A LETTER FROM THE EDITOR...

First of all, thank you. Thanks for opening this book, for reminiscing about our little school of Badgers, for finding the yearbook irreplaceable in your heart. You know, Wisconsin and Madison have quite eclectic landscapes... Back in 2009 I simply walked through the doors of the Kohl Center at the Student Org Fair, found that the UW had a college yearbook – and signed up. Little did I know, four years down the road, I would be the head honcho of a campus publication, let alone graduating from the best university on Earth! Here in Madison, Wisconsin... this city truly had a way with showing us students how tremendous, inspirational and life-changing a city can be. Several thousands of undergraduates, graduates and doctorates sat down and eagerly anticipated receiving their hard-earned diplomas. Years after this moment has passed, I could only imagine how much happier and luckier those who were able to get this yearbook would be upon first receiving it in the mail. It's the best gift a Wisconsin Badger could receive!

This book was titled "One Place, One Time" for a simple reason — there really only was one place and one time that the series of events in our lives, on this campus, in this city, in this state, in the world and beyond — took place. We created a unique landscape of our own in Madison, and as we lived in it over the past year, we forever changed the landscapes of Madison's future years. It is only with this yearbook that this unique place - this one and only time - could ever be captured...

The 2012-13 staff worked furiously to create this historic publication. That, in itself, was an overwhelming goal to try and reach. In the process of a full academic year of making the Badger, there were times that definitely had their shortcomings. But Hurrah! Hurrah! The book is done, and some of us were finally able to get a good night of sleep again!

So many changes happened in higher management, clientele, staff members and technology that it made all our heads spin — I'm so glad that we screwed them back on and cranked this book out to the printer! Therefore it would be improper if I didn't thank some very special individuals who were graduating with me this year and who showed me that the Badger was still something special in the hearts of many — Brianne Gohlke, Cassandra Caswell, Michael Gan, Maddie Wegmiller, Alex Rogers — my main man, Derek Shimeck! We lasted four years of athletic-editing furiousness! The two Emily's — you rock my world! And to Aaron and Jess, you've helped put together some amazing photos. You both are incredible photographers and I wish you the best in your final year.

Dear Katie, thank you so much for the work you have done with righting the boat from its near-sinking state early in the year. You have made wonderful changes and have showed me that it is possible to be brave and strong - even through all the hard times you went through this past year. I see nothing but success in your future.

But now, as a graduating senior, I must relinquish my "throne" this year, and nobody I know will do a better job than my dear friend Eliana Berkoff. Ellie, you are truly an amazing individual inside and out, and I know you will lead a beautiful 2014 Badger! There may be times when you want to rip your hair out... your huge head of hair... (Seriously, where does it all come from?) And there will be other times when you will wonder what you ever did to the world to deserve it all, but that reward at the very end is SO worth it, and there's no other direction to go but up... Oh! And please – do not, I repeat DO NOT go with an NCIS-themed yearbook. I can hear the groaning from down the hall...

Well, Badgers, this is where I sign off and row away on my magical canoe beyond the horizon of Lake Mendota. What a great time it has been. Thank you for everything you have given me and shared with me.

Best to all, and "On, Wisconsin!"

A Day on Bascom

Even if it was steep, students loved Bascom Hill. Whether it was to spend a day studying, sun-tanning, playing a game of frisbee or even getting free ice cream while climbing onto Abe Lincoln's statue at the top - there was much to see. Not to mention, a great view of the State Capitol building! Photo submitted by Chen Dang

Welcome to Madison, Wisconsin. The second-largest city in Wisconsin, and the capital of "the Badger State" - which formidably was the mascot of our beloved campus. At the University of Wisconsin-Madison, we may have been only one of over 45,000 students on campus, but each of us were individually unique.

Life in Madison was pretty special. State Street allowed us to grab food before a class, buy some sportswear or people-watch from our favorite cafe. University Avenue was our gateway to excitement - plenty of bars, apartments, restaurants and prestigious academic facilities. We were literally in the middle of two lakes, and we could see them with very little effort. The Memorial Union Terrace was one of our favorite places to go and relax. Parks were every few blocks along the lakes, and the UW Arboretum was the place to go and have a peaceful walk in the wild, without ever leaving the city limits.

There were times where we may have taken it for granted. But we loved what we did see. Madison had this unbelievable beauty to it that no other campus could accomplish. We always ached and urged for more. And - luckily for us - Madison could provide it. Go Badgers!

In an age where young people had such a great influence on how the country functioned, the 2012 Presidential Election was definitely one of the most popular topics of conversation from the time students stepped foot in Madison in late August until November 6th when President Obama was elected to serve a second term. The election was especially important on campus because the city of Madison would have a huge impact on whether Obama or Romney won enough Electoral votes to take the state. Entering the 2012 election, Wisconsin voted Democratic for six consecutive years and with Madison being a predominately Liberal city, the Obama campaign was strongly represented on UW's campus. Volunteers scattered throughout campus relaying the President's campaign message and encouraging students to register to vote as Wisconsin residents. Because UW-Madison was such a large university with students who carry a wide range of beliefs, the outcome of the election was a very important issue campus-wide. Freshman Blake Duffin and Alex Cramer were especially interested in the election because it was their first opportunity to vote to elect the next President. "I am a firm believer in gun control and government funded programs so those two issues definitely influenced my vote," said Duffin. Cramer, on the other hand, focused more on voting for the candidate that he believed would best help the economy. "Although the economy is on the rise, it is still not where it needs to be. The economy plays a big role in the amount of jobs in the United States and I want to make sure I have a job when I graduate college in four years," he explained. Young voters on UW's campus played an important role in the 2012 election and were a focal point for both presidential campaigns. Students were given the opportunity to volunteer their time to get the vote out and recruit others for the same purpose. Wisconsin students jumped at this opportunity and were eager to participate in such an influential election. The campus especially buzzed with election fever for President Obama's multiple visits to Madison as November 6th crept closer. Students sat in front of their TVs to watch the debates, argued about policy differences, examined weekly polls, and made their decision to vote. Being in college, the student body understood that as they moved into the next chapter of their lives the next President would have a significant impact on many aspects of their future. Madison carried the voice of many young UW students and allowed them to make a difference in the outcome of the election. In the end, it is clear that the 2012 Presidential Election was a very important one for not only the country as a whole but for many Badgers on Wisconsin-Madison's campus as well.

LET'S GET FREAKY!

A safe but thrilling Freakfest was an excuse to dress up for Halloween weekend.

on Soverture Center for the Arts

By EMILY KUCKES

Let your "freak flag" fly! This was meant in the literal sense - Freakfest on State Street was a Halloween tradition for UW-Madison students. A costume was a must, and there were no limits as to what that could have been. Freakfest party-goers were quite creative in that aspect. At first, the event did not seem like much of a source of entertainment, but the people who were in attendance made it all worth while. Up until the year of 2005, there was no structure to the event, so there was almost a full guarantee that alcohol was a major contributor to the nearly 600 arrests.

In 2013, however, the city of Madison government had control of the event, putting into effect many regulations, including a cover charge upon entrance, specific entrance and exit locations, hours of operation, and a strict No Alcohol permitted rule. The number of arrests went down significantly afterwards, which did benefit everyone. Even though it seemed as if Madison took out all the fun of the event, many additions would not have been able to happen if there had been no formalization. Musical performances and DJs were spaced on various intersections of State Street as an element of entertainment and traffic control. Headliners from past years have included Mac Miller, Big Gigantic, All Time Low, The Ready Set, Neon Tree, Third Eye Blind, Ok GO, and many, many more. While making the event a much safer place, the city of Madison made some major upgrades to make Freakfest worth the money and the cold weather of late October.

A typical party-goer would dress all-out in their costume holding nothing back, and maybe do a little partying before taking the usually cold walk to State Street with a gaggle of friends. Once actually in Freakfest, some people made it an effort to walk up and down the street at least one time, remarking on other people's costumes and taking in the sight of the crowd. And after a little sight-seeing, the group of friends may pick a particular bar that seemed to have the biggest party happening at that moment or listen and dance to a DJ who had the hottest mixes.

If one was brave enough to stand the cold October weather in the name of partying, Freakfest was the place to be on Halloween weekend. It was totally worth it to just walk down State Street and view all of the creative and unusual costumes that people could come up with. This party was one that would keep rockin' for years to come.

Lake Mendota and Lake Monona - they were what made Madison "Madison". And as such, the area surrounding it took on many different definitions for students. A place of refuge, a place to escape from the busy and hectic world of being a college student, a place to relax and watch the ducks swim by - we spent hours here, and for some it was even the reason why they ultimately chose to come to school here!

The Howard Temin Lakeshore Path, Muir Woods, the University Bay Marsh and Picnic Point were all hot spot locations for those who loved being outside and being near the lake. One could also sit at the Memorial Union Terrace and watch the sailboats go by on Lake Mendota during a hot summer's day. There were also parks just off campus where students could go and enjoy a game of frisbee or volleyball, or go for a swim.

There aren't very many things that every student shared in common (other than being a Badger), but it could be safely assumed that everyone loved the lakes and the enjoyment they provided to everyone in the campus community. Not to mention; Mendota made for some awesome photographic opportunities!

Picnic Point

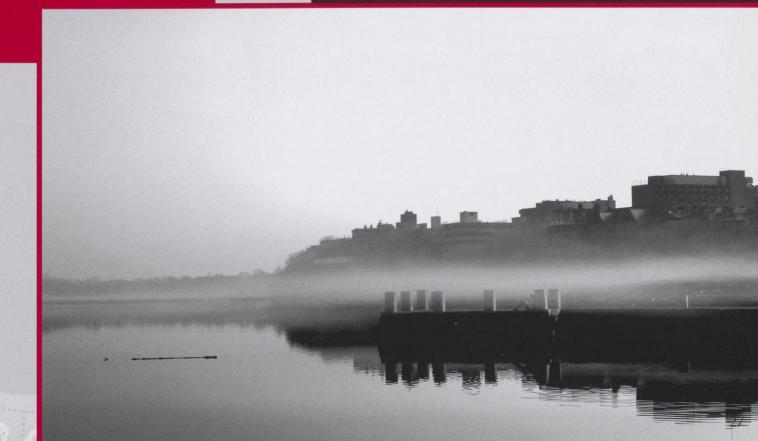

A favorite destination for Badger explorers, Picnic Point offered students a beautiful lookout across their favorite lake, with Van Hise Hall and the rest of campus emerging over the horizon.

Homecoming 2012

BY ALEXIS HARRISON AND ELIANA BERKOFF

Homecoming week kicked off on October 22nd with the "Kickoff Your Shoes" Drive and the Air Band competition, inspiring students to shred their hardest on the most impressive air instruments they could find. Just before Homecoming week, UW Musical groups Redefined, Tangled up in Blue, Jewop, University Gospel Choir, and Pitches & Notes provided the student population with the gorgeous Musical Showcase.

The campus competitions continued with the Spirit Parade featuring Bucky, the UW Homecoming Committee, the Spirit Squad, and the Band running through campus and drumming up spirit among students.

In the evening, teams of people participated in Yell Like Hell, a karaoke competition that required students to write their own unique and creative lyrics.

Childhood was October 24's theme, bringing students back in time with games such as Dizzy Izzy and Tug of War. The event, called The Badger Games, was held at the McClain Center on campus.

Special guest and UW Alum, Josh Bycel, spoke at the Wisconsin Rewind Lecture. Bycel, most commonly known as the writer and Executive Producer for ABC's "Happy Endings" and "Scrubs," also wrote for the Academy Awards and the MTV Movie Awards. In his address to the UW population, Bycel spoke of how his experiences in Madison had contributed to his success.

During the Charity Stripe Challenge, students formed a line extending out of the Kohl Center to shoot hoops for Bo Ryan and the UW Men's Basketball Team. Bo Ryan and his wife vowed to donate $1 to Coaches vs. Cancer and the American Cancer Society for every UW student that walked into the Kohl Center. For each free throw made, the Ryan family donated $10, and for each half-court shot made, they donated $1,000. As an additional incentive for students, free Wisconsin Men's Basketball season tickets were given to anyone who could make a half court shot.

The final team event of Homecoming was Trivia Night, held in Memorial Union. Despite the end to competitions among students, spirit continued with float designs and the #UWHC Twitter party.

The famous (and lengthy) UW Homecoming Parade was held on October 26th. The three-hour parade navigated from Gilman Street to State Street, featuring student organizations as well as floats created and built by the many 2012 Homecoming teams. Over 10,000 students, alumni, and community members attended the magnificent parade, all gathering for one of Madison's iconic traditions.

Then came the piece de résistance – the Homecoming Game. Tensions ran high as the Badgers battled long-time rival, Michigan State. Despite an unfortunate loss of 16-13 in overtime, Homecoming spirit still ran strong.

Homecoming week wound down as students, Madison residents, and UW Alumni returned to their typical days. However, pride in the UW, Bucky, and the Badgers remained at its typical through-the-roof-and-out-of-this-world high.

Rotc - Training Tomorrow's Leaders

By Cassandra Caswell

Military education has been a part of the UW lifestyle since the Civil War and the Morrill Land Grant Act of 1862. As such, UW-Madison was obligated to include military tactics as something they offer – ROTC has made fulfilling that requirement easy. There are three different ROTC (Reserved Officer Training Corp) unit types, and UW was one of the few universities to offer all three programs. The only difference between the three were the people running them – and they were current members of the various armed forces.

Air Force ROTC, known as Detachment 925, resided on Monroe Street across from Camp Randall, sharing its building with campus police. Throughout the year they participated in various events such as field training, campus sporting events and (of course) formal functions. The highlight of their year however was not found in any of the events that cadets normally looked forward to. During the 2012-2013 school year, Detachment 925 was named the #1 Small Detachment in physical fitness in the country. After coming in 2nd place the year before, the group was more determined than ever to prove that they were indeed the best in the country – proving so with their cumulative score of 97.42 out of 100 on their fitness tests. In accordance, they pulled out a narrow victory over the other two units in the competition blood drive with a 2% margin between them and their nearest competitor – the Navy.

Army ROTC, the Badger ROTC, resided on Linden Street, with easy access to lakeshore dorms and the Natatorium.

During the year, cadets in the unit participated in multiple field trainings and formal events. While their year was not as award winning as their Air Force brethren, the unit still managed to have a successful year and retain numbers despite increasingly difficult standards being pushed down from the top. As retention in the Army was at an unusual high the previous few years, Army leadership looked to cut numbers by making their qualifications increasingly difficult – one mess up now meant the potential of being dropped from the program.

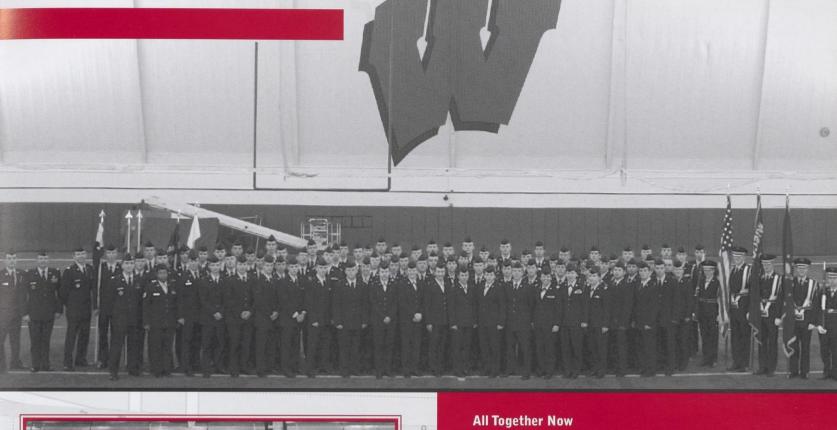

Navy and Marine Corps ROTC, the Badger Battalion, resided on University Avenue, right next to the newly-built Wisconsin Energy Institute. The Battalion participated in similar events as their ROTC counterparts as many of their alternative activities were cancelled for various reasons. The Battalion, which normally hosted a field meet during the fall semester, had to cancel due to the bad weather that caused transportation issues for schools that were travelling – ultimately ending the event for the year. With the introduction of the sequester in the spring semester, the Battalion's spring field meet was also cancelled as units could not afford to travel to Memphis where the event was being held. However, the Battalion still had an overall impressive year with a focus on grades and fitness – both of which saw marked improvements by the time the year was done.

However, for all three units, the locations they were at that year were not meant to be permanent. As the year came to a close, discussion was put forth to the Campus Planning Committee to look at the plans for designing a new facility for the three units to share. The Committee was looking at including this facility in their 2015-2017 budget, as once the funds for the 2nd half of the Wisconsin Energy Institute are gathered, the building the NROTC was stationed at could be torn down. The plan for the new facility was to include updated educational spaces and dedicated training spaces – such as a drill field and a firing range -- so as to limit off-campus travel and use of other campus facilities for events.

Battalion Breakfast

3/C Midshipmen let the food settle after a group breakfast. (above) Photo submitted by Cassandra Caswell Unsurprisingly, another big part of Madison Life was the chilling winter months. This year especially stood as a testament towards that statement - the Madison area saw snow last from late November through early April. By the time that the snow finally melted away, students were eager to return to the lake and Bascom Hill to suntan.

But prior to that, the snow and the winter months did provide some excitement. Although there weren't any days of cancelled classes, Thursday, December 20th saw blizzard-like conditions. The 15 inches were enough for UW-Madison to cancel any in-class final exams for that date and persuaded professors to provide an alternative. Many students saw their finals grades defaulted or received auto-A's thanks to the storm.

And, as an annual pastime, the Lakeshore and Southeast dorm residents returned to Bascom Hill once again to fight for bragging rights in their snowfall fight, with the Lakeshore students emerging victorious. It was the epic icing on the cake that was 70 inches of condensed snow that landed in Madison during the 2012-2013 winter season.

Oh, what a night, back in January 2013... Described as energetic, inclusive, but most of all — "fun", we were treated to one of the biggest pop bands to emerge in 2012 as Fun (usually stylized as 'fun.') performed for a jam-packed audience in Union South to kick off the spring semester. They were easily the most popular band to visit campus during the academic year, after having played to a sold-out crowd at the Majestic Theatre in April 2012.

With the number one hits "We Are Young" and "Some Nights," and the popular anthem "Carry On", students had expectations and were prepared for the heart-pumping thrills that the band would provide. Frontman Nate Ruess seemed to pop out of nowhere, as their sound could have been described as 'indie rock' or 'mainstream pop'. The harmonic tunes were unlike anything else at the time on the mainstream charts.

