OUR ALUMNI ASSOCIATION

By ERNST C. MEYER, '01

GREAT and growing university represents a great and growing problem. While solutions of minor problems in this one great problem are being found new problems are in the making. The undertaking is therefore endless. Daily work and daily vigilance is the price of progress. Daily there is a demand for ideas of how best to meet the difficulties of the adjustment of a great university to the current needs of those for whose service it is created. No one man possesses a monopoly on those ideas. The greater the supply of ideas the larger the chance of correct solutions of problems. Wise administrators seek ideas. In the past constant appeals have been made by those in whose care the future of the university for the time being rests, from our able president down, to the 9,000 living alumni, to come forward with ideas. It may be doubted, however, whether the response has been worthy of the number and ability of the men and women to whom the appeal has been directed. If this is true it is a matter deserving serious attention and careful thought from every alumnus who is genuinely interested in his Alma Mater. Let us hope that every one of the 9,000 graduates belongs in this class.

How many alumni are sufficiently well posted even to effectively refute wrongful charges of an important nature against the university? How many can correct most of the misrepresentations which sporadically find their way into the public press and talk intelligently on important affairs of the university? How many must choose between bluff and silence when such things are brought to their attention? How many can give an intelligent reply to the question of what is the purpose and what the service of the present Alumni Headquarters at Madison? How few are the alumni who have a clear idea of the work of the Headquarters may be gathered from the recent result of the solicitation of funds for its support, when 9,000 alumni contributed $385 for this purpose. That is slightly more than 4 cents per alumnus.

It would be folly to contribute this to lack of loyalty, or interest, or genuine readiness to assist: Possibly there is something wrong about the alumni organization. It may not be constructed so as to yield results. The farmer who knows what he has grown is likely to look to the thresher if the wheat does not run as it should. Wisconsin knows what it has grown and educated. Possibly the machinery through which ideas—and funds—are to be collected is not properly adjusted. Direct contact may be lacking. It may take but a minor shift somewhere to send a powerful current pulsating throughout the alumni body. What the writer has to say may not accomplish such a shift. But he will risk a few ideas in the earnest hope that both the latch strings and the lightning rods which the administrators of the university constantly have out for ideas from alumni may be made the centers of greater activity than has been the case in the past. Occasionally the lightning rod may be more effective than the latch string. That is also nature's way.

The alumni organization in its externals seems quite complete. There is a constitution, officers are elected, committees are appointed, and a very able general secretary sits in Headquarters at Madison. The "sitting" as here used is a constitutional term, and is not intended to refer in any way to the feverish activity with which the secretary "sits." So much so good. But the organization cannot get the results. It is insisted that the alumni are all right and that something in the organization is wrong.

So far this writing has been easy sledding. It is more difficult to place the finger on the exact spot of weakness. It would be easier to pause where the wise country veterinarian stopped when he placed one hand on the cow's nose and with the other seized the tip of its tail and informed the farmer that the trouble lay somewhere in between. The writer must also plead limited information. Possibly some of his suggestions are already tried realities.

The alumni are scattered about in the state as well as in other states. Wherever enough are found to hold at least all the necessary offices they have formed local alumni associations. These local branches are indispensable to the central or main organization. Have they a mission today? And do they fulfill it? To the writer's mind they generally do not. The alumni meet locally three or four times in a year at smokers and banquets. In large cities they may have weekly lunch clubs, such as are being so delightfully conducted in Chicago. In a few instances the women alumni are welcome. In most cases special meetings are arranged now and then and their presence is mercifully condoned. But when it comes to the real thing only the coeducational men are the privileged guests. Of course at banquets both men and women are generally, although by no means invariably, invited. The local alumni associations have as a rule their own organizations, fix their membership dues, which range from $1 to $5 per year. And in addition the alumnus pays for his lunches, smokers, and banquets.

On the whole the local organizations have a "bully good time of it." They are light-hearted and care-free. They have no worries. If twenty-five per cent of the local alumni are members, well and good; if all of them are, well and better. When one of the "big guns" comes from home, they give him a royal blow-out—as becomes loyal alumni and is fitting for the guest honored. If nobody comes, they don't give any blow-out. If local members are delinquent in dues, they just are. The treasurer heaves a sigh or two, reports the general fact—including, probably, a deficit, and somebody, or some dig. But on the whole local alumni organization membership is one of blessed irresponsibility,—such as is the fortune of all organizations that have no functions—except to gather round the board and to be a jolly good fellow while there,—if that is a function.

And in the meantime, while the local alumnus is using up his university pin money in local dues, smokers, luncheons, banquets and other external insignia of his rank and state, what is happening to the mother of them all—the Alumni Association of the University of Wisconsin, and its Headquarters at Madison? Have you, Mr. Alumnus, thought of that—before? What of the Alumni Association through which you are supposed to speak to the general public and to those who administer the affairs of your Alma Mater? For whether you want it or not, the Wisconsin Alumni Association speaks for you. It is constituted for that very purpose. If it speaks well, it is well for you; if it speaks ill, it is ill for you. If it does not speak as you want it to do, it is up to you to get busy. But whatever you do, don't sit back in your chair down at the local luncheon and smoke your cigar while your old mother at Madison is struggling along by herself calling for her children and for their help. Do something. If you must, wipe out the organization, but do not let it live on in difficulties, a disgrace in the eyes of those who are informed on its inner difficulties, begging for its existence from those who created it,—and getting 4 cents per capita in return. There is no half way in such things. You cannot sit still and shirk your responsibility as an alumnus, any more than you can deny the mother who gave you birth.

Give the local organizations something to do. Confer on them functions. Things without functions go the way of the appendix. Make the first requirement of membership in the local association membership in the Wisconsin Alumni Association. What is more, make it a paid membership, not a credit affair with the chances all against Wisconsin. Make the local treasurer a branch collecting officer for the central headquarters. Post delinquents and exclude them from functions. Cause an odium to attach to non-membership in the central association. Make membership an honor and an honorable thing to do. But whatever is done, emphasize the fact that the Wisconsin association comes first, the local organization second. Why not put such a provision into the constitution? Let there be definite and fixed relationships between local and central bodies.

THE ALUMNI MAGAZINE for March tells an interesting story of what the Headquarters have been doing. The article opens a wide vista of service of the future,—when once the finances have been put on a firm basis. Among those services which can be developed, it seems to me, is the supply to local associations of details on current problems. These matters can then be presented for discussion at local meetings. At times it may be desirable to canvass opinion among alumni as to this or that, even through the formality of a vote. The voices pro and con can be forwarded to Madison and would form interesting exhibits. Such procedure would set alumni to thinking seriously at times about university affairs—and incidentally the function-less local associations would acquire new duties. Possibly the women graduates, if they will unite and make a fight, will have their right to vote (hist! I am speaking of university affairs only) at such times recognized.

There is still another way in which university problems may be put before alumni and after receiving their attention be brought a step nearer to correct solution by securing a formal expression of opinion. Local organizations might be empowered to elect a delegate to an annual convention to be held at Madison. At this convention numerous affairs of great importance might receive attention. These delegates could be authorized to cast their vote for the local organization. This vote might be free or instructed according to the wishes of the association—if the matter up for discussion is known in advance. But this is a matter of detail. The holding of some sort of conference annually seems, however, to suggest the possibility of greater vigor and larger service on the part of alumni.

The present need of raising funds by charity solicitation does not seem to be a happy one, though it may be the only course now open. An amendment to the constitution is suggested which will empower the executive committee to levy special assessments upon all members whenever the regular dues do not cover the needs of the year. The reason for the levy can be brought to the attention of every member through the proper wording of the notice. Charity, or individual generosity, or by whatever name the philanthropic contributions of a limited number of alumni may go, when special appeals are made, while a splendid testimonial of individual loyalty, should be reserved for very unusual occasions. It is to the mind of the writer a distinctly disgraceful performance to permit a few alumni to bear the burdens—however gracefully they may do so—of the great mass of graduates. There does not seem to be any need for it. When funds are required the need can be met in a purely businesslike way, probably in the manner suggested above. A graduation of special assessments on the basis of the time which has passed since graduation would seem equitable. To illustrate: 25 cents for all graduates of less than three years standing; 50 cents for those from 3 to 5 years; 75 cents for those from 5 to 10 years; and $1.00 for those of more than 10 years. The actual amounts assessed can be adjusted to the total amount required.

More attention might probably also be given to the financial report of the treasurer. In addition to being published in THE ALUMNI MAGAZINE this statement might be read at a meeting of each of the local organizations. If a budget for the next year is appended the exhibit would be all the more interesting. In this way the financial affairs of the Association will become more direct realities to a great many members who otherwise have but a faint idea of what the situation really is.

Another matter of great importance to the growth of the Alumni Association should probably also receive more attention than it does. Undergraduates up to the time of leaving the university are generally blissfully ignorant of the purposes and aims of the Alumni Association. If these things were effectively impressed upon seniors a few months before graduation, at some meeting of the class, much good could probably be accomplished. More publicity at this time of the year in the college publications would carry the campaign a step further. Membership blanks can be distributed to all seniors at the proper time, so that every graduate while still in the environment of the university must commune with himself as to whether he shall expatriate himself from the organization which is designed solely for him. The Spartans did not wait until their young men had grown to manhood and had left the paternal home before instructing them in duties owed to the state.

