Badger Spirit Soars High for U. Homecoming

"Remember 1912" is Slogan for Badger-Iowa Homecoming Game Saturday

The onrushing tide of Badger Homecoming enthusiasm is sweeping higher this week as expectations for the largest Wisconsin Homecoming celebration in the history of the State University looms on the immediate horizon.

Coach Harry Stuhldreher's fighting grid machine, which meets the University of Iowa this Saturday, October 16, for the feature event of the weekend Homecoming program, vow to "Remember 1912," slogan of this year's Homecoming. It is the 25th anniversary of the great 1912 Badger squad which under Coach Bill Juneau, strode through the Big Ten race that year undefeated and untied for the championship. Members of the 1912 squad have been invited to return to the Wisconsin campus for the Homecoming this year.

Inspired by their team's vastly improved performance this year, more than 10,000 loyal Wisconsin football fans jammed the State University lower campus recently for a huge rally on the eve of the Marquette-Wisconsin battle, and upwards of 15,000 are expected to throng the huge field in front of the University library this Friday evening, October 15, for the Homecoming rally on the eve of the classic with Iowa.

Four music groups will journey from the Iowa campus with their team to attend the big Homecoming game at Camp Randall. In addition to their regular marching football band, the Iowans will send a 50-piece Scotch bagpipe corps, dressed in traditional kilts, a 200-voice singing ensemble, and a large drum and bugle corps. Prof. Ray Dvorak, director of the Wisconsin band, promised a series of elaborate surprises for the big weekend on behalf of the Badger group.

Twenty members of the 1912 championship squad have received invitations from Gov. Philip F. La Follette to attend a luncheon given by him in their honor. The Badgers of 1912 will be feted at the rally and at various other events on the two-day Homecoming program.

Dykstra Committee Report is Praised in National Newspaper

Praise for C. A. Dykstra, president of the University of Wisconsin, and the report of his national Urbanism committee, entitled "Our Cities—Their Role in the National Economy," is contained in the "People of the Week" column in a recent issue of the United States News, weekly news magazine of national affairs published in Washington, D. C.

Pres. Dykstra was chairman of the Urbanism committee, which was appointed by the federal government's National Resources committee, to make a study of problems affecting urban America. The report of the Urbanism committee, made public several weeks ago by the government, has gained favorable comment throughout the country.

The "People of the Week" column says of Pres. Dykstra and his committee's report:

"When depression bore so heavily on those crowded in cities, organizations interested in their welfare proposed that a survey be made of urban problems. It had never been done. Pres. Roosevelt assented, and his National Resources committee turned at once to an acknowledged authority in the field—Clarence Addison Dykstra, who had been Cincinnati's city manager since 1930.

"Recently Mr. Dykstra returned to the academic world as president of the University of Wisconsin. What may prove to be the climax of his career as a student of municipal government came with the publication meanwhile of the result of his labors, entitled 'Our Cities—Their Role in the National Economy.' President Roosevelt released it last week with words of praise.

"Coordinating the work of many experts, Mr. Dykstra exhibited again capacities as an administrator which have brought him recognition since he took to teaching. The report, in the words of those associated with him during months of preparation, reflects not only his conviction that planning can mitigate hardships for cities as well as people, but also his own personal directness and thoroughness."

dean of the college of letters and science, delivered June 20, 1937, in which is appraised the work of the late Prof. Frederick Jackson Turner, historian, noted interpreter of the development of the American frontier;

"Charge to the Graduating Class," by Clarence A. Dykstra, president of the University, delivered June 21, 1937; "Tribute to Carrie Chapman Catt," founder and honorary chairman of the National Conference on the Cause and Cure of War, by Mrs. Stephen C. Peabody, Ripon; and "Tribute to Mrs. Jessie Jack Hooper," co-founder of the Conference, by Mrs. Arthur McGeech, Eagle, addresses given at the first Wisconsin Conference on the Cause and Cure of War, University of Wisconsin, June 16, 1937.

