...by increasing the efficiency of your workers with between-meal lunches of

HOMOGENIZED VITAMIN D MILK

SPEED PRODUCTION ★ SPEED PRODUCTION

★ Scientific studies reveal the fact that between-meal milk lunches have increased production 4½ per cent, decreased errors 8 per cent, cut down accidents 30 per cent, reduced absences 39 per cent.

Physicians and nutrition authorities agree that the output of every industrial plant depends largely on what the workers put into their stomachs. They agree, too, that many workers live on shockingly inadequate diets. And the records prove that better nourishment for workers means more work, better work.

We are prepared to present complete and authentic evidence that between-meal lunches with Homogenized Vitamin D milk for your employees will pay real dividends.

Many factories and offices are using this simple, practical, profitable plan for increasing production. Let us tell you about it. Ask to see our new brochure, "Keep 'Em Working." Write today. Use the convenient coupon below.

WISCONSIN ALUMNI RESEARCH FOUNDATION • MADISON, WIS.

The Wisconsin Alumnus is published quarterly by the Wisconsin Alumni Association and is entered as second class matter at the postoffice at Madison, Wis., under the act of March 3, 1879. Subscription to The Alumnus is $1.00 per year. This is included in the regular memberships of The Wisconsin Alumni Association which are $4, $2, and $1 annually. Family memberships, $5. Life memberships, $75. Sustaining memberships, $10.

THE class of 1943 has been graduated in the same thrilling and inspiring manner that classes throughout the years at the University of Wisconsin have bid adieu to their alma mater.

The Field House was the same, the caps and gowns and mortar boards and distinguishing tassels were the same, but still there was something different, a deeper feeling about this year's ceremony.

It may have been the university's service flag from World War I which hung from on high honoring the Wisconsin graduates who served their country in 1917-18 as well as now in the present conflict. The blue and gold and khaki of military uniforms scattered liberally throughout the graduates and audience lent a sober air that made one realize this was a different ceremony than had ever been before.

Many of the graduates were to leave within the next few days for their first army, navy or marine station. Some had returned on furloughs from army camps to be present at the exercises. For most of them commencement, translated, meant, "After college, war."

These students who are leaving the campus, perhaps more so than in recent years, take with them the Wisconsin spirit which is a deep conviction that one will forever be a part of this campus and its halls, this university and her traditions.

They take with them the spirit of the alma mater which is a promise that the university will always be a part of one's greater life, one's aspirations, one's broadening horizons and faith and dreams. The Wisconsin spirit which these graduates carry away with them will be a guarantee that when victory comes spreading peace and freedom to a troubled world, these students will then cast off their armor of war and re-dedicate themselves to the peace time pursuits toward which they were building at the university.

They take with them but they leave behind more than they take, a freshness, a vitality, youth and freedom and hope which is the very soul of the university. Long live the class of 1943!

The Editor.

(Excerpts from President Van Pelt's report presented at Alumni Day Program on May 29)

LAST September, as the Wisconsin Alumni Association started its eighty-first fiscal year, I presented a four-point program for this year's activities:

1. We must win the war.
2. News from home for the Fighting Badgers.
3. A strong right arm of the university.
4. Develop and expand association services.

As we near the end of this fiscal year, I am happy to report that this four-point program has been carried out with gratifying results. Association members have cooperated splendidly in attaining these objectives.

1. WE MUST WIN THE WAR.

Victory in this war must be the primary objective in every program of activities these days. We on the home front must do our full share to provide the guns, planes, ships and tanks needed to lick the Axis gangsters. I am sure that every member of the association will continue to give this complete support until victory is ours.

2. NEWS FROM HOME FOR THE FIGHTING BADGERS.

The campus of the university is now as large as the world itself, for in every corner of the world our Fighting Badgers are battling in this global war. Like all service men, these Badgers are hungry for mail—for news from "back home." To supply this news the Wisconsin Alumni Association sends all its publications, free, to these Fighting Badgers. Since last September, 21 publications have been sent to these Badgers to give them the news they want.

When mailing restrictions made it increasingly difficult to send our regular publications overseas, we solved the problem by developing a new publication—THE CARDINAL COMMUNIQUE. This news letter is sent by first-class mail to our fellow Badgers serving overseas.

The association is also cooperating with the university to insure better war records for this war than were compiled for World War I. Recognizing the need for these war records, the association recommended to the university the establishment of a war records department as a part of the alumni records office. President Dykstra and the regents heartily approved the idea and the work was started last fall with the employment of a war records clerk. More than 6,000 names are already listed in this new department and the number is growing daily. The job of handling this new department is already too heavy for the present staff. I hope the university will expand this department so that the splendid contribution made by Wisconsin and its alumni may be properly listed and recorded. I hope, too, that one of these days the university will find it possible to publish a directory of these Fighting Badgers.

3. A STRONG RIGHT ARM OF THE UNIVERSITY.

Like all universities, Wisconsin needs the strong right arm of an effective alumni organization. While the war has shifted our activities to new fields, we have not forgotten our obligations to our Alma Mater. With one or two exceptions, all of our regular services to the university and its alumni have been carried on as before. These activities must be continued because war times are tough times for universities.

4. DEVELOP AND EXPAND ASSOCIATION ACTIVITIES.

The work outlined under objective no. 2 is, of course, the outstanding example of new association services this year. Another very important new service provides one year's free membership to all members of the class of 1943. This new service has been developed

Hail and Farewell!

. . May 29, 1943 . .

THE place is Madison, the Wisconsin Memorial Union, in particular, and the time is Friday and Saturday, May 28 and 29, the occasion is reunion weekend. About 500 alumni and former students returned for reunions and commencement this year. They came from Washington, D. C., and Seattle, and although the number was smaller than in former years, the spirit was the same and the program excellent.

At the meeting of the board of directors Saturday morning, Judge Clayton F. Van Pelt was re-elected to carry on his splendid work as president of the Wisconsin Alumni Association; Dean F. O. Holt was elected first vice-president, William D. Hoard second vice-president, Philip H. Falk the new treasurer, and Mrs. Hugo Kuechenmeister will again serve as secretary.

At the same time, the new directors were announced as the result of the ballot that went to all association members in April. The new members of the board of directors are, Dr. James P. Dean, '11, Madison; Mr. Walter Alexander, '97, Milwaukee; Mr. Harry P. Adams, '00, Beloit; Mr. J. W. Jackson, '02, Madison; Mrs. Hugo Kuechenmeister, '13, Milwaukee; Judge F. Ryan Duffy, '10, Milwaukee; Mrs. Lucy Rogers Hawkins, '18, Evanston, Ill.; Mr. Alfred Buser, '12, St. Paul, Minn.; Mrs. William H. Haight, Jr., '39, Madison; and Mr. Robert M. Connelly, '16, Appleton.

Mr. Myron T. Harshaw, x'12, Chicago, and Mr. Basil I. Peterson, '12, Madison, were re-elected to the board of visitors. Dr. A. R. Tormey, '14, was recommended to President Dykstra for the post of alumni representative on the athletic board, and was later appointed, while Mr. Walter Malzahn, '19, West Bend, was elected to fill the unexpired term of Jerry Donahue of Sheboygan who died April 13.

Reunion programs officially opened with the X Club banquet on Friday night which 100 guests attended. At the X Club forum in the Union theater, which was held after the dinner, Pres. John S. Lord of Chicago presented the honor guests of the evening, Dr. Edwin S. Burdell of Cooper Union, New York City, who spoke on "Post War Education in a Post War World," and Prof. Howard Mumford Jones, '14, former head of the English department at Harvard University and now dean of the Harvard Graduate School. The title of Prof. Jones' address was "The Faith That Is In You."

Dr. Burdell, who is director of Cooper Union for the Advancement of Science and Art, in New York City, declared that "The future of education rests with the state universities . . . In spite of their unwieldiness and their dependence on politically determined appropriations there is evidence of real educational statesmanship among their executives and faculties." Dr. Burdell advocated a co-operative educational system alternating classroom instruction with employment in industry, and predicted a post-war equalization of education opportunity beyond the high school level.

Prof. Jones charged that the present liberal arts college has failed to give a "fighting faith." "The army cannot do in twelve months what the schools have failed to do in eighteen years, and this disturbing testimony indicates that we are sending in too many cases American youth into a struggle which is quintessentially and tragically a struggle between two philosophies for the control of the whole human race. We equip our men superbly with weapons; we have not equipped them superbly with ideas. . . .

"Knowledge exists for men, not men for knowledge; and our faith must be that men shall use knowledge, not for selfish, but for civic ends. Man rational, man as citizen rather than subject — these are, or should be, the twin stars of educational endeavor; for only by their light can the liberal state be guided to the ends of goodness and justice; and if we are not to live in a state whose ideal end IS goodness and justice, who of us cares to live?" Prof. Jones challenged.

The largest freshman class ever to enter the university enrolled four years ago and was graduated Saturday morning, its numbers cut from 2,600 to 1,050. Approximately 150 higher degrees were granted in addition to those of the graduating seniors.

Three honorary degrees went to outstanding sons of Wisconsin, a doctor of laws degree to Admiral William D. Leahy, chief of staff to President Roosevelt, who received a Wisconsin appointment to the naval academy at Annapolis, and whose father was an early Wisconsin graduate; a doctor of science degree to a nationally known scientist, Dr. Henry Helmholtz, '02, authority on children's care and director of pediatrics at the Mayo clinic; and a doctor of laws degree to a successful business executive, Harry A. Bullis, president of General Mills, Inc., of Minneapolis. Mr. Bullis received his first degree from the university in 1917.

Wiley Blount Rutledge, '14, associate justice of the United States supreme court, was to receive an honorary degree, but an important conference of the supreme court prevented Justice Rutledge from coming to Madison, and as the university does not traditionally award degrees in absentia he was unable to receive his.

Immediately after commencement ceremonies in the field house, 1,700 blueclad sailors and WAVES paraded in Camp Randall before Admiral Leahy, Admiral John Downes, commandant of the ninth naval district, Lieut. Comdr. Mildred McAfee, national director of the WAVES, Governor Goodland and other dignitaries standing at attention in a flag-draped reviewing stand. Alumni watched the parade from a special reserved section in the stadium.

The sailors and WAVES marching in the first formal navy review in Madison, are stationed at the university naval training schools, and the review, under the direction of Comdr. L. K. Pollard, was the navy's contribution to commencement and reunion weekend.

After the review alumni gathered at reunion headquarters, the Wisconsin Union, and later met at the different class headquarters for the class luncheons. About 100 guests attended the Half Century luncheon, at which time the class of 1893 was formally inducted into the club membership and each one was presented with his Golden Jubilee certificate. Officers elected for 1943-44 are, Charles M. Morris, '87, Milwaukee, president; L. M. Hanks, '89, Madison, vice-president; and Dr. Maybelle Park, '91, Seattle, secretary.

The alumni program Saturday evening in the Union theater culminated reunion affairs for 1943. An 80-voice WAVE chorus furnished charming music for the event, and President Van Pelt awarded alumni appreciation certificates to Mrs. George K. Lines, '98, Milwaukee, and Dr. Harry Russell, '88, former dean of the College of Agriculture, now director of the Alumni Research Foundation. A third certificate was forwarded to Louis Lochner, '09, noted foreign correspondent and author, who was unable to leave a radio contract on the west coast to receive his award in person.

Pvt. John C. Wickem, '43, a private at Fort Sheridan, came back on furlough to receive the first annual $100 award offered by the X Club to the senior who cooperates most effectively with the Wisconsin Alumni Association. John S. Lord, president of the X Club, made the presentation. Dean Holt presented the outstanding junior man and woman awards, of $100 each, to Carol Burnson Nelson, Rice Lake, and Robert D. Larsen, Oconomowoc.

President Van Pelt made the annual president's report, outlining the association's wartime program and describing the progress made by the association during the last year and sketching plans for an increased program and more services during the next year. The president's report is presented in more detail on page 291.

President Dykstra reviewed the university's war activities for the alumni and pictured for them the university's post war projects. The president had glowing words of praise for the present generation of youths, whom he termed the leaders of tomorrow.

Surprise speaker of the evening was Admiral Leahy, resplendent in gold braid and quantities of campaign ribbons. When the admiral spoke the audience became breathlessly silent—here was a full admiral, chief of staff to the president, one of the few terribly important men who are directing this war, and he was speaking as a Wisconsin man to Wisconsin graduates and former students.

"I do not wish to say to you that the war will be over soon," Admiral Leahy told alumni. "We still have a long, cruel way to go . . . The enemy is definitely on the defensive now and faces certain eventual defeat," he promised. The admiral paid a stirring tribute to the men, many of whom are from Wisconsin, who are so brilliantly destroying the philosophy of paganism that has threatened our civilization.

Admiral Leahy's closing words were dedicated to those very men as he said, "Those of us not permitted to accompany them send our hearts and our spirit along with these men who to all of us who cannot go are knights in golden armor living up to the traditions of our state and upholding the faith of our fathers."

Regents Create New Post . . .

"Assistant to the President"

THE creation of a post of assistant university president to act as a link between the university and business, industry, labor and professional groups throughout the state, was approved by the regents at their May meeting. The regents did not decide on an individual to take this position, but drew up the following resolution:

"It is, therefore, proposed, that there be created in the office of the president the position of "Assistant to the President" whose responsibilities would be subject to the president and the board of regents.

1. To accelerate and expand a program of state relations designed to develop closer contacts between the university and business, industry and labor and with professional and other groups in the state.

2. To co-operate with the alumni association and the alumni generally in promoting the welfare of the university.

3. To use the student body and faculty in reaching the people of the state thus increasing the contacts between the campus and the citizens of Wisconsin.

4. To act as an off-campus liaison officer for the university in discovering additional services which the colleges and departments of the university can render.

5. To represent the president in alumni association matters, and in contacts with educational organizations, schools and colleges of the state.

6. To represent the president before clubs and associations which invite the president to speak when the president cannot accept such invitations because of the pressure of other duties.

7. In general, to give the president help and support in off-campus contacts and activities and to be on call for any assignment which the president may make.

8. To report to the president and the board of regents on the status of the relations between the university and the state.

Editorial comment in the Wisconsin State Journal commended the action of the regents, saying, "The action of the regents of the University of Wisconsin in providing for an assistant to the president is long overdue. If, in addition, the man selected can serve as an official public relations officer, so much the better.

. . . In this world of today, the successful service or educational institution must inform the public of its work. . . . The war needs of our country have shown anew the importance of our great universities to our national life. Even the courses so-called practical men often deprecate—the humanities, the languages, the cultural courses—are playing an important role in winning the war.

Never before has the ivory tower had such a fine bill of goods to sell. Perhaps the man in this new position can help sell it to Wisconsin."

Walter Hodgkins Heads Board

Walter Hodgkins, '16, Ashland, was elected president of the board of regents at the annual May meeting. He succeeds Mr. A. J. Glover of Fort Atkinson who had been president since 1939.

Attorney Arthur T. Holmes, '09, La Crosse, was elected vice president, and M. E. McCaffrey, Madison, was re-elected secretary for the 36th consecutive time.

Regents Accept $157,852

The regents at their May meeting accepted $157,852 in gifts and grants, the largest amount accepted at a meeting this year. The gifts included an autographed picture of the supreme court of the United States which is to be hung in the law library. It was presented by John Frank, '38, Washington, D. C. A portrait of former Dean George C. Sellery of the College of Letters and Science was presented to the regents by Prof. Hugh A. Smith on behalf of the faculty.

Campbell Appointed to Board

William J. Campbell, Oshkosh, has replaced Herman L. Ekern on the board of regents. His appointment was confirmed late in April by state senate.

"I Am A WAAC"

"WHAT seemed to me to be the greatest contribution that a woman of America could give her country in its greatest hour of need was to become a part of the most direct means of winning the life-or-death struggles that began for us on December 7, 1941, at Pearl Harbor.

I searched and re-searched the fields of opportunities open to women in a nation at war. I contemplated the sacrifices that would have to be made by women before victory came. I weighed the possible privations necessary for those of us who would give up homes, families, fine positions.

I knew that none of these things was of greater importance than our country in this crisis. I joined the WAAC.

On a hot afternoon in July, on the 17th to be exact, at Milwaukee, I was sworn in as a member of the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps. Then, on August 29, after six weeks of concentrated, intensive training in officer candidate school at Fort Des Moines, Ia., I was graduated in the first O.C. class. My commission was third officer, a rank equivalent to second lieutenant in the men's army.

My first assignment was as a company officer at the first training center at Fort Des Moines, and as such, I was among the first WAAC officers who took over the training of new officer candidates.

On completion of this assignment, I had a tour of temporary duty at WAAC headquarters in Washington, D. C. Then, on October 8, I went to the fifth service command as service command director, being stationed at Fort Hayes, Columbus, Ohio.

Here my duties entailed in part responsibility for recruiting in the service command, which includes the states of Ohio, Kentucky, Indiana, and West Virginia, and responsibility for the administration of the personnel matters of the corps in that area.

On December 23, practically on Christmas Eve, I was promoted to first officer, equivalent to captain. It was the finest Christmas gift I had ever received, and made me realize more than ever my great responsibility to the corps of which I was a part.

Then toward the end of February, this year, I was transferred to headquarters in Washington, to permanent duty.

Being assigned as staff officer in Washington, with offices in The Pentagon, just across the Potomac, my duties have included organizing and conducting the indoctrination and orientation course for officers going to staff assignments in the field. As assistant to the director of the operating division, under my charge are matters concerned with personnel and operations—the former comprising such matters as individual records; the latter, supply and transportation for the corps.

Now, a veteran in the WAAC, I wish to restate the original thought which brought me into the corps. It is the strong realization that with privilege goes responsibility. The basic privileges accorded every individual in this country, of education, travel, selection of means of livelihood, of all the freedoms we take for granted and which are so precious, carry with them the inescapable responsibility of every individual to put aside personal ambition, wish, desire, and comfort until our country is safe."

"I Am A WAVE"

by Ensign Eloise Susan Eager, '40
USNR, W-V-S

October 6th was a big day for all of us in the first class of midshipman the navy has ever held for women. Trains pulled into Northampton, Mass., all day long bringing in scores of girls from all over the country to attend the officers training school at Smith College.

We were all pretty excited and anxious to prove ourselves in the days to come. Assigned our quarters at the station, we proceeded directly to our rooms in the Northampton Hotel and several of the college dormitories which the navy had leased. As it happened, I was sent to the hotel which was fortunate for me because it was the central headquarters for all our activities.