It is not believed that any considerable number of alumni will raise the question whether membership in the Association is really a moral obligation of the graduate. Such it most certainly is. The Association is the regularly constituted organ of all alumni. It is looked upon as their organized spokesman. It was organized in recognition of the obligations of all graduates to keep alive and growing in healthful and vigorous fashion the spirit of the university, as the highest educational institution of the state in which most of the alumni were born. And all this entirely apart from any current administration or its policies. He who is dissatisfied should aim among other things to present his ideas through the Association, instead of avoiding it, and to attempt to bring it to his way of thinking. No one can claim a monopoly on the power or on ideas for administration.

A democratic university like Wisconsin, famed even in distant lands and national in its educational influence, needs the advice and help of its alumni even more than do endowed institutions which are apt to be in the special care of special hands. Wisconsin is a state university; the university of all the people of the state, supported by public funds which are raised largely by taxation. The alumni are the radiating arms of the institution. They represent the numerous connecting links and points of contact between it and the great mass of citizens. They are in a peculiarly advantageous position to criticize and to assist. They have perspective. Their ideas can materially affect the course of progress. Individual alumni have in the past accomplished much. Is it not possible to utilize more fully the great latent thought and energy of the whole body of alumni through the medium of a stronger and more vigorous organization; through the fuller utilization of the local associations; and through the insistent pronouncement of the idea that allegiance to the Wisconsin Alumni Association shall constitute a condition precedent to admission to a local organization and to the enjoyment of its privileges and its pleasures?

THE UPPER CAMPUS

COMMENCEMENT 1913

HERE'S going to be some class to this year's commencement. You might as well admit it—so we won't waste any time proving it. Let's rather get down to brass tacks and give you all the latest information about the alumni end of things.

Class Day.

Monday, June 16th, has been set aside for the picnics, frolics and other forms of amusement of the special reunion classes—the threes and eights. We've seen some of the letters sent out by the reunion committees. They are classics, although they don't observe all the rules of "unity, coherence and emphasis" that used to haunt our dreams as freshmen. From the noise these committees make you may be sure that staid old Madison is soon going to witness a revolution, on or about June 16th, in the year of grace 1913. We warn all accident insurance companies against any Madison "cop" who tries to take out a policy between now and that date. 'Nuf sed!

Alumni Day.

Tuesday is the big Alumni Day. Be around at headquarters (in Library, now Music Hall) early and register. It will cost you only Two Bones to square yourself with the Association for a whole year, and you will in addition receive a tag that will admit you free to the whole campus. You may even walk on the grass if you wear a tag. Prexy forgot last year to get one. Well, he was reminded soon enough when he found he couldn't walk to his own office without one. Ye multitudes whose eyes fall upon this narrative, profit by the experience of Alumnus Van Hise, '79!

Headquarters.

Here are some of the new features in connection with the Headquarters: Remember how you used to have to hunt for a telephone when you wanted to invite your old-time best girl to the Alumni Dinner? We're going to make it easy for you this year, for we are going to have a telephone right on the registration desk.

Remember what trouble you had to get mail or telegrams, and how hard it was to make appointments with classmates whom you were anxious to see? We're going to install a special alumni postoffice at Headquarters during Commencement Week. Have your mail and telegrams addressed care of the Alumni Association, Madison, and you'll be sure to find them at the Headquarters. And if you wish to make an appointment with a college chum, leave a note for him at Headquarters—we'll see to it that he gets it.

Remember what a time you had to find a room? The hotels were overcrowded. Every room in the University Club was reserved long before you knew that you could arrange to return to Alma Mater. We're going to have a list of available rooms right handy at Headquarters. Whether you have made reservations or not, it makes no difference. We'll see to it that you get a room.

Remember how you looked about for some cozy corner to which you might retreat with a few chums to have a little confidential chat? We started last year to provide cozy corners in Library Hall. But they were not as "comfy" as we wanted them. The improvements along that line this year are going to astonish you.

Business Meeting.

Don't fail to attend the annual business meeting of the Association at Headquarters at 10:00 A. M. Tuesday. It will be worth your while just to see Prexy Buckstaff show you some of the fine points in parliamentary law. He was speaker of the Assembly once, you remember, and knows all about it.

Note the good-looking bunch of officers that have been nominated: For president, Ernst von Briesen, a dyed-in-the-wool Naughty-naught from Milwaukee; for vice-president, Mrs. Edmund D. Sewall (Ida Hoyt), '79, of Chicago, for whom, thanks to "Doc" Ochsner, more nominating petitions have been circulated than for any alumna candidate since '54; for recording secretary, Carl H. Tenney, law '96, whose two-year record in that capacity led to the unanimous request of the Executive Committee that he consent to be a candidate for a third term.

All-Alumni Frolic.

Ever heard of a more original fellow than George B. Hill, '08, of Milwaukee? The Association couldn't get a better man to take general charge of the stunts to be pulled off on the upper campus on Tuesday afternoon. Just what he is going to initiate is still shrouded in nebulous uncertainty. Part of the stunt seems to be to keep us guessing. Whatever it will be, it will be tres magnifique. In case the stuntsters forget their parts because of stage fright, or other human ailments, there will be a refreshments stand in charge of M. C. Beebe, '97, and a bunch of coeds to keep you busy munching until the actors recall their parts. They will appreciate this thoughtfulness on your part.

Glee Club Concert.

By the time you begin to tire of stunts, another first class attraction will be staged: The alumni glee club men will render an open air program on the upper campus, beginning at 4:30 and lasting until the annual rain sets in. All the old timers will be back to sing. Here's their slogan: "Bring your vocal cord. If it is no good, bring any old rope." Watch them tune up! We're hard after Elias Bredin to come back and lead the concert, and we're pretty sure he's packing his grip.

Alumni Dinner.

You'll be right hungry by this time; so wend your way toward the Alumni Tent on the lower campus and fall in line for the procession that will ultimately lead to the Gym. Prof. Julius Olson, '84, without whom an alumni parade is impossible, will again act as grand marshal. He has just been elected marshal for ninety-nine years by the Alumni Executive Committee.

Another 99er is C. N. Brown, '81, caterer-in-chief of the Alumni Association, from whom the solemn promise has been exacted that he will look after the alumni eats for a century minus one year. He is so proud of this election that he promptly shifted the Dinner from the Gymnasium Annex, where it was held last year, to the Gym proper, because he can seat more people there who will applaud his caterial genius.

But though there will be lots of room, that does not mean that it can be mortgaged the last minute. Send in your orders early!

Post-Prandial Effusions.

With all due respect to the post-prandial artists who have performed in years gone by, it must be said that the patience of the listeners was taxed to the limit because some ten or twelve orators labored under the impression that they were each to deliver a baccalaureate address. To make matters worse, each of the reunion classes requested that its pet star be given a chance to demonstrate the forensic prowess of his class. Out of pure humanitarian motives the Alumni Executive Committee has put the lid on this kind of performance by passing the following solemn, not-to-be-broken resolution:

The Resolution.

“Resolved, That speechmaking at the Annual Dinner be restricted to three five-minute addresses, and that the reunion classes be requested to prepare and present a five-minute stunt each, between courses.”

Here are the five-minute lightning artists: Prexy Van Hise, '79; Edwin H. Cassels, '95, and Emmett A. Donnelly, '10.

It should be added that Toastmaster Buckstaff is spending all his leisure moments reading up jokes in old numbers of the Ladies' Home Journal. He knows he is up against a pretty stiff proposition to equal ex-Prexy Carpenter's stories of last year.

Bring your voice along for the dinner, to join in the general song-fest.

There will be copies of the songs for everybody—so John S. Main, '98, chairman of the alumni glee club reunion, tells us.

A feature of the dinner will be the presentation of athletic “W's” to members of the reunion classes. But as this feature is covered in Jack Wilce's story, we will spill no more ink over it here.

Pipe of Peace Ceremony.

Some alumni live in constant dread that sometime the annual dinner will break up in a row. In case such a fatality occur, an opportunity will be offered hereafter to patch up any differences before the day ends, for the Pipe of Peace Ceremony, since time immemorial given on Monday night, has been transferred to Tuesday night at 11:00. What is more, the affair will no longer be a senior class event, but will be a joint production of the seniors and the alumni.

Commencement Day.

The annual Alumni Ball, to be given Wednesday night, June 18th, has been taken back again to the good old Gym. Lathrop Hall last year and the year before made you feel like a sardine packed in a tin can. The modesty of the alumni who are to see to it that the ball comes off just right prevents the publication of their names just now. But Prof. Olson, chairman-in-chief, states that he will have a stunning committee in charge.

FIVE YEAR CLASS REUNIONS

Class of '63.

ONLY one member survives of the class of '63—Milton S. Griswold of Waukesha, a most respected and honored attorney in that city. Mr. Griswold will be present at Madison to celebrate the golden anniversary of his class, unless something quite unexpected turns up to prevent his coming. The class of '63 originally numbered six members, three of whom obtained the A.B. degree, and three the Ph.B. At the Commencement of 1863 seven M.A. degrees were also granted.

MILTON S. GRISWOLD

40th Commencement of '73.

