HAROLD SPEAKMAN

THE THREE

Three dead men rose on nimble toes
Above the frozen clay;
And as they sped, each of the Dead
Told how he died that day.

Said one, "I sent the Regiment
To safety as I fell."
The Second cried, "Before I died
I hurled the foe to Hell.

As for the Third, he spoke no word
But hastened on his way,
Until at last a whisper passed:
"How did you die today?"

"There was a maid slept unafraid
Within a hut," he said.
"I searched the place and for a space
I thought that all had fled.

"But her breast glowed white in the morning light
As the early dawn grew red;
Tiptoe I came in lust and shame
And stood beside her bed.

"And there I fought an evil thought
And won—and turned to go;
Then as I went into my tent
A bullet struck me low."

The others heard and spoke no word
(For dead men understand),
But 'round they turned and their deep eyes burned
As they gripped his leaden hand.

The Quarterly Index which has been published for many years by the Milwaukee Public Library came to an end on Jan. 1, 1918. No sufficient reason appeared for its further existence. Few people called for it or even saw it. By the time it appeared in print it was history. The needs of the library and the public will be better served by a pamphlet that is a little nearer the firing line. THE LIBRARY LOG will appear each month, except July and August. It will include the material formerly printed in the Quarterly Index and the Municipal Library Bulletin with other items such as may be of interest to patrons of the library, and to the library staff. Any citizen of Milwaukee may have the pamphlet sent to his home by depositing the postage at the receiving counter of the Delivery Room and having his name entered upon the mailing list.

The Library Log will be printed at the end of the month. It will contain the additions made to the library during the month, with the call numbers.

A page of the L. L. will be devoted to some of the worth-while books of the month, with brief commentary.

Suggestions looking to the improvement of the library service will be received gladly. Correspondents are requested to give name and address for convenient reference.

Harold Speakman is a Milwaukee man of the younger generation, of whom we have reason to be proud. He is an artist and a poet and what is more, he is a man. Read his poem "Three" and then read Proverbs xvi, 32, and you have the best ideals of the American army. And, by the way, wasn't that the spirit of Cromwell's Army—the Ironsides? Plymouth Rock gets above water every once in a while!

* * * * *

We need more books for our soldiers. All that have been received have been forwarded, and the call still comes for more. Our boys need the best we can give them. All classes of books can be useful. The Library Bulletin notes that magazines should not be sent to the camps in the absence of explicit directions. Directions with regard to both books and magazines may be had by writing to:

Depot Quartermaster, U. S. Army, 3615 Iron Street, Chicago, Illinois.

Latest reports give an even more satisfying standing for the results of Wisconsin's efforts toward raising its share in the million dollar library war fund. Under date of December 24, 1917, the reports show a total of something over $1,600,000. The first ten states in order of amount contributed are as follows:

|                     |              |
|---------------------|--------------|
| New York .....      | $411,590.55 |
| Massachusetts ..... | 182,087.75   |
| Illinois .....      | 104,947.42   |
| Ohio .....          | 76,510.83    |
| Pennsylvania .....  | 46,462.89    |
| Connecticut .....   | 45,979.75    |
| Wisconsin .....     | 41,114.56    |
| Indiana .....       | 40,582.94    |
| California .....    | 35,679.12    |
| Iowa .....          | 30,816.91    |

The New York total includes the Carnegie gift of $320,000. If that were excluded, both Massachusetts and Illinois would stand above the Empire State in the list. It is of special significance that a national committee of librarians and library workers have achieved a distinct triumph in the business field—a triumph the credit of which belongs in a large measure to Frank P. Hill, chairman of the Finance Committee."—Library Bulletin.

* * * * *

Don't become impatient if the latest novel or war narrative is not in when asked for. There are 80,000 card holders drawing books and no library can purchase an unlimited amount of ephemeral literature. There are 109 reservations now for "Over the Top." How many will there be six months hence?