Other tributes to notable educators, available in similar form, pertain to the life and work of the late Stephen M. Babcock and to Miss Ellen C. Sablin, president emerita of Milwaukee-Downer college.

Upon application to the department of debating and discussion, a copy of the Dykstra address will be sent free; each of the other pamphlets will be sent for five cents to apply on costs.

State U. Opens Nation's First Workers' School

First Year-Round School for Workers Enrolls Many Students

With classes already being planned for 20 cities in all parts of Wisconsin, the first permanent state-wide school for workers in industry in the United States is being inaugurated this month at the University of Wisconsin.

Established by the State University board of regents last June, the new year-round school for workers is enrolling hundreds of students in all parts of the state. The new school is under the direction of E. E. Schwartztrauber, and Miss Alice Shoemaker, who is widely known throughout the state for her work with the Wisconsin Summer School for Workers in Industry.

The new year-round School for Workers is really an outgrowth of the University's Summer School for Workers, which was established on the campus 12 years ago.

The new school will provide Wisconsin workers with an opportunity for organized study during the entire year. The classes will be held not only in Madison but in communities throughout the state. Teachers for the classes will be provided by the school for workers at the University. Each of these teachers might be referred to as a "modern circuit rider," since each will have a group of communities in which to teach day or night classes.

Workers' Education councils are now being formed in the various Wisconsin communities in which workers have already expressed the desire for classes. The classes may be organized by unions, central labor bodies, or union auxiliaries, other workers' organizations, or by individual workers. Class terms, each about 10 weeks in length, begin the week of Oct. 11, Jan. 3, and March 14.

Many of the courses offered in the new school are much the same as might be found in an ordinary college classroom. Among the subjects offered are: Parliamentary Law, Public Speaking, American Trade Unionism, Problems of Labor Today, Collective Bargaining, Consumer Problems, Government and the Worker, Your Job and Your Pay, Economics of An Industry, Labor Psychology, and Cooperation.

The new school is under the guidance of a committee of faculty members, including Professors Max C. Otto, Selig Perlman, and F. W. Roe. The director of the school, Mr. Schwartztrauber, began his teaching career in Ohio, and was for 16 years a teacher in the public schools in Portland, Ore., where he organized that city's first workers' school. Later he taught at Carroll college, and during the summer at the Wisconsin summer school for workers. He also taught in the Milwaukee Workers' college for five years. At the University he has almost completed work for his doctor's degree.

A preliminary list of Wisconsin communities in which classes of the new school are now being planned are: Madison, Janesville, Beloit, Beaver Dam, Manitowoc, Two Rivers, Port Washington, Milwaukee, Racine, Kenosha, Appleton, Evansville, Fond du Lac, Neenah-Menasha, Oshkosh, Eau Claire, La Crosse, Stevens Point, New London, and Wausau.

Students, Educators of Wisconsin Attend Country Life Meeting

Delegations from Badger state teachers colleges and the University of Wisconsin are joining with agricultural leaders from all sections of the United States at the annual meeting of the American County Life association at Manhattan, Kansas, this week. They will consider the part which "The People and the Land" play in the scheme of national affairs.

Teachers colleges represented by student delegations includes those at Eau Claire, LaCrosse, Milwaukee, Oshkosh and Platteville. From the University of Wisconsin student groups which will be represented include the University 4H club and the Blue Shield.

Heading the delegation from the University is Dean Chris L. Christensen of the agricultural college, who will address the association on "The Contribution of Cooperatives to Rural Life." John Steuart Curry, artist in residence at the University of Wisconsin, will speak to delegates on "Rural Life and American Art." Olav Anderson, graduate student of the University, will be one of the leaders in a panel discussion on "The Importance of Tending to the People on the Land."

The American Country Life association is the outgrowth of the Country Life commission appointed by President Theodore Roosevelt in 1907, and is now a voluntary association of persons and organizations working for a worthy country life in America.