GLENWAY MAXON, 404 Free Press Building, Milwaukee, has recently addressed a letter to members of his class, inviting them to come back to Madison on the occasion of their fortieth commencement. Among the letters received is one from James Quirk, who will come all the way from San Diego, California, to attend the alumni and commencement exercises.

Reunion of 1883.

MRS. ALICE S. BROWN of Freeport, Illinois, president of the class, A. C. Umbreit of Milwaukee, secretary, and the Misses Martha M. Dodge and Lillie Beecroft of Madison are acting as a committee to make arrangements for the thirtieth reunion of '83. The secretary has sent a letter to every living member of the class, soliciting his or her presence during Commencement Week. It is not intended to have any extensive program, but there will be a number of informal meetings. The class originally numbered 89 in all the departments. Of these 68 are still living.

Reunion of 1888.

THE reunion of the class of 1888 has been planned for Wednesday immediately following the Commencement Exercises. A luncheon will be served at 1:30 at the Golf grounds, across Lake Mendota, which may be reached from the Capitol square either by the Lakewood auto bus, or from the boat landings at the city pier or the university pier.

Already a considerable number of the class have replied favorably to the letters which have been sent out by the committee, indicating that this quarter centenary of the graduation of the class will be marked by a large attendance.

'93 Reunion.

"RACKETY whack, Rackety whee, There are no flies on '93."

The twentieth reunion of the class of '93 promises to be the most notable achievement of that famous class. Nearly a quarter of a century ago '93 foretold the coming campaign against the fly when it adopted a slogan that has been the inspiration of all who battle against the death-dealing fly.

'93, foreseeing the struggle of states and nations with fetters forged in their ancient constitutions began its life untrammelled by such bonds. It needed no Czar Reed to count its quorums, for its constitution provided that two-thirds of those present should constitute a quorum.

'93 has made more noise at alumni banquets, cut short more dry after-dinner speeches, yelled more yells, sung more songs, had better times at its reunions than any other class to leave the university. Any member of '93 will admit the truth of these statements. The following program for Tuesday, June 17, is full of new features and old faces.

9-9:30. Assemble in the Lecture Room on the third floor of the Historical Library Building. (Take elevator at State St. entrance.)

9:30. Proceed to the class stone, where brief exercises will be held in memory of deceased classmates.

10:00. Attend the annual business meeting of the Alumni Association in Music (old Library) Hall.

12:30. Leave University boat house for the Maple Bluff Golf Club, where the reunion luncheon will be served, followed by an afternoon of fun and frolic that has not been equalled since the sophomores attempted to conduct our first class meeting.

6:00. Attend the Alumni Dinner at the gymnasium, where the Milwaukee alumni, with Geo. Katz as chairman, will present a class stunt in competition with those prepared by other reunion classes.

The class will meet again Wednesday evening at the Alumni Reception and Ball.

As this goes to press acceptances have been received from the following: Genevieve Huenkemier Aylward, W. E. Butt, William L. Erbach, Winfield W. Gilman, Ella Davis Goodyear, Harriet Richardson Hottel, Lillian Heald Kahlenberg, Jessie Griffeth Katz, Geo. H. Katz, Geo. Kroncke, R. E. Mitchell, Alice Burdick Miller, Henry H. Morgan, Julia Ellen Murphy, Mary Oakley, Bartin L. Parker, Herbert J. Piper, Hubert E. Page, Chas. B. Rogers, Clarke M. Rosecrantz, Herbert F. Siggelko, Harriet P. Smith, Nissen P. Stenjem, Kate Sabin Stevens, E. Ray Stevens, W. F. Stiles, Mary Smith Swensen, Max Blumenfeld, E. C. Fielder, Nicholas Thauer, G. H. Daubner, J. C. Thompson, Harry Boardman, Platt Whitman, George H. Metcalf, James T. Hegan, C. H. Gaffney, Daisy Chadwick Bolender, S. A. Bostwick.

Several meetings of the resident members of '93 have been held and arrangements for the reunion are being made by various committees. Suggestions from other members will be most gratefully received.

A circular letter with return post card has been sent to the address of each member as it appears in the last alumni catalogue, and to all ex-members whose addresses could be obtained. All members and ex-members are requested to notify the secretary as soon as possible whether they can be in attendance. Those who cannot come will contribute to the success of the reunion by sending some account of themselves that may be read at the luncheon.

Law Class of '93.

THE law class of '93 is unquestionably the best ever graduated—we admit it. Several members of our law class have therefore suggested that in connection with the regular reunion of '93 we also hold a special reunion of our law class on the afternoon and evening of June 16, to give us a chance to shake each others' hands, talk over old days and renew our friendship and acquaintance.

Headquarters for the law class of '93 are to be at the Park Hotel. Let us have our reunion a success. Don't let business interfere. Think of all the fellows you would like to meet! Be sure and come!

A Millennium in Reunions—'03.

PREPARATIONS are about complete for the reunion of the class of 1903 in Madison, to be held on the 15th, 16th, 17th and 18th of June. It is asserted with considerable force that this decennial celebration will be a millennium in college reunions,—in fact, no class as yet in the history of the University of Wisconsin has made such elaborate preparations as has the class of 1903. A number of the events incidental to the program will be absolutely unique and startling and will be "sprung" at unexpected times during the four days of the celebration.

Chicago will be the centering plant for all members of the class coming in from the East, West and South. A special train has been engaged which will leave Chicago on Sunday evening

MRS JESSIE PELTON SMITH, '03
 Member of Arrangements Committee

by the way of Milwaukee, where most of the Milwaukee contingent will be picked up. From responses received by the committee in charge, it appears that the class will be represented by members coming from as far south as Mexico, as far west as San Francisco and as far north as Saskatchewan, Canada.

On Monday morning there will be a general round-up at the headquarters at the Mahoney House on Lake Street, which has been secured as headquarters for the class. At this place the class regalia will be donned and the rehearsal will be had of a number of the "stunts" to be performed by the members of the class, including the practicing of several class songs written by Stuart Washburn. In the afternoon the members of the class will form themselves into a grand parade, headed by a large brass band imported from Chicago, with Irving Fish as the drum major, assisted by his lieutenants, Ed. Thuerer, Leslie Beers, Eben Minnaham, Herbert F. John and Hamlet J. Barry. The parade will end in a picnic to be given some place along the lake shore. In the evening the celebrants will be guests at the 1913 class play.

On Tuesday morning the alumni of the class will participate in the proceedings of the Alumni Association. A number of important propositions will be presented for debate by the Association. At 11:30 the returning pilgrims, together with their wives, husbands and children, will take a steamer ride to the golf grounds for luncheon. In the afternoon they will take part in the all-alumni frolic on the upper campus. The evening will be given over to the Alumni Dinner.

On Wednesday afternoon all the members of the class will be guests at the president's reception and in the evening they will attend the grand alumni ball.

It is expected that all told there will be about 325 members back for the celebration, judging from the number of replies which have been received by the committee in charge.

Additional information may be had by addressing Richard H. Hollen, R. 1030 National Life Building, Chicago, Ill.

Class of '08.

THE first reunion of the class of 1908 promises to be a gala event and the forerunner of many more of a similar nature. Committees are at work in Milwaukee, Madison, Chicago and other cities, and many surprises will be "sprung" when the class celebrates its "wooden" anniversary on June 17 and 18.

Milwaukee and Chicago alumni, together with those in the surrounding territory, expect to gather in Milwaukee and come to Madison in special cars, arriving shortly after 10 o'clock on the morning of June 17, Tuesday. At the depot a parade, headed by a band, will proceed to Music Hall, where all '08 men and women will register.

At 12 o'clock there will be a class luncheon at the University Club at which reminiscences will be indulged in by former orators and near-orators of the only class that ever won two "rushes." In the afternoon the "grads" will attend the general alumni frolic.

Before the Alumni Dinner in the Armory, and during the dinner, the fact that the "veterans" of 1908 are on deck will be disclosed, especially during the "stunt" which this class is expected to put on between courses. Just what the nature of this attraction is will be a surprise to all but those in charge until the fateful moment.

After the banquet town and gown again will know that 1908 is in evidence, although the propagators of this "plot" refuse to be interviewed or to divulge any information. The rumor is that plans of the Madison police to prevent carrying out the program are to be frustrated by secrecy and diplomacy.

For Wednesday afternoon a launch ride, and probably a picnic, is contemplated. At night the Alumni Ball will be attended en masse.

The general committee in charge of the reunion plans follows: William J. Bollenbeck, chairman; Herman H. Karrow, Gustave G. Blatz, Herbert C. Wallber, Felix G. Rice, William F. Hannan, Robert P. Ferry, M. T. Slade, Gustave A. Reinhard and Harry W. Brown, Milwaukee; Prof. Fayette H. Elwell, George Matthews, Homer B. Benton, William Leiserson and Legare Oeland, Madison; Walter A. Rehm, Arthur Luder, Malcolm Halliday and Chester N. Johnson, Chicago.

Additional committees will be appointed to include representatives of the girls. Announcement is made that the ladies are to "be in" on all the "stunts."

All 1908 people who expect to attend the reunion are requested to notify Chairman Bollenbeck at 20, Hathaway Bldg., Milwaukee, so that provision can be made for insignia, etc.

It is expected that fully 100 will attend the reunion.