The event, with pun intended, was called 'Some Night' by the Wisconsin Union Directorate, who organized and announced the party that was off-limits to anyone but UW-Madison students. "The Fun. concert is definitely the biggest program we've put on all year, but for us, it's just another night at the Union," said Union President Sarah Mathews.

And 'some night' it was. With nearly 1000 fans in attendance, the vivacious set of music included Fun.'s biggest hits, including many more singles off their latest album as well as a few songs from their previous efforts before their newfound success took force. Andrew McMahon, formerly of the band Jack's Mannequin, hit things off on stage first as the opening act. An hour later, when Fun. took to the stage, the fans were ready more than ever to put their hands up to the music and drift away into musical bliss.

The full set list was comprised of thirteen songs, guaranteeing that fans did not leave unhappy due to lack of music. And the expected encore was more than just a thrill – the song "Stars" ended the evening, but not before keyboardist Andrew Dost played around and entertained the crowd. Undoubtedly, Ruess needed to grab a drink of water – the energy put forth from the concert would wear anybody out.

Fans hoped that the entertainment was interchanged between the fans and the band, and that Fun. would return for another concert in the near future. It seemed like that would be likely – and Madison students would be running for the ticket office again to hear the inspiring sounds that only a band destined for success could provide. That concert was so "fun!"

Breathing New Life Into Old Walls

The Memorial Union underwent remodeling changes for new corridors and theater space.

By Gregory Lehner

Back in 2005, a referendum supporting capital projects was supported by the student government that, in suggestion, was targeted towards the student unions and their renovation. Eventually the committee would decide on the reconstruction of a new Union South, which was completed in the spring of 2011. And with that project finished off, the Wisconsin Union turned their heads to the situation of the Memorial Union.

The historic building was in need of some serious remodeling, but the Wisconsin Historical Society and other devoted individuals were concerned about the proposed changes and the preservation of historic architecture. In the fall of 2011, the Union held a small session for students and faculty to hear the proposals and give input towards several different planned variations of redesign. One consistent anecdote was from students who were concerned about the proposed reconstruction of the theatre, which would have been extended towards the lake and would have blocked the view of sunsets from the terrace. This had always been a large draw for residents and students alike who loved to sit at the Union during evenings. Therefore, the theatre portion of the proposal was scrapped and redesigned by the beginning of 2012 to more favorable reviews.

This academic year began Phase 1 of the reconstruction of the west wing — which prior to its close featured a very convoluted corridor and provided very little space for individuals to gather. Students who used the bus system as a main hub had difficulty staying warm in the winter but making it to the bus in time, so renovation aimed to conquer this issue. Accessibility through the west entrance was also a problem and was expected to be alleviated through the reconstruction. The terrace was also partially closed from the west side near the Hoofers facilities, where new seating was installed and a bratwurst stand was built and opened by early summer 2013. Langdon Street was also closed to thru traffic on and off during various parts of the year, partially in aggravation to students. But ultimately they knew it was all for the better in the future!

By the completion date of the project, students expected the same building but with a much more intelligent design. Students remained eager and supportive through the remainder of the construction by 2013 and anxiously awaited its grand opening, which was expected to be completed sometime in 2014.

FANFARE, FESTIVE, FUN

Every year, students were treated to one of the most spirited - and in more ways than one - band concert on campus. The University of Wisconsin Marching Band Spring Concert, held on April 18th and 19th. The Band Director of more than forty years, Michael Leckrone, led the 300-plus student musicians - but not before throwing in as much glitz and glamour as possible. Multicolor displays, pyrotechnics up the wazoo and aerial stunts performed by the elderly Leckrone kept the audience in awe for the long haul. The concert had been a yearly tradition that Badgers have looked forward to since 1975.

The show was very much unlike their live performances on the football field and in other spectacles. Instead, it was an interactive performance from a stage that featured special guests like tuba player Nat McIntosh, who previously studied tuba performance at the UW and was co-founder of the Blood Brass Band, and frequent varsity band guest and trumpet player Grant Manhart. The set of music also included an astounding Rock of Ages medley that featured guitarist John Masino and singers Chaz Ingraham and Leslie Cao. Compliments also went to singer Joel Roberts, a member of Redefined, who performed Joseph and the Technicolor Dreamcoat during the concert.

In addition to special guests, the band set a musical theme to give patrons an idea of what would be heard during the event. The concert commemorated the Rolling Stones' music, as well as Joseph and the Technicolor Dreamcoat. The space also made it possible to show highlights from the Badger's season - and even though the team may have lost in Pasadena, an enthusiastic Leckrone recalled that "... the band won!"

The marching band players themselves maintained the energetic vivacity that they were professionally known for - waving the instruments back and forth, jumping up from their seats, building melodic harmonies and chords - it was all there.

2013 's concert at the Kohl Center saw a sold-out crowd; tickets could be had for lower prices if student groups from residence halls purchased tickets to the concert in bulk. "It's like an indoor Fifth Quarter," said Leckrone, when asked to describe the atmosphere of the concert. "We have plenty of room this year, and we want all Badger fans to help us celebrate." The band also performed earlier on April 14th at the Weidner Center in Green Bay, Wis.

For those who missed the chance to purchase tickets, the entire concert was aired on Wisconsin Public Television several times in May and June.

BIRTHRIGHT: AN INSIDE LOOK

By Eliana Berkoff

Growing up in the Jewish community of Milwaukee, Wis., I was always told how important Israel is, how Israel must be protected as a home and safe haven for the Jewish people. To me, Israel was always something figurative and intangible - I saw photos, I heard stories, I knew all about it, but I never experienced it firsthand. That changed on January 6th, 2013.

Every year, young adults from all over the world apply to the Birthright program. Their goal? 10 days in Israel, absolutely free. I was one of the lucky participants in 2013's Taglit Birthright program. I went through UW Hillel, a Jewish organization on campus that provides all manner of programming and activities throughout the year.

When I found out that I'd been accepted onto this year's Birthright program, I was overjoyed but also a bit nervous. I only knew a few people in the group of about 40 students joining me. Over the course of about two months, we attended three orientations before the trip that were geared towards getting to know each other, finding out what our expectations for Israel were, and discussing logistics for the trip. Finally, on January 6th, we all met at JFK airport in New York City and boarded our flight to Israel.

We arrived at Ben Gurion airport in the early evening and were quickly ushered to the baggage claim, then onto the bus that would take us to our first destination – the Golan Heights, Israel's North. Five days were spent touring in the north, visiting places like a vineyard, the Jordan River, ancient pagan temples, and the city where Jewish mysticism was born.

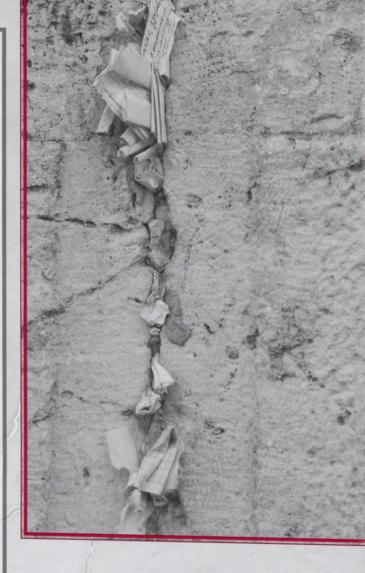

From the North, we trekked down south to the Negev, Israel's desert. Our desert travels included an overnight stay in Bedouin tents, a sunrise hike to the top of an ancient fortress, and a swim in the Dead Sea. We also met up with a group of Israeli soldiers who joined us for the remainder of the trip. It was incredible to get to know people the same age as our American group who lived such similar and, at the same time, such wholly different lives.

The final leg of our journey was Jerusalem and Tel Aviv, two of Israel's major cities. We spent Shabbat, the Jewish Sabbath, in Jerusalem with several other Birthright groups. As soon as Shabbat finished, we began touring Jerusalem. Our group visited historic sites like the Western Wall, King David's fortress, and the Jewish quarter in Jerusalem's Old City. One of my particularly favorite parts in Jerusalem was visiting Ben Yehuda street, an area of the city devoted to shopping and restaurants (much like Madison's State Street).

Tel Aviv, though only a day trip for our group, was extremely fun and modern. Much like Israel's New York City, Tel Aviv was a hub of bustling activity day and night.

We ended our trip with a beautiful dinner in Tel Aviv, then bussed over to Ben Gurion airport for our flights home. Saying goodbye to Israel was like leaving an old friend—bittersweet, but knowing I'd be back someday.

Arriving back in Madison after such an incredible trip, I knew I only had one choice: sign up for a study abroad trip in Israel!

Presented by the University of Wisconsin Art Institute and the Department of Communication Arts, the fifteenth annual Wisconsin Film Festival ran from April 11th to April 18th.

Started in 1999, the Film Festival was renowned for giving students the opportunity to see a different set of films than one would expect in the commercial movie theater. Instead, the festival showed over 150 films - each varied in length and content, but the festival was notorious for the latter. Some films were produced locally as short film projects or individuals striving for recognition by big-name companies. Other films were small projects by big-name directors - the festival showcased Douglas Fairbanks and King Hu - and showcased their differing narrative styles, such as in Fairbanks' "Taming of the Shrew" from 1929.

And the festival was wildly popular for students and community members alike - over 4,000 tickets were sold within the first two hours of sales, and a quarter of the films were sold out within that time frame.

Once the renovation to Memorial Union was completed, the Film Festival committee planned to return to the Union Theater, as well as Capitol Square, in 2014.

Along with the ticket stub and a complimentary button for your memorabilia collection, film-goers were asked to rate the films they watched - and the best films would then be in contention for the Audience Award.

Right now? Yes, right now. It was a social media experiment that started in 2012, and because of its publicity and generally high level of success, the blogging phenomena called #UWRightNow was restarted in 2013.

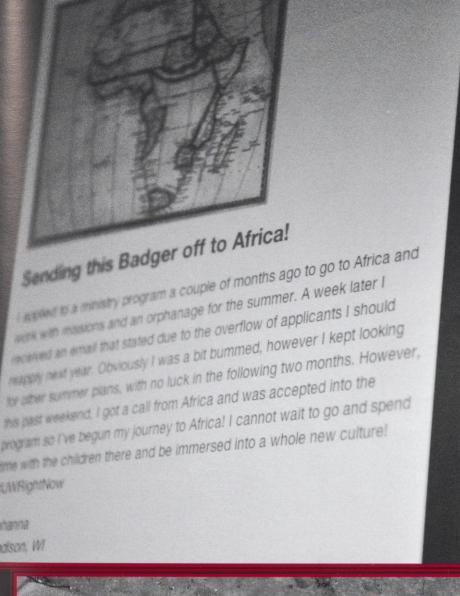

Based mostly on hashtag posts that people sent in on the social media website Twitter, people who lived all over the world were encouraged to post their photos, videos and stories about their current day with the catch-all hashtag.

And people indeed posted from all over the world - all fifty states and over sixty different countries.

2013's goal for the initiative, entitled "Face to Face," invited the campus community, including alumni and friends to also post their interactions and connections that made UW-

Madison special among other schools. Two days before the 24-hour event occured, UW-Madison tweeted out: "Show us the faces and tell us the stories that define UW-Madison."

Once a picture or photo was hashtagged on Facebook or Twitter, the post was then considered and published to the UWRightNow website to join the collection. About twenty volunteers worked from a conference room in the University Bookstore

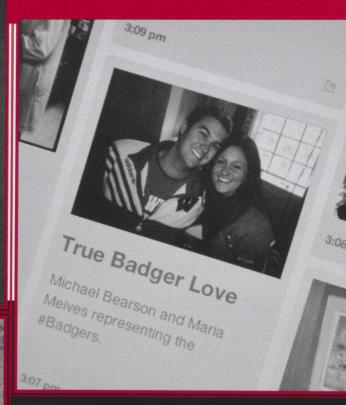

I Want to Go to Africa, Too!

As the theme for 2013's campaign was "Face to Face", the university encouraged alumni and Badgers to share, connect and tell their stories.

Love Is Kind

The campaign encouraged personal posts to represent the daily lives of Badgers and friends.

Wherever You Go...

To further spread awareness of the campaign and promote the official hashtag, UW volunteers spray-painted the tag on sidewalks, such as this one in front of Chadbourne Hall.

to mediate the postings. All participating individuals were encouraged to use other posting websites such as Instagram, Youtube, Vine or a built-in contact form in addition to the aforementioned social networks.

Topics of the posts greatly varied as well, increasing the level of interest for visitors to read through and browse the collection. Some posters reflected on their past semesters at the university, while others talked about their studying sessions, exercise activities, true loves - a couple posts even talked about what they were doing at the UW on April 21st, but several decades in the past! Finally, some of the most exciting posts came from future Badgers who had recently found out that they were accepted by the university for fall semester.

The future of #UWRightNow, according to University Communications seemed very likely, given they were able to think of a new way to do the campaign and if people were still interested. Either way, it was still amazing to see the variance in how people lived their day on campus but would be more interesting for students in the following years to look back and compare their lives - and have a good chuckle!

On April 21st, 2013, students and faculty gathered just outside Sellery Hall and walked together - in a hope to prevent suicide, create a safe environment and let students know that they were not alone. They could "Ask. Listen. Save."; the official name of the national organization. The student body and fellow supporters in the community were asked to lend their support in many different ways, and an event for the walk was created on Facebook.

According to their website, their mission for 2013's walk was to make more crisis line fact sheets available, expand their peereducating workshops to new audiences, and raise $35,000 for the American Foundation for Suicide Prevention. Wonderfully enough, the event helped meet the monetary goal, and there was an overall increase in involvement and attendance.

In addition, the executive board members for Ask.Listen. Save. networked with similar student organizations that focused on mental and physical health such as Yes+ and Campus Walks. They also gave out free sets of sunglasses, keychains, and stressballs at the Stress Relief Fair following the event.

Was Mifflin officially "dead"?

That was what was in the heads of many students in the weeks leading up to the annual block party, held on May 4th - the last Saturday prior to finals. The confusion stemmed from several announcements made by the City of Madison, including a letter sent to residents of Mifflin Street boldly stating that "no Mifflin Street Block Party (would be held) on or around" May 4th, and would not be sanctioned or permitted by city officials.

Further noted within the fine print of the letter and remarks of officials were very strict rules. If there were signs of parties overcrowding, underage drinking and dispensing alcohol in any way that resembles a bar - that responsible member would be guaranteed hefty fines in their future.

Also noted in the controversy was the omnipresent change in attitude from the city towards the party, which announced it had never said it was going to cancel anything three days prior to the party. Some suspected that this was a tactic used by the city to lower attendance. Students did their best to begin postings on social networks to reinvigorate students who were hesitant to attend.

Nevertheless, the city saw a dramatic decrease in overall attendance by UW students, including the staggering decrease in citations given (from 545 in 2012 to only 7 in 2013).

400-500 Mifflin Street Blocks...

Was it dead?

The 2013 Mifflin Street Block Party saw a large officer-per-attendee ratio, as law enforcement did everything to ensure the safety and security of the homes and people throughout the day.

It's TIME TO REVEL...

BY GREGORY LEHNER

The event was given many different names - mostly a defiant answer to the Mifflin Street Block Party - but Revelry was promoted as the safer alternative, and a music festival.

The party arose after the Wisconsin Union president joked about getting the popular boy-band One Direction to play at UW-Madison. This sparked an interesting discussion - that the UW did not have any kind of end-of-the-year party or concert for their students. Thus the talk began of starting a student-led team of individuals to plan a spring music festival.

It wasn't until later that the idea really gained feet, after talks of Mifflin being called off and heavily enforced directed people like Madison's mayor, Paul Soglin, to sponsor and support the Revelry Music Festival - which was planned for the same exact day. Further statements from the Madison Police Department's policies towards Mifflin further pushed and encouraged students to attend Revelry instead. The event was further opened up to anyone who was a Wisconsin Union member, a student at another UW school or was brought in as a guest via a current UW-Madison student.

With the tagline "May the Fourth Be With You" in the air, it quickly became a war of marketing the independent events. The balance was in check, however - students had to purchase tickets, $5 each, in order to enter the event. Head organizer and 'reveler' Sarah Mathews explained to students that Revelry was idealized to be "a large, open-air festival during which the campus can come together and have one last hurrah before spring finals. We plan to have one to two nationally touring headliners as well as several local acts spread throughout the festival, along with public art displays and food vendors for students to enjoy."

Several different kinds of musicians and bands were announced in the line-up, including Oh Land and headliner Hoodie Allen. Local deejays and bands performed various themes of music throughout the day. Three stages were set up along Randall Avenue, inside the Sett and outside in the plaza area. Also included in the festival were a "Before I Die..." wall project which sought students to leave their thoughts in chalk and was part of an international project. Students also found themselves covered in bubbles, courtesy of a spontaneous bubble bath started outside in the plaza.

It was almost tradition. Every spring semester, as if on cue, the campus gathered in the spring to celebrate themselves - it was called the All Campus Party! Sponsored the by Wisconsin Alumni Student Board, the week-long event featured several activities run by student organizations and businesses as a cost-free and alternative alcohol-free party. Although the party was tuned down from previous years, the fanfare was definitely still there.

All-Campus Idol was a regular tradition - modeled after the popular television show "American Idol", the goal was to find the most talented, most beloved student singer on campus. The event, held at the Sett in Union South on April 23rd, featured ten phenomenal performances and was judged by four campus personalities, including Dean of Students Lori Berquam. The title was given to Casey Schmoeger, who performed "If I Ain't Got You" by Alicia Keys.

Another event, referred to as the Stress Relief Fair, was held on April 24th and gave students a chance to seek out student organizations and opportunities to meditate, exercise and generally chill out before finals week. This fair was sponsored by the Mental Health Coalition.

Other popular events included Wear Red & Get Fed, Bucky's Urban Oddysey and Club Bucky - which headlined and wrapped up the week-long celebration.

A STORY OF "BIGS" AND "LITTLES"

By Eliana Berkoff

During the summer of 2011, I worked in Memorial Library indexing magazines. It was an interesting job and it led me to one of the best decisions of my life – the choice to mentor with Big Brothers Big Sisters.