* * * * *

Come to the library office and get some sheets of special paper and make a few scrap books for the hospitals and hospital ships. Ask for a copy of the specifications. Some of the books turned in are works of art, not only in the beautiful workmanship, but in the excellent judgment and good taste displayed. The library will gladly furnish the supplies. These scrap books, suggested first in England by Kipling, are a great blessing to sick men.

Is the life of a library worker worth living? Ask the young girl who received this letter from a lady who asked for help.

Chicago University.

"Dear Miss _____
 . . . I did not find anyone who was not pleasant when I gathered thesis material in the Milwaukee library. I never was in a library where everybody was so accommodating and helpful."

READERS.

"Books have four sorts of readers; sponges, which extract all without any distinguishment of quality; hour-glasses, which receive and pour it out as fast; bags, which retain only the dregs of the spices and good, letting the purer wine escape; and sieves, which separate and sort out the true nuggets of pure gold, retaining the best only."—Quoted in "Hidden Way Across the Threshold."

The Civil Service Commission has validated the appointment of Miss Jessie B. Weston as Superintendent of the Training Class and she will take up her duties immediately. Miss Weston is a graduate of the University of Chicago, and, for six years after leaving the University, was teacher of History and English in the Sioux City High School. On leaving her work of teaching, she entered the Denver library to gain experience, and, after completing her novitiate in Denver, entered the library school at Urbana. From graduation, and until the present time, she has been assistant to Mr. Winsor in the University Library.

Miss Weston's special work will be to conduct the elementary training class, and to supervise the studies of the older members of the library staff who are preparing for the promotional examinations of the Civil Service Commission. She will be warmly welcomed in Milwaukee and immediately made a member of the clan.

* * * * *

At its meeting on Saturday, Jan. 26th, the Civil Service Commission unanimously passed a resolution to make the final examination of the Wisconsin Library School an official examination of the Commission. The effect of this will be to put all the graduates of the Wisconsin Library School on the eligible list of the Milwaukee Civil Service Commission without further examination. This is a wise and far-seeng bit of business, and in line with the best civil service procedure. It gives Milwaukee the right to secure service from the library school for which this city pays taxes, and it assures the city an adequate supply of professionally trained workers for its needs. The Civil Service Commission has taken very high ground and is to be commended.

* * * * *

During the month of January each of the eighth grade A classes of the grammar schools in the city has spent a morning at the Public Library to receive instruction in the use of the library. This instruction was given by means of a talk and the moving picture apparatus, and was followed by a trip through the different departments of the library as a means of enabling the children to use the Public Library as a Continuation School. The amount of useful work accomplished was quite surprising and the keen interest of both the teachers and pupils was shown throughout. This is the second season that this co-operative work between the library and public schools has been systematically carried out. It will be continued each semester hereafter. It is gratifying to find how much can be done in a short time with the aid of a projection apparatus. The work is in charge of Mr. McKillop.

* * * * *

In future issues of THE LIBRARY LOG, a column will be devoted to the interests of the branches, and the co-operation of the librarians throughout the city and the county will be welcomed. The librarians throughout the system are requested to prepare lists and bulletins on gardens and gardening at once.

An excellent discussion entitled: "War Terms; Their Pronunciation and Definition, Where to Find Them and How to Keep Up-to-Date" may be found in the Wisconsin Library Bulletin, January, 1918. (Copy in Reference Room.) The article is by Miss Mary Emogene Hazeltine, preceptor of the Library School of the University of Wisconsin, and is exceedingly timely and complete. The average citizen dodges or takes to the tall timber when he meets some of the names of places, and persons, and the war terms and the slang of the last month. Miss Hazeltine has rendered a real service in showing where to find quickly what can be found, and how to depend on watchful waiting for the rest.

BOOK NOTES FOR BUSY PEOPLE

Among the new books our readers will find an unusual number of fine biographies. We have noted a few of them below. Space forbids the inclusion of all which are well worth reading. Attention should be called to Bland's "Li Hung Chang", Herriek's "Audubon the Naturalist", Innes' "Life, Art and Letters of George Innes", Orcutt's "Burrows of Michigan and the Republican Party", Richards' "Abigail Adams and Her Times" and Young-husband's "A Soldier's Memories in Peace and War".