Mess hall was also in the hotel for everyone on the station so that too was very agreeable. I might say at this time that we ate in the old Wiggins Tavern which has a reputation for excellent food. The staff of chefs and waitresses had been retained by the navy and we did eat like queens the entire time we were there.

Within the next two or three days we were organized into companies and platoons. This became the basis for our class schedules, our gymnasium classes and even our "liberty". No time was lost in starting to drill. We had all heard the boys talk about drilling but by the time we left Northampton, we were fully aware of the intricacies of marching. Needless to say, none of us had been used to walking nine or ten miles a day and during the first few weeks there were a number of girls who had blisters and very tired feet.

The indoctrination course was the first more or less probationary period for us. It was patterned after the V-7 midshipmen's course. We were in what was called V-9, and our courses included the study of ships and aircraft, naval history, naval personnel and naval administration. These were supplemented by special lectures and movies on various related subjects.

A typical day began at the crack of dawn and sometimes before—or 6:15. We had an hour to dress, have our rooms ready for daily inspection and have breakfast. By 7:15 we were in formation and marching up the hill to classes. We had two classes in the morning and then either two hours of drill or two hours of gym work. Wednesday was a special day in our young lives. There was no drill nor was there any gym, but there was for four straight weeks a routine very dear to us all—our weekly quota of "shots." Wednesday afternoons we were at liberty from two until five but they were usually spent recovering from the after-effects. We were inoculated for everything but yellow fever so we all should be immune to just about anything.

The afternoon schedule was just as full and busy as the morning had been. There was about an hour for lunch. We had several minutes to read our mail—if any, and sad was the girl who didn't—and several more minutes to tidy up the rooms again. There were two or three periods in the afternoon—one a study period. From 5 to 5:45 PM we were at liberty to do as we pleased.

After dinner at 7 o'clock another study hall began. This time could either be spent in our rooms or in study hall. At 9 PM we were again free to do anything we pleased such as writing letters, sewing on name tags, shining shoes, playing bridge, etc. At 10 PM lights were out and we were all tucked in for the day by the mate of the deck.

We always had classes Saturday morning and captain's inspection at 10 AM. Captain's inspection was a ritual that was never omitted and one with which to take no chances. If everything had been in order all week, we fairly glistened on Saturday morning.

As January 8th approached there was a general tightening up for the last stretch. There were many extra things to be done as there always is at graduation time. Everyone was in a state wondering where they would be sent. The big day finally arrived. Many friends and families were there for the commencement exercises. We marched through town to the auditorium. Miss McAfee was there. Rear Admiral Jacobs, chief of the bureau of navy personnel, was there. The head of the Coast Guard Academy at New London, Connecticut, was also there. In short, it was a very momentous occasion when we received our commissions as ensigns in the United States Naval Reserve, W-V-S.

We had received our orders the day before for our new assignments and immediately after the program there was a general exodus. The trains were just as loaded as they had been the day we arrived but it was quite a different group of girls departing.

All in all, being a WAVE is very satisfying. We work hard, but no harder than anyone else in these days, and if we have succeeded in fulfilling the purpose of our organization to some extent now, we have high hopes of doing an even better job as time goes on.

The first lines of our SPARS "Marching Song" explain what we are doing here at coast guard headquarters in Washington, D. C., and all over the country to share the burden of this war with the men in every way we can.

"March SPARS,
March to victory,
Back your men and free them for the sea."

Our training covers a variety of fields. There are yeomen, radiomen, and storekeepers. There are also second class seamen who have come directly from basic training school to fill the urgent need for workers. We are rapidly replacing men at district coast guard stations and at coast guard headquarters.

Beginning about the middle of June all SPARS received their basic training, as well as their special training, at the coast guard's own training center at Palm Beach, Florida. Among the things they will have, which pioneer SPARS missed, are a salt water swimming pool, boats, tennis courts, and a golf course on which to drill. We'd all like to take our training over with that attractive arrangement they have now.

I trained as a WAVE at Stillwater, Oklahoma, but enlisted in the coast guard when Secretary of the Navy Knox gave the coast guard permission to recruit ten per cent of the WAVES then in training. Now, of course, SPARS are enrolled as SPARS from the beginning and are trained throughout at coast guard schools by coast guard instructors.

My training at Oklahoma Agricultural and Mechanical College was interesting. There I met girls from all over the country. On the training ship, U.S.S. WILLARD (not actually a ship, you understand) life was salty from "Hit the deck" before dawn to "Taps". It is an accomplishment for women who have been taking their time about things to learn to be on time for every muster. We were mustered for meals, classes, drill and special announcements. A few rugged individuals in every platoon sometimes made our drill periods comical. We all had our dreamy moments which spoiled the military appearance of an otherwise good-looking formation. After months of hard drill-practice we took on military precision, and our platoon won the pennant in competitive drill.

The coast guard is a fascinating service with many duties. Belonging to it is a satisfaction. Our work at the coast guard offices may be concerned with such interesting activities as lighthouse service, lifesaving, landing operations, or harbor patrol. The coast guard automatically becomes a part of the U. S. navy in wartime, and goes wherever its ships, men and planes are needed. Meantime, its domestic functions as the nation's maritime police force must go on, and the SPARS are enlisted to keep it functioning smoothly.

"I Am A MARINE"

by Cadet Ann Celeste Hanlon, '41

USMC-WR

In what seems like the dim past, the favorite diversion of my family and friends was to heckle me about joining the WAACs or the WAVES. But I had an answer for them. I'd reply, "I'm waiting for the marine corps to open its door." On February 15, they cried, "The kid's bluff is up!" But again I had an answer for them.

I was proud to be one of the first to enlist in New York and was interviewed and photographed by several of the newspapers. I was sworn in on February 27 by the help of two grand letters of recommendation from Professors Hyde and Patterson of the J-School.

Reporting for active duty on April 10, I was assigned to United States Ship Rockefeller, one of Mount Holyoke's largest dormitories, where I hastily plunged into the icy waters of navy discipline along with 75 other privates. One of my classmates is Eleanor Streckewald, Wisconsin, '39. Swabbing the deck, marching to class, eating from tin trays, standing watch, strutting in lisle—and our two months training had begun.

Our first drill period was a great experience. We almost fell flat on our faces when we first heard our sergeants' marine cadence. In 5½ weeks we managed to emerge from the butterfly and ballet dancing stage to the point where we look fairly snappy in formation. One and all, we agree that drill is the most enjoyable part of our training.

Most of us greatly appreciate the opportunity we have in our classroom to learn about the war as our soldiers, sailors, and marines actually see it. We are studying the intricacies of ships and aircraft, .45 pistols, naval strategy and tactics, field operations, marine organization and administration, and many other valuable subjects.

This marine "sounds off" as Cadet Ann Celeste Hanlon, '41

I do not think any of us will ever forget how self-conscious and how proud we were on our first shore leave in uniform. To distinguish our class from the first class, we wore the USMC armbands. We found the citizenry agape and heard ourselves called everything from "SPARS" to "She-M.P.'s!" The men in uniform we were glad to find most polite and friendly.

"Sounding off" by giving your name and rank to officers and addressing them by their ranks was a difficult chore at first. One private bashfully refrained from asking questions for weeks. Even the mate of the deck seemed as important as the commandant of the marine corps, himself, to her. Many of these details come like habits now that we are used to them. But we'll never get used to those weekly typhoid and tetanus shots!

"Where do we go from here?" is the subject of much speculation during our leisure time. None of us has any idea what our location will be after we are commissioned. From the first graduating class, several officers were assigned throughout the country to procurement duty; others went to divisions of headquarters in Washington, naval air stations, and many other activities.

Our predecessors were pleased that they could actually see the process of "releasing a man for combat duty" so soon after they were assigned to these stations. For wherever we go, we know there's a job to do for our corps. And we're proud to be the ones to do it.

Lawyer, author and publicist, devoted disciple of his beloved Wisconsin

FRED L. HOLMES, lawyer and author, was born on a farm in Winnebago County, Wisconsin, May 9, 1883. He worked as a farm hand, clerked in a country store, taught a rural school, served as a newspaper reporter, earning his way from grade school through the University of Wisconsin. Shortly after graduation from the university in 1906, he founded the Holmes News Service, which served the press of Wisconsin and metropolitan papers elsewhere until 1927. In that year he was admitted to the bar and has since practiced law at Madison.

Beginning in 1909, at the behest of the late Senator R. M. La Follette, Sr., he was successively business manager and managing editor of La Follette's WEEKLY, with exception of four years, through most of the life of that lively periodical. In 1922 he was appointed by Gov. John J. Blaine to revise the Wisconsin Blue Book, a biennial state publication. He turned the dry, statistical volume into a useful, standard school necessity. His method of approach has since been followed by succeeding editors in subsequent editions.

As the great Rostand, Mr. Holmes is "of the soil on which I stand, and of no land can I sing as of my own." To Wisconsin and its affairs he has given of himself without stint or calculation.

From his pen have come intimate and delightful stories of the state, some of which are: Abraham Lincoln Traveled This Way; George Washington Traveled This Way; Alluring Wisconsin; Badger Saints and Sinners; and The Voice of Trappist Silence. He has just completed the manuscript of a book to be entitled "Old World Wisconsin," dealing with the foreign nationalities, and is editing for the Lewis Publishing Company a five volume work to be known as "Wisconsin's Stability—Progress—Beauty." In 1942 Marquette University, Milwaukee, conferred upon him the honorary degree of Litt. D., in recognition of his meritorious historical and literary contributions.

Mr. Holmes' chapter on Glenn Frank is the 11th of the series which has been running serially in the WISCONSIN ALUMNUS magazine. Each chapter on the university presidents has been written by an outstanding writer or historian, especially selected for his ability and his familiarity with the subject on which he is to write.

Chapter XI follows in the tradition set by the earlier histories, as Mr. Holmes, an active progressive in Wisconsin politics, is admirably well fitted to record the history of Glenn Frank's regime.

Close friend and confidant of Mr. Frank, Fred Holmes knew Glenn Frank perhaps better than any other man in the state. When President Frank had a problem or was seeking advice, more likely than not it was Mr. Holmes whom the president sought out.

"Looking Ahead" by President Clarence A. Dykestra will be the next and last chapter to run in the university history series and will appear in the Oct. issue of WISCONSIN ALUMNUS.

Chapter XI

Glenn Frank, 1925-1937

by Fred L. Holmes, '06

THAT period of twelve years when Dr. Glenn Frank served as president of the University of Wisconsin is often called a "golden age" in the university's annals.

Under his supervision the institution forged forward in enrollment and in service to the people. Its energetic young president spread the light of the university to other states and nations; he instilled a progressive esprit de corps in the university's faculty; he infused new life and fresh blood into its teaching staff, enhanced its academic prestige; he quickened the moral tone and incited the loyalty of the student body to new heights. Neither mossback nor radical influence could control his judgments. He plowed old fields with a fresh courage.

Soon eminent writers and distinguished scholars turned aside from their paths that they might come to Madison to appraise this advance in education. H. G. Wells, the celebrated English critic, announced as his reason for desiring to visit the university, "because Wisconsin is a place where education still exists."

Glenn Frank enlivened and kept the faith of the founders of the university. He sustained its worthy traditions.

At the close of his service, President Frank's regime was characteristically recognized by Willard E. Givens, secretary of the National Education Association, as "outstanding."

"Under his leadership the University of Wisconsin has taken its place in the front rank of American institutions of higher learning," Mr. Givens wrote. Many other educators have given voice to like opinions. Lotus D. Coffman, then president of the University of Minnesota, declared that "steady progress" was made at Wisconsin under the Frank administration, and he referred to Dr. Frank as "one of the ablest thinkers in education in this country."

Wisconsin always has admired men and women of self worth. The hardihood of brave pioneers has enriched her history. From the beginning, a long line of resolute men of character in every avenue of endeavor, colorful personalities, gave a distinctive flavor to the state's culture. Their spirit is an inspiring heritage.

Perhaps that is why the absorbing story of Glenn Frank's rise from humble origin to posts of high honor caught the state's fancy when he was elected president of the University of Wisconsin in 1925. His early background was rural. He was born October 1, 1887, in Queen City—the word "city" is still a hope—in Missouri. He went to the country school, where his father was the schoolmaster at $30 per month. From childhood he liked to recite and declaim. He attended the Normal School at nearby Kirksville for three years, earning his way intermittently as the "boy preacher" on a twenty-eight mile circuit. Each Sunday before dawn, saddling the family horse, he started off—to three Methodist churches in one direction the first week, and then to three others in an opposite way the Sunday following. It was always dark when he returned. Even in youth he was a brilliant speaker and early began to earn money for his lectures.

The contagious enthusiasm of a Northwestern University football star, who came as a minister to Greentop, Missouri, kindled ambitions within him. Threatened by the lack of admission credits, the aspiring collegian convinced the dean of Northwestern that his wide general reading really offset any handicaps. The young Mr. Frank graduated in 1912, with such class distinction and with such esteem of the faculty that the president of the university selected him as executive assistant. Three years later Mr. Frank joined Edward A. Filene of Boston, the noted merchant and philanthropist, as an assistant and advisor.

With a firm hand on the throttle of success, Mr. Frank returned to St. Louis to marry, on June 2, 1917, a sweetheart of his circuit-riding days, the accomplished Mary Smith. To them one son, Glenn, Jr., was born.

Mr. Frank's charm of manner and ability to extract and present in simple yet elegant language the gist of intricate problems made him friends rapidly in the world of business. Sharp-eyed Morgan Schuster, New York publisher, induced the sedulous Frank to become associate editor of The Century Magazine, with direction to study World War problems. In 1921 the "boy editor" was promoted to be editor-in-chief of the publication, and was called back to Northwestern to receive a master's degree. Later he was given doctorate degrees by DePauw, Northwestern, Lincoln Memorial, and Michigan. Already he was a national figure. His lyceum contacts took him all over the country. His charm of expression multiplied his admirers. His refined presence, freshness of spirit, and penetrating glance commanded respectful attention. His study and understanding of economic problems and his turn toward liberalism in politics and education brought both platform and classroom recognition. Two volumes, "The Politics of Industry," in 1919, and "An American Looks at the World," in 1923, illustrate his keen and active mind.

Wisconsin liberals had heard favorably of Dr. Glenn Frank. There was a vacancy in the presidency of the University of Wisconsin. President Charles R. Van Hise, who had glimpsed the new era, died in the fall of 1918 before his policies had come to full fruition. For the six years following, the venerable Dr. Edward A. Birge graciously held the fortifications and added new bricks to the wall, while the regents sought a leader. When Dr. Birge finally asked to be relieved the board of regents unanimously selected a special committee composed of Theodore Kronshage and Michael B. Olbrich, both La Follette progressives in politics; John Callahan, state superintendent of public instruction; Zona Gale, distinguished Wisconsin authoress, and Daniel H. Grady to make the selection. Because of illness Mr. Grady was unable to participate although he wholeheartedly acquiesced in the ultimate choice.

Dr. Roscoe Pound, dean of the Harvard Law School, hesitatingly declined an invitation. While the committee was still in the east it contacted Dr. Frank. He agreed to come. Formal acceptance was made on May 20, 1925, followed by a hurried visit by Dr. Frank to the campus. The "boy president," now approaching thirty-eight years, took up residence at the opening of the September term. Liberalism was in the air and the newcomer was hailed as a new exponent.

Dr. Frank's coming to the campus created curiosity. Always neatly dressed, wearing light colored spats, smoking the latest design in collegiate pipes, and carrying a cane, he was the "observed of all observers" of "town and gown" upon his first appearance. The complacency of bespectacled and dowdy faculty members was shocked. Some of the more erudite felt belittled to be shepherded by a president whose doctorate was only "honorary." But the students enjoyed both the distinction and the fashions he brought to his new found environment. When it was reported that he had a chauffeur and drove the latest model Packard; that guests at his home were met by a butler, and that his son was being tutored, the townsfolk buzzed with interest. To rate an invitation for a luncheon became a prized family recognition.

ROBT. M. LA FOLLETTE, SR., '79
He left a political heritage

The dingy presidential rooms in Bascom Hall "on the hill" became his executive office. Before his lifted eyes was the painting of John Bascom, an earlier president, whose liberal policies he was expected to support and advance. After a while, the old rugs were replaced, the desks rearranged, cradle telephones installed, and the new president began his scheduled conferences with students, faculty, townspeople and visitors from afar.

Slowly a new order of things came about. Everyone wanted to hear the newcomer. His enthusiasm expressed in ideas of advanced thought and education touched the popular imagination. The student convocations he arranged were packed with vociferous youth, anxious faculty members, and a scattering of citizens.

Madison business men found him affable. He attended their luncheon organizations, took a seat at the "Round Table" of the Madison Club where everyone speaks his mind, and then went out to get acquainted with the city people by speaking at dinners, preaching in the churches, and delivering dedication addresses for cornerstones and buildings. He could talk shop, politics, education and football on an everyday footing.

After Madison had been introduced then came the state. Dr. Frank at farm meetings and at teachers' conventions saw Wisconsin from the four corners. His addresses captivated the people. If some of his listeners could not repeat the theme of his address, they could remember his natty appearance and liquid tones of his voice. It took almost two years for Glenn Frank to get acquainted with Wisconsin people. But before a dozen years had passed they had so reached to his heart that though business called him away he maintained his citizenship with them to his death.

The La Follette family;
they followed in their father's footsteps

TWO strangely divergent epochs mark the history of the Frank administration:

First—The boom period which extended from 1925 to 1930 is distinctive because of students, faculties and buildings; the storm that raged over the "Experimental College," and departmental shakeups.

Second—The depression period from 1930, which was characterized by a curtailment of funds; the threat of "isms;" the defense of freedom of speech; the recruiting of a stronger faculty; the increase of national interest in

Dr. Frank as the exponent of new ideas; and a growing personal and partisan political hostility to the president.

Crossing Dr. Frank's path upon his arrival on the campus were sunlight streaks and menacing dark clouds, premonitory signs of the future: John J. Blaine was serving his second term as governor when Dr. Frank was elected president of the University of Wisconsin. Despite the sobriquet of "tightwad" executive, Governor Blaine took a paternal interest in the institution. The Wisconsin General Hospital, a memorial to World War veterans, and an innovation that has brought untold benefits to the public, was built and staffed with his full co-operation. Although not a graduate of the institution, his interest in education was genuine. He assisted Dr. Frank with his financial problems.