I happened across an article about Dora Zuñiga, the Dane County Executive Director of Big Brothers Big Sisters, while I was indexing one day and I started reading. After finishing the article, I immediately went to the organization's website and decided to apply – after all, what could I have to lose just by applying? Well, very soon after I submitted my application, I was called in for an interview. The interviewer asked me all sorts of questions, delving deep into my history and personality to best assess which child would produce the most successful match. We talked for well over an hour, while I watched him scribble notes furiously on a yellow legal pad. After a few more weeks of waiting, I was placed at Lowell Elementary School with a little girl named Mischa.

Mischa and I were matched in October 2012 and began meeting every Friday over her lunch hour – 11:40 am to 12:30 pm. At first, we were shy with each other. There was this new person in each of our lives and we needed to lay down some serious foundation blocks before we could build a relationship based on mutual trust and friendship.

The first day, Mischa really didn't say anything to me. She quietly participated in a game of "Connect Four" while I searched for something, anything, to make her feel comfortable around me. By the time our 50 minutes were done that day, I felt like nothing had been accomplished. I didn't even know if she knew my name!

But then something amazing happened. As I was getting ready to leave, Mischa stopped me. She looked up at me and whispered "Thank you for being with me today, Ellie." I nearly cried. I bent down to hug her and replied, "Mischa, I'll be seeing you every week. It's not just today." She nodded and smiled, then ran back into her classroom.

After that moment, I was struck by just how lasting an impression those little moments leave on a person. On my drive home, my mind raced with possibilities – how could I engage her in this game? Would she like to read challenging books? What was her favorite food? Each new question brought forth images of new experiences and hopeful bonding moments.

Fast forward a few months and we'd come to Winter Break. Mischa and I wouldn't be able to see each other from before Christmas until early February, due to scheduling conflicts, a day of inclement weather, and school timing. I was worried that Mischa would have forgotten about our meeting time, or that we would have lost progress in our relationship after nearly two months of not seeing each other. I was wrong.

As soon as she entered our usual meeting room, I saw her search around the room, make eye contact with me, and watched her face break into one of the widest smiles I'd ever seen...just before she ran and launched herself at me in one of the most movie-like reunion hugs I've ever experienced.

Our reunion reaction was short-lived — we slipped back into our old habits almost immediately. Mischa picked out a game, I helped set it up, and we bent our heads together and giggled over silly things.

As I write this, I think about how much time I have with Mischa. I will graduate in May of 2014, leaving us only a year and a half left to form a bond that could last a lifetime. For some who read this story, my time with Mischa will have ended a long time ago. One thing, however, is quite permanent; starting a match with my Little, Mischa, was among the best decisions I've ever made.

Madison Life...

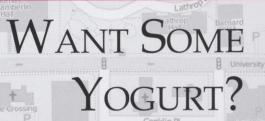

It was very rare for restaurants and cafes to survive after the first year of their existence on State Street. Therefore, it was thrilling to see Forever Yogurt, which opened in September of 2012, succeed and immediately become a popular dessert destination for hungry students. The opening saw the first 50 people receive free frozen yogurt from the location for an entire year.

The first Forever Yogurt location in Madison, the company started in the Chicago area in 2010 and became rapidly popular because of its seasonally-changing frozen yogurt flavors and nearly infinite topping selections. In summary, the consumer was totally in control of their yogurt creation. If you wanted gummi bears on your frozen yogurt, you were in luck. And if you vouched for the dietary side but had a sweet tooth, there was fresh fruit and lite-calorie options available.

"It's definitely now my favorite go-to dessert place. There's always something new every time we visit," said a frequent Forever Yogurt visitor.

506 STATE STREET...

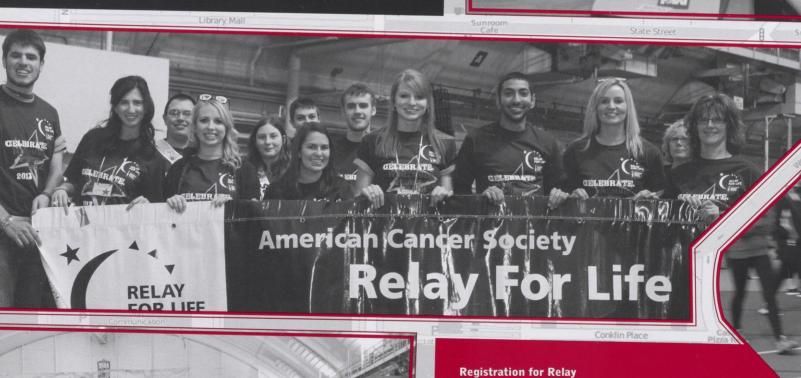

Trying to wrap your head around the total dollar amount raised — over $160,000 — is almost mind-numbing. But that was exactly what the Relay for Life campaign accomplished at UW-Madison in 2013, and the co-presidents for Colleges Against Cancer, Kaitlin DeVos and Kim Perkins, couldn't have been more thrilled.

Held at the Camp Randall Sports Center on April 12th, a total of 128 teams participated in the overnight event with some teams individually rising over $5,000 in donations. The 'relay' portion of the event was kicked off with a survivor's lap that featured any person who overcame cancer, followed by the caregiver's lap — which any person who attended the event was urged to partake in.

But what was more important than the money involved were the stories shared, the experiences shared, and the individual battles each person and their families had with cancer. Messages were written on luminarias in remembrance of those who unfortunately lost the battle. It was for these people and for these reasons that students saw nothing selfish in devoting one night towards spreading awareness and showing their support.

New Look For SOHE

The School of Human Ecology Opened New Building Nancy Nicholas Hall.

By EMILY KUCKES

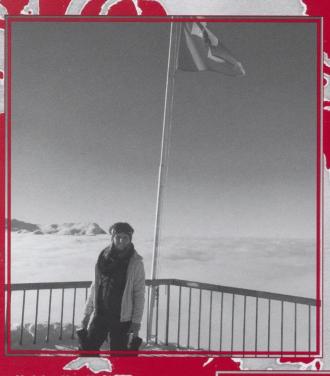

Nancy Nicholas Hall was a brand-spanking new building in the heart of campus, located in between Van Hise Hall and Agriculture Hall on Linden Drive. As an extension of the Human Ecology Building, Nicholas Hall was the home of the School of Human Ecology. Construction would not have been possible if it weren't for the generous donation of $8 million from the person whom the building was named after, Nancy Johnson Nicholas. The new renovations included a design gallery, outreach programs, a vast textile collection, a strong entry point, convenient parking, classrooms and meeting spaces with up-to-date technology, and an abundance of common areas and study spaces including a café. This was the first complete renovation the Human Ecology building had ever seen since it was first built in 1913 - so needless to say, it was definitely time for an update.

There were so many new technological and architectural elements incorporated into the building that would become a staple of development in other parts of campus. The rooftop terrace with an outdoor green space and an indoor lounge with beautiful, floor-to-ceiling stained-glass window decorations offered a unique place to study. Sustainability was given great attention in the construction of this building. It was a goal for the building to participate in the LEED green building certification program, which stood for Leadership in Energy and Environmental Design and was the most globally recognizable standard of high performance for buildings that were effective, cost-efficient, and better for the people and the environment. From building materials and the location next to a hillside to the inside elements, Nancy Nicholas Hall always kept it "green". The concrete was porous to allow for water to be absorbed into the ground instead of flowing into the storm sewer system. Bathroom fixtures were all working for the conservation of water. A majority of the wood used was Certified Wood by the Forestry Stewardship Council, which helped maintain management of forests. The lighting systems had sensors to detect when the room was occupied in order to keep light to being used only when needed. The list of sustainable elements goes on and on.

For those who did not have the chance to check it out, it was strongly suggested to take a walk through Nancy Nicholas Hall – it was considered a new part of UW-Madison history. The building was just a preview of what was still yet to come, as the people, the University, and the world worked towards a sustainable environment for all.

BADGER'S FREQUENT-FLYER MILES

A college tradition - Badger travelers found themselves better educated, worldly.

By MICHAEL GAN

As another school year began, the university continued to rank among the Top 10 in study abroad participation, with 2,159 students studying abroad outside the United States in 2010-2011, according to the 2012 Open Doors Report on International Educational Exchange.

"This (was a) testament that UW faculty, administration and students understood the importance and value of a global education and that international experience was a key component to student development, regardless of one's major or career path," said Dan Gold, director of International Academic Programs. Top destinations included Spain, United Kingdom, China, Italy and France, while Wisconsin continued to be a top destination for international students, hosting 4,480 - ranking 26th among peer institutions.

With over 200 different programs and plenty of different destinations, the Study Abroad program gave plenty of options to students in any field of study. Not only could students receive UW residence credits, they could also immerse themselves in a foreign culture that gave them valuable life experiences. Whether students were looking for a small town setting or a big city scene, there was a program available. Spanning six different continents, there were no shortages of countries or cities to pick from. With support staff available at each of the locations, students were never just left on their own to survive. Don't have enough money to study abroad? Not a problem, as students could receive additional financial aid to help cover their costs.

Why did the Study Abroad office urge students to study abroad? There were several reasons, such as the experience allowed students to immerse themselves in a foreign culture, where they could learn local customs, perfect their foreign language, and travel through some amazing places. It also offered them an opportunity to make friends from all around the world and see the world from another point of view, especially when one lived with a host family.

Not only did students gain insight to a different culture, they also learned more about themselves in their journeys. Facing a foreign language and culture, students found their strengths and capabilities as they overcame language barriers, unfortunate circumstances, and sometimes even revolutions. While some participated in marches for gay rights or protests, others lived it up and travelled through the country.

Regardless of what type of experience students were looking for, there were plenty of options to choose from, and students never regretted their decision to study abroad.

It's Energy-Efficient!

The opening of the Wisconsin Energy Institute furthered campus goals in sustainability.

By Michael Gan

Created in 2006, the Wisconsin Energy Institute was a world class leader in clean energy research, education and outreach, and in 2013 they got a brand new building to help them continue their research into alternative energy sources. Home to the nation's first solar energy lab and funded by the US Department of Energy, the Energy Institute worked to further research on advanced fuels, renewable energy and energy storage systems. With staff from many different disciplines, the WEI supported collaboration across engineers, biological and physical scientists to help improve energy efficiency and diversify the energy sector.

Keeping in line with their research mission, the building was designed to meet LEED Gold certification standards, and included many sustainable features. Approximately 95% of construction waste was recycled, the building was projected to use 48.8% less energy than code minimum, over 35% of its energy was provided from green power while a photovoltaic array on the roof helps offset energy usage, and recycled wood, glass, steel and carpet were used throughout the building. In addition, the building was designed and oriented to maximize the usage of sunlight, further reducing the demand for electricity.

To anticipate future research needs, the labs were designed to be "plug and play" wet and dry, allowing different configurations that could adapt to changes in research teams and disciplines. The WEI also included a high-bay lab for microgrid research, the first of its kind on campus. A dedicated biomass grinding suite also allowed researchers to bring the field into the lab, without having to leave the building. Keeping in line with promoting sustainability, the building included two video conferencing rooms, reducing the need to travel.

Research was an important part of advancing science. However, equally important was educating the public with the new advancements. With that in mind, the building was designed so that it could be adapted to changing needs in the future, with a Phase II addition to the building planned so that it could be added seamlessly in the future. While the plans for Phase II were still being finalized, the idea was to add symposium space for public events, teaching laboratories and classroom space, and access to an incubator to help with research.

With one of the best research facilities in the country, the Wisconsin Energy Institute was well prepared to take on the rising energy crisis, developing alternative energy sources, improving energy storage systems and working to improve energy efficiency. To support their research, the building was also prepared to educate the public and industries on their findings, ready to make a change in the world.

PROMOTING SCIENCE WITH FUN

The inaugural Wisconsin Science Festival celebrated "curiosity and creativity".

By EMILY SCHNEIDER

Through September 27th - 30th, 2012, the Wisconsin Science Festival was a free, large, open-to-the-public community gathering of local scientists, both big and small. The Wisconsin Science Festival was a public celebration that offered a wide range of "science, technology, engineering and math-related activities, creative exhibitions, demonstrations, performances, tours, debates, workshops, and concerts" over several days and in a variety of locations across both the campus and the city of Madison.

Featuring a unique grouping of scientists, artists, citizens and organizations whose passion was engaging everyone in power and presence of science in our daily lives, vendors set up tables and held demonstrations. These vendors set up places and programs that taught community members how science shaped daily life with activities such as: learning about gardening, the Fibonacci sequence, robots, the physics of football, fossil explorations, bugs, sound ensembles, the biochemistry of sugar, and even virtual reality.

All of this was made possible due to private funding and major corporate support from an extensive list of donors, "to inspire and engage us all in the enterprise of science and discovery; to cultivate curiosity and communicate the power of knowledge and creativity to change our world view; to promote innovation and to cultivate the next generation of global citizens."

MILLS HALL: PERFORMANCE CENTRAL

The School of Music and the UW Concert Choir - a place for sound and style.

Wisconsin State Historical Society and Library

Library Mall

By Gregory Lehner

They were one of the top-tier academic choirs on campus – and on a late November evening in Mills Hall, they stood on stage and performed an inspiring number called "Llorona". It was a derivation of the old Mexican tune, set and composed by Prof. Laura Elise Schwendinger. The November 16th performance was the world premiere of her rendition – and she being in attendance received a standing ovation at the conclusion of the performance.

The choir was directed by Director of Choral Activities Beverly Taylor, and featured a plethora of different songs of various musical styles. "Dance to Thy Daddy" was an upbeat traditional English folk song and was a favorite among the audience.

The Concert Choir was only one of several different groups of choral musicians that assembled in the School of Music – others being the Madrigal Singers, Chorale and, most notably, the Choral Union. Undergraduate students as well as graduates could enroll in these classes for one credit each, but each performer had to be dedicated – the choir would meet three times per week and averaged five hours per week performing and perfecting their technique. This was a pretty typical expectation for classes through the School of Music; each professor wanted to make sure that students put forth their best-possible effort when it came to the night of the performance.

Besides concert performances, the UW Concert Choir was slated to go on tour during the early summer months of 2013. They also offered CDs of their tunes for the public to purchase and as extra incentive to support the School of Music – which was a highlight for the department, as students could often buy CDs of their performed music after a concert. This way, the music could be enjoyed well after that student left the department or graduated from school.

Students who were interested in watching choral performances or who were contemplating joining a performance group had much to look forward to in the near future; the vacated lot that was located just east of the newly-remodeled Chazen Museum was going to be the future home of a new performance center. A campaign was run to raise funds to make a case for the new center, which had not yet been given an official start date.

In any case, the School of Music had much to look forward to – and the music that illuminated the ears and hearts of students was not to be destroyed. From each performance that was seen in Mills Hall, there were still a sense of excitement from the attendees, and the thrill of the diverse choral groups urged the School of Music to trudge forward and work harder towards their future goals.

For over a century, the College of Agricultural and Life Sciences (CALS) has been central to the development and international notoriety of UW-Madison. After all, we are the Dairy state!

CALS hosted nineteen academic departments and was home to over 300 different faculty who managed its research, outreach and education missions. The school also offered the Farm and Industry Short Course option for students who did not want to commit to a four-year program but aspired to operate their own farm or industry business.

Dean Kathryn Vanden Bosch fulfilled her first year as dean in 2012-2013.

Albert O. Nicholas Dean François Ortalo-Hoyt St Magné courtesy of University Communications Founded in 1900, the Wisconsin School of Business was one of the most prolific schools in association with the university. The school emphasized business research, learning experiences and knowledge attainment as their main missions for each of their students. In recent years, the school launched their global real estate master program, as well as business fundamental courses for non-majors. The school was also ranked 17th overall in the nation by the US News & World Report in September.

Hosted in Grainger Hall, Dean Ortalo-Magné wanted to focus on innovation within business education. He hosted advisory panels and discussions with students to gain their perspective on the ever-changing world of classroom technology and how it affected their learning.

Education

UW-Madison's College of Engineering was among the top engineering colleges in the nation in 2013, being home to eight degreegiving departmental programs. Wisconsin's chemical and nuclear engineering programs ranked in the Top 3 in the nation.

The college often led the way in research opportunities and discoveries, being especially focused in environmental stability, energy independence, advancing health care and more. Announcements of newly-developed technologies and research discoveries could often be seen on the front page of the university's website.

Dean Ian Robertson was introduced as the 9th college dean in March 2013.

One of the larger schools on campus, the School of Education was home to all primary and secondary education programs as well as the Departments of Art, Dance and Kinesiology. Their main focuses through their offered classes were arts in the school, educational innovation and global education. Specifically, the school was ranked first in the nation in curriculum and instruction, educational psychology, and their rehabilitation counseling programs.

Back in the spring semester of 2011, the school reopened a renovated Education building that featured and preserved the original historic architecture of the building.

Dean Underwood had been leading the School of Education since her introduction in 2005.

Graduates

Dean Martin Cadwallader courtesy of University Communications

In the average year, Madison was home to about 9,000 graduate students spread out between over 100 different academic programs on campus. An international leader, funding for graduates was plentiful, and the science programs on campus ranked 4th out of 711 surveyed campuses. It was definitely a smart choice for those who were pursuing their Master's or Doctorate degree to attend UW-Madison.

Dean Martin Cadwallader, who was also the Vice Chancellor of Research and a geography professor, ensured that the standards of excellence were maintained and that the school would continue to pursue success.

2012-13 was one of the most exciting years for the School of Human Ecology, with the opening of Nancy Nicholas Hall. At the core of it all, the new building represented what the school strived for: to understand the complex relationships and interdependence among individuals, groups and families, and to focus on quality-of-life issues through research, creative innovation, education, and outreach.

Although a small school of generally 750 students who were predominantly female, Dean Shim and the rest of the department did not mind. The school cared mostly about their investment in supporting the success of their students, as well as their excellence in scholarship, outreach and engagement.

Letters & Science

Dean Gary Sandefur courtesy of University Communications

The College of Letters and Science was by far the largest college at UW-Madison, operating directly out of Bascom Hall and guiding over 22,000 undergraduate and graduate students. Economics, Political Science, Biology, History and Psychology were the most common majors offered by the college. On average, the college conferred about 3500 degrees to graduates per year. L&S wanted students to "lead a good life and make a good living."

In early June 2013, Dean Gary Sandefur announced his stepping down from his role, and the school elected John Karl Scholz from the Department of Economics as the succeeding Dean.

Located in the middle of Bascom Hill and the heart of campus, the Law School was home for students who were pursuing a Juris Doctor degree, while many others were earning a Master of Laws or the Doctor of Juridical Science degree. They were also home to one of the largest clinical programs in the nation.