IMPORTANT NOTICE

IN accordance with the provisions of the constitution, that all amendments proposed thereto shall be published in THE ALUMNI MAGAZINE at least ten days before the meeting of the Association, notice is hereby given of the following amendments to Article III of the constitution:

Section 1 to be amended by striking out the words "graduate of" and substituting therefor the words "person who has satisfactorily completed one year's work at"; so that the whole section shall read as follows: "Any person who has satisfactorily completed one year's work at the University of Wisconsin may become a regular member of this Association by filing with the secretary an application for membership in such form as the Association may by its by-laws require, such application to be accompanied by the payment of dues for the fiscal year within which such application is filed."

Section 4 to be dropped, and sections 5, 6, and 7 to be renumbered respectively 4, 5, and 6.

REUNION ATHLETES TO BE HONORED

LAST year was started a system of presenting "W" certificates to all "W" men who had never been recognized in this way by their Alma Mater.

Much interest has been shown in the idea as carried out. This year at the annual Alumni Dinner, Tuesday evening, June 17, certificates will again be presented—this time to the members of the reunion classes ending in '3 or '8. The actual certificates suitably engraved will be given out on this occasion. A strike in the plant of the Eastern firm which engraved the certificates for the last Commencement caused an embarrassing delay in the presentation.

The following list will give the names of the "W" men of the classes ending in 3 or 8 only who, in accordance with the policy inaugurated last year, will receive their certificates at the coming Commencement.

During the past month the department has had the privilege of presenting the regulation five inch "W"'s to all of the basketball men who represented the university before the year 1906. In this year the sport was first officially recognized by the award of the regular "W."

A strenuous effort is being made to secure a complete and correct list of "W" men on a form card which when completely filled out affords an accurate record and gives many interesting details which only the man himself can supply. To those interested in Wisconsin athletic history the replies received even to date would be of intense interest.

Instead of confining the filling out of these "W" cards to reunion class men, as has so far been done, they will be sent to every old athlete this summer and it is hoped that each man will respond promptly with the information desired.

Wisconsin has arrived in the position where the interest in her vague athletic tradition demands a more definite athletic history as an accurate basis for the future. All Wisconsin men will do their share and contribute their interest in the attempt to secure and correlate accurately this mass of Wisconsin athletic tradition.

Prompt and full attention to the filling and return of the form as printed on page 456 will help as nothing else can. If you have ever participated in Wisconsin athletics, or have played with any university team before the time of real organized competitive sport, fill out the blank below and return immediately.

Fill out and return to J. W. Wilce, Manager of Athletics, Gymnasium, Madison, Wis.

Especial care should be taken to give the exact years in school, especially in case the full four year course was not completed. Society means literary society, fraternity, social club, etc.; awards mean "W," aWa, or any other emblem which might be significant as to membership on a varsity team; years means years the award was received; special honors include captaincy, all-western teams, special feats, track records or first class performances, in fact any special feat of any kind should be listed. We are anxious to effect a collection of the facts and anecdotes of athletic achievement and can only depend on the performers themselves for this information.

Modesty is the most commendable trait in an athlete, but all Wisconsin men will in this connection appreciate the spirit of assisting their Alma Mater in which this information will be given. "W" men, send in your card.

ALUMNI ELECTED TO PHI BETA KAPPA

BY THE SECRETARY OF THE WISCONSIN CHAPTER

At the annual meeting of the electors of the Wisconsin chapter of the Phi Beta Kappa Society on May 3 more than two hundred alumni of the university who graduated before the establishment of the chapter in 1899 were elected to membership. This election was held under the provision of a section of the chapter constitution that "Persons who have received the Bachelor's degree from the University of Wisconsin prior to the institution of this chapter may be elected to membership," and is in full accordance with the practice of other university chapters.

The basis of choice was substantially that which governs the selection of undergraduates for membership. A committee appointed two years ago from the senior members of the chapter made a careful examination of the undergraduate records of all students graduating before 1899; where these records, as happened in the case of a few of the earlier classes, were not available, other evidences of scholarship were taken into account. As a result of their investigations the committee reported to the electors of the chapter a list of alumni who seemed the best representatives of their respective classes; and this list the society formally ratified.

Because of the fact that the new alumni members were scattered from coast to coast, it was thought impracticable to hold a formal initiation. Many of the alumni from Madison, however, and from various parts of the state attended the Phi Beta Kappa initiation and banquet on May 14, where they outnumbered the newly elected undergraduates and gave to the gathering the appearance of an alumni reunion. After the initiation of the thirty-six undergraduates elected, Dean Birge in a brief address welcomed the new alumni members into the chapter. Dr. Birge explained the method by which the graduates had been chosen, outlined the aims of the society, and expressed the conviction that the newly elected alumni members would defend and foster the ideals of broad scholarship which the Phi Beta Kappa Society has always stood for. After the initiation ceremonies the alumni joined the active members of the chapter at the initiation banquet in the University Club, and later they attended the annual address, given this year by Professor Edward P. Cheyney of the University of Pennsylvania.

A list of names of the alumni who were present at the banquet was published in a number of state papers as that of the complete list of alumni elected; this was somewhat unfortunate, since it occasioned many of the new members, whose names were omitted, to believe that they had not properly qualified as members. To correct the wrong impression created by this unauthorized list, it has been thought best to publish the names of all who have qualified to date. Many because of distance from Madison, incorrect address, or other reasons, have not yet responded to the notice of election sent them; their names will be published later. The following is a list of all who have to date notified the secretary of their acceptance of the election :

The expedition may be said to have started some three years ago, when

Mr. Morris L. Cooke, an efficiency engineer of Germantown, Pa., was engaged on the Carnegie Foundation to investigate and report upon the efficiency of university teaching. Mr. Cooke had finished his work of investigation at The University of Wisconsin, when he called upon the writer for a conference. The only available time happened to fall upon a Sunday morning, in which the work of University Extension as conceived and under development at Wisconsin was explained. When Mr. Cooke alighted from his train upon the arrival of this expedition, he recalled this incident by his greeting, "This is the result of my three hours' course with you three years ago."

The second step in the inception of this expedition was the visit of the Executive Secretary of the City Club of Philadelphia, Mr. Hubert W. Wells, last fall. Mr. Cooke was then, and is now, Director of Public Works in Mayor Blankenburg's cabinet, and has felt that a spirit of service and co-operation, such as he had learned about at Wisconsin, would be exceedingly desirable in the Quaker state and city. Mr. Wells' visit to Wisconsin confirmed him equally in the belief that a study of the Wisconsin situation was worth while for those in Pennsylvania who are working for the improvement of conditions there.

We then had grave doubts as to whether we could handle so large a party in our crowded and crude quarters, and convey the real facts and spirit of the work to them. We also feared that so large a party of distinguished guests could not be comfortably entertained on account of the lack in dormitories. Fortunately, on the latter point, we had the splendid co-operation of the fraternities and sororities in the opening of their houses to these university visitors in a genuine spirit of hospitality.

The purpose of the expedition, as stated by the movers for it in their circular of information, was "to study carefully, and with the guidance of the Faculty of The University of Wisconsin, the remarkable educational venture and triumph that the University has wrought through its Extension Division. In Wisconsin, better than anywhere else in the world, perhaps, the educational institutions of the people are securely associated for the public welfare."

This, as alumni well know, is neither the first nor only important expedition by which The University of Wisconsin has been complimented and honored. It is, however, unique and without parallel, we believe, in that it was organized by a considerable group of earnest and important people themselves and for themselves, who assumed the expense of this journey of over 1,000 miles for the benefit that might result to the several communities in the eastern part of our country, in which they live. It is one thing to go upon a pilgrimage of this kind on one's own initiative and expense, and quite another to be taken upon a junket on some general fund. The compliment is the finer because of the distinguished personnel of the party and its notable representation.

There is not space in this place to give the alumni any adequate idea of the program prepared for these men and women from the East. (Such programs are, however, obtainable while they last). In general, the first evening was given to the governor of the state, who invited several citizens of the state to give their impressions and knowledge of the value of service rendered by the University to the state at large.

Thursday was devoted to the study of the University Extension service; Friday morning to the Agricultural College service. Friday afternoon President Van Hise addressed the party at length on "The Spirit of The University of Wisconsin and the Functions of University Extension as an Extra-Mural College." Saturday morning the special and unique features of service rendered by the University in general, such as the Hygienic State Laboratory, the Medical Clinic, where the student health and welfare are guarded, and similar lines of service, were presented. Saturday afternoon the co-operation between the University and the State Government were demonstrated by representatives of the Railroad Commission, the Tax Commission, the Industrial Commission, the Legislative Reference Library and the Board of State Affairs.

The program was concluded by a faculty banquet, at which the pilgrims responded to toasts reflecting the impression gained during the visit.

This program was made in response to requests and in conformity with the wishes of the expedition. A very definite purpose prompted the expedition, and practically all members of the party were perfectly familiar with the long established work of the University, so that no balanced program was attempted which should present the work of the University as a whole, although it was prepared by a general faculty committee appointed by the president.

Mayor Blankenburg, in addressing the students at a noonday campus convocation on Thursday, said that if the expedition were to return at that time at the end of their first half day, he felt that they had gotten more than enough to repay them for their long journey. Many of the party heartily confirmed this sentiment in private comment. Mr. Wells wrote from the returning train, "I doubt whether any company of persons ever left a conference more content with their experiences. It all went beyond the expectations of any of us."