Significantly, with the coming of Dr. Frank, portentous political changes began. Senator Robert M. La Follette, Sr., whose policies and politics had dominated the political life of the state for a quarter of a century, died on June 18, 1925. His two sons, Robert, Jr., and Philip, were busy gathering up the strings of control. Philip was district attorney of Dane county, and was to be recommended by Dr. Frank as a lecturer in the law school, a post he held until 1930. The autumn of Dr. Frank's arrival witnessed the elevation of Robert M. La Follette, Jr., to the seat in the United States senate vacated by the death of his father.

Many of those who hailed Dr. Frank's coming believed a university faculty house-cleaning to be in the offing. During the World War, led by Dean George C. Sellery, all except a handful of faculty members had signed a "round robin" condemning the war attitude of the elder La Follette. Some of these signatures were given willingly, others through fear of social ostracism and possible loss of positions. At that time La Follette's fight in the senate for taxation of war profits had focused the eyes of the country upon Wisconsin's senior senator. He contended against a great bi-partisan combination in the senate as well as against a campaign of hysteria and misrepresentation in the press and by all the forces which rich and powerful war profiteers could command. The sharp criticism by the teaching staff of an alumnus who in many ways, from the vantage ground of public position, had befriended the university was a saber tooth that tore the flesh of the institution's most distinguished son. From that hour the university was under suspicion. A re-election of Senator La Follette in 1922 and his approval by the state electors as their choice for president of the United States in 1924, justified Senator La Follette's belief that his stand on the war was in keeping with the desires of the people. Dr. Frank candidly recognized the dilemma.

"Dating from the war period," Dr. Frank wrote a year after his arrival, "a good many people in Wisconsin became convinced that the essential spirit of the university was at variance with their spirit.

"As a result of all this, an interesting situation obtained, in which an outsider, visiting the state of Wisconsin, could find many citizens convinced that their university was a stronghold of reaction, and many citizens who were equally convinced that their university was a hotbed of radicalism. Manifestly this was a situation unhealthy alike for the state and the university."<sup>1</sup>

If Dr. Frank was supposed to rid the university of La Follette's enemies, he was never able to accomplish the purpose. He always denied any such understanding as a condition of his selection. One of the regents at the first meeting after his election requested him to take early action on Dr. Sellery. This he refused. Anyway, Dr. Frank was powerless. Until the last few years of his administration the majority of the regents of the university were conservatives, politically. Attempts were made by Dr. Frank, however, to find an alluring place for Dr. Sellery elsewhere, but the dean was too comfortably entrenched. Ultimately the dean became so friendly with the La Follettes that when Dr. Frank was dismissed the La Follette regents chose Dr. Sellery as acting president. Ten years had turned their anger to affection.

If Dr. Frank knew little of the fickleness of politics when he came, he soon acquired such knowledge through some practical lessons. Perhaps it is the fate of state universities to be subject to relentless, political criticism—merited or unmerited. For the first few years it was the conservatives who attacked Dr. Frank as too radical. Toward the end of his service the progressives were scoring him because he was too conservative. Neither political faction was able to make him do its bidding. That was his strength—but when the battle came it was also a weakness.

Dr. Frank cultivated the good will of the alumni. He never allowed hatreds engendered by the World War to fester. Early he asked the regents to restore degrees, honors and distinction divested because of opposition to the war or the views of students as conscientious objectors. Incidentally, his sharpest critic in the years ahead, Ernest L. Meyer, newspaper columnist, obtained his degree under Dr. Frank's policy of amnesty. The injustices inflicted through denial of salary increases to some who did not sign the "round robin" against Senator La Follette were corrected. This and other acts brought countrywide recognition of his fairness.

Within a year of his arrival the students felt the impact of Dr. Frank's broad policies. He adopted plans to check the heavy casualty list that annually depleted the freshman ranks. Orientation was conceived as a protective shield. A week before the opening of the fall term each freshman had his high school record checked, his personal likes charted, and his future aspirations weighed. There were lengthy conferences with advisers, who assisted in the selection of courses.

By this program, the first-year class became acquainted with classrooms, buildings and campus. And the freshmen came to know one another. When a week later members of the upper classes arrived, the freshmen were already acclimated.

Liberalism under Dr. Frank staged its first advance with the establishment of the "Experimental College." He was never afraid to tackle a new job or grapple with new conceptions. The legislature acquiesced in the educational venture with a generous appropriation. During the administration of Governor Fred R. Zimmerman almost a million dollars was added to university support. Dr. Alexander Meiklejohn, the deposed president of Amherst College, and an unorthodox liberal in education, was selected to direct the innovation.

After all, the idea was not new. Centuries ago students gathered around the teacher for instructional inspiration. They would live and learn with their tutors; they were to learn "how to think," not "what to think." Much of that which is called new is but old dressed in a prevailing mode.

From the outset the innovation met with opposition both on and off the campus. Dean George C. Sellery became the spearhead of the resistance. When the instructional staff was recruited in large part from the east, many members of the university faculty found it difficult to suppress their resentment. When the experiment continued into the fourth year faculty criticism turned on Dr. Frank because he allowed the venture to go on. At the end of five years, after $200,714 has been expended on the trial, it was allowed to expire, without the hoped for extension of the plan to other colleges. Dr. Frank still clung to the feasibility of this method of instruction. Others might be convinced of its failure, but not Dr. Frank.

CARL RUSSELL FISH
The Fish report is "Still a goal . . ."

"In its four years of experiment," he retorted, "the college has dramatized and driven home issues respecting the control and method of liberal education with which American colleges of liberal arts must sooner or later reckon."

Almost on the threshold of the period of university retrenchment came the first of a series of necessary departmental shakeups. These continued for over three years. Each of these occurrences was as annoying to Dr. Frank as to the regents. For long there had been much complaint over the strict methods employed by Miss F. Louise Nardin, dean of university women, in disciplining women students. Dr. Frank tried to transfer her to a teaching position. She refused his offer and demanded a public hearing. Later she resigned.

The Nardin episode was characteristic of several that followed. Sometimes regent investigations became necessary to confirm Dr. Frank's judgment. Chester D. Snell, dean of the Extension division, was cashiered for the unsatisfactory way he directed university extension work. It was athletic department contentions, however, that drew the alumni's greatest interest. After extended investigation and publicity, the regents refused to renew the contract of Dr. Clarence W. Spears, head football coach. In the interests of harmony they also relieved Dr. Walter E. Meanwell, athletic director and basketball coach. Every major change in personnel left scars.

There was something about Dr. Frank that was almost naive. He had implicit faith in the honesty of people. Often he relied too much on the reports of departmental heads and subordinates. He was unsuspecting almost to a fault. Moreover, he had a strain of mercy in his makeup that made his nature and reasoning akin to Abraham Lincoln's. He found it difficult to take the cruel way of a summary discharge. His attempted kindness was too often resented by those whose removal was necessary.

"Whereto serves merey,

But to comfort the visage of offense."

This exercise of mercy often led Dr. Frank into difficulties.

Early in his administration a survey of curricula and teaching methods was begun under the direction of Professor Carl Russell Fish, one of the ablest of scholars at the university. It was a reassessment of educational purposes. It sought advancement of scholarship and elimination of time servers.

"It served notice on any loafer," Dr. Frank explained, "that he play fair with the taxpayers' money and make honest use of the opportunity which the state provided."

Of the many important recommendations in the Fish report only a few had been adopted when the depression came. It still is a goal toward which the university lifts its eyes and upon which it pins its hopes.

WHEN the depression struck Wisconsin in 1930 every weak spot in the state's armor felt the impact. Necessary retrenchment at the university reflected the fear and the frugality of the people. There was a momentary decline in attendance. Faculty salaries were revised; readjustments were made and these brought complaints and criticisms. The broader plans for expansion had to be delayed. A new epoch in Dr. Frank's administration was ushered in.

"Ordinary intelligence dictated a policy of caution regarding any change in policy and organization that would set up for the years ahead, prior obligations for increasing the staff and added expenditures," commented Dr. Frank afterwards, in reviewing the transition. "The result was that many, if not most, of the fruits of the four years of study and planning had to be put in cold storage."

Philosophic and economic "isms" become more vociferous and receive more attention on a university campus in a period of economic disturbance than at any other time or place. For years Dr. Frank had been praised for his liberalism. Then one day came a shock that turned the radicals against him. Dora Russell, outspoken wife of Bertrand W. Russell, whose teachings were charged with making of sex a fetish, was invited by students to deliver an address on the campus. From the state came a loud protest. Before the students could arrange for holding the meeting in the Unitarian Church down town, Dr. Frank was drawn into the controversy.

"There is a broad distinction between free speech and indecent speech," Dr. Frank is reported to have told the students.

Zona Gale, who investigated the situation, always insisted that there was no relenting in Dr. Frank's broad policy of freedom of speech. Ultra radicals, however, took a different view. Columnist Ernest L. Meyer insisted that the president was selling out free speech on the campus.

Throughout his incumbency, Dr. Frank never attempted to control or suppress the expression of opinions by faculty members. Time and again individuals and press urged him to exact discipline for extreme utterances voiced by Edward A. Ross, Max Otto, Alexander Meilkejohn, and William Ellery Leonard, among others. Dr. Frank refused.

Zona Gale, Wisconsin authoress, a regent who helped in the selection of President Frank

So frequent and so often repeated were the charges that the university—both faculty and students—were impregnated with atheism, socialism and communism that a political issue was bound to arise. Largely upon these charges John B. Chapple, Ashland newspaper editor, became a candidate for the United States senate.

That challenge struck at the heart of Dr. Frank's fundamental concept of freedom of speech. Using an all-university convocation in celebration of Mother's day as the propitious occasion, Dr. Frank delivered a brilliant address that marks a high tide in his official utterances.<sup>2</sup> With boldness and courage he challenged the traducers of the university.

"I have called you together, ladies and gentlemen of the university," quietly began Dr. Frank, "not because I have any desire to dignify by direct reply the insincere, unprincipled, and dishonest campaign of deliberate slander to which the University of Wisconsin has been lately subjected by a little handful of ambitious men who seem quite willing to stab the state's greatest institution in the back if they think they might thereby advance their personal or political fortunes. I should prefer to let so shoddy a venture break down under its own weight of malicious misrepresentation.

"The little band of character assassins actively promoting this particular attack upon the university are seeking by collecting and dramatizing isolated and unrepresentative persons and incidents that may be found in all universities and throughout society, to project a picture of the University of Wisconsin that any informal intelligence knows bears no recognizable relation to the university as it actually is.

"The picture with which they insult the intelligence of this enlightened commonwealth is that of an institution in which the principle of freedom of thought—without which a university becomes but a merchandise mart for the insights of antiquity and a prison house for the minds of the present—has resulted in a riotous orgy of political, social, economic, religious and moral anarchy. If this sort of thing is said often enough and emphatically enough, either from ignorance or dishonesty, many sincere men and women who lack first-hand information, will, if not believe it, at least be disturbed in their minds. It is to such sincere men and women, whether inside or outside the university, that I speak this morning. I am under no delusion that anything I shall say will change the tactics of slick tricksters with personal and political axes to grind."

After delivering the charges and making answers with dramatic force and clenched fist, he announced:

"But this much I can say with certainty: As long as I am president of the University of Wisconsin no limited group in this state will turn the university into its tool without knowing that it has been through a fight. The university is not worth the investment of one dollar of taxpayers' money unless it maintains its freedom from external control of cliques. And as long as I am its president I shall fight for its freedom to deal objectively with the life of the mind and the life of the state regardless of personal cost to myself or political support for the university itself. For I would rather see the University of Wisconsin suffer the rigors of a lean budget through an unpopularity resulting from courageous, accurate, and objective research in the living issues of the political, social, and economic life of Wisconsin than to see it grow fat in a popularity achieved by seditious aloofness from such issues. And I will never willingly buy support for the university at the price of turning a propagandist agency for any particular group in this state—political or economic."

Mr. Chapple was not elected.

DR. GLENN FRANK'S greatest services to the state and university were not compassed within the settlement of internal squabbles and answering university critics. Rather they were to be found in the plans he fostered for making the institution serve best the students and the public; the prestige he brought by rebuilding a faculty imbued with a true concept of service. Lack of personal selfishness distinguished his every official act.

Through the alumni and the public school system, both in the state and nation, Dr. Frank was building up a foundation spirit. Staff and plant were kept in pace with the demands of the citizenry for increased services. As new faculty men were added he urged their frequent appearances in state activities. More than thirty men, all of promise and some of renown, were acquired. Several placed in key positions soon stamped their influence on the student body. Chris L. Christensen was chosen dean of the College of Agriculture; Dr. William S. Middleton was promoted to the deanship of the Medical School; Lloyd K. Garrison became dean of the Law School; Dr. Edwin E. Witte was chosen to assume some of the classes taught by Dr. John R. Commons; Dr. John D. Hicks became chairman of the history department; Frank O. Holt became dean of the Extension division; Harry A. Stuhldreher became athletic director and football coach; Dr. Edwin B. Fred was made dean of the Graduate School, and Prof. C. J. Anderson was acquired to head the School of Education as dean. The faculty was definitely strengthened and stirred with enthusiastic purpose.

The wide reputation of the institution early gained through the scientific researches of Babeock, Turnaure, Russell, Moore, L. R. Jones, Hart, Farrington, McCaffery, and a score of others, was to find its old fame boldly refurbished and engraved on new world cornerstones by the services of men who came to make up the new staff.

Singular among these accomplishments was the establishing of the Wisconsin Folk School. In 1927 Dr. Frank first suggested this experiment in a farm address given in Sheboygan county. He told his audience of the successful operation of the plan in Denmark and urged its immediate adoption at Wisconsin, predicting its benefits in stimulating farm life improvement. Dean Christensen was already a disciple of the idea.

Out of this conception there arose on the agricultural campus of the University of Wisconsin an informal type of adult education for young men who have decided to be farmers and rural upbuilders. The objectives are two-fold:

(1) To help young farmers develop their own personalities so that they can fulfill their responsibilities as rural citizens;

(2) To give these young men scientific knowledge and practical techniques which they can use on their own farms and in their own communities.

To accomplish these purposes, a typical old style American institution known as the Winter Short Course was reorganized in the fall of 1932. This now took the form of a Farm Folk School. The idea behind this reorganization was to shape a residential form of adult education for young men on Wisconsin farms, with special emphasis upon blending the training needed for good citizenship with the training needed for good farming.

This Farm Folk School idea embodies three elements:

(1) Course of study—a blend of the practical, scientific and cultural.

(2) Residential features—living together.

(3) First-hand contact with outstanding personalities.

First of all, this is a non-credit type of education. There are no academic entrance requirements. This two-winter course of four months each year is open to young men in their early twenties who have had actual farm experience and have decided to be farmers.

The course of study is organized around the idea that these young men are going to be farmers, citizens and community leaders at one and the same time. For example, there are courses in music, drama, citizenship, history, law, speech and public discussion scheduled right through the day, and interspersed with courses in livestock, farm management, soils, field crops, feeds and feeding. There are courses with scientific and fundamental content such as nutritional chemistry, bacteriology, genetics, economics and sociology.

A very important educational feature in this four-month Farm Folk School is the common life which these young men experience in living together in dormitories, eating together in the dining hall and meeting together in their own assembly hall. This experience of living together in simple surroundings broadens their social contacts and personal development.

With a view of broadening their knowledge and experience as citizens the Farm Folk School has a unique feature—the “evening forums.” To these “evening forums,” which are held about three times a week regularly throughout the winter, are invited leading personalities on and off the campus. They are men experienced not only in the field of agriculture, but in industry, transportation, business, labor, education, government, and international relations. These “evening forums” are conducted on a very informal basis and ample opportunity is offered these young men to ask questions and to enter into discussion with the men who appear before them.

Before the reorganization of the Farm Short Course the winter enrollment had dropped below a hundred farm boys. The first year—1932—two old barracks were remodeled to accommodate one hundred twenty-five young farmers. The response was enthusiastic and in 1934 the university was forced to enlarge the facilities to take care of three hundred-fifty young men. During the last five years the enrollment has had to be held down to three hundred seventy-five because of lack of adequate facilities.

Dr. Frank looked upon the Folk School as one of the greatest forward steps of his administration.

“Ten years more of its operation will produce, as a like procedure produced in Denmark, a farm leadership unmatched in cultural standing, economic grasp, social sensitiveness, and responsibility,” Dr. Frank prophesied at a gathering in 1937 celebrating the founding of the University of Michigan.<sup>3</sup>

Also during the Frank administration, the plan of Regent Michael B. Olbrich for a Wisconsin Arboretum, Wild Life Refuge and Forest Experimental Preserve near Madison was launched. Dr. Frank enthusiastically supported the idea. Still in its infancy it promises today to be a nature laboratory of exceptional value for students. In usefulness it may in time rival the famous arboretum of Harvard University; already it is a distinctive educational advance.

Every encouragement was offered by the Frank administration to the trail blazing Wisconsin Alumni Research Foundation. This agency was organized in 1925. Dr. Harry Steenbock, a professor of biochemistry, offered to the foundation his patent application then pending before the United States Patent Office, relating to the use of the ultraviolet ray to enrich the vitamin D content of food and medicinal products. The objective of the foundation was to encourage and aid scientific investigation and research at the university. The fund now exceeds $5,000,000, the income from which goes back to the university for research.

This new relationship of scientific discoveries to the support of university research was profoundly developed by the cooperation of President Frank, the regents, and trustees. It may take, however, another quarter of a century for the scientific and educational world to measure fully the significance of this mutual relation of science to human affairs. Already the success of this social experiment has been phenomenal.

There was scarcely a college on the campus that was not renovated and improved in Dr. Frank's twelve year regime. Extension courses were popularized and made more easily available to farm, factory and small town; the Medical School forged ahead with its beneficent hospital service that has brought distinction to the state. Harry Stuhldreher carried to the high schools the gospel of what the university has to offer youth. Producers, shop and factory brought their unsolved problems to the institution's laboratories in confidence.

There were other marks on the Frank administration still more indelible. Dr. Frank's clean personal life and high moral standards were factors that inspired the student body. To attend a convocation and witness the pride with which he was welcomed was to glimpse something of the old fashioned character pull admired in men. He was one of those rare spirits toward whom people instinctively turn for support and consolation.

