the Illinois right end for the extra points, and with 1:15 to play in the half, Wisconsin led 23-6.

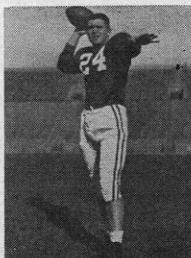

The issue was settled quickly in the third period, and Badger fans sat back and enjoyed the final 21 minutes 40 seconds of the game in which a long Illini threat, set by interception of a Williams pass, was stopped when center Bob Nelson snared one of Easterbrook's aerials on a fourth down situation and returned 16 yards.

Back to the start of the half, however, and the Illini started from their own 32—Starks returned the kickoff by Fraser 27 yards—and in fourteen plays had their second touchdown. It was strictly power football, as Easterbrook made use of his fullback and halfbacks to pick up four first downs in the march, and used only two passes, one a 14 yard completion to Kreitling, the other incomplete.

Key play in the march was a 19 yard scamper by Easterbrook when he broke outside the Wisconsin rush on an attempted pass, and raced around his right end to the Badger 17. It took six plays for the Illini to score from there, with sophomore fullback Jim Brown hurdling the Wisconsin line to score from three yards out. The extra point attempt, by passing, was no good, and the score stood 23-12 with 8:43 to play.

Any hopes Illini partisans had of a comeback were squashed in the next two minutes as the Badgers drove 67 yards in six plays for their final score. Passing played an important role here, too, as Hackbart pitched a 26 yard completion to Steiner, then followed with a 33 yard toss to right end Earl Hill. With the ball on the five yard line, Hackbart gave the ball to Jon Hobbs, and he powered his way untouched for the score. Hackbart passed complete to Steiner for the extra points, and the Badgers had their 31-12 margin.

They rested their case at this point, and it was the most comfortable fourth quarter Badger partisans had enjoyed since the Purdue game five weeks ago. The Badgers rolled up 380 yards. Of this, 227 yards came by passing on completing of 12 of 26 attempts—and added 153 yards on the ground. It was an awesome display of wide open football, one that came at an opportune time, and kept Wisconsin in second place in the Big Ten. Bring on Minnesota!

Wisconsin 27, Minnesota 12

November 22

WISCONSIN'S mighty football Badgers concluded their most successful season since 1951 this beautiful November afternoon by notching a 27-12 victory over lowly Minnesota as 54,517 sat witness in Camp Randall Stadium.

The win gave the Badgers an identical record as the "Hard Rocks" of 1951, both for Big Ten play and for an entire season. But the current team finished second in the final conference standings, while the 1951 team finished third, behind champion Illinois, and Purdue, which played two fewer games. Like their 1951 counterparts, the Badgers this year lost only to the Big Ten championship team—Iowa this year—and tied Ohio State.

The victory not only enabled the Badgers to end up in second place, but capped a ten year period—under Ivan Williamson, and Milt Bruhn—during which Wisconsin won 55 games, lost 27, and tied eight in regular season competition, probably the finest ten year period in the school's history of playing football. Eight of those ten years the Badgers finished in the Big Ten's first division, dropping below the top five only in 1955 and 1956.

It took a while for Wisconsin to assert its superiority against Minnesota, as a clipping penalty, and an intercepted pass stopped the Badgers the first two times they had the ball. Dale Hackbart had a pass intercepted for the first time this year in Big Ten play by rival quarterback Jim Reese on the Gopher 2 to stall a Wisconsin drive mid-way in the opening period. The Gopher offense did not perform in high gear at this point, and they had to punt. Starting on Minnesota's 48 yard line, Sidney Williams engineered Wisconsin to the game's opening score in just eight plays.

Williams tossed complete passes to left end Jim Holmes for 11 yards, and to right halfback Ed Hart for seven yards to get the attack underway, then after some short-gainers swept wide off the spread formation, and went down the sidelines 20 yards to score. It was Williams' best running effort of the season. When Paul Shwaiko converted, Wisconsin led 7–0 with 3:26 left to play in the first quarter. The score marked the ninth time this year that the Badgers had scored first on their opponents—every game—and when the period ended with Minnesota not scoring, it gave the Badgers a perfect record of not allowing the opposition to score in the opening quarter all year.

Near the end of the quarter, Hackbart intercepted a Reese pass—his first of three all afternoon—and Wisconsin had possession on the Gopher 32. On the first play, Hackbart lateraled out to Bob Zeman, running wide, and the Wheaton wizard rambled for 25 yards with a great piece of running to the seven yard line. Steiner ran for two, Hackbart for 3, Zeman for what nearly everyone in the stadium thought was a score, and then on fourth down, Hackbart failed—so the officials ruled—and Minnesota took over on the one-inch line.

