The libraries provide public access to a wide range of material, including online exhibits, digitized collections, archival finding aids, our catalog, online articles, and a growing range of materials in many media.

When possible, we provide rights information in catalog records, finding aids, and other metadata that accompanies collections or items. However, it is always the user's obligation to evaluate copyright and rights issues in light of their own use.

Singers

One time some singers, women and men, were going to go practice somewhere at their houses and it was in the winter at the time. They rode a cutter to their house in the direction of the Methodists where they were going to practice. There were snow drifts at various places along the road. Then they all set out and filled the vehicle to go practice. They were singing along just all sorts of songs. Finally toward midnight they ran out so they got back in and filled it up again to go home.

Somewhere along the ridge road they were coming back and someone started to sing this song "Joyful" and it frightened the horses so they took off running as fast as they could. Then the vehicle overturned. One of the horses piled on her and sprained her ankle. There was quite a commotion all over when they got up from under the snow. A man called Takwatekha owned the horses and it was his girlfriend that hurt her ankle. He got up quickly and yelled. He said, "Hurry, soebody go borrow the pain killer for me to run on her leg."