Fortunately, there are records that measure the ratings of American institutions of higher learning. The university's graduate standing was seventh among leading universities in 1925, the year of Frank's appointment. In 1934 the university's position had risen to second among great universities, a position which placed Wisconsin ahead of Harvard, Columbia, Cornell, Michigan, Illinois, Chicago, Yale and Minnesota.

In the twelve years from 1925 to 1937 the academic enrollment increased from 8,142 to 10,679; first and higher degrees conferred totaled 23,092. Acknowledging the results of his inspiring leadership, the board of university regents after his death officially declared that:

"His signature on these diplomas now stands in thousands of homes throughout state and nation as a living monument to a man who placed services to his fellowmen above self, who, indeed, at the last great moment of life, sacrificed himself on the altar of public service."<sup>4</sup>

THE personality of Dr. Frank and his accomplishments at the University of Wisconsin made him more and more a national figure. Chester Morton, top notch magazine writer, characterized him as "the outstanding educator of the day, an educator who is making his dream of a real university come true." The radio public clamored to hear him; a New York Lincoln Day address showed his political leanings; there was talk that he might duplicate for the Republicans the feat of another college executive—Woodrow Wilson—and become president of the United States.

Two books written by Dr. Frank during this period, "America's Hour of Decision" and "Thunder and Dawn," revealed his study and understanding of domestic and international problems,—an outlook and equipment needed for high posts in the public service. For Dr. Frank's security as president of the university, too much outside attention was being paid him.

This aura of prominence made politics a threat. There were university departmental cliques that plotted against Dr. Frank. They became vociferous. Others felt honestly that only a person equipped with an earned doctorate and who was an educator of great distinction should pilot university affairs. Ernest L. Meyer in an article in the American Mercury in 1934 ridiculed Dr. Frank's liberalism as president and designated him as a "stuffed shirt." From that moment there was open hostility.

Beginning in 1931, coincident with the depression, it became evident that the relations between Philip F. La Follette, "the boy governor," and Dr. Glenn Frank, "the boy university president," were becoming tense. That impression was deepened at the hearings on the university budget when the governor insisted on knowing why the "deadwood" had not been eliminated from the university payroll. The critical tone put the newspaper fraternity on notice.

There followed two years of quiet occasioned by a Democratic administration, and then in 1935 Governor La Follette was returned to office. In January, 1936, Governor La Follette appointed five progressives to vacancies on the fifteen-member board of university regents. Although by its terms Dr. Frank's contract would expire June 30, 1937, the press quickly jumped to the conclusion that the executive did it to line up votes in support of a move to oust Dr. Frank sooner. After the first board meeting, in which the new appointees participated, Governor La Follette summoned three of the holdover members to his office. Expressing dissatisfaction with Dr. Frank's regime, he urged the three—Callahan, Wilkie and Grady—to line up with the five new members to make a majority necessary to force the university's head to quit.

Learning of the contemplated ruse, Dr. Frank startled the board members at the next meeting by boldly informing them of the intrigue. Those not in the deal appeared dismayed. Then Dr. Frank launched into a defense of his administration, pointing out that in the ten years he had brought scholarly prestige, added eminent men to the faculty, increased the enrollment, and acquiesced in a reduction of his salary from $20,000 to $16,000. He charged that "external influences" were being used to accomplish his dismissal.

With each succeeding meeting of the regents during the summer of 1936, the press speculated on the probable date of the removal. Madison society entered the war of contentions.<sup>5</sup> No sooner had the fall elections returned Governor La Follette to office than events began to happen. The making of the 1937 budget was taken from the president, who was informed that spokesmen of the regents would present the requests to the legislature.

Warned of the pending dismissal, supporters of the president sent a cascade of letters and telegrams pouring in upon the regents. Alumni, press and public generally supported Dr. Frank. Zona Gale issued a statement that crystalized the issue.

"I speak for a host of Wisconsin progressives who feel as I do, I know, when I say that to save the progressive movement from betrayal all of us must demand that this groundless and personal and unprogressive drive be ended," she declared, outlining her view of a free educational system and the responsibility of its custodians.

"If ever any of these trustees, then, are told by a political power who in a university shall be appointed or dismissed, and what measures are to be passed, then the tradition and the present routine of free education collapse in this state."

As the regents gathered in their December 9th meeting, every nerve was taut. To the students, Dr. Frank was an idol. Placards appeared, "Let's support Prexy."

When Chairman Harold M. Wilkie, La Follette regent appointee, began to list his charges against the president, the students drowned his words with a Badger skyrocket—"Down with Wilkie! Siss, Boom, Ah!" It took a gesture from Dr. Frank to quiet them.

Chairman Wilkie then read a prepared statement of the charges against Dr. Frank, which may be summarized as follows:

(1) He was not a "Business or educational administrator" fit to handle $7,000,000 a year.

(2) He has lost the confidence of those with whom he must deal.

(3) He has "failed to act" promptly in controversial matters.

(4) He has "failed to devote sufficient time and attention" to university affairs.

(5) He has "permitted practices regarding expenditure of public money in relation to himself and his household that I consider questionable."

(6) He does not give thorough attention to detail "in university affairs."

"That is the kind of thing you can hear at any major university in this country," sharply retorted Dr. Frank. "Moreover, this report is shot through with inaccuracies. I have no intention of resigning."

Dr. Frank requested ample time to present a factual answer. He asked for a recess until January 20 to prepare a reply. This was denied and a hearing was ordered before the 1937 legislature would convene in January.

After that session of the regents no one doubted the outcome. Before the final hearing most of them had openly taken sides. All semblance of a fair trial was abandoned. Upon re-convening, January 6, 1937, the majority of the board appeared bored at the evidence presented, except for flashes between brilliant, witty, white-haired regent, Daniel H. Grady, who defended Dr. Frank's conduct, and Chairman Wilkie, who led the ouster move.<sup>6</sup> Momentarily the meeting was strained when Zona Gale told the gathering that one regent accosted by her had epitomized the reason for dismissal in a single terse remark:

"Dr. Frank is not a very good progressive."

Regent Clara Runge arose to admit the language but to deny the implication given to the statement.

For two days testimony was presented. On the morning of the hearing Governor La Follette replaced a holdover regent by a new appointee whose vote a few hours later was to turn the balance. Most of the charges appeared unsustainable as the end neared. Some household expenses were aired in an effort to prejudice the rural vote. The hearing room was crowded to suffocation. The majority of the regents refused to adjourn to larger quarters for public convenience; the queasy atmosphere mirrored the hopelessness of further proceedings.

Regent Grady's closing argument was a moving appeal to preserve the tradition of four score years that the governing board of the university remain non-political and non-sectarian.

"The people of this state resent the method that has been used in this proceeding," asserted Mr. Grady.

"There is no prize in this contest. It is not the prize of the presidency. There is a jewel that we seek to preserve. That jewel is the tradition of non-political interference in this institution.

"I trust that it may not be the ill-fortune of those of us on this board who, without regard to friendship, feel the obligation of preserving this tradition; that we must entertain the thought of Henry Grattan, who, when he saw the destruction of the parliament of his country and thought of the men who created it, said, 'They sat beside her cradle, we march behind her hearse'."

To force a ballot an evening meeting was ordered. The fateful vote, its announcement drowned in a babble of confusion, was 8 to 7 for immediate dismissal, salary to continue under the contract to June 30. All of the eight majority regents were appointees of Governor La Follette.

That vote had epochal repercussions in the state. It left deep scars among many good citizens who felt humiliated by the arrogant methods employed. It became a minor issue in subsequent state political campaigns. It led to the ultimate abolition of the then created board of regents and the enactment of a new law, drafted in part by Dr. Frank, under which regents are appointed on a nine-year rotary plan, intended to eliminate the power of a governor to pack the board. This may have been one of Dr. Frank's greatest services to Wisconsin.

Nearly four years pass!

And then on September 15, 1940, came news of Glenn Frank's tragic death, and that of his only son, in an automobile accident. The people of the entire state were chastened with grief as the sad fate became known.

Three days later, as sorrowing friends of Glenn Frank stood in the glow of an autumn sun beside his open grave in Forest Hill Cemetery, Madison, there came sounding for me prophetic echoes of his memorable words spoken four years before. From his cold lips he seemed to repeat:

"Build and preserve a national life that stabilizes and enriches life for the millions that we will feel that you have kept faith with us, even if you never celebrate our memory."

With those spiritual values which animated the founders of this great university dedicated to the pursuit of truth, Glenn Frank came as an evangel, spreading light and understanding in a troubled world.

President Dykstra Goes to England PRESIDENT C. A. DYKSTRA is one of the three Americans who will visit England this summer to interpret the United States to the people of Great Britain, the Office of War Information announced last month. Mr. Dykstra will tell the British people about American universities at war.

Co-eds will Receive Aircraft Fellowships BEGINNING in June the Pratt-Whitney division of United Aircraft corporation established 25 one-year fellowships for university women. Selected candidates will spend three semesters studying a specially selected curricula of mathematics, physics, chemistry, and engineering, which will equip them to function as assistants to engineers in the Pratt-Whitney plants in Connecticut and Massachusetts.

In order to fulfill the requirements of university women for the fellowship, the College of Letters and Science has established a new major in physical science technique. Because the women taking the fellowships may not have time to meet the demands for any of the departmental or division majors now in existence, the new major will include 14 credits in chemistry, 13 credits in physics, 12 in mathematics, and 12 in the College of Engineering.

Dairy Department Develops New "Spread" A NEW "spread for bread" has been developed by the dairy department of the College of Agriculture and has been endorsed by the Wisconsin State Board of Agriculture.

The new product is made entirely from dairy products and contains 30 per cent butterfat. Although the spread tastes like butter, it is without color and cannot be called a butter substitute. It will, however, provide a satisfactory spread for bread during the rationing period for butter. The College of Agriculture has turned over the product to the Wis. Alumni Research Foundation, which controls the patents on numerous processes and developments turned out by university experts.

Offer New Course in Child Development A new course, co-ordinating the research relating to child study in several departments and offering a degree in any of three different schools, is being offered for the first time this summer at the university. This unique major in child development is not offered at any other university as such a complete course.

Students majoring in the four-year course may receive a B.S. degree in education, a Ph.B. or a B.A. degree in letters and science, or a B.S. degree in agriculture.

Professor White is Given Leave PROF. HELEN WHITE, of the university English department, has been given a leave of absence for the first semester of 1943-44 to go to Barnard college, New York, as visiting professor of English. She will teach courses in Shakespeare, the metaphysical poets, and a special private reading course.

Professor White has been at Wisconsin since 1919. She has held two Guggenheim fellowships for study abroad, has written several novels, and is national president of the American Association of University Women.

Elizabeth Brandeis Appointed to WLB ASSOCIATE PROF. ELIZABETH BRANDEIS, of the university department of economics, is among the 17 Wisconsin people certified by the regional War Labor board as panel members to hear labor dispute cases. Miss Brandeis will represent the public in disputes.

New Loan Fund is Created THE Ben Anderson, Jr., loan fund, to be supported by a contribution of $1,000 from

Activities

Mr. and Mrs. Ben H. Anderson, Madison, has been established at the university. The fund has been given in honor of the Anderson's son, an army private, who died of diphtheria last February.

The dean of the medical school will administer the fund, which will be used for the aid of needy medical students.

Girl Heads Union for Campus "First"

MISS CAROLYN HALL is the first woman in campus history to be elected president of the Wisconsin Union. She and Miss Ruth Welling, Detroit, vice-president of the Union, will serve during the summer session and the first semester of the 1943-44 school year. Miss Dorothy Browne, last semester's Cardinal editor, was also a "first lady."

Outstanding Juniors Win W.A.A. Awards

CAROL R. BURN-SON, Rice Lake, and Robert D. Larsen, Oconomowoc, were winners of the Wisconsin Alumni Association $100 awards to the outstanding junior man and woman on campus. They were selected from a field of 16 applicants nominated by the deans of the various schools and interviewed by the Association's Student Relations and Awards committee.

John Wickem, Madison, was the winner of the Wisconsin X-Club award offered this year for the first time to the senior who cooperates most effectively with the Association in promoting the best interests of the university.

Miss Bernson and Mr. Larsen were presented their awards at the annual alumni program Saturday night of reunion weekend. Mr. John S. Lord, X-Club president, presented the award to John Wickem, who returned in uniform from Fort Sheridan, where he is an army private, to receive the X-Club award Saturday evening and the Kenneth Sterling Day award at Senior Honors Convocation Friday afternoon.

Willard Gibbs Medal Goes to C. A. Elvehjem

DR. CONRAD A. ELVEHJEM, professor of biochemistry, was presented the Willard Gibbs medal, ranking honor in American chemistry, by the Chicago section of the American Chemical Society late in May.

The award recognized Dr. Elvehjem's work in nutrition, especially his work on the B-complex vitamins; his work on tissue respiration as applied to the study of vitamin function; the identification of nicotinic acid as the cure for the black tongue and pellagra; the proof that chick dermatitis is due to pantothenic acid deficiency; and for various other original accomplishments in the vitamin field.

Dr. Elvehjem has been a member of the university biochemistry staff since 1923. He trained at the university, having been graduated in 1923, and studied later in Europe.

Eight Faculty Members Retire

THE closing of last semester marked the loss of eight outstanding members of the university faculty who completed their many years of service at Wisconsin and retired from active university life.

Those faculty members include Dean Zoe Bayliss, assistant to the dean of women since 1928, who has been in charge of housing for university women; Prof. George Wagner, zoologist, who retires after 40 years of service; Dr. Charles A. Allen, botany, who has been a member of the faculty since 1901; Dr. Benjamin Duggar, professor of physiological and economical botany at the university since 1927; Prof. Charles A. Smith, who came to the university as an instructor in 1911 and has been secretary of the university faculty since 1921; Prof. Hugh A. Smith, chairman of the department of French and Italian, who has been a member of the faculty since 1905; Prof. Adolphine B. Ernst, associate professor of German for 29 years; and Frank H. Everson, county agent.

The Campus at War

by Student Editor Ruth Jaeger

---

LANGDON STREET'S famed fraternity row, long a home for saddle shoes, sports jackets and varsity sweaters, changed hands the last of May as 1,000 new servicemen invaded Madison and took over the palatial Greek letter houses as soldiers' barracks. The servicemen are enrolled in the Army Specialized Training Program, under the command of Col. Herbert H. Lewis, head of the university's military science department.

The fraternities, whose members vacated in favor of the soldier students, are Beta Theta Pi, Delta Tau Delta, Phi Epsilon Pi, Phi Kappa Sigma, Psi Upsilon, Alpha Tau Omega, Chi Psi, Sigma Nu, Chi Phi, Alpha Chi Rho, and Kappa Sigma. Previously members of the Sigma Alpha Epsilon, Sigma Chi and Phi Delta Theta houses found rooms elsewhere and turned over their facilities to the marine and navy cadets taking pre-flight courses here.

It was moving day at the University Club, too, late in May, as some 70 faculty members and others packed up and moved out to make room for 200 soldiers on the top-floor dormitories at the club-house. The "evacuees" from the club included Dr. Bernard Domagolla, city chemist and bacteriologist, who had made his home at the club since 1924; Prof. George Wagner, founder of the club, who will retire from the faculty at the end of the semester; Prof. Alexander Vasiliev, emeritus professor of history and internationally known authority on the Byzantine empire, who had occupied the same room at the club since he came to this country from Russia in 1921; Prof. Miles Hanley of the English dept. who has made his home at the club since 1927; and Dr. Harry M. Kay, a club resident since 1922.

Students Plant Trees in Work Day Project

PLANTING and replanting of trees was the project of the university Work Day, held this year on May 8. This was the third annual Work Day held at the university.

The transplanting of the trees was done at the university Arboretum, where from five to six thousand Norway and white pine trees were moved in order to conserve them and to enhance the beauty of the countryside. Shortage of labor had prevented the work from being accomplished before it was taken over as this year's Work Day project.

Freshmen to Participate in University Athletics

THE University of Wisconsin faculty has given its approval to the plan whereby freshmen and students in the armed forces on active duty on the campus may be permitted to engage in varsity intercollegiate athletics for the duration of the war and six months thereafter. Similar action was taken by the Western conference faculty representatives last February when they waived freshman and eligibility rules of the conference to permit first year students and students in the armed services to participate in conference athletic programs.

The effect of the rules changes permits freshmen at Wisconsin to participate on varsity teams; waives the residence rule for freshmen; waives the residence rule for transfer students; and waives all eligibility rules for students in the armed services who are on active duty assigned to the University of Wisconsin.

Social Post "Fixes" Dates

WITH more and more service men coming to the campus every month, a new plan was born at the University of Wisconsin. The campus Social Post, a group organized with the aim of bringing together men in the armed forces and university co-eds on a more natural basis, was formed this spring.

The Post, which originally arranged dates only for naval aviation cadets and marines stationed at the YMCA, has rapidly extended its program until it now includes the cadets and marines, civilian pilot trainees, a few Truax men, sailors and the meteorologists.

Advisory Group Will Aid Co-eds

THE university woman power committee has been expanded to include women faculty members of various departments of the university, in order to aid women students in choosing their courses and in deciding what they should do to help the nation's war effort. Members of this group are available to co-eds at any time to answer their questions or to offer suggestions.

Members of the advisory group are Prof. Helen Clarke, assistant professor of sociology; Prof. Madeleine Doran, assistant professor of English; Prof. May L. Cowles, associate professor of home economics; Prof. Elizabeth Brandeis, assistant professor of economics; Sarah G. Ross, educational advisor at Elizabeth Waters hall; Kathryn H. Baldwin, of the law school; Prof. Emma L. Fisk, associate professor of botany; Margaret H. Meyer, instructor in physical education; and Alma L. Bridgman, instructor and executive secretary, department of economics.

Meteorologists Move Into Conover House

CONOVER house, of the men's residence halls group, was vacated early last month for a new group of Army Air corps meteorologists, who will attend the Air Corps "C" school, which has been established at the university.

This makes the fourth house in the group to be taken over by the army; Swenson, Jones, and Chamberlain houses having been vacated by students earlier in the year.

Year's Stamp Sales Total $44,218.30

MORE than double the goal of $20,000 worth of war stamps were sold at the university this year, as the war stamp drive came to a close with a total of $44,218.30 worth of stamps purchased on the campus.

During the week of April 29-May 5, an all time record was established as pockets were emptied to the tune of $2,860.70, in response to the government's second war loan call. Swelling the weekly sales was the $1,000 war bond, purchased by Warren Seybold, member of Theta Delta Chi, just before reporting to the navy.