FIFTY years ago the Castalian Literary Society was founded at the University of Wisconsin. Since that time it has grown every year in strength and influence and counts a number of prominent women among its alumnae. Castalia is now planning a grand reunion to celebrate this fiftieth birthday, culminating in a Jubilee Banquet on Monday, June 15, 1914, and wishes all alumnae and former members to be present at this time. It will be an opportunity to renew the friendships and acquaintances of college life, to see how the society has grown, the work it is doing and the place it holds in the University.

The active members of the society are making an earnest effort to reach all alumnae and former members, and have them meet at the banquet. The society hopes that everyone will spread this announcement among alumnae members. Suggestions also will be more than welcomed by the committee. There must have been many incidents in the lives of the alumnae that happened during their college careers which would be interesting to those who are now in college and to those who were in school at the time of occurrence. Please tell the active society about them, that the reunion may be made more attractive for all.

1914 is the anniversary of the 60th year of the university, and the classes are planning their reunions with that in mind; 1914 particularly is making many plans, and their celebration and those of the other classes ending in 4 will be on during that week.

Next year the present rather hazy plans will be put into more definite form, and will be announced through THE ALUMNI MAGAZINE. The committee asks that all contributions of money or ideas be sent to Dora Miller, chairman Jubilee Reunion Committee, at 434 Sterling Place, Madison, Wis., during the school year, or at 410 South Madison Street, Stoughton, Wis., during the summer months. Please all spread the news, and all who possibly can come and be with us June 15, 1914.

SPRING ATHLETICS

By J. W. WILCE, '10

THE Spring of 1913 has seen continued success of Wisconsin athletics. The indoor track season was inaugurated by the Annual Relay Carnival. This year the nature of the affair was changed and broadened from the Relay Carnival idea to that of Relay Festival. The Relay Meet held in the new Athletic Annex was coordinated with the dance of the wearers of the "W" held in the gymnasium. Boxes were decorated with paraphernalia of each sport, and "W" blankets and championship banners added to the attractiveness of the occasion. The social idea of the combination was most thoroughly approved by the thousand people who enjoyed attending the Festival. The fact that the function was held on Washington's birthday added much to the holiday tone.

On March 15 Wisconsin acted as host to the smaller colleges of the state in the First Annual State Championship Indoor Track and Field Meet, held in the Athletic Annex. This meet was the first intercollegiate event held on the new indoor field. Wisconsin won the meet with $73\frac{1}{2}$ points, with the state colleges finishing in the following order: Lawrence, $71\frac{1}{2}$; Beloit, 4; Ripon, 0; Carroll, 0. In this meet John K. Gold, captain of the track team, was successful in setting a new indoor record for the pole vault at 12 ft. 8 in. The previous record of 12 ft. $6\frac{1}{2}$ in. was made by Mare S. Wright of Dartmouth. Wright's record was made from board floor, while that of Gold was made from a dirt floor takeoff.

Wisconsin continued her string of championships by nosing out Illinois for first place in the Indoor Track and Field Conference Meet at Evanston, March 29, 1913, by three-fourths of a point. Last year Illinois nosed Wisconsin out of a victory by two points, and this year's result was especially gratifying to Wisconsin on this account. The all-around nature of the team and the development of men who obtained seconds and thirds won the meet. Coach Tom Jones has started his stay at Wisconsin in a most auspicious fashion.

Baseball.

The baseball team will hardly approach the rank of last year's championship team. Illinois and Minnesota have been defeated and Purdue tied at Madison. Illinois, Purdue and Indiana defeated the team on their respective fields and Northwestern was beaten at Evanston. Chicago, the league leader, is still to be met. The backward spring prevented the game at Madison May 21. Coach Juneau and Assistant Coach Dr. Haussmann have the team in charge. The team's weakness lies mainly in lack of experienced pitchers. The freshman team defeated the 'varsity, who had a substitute battery in the line-up, in a practice game by 9 to 0. The two freshmen pitchers give promise of developing into "phenoms" on the 'varsity next year.

Outdoor Track.

The track team has split even in the dual meets this spring. Ohio State was defeated at Madison May 3 by a score of 93 to 33. The team journeyed to Champaign May 16 and met defeat at the hands of Illinois by a score of 72 to 54.

In both the meets the team was without the services of Irvin White, captain of last fall's championship cross country team. White broke a small bone in his ankle while running the four-mile relay at the Drake Relay Carnival in Des Moines April 21.

In this race Wisconsin ran second to Northwestern.

Conference Meets.

The supreme athletic event of the year in track, however, will be the 13th Annual Conference Track and Field Meet, which will be held at Madison for the first time in the history of the university, on June 6 and 7, 1913.

Wisconsin will make a mighty effort to entertain the visiting colleges in royal style. The entry list this year will be of extraordinary size and class. Besides the regular Conference teams the Universities of California, last year's champions, the University of Southern California, Notre Dame and Colorado will send large delegations of athletes to take part. Many smaller colleges will send individual stars or small teams.

The track at Camp Randall has been widened and improved materially. Special bleachers and seating facilities will be arranged near the finish and preparations are being made to accommodate three thousand people.

The Meet should prove a big thing for Wisconsin in many ways. It was mainly through the efforts of Prof. J. F. A. Pyre, '92, Wisconsin's representative on the Conference Committee, that the meet was brought to Madison for this first time. It is hoped that Wisconsin alumni and others will boost the enterprise in an enthusiastic manner and back it up if possible by attendance. The sight of these men, representing the pick of Western athletes, is inspirational.

Crew Off for Poughkeepsie.

The 'varsity and freshmen crews are now picked for the Eastern trip. This year a four-oared crew will also be taken East for the first time since the spring of 1905. At present the freshman crew of last year is rowing intact in the 'varsity shell and will represent Wisconsin as the 'varsity crew on the Hudson. The 'varsity crew, as boated early in the year, was broken up by the withdrawal of Captain Sjoblom and Samp of last year's 'varsity on account of slight enlargements of their hearts. The crew as left, with four 1915 and four 1914 men, was unable to "get together." Up to this time the four-oared crew was made up of four 1915 oarsmen who were rowing in perfect form. Coach Vail sacrificed a four-oared crew, which would certainly have finished well up if not in front, and shifted the four men to the 'varsity, displacing the newly elected captain, McLeod, stroke Tasker of last year's varsity and Termansen and Kennedy, who rowed on the freshman 1914 crew. These men now make up the four.

The 'varsity eight is boated now as follows: Stroke—Evert, 7—Wittich, 6—Bohnstedt, 5—Mueller, 4—Dexter, 3—Clayton, 2—Moffett, bow—Peterson, cox'n—Lewis.

Four-oared crew: Stroke—Cuff, 3—McLeod, 2—Tasker, bow—Kennedy.

Freshman crew: Stroke—Sell, 7—

WESTERN CHAMPIONS IN WRESTLING

WESTERN CHAMPIONS IN GYMNASTICS

Diggle, 6—Wickham, 5—Miller, 4—Owen, 3—Freeman, 2—Bollman, bow—Zwemer, cox'n—Brown.

The crews leave for the East June 5, two days before the Conference Meet. The Regatta takes place June 21, 1913.

An additional interest will be given the race this year by the fact that Washington University, Pacific Coast champions, will compete with the pick of the East and the Middle West.

The only competition Wisconsin has so far had was with the Minnesota Boat Club on May 24, in a $1\frac{1}{8}$ -mile race. Minnesota was defeated by 5 lengths in 6.20. On the same day the freshmen defeated St. Johns Military Academy by 8 lengths in a $1\frac{1}{8}$ -mile race; time, 5.48.

The most interesting event of the day was the inter-college race, in which the crew representing Letters and Science was victorious over the Engineers, Agrics and Laws. The race was for the splendid twenty-five-year new bronze inter-college rowing trophy, presented by the alumni of Chicago. The trophy was secured mainly through the interest and effort of Lynn A. Williams, '00, of Chicago, who rowed on the 'varsity crew in '99 and '00.

New Idea of Spring Festival.

The Annual Spring Festival as such was a wonderful success. In addition to the old idea of the May Fete for the women, Venetian Night and the Interscholastic Track Meet, a monster historical pageant was given. The pageant was the first of its kind ever seen at the university. Through a series of acts the history of Wisconsin was graphically pictured on a stage built near the lake on Observatory Hill. Students and faculty made up a cast of approximately two hundred people for the various scenes of the production.

ON, WISCONSIN!

AN interesting program from the Philippine Islands has reached the Alumni Headquarters. The occasion was a Ladies' Musical Dinner party at the Hotel de France, Manila, on April 13, and the program was rendered by the Constabulary Band Orchestra. The significant thing is the fact that the first number on the program was "On, Wisconsin."

THE MUSIC FOR COMMENCEMENT

THE music that is to embellish the various functions of Commencement Week bids fair to eclipse anything given at the university during similar functions.

A star of first magnitude has been secured as soloist for Baccalaureate Sunday in the person of Mrs. Mabel Sharp Herdien of Chicago. She has just elicited the unstinted praise of the musical critics of Chicago by her solo work during the recent North Shore Festival.