The school was very selective (only the top 10% were accepted in), so students were held to high standards and were very involved with the school. In turn, the school helped and gave much assistance to post-graduation job placement through government agencies, courts, businesses and public interest organizations.

Back in 2005, the Wisconsin Medical School renamed itself the School of Medicine & Public Health; thus beginning a transforming process that would develop a new model for medicine programs across the country. The school also lauded their idea of "translational research" which included translating ideas from the laboratory to the beds of patients for clinical studies. The school was internally focused on providing hands-on opportunities for their students.

Dean Robert M. Golden, who was also a professor of psychiatry, began his position as dean in 2006 and had been a leading force in the school's pursuit of international recognition among other medical programs.

The UW-Madison School of Pharmacy - which was established on campus in 1883 and was the first to offer a baccalaureate in Pharmacy - was located on the western portion of campus in Rennebohm Hall. Directed and guided by dean Jeanette Roberts for the last decade, the school prided themselves with giving students more opportunities to acheive a wide plethora of degrees, many of which were also firsts for the nation. The school also often associated themselves with the other medical schools on campus.

Roberts announced that she was stepping down from her position in 2012, and a new candidate was narrowed down to three by Summer 2013.

The UW School of Nursing was home to over 500 students and was proud of their collaboration with scientists, researchers and nurses around the world, often partnering with the School of Medicine and Public Health.

The school hoped to complete the construction of Signe Skott Cooper Hall, which broke ground in Spring 2012 and aimed to provide state-of-the-art technology and innovative educational spaces. One third of the building was slated for classroom space.

Dean Katharyn May, who had been a faculty member since 2001, had provided key oversight into the new building's construction and was there since step one, seeking out philanthropic opportunities to raise funds for the school.

GREEK COMMUNITY RUNS FOR A CURE

BY ANNE REDA

On September 30th, 2012, three UW-Madison sororities: Sigma Delta Tau, Alpha Epsilon Phi, and Chi Omega, joined together at the Memorial Union and Lakeshore Path for Relay for Tay, which was a fundraiser that benefitted the Tay Bandz foundation. Taylor Matthews, who began the foundation, was diagnosed with cancer at the age of eleven.

The foundation's goal was to raise money for pediatric cancer research through a relay event, and had been held on multiple college campuses throughout the country. Here at the University of Wisconsin-Madison, lead organizer of the Relay for Tay event was Rebecca Lefkowitz - a close friend to Taylor Matthews and also a member of Alpha Epsilon Phi. The inspirational event raised more than $5,300 towards the foundation and had a great turnout of supporters, especially within the Greek community. Both fraternities and sororities around campus participated and showed their support.

Leftkowitz later explained how this event was important to her - because it helped to reach the goal that Taylor had: "One day, no child would have to live with cancer."

Overall, the event was successful in bringing the Greek community together, while also making a direct impact that would improve the lives of families and children struggling with pediatric cancer.

The Relay for Tay event was one of a handful of philanthropies that Sigma Delta Tau and other sororities took part in during 2012-2013.

ALPHA CHI OMEGA

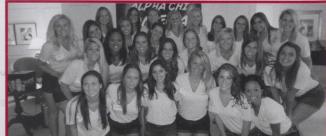

Here at the largest house on campus, girls were offered a great place to call home. Whether you played sports, danced, painted, sung; there was something for you! Alpha Chis were involved in every aspect of the University. The sorority offered philanthropic or homecoming chair positions to new members. The women of Alpha Chi were among the most visible and active members both inside and outside the greek system. From representation on the Panhellenic Council and Judicial Board to University varsity athletics and involvement within the Wisconsin Alumni Association, all were strongly valued and encouraged. Girls from all different backgrounds came together and strived to apply the strength of their sisterhood within their house, the Greek system, the University and the community. Alpha Chis were girls who were proud of the tradition they had built on this campus for over 100 years!

AEФ Alpha Epsilon Phi

Alpha Epsilon Phi was a national sorority, founded October 24, 1909 by seven Jewish women who were dedicated to helping women become the best they could be. Those seven women were searching for a group of young women that would contribute to the growth of its members emotionally, intellectually and socially. "A-E-Phi" was a sorority that wanted to inspire and support exemplary women dedicated to friendship and a lifelong commitment to sisterhood, while building on the vision of their founders.

Alpha Epsilon Phi's motto was "Multa Corda Una Causa": Many Hearts, One Purpose. Alpha Epsilon Phi had two national philanthropies. In 2000, they adopted the Elizabeth Glazer Pediatrics AIDS Foundation as their second national philanthropy.

ALPHA PHI

Alpha Phis were members of a lifelong sisterhood, formed from values rested on promoting sisterhood, scholarship, service, loyalty, character development and leadership.

The women of Alpha Phi felt very strongly about giving back to their community. The chapter hosted two amazing philanthropy events in 2012-2013: "Red Dress Gala" and the new event "Heart and Sole 5K Run/Walk." The money raised was donated to the Alpha Phi Foundation, which helped fund research and educational programs in support of women's cardiac health. In addition to their own events, each year Alpha Phis participated in a number of campus and Madison area community service opportunities. Alpha Phi also provided many programs to encourage members to do their best in class.

They were a group of girls with many different passions, true and loving friendships. Their whether it be volunteering, participating in sports, or becoming involved with other campus activities. Yet while they may have differed in many ways, the one passion they shared was their pride and love of being an Alpha Phi.

CHI OMEGA

Chi Omega - Nu chapter was founded in 1902, and their house was built in 1905. Their six pillars were established to preserve and enhance the value of each member: friendship, a high standard of personnel, sincere learning and creditable scholarship, participation in campus activities, career and personal development, and community service. The Make-a-Wish Foundation became Chi Omega's national philanthropy in 2002 and since then Chi Omega had become their largest contributor. Other Nu Chapter philanthropies included Celebration for Shona at the American Family Children's Hospital and Chi Omega Reads Aloud at Glenview Elementary. Chi O Reads Aloud was the only weekly philanthropy within the Greek System. Chi Omega was the largest member of the National Panhellenic Council.

Unlike most sorority houses on campus that were converted from old mansions, Chi Omega Nu was built specifically for them. Throughout the house there were built-in Chi Omega symbols, including the most noticeable one: an owl-shaped window.

Each new member of Chi Omega was welcomed into one of the largest sisterhoods in the nation with excitement and enthusiasm. They hoped to keep their legacy going strong for 100 more years!

DELTA DELTA DELTA

The purpose of Delta Delta (most commonly called "Tridelta") was to establish a perpetual bond of friendship among its members, to develop a stronger and more womanly character, to broaden the moral and intellectual life of each member, and to assist their members in every possible way.

Delta Delta was one of the largest national sororities and had maintained a strong presence at UW Madison for nearly 110 years. Their chapter was very diverse with women from all over the country and with majors from every college at the University of Wisconsin-Madison. Tri Delta prided themselves on being the first women's fraternity established without the help of men.

Tri Delta participated in a variety of social events throughout the year. Date parties, theme parties, semi-formals, and formals were all the rage. Their chapter also held many sisterhood events such as Grammy, Oscar, and other award show events, Retro exercise days, March Madness bracket competitions, and salsa dancing.

DELTA GAMMA

Delta Gamma was an extremely active, involved, and growing member of the UW-Greek community. As an organization, they aimed to create an accepting, values-based environment that enabled their members to reach their fullest potential as individuals and as members of a larger campus and national community.

Their chapter was composed of a diverse group of women who formed genuine, life-long friendships that lasted far beyond the undergraduate experience. The members were also active in their foundation through their service work with Wisconsin Council of the Blind and Visually Impaired, OccuPaws Guide Dog Association, and their national philanthropy Service for Sight.

Their local philanthropy, "Anchor Splash!" was a Greek-wide water competition between fraternities and sororities with greased watermelons, relays, synchronized swimming and tons of fun. All proceeds went to Service for Sight, benefiting the blind. Other philanthropy activities throughout the year included vision screenings for preschoolers, caring for seeing-eye dogs, and fundraising for the Wisconsin Federation for the Blind.

Their members could be seen actively participating in the larger greek, campus, and Madison community through service, social, and scholastic involvement. Their motivation leaned on always living up to their fraternity motto: "Do Good".

Gamma Phi Beta

Each year, the Gamma Chapter of Gamma Phi Beta participated in two significant philanthropic events. During the fall semester, their chapter held the annual "Grilled Cheese with the G Phi B's" philanthropy. In the fall of 2012, they raised over $7000 for Girls on the Run, a non-profit organization committed to inspiring girls to be happy, healthy, and confident by using a fun, experience-based curriculum which creatively integrated running. In the spring of 2013, their chapter dedicated an entire day of service to Girls on the Run to support their year-end goal, a 5000-meter run.

As a social sorority, Gamma Phi Beta also participated in events planned with other sororities and fraternities on campus. Some of their most popular Greek-wide activities included Homecoming Week, Greek Week, Humorology and participation in other organization's philanthropies.

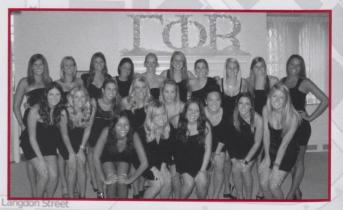

With more than 140 members and over 40 leadership positions, Gamma Phi Beta gave members opportunities to build upon the strong foundations of their sorority. Gamma Phi Beta provided a community to make life-long friends, and enhanced member's Wisconsin experience.

KAPPA ALPHA THETA

Kappa Alpha Theta was founded on the values of scholarship, service and leadership. At Psi Chapter, they strived to cultivate and refine those values within themselves, while creating a lasting bond through a lifetime of sisterhood.

Psi Chapter housed 33 "Thetas" each academic year. With eleven singles, six doubles, two triples, and a quad, the house offered a variety of accommodations for the diverse group of women who choose to live in it. Overlooking Lake Mendota also allowed for breathtaking views and sunsets each night - rare amenities for college students. The third floor deck provided an excellent space for doing homework or relaxing on a late summer afternoon.

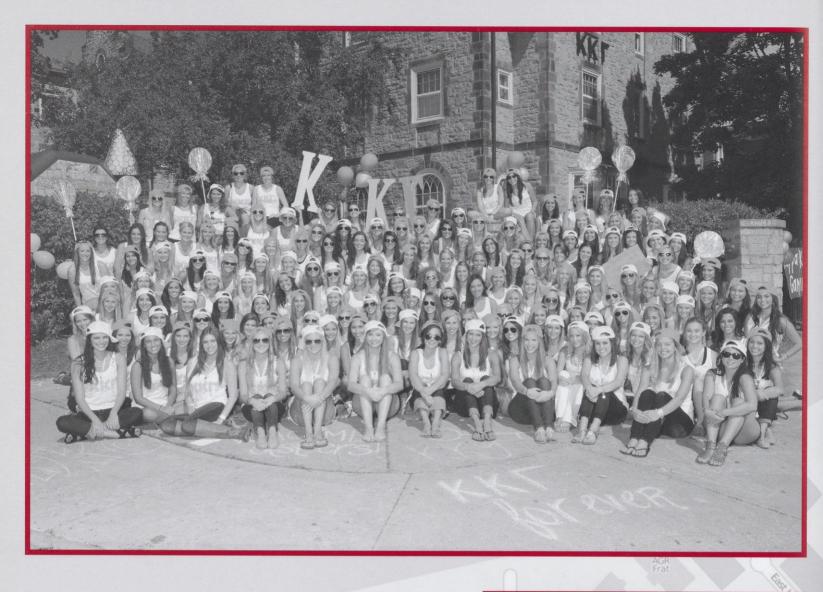

The women of Kappa Alpha Theta were extremely dedicated to philanthropy work and many could be found regularly volunteering for Habitat for Humanity, the UW Hospital, at food shelves, or with the elderly of our community, as well as various other service projects around Madison. Theta members were also involved in numerous student organizations around campus including the Panhellenic Executive Board, Business Fraternities, pre-medicine or pre-law clubs, and even club sports like synchronized skating and women's hockey or rowing.

KAPPA KAPPA GAMMA

Kappa Kappa Gamma promoted, through their own standards, a broad college experience. Scholarship or intellectual development was their first priority, and the impressive achievements of their members attested to this. In "Kappa", scholarship programs provided an atmosphere for academic accomplishment, emphasizing that each member could attain her personal academic best.

Cultural growth was important as well. Kappa Kappa Gamma encouraged members to seek opportunities for self-growth in a variety of interests in the chapter, campus, and in the community. Kappa Kappa Gamma also provided leadership opportunities in a mutually supportive environment.

Kappa members believed that philanthropy or mutual helpfulness was of significant importance. SIGMA DELTA TAU

The mission of Sigma Delta Tau was to enrich the college experience of women with similar ideals, to build lasting friendships, and to foster personal growth. Sigma Delta Tau encouraged each member to reach their fullest potential by providing intellectual, philanthropic, leadership and social opportunities within a framework of mutual respect and high ethical standards.

Even though they did not have their own house, Sigma Delta Tau members were active in the Greek System, participating in other sororities and fraternities' philanthropies as well as Homecoming, Greek Week, and Trick or Treat with the Greeks. They also threw a great semi-formal and formal every year for dinner and dancing. The chapter met every week and held about one sisterhood event each month. These ranged from going to see a movie, watching a television show each week, having a date party, or just cooking dinner together. They took pride in recruiting great girls who would soon become great friends and share the bond of sisterhood. Their philanthropy, Broom Hockey, was held in April at the UW ice-rink and raised money for Prevent Child Abuse America.

For over 90 years, the Kappa Chapter of Chi Phi Fraternity had been an important part of the University of Wisconsin. Their proud history spoke for itself through consistent high-academic achievement and leadership on the University of Wisconsin campus. With more than 1,400 initiated alumni, the Kappa Chapter had influenced the lives of numerous men and cultivated lasting friendships and experiences. The Kappa Chapter of Chi Phi had hoped to create an environment where young men could learn and live a connected, yet respectable Greek lifestyle as a student at the University of Wisconsin.

Chi Phi was known for being one of the oldest social fraternities in the country. Their roots went all the way back to 1824, where their founding fathers established the Chi Phi values of Truth, Honor, and Personal Integrity. In 2012, Chi Phi officially rechartered within the Chi Phi Fraternity, a process that had been a main goal of theirs for quite a while.

They also had several intramural sports teams, and all of their members were expected to participate in at least one university student organization, extracurricular activity, or job.

SIGMA CHI

The Alpha Lambda Chapter of Sigma Chi was chartered in 1884 and had been a part of the University of Wisconsin in Madison ever since. The chapter had initiated more than 2,600 members since that time, and had over 100 undergraduate brothers in 2013. A spacious chapter house was maintained for the use of the undergraduate brothers. Sigma Chi's purpose was to promote the concepts of friendship, justice, and learning.

THETA CHI

The Psi Chapter of Theta Chi Fraternity was rechartered in 2011 after a brief hiatus and about 90 members called Theta Chi home in 2013.

Recruitment events were aimed at identifying the finest men for their fraternity - men who truly conducted themselves as true gentlemen and brought something new to the group. Thousands of hours in community service were given by the men each semester. Habitat for Humanity, Wisconsin Public Television and Saint Vincent dePaul were their most common service groups.

Plans were underway to build a new house during the summer of 2013 and replace it with a 30-room house throughout the 2014 school year.

Alpha Sigma Phi

Uniquely, Alpha Sigma Phi - Kappa colony returned to campus on November 2012 - their first presence on campus since 1956. The chapter hoped to reintegrate themselves into the Greek community.

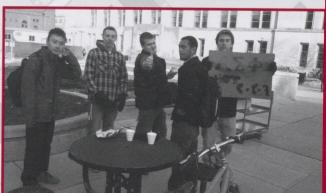

Alpha Sigma Phi-Kappa Colony aimed to be the extracurricular organization of choice for individual leaders through the provision of an enriching brotherhood experience and a full range of character and leadership development opportunities. Through its community involvement, brotherhood development, and leadership training, their fraternity aimed to not only help students become better men in the classroom, but also strive to be recognized in the Greek Community and the greater Madison Community for their efforts.

CHI PSI

More commonly known as "The Lodge," Alpha Iota of Chi Psi had grown into one of the premier fraternities at the University of Wisconsin. One of the longest continuously-active fraternities on campus at the time, the Lodge had become a staple of the University and the city of Madison since its founding. Generations of men looked back at their experiences as some of the most memorable times in their lives. At the lodge, the men continually strived for development and enrichment in their active membership, instilling the feelings and traditions of previous members in their members.

Lodgers participated in a wide range of activities on campus and in the community including the speech team, varsity athletics, ROTC, and the Interfraternity Council Executive Board. The social calendar was always lined with events to help break the routine of the academic week, while instilling valuable personal skills for the men.

Alpha Gamma Rho

Alpha Gamma Rho was a social/professional fraternity that was located on beautiful lake front property at the UW. The fraternity strived to make better men throughout the agricultural community and beyond. In addition to participating in the numerous Greek activities on campus, members of Alpha Gamma Rho were also involved in numerous activities throughout the campus as a whole. They were actively involved in Intramural Sports, Student Council, ASM, and numerous smaller interest clubs throughout the campus.

Alpha Gamma Rho believed in building strong ties between their members not only while in school, but also in everyday life. They also had an officer specifically in charge of membership and brotherhood development.

BETA THETA PI

Beta Theta Phi - Alpha Pi Chapter had the dubious honor of being the oldest fraternity continually in existence on campus. The "Beta's" mansion on the lake was the perfect place to spend the college years. They had a diverse group of members, coming from all over the country and having a variety of interests and academic majors. Beta was not the biggest or wealthiest house on campus, but they took pride in being a well-rounded and respectable group of college men.

"As a Beta you are presented with countless opportunities that will prepare you for the life ahead of you — from leadership development on a national level to the many roles within the Chapter. The Beta experience is unique — you can make with it what you choose, but which ever path you follow as a Beta, you'll find yourself in one of the best places to spend your college years as you form friendships that will last a lifetime," said brother Evan Bonnstetter.

Adams Hall

By Anna Chen

Adams Hall, constructed in 1920 and was known as one of the most attractive historical dormitories on campus. It was only one minute from the Lakeshore Path and was located next to the botany gardens.

Besides its attractive view, Adams Hall was home to the International Learning Community (ILC), an extraordinary characteristic of the residence hall. ILC was a residential program of UW Madison, aimed to connect students inside and outside of class with experiences and brought students and faculty together to enhance their foreign language skills and gain critical knowledge of different cultures across the world. Each semester, ILC offered several one-credit courses about foreign languages and cultural issues. It was a great experience for students who wished to study abroad.