Top honors for the year, as far as defense chairman go, went to Clarence R. Seybold, also a Theta Delta Chi member, who sold a total of $2,960.85 in war bonds and stamps to the members of the fraternity.

745 Books Contributed During Victory Campaign

A TOTAL of 745 books was contributed by students to the victory book campaign which was sponsored by the university war council with the assistance of the Union library committee and the Young Communist League. Only 65 text books were turned in, while the rest were good fiction and non-fiction books, with 225 pocket editions.

Of the total number, 450 books were turned over to the YCL for the libraries of three submarines, launched at Manitowoc, Wis. The remaining 295 books will be distributed to the military units stationed on the campus by the Union library committee.

WSSF Fund Tops $1,100 Mark

THE university campaign of the World Student Service Fund went over the $1,000 mark in its drive this spring. The relief fund will be used for student and faculty victims of war in 39 countries receiving assistance.

A permanent year-round campus educational committee to promote WSSF work will be organized on the campus soon, in order to keep the students and faculty continually informed on the needs of aid and the distribution of money by the service fund.

Calendar Changes for Next Year

BECAUSE of the inclusion of a full summer semester, due to the speeding up of the university curricula because of the war, the calendar for next year has been changed. The fall semester will begin Sept. 27 instead of Sept. 20, since the summer session will not be over until Sept. 18.

Under the revised schedule, classes will begin Sept. 27, Christmas vacation is reduced from 12 to 9 days and will come entirely in December, from Dec. 18 to Dec. 27, with classes as usual on New Year's Day.

Agriculture

STUDENTS from several of the "good neighbor" and allied countries were enrolled the past semester in the College of Agriculture. From Yorkshire, England, came Miss Elsie Parry. She was doing work in foods and nutrition serving under an International Fellowship of the American Home Economics Association. In June she returned to England to help her country in its foods and nutrition work.

Enrique Avila, an agricultural scholar from Lima, Peru, is taking work in bacteriology and animal parasites. He expects to continue his schooling another year.

China is well represented on the agricultural campus. From Kiangsu, China, is Suen Wu, a home economics graduate student; Chuang Wang, graduate student from Kwangsi, China; She Huang Ou, an agricultural fellow from Chekiang; Hsi Chang, an agricultural graduate student from Hankow; and Ching-seng Fan, from Chengtu, China.

Ching-seng Fan taught at one of the big universities in the interior of China and is now taking graduate work in agricultural bacteriology. He left China in 1940 to study in America for three and a half years on a scholarship. His furlough is now up and he plans to return to China, if possible, to the same university to teach bacteriology.

Canada has six graduate students enrolled in agriculture—Ernest Kerr, Guelph, Ontario; Samuel Kirkwood, Alberta, Canada; Gerald Le Page, Medicine Hat, Alberta; Douglas Marshall, Taber, Alberta; Laurent Michaud, Montreal, Quebec; and Edward Britten, Regina, Saskatchewan.

4-H Clubs Give Guns to Navy Not only food, but guns, too, are being provided for the fighting men of the nation by members of the state 4-H clubs. In a colorful ceremony on the steps of the College of Agriculture, a second-hand stock of small arms and ammunition was presented to the U. S. navy on behalf of the national 4-H Ambulance Fund early in the spring.

Commander L. K. Pollard, commanding officer of the naval radio training schools at Wisconsin, accepted for the navy; 800 rifles, 800 bayonets, 800 bayonet scabbards, 1212 belts and cartridges, 1164 gunslings, and all of the ammunition, both blank and ball.

The equipment was purchased with money contributed to the 4-H Ambulance Fund from a stock of used material owned by the Wisconsin State Militia.

Ags. Supply Cure for "Barbed Wire Sickness" AGRICULTURAL scientists at the University of Wisconsin have undertaken a new project—helping to supply a cure for "barbed wire sickness" among prisoners of war.

It sound like a job that calls for test tubes and microscopes. Actually, though, what these faculty men are doing is responding to a request of Conrad Hoffman, Jr., one-time member of the college of agriculture staff, for books and pamphlets on agriculture to be supplied to imprisoned soldiers.

The former instructor and research worker is working with the War Prisoners' Aid of the YMCA. He addressed his appeal to E. G. Hastings, professor emeritus of agricultural bacteriology, with whom he worked as a member of the Wisconsin staff. Hoffman expects to send a shipment of books and journals in the next two weeks for prison camp distribution.

Three Ag Men Receive Citations JAMES G. HALPIN, poultry research man; W. B. Griem, agricultural chemist; and Gus Bohstedt, head of livestock nutrition work

—two University of Wisconsin staff members, and the third from the State Department of Agriculture, were cited for their work in animal feeding at the annual convention of the Central Retail Feed Dealers' association June 7 and 8, and received honorary lifetime memberships in the organization.

Commerce by Director F. H. Elwell

BILL 656-A, creating a separate school of commerce at the university, was introduced into the state legislature early in June. The bill was sponsored by the Wisconsin State Chamber of Commerce and was designed to give business an "even break" at the university.

Regents of the university and the president opposed the bill, criticizing it as tending to "disintegrate" the compact curriculum, believing a separate school would increase costs, increase administrative difficulties, and reduce co-operation between departments.

Business men of the state urged passage of the bill on the grounds that a separate college would better serve the interests of business and industry in the state.

The bill, which would remove the school of commerce from the College of Letters and Science and set it up as a separate unit of the university, was passed by the assembly, but the senate adopted a substitute amendment making the matter discretionary with the regents. Later the assembly passed the amendment and the bill has gone to a regent committee for study.

Faculty in Service

HAROLD KUBLY has been commissioned a lieutenant (j.g.) in the navy and is taking his training at Columbia university preparatory to assignment.

Harry Schuck, instructor in accounting and commercial law, has been promoted to a first lieutenant in the Army Air Corps. His address is, 0915977, A.A.F. Bombardier School, Midland, Texas.

Many commerce graduates are instructors in army and navy schools throughout the country and write back that they often have many U. W. Commerce men in their classes.

12 Commerce Grads Win CPA Certificates

AN EVEN dozen of Commerce grads passed last fall's examinations and now have secured their coveted certificates to practice as Certified Public Accountants. They were: C. L. Lockwood, E. D. Sommerfield, Leland Longhorn, Wilbur H. Lorenz, Lester W. Brann, Elmer Shovers, Harold E. Hiller, Carl H. Bauman, Clyde A. Wilson, Robert L. McKenna, D. N. Olson and Wilbur

Director Elwell honored

H. Haass. The certificates were presented by Clarence Litchfield, '17, president of the Wisconsin State Board of Accountancy, at a recent meeting of the Milwaukee chapter of the Wisconsin CPA's held at the Milwaukee Athletic Club.

Elwell Honored PROF. F. H. ELWELL, director of the school of commerce, received June 3 at Town Hall in

New York City the honor award issued annually by the New York alumni of Beta Gamma Sigma, honorary commerce fraternity.

The award is granted to a member of Beta Gamma Sigma who is judged to have made the most outstanding contribution to society through his business, professional, or public activities. The selection is made after consideration of nominations received from all 48 chapters of the fraternity.

Engineering

AN ACTIVE program of research in chemical engineering was presented by Professor O. A. Hougen and various members of the staff of chemical engineering at the regular Research Conference March 29. The Wisconsin Alumni Research Foundation, Prof. Hougen explained, has made a direct grant to the department to support research in industrial processes, and the old building by the lake is crowded with projects. The research program has overflowed the barriers between the colleges on the campus and has brought together research in agricultural bacteriology and in mechanical engineering in connection with the chemical engineering program.

Speakers at the meeting included: A. E. Pufahl, R. B. Beckmann, Don Hanson, B. Gamson, T. C. Fong, C. S. Brown, and W. A. Bain.

450 Navy Engineers Arrive July First

JULY first 450 naval engineers arrived on the Wisconsin campus to begin intensive study at the university's College of Engineering. Opening of the College of Engineering was delayed from June 7, when the regular 15-weeks session began, to July 1 when the naval engineers were able to arrive.

IT IS now Commander Parkinson! Long a member of the naval reserve before the war, Prof. George A. Parkinson, assistant director of the University of Wisconsin in Milwaukee, joined the Navy in August, 1940, and saw Pacific and Atlantic service as navigating officer for a destroyer squadron and as ship commander. In March, 1943, he was promoted from lieutenant-commander to commander, as of August 1, 1942.

Mrs. Gregg Montgomery, ex '33, a staff member of the bureau of visual instruction until her induction last year in the WAACs, has received promotion from Auxiliary 1st Class to Technician 3rd Grade (staff sergeant), at the headquarters of WAAC training at Daytona Beach, Florida, where she is serving in the public relations office.

William P. Ward, '40, who was educational supervisor in the University of Wisconsin office of the "Engineering, Science and Management War Training" program, enlisted in the engineering corps at Jefferson Barracks, Mo.

Marjorie Senty, ex '44, assistant in the Extension office of Field Organization, was inducted into the WAVES and began training at Hunter college.

Ella A. Marquardt, '42, for six years a staff member of the bureau of visual instruction with rank as instructor, took up new work with the Third Service Command, Film Distribution Center, U. S. Army, at Baltimore, Md.

War Brings New Study Interests INTEREST in the war's global scope is reflected anew by the manner in which Americans are absorbing knowledge of the world beyond our own borders. History and geography take on new significance. One evidence is the study of European history.

Judged by current enrollments, the Extension course, "Recent and Contemporary European History" has become the most popular history course taken by extension students. Taught by correspondence, this subject begins with the Versailles treaty and closes with the fall of Poland.

Forensics as Civilian Aid

THE department of debating and public discussion, which works with high schools in the promotion of speech training, reported another successful year of inter-school competition in various branches of platform activity important for cultivating individual proficiency and leadership qualities. Dramatics, debate, and public speaking contests were supplemented by a new effort, "Victory speaking," in which forensic students in high schools furnished to community groups talks, dramatizations, musical or radio programs concerning the war effort and the citizen's part in it.

The customary state finals in public speaking were eliminated, and in their place district contests brought several hundred young people into competition in the fields of extemporaneous speaking and reading, declamation, oration. In the nine forensic districts of Wisconsin the judges awarded "A" rank to 174 young people from 98 high schools.

Miss Ernst, Teacher of German, Retires

TWENTY-NINE years of teaching in the field of German language and literature at the university ended with the retirement of Prof. Adolphine B. Ernst, '01. Earlier, for ten years, Miss Ernst taught at Milwaukee-Downer college and the University of Kansas, coming to the German department here in 1914 and serving both the Extension division and the residence department. Here she obtained the master's degree in 1905 and the doctorate in 1912. She studied in Europe under a fellowship of the AAUW. From 1923 to 1928 she was director of the German House on the campus.

Affirmed by colleagues and students alike, Miss Ernst was singularly successful in sharing with others the fruits of her rich cultural endowment. Hers was the peculiar ability to recreate something of her high scholarship and enthusiasm in the thousands among many student generations who came under her influence during four decades of academic service. She will make her home in Milwaukee, there to continue lines of research, begun on the campus, in certain phases of the early settlement of Wisconsin by Old World strains—a project of the Carl Schurz Foundation, Philadelphia.

War Accents New Voters' Duties

A CIVIC education idea first proclaimed from the University of Wisconsin, adopted throughout the state and extended on a national scale by federal action, was exemplified in May, for the fifth time, with the observance of Citizenship Day, honoring native-born 21-year-old new voters. The Extension Division, where the program originated, volunteered counsel and leadership to local bodies in planning countrywide observances. In the nation this movement, under the designation "I Am An American Day," drew a large-scale participation inspired partly by the president's proclamation setting aside May 16 as a day for nationwide recognition in order that citizens "may understand more fully the duties and opportunities of citizenship and its special responsibilities in a nation at war." In Central Park, New York City, Vice-Pres. Henry A. Wallace addressed an audience of a million people and unseen millions on airplanes throughout the world.

Home Economics by Director Frances Zuill

ON MAY 14 to 17 representatives of college home economics staffs were invited by the U. S. Office of Education to a conference held in Chicago at the La Salle Hotel to consider wartime adjustments in home economics curricula in colleges. Representatives from 12 midwestern universities and colleges that offer majors in home economics with special emphasis on the professional fields were present. Frances Zuill, Helen Dawe and Hazel Manning were in attendance from the University of Wisconsin. The Nutrition and Food Conservation Branch of the Food Distribution Administration called a meeting in Washington of all state nutrition committee chairman in the country. The meeting was held on May 27, 28 and 29 for the purpose of discussing new policies of this government agency in reference to the national nutrition and food conservation program. Miss Zuill, who is Wisconsin's state chairman, attended the meeting.

Food Conservation Institute Held

A ONE-DAY institute on food conservation and preservation was held on the campus on June 14 for the purpose of giving homemaking teachers in the vocational schools and rural vocational centers, home service directors, state home economics teachers and extension workers the latest information on methods of canning, dehydrating, freezing, and storing the various fruits and vegetables produced in Victory Gardens. Because of the limitation on the purchase of pressure cookers, it was felt that safe methods of canning must be stressed. The members of the committee in charge of the institute were Catherine Personius, Mrs. May Reynolds, and Helen Waite.

School of Journalism by Prof. Frank Thayer

ENROLLMENT in the School of Journalism is going feminine, according to Prof. Grant M. Hyde, director of the School of Journalism. While the pre-war enrollment of women majors was approximately 150, the enrollment of women majors for 1942-43 was approximately 225. In the pre-war period women constituted approximately 35 per cent of the normal enrollment of 400 major students. In 1941-42 there were approximately 50 per cent women, and this last year the percentage at the beginning of the year was 65 per cent but in May, 1943, was approximately 80 per cent women.

Misses Waite, Personius, Zuill demonstrate food conservation methods

Prof. Thayer Writes Law of the Press Book "LEGAL Control of the Press" is the title of a new book by Prof. Frank Thayer to be published in the fall by the Foundation Press, Inc., law book publishers. Professor Thayer gives the course in Law of the Press in the School of Journalism. He is a member of the Illinois Bar.

SDX Makes Awards to Weekly Papers AWARDS in the annual weekly newspaper contest sponsored by Sigma Delta Chi in conjunction with the Wisconsin Press Association were made at the 90th annual association convention in Milwaukee May 14 and 15. Certificates were presented the winning papers by George A. Hough III, president of the Wisconsin chapter of the fraternity. Newspapers throughout the state competed for awards for general excellence, best staff written column, best editorial, and the weekly paper contributing most to the war effort. Mr. Hough and Mark Kerschensteiner, both of the graduating class this year, were in charge of the contest.

Coranto Sorority Publishes Courant THE COURANT made its first appearance on the campus early in May. Published by Coranto, professional journalistic sorority, as an annual review of the senior class in the School of Journalism, the COURANT enjoyed an immediate, favorable response. Mary Lu Slack, '43, was executive editor, and Miriam Theiler, '43, was business manager. Sigma Delta Chi bought approximately fifty copies to mail to its members who have been on the campus within the last three years.

W. Steigleman Leaves for Government Service WALTER A. STEIGLEMAN, M.A. '42, who has been on the School of Journalism staff as graduate assistant, resigned in April to take a position in the feature section Press Division of the Office of the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs in Washington, D. C.

SDX Will "Carry On" PLANS to continue activity for Sigma Delta Chi, professional journalistic fraternity, for the duration have been worked out. The chapter has appointed a board of trustees to act for the active chapter when there are not enough members on the campus to function as a chapter. Prof. Frank Thayer, national vice president of SDX and faculty adviser for the chapter, is chairman. Willard Smith, associate editor of the Wisconsin State Journal and also a vice president of the national SDX organization, and Prof. Grant M. Hyde, director of the School of Journalism, are the other trustees for the fraternity.

J. Students Gather for Family Dinner THE JOURNALISM Family dinner was given in the Memorial Union May 5. Gaylord Godwin, Wisconsin manager of the United Press, was the principal speaker. Theta Sigma Phi presented the School of Journalism with a gift of $100 to be used to aid in bringing outstanding speakers to the campus. Abdul Disu, '43, won the SDX prize offered by the local chapter for the outstanding news story of the year. Coranto presented Eileen Daly with the award for the outstanding feature story of the year.

Lloyd Kronsoble, '43, was given the SDX award as the outstanding man graduate of the School of Journalism, and SDX honors for scholarship went to seven seniors: Jeanne E. Rodger, C. Joyce Ganssle, Mary Ellen Pomeroy, Margaret C. Power, and Ena M. Richards.

Reprint From The Milwaukee Journal

Comdr. Parkinson

FROM Lieutenant Commander to Commander is Dr. G. A. Parkinson's most recent promotion. His newest address is: c/o Fleet Postmaster, San Francisco, California.

Theodore W. Bauer, who has been on the history staff of the University Extension Division since he received his Ph.D. from the University in 1935, has been commissioned a lieutenant (j.g.) in the navy. His first assignment will take him to Tucson, Arizona. In addition to his position on the history staff, Lt. Bauer was coordinator of the C.A.A. War Training Service at the Center from February 1941 until May of this year.

The history department at the Center is again in the news—the Lee Lawrences are the proud parents of a daughter, Judith, born in the month of April.

Former instructor in psychology at the Center, Henry Wilkes Wright, was commissioned second lieutenant in the army at graduation exercises of the Adjutant General's School, Fort Washington, Maryland.

On May 8, Ralph W. Sapp, former Extension student and chemistry stockroom clerk was graduated from the Naval Air Training Center, Corpus Christi, Texas, and was commissioned a second lieutenant in the marine corps reserve.

Math Group Meets at Milwaukee Center THE University of Wisconsin in Milwaukee was host to the annual meeting of the Wisconsin section of the Mathematical Association of America on May 15. Officers elected for the coming year are: Dr. May Beenken, chairman; Paul Trump, secretary; Leon Battig and Louise Wolf, program committee. Next year's meeting is to be held at Milwaukee-Downer College.

Business, Engineering to Start September 8 DR. ROSS H. BARDELL, acting assistant director, has announced that the non-credit subjects in business and engineering will start on September 8 as do the courses sponsored by the ESMWT program in order to have the work completed by the Christmas vacation. Two courses in Plastics, Essentials of Home Planning, and Industrial Hygiene and Physiology are to be added to the fall term evening program. The latter course given by Dr. Simonson of Mt. Sinai Hospital will be of special interest in the attempts being made to reduce absenteeism in industry.