Two quarterback sneaks got the Gophers out to the five yard line, then punter Tom Robbins was hurried on his third down kick, and Wisconsin had possession on the Minnesota 27. Three plays netted the score, with Hackbart slamming for seven, Jon Hobbs running for 13 on the draw play, and Hackbart rambling over the opponents' right tackle for seven yards and the tally at 11:15 of the second period. Jon Hobbs kicked the extra point for a 14–0 lead after Hackbart's successful pass to Earl Hill for two points was nullified by a Wisconsin offsides penalty.

The remainder of the first half's action was scoreless, with a Wisconsin threat being stopped by an interception of a Williams' pass by Gopher captain Bernard "Mike" Svendsen, and Hackbart stopping a Gopher drive with another interception in the end zone.

Minnesota apparently had scored when right halfback Bill Kauth smashed over from the three yard line, but an offsides penalty against Minnesota cancelled the play, then on a fourth down pass, Hackbart came up with the ball and moved the Badgers out of danger with a 20-yard runback.

Such a play was a key play in this traditional battle—the 68th renewal with Wisconsin winning for the 22nd time (38 losses, eight ties)—for it might have been a different type of game had the Gophers scored there. They may have become fired up, and such drive might have carried them to an upset win. Fortunately, it didn't happen, though in the third period, a brief relapse by Wisconsin on a kickoff following a Gopher score was most reminiscent of that dreaded second half against Iowa.

The third period saw both teams tally, with Wisconsin holding the Gophers on the Badger 26 after the losers had recovered a fumble by Jon Hobbs, then launching a ten play, 74 yard march that seemingly clinched the verdict. Hackbart was at the helm in the drive, and he threaded the needle with his passes—nine and 14 yards to Zeman, nine yards to Steiner, and 17 more yards to Zeman, coupled with good strong running by Zeman and Steiner, the latter ripping off a 19 yard gainer on a reverse.

Zeman ploughed over from the two yard line with 6:01 left to play in the quarter to cap the drive, and 20-0 lead. The extra point attempt failed.

The play momentarily stunned the Badgers, for on the kickoff they stood and watched the ball bounce crazily around, and then Everett Gerths, the man who kicked off for the Gophers, fell on it on the Badgers 24. It looked like trouble. When Bill Kauth ripped off gains to the Wisconsin 19, then the 12, the Badgers knew they were in trouble. The defense, however, marshalled its forces and held the Gophers in check, taking over the ball on downs on the nine yard line, and Wisconsin fans breathed a sigh of relief.

Center Dick Teteak hauled down a Johnson aerial as the third period drew to a close, and returned nine yards to the Wisconsin 43. In six plays, with 13:40 of the fourth quarter yet to be played, the Badgers scored. Hackbart rifled a pass to Jim Holmes for 13 yards to start the drive, and then Hackbart ran for 17 to the Gopher 26. A five yard backfield in motion penalty nullified the play, and the Badgers were back on the Gopher 48. Sophomore fullback Tom Wiesner ran for four yards, then the Badgers pulled off a play mindful of their final scoring play against Northwestern. Hackbart, on a spread, fumbled, recovered, regained possession of the ball, stiff-armed one would-be tackler, ran wide, stopped, and tossed a long pass. Bill Hobbs gathered the ball in on the three yard line and stepped into the end zone for the Badgers' final score of the game. Paul Shwaiko place-kicked the extra point for a 27-6 lead.

Later in the quarter, Ed Hart dropped a Hackbart pass near the goal line that would have been a certain score, and on the next play, Hackbart's pass was intercepted by left guard Dean Odegard. The Gophers started a 90 yard march. Larry Johnson, the soph quarterback was the star of the march, starting with a 15 yard gain by running when he appeared trapped trying to pass. Then followed six straight pass plays—to Arlie Bomstad for 15, to end Tom Moe for 11, to right half Bill Kauth for 18, to Moe again for 28, to Kauth for 2, and to Moe again for 14 yards and a first down on the Badgers' three yard line. A 15 yard clipping penalty after the 18 yard pass to Kauth set the Gophers back to the Wisconsin 47, but that didn't deter Johnson; he just kept throwing and completing. With the ball on the three, Kauth made a yard, then Johnson rammed over the score that made it 27-12. The extra point attempt by kicking was wide. The game ended soon afterward.