Bach's orchestra from Milwaukee will render six selections at the Commencement exercises, and will furnish the music during the Alumni Reception and Ball. In addition, the customary concert to the parents of graduates and to visiting alumni will be given on Wednesday afternoon, June 18. For the latter the following program has been arranged:

Overture—"The Mill on the Cliff," Reissiger.

4th Movement from New World Symphony—"Allegro con fuoco," Dvorak.

Introduction and Waltz—"Vienna Bonbons," Strauss.

First and Second Movements from Bruch's G Minor Concerto—Violin Solo by Herman Kelbe.

Overture—"Il Guarang," Comez.

On Tuesday afternoon, June 17, at 4:30, the Alumni Glee Clubs under the direction of Mr. Elias Bredin of Evanston, Ill., formerly instructor in music at the university, will render an open air concert on the upper campus. Quartettes of former glee club stars will also render selections during the Alumni Dinner in the evening.

DEATH OF PROFESSOR HAVARD

FRANCIS THOMPSON HAVARD, associate professor of mining and metallurgy in the University of Wisconsin, died of pneumonia at the Madison general hospital on May 22 after five weeks' illness. He is survived by a wife and one son. Professor Havard came to the University of Wisconsin in the fall of 1909. He was 35 years old.

He was born at Ipswich, Australia, October 18, 1878. After grammar school training, he entered Sydney University with advanced standing. He was graduated in 1901 from the Freiberg Royal School of Mines, Germany, with the degree of Engineer of Metallurgy. The same year he came to the United States and entered the employ of the Boston and Montana Co., in the capacity of chemist and furnace foreman. Two years later, in 1903, he became manager of the General Smeltery of the Anhalt Lead and Silver Mining Co., in which he had unique experience in successfully handling a wide variety of metallurgical products.

In 1906 he went to Chile, South America, to handle the smelting works of the Cepiapi Mining Co. He returned to the United States two years later to engage in consulting metallurgical work for the U. S. Metals Refining Co.

EDITORIAL

Come Back!

COME back, old grad, for Commencement, and rejuvenate. You don't know how good it will do you to return to the old campus and live through those days again when you fussed three nights a week, mixed up in class politics, sat on the bleachers rooting for the beloved Cardinal, and incidentally carried off a sheepskin. Look over the program of events outlined elsewhere in this issue. Doesn't it make your mouth water? Can you afford to stay at home when every Wisconsin man and woman that can possibly so arrange will join in the alumni and Commencement festivities? If you haven't been back recently, ask someone who has. He'll tell you so much about the good time he had, that you will let that ten thousand dollar deal go by the board just in order to join the happy band of returning pilgrims. But why waste any more words trying to tell you something you can't feel unless you are an active participant? Come back for yourself and see!

Pay Up!

In a recent circular letter to several hundred members of the Association we ventured to suggest that it was about time that the dues for the college year 1912-13, now almost at an end, be paid. The letter was number 5 in a regular series of follow-ups. Yet even these five reminders have failed to bring the desired result in the case of 225 graduates. We are well aware that the Wisconsin alumnus is a busy man. We are also aware that failure to pay is merely due to an oversight. And we are also aware that these delinquents will pay—sometime. But why not now? Why reduce us to the humiliating necessity of constantly pleading with the printer for time to meet our obligations?

Cooperation with Local Secretaries.

The secretary of the Twin City Alumni Association recently called our attention to the difficulties that confront him in his endeavor to keep the alumni of Minneapolis and St. Paul informed of the various doings of his local association. Oftentimes a graduate is overlooked simply because the secretary does not happen to know of his having moved to the Twin Cities.

This difficulty could be easily avoided if changes of address were reported to the Alumni Headquarters at Madison. A graduate moving into a community in which there is a local alumni association, will do well to inform us of his change of residence, so that we may inform the local secretary of his coming. He will then be invited to affiliate with the local group.

Anent Dr. Meyer's Communication.

Dr. Ernst C. Meyer's thoughtful article on "Our Alumni Organization" merits more than passing attention. His proposals are, first, that the local associations become feeders to the general association; second, that an annual convention of delegates of local associations be held at Madison, in the course of which an expression of opinion of the local groups can be obtained on matters of importance; third, that the undergraduates be interested in the work of the Association before they leave college.

On the first of these proposals alumni opinion seems to be divided. There are those who most enthusiastically endorse Dr. Myers' suggestion. There are also those who just as sincerely believe that the alumni should be admitted to the locals at as low a fee as possible—free of charge, if practicable—so that they may first become interested in alumni work; and that then interest in the general association will follow as a matter of course. The latter view is a sad confession that there are many alumni who have so far forgotten their obligations to their Alma Mater that they are not even interested in the Association that has been primarily organized for their own benefit. Unfortunately such a state of affairs exists.

Without venturing an opinion at this time as to the merits of these two conflicting points of view, we suggest that all our members think along these lines until the annual meeting in June, at which time we hope they will be ready to contribute to the discussion.

The second suggestion, with reference to a convention of delegates from the local associations, is one that will undoubtedly be worked out in due time. We believe that alumni generally will indorse this idea.

As regards the third suggestion,—that of enrolling the undergraduates—we are glad to state that a beginning was made last spring to put this idea into practice. At three different times the class of 1912 was addressed by officers of the Association. The net result of the various efforts made immediately before and after the graduation of that class was approximately 175 new members for the Association. This year a more elaborate and thorough canvass is being made, the results of which we hope to announce shortly.

COMMERCE ASSOCIATION

TEAM WORK AS APPLIED TO COMMERCIAL EDUCATION

By CHARLES R. SEXTON, '11

AN article in the Chicago Daily Tribune dated January 27, 1913, describes a plan of education which is of interest to commerce men because it throws new light on commercial education. This article is entitled, "The Cincinnati Plan." A resumé of this article together with a few comments is given in the following paragraphs.

A new scheme of industrial education was recently originated in Cincinnati by Professor Schneider, dean of the engineering department of the University of Cincinnati. The plan was evolved for the purpose of providing for the engineering students a combination of studies and practical work. The plan is this: "One regular job in a machine shop is held by a team of two students working alternately. One student works two weeks and then goes back to school while his teammate works two weeks, and so on through the year."

The article goes on to say that practically all of the engineers in this school are working under this plan, and that it has been very popular among the students, satisfactory to the faculty, and profitable to the employers. The operation of the plan has not been confined to the university but has also been put into effect in the Woodward High School of Cincinnati. We infer from the account given that both in the university and in the high school the scheme has been confined to shop work.

The writer in the Tribune, however, points out that its application need not be restricted to shop work but may also be adapted to office work. In fact, it appears that the Chicago Board of Education has signified its willingness to make use of it in high school commercial departments, provided business men of Chicago will back it up. A complete team work system, at the time this article was written, had not been tried in any high school, but partial combination of school work and outside business work had been worked out in a number of schools.

These, briefly put, are the facts of the Cincinnati plan. While its application has so far been limited chiefly to the Cincinnati Engineering School and to industrial high schools, still it offers possibilities for a university commercial department. There are every year a considerable number of students entering into university commercial work who, for one reason or another, are not able or do not desire to take a full course. In other words, they desire not only to get a combination of studies that will be of the greatest practical benefit to them but also to absorb those subjects in a minimum space of time. For such students as these such a combination of school work and practical business experience ought to make a strong appeal.

Probably at every university where commercial subjects are taught there are a number of students who are working their way through school by engaging in outside work for a fractional part of a day. At any rate, this custom is quite in evidence at the University of Wisconsin, where a considerable number of students combine class work with half time work in one or another of the state commissions. Whether or not such outside work is done depends either upon the exigencies of the case or upon the activity of the man. It is not a part of the educational system.

The question to be thrown out for the thought of you alumni is whether outside work in the state departments and in private business offices could be made a part of the educational system. There are both advantages and disadvantages of such a plan, of course. It would certainly be far more advantageous to the employers to have men alternating in their work for steady periods of a week at a time than to have them dividing each day between school work and business. This latter combination puts a severe strain on the student in the preparation of his school work and at the same time prevents him from giving his most efficient service to his employer's work. With a combination such as is followed in the Cincinnati plan, more concentrated attention can be given to the work in hand. It might also be presumed that the student would return to his classes, after his period of outside work was finished, with his mind filled with new illustrations that could be applied in the class room, and that points previously discussed would be clearer in the light of the practical work.

The obstacles would come in the administration of the combined course. Without the cooperation of business men of the right sort, little could be done. The practical office work should be such that it would fit in with the discussions of the class room. Here is probably the biggest difficulty—the linking up of the practical work with the school work so that one will assist the other. There would also be some difficulty in conducting the class room as the various teams of men would not want to miss any of the class work. We are not informed by the article in the Chicago Tribune just how the class work is to be conducted, whether the student who has just come from the classes instructs the student in the work he has missed, or whether the same lectures are repeated so that each team gets the benefits first hand.

Well, this is the Cincinnati system. Can it ever be applied to university commercial work? Think it over.

Alumni Reunion.

Tuesday, June 17, will be Alumni day. We have scheduled a meeting of the Commerce Alumni Association to be held on that day at 9:30 A. M. in Room 52, North Hall. After this meeting we shall adjourn to the meeting of the Alumni Association at 10:00. Don't fail to be there. Election of officers will be in order and other business matters must be attended to. While en route to Buenos Ayres, he made a short visit to Kingston, Jamaica; the Panama Canal; Balboa; Calloa, Peru; Lima, Peru; Valparaiso; Santiago. Ten days were spent in Buenos Ayres.