Brittany Eggert was a house fellow of ILC during the school year. "Living in the ILC was one of the most rewarding experiences I have had here at UW. I was able to meet students from all over the world, including China, Japan, Australia, Denmark, Saudi Arabia, Turkey, and Hong Kong. As someone who loves to learn about different cultures, living and working in the ILC was a given. If you are interested in studying abroad, working abroad or even just meeting students from abroad, the ILC is the place on campus where you want to be."

Residents of Bradley Hall

By Claire Larkins

Overlooking beautiful Lake Mendota, Bradley Hall was an excellent place for those who wanted a close-knit community that emphasized the importance of a good learning environment. There were four floors/houses, which included 246 co-ed residents, making Bradley have a uniquely low Student-to-House Fellow ratio of 35:1.

Bradley created activities for residents on a daily basis in the After Hours room located near the lobby of the building. The room was stocked with hundreds of movies, nail polish, crafts, and board games. These activities were run by a group of students called "Peer Helpers," who were Bradley residents from the previous year. The dorm also allowed students to sign up for one credit discussion sections called Round Tables, which were times for a Faculty Fellow and a Peer Helper to run a specified discussion section for Bradley residents. Discussion section topics ranged from political issues, to social media topics, to even discussions based on the Harry Potter series.

Because of the many activities that Bradley created for the residents to enjoy, there was a strong sense of community in the dorm and a lot of strong friendships were built.

Barnard was one of the many residence halls on campus, located next to the Chadbourne Residence Hall. The dormitory was named after Henry Barnard, the second Chancellor at the UW. It opened in the fall of 1913, originally designated as a dorm for women. Barnard was known as the oldest residence hall still in operation as of 2013. Approximately 139 students lived in the dorm during the 2012-13 school year. Additionally, the dorm was coed by wing. Those who resided in Barnard could take part in the Chadbourne Residence Hall activities and dine in the Rheta's Market Place, as well as other dining halls on campus. Barnard's central location was also wonderful because it was close to classes and State Street. Freshman resident, Adam Yafai, felt that Barnard was, "a diverse, peaceful, learning environment for all those who live there." Although Barnard was not as well known as other dorms on campus, it had a wonderful atmosphere where students could focus on their studies and make new friends.

Erected back in 1959, the Chadbourne Hall we knew in 2013 received some restoration to revamp the inner facility. A third elevator shaft was added, and additional bathrooms were built to allow the building to operate as co-ed. The dormitory could finally live up to its goal of "integrating academic learning with residential life and citizenship", as it was also home to the Chadbourne Residential College (abbreviated as CRC).

Chadbourne Hall offered much more than most dorms on campus – a full in-house dining service in Rheta's, close proximity to classes, and it did not carry the notoriety that Sellery and Witte halls did when it came to obnoxious behavior. Residents could make full use of the remodeled dens and kitchenettes to cook their favorite home meals, and study for that upcoming physics exam.

With the remodeling completed, and a fresh outlook on the future of Chadbourne's welcoming co-ed atmosphere, the dormitory quickly became a favorite for incoming freshmen and upperclassmen in the upcoming years.

With all the construction and changes that were going on around the Lakeshore area, one constant was Cole Hall. As a part of the KroCS community, Cole Hall was unique in that it included the Green House. As a Green House resident, students paid a small fee to participate in seminars, shared sustainable meals, learned how to fix bikes, and learned other sustainability-related skills. With the new dorm being built however, this was the last year the Green House was going to be located in Cole Hall. It was to be moved to the new dormitory that featured many new sustainability and ecologically minded features, including a fully functioning greenhouse on the roof!

One didn't need to be in the Green House to have fun though, as the whole dorm participated in fun activities that brought residents together. One such event was the Cake-Off, where residents competed in decorating the best cakes. Cole also participated in the annual Homecoming Competition, and there was always the great location next to Lake Mendota. Whether you were a freshmen or a senior, living in Cole always guaranteed some great memories, great friends, and great times.

What was the natural thing to do when meeting Bucky in the halls? Take advantage of that photo op! Submitted by Abbey Schneider By Derek Shimeck

When jogging down the Lakeshore path in 2011, one could see a massive structure being constructed next to the Natatorium. In August 2012, this building opened as the newest residential housing addition on campus: Dejope Residence Hall. The name was chosen to honor the Ho-Chunk Native Americans who lived in the Madison area long before Europeans settled. Dejope means "Four Lakes" and accurately described the Madison landscape. In addition to the name, features of the Ho-Chunk nation were considered in the design of the residence hall. A fire circle facing the lake featured 11 plaques which represented each Indian Nation located in Wisconsin.

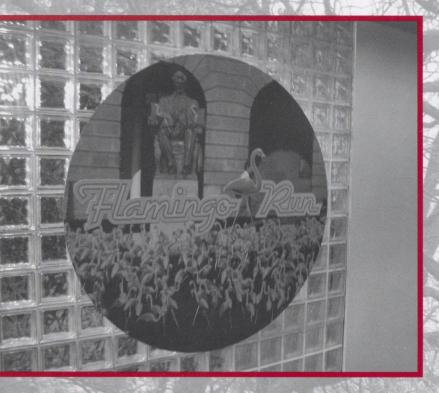

Dejope featured 408 state-of-the-art dorm rooms for students, a dining facility on the first floor, a University Health Services clinic, and breathtaking views of Lake Mendota. "If I could re-rank my choice of dorm halls, Dejope would have been at the top of my list," exclaimed freshman Katie Sonnentag. Dejope also provided much-needed student housing stock to the lakeshore area, and its completion had hopes of eliminating the waiting list for on-campus student housing.

In addition to the dorms, Dejope's first floor was home to Four Lakes Market, which became the main dining facility in the lakeshore area. Four Lakes featured multiple dining venues, as well as a coffeehouse and a convenience store. Students in the lakeshore neighborhood could find a wide variety of food, and even upperclassmen were interested in exploring Dejope's dining options. "Dejope is pretty dope," exclaimed senior Ryan Curtin after dining at Fired Up, a venue featuring a wide variety of grilled burgers and sandwiches.

With a design for the future, Dejope Hall was a well-planned project for the University. When one ran on the Lakeshore path, they now see Dejope rising above the tree line, a testament to the history of the Madison area and the people who lived there before.

The Four Lakes Market opened their doors at the beginning of fall semester 2013 and instantly became the hot spot for lakeshore students to get their meals. Similar to the new Gordon Commons, they offered a substantial increase in food variety than what was available from Frank's the previous year. And, as the only complete cafeteria that was open during the academic year, people became acclimated and enjoyed the new market quite quickly.

The setup of the new dining hall was broken up into several dining venues, each of which served their own kinds of specialty foods. For example, Buona Cucina featured pasta dishes, while Fired Up was a burger and grilled foods venue. The options almost seemed endless in comparison to what students were used to prior to its opening. And even if students were not exactly in the mood to eat, they could easily use the large space for studying or socializing with friends.

Also close to Four Lakes Market was Flamingo Run. It was located just outside of the main market, and offered students stop-n-go type foods and snacks. If you were the kind of person who wanted to just grab a soda and some crackers before your lethargic philosophy class, then this was the place for you. The Bean & Creamery was also located just outside the market, and mainly served as a café for students who needed that caffeinated boost in the morning.

In all, there was something for everybody at Four Lakes Market – and after its inaugural year, the market was expected to be in business and become the favorite of many students for the decades to follow.

Plentiful Seating

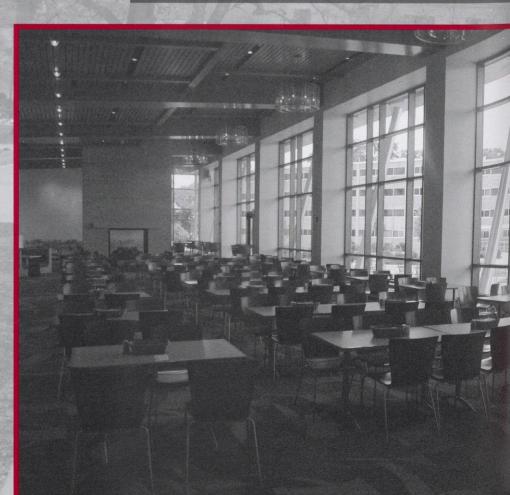

Four Lakes Market's dining area was expansive, designed to seat easily over 200 hungry students.

Kronshage Hall, located in the Lakeshore region of campus, blended historic UW with modern-day facility. Over 600 students called Kronshage home, and were divided between eight different houses: Mack, Turner, Gilman, Showerman, Conover, Swenson, Jones and Chamberlin. Those who wanted a quiet atmosphere, loved walking up and down lots of stairs, an omnipresent view of Lake Mendota and building friendships within the people of your house found Kronshage the definitive place to live.

Kronshage remained part of the KroCS Community (Kronshage-Cole-Sullivan), and an independent committee made of students, housing staff and resident assistants met on a regular basis to solve problems and complaints sent in by residents.

The houses also had an abundance of places for students to study, rest and chat with their friends. The Rose Taylor Room, located on the second floor between Conover and Showerman houses, was a great place for meetings and community events. The "RTR" even had a piano for students to practice their music.

In short, Kronshage worked to become the 'home away from home' for all residents. By providing them with resources and opportunities for leadership involvement, Kronshage Hall held on to the over-arching idea of striving for excellence.

Merit House

By Emily Kuckes

Tucked cozily on the corner of Dayton and Park Street, just across the way from Ogg Hall, Merit House offered students a quiet escape from the hustle and bustle of life on campus. Merit's rooms were quite different from those of Sellery or Ogg Hall. A double room had the added comfort and convenience of an attached bathroom for two people to share, rather than made the seemingly-endless trek down the hall to the community bathroom. Additionally, students were offered a suite with a total of six roommates and one bathroom for all suitemates to share.

Merit House may have been small, housing only 68 residents, but it fostered fun, friendship, and flexibility. Merit House did a lot of collaborations with its neighbor, Ogg Hall, including TOGGA (The OGG Association), interest groups, hall-wide events, socials, and much more. With the building situated in a prime location on campus, Merit House was within walkable distance to the Kohl Center and Gordon Dining and Event Center, allowing students easy access to social and academic events. A resident of Merit Hall for 3 semesters, Ben Rodriguez, said about his experience: "I believe that this was one of the best dorms available. My first year there I had a Thanksgiving dinner with the rest of the residents. While it was competitive to get into Merit, I'm glad I was able to live there and be a part of its community."

BY ELIANA BERKOFF

Nestled in the southeast of campus, Ogg Hall was one of the nicest dorms a student could live in. Not just because of its prime location, beautiful rooms, and spacious lounges, but because of the community it housed.

With three named houses per each of its six floors, Ogg residents built relationships based on their houses, floors, and as a whole dorm. One house fellow, Alli Miller, had worked and lived in Ogg for two years. Her favorite aspect about being a house fellow was that, "I got to meet a lot of really awesome people. Being a house fellow definitely opened doors; especially for once I graduate from the University. More importantly, I've met some really awesome students and I've gotten to shape their housing experiences."

Unlike Sellery or Witte, Ogg had several amenities to offer its students. Among them, private bathrooms, high ceilings, and five clusters of four rooms each that alternated (male-female) in each house. The facilities—everything from a recreational basement to a gigantic lounge on the main floor—provided students with multiple places to study, hang out, and enjoy time in the dorm.

"Ogg is just a great community with so many amazing opportunities to meet new, interesting, and wonderful people," Miller said.

Between the perfect location, beautiful facilities, and incredible community offered in Ogg Hall, it was clear to Ogg's residents why their dorm was one of the best places on campus.

Renamed Vel Phillips Hall in 2011 from Friedrick Hall, Phillips provided students with an opportunity to enjoy a quiet atmosphere despite the large campus. With only 142 residents, it was the perfect dorm for incoming freshmen, and had a very homely feel. Previously, the building was used as a conference center – and the wooden furnishings are a testament to that fact.

In addition, it was the western-most dorm on campus, meaning those who were Nursing or Pharmacy majors would have loved the close proximity to their academic buildings.

In the fall of 2013, the Gender & Women's Studies Department sponsored "Open House", a learning community located inside of Phillips Hall. The house always welcomed students who wish to examine gender, racial and LGBT backgrounds. It was intended to be a safe learning environment for any student to participate and live.

For nearly 50 years Sellery Hall has provided UW-Madison students with irreplaceable experiences that they will cherish for the rest of their lives. Living in the dorms was an experience that most people associate with the college experience and since Sellery's opening in 1963, thousands of Badgers have had the opportunity to enjoy all that the residence hall could contribute to kick-start the beginning of a memorable four years in Madison.

Sellery Hall prided itself on being an oasis for community involvement, socializing, and most importantly, learning. Along with the other university residence halls on campus, Sellery promoted the sharing of ideas and working with others by offering countless group activities.

The Involvement Coordinator assisted students in organizing their own fun activities to meet other residents by allowing individuals to take on informal or formal leadership roles. As expected, academic success was the top priority for the Sellery Hall staff. The Academic Program Coordinator was a helpful resource aiding students in administering academically focused programs, working with classroom instructors, planning study groups, and acting as a great resource for any academic related questions that may have risen.

Sellery Hall's convenient location offered residents with the best of both worlds. The hall was just a short walk from the heart of Madison, State Street, and not too far from most academic buildings on campus.

With the plethora of benefits that Sellery Hall presented, residents like freshmen Blake Duffin and Alex Cramer explained that their decision to live in Sellery Hall was a no-brainer. "While making my list of top dorm choices I heard that Sellery was the best place to meet new people and it had a very social atmosphere that other dorms lacked. I knew coming in that I for sure wanted to live in a Southeast residence hall, and Sellery seemed like the perfect fit for me," said Cramer.

Among the group of dormitories that made up the Lakeshore neighborhood, Slichter Hall offered students a warm and welcoming home. Everyone had the opportunity to know everyone living there, for there were only 200 residents subdivided into wings of 25 each. As with all of Lakeshore, the sizes of double rooms were considered a luxury on campus. Residents were able to be involved in many activities for hall events through FAST, the Federation of Tripp, Adams, and Slichter Halls.

When a student just needed to get away from his or her studies, Slichter Hall's expansive backyard area usually was the perfect area to throw around the football or just talk with friends – however due to the remodeling of Carson's this area was off-limits for the school year. Many students chose Slichter Hall as their dorm of preference because of the location to classes and the laid back atmosphere of the Lakeshore area. A frequent visitor to Slichter Hall, freshman Caitlin Kuckes, liked the close proximity of Slichter to classes. "It is just a hop, skip, and a jump for me." To some Southeast-area students, Lakeshore may have seemed like a long haul, but those who actually lived in Lakeshore found the outdoors pleasurable so they were more than happy to walk the distance.

This poordake snowman met his untimely death during the night over a frozen Lake Mendota.

Sullivan Hall

By Gregory Lehner

Sullivan Hall was conveniently located in the Lakeshore dormitory neighborhood, between Cole and Kronshage Halls, and was home to over 250 residents. The building was opened to UW students in 1958. The hall featured mixed co-ed floors and the Substance-free community was located on the 4th floor in Olson House during the 2012-13 academic year.

Being close to Lake Mendota allowed students to partake in the several recreational opportunities surrounding them, including tennis courts, the Allen Centennial Gardens located at Babcock & Observatory Drive, and the Howard Temin Lakeshore Path.

Megan Gray and Anna Lichwa, two freshman students who lived in Sullivan in 2012, chose the hall for that exact reason. "The fact that it is close enough to run to Picnic Point and [we] still have the energy to parkour on the run back is definitely a plus." Casual ice cream runs were also a must, as Sullivan was sandwiched between Dejope Hall and Holt Commons, which hosted ample options for the creamy delight.

quiet, it's ambient and friendly atmosphere made it a great place to live, said Gray and Lichwa. "We also like to break the silence once in a while by blasting pop music and throwing dance parties."

Tripp Hall

Schneider

Tripp Hall was nestled quietly at the start of the lakeshore dorms, down the hill from Elizabeth Waters and the Van Hise building. Tripp shared its luscious green space with the resident halls of Slichter and Adams, where residents of all three halls could gather together for a sunny game of volleyball, an invigorating jog down the lakeshore path, or a soothing promenade through the Allen Centennial Gardens. While waiting for Carson's Market to be renovated, students could be found congregating at any of the fantastic programs thrown by FAST—the Federation of Adams, Slichter, and Tripp. In September, new residents got the welcome that only came once in a lifetime, namely the orientation to different aspects of resident life. In November, students got to celebrate in the Epic Thanksgiving. And students concluded the year by sharing the vibrant colors of different cultures with the Hindu Holi festival, where residents bombarded each other with colorful powders. Tripp Hall also helped residents plan trips to different places throughout the Midwest. But one question remained: why leave when everyone knew Tripp was the one place to be?

Even on a cold winter's day, Smith Hall still looked pristine and new. Photo by Brianne Gohlke

Smith Hall opened in 2006 and welcomed about 415 underclassmen every year. The rooms in Smith were fairly large and they even featured a walk-in closet. These rooms were broken into clusters consisting of two double rooms and sometimes a single room. Residents shared a bathroom with the other rooms in their cluster. Another key feature of Smith Hall that many residents really enjoyed was that every floor had a kitchen and lounge area, allowing residents to hang out and cook a meal.

Smith Hall had Newell's Deli on the first floor. This mini dining hall had sandwiches, wraps, paninis, soup, and burgers, as well as many quick graband-go convenience items. Newell's made it really easy for residents to grab something to eat on their way to class or just on those days when they didn't want to leave the building. These were all features of Smith Hall that made it a great place to live.

Courtney Pelot, a freshman who lived in Smith Hall, stated, "I wanted a really big room and closet to hold all of my stuff. Sometimes its too quiet, but the nice rooms make up for that and I really do love Smith."

Witte Hall

It's Game Time The enthusiasm in the dormitories on game days

Submitted by Emily Zall

was never under-estimated!

By Anna Reubish

Witte Hall was one of the oldest residence halls in the Southeast Village on campus and was rich with history and tradition. In 1964, Witte opened as the second dorm on the Southeast side of campus, only a year after Sellery was constructed. The dorm was named after Edwin E. Witte, who earned his Ph.D. and continued on to become a professor of economics here at the University of Wisconsin-Madison. He continued on to hold several governmental positions and greatly influenced Wisconsin legislation.