This was a rugged battle for both teams, and Wisconsin had the better of the line play, although nothing should be taken away from the Gophers. They hit hard, too, as attest seven Wisconsin fumbles, three of which Minnesota recovered. The Badgers grabbed six Gopher passes, one short of the Big Ten mark they set against Minnesota in 1954.

It was a successful season, marked by a fine won-lost record, a high national ranking, many individual honors for the players, and a tremendous job by all the members of the coaching staff. Let's hope that next year is just as successful. See you then.

Is This the "Top Badger Fan"?

THE WAY it started was that there was a story in a newspaper about some man who was named as the one who probably had seen more Wisconsin home football games than any Badger fan.

Theodore W. Brazeau, '96, a Wisconsin Rapids attorney, saw the story, read it again, and delivered a judgment.

"Why I know I've seen more games than that," he said. "I'm sure I have because I started watching Wisconsin football teams about 18 years earlier."

Mr. Brazeau, now edging onto 86 years of age, makes no claim that he has seen more games than any other Wisconsin follower, but he has some telling credentials.

This is Wisconsin's 70th year of inter-collegiate football, and Brazeau has seen all but five of the previous 69 Badger elevens in action, most of them three or more times a year.

He started at Wisconsin in 1892 and finished law school in 1900 after dropping out a year as an undergraduate and for still another year while he was in law school.

"I figure that I attended an average of three games a year since entering the university," said Brazeau, "and perhaps more, as I attended every game while I was in school."

He missed two years of seeing any games; one when he was in the hospital during the entire football season and another when his son, Richard, was in service.

Vivid are his memories of some of the earlier games.

"One of the most exciting games," he recalls, "was the first victory of Wisconsin over Minnesota in 1894 when our star halfback, Ikey Karel, (later Judge John W. Karel) ran over for our single touchdown, making the score 6-0.

"Madison went wild over this victory, and the Cardinal (student newspaper) came out on red paper. Minnesota before that time had come down from the north with a bunch of flaxen-haired Swedes weighing in the neighborhood of a quarter of a ton each and had beaten us 63-0 one year, 26-22 another year, 32-4 another and 40-0 the year before this victory."

Mr. Brazeau also recalls a bone-cracking battle here against Purdue in 1893.

Of that he writes:

"The Purdue game was always rough, and our team had come back from a game at Lafayette all broken up and with one of our players having a broken arm.

"The following year, Purdue had a good share of its team out of the boiler factory located in Lafayette and picked up one player from Chicago who played on the Chicago Athletics.

"In the game played on the lower campus, where the library now stands, in 1893, we beat Purdue, 36-30, in a game that was about as much fighting as playing, and Purdue went away bruised from end to end."

He remembers a Thanksgiving Day game against Michigan in Chicago in 1899 where Pat O'Dea kicked from Wisconsin's five over the Michigan goal and the Badgers got a touchdown when a Michigan player touched it and a Badger fell on the ball.

Wisconsin had been playing football only three years when Mr. Brazeau first enrolled here.

"I feel," said Mr. Brazeau, "that football has done a great deal for Wisconsin and that it cements the loyalty of the alumni and creates a spirit of pride and loyalty in the students. I think the last few years we have had a great coaching staff with Williamson and Bruhn."

Incidentally, Mr. Brazeau had season tickets for Wisconsin's 1958 home games. He doesn't maintain that he has seen more Wisconsin games than any other Badger follower, but he must be high on the list.

He has seen all of Wisconsin's great players, seen the Badgers in moments of glory and black disappointment.

"I kept up my attendance during the lean years," he said, "always hoping that something was going to come out the next time or the next year, and it did."

BUCKY SAYS:

"It's the team on the field that wins the game."

The Coach trains his players and maps out strategy for the game. The Trainer makes sure the men are in top physical condition. The equipment manager keeps uniforms in the best condition, and the ushers "man" the stadium. But for that vital 60 minutes, only the eleven men on the scrimmage line can affect the score.

The installation of heating and air conditioning equipment is much like that, too. The essential person is your local dealer. Mueller Climatrol not only furnishes equipment of top-quality design, but chooses and trains its dealers to assure you of high comfort craftsmanship. Your local Mueller Climatrol dealer makes a complete survey of your home. Each and every installation is custom-made to the exact individual requirements necessary — and naturally, the finest equipment, Mueller Climatrol, is used.