DEPARTMENT OF POLITICAL ECONOMY

PROFESSOR RICHARD T. ELY, head of the department of political economy, is delivering a series of lectures in the London School of Economics and Political Science. In the introductory lectures are discussed the nature of property as an economic concept and its relation to capital accumulation, consumption, and distribution, followed by a treatment of the relation of property to liberty, with special stress on collectivism and the question of checks and limitations upon property rights. The remaining lectures deal with the legal basis of property and modes of acquisition, with particular attention to the problem of inheritance and its regulation, also the peculiarities of the police power of the United States, the functions of expropriation, private property, and eminent domain. The course concludes with a discussion of the relation of property to progress and the tendency towards universalization and socialization of property.

The course is being given to advanced students of the University of London and others who are especially interested in the more fundamental problems of economic theory.

Clytus A. Freeman, who has held a fellowship in the department during the past two years, has been appointed to an important position in the Department of Commerce in Washington. Mr. Freeman has already taken up his new work in Washington and will have charge of statistical and other work in connection with the Department of Commerce, which will also take him into the Census Bureau.

E. H. Downey, who has been assistant in political economy during the first semester, has resigned his work in the university to accept the position of chief statistician with the Wisconsin Industrial Commission.

Geo. W. Stephens, who received the degree of doctor of philosophy in political economy in the university in 1911, has been promoted to a full professorship of economics in the University of Maine and has been given an appropriation for an assistant professor in the same subject.

Benjamin H. Hibbard, Ph.D. '02, and until recently professor of economic science in Iowa State College, has been called to the University of Wisconsin as professor of agricultural economics for the year 1912-13.

Dr. John A. Brindley, former graduate student in the University of Wisconsin, has been made head of the department of economics and political science in Iowa State College, succeeding to the vacancy created by the call of Professor Hibbard to Wisconsin.

Professor Allyn A. Young, Ph.D. '02, and professor of economics in Washington University, St. Louis, has accepted a professorship in Cornell University.

THE WISCONSIN ALUMNI CLUBS

The Chicago Alumni and the Secretaryship.

To the Alumni:

Under the date of April 14 the acting secretary of the U. W. Club of Chicago sent a letter to many of the alumni in and about the city, discussing the finances of the General Alumni Association, and pointing out the need for funds. A copy of this letter is given below:

THE ALUMNI SECRETARYSHIP.

This is not a subscription. It is a referendum.

The enclosed letter from the Executive Committee of the Alumni Association presents the reasons for a strong alumni organization.

A strong alumni organization means a lot of work for the secretary—too much to be shouldered on a man who must make a living at some other line of work. In fact, his regular job would become a side line.

The need for a permanent secretary was realized some years ago. The secretary was to have general charge of the business affairs of the Association including the publication of THE ALUMNI MAGAZINE. This feeble expression of the alumni enthusiasm had been brought into the world years before and had been allowed to drift along its harmless course. There were a few subscribers, some of whom paid.

The dues were one dollar a year. THE ALUMNI MAGAZINE cost ninety cents a member. That left ten cents a member available to pay the expenses of the Association. The total amount available would scarcely pay for one set of notices to the alumni. It was considered necessary to hire a capable alumnus as secretary in order to build up the Association. He must have a salary; he must have a working fund. It was felt that an endowment fund of $3,000 a year for five years would be sufficient to put the Association on its feet. By that time it was felt that there would be members enough to reduce the cost of the Magazine per capita, thus leaving an ample working fund.

$3,000 per year for five years. We started out to collect some of it in Chicago in 1910. The results were negligible, partly because we were amateurs and partly because we had a distaste for the work. The work of building up the Association progressed, however, but it was because of a great deal of work and financial assistance from a limited number rather than because of participation by a lot of us.

At the meeting in Madison, June 1911, a Chicago alumnus, Mr. Lynn Williams '00, moved that the dues be increased from one dollar to two dollars per member. The motion was carried unanimously. Note that this increased the working fund from ten cents per member to $1.10 per member. This increase, together with the increase in members, has very nearly put the Association on its feet. There are now 2,400 members. In another year it is estimated that there will be 3,000 members. The Association will then be self supporting.

At a meeting a few months ago it was estimated that if sufficient money could be raised to meet the expenses for the current year, success would be assured. The effort has been made outside of Chicago, but it has not produced much. Milwaukee gave practically nothing. $1,200 is needed. The Association is without funds. Mr. Wray was to put the matter up to the alumni in and around Chicago. He was taken sick the first of the year and has been in bed since then. It has bothered him to think that he did not get a chance to finish this work so he could be comfortably sick. Besides he wanted to demonstrate that the Wisconsin alumni in Chicago respond as generously and as quickly as do the alumni of Yale or Harvard.

He asked me to see what could be done. There is to be no canvass and no follow up notice. I'm just giving you the facts as they have been presented to me.

Your criticism of part or all of the plan may be of help to the executives. Feel free to give it, whether you contribute or not.

There is no reason for raising the entire $1,200 in Chicago and I'm not going to attempt to justify it, but if you do care to send in ten dollars ($10) this together with the contributions from the other men receiving this letter will make up the $1,200 necessary at this time to insure the success of the organization and to encourage the small group of loyal alumni who have already contributed generously of their time and money.

Any action you consider advisable should be taken now.

I thank you for your attention.

Very truly yours,
A. E. VAN HAGAN, '06,
Acting Secretary.

This amount, $164.00, has been turned over to the treasurer, Mr. Charles Brown, '81, of Madison.

Only $164.00 of the desired $1,200.00 has been raised. The need for funds still exists. At the same time there is to be no "follow up" notice. If any of the gentlemen, receiving my letter, care to contribute they may send their contribution to Mr. Brown or to me. The same kind invitation is extended to any of the other alumni now reading the letter for the first time. Any contributions that are sent to me will be acknowledged in THE ALUMNI MAGAZINE.

It is realized that a closely knit alumni organization may be of much service to us individually and collectively. While 100 per cent of the alumni agree to this, about 75 per cent are "too busy" to do any "knitting." The minimum that each of us can do toward building up a strong organization is to join the Alumni Association. If you are not a member, why not send two dollars to Secretary Louis P. Lochner, '09, Madison, Wis., today. If you know anyone who is not a member, write him up.

With hearty thanks to those who have assisted with contributions and best wishes for a good, healthy alumni organization, I am,

Yours sincerely,
ARTHUR E. VAN HAGAN, '06.

(EDITOR'S NOTE.—These are not the only contributions by Chicago alumni. Before the circular letter was issued, several Chicago graduates had already contributed and sent their amounts directly to Treasurer Brown.)

Pittsburgh Alumni Banquet.

On April 12 thirty-five alumni and friends of the University of Wisconsin met at the club house of the Pittsburgh Athletic Association for the second annual banquet. After a sumptuous repast, an informal period of speaking was indulged in, interspersed with Wisconsin songs. Among the speakers were: Dr. S. R. Scholes, Yale '11, a graduate of Ripon College; F. W. Winters, '87; Miss Marguerite McLean, '07; G. W. Hewitt, '08, W. B. Bassett, '09, and C. N. Johnson, '09. Everyone reported a good time, and prospects are bright for a prosperous year.

C. N. JOHNSON, '09.

Capital City Alumni Meet.

Members of the Washington Association of Wisconsin Alumni, representing various classes from '72 to '12, held a social gathering on April 19 at the Calvary M. E. Church. Past meetings have been held at the University Club. The change to the church was made to bring out the women folks. All present were pleased with the idea, especially since Wisconsin is a coeducational institution.

The first part of the evening was given over to a general mixer in getting acquainted. Professor Emory R. Johnson, '88, gave a highly instructive and entertaining talk on the Panama Canal. He has devoted many years to the study of this subject and is recognized as one of the leading authorities upon it. A general discussion of the canal problem followed, during which Hon. J. J. Esch, '82, lauded Professor Johnson for the excellent work he has accomplished in his field of study.

After the serving of a dainty luncheon in the church parlor, the congenial party continued to visit in a very informal way, talking over the subjects of mutual interest. All were loath to break up the meeting, as evidenced by the manner in which they reluctantly parted. Those present were: Professor Emory R. Johnson, '88, and Mrs. Johnson; T. L. Cole, '72; George S. Wilson, '94, and Mrs. Wilson; E. T. Hancock, '01, and Mrs. Hancock; F. Wenner and Mrs. Wenner; E. S. Bradford, '97, and Mrs. Bradford (Florence B. Mott), '02; Professor Milton Updegraff, '84, and Mrs. Updegraff (Alice M. St. Louis Alumni Entertain.

The three Madisonians were Professor Paul S. Reinsch, '92, of the department of political science; Professor C. F. Burgess, '95, of the college of engineering; and Louis P. Lochner, '09, general secretary of the Alumni Association. About thirty-five alumni from St. Louis and neighboring towns, with their wives and husbands, gathered around the festive board at the St. Louis Athletic Club on May 1 and listened with intense interest to what the two faculty members had to tell them about present conditions at the university, and to the problems of the general Alumni Association as discussed by the secretary.