School of Medicine

by Exec. Sec'y. Harold M. Coon

---

COMMENCEMENT this year finds no medical students included in the list of graduates, inasmuch as graduation exercises were held in March for the School of Medicine. The next class will complete its course in November. Inasmuch as most of the March graduates are busily engaged in their intern service, it has not seemed wise to call them in for the commencement, because immediately following their intern service, they are sent on active duty in either the army or navy.

First Med Students Sworn into Navy ON MAY 14 the first group of students in the medical school were sworn in as seamen reserves by the navy. A group of officers from the recruiting service in Milwaukee came to Madison and handled details of accepting the ensign commissions of these students and of setting them up as seamen. It is expected that they will go on active duty, which means continue with their scholastic work under military regulation until July 1.

At the same time, the medical students enlisted in the Army Medical Administrative Corps were having their status arranged for and it is anticipated that they, too, will go on active duty on July 1.

Dr. Middleton Receives Promotion to Colonel SINCE March 13, it has been Colonel W. S. Middleton. The promotion from lieutenant colonel, of course, does not seem sufficient to his students, it should be at least a brigadier general. Dr. Middleton writes of his desire to participate in the European invasion when it comes.

School of Music

by George Hanson

NATIONAL MUSIC WEEK was celebrated by a series of 8 concerts at Music Hall, employing many student and faculty members, the orchestra, and the Pro Arte quartet.

Living composers were featured, among whom were four on the university campus. Highlights were the premiere of Cecil Burchleigh's Piano Quintet "Hymn to the Ancients" and an Oboe Sonata of which one movement each was written by Hilmar Luckhardt, Carl Bricken, and Gunnar Johansen. The latter was dedicated to and played by Alfred Barthel, well loved orchestra coach who is retiring at the end of this academic year.

Other modern composers were represented by their most typical works, including Ernest Bloch's Piano Quintet, quartets by Ravel and Debussy, piano works, songs, violin numbers, and pieces for chorus and orchestra.

The week opened with a Sunday evening concert by members of Sigma Alpha Iota, professional music sorority, and concluded with a program by the Pro Arte quartet a week later. The university orchestra was conducted by Carl Bricken Tuesday evening. Prof. Leland A. Coon, William Pfeiffer, George Sopkin, Prof. Bricken, and Antonio Brosa appeared during various programs, as well as Prof. Gunnar Johansen, who arranged the festival.

Prof. Cecil Burleigh, composer

had been a member of the staff of the School of Music since 1921, as professor of violin and composition. His works have been performed all over the country and his style was the subject of a study by John Tasker Howard in 1929.

The Piano Quintet "Hymn to the Ancients", which was introduced during the Music Week Festival by Gunnar Johansen and the Pro Arte quartet, is a large scale work which reflects both power and subtlety. Not until after its performance did Prof. Burleigh explain that it had its basis in a program.

"Originally," he said, "the piece was called 'Hymn to the Patriarchs' and was based on the story of Moses leading the chosen people to the Promised Land. That was almost ten years ago, when I was in an experimental period before the full development of my present style. Since then the work has undergone many changes, swinging further from literal depiction toward purely musical values. In line with the character of the music the title was then changed to the more general 'Hymn to the Ancients'."

Prof. Burleigh considered himself extremely fortunate in securing such able performers for the premiere; he said he had not realized the piece would be difficult of execution.

Music Hall Gets Spring Renovation

RETURNING grads noticed new interior beauty at Music Hall. For two months this spring a pair of painters named Elmer and Smiley mounted scaffoldings and draped canvases throughout the building at the suggestion of Tom Lyons, leaving several acres of clean walls decorated in tasteful colors. At one time Elmer was found in the library searching out lyres and noteshapes as a border pattern for the corridors. Prof. Ilitis has had to undergo some comment concerning the resemblance between the color scheme of his studio and that of the ladies' lounge!

School Of Nursing

by Miss Christina Murray, director

THE largest class ever admitted for professional instruction entered the course on June 7th. In the past students completing the required university work in June have not been admitted to the hospital for the clinical instruction until the following September. This year it has been possible to advance the admission date and accelerate the nursing course three months by taking advantage of the fifteen week summer session. No major change has been made in the academic requirement or in the content of courses.

News Comes Back of Grads in Service

THREE of this year's graduating class have been called for service in the army nurse corps. Martha Hastings, June Odbert, and Signe Skott have reported at Truax Field, Camp Custer, and Fort Belvoir respectively.

Word has been received of the safe arrival in North Africa of 2nd Lt. Katherine Baltzer, '40.

2nd Lts. Elsie Bennett, '42, Josephine Coluccy, '42, and Eunice Rechsteiner, '42, have reported for service in the army nurse corps.

Ensign Lois Allington, '42, is stationed at St. Albans, New York, and Ensign Marjorie Melberg, '39, at Great Lakes with the Navy Nurse Corps.

Miss Violet Widenmyer, instructor of medical nursing, has resigned and her work will be taken over by Marion Dunn, '40.

Radio . . . WHA

by Jean Fleming, '34

WHA KEEPS its fingers crossed and admits that with the help of its legion friends it is weathering the manpower shortage fairly well—so far. There are 21 stars representing members of the WHA staffs of the past on display at the station in Radio hall. Latest stars bear the names of Frederick Fuller, music director, who is now in the Coast Guard, and Helen Frey, script writer, in the WAAC.

Its policy is somewhat parallel to the device used in dramatic presentations. Clever juggling by script writers and producers emphasizes roles for which excellent experienced actresses are available and simplifies and shortens parts for men to suit the limited time and experience of actors on the WHA players dramatis personae.

Margot Baer, record librarian, and Aline Hazard, homemakers' program director, both are heard as announcers on other programs during the day, while efforts are being made to recruit feminine announcers.

Welcome help has come from faculty members. Prof. Walter Agard, in the past heard on forums and lecturing, promises to take part in "Following Congress", Thursdays at 7 p. m., which with the exception of rare occasions such as Clare Booth Luce's "Globaloney" speech demands a cast of men. John Dietrich of the speech department, John Leland, stage manager of the Wisconsin Union theater, and Maurice Shudofsky and Harold Weiss of the English department have agreed to assist by broadcasting.

Two high school operators, Paul Martin and Noel Thompson, have contributed greatly, with WHA's university student operators, to the high quality of WHA's broadcasts.

WHA Receives Nat'l Awards WHEN "Ranger Mac" traveled afield to Columbus, O., to receive the George Foster Peabody medal for the outstanding educational radio program in the nation, "Afield with Ranger Mac," he accepted two more national awards for the state station.

Wakelin McNeel, assistant state 4-H leader and chief of Junior Forest Rangers, which he founded, represented WHA at the 14th Institute for Education by Radio, May 1 in Columbus.

He wired back that "Let's Find Out," WHA's Wisconsin School of the Air weekly social studies broadcast, had won first place in national competition for the finest program for primary grades, and that "Civilians in Service," Sunday afternoon series, had won first place among cultural programs. James Terzian and Romance Koopman had written the sample program submitted. It was a plea for equality for the Negro in the war effort, dramatized by the WHA Players, called "The Strong Black Hand."

Program Schedule Issued in Bulletin THE ambition of many years of William G. Harley, acting director of WHA, was realized June 1 when the station published a program schedule to serve for June, July, and August. Harley hopes to issue the program bulletin regularly, listing regularly broadcast programs.

Taking advantage of the stay-at-home tendencies of pre-war motorized families, WHA wants to send a program to every listener requesting one of them.

Romance Koopman, prize winner

Listed on the new schedule is "Food for Freedom," a program written and produced by WHA in co-operation with the Wisconsin Department of Agriculture. It will dramatize the vital role of Wisconsin's food production during and after the war. Romance Koopman, WHA script writer, will write the series, beginning in June, and it will be produced by Ben Park.

A similar series portraying the role of Wisconsin industries in the war effort was broadcast by the state station last year.

Naval Training School

by Martin Gardner, Y 3/c, USNR

---

THE navy's first full dress review in Madison was held in the stadium Saturday morning, May 29, immediately following the university's annual commencement exercises.

More than 900 bluejackets, WAVES, and SPARS marched in platoon formation past the flag-draped reviewing stand. The white gloves of the women reservists, and the leggings of the sailors—in bold contrast with the navy blue uniforms—moved in brisk military precision to music by the university band.

In the reviewing stand stood one of the nation's outstanding military figures—Admiral William D. Leahy, Washington, D. C.

Other distinguished members of the reviewing party were Admiral John Downes, commandant of the Ninth Naval District; Cmdr.

Leslie K. Pollard, commanding officer of the naval training schools in Madison; Lt. Cmdr. Mildred McAfee, national director of the WAVES; Lt. Irene Williamson, officer in charge of women reservists at the naval schools; Governor Goodland; Governor Lester C. Hunt, of Wyoming; and President Dykstra representing the university.

A few drops of rain fell prior to the review, ceased falling until the review had been completed, then began again. It was as though the clouds had received orders from the Admiral himself, one sailor commented.

Women Marines Arrive on Campus

THE first contingent of marine women arrived on the campus Sunday, May 30, in time to participate in the city's Memorial Day parade. It was Madison's first glimpse of the snappy forest green uniforms with crimson cords across the forest green hats.

Numbering 35 in all, the girls came to Madison from Hunter college, where they completed their recruit training, and were enrolled in the navy's radio school as members of the ninth division. All three branches of naval women reservists—WAVES, SPARS, and marines—are now receiving training on the campus in radio communications.

In connection with the marine program at Wisconsin, Captain John W. Walters, of New York City, has been added to the administrative staff of the naval schools.

Captain Walters enlisted in the marines during the first world war, and was called back to active service last year from his duties as a broker on the New York stock exchange. Before coming to Madison he was assistant provost marshal at the U. S. Naval Training Station, Great Lakes, Ill.

Captain Charlotte Gower, former professor of anthropology at the University of Wisconsin, and one of the three highest ranking officers in the marine women's reserve, visited the naval schools early in June on an inspection tour of training schools for navy women.

The unit of non-commissioned marine officers, formerly stationed on the campus for glider training, was dissolved recently after the graduation of the last remaining class.

Navy's first full dress review!

“Woman S. P.” Goes on Duty THE naval schools’ first woman shore patrol specialist (shore patrol is the navy’s equivalent of the army’s military police) is now on duty at the schools. She is Third Class Petty Officer Evelyn A. Smylie, of Glendale, California.

Wearing the familiar S.P. arm band, she walks an indoor “beat” in Chadbourne and Barnard halls where the WAVES, SPARS, and marines are quartered. In addition to maintaining discipline and cleanliness in the barracks, she also has duties in the fields of welfare, recreation, and phys. education.

Male members of the navy’s shore patrol in Madison now include ten husky petty officers, all former policemen. They patrol the streets during liberty hours, walking beats with the army M.P.’s, and see that local “liberty hounds” keep to the straight and narrow.

The men are under the command of Lt. (jg) James O. Brooks, former Chicago lawyer, now provost marshall of the schools. Chief Christie R. Danielson, in immediate charge of the navy cops, was 18 years a member of the police force at Clinton, Ia.

Three Alumni Join Navy School Staff THREE naval officers who were former students at the university—a lieutenant and two ensigns—recently joined the staff of the naval schools.

Lt. Fred F. Klein, of Highland Park, Mich., officer in charge of the V-12 program for training engineers and doctors, attended the university in the summer of 1935. He is a graduate of Michigan State college.

Before reporting here, Lt. Klein was on duty at the naval indoctrination school at Columbia university. As a civilian, he worked for the Board of Education in Detroit.

Ensign George C. Johnson, a graduate of the university’s Law school in 1938 and former amateur golf champion of the state, entered the navy’s office of supply in May. He was Wisconsin state amateur golf champion in 1936, and Milwaukee district amateur champ in 1940. Before his commissioning he was an attorney in Oconomowoc.

Ensign George D. Matson, also on duty in the supply office, was graduated from the university in 1940. Prior to his commissioning he was a public accountant in New York City. Needless to say, the men are very happy to be back in Madison!

Badgers all—Klein, Matson, and Johnson

Navy Graduates Hear Wisconsin Speakers TWO distinguished scholars in residence at the university were recently honored as guest speakers at graduation ceremonies at the naval schools.

Count Carlo Sforza, colorful Italian anti-fascist leader, addressed the bluejackets of division eleven at their graduation exercises in May. At that time Count Sforza was a visiting lecturer at the university.

Dr. Helen C. White, professor of English, was guest speaker on June 4 at the graduation of the fifth division of WAVES and SPARS.

EIGHTY-SIX R.O.T.C. seniors stepped forward upon the commencement platform to receive their diplomas on May 29. Although garbed in the traditional cap and gown, this was probably their last public appearance in “eivies,” for within the next several weeks these men were called to active duty for a three-months’ training period after which they will be commissioned as second lieutenants in the Army of the United States.

Last year’s commencement exercises were high-lighted when the R.O.T.C. graduates received their commissions as reserve officers. Since the R.O.T.C. men of this graduating class were unable to attend an army training camp last summer, they will be sent to either an Officer’ Candidate School or a service school for a taste of army life before becoming officers in the army.

Although 109 juniors of the advanced course will be taken into the army at the same time, these men must go to a replacement center for three months' training in lieu of their senior year of R.O.T.C. Then it will be either Officer's Candidate School or the Army Specialized Training Program, whichever Uncle Sam thinks best.

Thus draws to a close the busiest, hardest working year that the Military Science department has ever scheduled. Orders barked on the armory floor will soon be heard on drill fields all over the country, and later all over the world—wherever the Yanks are coming and the Axis is running.

Awards THIS spring the Chicago Tribune Award for the individual drill competition went to John H. Thwaites, R.O.T.C. sophomore from Milwaukee, at the annual drill meet held at the armory April 28. The first squad, first platoon, Company C, R.O.T.C. Engineers, "huttet" away with the honors in squad competition. Headquarters Company, under Cadet Captain Thomas Godfrey, won first place in the company contest.

Colonel Herbert H. Lewis, ROTC commandant, honored Cadet Colonels Harold C. Needham, of the composite engineer-signal corps regiment, and Robert W. Bird, of the infantry regiment, for being the most outstanding men of this year's cadet corps. Hats off to Needham and Bird for showing that they have the kind of stuff that the army wants and needs.

Parade EVEN the Madison marines, sailors and WAVES cast approving eyes at the precision displayed at the colorful regimental retreat parade held on lower campus April 27. Five hundred and fifty cadets, commanded by Cadet Colonel Robert W. Bird, marched up Langdon street and down State street to pass in review on the lower campus. Complete with the university marching band and color guard composed of Pershing Rifles members, it was the type of ceremony that made the passerby want to jump into uniform and "fall in" immediately.

Out for Duration BOTH "Scabbard and Blade" and "Pershing Rifles", Wisconsin's two military fraternities, have disbanded for the semester. The inactive status of the fraternities was necessitated by the discontinuation of the advanced course as well as the scarcity of manpower to carry on with Pershing Rifles next year. However, annual elections were held, and it was announced that the new officers will be responsible for the reorganization of these societies on the campus at the end of the war.

Scabbard and Blade elected the following men: Capt. Robert Larson, 1st Lieut. Gusty Choles, 2nd Lieut. Bob Clark, and 1st Sgt. Phil Arnold. The new officers were installed at the Scabbard and Blade formal party May 7 at the Chi Phi house.

Elected by Pershing Rifles were Capt. Howard Weinberger and Lieut. James Hill, who were sworn into office April 3.

Exits and Debuts FIRST Lieutenants Frank Cameron and Robert Rippey of the instructional staff have bidden adieu to their local brothers-in-arms at the ROTC upon their recent transfer to points south. Lieut. Cameron is now enjoying the rough and ready life of the Armored Forces at Fort Knox, Kentucky, while Lieut. Rippey has sought the glamor of the air corps and is now receiving pilot training at the San Antonio Aviation Cadet Center, San Antonio, Texas.

Four officers and ten enlisted men have reported for duty at the armory during the past month for work with both the ROTC and the Army Specialized Training Program, Colonel Lewis has announced.

The officers include: Captain Francis M. Bailey, from the Ninth Regimental Staff at Camp Croft, S. C.; Second Lieut. Richard E. Crane, from the army administration school at Gainesville, Fla.; Second Lieutenants Lee D. Calfee and Robert C. Rice, Jr., from the army administration school at Grinnell, Ia.; and Second

ROTC in colorful regimental retreat

Lieut. Theodore W. Zillman, from the infantry school at Ft. Benning, Ga.

Reporting from the limited service school at Camp McCoy, Wis., the enlisted men are: Privates Alfred Caplan, George Yaczik, John Doherty, Raymond Hagan, Adam Kutni, Robert Smith, Charles Stauffer, Allen Tottingham, Harry Vliek, and Harold Walterbach.

IT'S 6:30 a. m. on Lower Campus, and that is a bugle you hear—reveille! If you're a civilian, roll over and go back to sleep. But if you're a soldier in the A.S.T.P., hit the floor and climb into that uniform. There'll probably be a long chow line outside the Union in just a few minutes.

"Hup, two, three, four" has become as popular on the campus as the song "Varsity" with the coming of over 500 soldiers to the university campus within the past month. The Army Specialized Training Program, the new plan whereby soldiers go to college, has opened its headquarters at 717 Langdon, directly across the street from the armory. Under the same administration as the ROTC but with a greatly expanded staff of both officers and enlisted men, the student-soldiers go to school, live, and study on the campus, but under the strictest of army regulation and supervision.

Colonel Herbert H. Lewis, commandant heading both the ROTC and the A.S.T.P., has appointed Major John O. Neighbours as commanding officer of the new program. Both the A.S.T.P. headquarters and the military headquarters located in the armory have been the scenes of long-into-the-night activity getting the entire organization running smoothly and efficiently.

Joe College bowed out to Private John Doe when nearly a dozen fraternity houses were converted into barracks for the students of the A.S.T.P. Even the famed University club now houses 200 soldiers. As for a mess hall, Tripp Commons is providing about 1500 meals a day for the men.

At present, two types of training are being given here under the A.S.T.P.; engineering, and foreign area and language study. Unlike the 16-hour per week schedule with which most college students are familiar, the soldier's week consists of 59 hours of supervised work: 24 hours of academic work, 24 hours of supervised study, six hours of physical conditioning, and five hours of military instruction.