Witte residents took pride in becoming Badgers because the majority of the residents were either incoming freshman or transfer students. The Witte staff worked hard in the first weeks of school to help all of their residents get acquainted with the campus and their new lives in Madison. Welcome Week 2012 was filled with fun group events that many attended to meet new friends and to score some free pizza. As the year continued, the hall staff along with the WHO (Witte Hall Organization), a group of Witte resident representatives, planned many fun events and get-togethers to create the tight-knit community Witte was known for. When asked why she chose to live in Witte, freshman Paige Alexander said it was because, "Witte Hall is known for being one of the more social dorms on campus and I couldn't wait to meet a bunch of new people. Plus I really wanted to be located downtown." Located on West Johnson, Witte was in a prime location right next to East Campus Mall and just blocks away from State Street.

Witte Hall residents and staff alike took pride in their home and the community they have created. They really made it easy for freshman to feel comfortable and at home in a new city, just as all the other dorms on campus did.

On those extremely snowy days, the best option was to study inside the resident lounges in Witte.

The start of the 2012-13 school year signified a new era for hungry UW students. The Gordon Dining & Event Center opened in August, providing students with an array of food options. Whether a student was looking for a sit-down dinner, a quick snack on the run, or a microwaveable meal to keep in their dorm room freezer, Gordon offered much more than a traditional dining hall.

Students had the option to choose from thirteen different venues that served everything from salad to pasta to burritos. Most of the venues allowed students to customize just about every aspect of their meal on their own and even gave them the opportunity to have some foods made to order.

"Eggcetera" served breakfast foods like French toast, pancakes, eggs, potatoes, and included an omelet station were students could choose each ingredient and watch their eggs be made fresh to order. "Delicious" was a deli station where hungry UW students had the option to choose from pre-made sandwiches, Paninis, subs, wraps or craft their own from an array of breads, meats, cheeses, vegetables, condiments, and other ingredients. "Fired Up" offered freshly made burgers, grilled chicken and fried chicken sandwiches, and a condiment bar containing toppings such as lettuce, onions, tomatoes, and pickles. Another aspect of Gordon that appealed to many students was the "Bean & Creamery" which served coffee, smoothies, pre-made sandwiches, bakery items, ice cream, and other snacks. The "Bean & Creamery" was a great place for students who wanted a warm coffee before class or a small snack to hold them over until dinner.

A convenience store, "Flamingo Run," was a one-stop shop for students who were looking for a quick, microwaveable meal, late night snack, or toiletry item. The store offered a selection of frozen foods, cold drinks, nonperishable items, snacks, and many other products.

Freshman Alex Cramer liked the idea of having a convenience store in Gordon because it allowed him to pick up grocery items without actually having to go to the grocery store. "I like that 'Flamingo Run' has a wide variety of foods that can't be found anywhere else at Gordon and can be kept in my room to eat whenever I want. It is a really great feature to have," said Cramer. Other eating options at the Gordon Avenue Market included stations such as Great Greens, Buona Cucina, Grab and Go, 1849, Buckingham Bakery, Capital City Pizza, Global Kitchen, and Que Rico. The many food options offered at the Gordon Dining & Event Center really gave students the opportunity to tailor their meals in a way that proved dorm food could be enjoyed - rather than dreaded.

Newell's Deli

By Cassie Sterwald

The University of Wisconsin-Madison offered many different places for its students to eat around campus. Among them was Newell's Deli, located in Smith Hall. This deli featured a full sandwich station, soup, salad bar, main entrée, burgers, and ice cream, all of which made it a great place to eat a meal. It had a large seating area, so eating lunch or dinner with your group of friends was a simple venture. Newell's also featured a wide variety of drinks, chips, candy, fruit, and many other grab-and-go items. If you didn't have time to sit down and eat, you could always just grab something and be on your way. There were times when as a student, you simply didn't feel like walking over to a dining hall. Having Newell's inside a residence hall solved that problem and provided Smith's students with the convenience of a dining facility in the comfort of their dorm.

Outdoor Seating

Elizabeth Waters Dining Hall

Elizabeth Waters Hall was the most centrally-located dormitory on campus, but it was also very much separated from the rest of the Lakeshore community dorms. Also, due to its size, it was not too surprising that the dormitory had its own dining hall. And with Carson's Carryout officially closed for the 2012-2013 academic year, it was definitely the best option for Liz Waters's residents when it came for home-cooked nutrition.

The dining hall was reminiscent to those who remembered how Franks (now closed) operated – there were always a few main course items to choose from, as well as a variety of side dishes. Servers also made sure to offer vegan dishes and gluten-free options for those who were especially conscious about their diets.

The dining area offered indoor and outdoor seating – the latter offering a beautiful scenic view of Lake Mendota. If students didn't need to catch a bite to eat, they could use the seating areas to get some quick studying done or read a book.

Rheta's Dining Hall was located in Chadbourne Residential College, on the corner of Park Street and University Avenue. The calmest of the Southeast area dorms, Chadbourne was very much in the heart of campus. For this reason, Rheta's was the dining hall students most frequently stopped in for a study break or to get some food in between classes.

Rheta's differed from other dining halls such as Gordon Commons in its ambiance – it was a quieter place where one could stop by, buy a nice meal and chat with some friends or get some work done. However, this was not necessarily the place you went to sit for hours socializing amongst loud chatter - Rheta's was more of an escape. The dining hall was also unique in the fact that students actually raved about the food. The Mongolian stir-fry, along with many other meals, was famous across campus.

Because of the well-prepared and delicious food, Rheta's was not a cafeteria to just Chadbourne students. Dorm residents from Witte, Sellery, and the Lakeshore dorms were often found stopping by for a change of scenery and a tasty lunch. Similarly, the prime location of Rheta's attracted some students who had moved out of the dorms but needed a quick meal they could pay for with campus cash, as the hall had a reputation for short lines.

Though it may not have been as big or as fancy as the remolded Gordon Commons or the Four Lakes Market at Dejope, Rheta's held a treasured place in the hearts and bellies of a variety of UW students.

As if it were just like clockwork, construction began for the "New 32" dormitory just as Dejope Hall had been completed the prior year. Students, faculty and staff eagerly awaited to watch the building emerge during the entirety of the academic year. Construction of another dormitory was recommended after demand from first-year students and their families remained high even after Dejope Hall was completed.

In addition, the building had been temporarily named "New 32" because of its location on the old parking lot that had been called "Lot 32" by UW-Madison officials. This parking lot was located just south of Kronshage Hall and west of Slichter Hall at the end of Kronshage Drive. Originally the site of Frank's Dining Center, the dining hall closed for good at the end of May 2012 with the debut of the Four Lakes Market in Dejope Hall. The building was set to be formally named, opened and dedicated by August 2013. Upperclassmen lamented at the closing of Frank's because of the memories they held there, but knew that New 32 would provide opportunity and was an overall good investment for the university.

Excitement was plentiful for the new building, as the GreenHouse program - which focused on environmental awareness and allowed students to make use of guided seminars, field trips and discussions on important topics such as sustainability - had been previously housed in Cole Hall, but was being moved to New 32 come the 2013-2014 school year.

In addition, the way in which New 32 was being built was focused with GreenHouse's priorities in mind. Rooftop solar panels were installed to assist with hot water heating, electricity and water consumption monitors were located throughout the building, and an actual greenhouse was planned for the fourth floor - only the third dormitory of its kind in the world. A total of 172 residents were expected to be able to call New 32 their home.

Throughout the stages of construction, and the conjoining Frank Holt Center (which was replacing Holt Commons), interested individuals could view live webcams of the action online and photographs of the level at which the construction had progressed.

It wasn't slated to be a gigantic dormitory, but UW-Housing hoped that New 32 would spark new memories and friendship, as well as a sense of awareness for the movement towards self-sustainable construction.

09/01 - vs NORTHERN IOWA

BY ELIANA BERKOFF

After winning 14 straight season-opening games, the 2013 Wisconsin Badgers continued their streak of excellence with another win against Northern Iowa. Star senior running back and 2012 Heisman finalist Montee Ball rushed for 120 yards and junior receiver Jared Abbrederis caught two touchdowns, his second career 2-touchdown game. Junior Danny O'Brien, a transfer student from Maryland, threw for 219 yards and two touchdowns in his debut as starting guarterback for the Badgers. On the defensive side of the ball, senior linebacker Mike Taylor kept Northern Iowa at bay with 13 tackles. Another new face to the Badgers, Matt Canada, made his debut as the Badgers' new offensive coordinator, replacing fan-favorite Paul Chryst. The Badgers won their 15thstraight season-opener with a final score of 26-21 and looked to continue their dominance in 2013.

BY MAGGIE RASMUSSEN

The thirteenth-ranked Badgers suffered their first loss of the season against the Oregon State Beavers on the road in Corvallis, Oregon. The running game struggled throughout the game, with senior Montee Ball only rushing for 61 yards on 15 carries. The Badgers finished the game with only 35 rushing yards. On the other side of the ball, the Badger defense was able to hold the Beavers to only 10 points and kept the Badgers in the game. Red shirt junior linebacker Ethan Armstrong led the defense with 10 tackles. The Badgers did not score until the fourth quarter when junior transfer quarterback Danny O'Brien completed a touchdown pass to tight end Jacob Pedersen with 1:31 left in the game to put the Badgers within three. The touchdown, however, was too late; the Badgers were unsuccessful at recovering the pursuing onside kick and lost 10-7.

The Aggies managed to take control of the game early and jumped out to a 14-3 lead at halftime. In the second half, the Badgers made adjustments at quarterback and replaced junior transfer Danny O'Brien with red shirt freshman Joel Stave. Sparked by sophomore Kenzel Doe's 82-yard punt return touchdown and senior Montee Ball's 139 yards and another touchdown the Badgers bounced back to take a 16-14 lead. With time running out, the Aggies were forced to attempt a last-second field goal to escape Madison with a win. However, Utah State's kicker missed the 37-yard field goal to give Wisconsin its 18th consectuive home win.

In the parents' weekend game against UTEP, red shirt freshman quarterback Joel Stave proved himself in his first career start by throwing for 210 yards and a touchdown. Senior running back Montee Ball was taken out of the game early due to an apparent concussion he suffered during the touchdown that gave the Badgers a 9-6 lead. However, the Badgers bounced back with strong play from their other backfield players. Junior running back James White scored two touchdowns and red shirt freshman running back Melvin Gordon averaged 14 yards per carry. With three minutes left in the game, Red shirt freshman Jake Stengel's fumble recovery and Gordon's 26-yard rushing touchdown sealed the win for the Badgers with a final score of 37-19.

After going 3-1 in non-conference play and adjusting to new coaching changes, the Badgers were ready to begin their conference schedule on the road against #22 Nebraska. The ADIDAS "Unrivaled Game" featured both teams wearing alternative uniforms to showcase the sponsor's top athletic programs. Senior running back Montee Ball, who suffered a head injury the previous week, led the Badgers with 93 rushing yards and three touchdowns. Ball's efforts, along with red shirt senior linebacker Mike Taylor's team-leading 15 tackles, allowed the Badgers to grab an early 27-10 lead in front of a hostile Memorial Stadium crowd. However, a surge by the Huskers in the third quarter along with a crucial fumble by the Badgers at the end of the game allowed Nebraska to escape with a 27-30 win over the Badgers.

After a heartbreaking loss in their conference opener against Nebraska, Wisconsin got back on track at Camp Randall against a sinking Illinois team, winning 31-14. After struggling to find running room in their previous games, Wisconsin's run game showed signs of life, rushing for 173 yards. Meanwhile, head coach Bret Bielema continued to try to find an answer at the quarterback position. After switching between Stave and O'Brien the previous games, Bielema tried red shirt senior Curt Phillips for a single drive, who had three ACL surgeries and hadn't played since 2009. Illinois was not too concerned about defending the pass against Phillips, and stuffed the Badgers on their first and second down rushing attempts. Illinois then picked off Stave when he returned on the next play to attempt the third down conversion. Despite the interception, Stave continued to grow and ended the game going 16 of 25 for 254 yards and two touchdowns.

In a year full of broken records, the game against Purdue was no different as a retooled Badgers offensive line helped pave the path for senior running back Montee Ball to rush for 247 yards and three touchdowns. Ball set a Big Ten record for total touchdowns and vaulted him into number three on the all-time NCAA list. The Badgers steamrolled the Boilermakers for 645 total yards, including 467 rushing yards as the rainy weather limited the passing game. Junior running back James White added 124 yards rushing and a touchdown while junior tight end Jacob Pedersen caught a 21-yard touchdown pass from quarterback Joel Stave in the first quarter. Purdue played three different quarterbacks but could not find any success against an overwhelming Badger defense, and with the victory over their division rival, Wisconsin remained in the driver seat on the road to Indianapolis and the Big Ten Championship game.

The Minnesota Gophers arrived in Madison looking to reclaim Paul Bunyan's Axe, an award that the Badgers had held for the past eight years. Despite a tough battle early in the game, Wisconsin claimed the axe once again as they trounced the Gophers 38-13. Running backs Montee Ball and James White combined for a whopping 341 yards and five touchdowns on the ground as the Badgers' offense dominated the game. With red shirt freshman quarterback Joel Stave only completing 7 of 15 passes for 106 yards, Ball and White's contributions were vital. Along with forcing two turnovers on defense, the Badgers were able to advance offensively without turning the ball over once. Wisconsin's victory over Minnesota allowed the team to regain a top-25 ranking as they approached their toughest stretch of the season.

10/27 - vs MICHIGAN STATE

BY ALEX ROGERS

The 2012 Homecoming game pitted the Badgers against an always-tough Michigan State team. Both teams' defenses started strong and it was not until the second guarter that a 31-yard pass from Joel Stave to tight end Jacob Pedersen resulted in the first points of the game. Michigan State responded on the following drive with a field goal, but the Badgers would hold on to their 7-3 lead going into halftime. On the opening drive of the 3rd quarter, Stave was sacked and suffered a left shoulder injury, which ultimately ended his season. The Badgers would go on to score a field goal, but Michigan State managed to tie the game at the end of regulation to send the game into overtime. Michigan State deferred to Wisconsin at the start of overtime and the Badgers scored a field goal. Unfortunately, Michigan State scored a touchdown on their overtime possession, resulting in the first Badger loss at Camp Randall since 2009.

At Bloomington, the Badgers posted double-digit points in each quarter as they readily handed the Hoosiers a hometown loss and secured their trip to the Big Ten Championship Game. Key players in this game were senior running back Montee Ball and junior running back James White, who combined ran for over 300 yards. The entire Badgers offense pummeled the Hoosier defense for 564 yards on the ground; the most rushing yardage for a Big Ten team in any game since 1975. Backup quarterback Curt Phillips started the game after Stave went out with a shoulder injury against Michigan State. Although the passing game was largely non-existent, Phillips did find junior tight end Sam Arneson on a quick 2-yard score early in the game. This score gave the Badgers the momentum to run towards a 62-14 win.

Camp Randall was filled with red on November 17th as Wisconsin hosted the Ohio State Buckeyes in one of the biggest rivalry games in the Big Ten. Both teams came prepared to play a tough game; the Badgers defeated Indiana the week before and looked to continue their winning streak against an undefeated Ohio State team. Senior Montee Ball played his final game at Camp Randall looking to break the NCAA record for most rushing and receiving touchdowns in a collegiate career. Ball ran for 191 yards and scored one of the Badgers two touchdowns, falling short of breaking the record. Led by senior quarterback Curt Phillips, the Badgers fought back from an early deficit to tie the Buckeyes late in the fourth quarter to force overtime. Unfortunately, Ohio State defeated the Badgers in extended play, but with the Buckeyes under probation, the Badgers still had an opportunity to go to the Big Ten Championship game.

BY GREGORY LEHNER

On a cold afternoon in University Park, Pa., history was made. A quick toss from quarterback Curt Phillips, and a 17-yard run on the outside right – red shirt sophomore full back Derek Watt would supply a key block – and senior running back Montee Ball would score his 79th career touchdown. Happiness ensued. Ball was immediately swarmed by his teammates. Ball's touchdown and his 79th career score broke the collegiate record for most touchdowns scored by any one player in NCAA history. Unfortunately, the Badgers did not leave with a victory, as fortune handed the Badgers another loss in overtime to finish the regular season. The Nittany Lion's defense held Wisconsin to only 5 of 16 third down conversions and 2 of 4 red-zone conversions. However, the match was already set for Indianapolis, and the Badgers moved forward to prep for the larger prize: a trip to Pasadena.

2012 BIG TEN CHAMPIONSHIP

Wisconsin wreaked havoc on Nebraska; domination sent Badgers back to Pasadena.

By Derek Shimeck

Ending the regular season with a 7-5 record, the Badgers found themselves traveling to Indianapolis for the second annual Big Ten Conference Championship game to take on #12 Nebraska. Ohio State was crowned the Leaders Division Champion for the 2012 season and Penn State ended the year with a better conference record, but postseason bans on both schools allowed third-place Wisconsin to play for a third-consecutive Big Ten Title, and a chance to travel to Pasadena and play in the Rose Bowl.

The Badgers were considered the underdogs after losing their last three of four games in overtime, and Nebraska was coming off of six straight wins. But by the time the end of the game rolled around, the Badgers were victorious in a 70-31 trouncing of the Cornhuskers.

Offensive coordinator Matt Canada opened up the playbook and the Badgers unleashed their three star running backs on the Nebraska defense. Red shirt freshman Melvin Gordon led the Badgers with 216 yards and one touchdown, senior Montee Ball added three touchdowns plus a stellar 202 yards, and junior James White contributed with 109 yards and four touchdowns. It was the first time Wisconsin had two 200-yard rushers in a single game, and the 70 points tallied on the Huskers tied the record for most points in a conference championship game.

Montee Ball, who broke the all-time NCAA touchdown record the previous week, also broke the all-time NCAA rushing touchdown record with a spectacular dive in the second quarter. He finished the game with 76 total touchdowns in his career. Even though many doubted the Badgers' ability to make it to Pasadena after a regular season with many heartbreakers, Wisconsin once again punched their ticket to the Rose Bowl for the third-consecutive year - a first in school history.

THIRD TIME IS THE CHARM?

Wisconsin fails to win third-straight Rose Bowl against Stanford under Alvarez, 14-20.

BY CHRISTIAN BLATNER

A Wisconsin football season characterized by countless ups and downs was capped on January 1st, 2013, with another disappointing Rose Bowl defeat. In the 2013 edition, the Badgers fell to the hands of the No. 8 ranked Stanford Cardinal.