Aldrich, Mildred. On the Edge of the War Zone; from the Battle of the Marne to the Entrance of the Stars and Stripes. 1917. Small, Maynard. $1.25

940.91-A360

This very interesting little volume continues the record begun in "A Hilltop on the Marne". Little incidents of every day fill the pages of the book. Do soldiers in active service really want books? Here is Miss Aldrich's answer. Two soldiers "a tall six-footer and a smaller chap" knocked at her door. "So I let them loose in the library, and they bubbled, one in English and the other in French while they revelled in the books. . . . The English-speaking French lad wanted either Shakespeare or Milton . . . as for the Child of the Regiment, he wanted a Balzac. I don't need to tell you that when the news spread that there were books in the house on the hilltop, that could be borrowed for the asking, I had a stream of visitors".

Barber, H. The Aeroplane Speaks. 1917. McBride. $2.50
629.17-B23
Ref629.17-B23

This book has been adopted by the United States government for instruction of aviators. The first part of the book, which is more or less non-technical, personifies the various principles involved in the operation of the aeroplane, making "Power", "Lift", "Thrust", etc., explain their own needs. The second part is more technical and presumes on some progress made by the reader in a knowledge of aviation. The book is well illustrated.

Breshkovsky, Catherine. The Little Grandmother of the Russian Revolution. 1917. Little, Brown. $2.00 92-B842

Madame Catherine Breshkovsky, liberated by the Russian provisional government, is a most interesting and picturesque personality. She was an exile in Siberia for thirty years. This account of her life consists of letters and reminiscences, very well edited by Alice Stone Blackwell.

Clark, John S. The Life and Letters of John Fiske; 2 vols. 1917. Houghton, Mifflin. $7.50 92-F541C

Mr. Clark, an intimate friend of John Fiske, tells the story of the life of the famous historian. Many of Fiske's letters are used in the course of the narrative with comment by Mr. Clark. Mr. Fiske's New England boyhood, his connection with the famous group of men including Darwin, Huxley and Spencer, his struggles with the theology of the day and his ultimate conclusions concerning religion, are all very interesting. Many Milwaukee people remember Mr. Fiske as a guest of Dr. G. W. Peckham, our librarian for a number of years, and will be interested in the letters which give an account of Fiske's visits to Milwaukee. He speaks of a welcome accorded by a brass band which seems to have amused him, but he does not mention the "joyful noise" created by a line of tin pans which Dr. Peckham once arranged for the reception of his friend. Mr. Fiske happened to arrive in the night and had requested that he be allowed to enter the house quietly in order not to disturb the family.

Collins, Francis A. The Air Man. 1917.
Century. $1.30 629.17-C72

A very readable account of the aeroplane, how it is built, how it flies, how the engine works and how to become a pilot. The book is accurate but not too technical to be understood by the general reader. Flying as an occupation, especially in the service of the United States government, is favorably considered.

Franck, Harry A. Vagabonding down the Andes. 1917. Century. $4.00 918-F82

Mr. Franck, who is certainly by nature a "tramp" in the best sense of the word, warns us that this book is "no tale of adventures". However that may be, his account of a tramp down the ridge of the Andes to Buenos Aires, is fully as interesting as any tale of adventure. The author set forth to study and faithfully report the ways of the common people. There are many illustrations from photographs and a map of the route followed.

Hale, Edward Everett, jr. Life and Letters of Edward Everett Hale; 2 vols. 1917.
Little, Brown. $5.00 92-H161H

Holmes, John H. Life and Letters of Robert Collyer; 2 vols. 1917. Dodd, Mead.
$5.00 92-C715H

These two notable biographies may well be considered together, since the subjects were intimate friends and both were Unitarian ministers. Edward Everett Hale, born in 1822 of a long line of New England's finest scholars, was graduated from Harvard at seventeen years of age. Many years of hard work followed. His work in the ministry gave him little time for writing, but his "Man Without a Country" is a classic in our literature.