Each term of study is of 12 weeks' duration. Should the soldier at the end of the term fail to pass certain examinations, he will be disqualified for further participation in the program. Because he is the graduate of an accredited high school with perhaps several years of college education, and because he has shown aptitude for the training which he is to take, this opportunity for a specialized schooling is designed to make him much more valuable to the army.

They're a clean-cut looking group of men, these soldiers of the A.S.T.P. Selected from voluntary applicants for such training, these men had to make a good showing on their long written examination before they were sent before a board of officers similar to the board for officer candidates where they were either accepted or rejected in their bid for specialized training.

Saddle shoes and loud sport jackets have given way to G. I. brogans and olive drab uniforms that "Hup, two, three, four" to class—past the Union and up the hill—every day here on the Wisconsin campus.

GROUP dinners, large and small, disappeared from the university campus for the duration at the end of May as the new army training contingents moved into the Memorial Union building for military mess. The 850 army trainees now converge on Tripp Commons, main dining room and banquet hall, at meal times, filing through the serving kitchen at the rate of twelve per minute for a cafeteria style meal.

One hundred and fifty marines and navy pilots are being served by the Union in the Old Madison, Round Table, and Beefeaters rooms where student and faculty groups formerly held their club dinner meetings and conferences and get-togethers.

The private dining rooms, together with Tripp Commons, have been the scene of more than a thousand university "family dinners" and celebrative occasions each year since the Union opened in 1928.

Great Hall, where the traditional alumni and parents dinners, Gridiron, Matrix, and other banquets have been held, though not used for military feeding, will also be unavailable for catering functions hereafter.

"With 1000 army and navy men to feed, plus students in the cafeteria and rathskeller, the Union kitchens are now preparing 7,000 meals a day, which is the limit of the kitchen capacity, Porter Butts, Union director, said yesterday. "Small groups, however, can still take their meals in the cafeteria and adjourn to meeting rooms afterward."

Servicemen Appreciate Hospitality of Union

"THE MEMORIAL UNION

on the university campus with all its recreational facilities, has given me more pleasure than I thought could be concentrated in one place," commented a staff sergeant at Truax Field, in Madison, recently.

His comment, along with several others, was printed in the Truax newspaper, and is apparently echoed by thousands of other servicemen and women who flock weekly to the campus recreation center. A military traffic survey, taken by a group of students, showed that nearly 4500 bluejackets, WAVES, marines, soldiers, navy pilot trainees, meteorologists, and other uniformed personnel came through the Union's doors each weekend.

Plenty of entertainment is ready for the servicemen, too, thanks to the work done by students in a new course, "Group Leadership in War Agencies," taught by Prof. Helen Clark, department of sociology, and Prof. Porter Butts, division of social education.

A proving ground for recreation ideas, the course has produced projects not only for the Union, but for the Madison USO, the YMCA, the Truax field service club, and many other service centers in the city.

A class member has been chairman of the Sunday afternoon "At Ease" program, an open house held in Great hall of the Union each week. Other students have organized social dancing classes for servicemen who would like to dance and don't know how.

Students have provided a sketch service, and made charcoal sketches of the servicemen and women, and wrapped them for mailing on the spot. They have worked up a talent file of available university and service personnel entertainers for reference by all the Madison recreation units.

A campus-wide canvas for sports equipment, chiefly tennis and golf, was made, and the donations reconditioned and made available free to the military personnel, through the Union's Hoofers quarters.

A woman student organized a "Sunday evening concert club" where classical records are played for informal groups of service people, who have been gathering around a fireplace in one of the Union's smaller meeting rooms. The atmosphere is much like a home gathering.

A daily information center, staffed by 50 volunteer student women, answers hundreds of questions daily from "What can I do tonight," to "Where can I get a marriage license?"

Hostess discussion groups, a weekly entertainment show, aid to the Truax field librarian, a play-reading program, work on the Madison recreation handbook, have all been included in the recreation course work. In addition all students have visited the local service centers, familiarizing themselves with the inside workings and problems, in order to have a fuller understanding of the war entertainment field when they leave college to possibly and probably take up work in that field.

Union feeds all soldier-students

Newly Formed MOVING Committee to provide an Directs Service over-all, Program coordinated recreation program for the numerous military units arriving on the campus, the Union directorate and the recreation officers of the military divisions have recently established a "military relations committee" for the university.

The committee will serve as a clearing house for policies and procedures involved in planning social recreation and the use of the Union by uniformed men and women. Members of the committee are James Blumenfeld, chairman, Art Vidich, Carolyn Hall, and Mary Boyle of the Union directorate, Porter Butts, Union director, Lt. John H. Collins and Ensign Katherine Sullivan of the navy, Lt. Linton W. Tucker of the army meteorologists, and Prof. Chester Allen in charge of the marine and navy pilot trainees.

Harry will coach college all-stars bids to play with the All-Stars. Schreiner, Thornally and Baumann have several weeks of boot training left at Parris Island and whether or not they will be able to accept is unknown.

Wisconsin's tentative football schedule for next fall has been revealed, although in times like these, it may be subject to change like everything else. At this writing, Wisconsin and Illinois have the longest schedules in the Big Ten for 1943, each playing 10 games. Wisconsin's schedule follows:

- Sept. 18—Marquette at Madison
- 25—Camp Grant at Camp Grant
- Oct. 2—Iowa at Iowa City
- 9—Illinois at Madison
- 16—Notre Dame at Madison
- 23—Indiana at Bloomington

THE late spring-early summer sports doldrums at Wisconsin have been highlighted by several important announcements which are of interest to all Wisconsin alumni.

First of all, the Badgers' outstanding athletic director and football coach, Harry Stuhlreher, one of the immortal Four Horsemen, has been chosen as head coach of the College All-Stars for the annual charity game with the champs of the professional grid leagues, the Washington Redskins. The game is scheduled for Aug. 25 in Northwestern University's Dyche stadium at Evanston.

All-American Dave Schreiner, end, and full-back Marlin (Pat) Harder have received invitations to play in the game. "Pat", who has just completed his boot training in the marine corps, has accepted the invitation, having received permission from his commanding officer to participate.

In addition to Schreiner and Harder, Dick Thornally and Bob Baumann have received

Spring Sports . . . So-So! BAD weather and the inevitable call to the armed services contrived to decrease the Badgers' effectiveness on spring sports fields, at least as far as the win-and-loss column is concerned. Veteran Coach Tom Jones' track team closed their indoor season very successfully, winning second in the conference meet and first in the "Little Big Ten" meet against four other conference teams. The Badger thinclads also started their outdoor season very auspiciously, beating Marquette 82-49—and then the roof fell in! Calls to the services practically wiped out the squad—Result: Wisconsin third in the Little Big Ten and fifth in the conference meet. . . . The Badger golf team won and lost one in an abbreviated schedule; the tennis team won three and lost five and came out third in the conference; and the baseball team, battered more by inclement weather than anything else, won seven of 15 games played, with five wins against three losses in the conference for a tie with Illinois for third place. Rained out of a doubleheader with the weak Chicago team, the Badger batsmen could have ended on top the conference heap. Too bad it rained!

Season's Scores Compiled Here

WITH its football team enjoying its most successful season in a generation, and its boxing team again going through an undefeated season against some of the nation's toughest competition, and setting a new national record by winning five NCAA individual championships, University of Wisconsin sports squad during the 1942-43 athletic year compiled a record of 52 victories in 92 dual meet appearances, a survey of the sports year reveals.

The Badger football squad of 1942, playing the toughest schedule in Wisconsin gridiron history, won eight of 10 games, tied one, and lost only one to gain a leading position among the nation's football teams. The Badger boxing team won all five of its dual meets this year, for its second consecutive undefeated season, and then went on to win five of the eight individual titles in the NCAA meet.

Dean Christensen Resigns!

CHRIS L. CHRISTENSEN, nationally known agricultural authority, late in June submitted to President Dykstra his resignation as dean of the College of Agriculture. Dean Christensen is leaving his university position to become vice-president in charge of post war development of the Celotex Corp., Chicago.

In addition to his duties as dean, Dean Christensen has directed the university's agricultural experiment station and the agricultural and home economics extension service since he came here in 1931.

In 1920 Dean Christensen received his bachelor of science degree in agriculture from the University of Nebraska. He studied at the University of Copenhagen in 1921-22, and took graduate work in economics and business administration at Harvard university in 1923-24.

He was special investigator for the U. S. Department of Agriculture on co-operative agriculture in Europe in 1922-23; director of the division of co-operative marketing, U. S. Dept. of Agriculture, 1924-29, and was executive secretary of the Federal Farm board from 1929-31 when he came to Madison and assumed deanship of the College of Agriculture of the university.

With expressions of deep regret the university regents accepted the dean's resignation. Walter Hodgkins, president of the board, presented Dean Christensen with a traveling bag in the hopes that the dean "would come back and see us once in awhile."

Dean Christensen said that his decision to leave the university had been most difficult to make. "My associations with the state, university, and its faculty have been pleasant, rich in experience and gratifying. No one could have asked for a more generous and stimulating support than I received from my staff. The people of the state, especially in the rural areas, have been wonderful in their support."

In his new work the dean plans to remain close to the farmers, and although the firm he will be working for is geared almost completely to war work now, Dean Christensen believes that after the war he will again have the opportunity to serve the farmers, this time through private business.

The dean's resignation from the university staff brings a keen sense of regret to thousands of farmers in Wisconsin and friends of the university to whom the towering dean of "the ag. school" has been an outstanding figure in the field of agriculture and education.

Miss Abby Marlatt

MISS ABBY L. MARLATT, first director of the department of home economics at the university, died June 23 after a long illness which began shortly after her retirement as professor emeritus of home economics in July, 1939.

For 30 years, from 1909 to 1939, Miss Marlatt directed the department of home economics at the University of Wisconsin. A pioneer in a field in which few women were then enrolled and about which little was known at that time, Abby Marlatt received her early introduction to the field of "domestic science" at Kansas State College where she was taught by Nellie Kedzie Jones, Madison, one of the earliest workers in the field and later director of home economics research at the university.

When Miss Marlatt took over her duties the home economics department was in Lathrop Hall, and in Miss Marlatt's first year one student was graduated from the course.

When she retired in 1939 the department had become one of the strongest in the country with its hundreds of graduates in demand for positions throughout the United States.

Memorial services for Miss Marlatt were held the Saturday following her passing, in recognition of her many years of service as director of the home economics department and the devotion of her life's work to improve conditions in the American home. Speakers at the service were Dr. Harry R. Russell, dean emeritus of the College of Agriculture; Miss Gladys A. Branegan, dean of The Montana State Agricultural College home economics department; Dr. Dorothy R. Mendenhall, lecturer in the university home economics department, and President Dykstra.

Miss Marlatt will ever be recalled by all those who knew her as an inspiring teacher, enthusiastic organizer, a helpful friend and counselor, and a good neighbor.

Aides-De-Camp For Fighting Badgers

Maybe flunkey would be a better word than aide-de-camp, but what we would like to suggest is this: Is there any way in which the Wisconsin Alumni Association can be of special service to you while you are in the armed forces doing your best for your country?

This question is prompted by occasional requests that come in from Fighting Badgers. From time to time we are asked to relay messages to faculty members and fraternities. Occasionally, Badgers ask us to send addresses of fellow classmates; information about the university's extension courses, etc. We have even been asked to supply facts about football scores to settle bets and determine pool winners.

Very humbly, we admit that there are a lot of questions we can't answer. However, there may be some little service we can do for you while you are "out there" doing such a swell job in socking the Axis gangsters. Maybe, for example, you'd like to drop a note to Bill Smith, '41, and don't know where to reach him. Just send the letter to us at the Memorial Union and we'll relay it for you. Perhaps you need some university information, but don't know whom to contact. Send us your problem and we'll see that it gets to the proper department for immediate action.

In short, please make the Wisconsin Alumni Association your clearing-house for university and alumni services. Our staff will gladly do what it can to be helpful to you. If we don't have the information you want, we'll get it for you — and welcome the opportunity to serve you.

This issue of the WISCONSIN ALUMNUS is the last one to be published this summer. Next fall we'll send you a brand new WISCONSIN ALUMNUS — with a new dress, more news, more photographs and more issues. Instead of four issues a year, as at present, we are going to publish nine or ten issues. This will give you more news and fresher news. During the summer months the editorial staff is going to cook up some new ideas to make this the best magazine ever published at Wisconsin. This may sound like a big order, but Editor Lamoreaux has some real plans up her sleeve that look mighty good. If you have any suggestions for making this publication more valuable to you, please send them along.

And thanks once more for your fine cooperation in telling us when you change addresses. This helps us to get our publications to you more quickly. Thanks, too, for the great letters that come with your address changes. There are no more "blue Mondays" around this office because there is such a lift in every letter that you have written to Association headquarters. Best of luck, gang — and keep on socking 'em.

Yours for Victory,

Executive Secretary.

... IS IT A BARGAIN ?

Dear Wisconsin Alumni :

I am not haphazardly waving the flag of patriotism; I have not been snowed under by a blanket of propaganda; nor has army intelligence stood over my shoulder as I write to you. I am just the ordinary type of American. Fighting is not my business. I am only an amateur soldier in the army through selective service. I regard the present situation as a dirty mess in whose mopping up I must take a part; but I must because I, like every other citizen, owe America far more than I can ever repay.

We soldiers gave up a great deal when we donned the khaki. We know that conditions will be vastly different when we come back. Most of us have some knowledge of the great problems of re-adjustment which followed World War I and we wonder if the same problems are not going to rear their ugly heads ten fold when we have bankrupted Hitler, Hirohito, Inc.

What is going to happen to the world when fighting has abated? What is to be written into the peace treaty? We soldiers cannot forget that the lives of many of our fathers were sacrificed to the same cause twenty odd years ago. We are willing to go through the hell of war; but as long as this sojourn in Hades has been forced upon us, why can't we make it the last time for mankind? A victorious army of the United Nations will set the world on the table of peace. How the men sitting around that table carve the globe will be determined by far more complex forces than we have been dealing with in the waging of war. Upon them will rest the decision as to whether our sons are also going to have to go through the hell of battle.

What can you Wisconsin alumni do about it? You can go about the job of acquainting yourself with as many of the minutiae of the problem as possible. As university men and women you already know many of them. However, you must know more so that you can exercise your privileges of being a citizen of a democracy in an intelligent manner and help to decide where the United States fits in an intelligent peace.

Through the radio and press we know that you at home are already giving much consideration to the solution of these problems which are bothering us. It is going to take a long hard pull before we win this war, but are we going to give vent to the mob hysteria of relief when the fighting is over and ignore the peace as we did in 1918? Let's hope not. We believe that NOW is the time to give sound, comprehensive consideration to the potential solution so that it will be at hand for our American representatives at the table of peace.

Willingly we make the sacrifices needed for victory and consider our army life FINE. In return we ask that you prepare yourselves to produce a sound intelligent answer to the question -- whither America at the table of peace?

Is it a bargain agreed upon?

Sincerely yours,

CPL. FREDERICK BAXTER, '40

Welcome

Class of 1943 . . .

Welcome to one of the finest families in the world—that splendid group of 55,000 men and women who have been graduated from the University of Wisconsin. In this same family you will find another 58,000 who have attended our university but did not graduate.

Like you, all these alumni are proud of the University of Wisconsin. They know that Wisconsin spirit is a very real thing to all loyal Badgers.

Membership in this vast alumni family is one of your greatest assets. No matter where you go you will find Wisconsin men and women eager to meet you and ready to share your campus memories with you. Their fellowship will be yours long after you have forgotten the highlights of Bill Kiekhofer's famous lectures or the thrill of watching Pat Harder spilling Gophers in every direction at Camp Randall last fall.

This issue of the WISCONSIN ALUMNUS is your first publication as a member of the Wisconsin Alumni Association. We hope you like it. We hope it brings back happy memories of those wonderful days on the campus.

As usual, the WISCONSIN ALUMNUS will not be published during the summer months. Your next issue, therefore, will reach you soon after classes are resumed in the fall. At that time you'll get a brand new magazine with a new dress—published monthly instead of quarterly as is now the case. You'll also get Stuhldreher's FOOTBALL LETTERS and the BADGER QUARTERLY. Make sure that you get your copies promptly by letting us know when you change your address. Second class mail is not forwarded.

And don't forget to send us news about yourself. Your classmates like to read about you, just as you like to know what's happening to them.

Good luck, fellow Badger. The Wisconsin Alumni Association extends you a cordial welcome and hopes you'll get back to Madison soon and often. When you do come back, drop in at the Wisconsin Alumni Association headquarters in the Union and make yourself at home. It's your headquarters, too, now that you are a full-time Badger.

WISCONSIN ALUMNI ASSOCIATION

THE GROWTH OF AMERICAN NATIONALITY, 1492-1865 by Fred W. Wellborn, Ph. D., '26, Associate Professor of History, Iowa State Teachers College. Reviewed by William B. Hesseltine, Professor of History, U. W.

The task of a textbook writer is no easy one. Out of the infinite multitude of facts and theories which pervade any academic subject, he must select those which are significant and he must present them in a synthesis which is meaningful to the student. Unlike the writer of monographs, who can write for the specialists in his field, the author of a textbook must write for amateurs, for immature students whose knowledge is limited and whose interest in the subject is highly problematical. Only an experienced teacher, whose long experience had made him familiar with the processes and the limitations of the undergraduate mind, should attempt to write a textbook.

Dr. Wellborn's book gives ample evidence that he has studied the needs and interests of students for a long time. The volume presents a conventional treatment of American history from the discovery of America to the close of the Civil War. The author has not been interested in any new treatment of the fact, nor in presenting any special point of view. He has presented "straight" history—but he has attempted to present his history in such a manner as freshmen and sophomores might become interested in it.

Dr. Wellborn comes out of a great tradition of history teachers. He took his doctor of philosophy degree at the University of Wisconsin in a department which had long prided itself on its great teachers—Carl Russell Fish, a teacher whose ability to enliven the record of the past was a national legend, and Frederick Jackson Turner, famed as a scholar, but famed as well for the devotion of his students. Dr. Wellborn dedicates his book to these two great Wisconsin teachers, and to the late Frank Hodder, an equally inspiring teacher at the University of Kansas.

Coming from such a tradition of great teaching, having sat at the feet of such men, Dr. Wellborn might well believe, as he says in his preface, that "history, therefore, is not dead—a mere catalog of dry facts which, like bones, may be named and tabulated, memorized and forgotten . . . Actually, history is a living thing: it is the factual bones clothed with flesh and blood, housing the spirit of man . . ."