Wisconsin 4H Teams Represent State at Nation's Dairy Show

Teams giving demonstrations in the production and consumption of dairy products, and a team in dairy cattle judging, are representing Wisconsin 4H clubs this week in the contests and demonstrations held in the 4H club department at the National Dairy Show at Columbus, Ohio.

Those who will make up the dairy cattle judging teams are Kenneth Ourada, Langlade county; Oliver Voight, Manitowoc county; Joseph Tuss, Vilas county; and Paul Gevelinger, Iowa county. The Wisconsin dairy produce team which will demonstrate the use of the Babcock test in improving dairy herds consists of Ralph Jenny and Charles Krueger, both of Green county. Competing in the dairy consumption demonstration class are Harriet and Virginia Stanchfield, of Fond du Lac county, who will demonstrate "How We Include Dairy Products in a Supper Menu."

V. V. Varney, assistant state club leader, who is also serving as the demonstration superintendent for the western states, is accompanying the Wisconsin delegates to the contests.

U. W. to Celebrate "Dad's Day" Nov. 13

Dad will once again come into his own on November 13, when the University of Wisconsin celebrates a revival of the annual "Dad's Day" on the campus in conjunction with the Wisconsin-Purdue football game.

The original Dad's Day was held in 1925. It survived until 1929 when the administration merged it with "Mother's Day" in the spring of the year, calling the combined event Parents'

Weekly Editors of State to Meet at U. W. Oct. 29-30

Pres. Dykstra to Speak at Annual Dinner of State Weekly Newspapermen

More than 100 weekly newspapermen from all parts of the state are expected to attend the annual Wisconsin Weekly Newspaper conference to be held on the University of Wisconsin campus on Friday and Saturday, Oct. 29 and 30, it was announced this week by Prof. Grant M. Hyde, director of the State University's school of journalism.

Three divisions of the University are cooperating with the Wisconsin Press association in sponsoring the conference again this year. They are the school of journalism, the department of agricultural journalism, and the University athletic department.

A feature of the conference will be the annual dinner, to be held in the Memorial Union building on the campus Friday night, Oct. 29, at which Pres. C. A. Dykstra, new head of the University, will be the principal speaker. Prof. C. D. Cool will be toastmaster at the dinner, at which other speakers will be Adlei Horn, president of the Wisconsin Press association, and Harry Stuhldreher, head football coach and athletic director of the University.

Those attending the conference will be guests of Coach Stuhldreher and the Wisconsin athletic department at the Big Ten football game on Saturday afternoon, Oct. 30, between Wisconsin and Northwestern's Wildcats. Big Ten conference champions last year.

During the two-day conference, the state's weekly newspaper editors and publishers will participate in a series of round-table sessions on a variety of live, current problems facing weekly newspapermen today. One of these round-tables will be devoted to "Promotion for Wisconsin Weekly Newspapers," including a discussion by lawyers of the present lottery law and the legality of some of the contests carried on by state weeklies.

Another round-table session will have as its topic "Selling National Advertising," at which a representative of one of the national advertising agencies, and an officer of Media Records will give the publishers the attitude of national advertisers and agencies toward weekly newspaper space. In this connection, the preparation of a better Wisconsin weekly rate book will be discussed.

Another session will be devoted to the topic, "Should Weeklies Go in for Streamlining?," with two representatives of the Linotype company leading the discussion. There will also be a session devoted to the subject, "The Weekly Newspaper in Community Service," during which a variety of subjects, including rural schools, highways, population trends, and tax reduction, are scheduled for discussion.

Weekend. The revival of Dad's Day will not affect the Parents' weekend plans and tradition.

Present plans call for a large dinner following the Football game, special church services on Sunday, dinners at the fraternities, sororities, and dormitories, and open house in the Saturday morning classes on the hill. Special seats will be set aside for the fathers and their children at the game on Saturday afternoon.