Robert Collyer, born of poor parents in a little manufacturing town of England, went to work in a mill when he was eight years old. His day's work lasted from six o'clock in the morning till eight o'clock at night, yet he found time for self-education, because he loved books and reading. He came to America, did notable work during the Civil War, and for many years exerted a wide influence as pastor of Unity Church in Chicago and of the Church of the Messiah in New York City.

Hazen, Charles D. Alsace-Lorraine under German Rule. 1917. Holt, $1.25
943.4-H42

The writer of this book is Professor of History in Columbia University. He gives us a brief, accurate and interesting history, answering just the questions which arise in the mind of the person who wishes to know why German rule in Alsace-Lorraine should cease. A short account of the provinces before the German conquest is followed by a concise and well-written review of Germany's methods in dealing with a people who have neither desired nor consented to Germanization.

Hearn, Lafcadio. Life and Literature. 1917.
Dodd, Mead. $3.50 804-H43

This book is the third volume of lectures delivered by Hearn at the University of Tokyo, the earlier volumes being entitled "Interpretations of Literature" and "Appreciations of Poetry". The critical comment contained in "Life and Literature" will appeal to all who are interested either in Hearn or in literary criticism. The endeavor on Hearn's part to interpret for the Japanese the life and literature of the West, results in a very lucid presentation of many phases of his subject. The personality of the author is a very interesting factor in any of Hearn's literary work.

Kellogg, Vernon L., and A. Englebert. The Food Problem. 1917. Macmillan. $1.25
613.2-K29

The authors of this book are members of the United States Food Administration. All aspects of the food situation are fully covered. Part one is devoted to a very clear setting forth of what the problem really is and the possible means of its solution. Part two is a popular presentation of the technology of food, the theory of nutrition, etc. There is a brief chapter on Patriotism and Food.

Matthews, Brander. These Many Years.
1917. Scribner. $3.00 92-M438

A most delightful book is this autobiography of Brander Matthews, professor of literature in Columbia University and a critic and playwright of note. Born of sturdy New England stock, destined by his father for the profession of "millionaire", the boy Brander had every advantage of education and travel before the loss of his father's fortune turned the young man's ideas to literary pursuits. Some of the chapter headings are: New York in the early seventies; Parisian memories; Early London memories; and a chapter of especial interest as coming from an expert critic, on the art of book-reviewing.

Morse, Edward S. Japan Day by Day.
1917. Houghton. $8.00 915.2-M88

Professor Morse, some time director of the Peabody Museum at Salem, Massachusetts, became, in 1877, professor of zoölogy in the University of Tokio. The years during which Japan was passing through a most interesting phase of development were spent by the very observant professor in close contact with the daily life of the Japanese people. His book is redolent of the atmosphere of old Japan. The quaint little people, their customs, the psychology of a race so different from our own, the gradual modification of oriental ideas by western influence, are all topics of absorbing interest.

Oberg, Erik, and F. D. Jones, eds. Machinery's Encyclopedia; 7 vols. 1917. Industrial Press. $36.00 Ref621.03-012

This is an important addition to the shelves in the Reference Department. It is, as the title page explains, "A work of reference covering practical mathematics and mechanics, machine design, machine construction and operation, electrical, gas, hydraulic and steam power machinery, metallurgy and kindred subjects in the engineering field". Over seventy collaborators contribute signed articles, well illustrated and arranged in alphabetical order. A convenient topical index is provided.

1917. Century. $3.00 917.5-S91

Mr. Street, the author of "Abroad at Home", is a wide-awake traveler, with keen instincts and a lively sense of humour. He conducts his reader through most of the cities of the South, calling attention to many matters which the casual traveler might overlook and putting in a plea for a better understanding of the South and its problems by the North. The illustrations are appropriate and interesting.