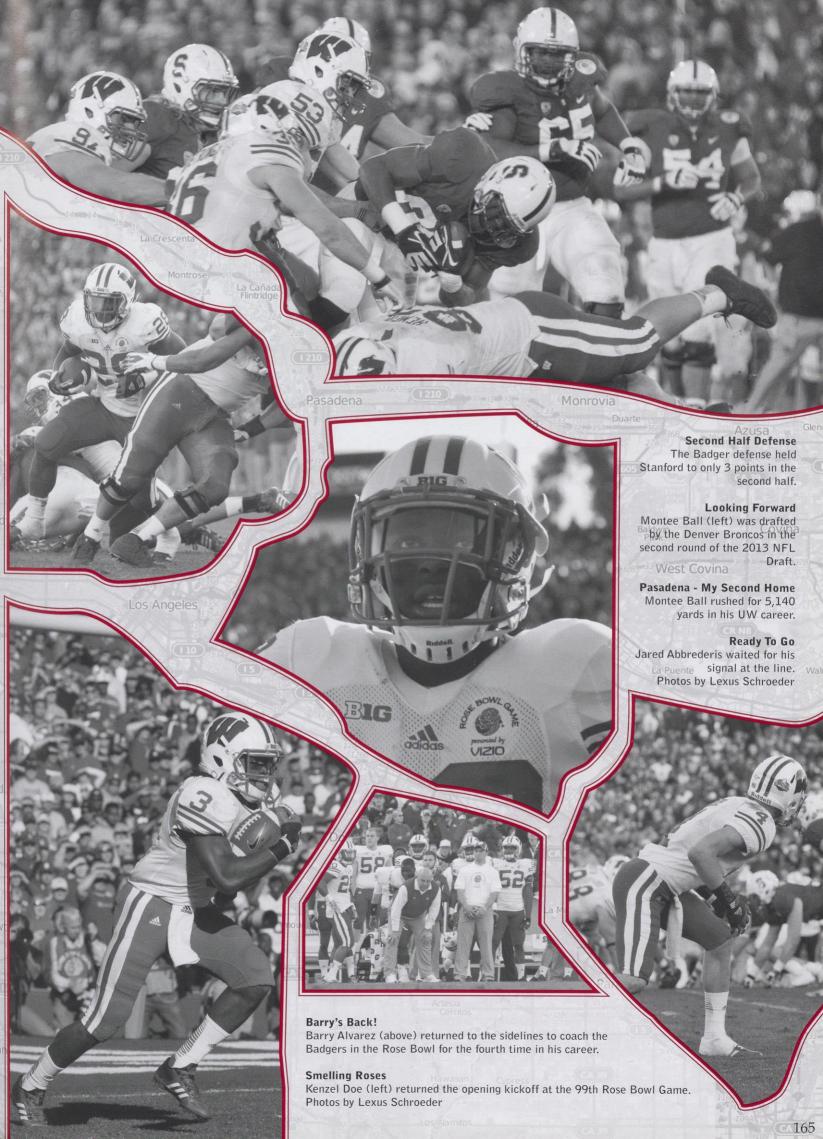

The unexpected departure of Bret Bielema in the days following a decisive Big Ten Championship victory sent a shock through Madison and left Wisconsin without a head coach as the team prepared to get a victory that had evaded them the previous two years. Bielema's success at the helm of the Wisconsin football program for seven seasons granted him an opportunity to move to the SEC, the premiere football powerhouse conference, as the new head coach of the Arkansas Razorbacks. Given another shot to play in Pasadena, UW named athletic director and experienced Rose Bowl victor, Barry Alvarez, interim head coach.

The hype leading up to the Rose Bowl previewed a matchup of explosive running games and rock solid defenses. It was clear that the clash between the Badgers and Cardinal would be a physical one. The atmosphere surrounding the game was electric. Spectators packed the streets of Pasadena in the early morning hours to watch the world-famous Rose Parade. As 2 o'clock approached, despite the difficulty of differentiating Stanford red from Wisconsin red, it was clear that thousands of dedicated UW fans had made the trip to Southern California in hope of witnessing the Badgers' first Rose Bowl victory in thirteen years.

The crowd erupted as the national anthem echoed and a B-2 stealth bomber made its traditional flyover. A noticeably fired up Wisconsin squad was quickly silenced in the first quarter as Stanford jumped out to a 14-0 lead with 16-yard and 3-yard runs from sophomore running back Kelsey Young and senior running back Stepfan Taylor, respectively. The Badgers managed to stop the bleeding and clawed their way back into the game in the second quarter with touchdowns from senior running back Montee Ball and red shirt senior wide receiver Jared Abbrederis. The Cardinals added a field goal in the second quarter and Wisconsin headed into halftime in a comfortable position, trailing by only three points.

The physicality of the second half kept the game neck-and-neck until the final whistle. Although the Badger defense stood strong for the second half, allowing only one field goal, they were unable to capitalize on the offensive side. Numerous dropped balls, five punts, and an interception on a potential game-winning drive prevented Wisconsin from mounting a comeback. The Cardinal defeated the Badgers by a final score of 20-14, marking the third straight Rose Bowl that Wisconsin had lost by a touchdown or less.

MEN'S BASKETBALL

Fantastic wins against ranked teams made for an exciting regular season.

By DEREK SHIMECK

The Badger Men's Basketball team truly had a historic season in 2012.

After starting point guard and on-court leader Josh Gasser suffered a torn ACL, thus ending his season before it even began, the future of the team was uncertain. The Big Ten had one of its strongest years, meaning no game would be easy. However, the Badgers would not give in. Freshman point guard Traevon Jackson stepped in as the new point guard, and the team found a rhythm which they would need to be successful in such a difficult conference.

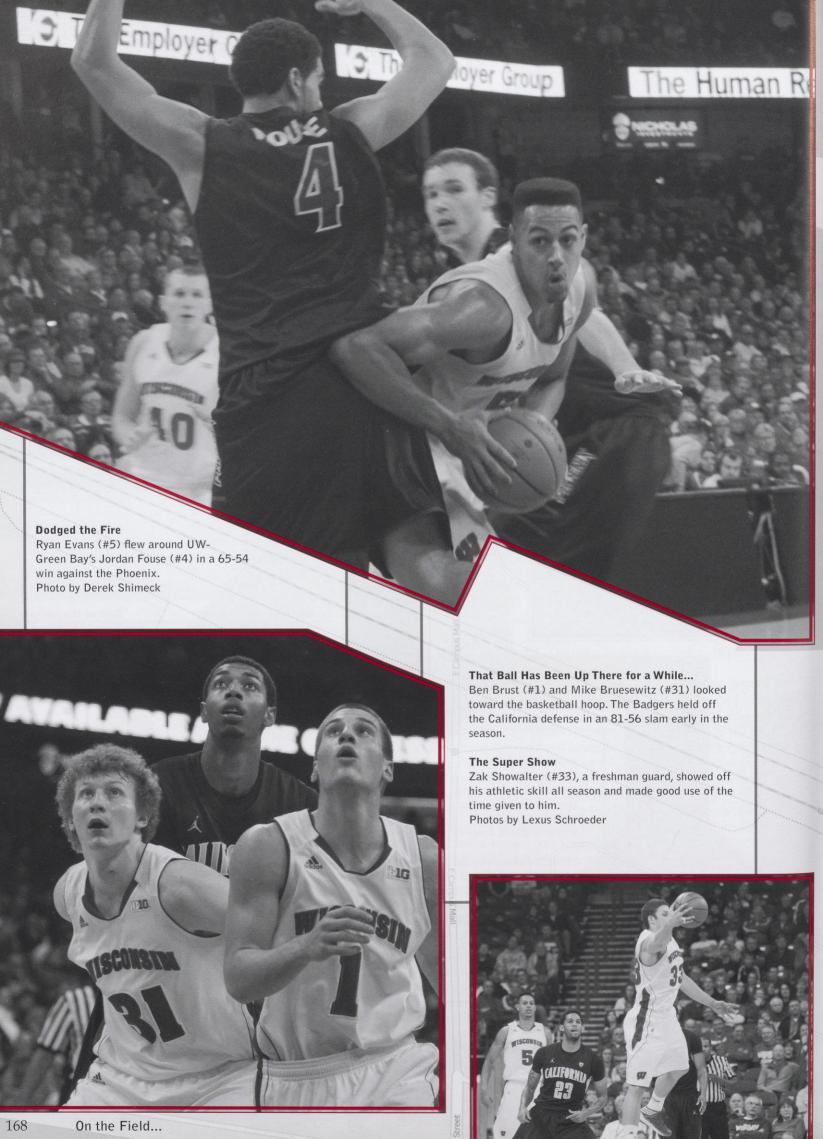

They beat the No. 2 Indiana Hoosiers on the road in a great upset, proving they could play with the best teams in the country. They also had an amazing home victory against No. 3 Michigan, who would reach the National Championship. The game was a thrilling contest, brought into overtime after Ben Brust made a buzzer-beating half-court shot to tie the game at the end of regulation. After a disappointing senior day loss to the Penn State Nittany Lions, the Badgers still had something to prove. They made a great run in the Big Ten Tournament, beating Michigan and Indiana once again to reach the championship game. Rvan Evans and Traevon Jackson made the all-tournament team for their contributions. They fell to the Ohio State Buckeyes in a hard-fought championship game, making it further than they had in years. Unfortunately, this run would not continue through the NCAA. The Badgers suffered a heartbreaking loss to Ole Miss in their first tournament game, ending their season.

The team featured five seniors who left a legacy far beyond their playing years. Jared Berggren was named a finalist for the Naismith award, and he left as the school's all-time leader in blocks, totaling 144 in his career. He was named to the All-Big Ten Second team, as well as the All-Big Ten Defensive Team. Mike Bruesewitz continued to play this season with the fiery passion he's had since his freshman year fighting through injuries, showing his great tenacity. Ryan Evans finished out his senior season strong by having a great Big Ten Tournament. He also left as the leader in career games played with 138, showing his impact since his freshman year. Dan Fahey and J.D. Wise, two walk-ons, were great additions to the program, practicing harder and helping to make the Badger bench a lively and enthusiastic support system for their teammates on the floor.

This season also saw a breakout freshman star in Sam Dekker. He averaged 9.6 points per game, and had a career high 19 points against Nebraska. He was named to the All-Big Ten Honorable Mention team along with Ben Brust. Dekker was also selected as part of the All-Big Ten Freshman Team. Bo Ryan was named Big Ten Coach of the Year for the third time, honoring his outstanding coaching this season that led the Badgers to accomplish much more than many expected at the beginning of the season. The team finished with 23 wins, and a school-record four wins over top ten teams.

WOMEN'S BASKETBALL

A young Badger squad faced and overcame tough challenges early in the season.

By DEREK SHIMECK

The 2012-2013 Wisconsin Women's Basketball team saw second-year head coach Bobbie Kelsey coaching a fairly young team as Tiera Stephen was the only senior on the floor due to fellow senior Taylor Wurtz, who took a medical red shirt because of back troubles. The Badgers had to rely on the leadership of Stephen, who led the team in assists and steals, and younger talent such as freshman Nicole Bauman, sophomore Jacki Gulczynski, and juniors Morgan Paige and Cassie Rochel. This young team had success early on and went 8-5 in non-conference play, but the Big Ten proved to be tough and the Badgers would drop their first five conference games.

The Badgers ended their conference-game losing streak with a dominating 68-49 win over Ohio State at the Kohl Center. It marked the first time in twelve years that the Badgers had defeated the Buckeyes. The Badgers followed up by defeating 7th-ranked Penn State 63-61 behind junior Morgan Paige's career-high 33 points and a quick rebound and put-back bucket by junior Cassie Rochel with seven seconds remaining. The win snapped Penn State's 11-game winning streak and gave the Badgers confidence to move forward and defeat Indiana later in the season. Tough losses and missed opportunities unfortunately plagued the Badgers, though, and the season did not end as planned as Nebraska spoiled senior night for Wisconsin.

Even with a rough regular season, Wisconsin earned an 11th seed in the 2013 Big Ten Tournament and faced 6th-seeded Illinois in the first round. The Badgers would need every single bucket in a hard-fought game and it wasn't until junior Morgan Paige hit a pair of game-winning free throws that the Badgers sealed the 58-57 win over Illinois and advanced to the second round. Sadly, the Badgers would end their push to the Big Ten championship game in the second round against Purdue, coming up short with a score of 74-62.

With the season over, it was time to look forward to next year. Head coach Bobbie Kelsey was selected as one of three court coaches for the 2013 USA Basketball Women's U19 World Championship Team. And the experiences the young players received in 2012-2013 showed that the Badgers would improve in the following season.

Rebounding from a subpar campaign the previous year, the Wisconsin men's hockey team was back to its old ways in 2012-'13 as the team recorded its third twenty-win season in four years.

Plagued by the 10-game suspension of highly-touted freshman forward Nic Kerdiles, the Badgers began the year 2-7-2, tallying their only victories at home against the U.S. Under-18 Team and at Minnesota-Duluth. The team lost by more than two goals just once during the eleven-game stretch; they were shut out 3-0 by Colorado College on November 3rd. Kerdiles' return to the ice in a late November series at Denver brought new hope for a Wisconsin squad looking to turn its season around, and the Badgers did just that. UW posted an 8-0-3 record over its next eleven games as the team regained a much-needed sense of confidence moving into the second half of the season.

Entering the last weekend of regular season play, the Badgers hosted St. Cloud State and were presented with the opportunity to finish anywhere from first to seventh place in the conference standings. Wisconsin split the two-game series earning the No. 4 seed for the conference tournament. After plowing through Minnesota-Duluth, Minnesota State and St. Cloud State, UW reached the WCHA Championship Game for the nineteenth time. The Badgers defeated Colorado College 3-2 and claimed their first Broadmoor Trophy in over a decade.

After earning an automatic bid to the NCAA tournament, fourth-seeded Wisconsin travelled to Manchester, N.H. to face off against top-seeded UMass-Lowell in a Northeast regional matchup. UW embodied its underdog persona and was even ESPN analyst Barry Melrose's pick to win the national title. Unfortunately, the River Hawks sent Wisconsin home packing sooner than expected defeating the Badgers 6-1 and snapping a six-game win streak, their second longest of the season. Despite a disappointing end to their season, Wisconsin head coach Mike Eaves praised the team's ability to fight until the end.

The team's success as a whole played host to many impressive individual season performances as well. Junior forward Michael Mersch, Wisconsin's leader in goals (23) and points (36), was named the Most Valuable Player. Other notable award winners included senior forward Ryan Little (Scholastic Award and Most Competitive Player), freshman defenseman Kevin Schulze (Most Consistent Player) and junior forward Jefferson Dahl (Most Improved Player).

The resiliency of the Badgers characterized a young squad that only saw three players graduate and looked to carry their success into a newly-formed Big Ten men's hockey conference the following year.

HOCKEY HIGHLIGHTS...

The UW Men's Hockey team took to Chicago's Soldier Field for the Hockey City Classic.

By Christian Blatner

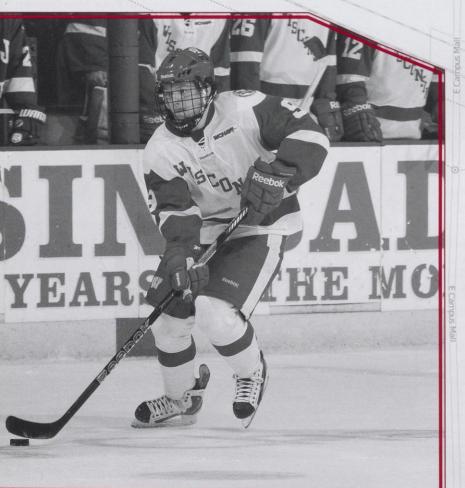

The Wisconsin men's hockey team went over to the pond February 17 in front of 52,051 fans to battle the nationally-ranked No. 2 Minnesota Gophers in the Office-Max Hockey City Classic at Soldier Field in Chicago, III. The event featured a double-header of top-notch competition as No. 12 Notre Dame narrowly defeated No. 3 Miami (0H) 2-1 in a tight, physical first game. The No. 18-ranked Badgers had the edge in the second game, as they upset the Gophers 3-2 in a match that went right down to the wire.

Braving the frigid cold weather of the Windy City, both teams played a scoreless first period. Minnesota held a commanding lead in shots after twenty minutes but UW sophomore goalie Joel Rumpel countered with an impressive 15 saves.

The second period presented different results for the Badgers though as they lit the rink on fire for three unanswered goals. Freshman defenseman Kevin Schulze broke the stalemate at the 13:03 mark with a shot from the blue line that found its way past the pads of Minnesota's freshman goalie Adam Wilcox. Schulze's goal triggered a scoring frenzy as Wisconsin tallied two more goals in just over three minutes. Senior forward and captain John Ramage netted the game's second goal after his quick shot deflected off a Minnesota defenseman and passed by Wilcox. Minutes later, junior forward Sean Little muscled a rebound across the goal line to put the Badgers up 3-0.

Minnesota scored with 2:36 left in the third period and again a minute and 18 seconds later but their rally caps were just a little too late as the Badgers' defense held strong to capture their only win of the season against their bitterest of rivals.

Nine different Badgers tallied a point in the victory, which brought the team within just four points of first place in the WCHA.

Debut of LaBahn Arena helped Badgers reach the WCHA Final Face-Off in successful season.

By Michael Gan

After ending the 2011-2012 season as the #2 ranked team in the nation, the Women's Hockey team was determined to continue the strong tradition here at the university, led by returning Patty Kazmaier Award winner Brianna Decker (Sr). The nation's leading scorer last season, Decker was chosen as team captain - and along with the nation's leader in saves Alex Rigsby, they were determined to bring home another championship title.

After splitting their season opener against Minnesota State, the Badgers bounced back and crushed Lindenwood 7-2 and 9-1. Despite this strong showing, the team was shut out in a sweep against Minnesota-Duluth the following week, the first time since 2001 that the team had been shut out in back-to-back games. The struggles continued in the debut of LaBahn Arena, as the Badgers were shut out for the third straight game before winning their second match against Bemidji State. The Badgers had a new house, and soon began to make it their home, as they swept New Hampshire and Minnesota State at home, including two straight shutouts. The team continued their dominance as they scored a pair of short-handed goals to defeat Ohio State before sweeping St. Cloud State; however they fell to #1 Minnesota in both their matches. Returning to LaBahn, Wisconsin managed to record an upset of North Dakota, sweeping them and putting the Badgers within one point of second place in the WCHA.