Twin City Alumni Banquet.

The annual banquet of the Wisconsin Twin City Alumni Association was held at the Hotel Radisson, Minneapolis, on Saturday, May 3.

Professor E. B. McGilvary, head of the department of philosophy at Madison, gave a very interesting resumé of the work accomplished by the university during the past years.

One of the distinctive features of the banquet was the stereopticon views of the university buildings and scenes around the campus, which were shown through the courtesy of the University Extension Department. The words to Wisconsin songs were also thrown on the screen. This proved an excellent way to get the crowd together, as they seemed much less bashful about making a noise in the dark.

Judge Oscar Hallam, '87, of the Minnesota Supreme Court, was elected president, and John H. Curtis, '10, secretary-treasurer.

The following attended the banquet: A. G. Briggs, '85, and Mrs. Briggs; Brigham Bliss, '77, and Mrs. Bliss; W. J. Bolan and Mrs. Bolan; Alfred H. Bright, '74, and Mrs. Bright; A. E. FROM THE CAMPUS

On May 21 the Germanistische Gesellschaft gave an open air performance of Goethe's one-act play, "Die Laune des Verliebten." This play, which was written by the young poet in 1768 at the age of nineteen, is none the less one of the best dramatic productions of its time and probably the only pastoral comedy which has survived on account of its own merit. It was costumed in the style of the late eighteenth century and followed by a minuet and a gavotte executed by four couples.

Portraits of nineteen graduates will be hung in the "hall of fame" of the Wisconsin Union, according to the announcement of the governing board of this student organization. Four United States Senators are among the graduates selected for the honor. The complete list is as follows:

United States Senators William F. Vilas, '58; John C. Spooner, '64; Moses E. Clapp, '73; and Robert M. La Follette, '79; President Charles R. Van Hise, '79, of the University; Gov. Francis E. McGovern, '90; Joseph E. Davies, '98; Dr. Henry B. Faville, '80, and Dr. Albert J. Ochsner, '84; Berton Braley, '05, Horatio S. Winslow, '04, and Edward S. Jordan, '05, journalists; Michael B. Alvin C. Reis, Evansville, Ind., a senior in the university, won the Northern Oratorical League contest, held at Oberlin College. The University of Iowa secured second place, Michigan third, while Illinois and Minnesota tied for fourth place. This is the fourth time in its history that the event has been won for the University of Wisconsin. The first winner was Senator Robert M. La Follette, '79. In 1905 Max Loeb, '05, carried off first prize. The last time the decision was secured by a Wisconsin representative was in 1909, when the contest was won by Charles Pearce, '09, of Dodgeville.

Davies, recently appointed United States commissioner of corporations, and Richard Lloyd-Jones, editor of the Wisconsin State Journal, formerly on the staff of Collier's Weekly, were among the speakers at the annual convention of Sigma Delta Chi, the national honorary journalistic fraternity, which met at the University of Wisconsin in May. The university circus took place Saturday, April 26. This event is a biennial affair and is always well worth seeing. The feature of the show this year was the wild west scene. The university business manager allowed a couple of bill boards to be erected in order that the circus officials might prove their ability as prevaricators. They did!

Prof. Peter W. Dykema, of the New York Ethical Culture School, who for the last four years has given instruction in music in the University of Wisconsin Summer Session, was appointed professor of music by the regents at their April meeting. Prof. Dykema will be in charge of the work in public school music and will also organize musical societies throughout the state under the direction of the university Extension Division.

Freshman students at the University of Wisconsin are improving physically, according to a report just made by Dr. J. C. Elsom, of the Department of Physical Education. The young men in the first year class weigh about the same as last year's class, but are taller and better built. Compared with the freshman class five years ago, the freshman class this year shows a decided improvement in every respect except lung capacity, which seems to be declining. In height, breadth of shoulders, chest girth and strength of arms and legs and back the men this year excel those of 1907. The average weight of a first year man is 138.5 pounds; he is five feet, 8.1 inches tall and his lung capacity is 246.2. The better physical condition of this year's freshmen is due, says Dr. Elsom, to the fact that the majority of them have received physical training in the high schools.

James H. Murphy, of Kewaunee, has been elected editor of the Wisconsin Country Magazine, the semi-monthly journal issued by the students of the College of Agriculture of the University of Wisconsin. Charles D. Hoag, of La Grange, Ill., was elected business manager.

To raise a loan fund for needy students, the senior class has decided to insure themselves for $30,000, each individual member of the class taking out a policy for $100 in the Wisconsin State Life Fund. The plan is to have the four of five hundred seniors this year agree to pay the annual premium of $2.80 per year for twenty years, or $56 in all. The fund of $30,000 or $35,000 available at the end of twenty years will be invested and the proceeds used in making loans to needy students. Inasmuch as the loans are repaid by these students when they become self-supporting after graduating from college, it is estimated that the general fund will be increased by $1,000 a year.

The following members of the senior class were appointed teaching fellows for next year, one-half of the year's work to be devoted to teaching in Wisconsin high schools and one-half to graduate work in education and their major subject in the university:

BOOK REVIEWS

Success, A Manual of Moral Instruction.
By Frank Chapman Sharp, The University of Wisconsin, 1913.

Probably no one in this country has contributed more to the solution of the problem of moral training than has Professor Sharp, of the University of Wisconsin. For a number of years he has been trying a certain method of leading pupils to reflect upon the moral problems of their daily lives, and to solve these problems in view of certain principles of right and wrong behavior. He has had extraordinary success in arousing interest on the part of high school and university students in the problems of conduct, and with his method he has also developed in the pupils an unusual keenness in thinking straight through a moral situation, and reaching a sane conclusion regarding right conduct in reference to it.

In the present volume, Professor Sharp presents his method for the use of high school pupils and teachers. In the first division of the book there are given many questions for the pupils to work out in advance of discussion in the class. In Professor Sharp's own work pupils are required to write out their answers and offer them in class. These answers serve as a basis for class discussions. The questions pertain to the practical matters of everyday life, questions in which any high school pupil who has reached his junior year can hardly fail to be interested. The questions in Part I relate to the management of the mind, and the following illustrate the method of procedure:

1. Why does tying a knot in a handkerchief help one to remember an errand?
2. Can you repeat the alphabet backward as quickly and correctly as forward?
3. If you had a declamation to recite before an audience, what would you do to make certain that you would be able to repeat it when the time came?
4. Are habits easier to acquire at one time of life than another? What time of life is most favorable for acquiring them? What are we to think of the adage: "It is never too late to be what you might have been"?
5. How would you go about to get control of a bad temper? For example, suppose you had made resolution after resolution, and when the time came to put it into effect you always failed. Make the situation real by thinking of actions on the part of other people likely to arouse your anger. Note that the problem is not merely that of finding out what you ought to do at the moment when provocation arises, but also what you should do to uproot the undesirable trait of character in the intervals of freedom from temptation.

And there are a great many other questions like these referring to the management of the mind.

Then in Part II are presented a great many questions relating to the Nature of Success. They are grouped under the following headings: Popular Misconceptions of Happiness; the Glow of Health; Work; Reading; Friendship; Service and Character.

The purpose of all these questions is to cause pupils to become observant and reflective regarding moral situations presented in everyday life. It is not the primary aim to give the pupil information, though he does gain a great deal of knowledge relating to conduct; but the chief object is to develop in him the power of reflecting sanely upon the problems of life as they arise in his adjustment to people, and the habit of dealing with them effectively.

In the second division of the work, answers are given to the problems considered in the first division. These answers are intended in the first place as an aid for the teacher. They present a point of view which will be of service to him in the discussion of the problems in the class. Then it is intended that these answers shall serve as a résumé of the discussions after they have been worked over by the pupils. In this way the pupil is led first to attempt to solve a problem by his own observation and reflection, and by the application and principles of right and wrong; and after he has made his best effort, and has had give-and-take discussion with his fellows in the class, he then gets the view which the experience of the race has formulated in respect to any problem which has been proposed.

From the beginning the pupil is helped to regard all these problems as having a bearing upon Success; and he is led to consider, in the first place, the intellectual, physical and moral conditions of success. No attempt is made to be complete or final in the treatment of these topics, but only to guide the pupil to reflect upon the matters of primary importance. Success is not defined for the pupil; he may proceed on his own conception of what it implies. But as the discussion of the matter proceeds, the pupil cannot fail to see that a certain type of man or woman—one with vigorous health, who meets the problems of everyday life in an intelligent manner, who loves his work and does it with spirit and enthusiasm; who has a deep interest in the higher and more educative forms of play and relaxation; who is a genuine good friend and has good friends; who is a loyal member of a loyal family; who is generous in his relations to people; who has interest in matters of public importance; and who believes in the value of a wholesome character—this, it is made to appear, is the type of person who will get the most out of life, who will achieve success in the highest way and who will do the most for the world.

To the present reviewer it seems that Professor Sharp's book should be of unusual service to high school teachers. It should enable them to treat the subject of moral instruction and training in a very vital, natural and effective way. Even if there should be no class in moral instruction in a particular high school, the teachers should nevertheless be able to get from this book many suggestions which they could utilize to advantage in morning exercises, and on occasions when they have an opportunity to discuss questions of conduct with pupils in a natural and unaffected way.