MUNICIPAL REFERENCE BRANCH

City Hall, 8th Floor

Winifred B. Merrill, Librarian

Telephone Main 3715

Hours: 8 to 5:15; Sat. 8 to 12:15

Municipal Reference Library. In contrast to the other branches of the Public Library, whose collections of books embrace information on all subjects, the Municipal Reference Library is a special library whose functions are to provide information on municipal government and on the varied activities carried on by municipalities. With this aim in view, the library collects books and pamphlets from every available source, and supplements the printed information by extended correspondence. The library aims to serve especially city officials and civic workers, but it welcomes any opportunity which may arise to extend its services to the general public.

Municipal Reference Library Bulletin. The Municipal Reference Library Bulletin, which has been issued by the Municipal Reference Library for the past two years as a separate bulletin, will hereafter be included in The Library Log of the Milwaukee Public Library which makes its initial appearance with this issue as a monthly publication of the library. Those who have been receiving the Bulletin will receive the Log in which a separate section will be devoted to the interests of the Municipal Reference Library.

LIST OF RECENT ADDITIONS

Americanization

Clark, Marion K. The English for safety campaign by the New York state industrial commission. N. Y. state ind. com. bul. Dec. 1917. 331.825Z

By its "English for safety campaign" the N. Y. state industrial commission intends to make a concerted drive for the conservation of labor. Its campaign is based on the theory that the Americanization of foreigners is essential to promoting safety work and decreasing the number of industrial accidents.

Charities

Milwaukee, Wis. Centralized budget of philanthropies. Report. 1916-17.

This report, the first issued since the federated budget system was organized in Milwaukee, is a very valuable addition to the literature on that subject. It contains a survey of the methods and the work done by the centralized budget, a brief report from each of the associations which receive funds and a directory of the social welfare agencies in Milwaukee.

New York City public welfare committee. Humanizing the greater city's charities: work of the department of public charities of New York. N. Y. 1917. 144p. 361.9N48h

Few people realize that the New York department of public charities, a branch of the New York city government, is the largest charitable organization in the world. The pamphlet is descriptive of its work and the many institutions under its jurisdiction. Illustrated by photographs, pen sketches, charts and tables, the report has been made exceedingly attractive and interesting.

Child Labor

Abels, Margaret Hutton. From school to work: study of children leaving school under 16 years of age to go to work in Waltham, Mass., an industrial community of about 30,000 inhabitants. Wash. 1917. 59p. (U. S.—Children's bureau bul.) 374.2Ab3

Children

Guild, Arthur Alden. Baby farms in Chicago. Chic. 1917. 27p. 362.7G94

This thorough study of the conditions existing in homes where children were boarded apart from their parents was made by the Chicago juvenile protective association. The report recommends: That every child shall be considered dependent one month after its parent, parents or legal guardian have ceased to provide for its care; That every home where a child is boarded apart from its parents with one not related shall be registered, and all homes where two or more children are boarded shall be licensed by the State department of public welfare; That all home placing organizations or individuals shall be licensed; That it shall be made unlawful to give away the permanent custody of a child without first obtaining consent of the Juvenile court, the Juvenile court to have exclusive power to issue a decree for adoption.

Civics

Minneapolis, Minn., woman's club—Social economics dept. Brief outline of Minneapolis city government. Minn. 1917. 32p. 407M66b

The material for the pamphlet was gathered together from scattered sources by the members of the Minneapolis woman's club in preparation for their study class program. The pamphlet is cited here as an example of an outline on local municipal government which gives students and civic workers the information which they usually have such difficulty in finding.

Civil Service

Milwaukee county, Wis.—Civil service commission. Civil service act and rules for the Milwaukee county government. Milw. 1918. 183p. 351.6M64c

Rules were adopted by the commission on December 5, 1917, and became effective January 1, 1918.

Milwaukee county, Wis.—Civil service commission. Civil service plan for the county of Milwaukee: classification and standardization of personal service, civil service rules and regulations and constructive recommendations for positive employment administration. [Milw.] 1917. 196p. 351.6M64i Prepared on the authorization of the County board of supervisors by J. L. Jacobs for the Civil service commission.