So saying and believing, Dr. Wellborn tells the straight story, but he adds those human touches and those vital details that add flesh and blood and spirit and drama to the dry bones.

The first sentence is a fair sample: "On October 12, 1492, the red-headed Christopher Columbus, clad in armor draped with a crimson robe, landed upon an island in the Bahamas which he christened San Salvador." Here are the conventional facts, but here as well are the details which give interest and color to the drama. In these pages is the information that Pocahontas meant "playful one" and that the Indian princess excelled at handsprings. Here is a facility of expression, unencumbered with the polysyllabic abracadabra of the professoriat. "For a real fling," says he of early California, "Frisco offered a variety of raw opportunities." Here is a mild humor, a sense of drama, and a real effort to catch the spirit of America's past. The book should be valuable for teachers, and the student will be dull indeed who does not prefer this text to the usual catalog of dry bones.

ROUND TRIP TO RUSSIA, by Walter Graebner, x'32. Reviewed by Edward N. Doan, Lecturer, School of Journalism, U. W.

To those Americans who have been fearful all these years that the bearded Bolshevik surrounded by infernal machines and with a sly, cruel look in his eye has been plotting dreadful things against western civilization, Walter Graebner, x'32, in his book ROUND TRIP TO RUSSIA provides a surprise.

In the last paragraph of his accounting to the American reading public about what he saw, Graebner writes that "In Russia I learned, above all, that the people of the Soviet Union are good people — brave and strong, and willing to make any sacrifice, not out of fear, but out of love for their country and out of hatred for Fascism."

The author, assigned to report the Russian situation for the TIME-LIFE-FORTUNE publications at the time when the Nazi military machine was hammering across the Don river and threatening Stalingrad, devotes the entire 216 pages of his book to a presentation of supporting evidence of the thesis he states at the end and quoted above.

Subtitled "Spot News from Behind the Russian Front," Graebner's book might at first look be placed in the "so-what" category of some of the nearly 200 "I Seen It's" written by returning correspondents about various phases and fronts of the current global war. Graebner went to Russia as Mr. Willkie did later—without prejudice and with a real desire and hope of being able to find out something about the so-called Russian "enigma."

Following are some of the conclusions and observations he notes down: As to religious freedom, the writer seems inclined to be somewhat skeptical about the claims of non-interference of the Soviet government. There is no government-inspired program either for or against the church at the moment but there is a question as to whether or not this state of affairs is merely expedient.

The Red Army, Graebner reports, is the best clothed and equipped army in the world today and the whole economy of the nation is geared to keeping it that way despite the mounting sacrifices demanded of the civilian population. The army as a whole is well trained and has developed, among the soldiers themselves, a sense of individual responsibility that was an important factor in the defense of Stalingrad.

Politically, the Russians do not, according to Graebner's report, seem at all anxious to spread their particular brand of state socialism to other peoples. They are agreed that for them it works well and probably would be flattered to have other nations adopt their program but the Russians are aware of the fact that their job is to rehabilitate Russia and develop the tremendous natural and human resources of that country. In short, they feel they have no time to worry about the condition of other peoples.

Civilian morale is at top form and in no danger of collapsing. Russians are well aware that they are waging a war of survival and count no cost to personal comfort as too heavy a price for victory against the Fascist nations. Food is scarce and for some groups of the population rationing has reached the point where it is insufficient to maintain life. But the Russian does the best he can and works for victory.

On the whole, Mr. Graebner pays glowing yet restrained tribute to the Russian people and the Soviet government for their ability to stand against the onslaught of the Nazi panzer divisions. ROUND TRIP TO RUSSIA is well worth reading.

BEHIND THE URALS, by John Scott, '31. Reviewed by H. Gordon Skilling, Assistant Professor of Political Science, U. W.

John Scott was a most unusual university alumnus, for he left the University of Wisconsin in 1931 and at once proceeded to Soviet Russia and worked for five years in Magnitogorsk as a skilled worker. BEHIND THE URALS is the story of his five years there and the story of the creation of a giant industrial city where a village had existed.

By 1938 this city boasted "fifty schools, three colleges, two large theatres, half a dozen small ones, seventeen libraries, twenty-two clubs, eighteen clinics, and many other communal and cultural institutions." Moreover it was built in unusual fashion, "Even the least important of the builders, even those who worked under sentence in expiation of alleged crimes, felt that in a very real sense the city was theirs because they had helped to build it."

In this local triumph was mirrored the whole great achievement of Soviet Russia—the industrialization of a very great country in two decades almost without the aid of foreign capital. In this great effort John Scott participated as "a very minor actor in a world premier." "I had participated in the collective efforts of one hundred and seventy-odd million people building a society along collective lines, coordinated and synchronized by a general plan."

Every obstacle hindered the advance: shortage of food and supplies, shortage of labor, ignorance and technical inexperience, inefficiency of management, old class frictions, the purge, even sabotage. The result was great suffering, hard sacrifices, loss of life, leisure and happiness, especially in the early years.

Yet the results are now apparent: a great industrial base behind the Urals for the war, a complete system of social insurance, ever-increasing production and productivity, expanding opportunities for social advance for all, an efflorescence of education and the arts, a better life on the farm and in the city.

By 1938 the workers of Magnitogorsk, and of the whole of Russia, were "cheerful and optimistic," and, says John Scott, with good reason. "They were working and were sure of jobs and advancement as far ahead as they cared to see. They enjoyed vacations and maternity vacations (Continued on page 361)

Harry Stuhldreher Talks to GREATER CINCINNATI ALUMNI

ABOUT a dozen members of the Greater Cincinnati Wisconsin Alumni club met for luncheon on April 15 and heard Harry Stuhldreher, athletic director at the university, give a general word picture of the Wisconsin campus and outline how the athletic program at the university is being adapted to present conditions.

George Sippel, chairman of the club's scholarship committee, told what the club has done to date about founding a scholarship similar to the Rhodes scholarship, and plans were discussed for a permanent post-war scholarship to be founded by the club, according to Norman C. Lucas, president.

ST. PAUL ALUMNI Club Celebrates Founders' Day

THE St. Paul chapter of the Alumni Association held its Founders' Day meeting the night of Feb. 12 in the studio of Mrs. Eleanor Graff Adams, '12. Despite the glacier which covered the streets of the city and the extreme cold, a good number of Badgers came out for it.

The program was in the hands of Alfred Buser, '12, while Robert DeHaven, '29, added to the entertainment by presenting radio transcriptions of the Founders' Day broadcast. Pictures of football games were shown for those interested, and a U.W. birthday cake decorated in red and white crowned a bounteous repast.

At the business meeting, the following officers were elected:

Irving Rice, '23, president

Mrs. Dean H. Field, '17, (Blanche Fox), vice-president

Rudolph E. Low, '28, secretary

Arthur L. Luedke, '10, treasurer

Something new this year was the presentation of Life Memberships in the St. Paul chapter to Mrs. Eleanor Graff Adams, '12, and Mrs. Nellie L. Dugas, '89.

DETROIT ALUMNAE Meet, Elect New Officers

MRS. DONALD F. SCHRAM, corresponding secretary, sends word that the University of Wisconsin Women's Club completed a successful year's program with a dinner meeting at the home of Mrs. J. G. Schram May 29. Twenty-two were present.

New officers elected for next year are: Mrs. Allen Wright, re-elected president; Miss Lucile Born, vice-president; Miss Mary Henry, corresponding secretary; Miss Mae Devine, recording secretary; and Mrs. A. J. Olshefsky, treasurer.

MILWAUKEE ALUMNI CLUB Holds Annual Meeting

THE annual meeting of the Wisconsin Alumni Club of Milwaukee was held May 25, at which time board members whose terms are expiring in 1943 were re-elected for another three years. Re-elected are George Grabin, '28; Hiram E. Grant, '32; Clarence Gruetzmacher, '14; Harry V. Meissner, '12; and Ernest F. Rice, '08.

Mr. Lloyd Peters left for service the middle of the year and Miss Eunice N. Biggar, '39, was elected to fill his unexpired term. This is the first time in the history of the club that a woman has been elected to the board of directors, but Secretary R. H. Myers feels that it's a move in the right direction.

New officers for the coming year are:

Herbert J. Schwahn, '29, president

John E. Joys, '23, first vice-president

H. E. Grant, '32, second vice-president

Eugene C. Meng, '24, treasurer

R. H. Myers, '35, secretary.

SCHENECTADY Club Hears Dr. Baldwin

AT A DINNER held in the Mohawk Golf Club early in May, the Wisconsin Alumni Club of Schenectady, New York, had next to the best turn-out in the history of the club. Dr. Ira Baldwin, of the College of Agriculture, spoke on the comprehensive changes that have come over the campus in the past two years and answered questions as to the whereabouts of faculty and staff members.

Secretary Laura Blood added that Professor Baldwin was somewhat handicapped by a blackout that, of all nights, had to be staged while Prof. Baldwin was speaking. However, everything turned out very well, thanks to Dr. Baldwin and the club officers.

DUEL FOR EUROPE, by John Scott, '31. Reviewed by H. Gordon Skilling, Assistant Professor of Political Science, U. W.

After 1938, Scott ceased to be an American worker among Soviet workers in Magnitogorsk and became an American newspaper correspondent among other foreign correspondents in Moscow. DUEL FOR EUROPE is a product of this period of his life in Russia. It contains a survey of the major events in Soviet foreign policy from 1938 to 1942, supplemented by many already published diplomatic documents of importance, and embellished from the diary and newspaper clipping file of our correspondent. One of the best sections, "Mobilized Preparedness," contains an analysis of the mobilization of Russia's oil resources for war.

The title of the book is thoroughly misleading. Note also the sub-title, STALIN VERSUS HITLER, and the cover, with its chessboard design, the people being the pawns. It is bad enough for Scott thus to personalize European politics, making it a mere matter of two great personalities, and to put Hitler and Stalin on the same level, without distinction as to purpose or method. But, worse still, the title reveals a basic misunderstanding of the present conflict in Europe.

The struggle for Europe was, and is, not between Hitler and Stalin. The alternative to Hitler's defeat is not a Stalin-dominated Europe. This is what Goebbels and his mimics in this country are seeking to prove. The struggle in Europe is between whole peoples, and includes not merely the Russian and German peoples, but the French, the small nations, not to speak of the British and the Americans whose forces are now poised for the invasion of the continent. Europe's alternatives are, NOT Hitler or Stalin, but the Axis or the United Nations.

Lack of logic can be irritating, and the general conclusion concerning Russian foreign policy drawn by Scott exhibits that quality. "It is an ugly story, one unworthy of the Russian people. Yet it is the true story of a logical policy conceived in the interests of the Russian nation, and carried through to its logical conclusion with relatively few mistakes." Perhaps the Russian people appreciated that logic better than John Scott.

A Flag with 46,200 Stars

THE service flag of the Bell System had 46,200 stars on May 1. It has a lot more now. Telephone men and women are serving with the armed forces everywhere.

Those who are right in the middle of the fighting realize especially the importance of the telephone job back home.

"Tell the gang," their letters say, "to keep on plugging."

"We wouldn't have the stuff for fighting if the rest of the Bell System wasn't sticking to the job and pushing through the calls that get things done.

"Takes team-work to win a war — especially a big one like this."

Ferdinand J. COLIGNON is now living in Montevideo, Uruguay, and writes to a friend of life on the South American continent. "The population of the country (2,500,000) is largely Latin in ancestry and thought and an influential majority would prefer a dictatorial to a parliamentary form of government. In 1933 President Terra suspended the Uruguayan congress and for the remainder of his term ruled dictatorially. He was succeeded by his brother-in-law, Alfredo Baldomir, who was a good deal of a democrat, but even he, in February, 1942, suspended congress and ruled for the balance of the term dictatorially, assisted by a "junta" of 40 appointed by himself. But he was always a good friend of the United States. President Terra was distinctly pro-Mussolini. The present president, inaugurated the first of the month (March), is Juan J. Amezaga, and the vice-president is Alberto Guani. The latter is strongly Pan American and recently paid a visit to the United States and Canada. The new congress has been organized and it looks like a parliamentary government has been reestablished."

At that time we were duly initiated into the Half Century Club and were presented our Golden Jubilee certificates. In spite of busy days, restrictions on travel and shortage of accommodations, the U. W. alumni gathering of 1943 was very successful. Those of our class who were able to attend our 45th reunion included:

Miss Catherine Corscot, Madison; R. G. Harvey, Racine; Mr. and Mrs. W. Hodgkins (Grace Merrill), Ashland; L. J. Klug, Milwaukee; Miss Frances G. Perkins, Madison; Edmund Suhr, Madison; H. J. Thorkelson, Kohler; Roy E. Fowler, Niagara Falls, N. Y.; J. G. Hirschberg, Madison; Mrs. George Lines (Edessa L. Kunz), Milwaukee; Stuart Markham, Milwaukee; Dr. A. Sauthoff, Mendota; Harry Spence, La Crosse; and W. A. Zinn, Milwaukee.

The hospitality of Miss Perkins again made the Vilas home at 12 East Gilman available for an informal gathering in the afternoon, and as might be expected we had a very pleasant time with little interruption for identifications or announcements, and no financial matters other than a report on the Class of 1898 Loan Fund.

In spite of conscientious objection to a third term and obvious handicaps, your class president was reelected with the understanding that if he is not active Mr. Walter Zinn will carry on. We are looking forward to our 50th reunion, and our admission to the Half Century Club in 1948 under happier skies than now prevail. We sincerely hope you will all plan to be with us in Madison at that time.

Yes, '03 reunited, in spite of war, transportation, and grandchildren. Forty of us ate luncheon together Saturday noon and until Sunday noon we visited hard. If you could see the candid camera pictures our president took of us at our Sunday morning breakfast, you would promise yourself to get to the next reunion. We are not a noisy bunch, but we do have good times together and feel ten years younger all of a sudden.

Your fine letters and telegrams made us feel you were indeed with us in spirit, if not in person. Those who came the farthest were Power Conway, Phoenix, Arizona, whose hobby is fruit ranching, and Lewis Brown, Pittsfield, Mass., who has traveled very extensively as an official for the Transformer Division of General Electric. Our loyal Minnesotans were May Humphrey Le Clair and George Perham.

Those who brought their wives were Bill Haight, John Cadby, Rowland Morrison, commonly known as Morry, Frederic Weber, Ben Lyons, Billy Huels, Henry Geerlings, Dr. Frost, and Louis Rahr, the youngest looking of all, while Julia Anderson Schnetz enticed her husband away from his practice. Unattached were Constance Legreid, Jo Wells Moseley, Dot Shaw Newton, Jessie Pelton Smith, Beulah Post, Adrian Wedemeyer, Voyta Wrabetz, Gustave Husting, Harry Adams, Gus Smythe, and George Keachie.

Andrew Hopkins was ill at home and Mrs. Hopkins came to the luncheon and afterwards was a gracious hostess to those who went out to call on Andy. It was his first miss and he will be with us next time. Anna McDonald Grinde, Persis Bennett Thomas, and Frederic Weber brought their daughters.

After the luncheon the reunion picture was taken, and the class meeting was held on the nice cool porch of the College Club overlooking Lake Mendota. Each one present told of his family, particularly mentioning the grandchildren. Ethel Van Hagan led with seven; Gus Blatz was runner up with six. President Ernest Rice and Secretary Fay Elwell were reelected for another five-year term. Two very pleasant hours were spent in reading the replies of those who sent in their questionnaires and of reminiscing about university days.

Messages were read from Miriam Eastman Arnold, Frank Auer, Helen Flint Ingersoll, Frank Fawcett, Gordon Fox, E. P. Gorman, L. P. Jerrard, Adeline Messerschmidt, Caroline Retelstorf and George Sheets. Our 30th reunion was not as large as the 25th. That was only natural and—it is WAR!

We enjoyed, however, a lovely meeting. We cried over our past and smiled at the future.

Judge Alvin C. Reis, the class president, felt that he had been accorded this honor long enough. He voluntarily abdicated and recommended that Dr. Erwin Schmidt of the Wisconsin General Hospital be class president. The members present agreed heartily and unanimously. Erwin is one of the finest men in the world.

Through the efforts of Art Steen, we were able to secure a private dining room for luncheon, which is something in these days when an estimated 40,000 soldiers and sailors are swamping Madison's normal 60,000 population and demanding a place to eat.

Those attending the luncheon were: Carl Dietze, Milwaukee (the faithful one—who never misses); Dr. and Mrs. Erwin Schmidt, Madison; Emil Cady, Madison; Art Steen, Madison; Mary Farley, Madison; Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Barth, Madison; Clifford A. and Edna C. Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Schneider, Chicago, were in Madison but could not make the luncheon. Carl Gesell sent his regrets from Tomahawk.

Things went off in great shape—plenty of beer and plenty of yarns to swap. You bet, the class of '38 had a swell time at their reunion. I will admit we were hard hit by travel restrictions and the call to the services made great inroads on our number, but those present had a great time. As our headquarters we had the Union Conference room well stocked with that cool, foamy amber stuff, and really enjoyed the aforementioned cooler while recollecting past college experiences. The turnout consisted of Capt. Angus J. Johnson, Art Pelz, Fannie Turnbull Taylor, Marvel Ings, Catherine Clark, Alice H. Brykczynski, Helen Schultz, Lorraine Doyle Keucken, Nancy Adam, Ferd Hintz, Bill Oberly, and Dave Kranbeuhl. This was a group representing about every school in the class.

One of the major topics of discussion was the tentative planning of our 10-year reunion which we hope will be a whoop-de-doo. We should really have plenty to celebrate—post war and a flock of potential Wisconsin legacies!

so that seniors will get first-hand information about the work and activities of the association. These new members will make our association just so much stronger and more efficient in serving our university.

Last fall the board of regents asked the association to appoint a special committee to meet with the regents to discuss alumni and university problems. So far five of these conferences have been held and real progress has been made. Practical methods of developing closer teamwork between the university and the association have been discussed at these conferences. Out of these conferences will come, I am sure, helpful ideas in making the Wisconsin Alumni Association increasingly effective as the strong right arm of the university.

(Editor's Note: Be sure to read the regent report on page 295 which provides a plan for an assistant to the president. This 8-point program has great possibilities for promoting the best interests of the University of Wisconsin.)