Consolidation of City and County Government

California tax payers' association. City and county consolidation for Los Angeles. Los Angeles, 1917. 194p. 414.4C1

In this study of city-county consolidation, three ideas are stated as recognized principles in a discussion of more efficient government for densely populated communities, namely: "the need for complete consolidation of all local governing agencies in the natural metropolitan area; the need for a simple system of governmental organization, with power and responsibility centralized, as in the city manager plan, and the short ballot. The report considers broadly the governmental situation in Los Angeles city and Los Angeles county, and indicates the benefits that might be expected to follow from the application to that situation of the three ideas mentioned."

Social Surveys

Alameda county, Cal.—Public welfare, Board of. Survey of the social agencies of Alameda county based on 1915-1916 reports. Oakland, 1917. 56p. 363.2AL1

As stated in the introduction "the purpose of this survey is to give to the social workers of the county a hand-book of information as accurate as it has been possible to obtain; to give to the public an accounting of the social work attempted, by whom, at what cost, and with what results; to give to the organizations carrying on this work a picture of the whole, so that they may view their own activities in relation to those of other groups working in the same or related departments; to encourage the keeping of uniform records for public information, and to help in the study of the causes of dependency, sickness and delinquency, with a view to their elimination; and, last, to lay the foundation for future and better surveys which shall record progress as a program of constructive social work as year by year developed to meet the needs of Alameda county."

To social workers outside of Alameda county, the report should prove of interest as an example of a survey in which existing conditions are very vividly and effectively shown.

WHAT SOLDIERS READ

OFFICIAL BULLETIN

Washington, D. C., Jan. 26, 1918.

Records kept of reading matter furnished to the enlisted men by the camp libraries established by the American Library Association are not only interesting as answering the question, what soldiers read, but significant of purposes animating America's army of democracy.

In one day's issue of books by the American Library Association camp library at Camp Meade, the following subjects were reported: French history, mechanics, topography, and strategy in war, self-propelled vehicles, hand grenades, field entrenchments, bridges, chemistry, physics, astronomy, geology, hydraulics, electricity, mediaeval history, calculus, civil engineering, geography, American history, surveying, materials of construction, general history, masonry, concrete. About three-quarters of the books taken out were non-fiction.

Titles picked at random from one page of a report from the American Library Association camp library at Camp Sherman include: George Ade's "The Girl Proposition," Jack London's "Burning Daylight," Tolstoi's "Anna Karenina," H. G. Wells' "The Soul of a Bishop," Ellis' "Plattsburg Manual," Meadowcroft's "A. B. C. of Electricity," Zerbe's "Aeroplanes," Haweis' "Music and Morals," Guizot's "History of Civilization in Europe," Carlyle's "French Revolution," Wells' "Italy, France and Britain at War," and Gerard's "Four Years in Germany."

Some of the men coming to the camp libraries seem to be having their first experience of the possibilities of the world of books. Others of the men apparently are taking advantage of the opportunity of catching up on some of the reading that, postponed until now, is made possible to them. Boswell's "Life of Johnson," Bergson's "Creative Evolution," and Gibbon's "Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire," are among titles noted in the soldiers' reading. Among the men a number are following various branches of English literature under the direction of the camp librarian.

Two general classes of reading are shown by the reports from the camp librarians. One of them is recreational, and causes demand for fiction, poetry, and drama. The other is informational and causes demand for books dealing with the numerous aspects of military science, including artillery, aviation, signaling, technique of drilling, electricity, mechanical and civil engineering, transportation, diet, foodstuffs, roadmaking, care of horses, making and repairing equipment, and other topics relating to the present business of the men, namely, war. In addition, there is much reading dealing with farming, trades, occupations, and the forms of activity which engaged the men before they went into camp. There is much interest in the study of French, and particularly so in histories and descriptions of France. Books dealing with the war, its causes, and the issues involved, and narratives of personal experiences in the war, are greatly in demand.