As the new year started, Captain Brianna Decker led the team to victory against Ohio State, having a hand in three of the four goals scored. The home winning streak was extended to eleven as they swept the Buckeyes; however, they were held scoreless away against North Dakota before splitting the series thanks to a late goal by Madison Packer. After defeating St. Cloud State, which gave head coach Mark Johnson his 200th WCHA victory, the Badgers home streak was shattered by the still-undefeated Gophers, who swept the Badgers and set a new NCAA record with a win streak of 33 games. Despite this defeat, the Badgers fought on, and secured home ice for the first round of WCHA playoffs with another sweep of Minnesota-Duluth. With the home ice advantage, the Badgers pushed past St. Cloud State to advance before losing to North Dakota to end their season.

With a final record of 23-10-2, the Badgers looked to build on their success and continue to improve for the next season. Decker and Rigsby earned All-American honors and set multiple records during the season, with Rigsby earning four WCHA Player of the Week honors. Despite losing leading scorer and team captain Brianna Decker, the team looked to be in a good place for the next season.

VOLLEYBALL

A promising future gave the Badgers hope after an up-and-down season.

By Cassandra Caswell

Only finishing eighth in the Big Ten Conference last season, the Badgers turned heads in 2012's volleyball season with early wins against coastal teams. However, their hopes of reaching the championships were stifled when they reached their conference games. While the players performed well, they were not able to overcome many of their conference opponents and in the end finished with a 5-15 Big Ten record for the season. Despite the lackluster appearance of the season, there were many highlights that could be looked on fondly as possibilities of what could happen for their future.

One of the biggest highlights of the season was the rematch with Illinois midway through the season. Illinois had snapped the Badgers twelve-game winning streak at the beginning of conference play and the women looked to prove that they had what it took to beat the then-ranked No. 20 Illinois. The win over Halloween weekend marked the first time in ten games the Badgers were able to overcome Illinois and pull out a win.

Even with this batch of good news, the Badgers ended the season facing uncertainty as head coach Pete

Waite stepped down after 14 years — who at the time was the longest-tenured volleyball coach in Wisconsin history. The search for a new coach took just over a month between when Waite's resignation was announced and the name of the new coach was released. Kelly Sheffield, who had been head coach of University of Dayton's volleyball team for five years, became the 10th head coach for Wisconsin Volleyball and was excited to be joining the program. He brought along one of his assistant coaches from Dayton, Brittany Dildine, as an on-court assistant and recruiting coordinator.

While the Badgers' hopes of the NCAA championships were ended with tough losses to both Purdue and Minnesota, they looked to the future with those hopes firmly in place for the 2013 season with the new coaching staff, five returning starters, twelve letter winners, and promising new recruits.

MEN'S SOCCER

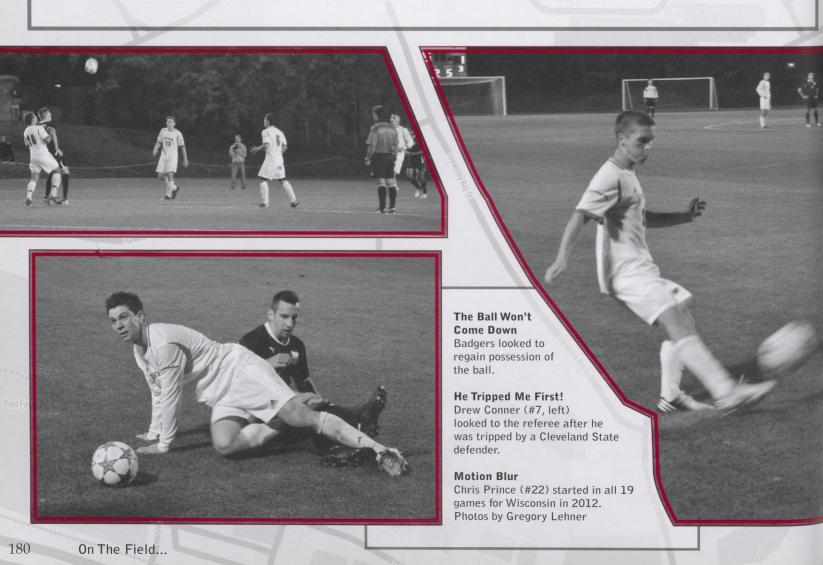

Fall season of overtime draws, losses and leads left soccer team hopeful by spring.

By MICHAEL GAN

The Men's soccer team entered the 2012 season with high hopes, however little recognition, as they were picked to finish sixth in the conference. Opening the fall season on the road, the team started sluggishly before mounting a four goal comeback in the last 15 minutes against the Memphis Tigers and roar to a 4-3 victory. After nearly overcoming a third deficit against #25 Washington, the Badgers settled for a tie against Portland and then lost their home opener against FIU. Determined to bounce back from the defeat, the Badgers played #13 Georgetown to a draw. The new four-back formation provided a strong defensive effort that would prevail through the rest of the season. The following match gave the Badgers their first shutout of the season, fighting Western Illinois into a scoreless tie despite committing 16 fouls and allowing seven corner kicks. Refusing to accept another tie, the Men's team built off their defensive success and rolled IUPUI in a 2-0 victory, bringing their record to 2-2-3 as the defense continued to impress, having only allowed one goal through three consecutive games.

With Big Ten play beginning, the Badgers fought hard however dropped their opener against Penn State as a late goal ended their shutout streak. The offense continued to struggle, with nine shots to the 23 shots by Penn State, however the defense continued to play a spectacular game, allowing only one goal. The following week saw the Badgers lose in overtime to #10 Marquette, a 2-1 affair before the Badgers finally won their first home victory against Cleveland State. Fighting hard against #11 Indiana, the Badgers offense struggled to find the net and lost the match 2-0, the first loss by Coach Trask to the Hoosiers. The Badgers finally ended their scoreless streak against Big Ten opponents against Michigan, giving Wisconsin their first Big Ten victory before claiming its first win against Green Bay since 2008, scoring three goals while holding the Phoenix scoreless. After losing to Michigan State and winning against UMKC, the Badger defense continued to be a force to be reckoned with, battling both Ohio State and Northwestern to scoreless ties to end the regular season.

Losing to Michigan in the Big Ten tournament ended the season for the Badgers, leaving them with a 6-8-5 record. Defender A.J. Cochran earned All Big Ten honors, while Adam Lauko and Drew Conner were named to the All Big Ten Freshmen Team. Captain Paul Yonga was also named to the Big Ten all-tournament team, and despite the offensive struggles of the Wisconsin Badgers, the team looked to the future and was determined to build upon their defensive success and promising freshmen.

Women's Soccer

Vengeful Walls, Badger women reached NCAA Tournament for third time in four years.

By Christian Blatner

The Wisconsin women's soccer team finished their non-conference season with a 6-2 record before heading into conference play, while posting a key early season victory over a then-No. 12 ranked Notre Dame squad. Despite this impressive start to the season, the Badgers went on to drop four of their first six conference games - forcing the team into an unfavorable position in the Big Ten standings.

Three of Wisconsin's first four conference losses were by just one goal, signifying that the team would need more of an offensive spark as they moved on in conference play. Following the team's shaky Big Ten start, Wisconsin got back on track with a confidence-boosting win over non-conference opponent UW-Green Bay. The Badgers began the second half of conference matches at home with a set of weekend games versus Northwestern and Illinois. UW found the offensive spark they needed as Cara Walls netted two goals in a 2-0 defeat of Northwestern on Friday and another on Saturday as they beat Illinois 2-1 in double-overtime. Five of Walls' ten goals came in Wisconsin's final six regular season matches, propelling the team to win four of their last five and earning the No. 6 seed in the Big Ten Tournament.

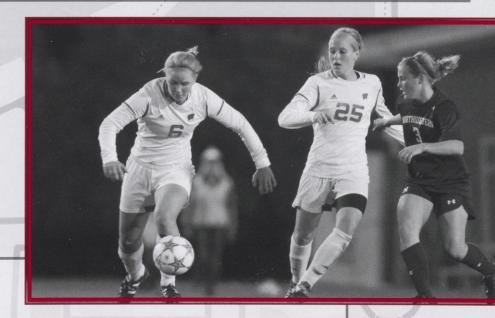

The Badgers came up short against Michigan in the first round of the tournament and were forced to put the fate of their NCAA Tournament hopes in the hands of the selection committee. UW earned an at-large bid and was matched up against No. 2 UCLA in the first round. The team fell to UCLA on August 31st, but looked to avenge their early season loss with an upset over a talented Bruins team. Unfortunately the Badgers were unable to record any shots in the match while surrendering a whopping eighteen to UCLA - leading to a narrow 1-0 defeat.

Despite a disappointing end to their season, Wisconsin reached the NCAA tournament for the third time in the past four years and tallied 12 wins for the 17th time in the team's 32-year history. The Badgers graduated seven seniors from the roster and looked to build on the season's successes with a deeper run in 2013's NCAA tournament.

Forward Cara Walls and midfielder Monica Lam-Feist were named to the All-Big Ten Second Team, forward Lindsey Holmes, midfielder Kinley McNicoll and defenseman Lexi Peterson were named to the Big Ten All-Freshman Team, and sophomore defenseman Carly Vogel was a Big Ten Sportsmanship Award Honoree.

Wisconsin's most-improved competitive sport team sent three to the NCAA Tournament.

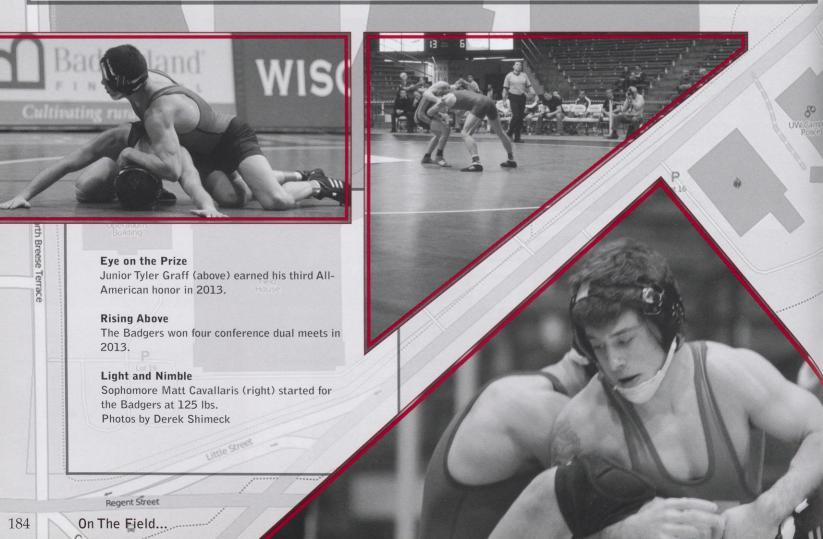

By Michael Gan

After a disappointing 2011-2012 season where the team went winless in conference play, the Badgers looked to rebuild for the 2012-2013 season. Led by red shirt junior Tyler Graff, the team started the season off right, opening with a win over #25 Hofstra. After dropping their next match against Old Dominion, the Badgers rebounded against Northern Iowa, holding off a rally to secure their second victory. At the Cliff Kleen Invite, the team managed a 14th place finish, with a third place finish by Tyler Graff (133lbs), Connor Medbery (Hwt) at fifth place, Tom Kelliher (133lbs) at eighth place, and Scott Liegel (174lbs) at sixth place. Following this strong showing, the Badgers, led by an upset victory from Medbery, defeated Michigan State to snap an eight-game conference losing streak and their first Big Ten win since the 2010-2011 season. Determined to build on their success, the Badgers managed an upset of #9 Nebraska at Lincoln, and followed up with three third place finishes in the Midlands Championship by Graff (133lbs), Isaac Jordan (157lbs), and Medbery (Hwt).

With their momentum and confidence building, the Badgers came back from being down six points against #11 Michigan to secure the upset victory and their third straight victory over Big Ten opponents. The team looked to continue their success, however fell short against #1 Penn State and #6 Ohio State before rebounding against Indiana. The ranked team wins didn't last, though, as the Badgers dropped their final two matches against Purdue and Minnesota. In addition, Medbery suffered his first loss against Minnesota's defending heavyweight champion Tony Nelson.

With a final regular season record of 7-6 (4-4), the Badgers had improved from the previous year, however still had plenty of room to grow. After getting swept at the NWCA National Duels, four Badgers placed in the Big Ten tournament, while Connor Medbery won 2013 Big Ten Freshmen of the Year honors. Three Badgers headed to the NCAA Tournament as well; Tyler Graff won his third All-American honor in three years, and secured a third place finish after losing in overtime to Iowa's Ramos in second sudden victory period in the semi-finals. Meanwhile, Jackson Hein (197lbs) and Connor Medbery (Hwt) failed to place, as their opponents took advantage of their inexperience in the tournament. Despite a somewhat disappointing end to a promising start, the core of the team was returning the following year, and it promised to be another unforgettable ride.

SOFTBALL

Big Ten Champions - record number of wins - Badgers believed and achieved!

By Christian Blatner

The Wisconsin softball team pieced together the program's best season in school history in 2013. Thanks to a hot start, winning 12 out of their first 13 games, the Badgers gained tremendous confidence that propelled them to their first Big Ten Championship and first NCAA Tournament berth since 2005. With their shoes tied and their helmets tightly secured, it was one unforgettable season for UW.

A decisive 4-0 win against No. 16 Stanford and a hard-fought 5-3 loss to No. 8 California confirmed that Wisconsin was not a team to be overlooked. The team's early success was especially remarkable granted that the drawnout winter forced Badgers to practice indoors until mid-April. Wisconsin took a ten-game win streak into conference play as they travelled to Champaign, Ill. for a three-game series. The Badgers took all three games with ease.

Despite a couple losses to Iowa and Minnesota early on in conference play, Wisconsin was not discouraged and won 10 out of their last 14 games. The team was given the fourth seed entering the Big Ten Tournament. Silently, they defeated Northwestern 3-1 in the first round, setting the stage for a match-up against No. 6 Michigan in the second round. Behind an explosive offensive performance, the Badgers routed the Wolverines 9-3.

Wisconsin made up for their two regular season losses to Minnesota, defeating the Gophers 9-3 and capturing the Big Ten Championship trophy. The Badgers then travelled to Eugene, Oregon and dropped their first NCAA tournament game to North Carolina - forcing the team to the brink of elimination. After defeating Brigham Young, Wisconsin had another chance to play the Tar Heels. The Badgers made up for their first round loss and won 6-2. Unfortunately, Wisconsin's season came to a disappointing end losing 3-0 to No. 3 Oregon.

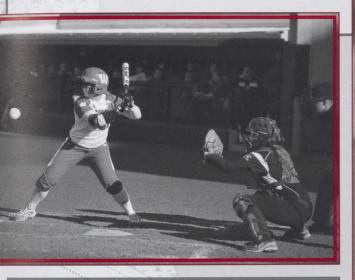

It was a season for the record books for the Badgers - they tallied 44 wins, which was the most in school history. Senior pitcher Cassandra Darrah, who was awarded the Female Athlete of the Year, led the team with 27 wins and a 1.82 ERA.

ROWING

Program remained one of the best in the nation and returned to NCAA Championship.

By DEREK SHIMECK

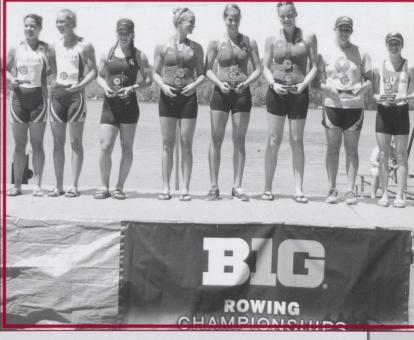

The cold winter in Madison didn't crush the Badgers spirit as all of the Wisconsin teams found success throughout the year. On the Charles River in Boston, the Men's team defended their title to the Cochrane Cup, which was awarded each year to the winner of MIT, Wisconsin, and Dartmouth. The Badgers followed up by taking third place at the Eastern Sprints and then traveled to California to compete in the IRA National Championships. The lightweight four had the best finish for the Badgers, taking second place and continuing the nine-year streak of placing on the podium in at least one event at nationals.

The women's rowing team had some early growing pains, but quickly improved and won five of six races against Minnesota and Michigan State at the Big Ten double dual on Lake Mendota. The success was recognized by the conference as the varsity four rowers of Nicole Hettmann, Kaitlin Dunn, Steph Malchine, Rachel Gendreau and coxswain Marie Hebert earned back-to-back Big Ten Boat of the Week titles, the first time in program history a boat received back-to-back honors. Wisconsin took third at the Big Ten Championships and earned an at-large bid to the NCAA Championships in Indianapolis. Competing against other teams and challenging weather, the varsity four finished in second place while the varsity eight and second varsity eight finished in fourth and the Badgers finished 16th overall at Nationals.

For the women's lightweight team, an early loss to Princeton in a dual meet to open the season was quickly forgotten as the varsity eight, novice eight, and second varsity eight all took first place finishes at the Knecht Cup in New Jersey. The early success for the women's lightweight team ended up being an appetizer to an even better main course at the IRA National Championships in June. The Badgers varsity four were able to avenge an earlier season loss against Harvard-Radcliffe and won their third consecutive national title. The women's lightweight varsity eight finished third in nationals with a time of 6:55.095. The amazing finishes in 2013 marked the 17th-straight year that the Badgers had finished in the top five in nationals.

Men's & Women's Golf

Women score best finish in NCAA Championship ever; men looked to improve for 2014.

By Gregory Lehner

Although quite lob-sided in comparison with one another, the Men's and Women's Golf programs of 2013 would be remembered for individual accomplishments, as well as some team accomplishments. The University Ridge Golf Course, located southwest of campus near Verona, Wis. remained the Badgers' home turf.

The men's team spent most of the season trying to recapture the energy and prowess that existed last season, but could not quite muster that feat. Led by golfer Thomas O'Bryan, who finished with the best score for the team on four separate occasions, the men did place fifth at the D.A. Weibring Intercollegiate, out of 15 teams. After a few early-on finishes in the Top 10, the team fell into a Spring semester slump and unfortunately finished 12th at the Big Ten Championship. Illinois took home the title for the fifth-straight year in a row.

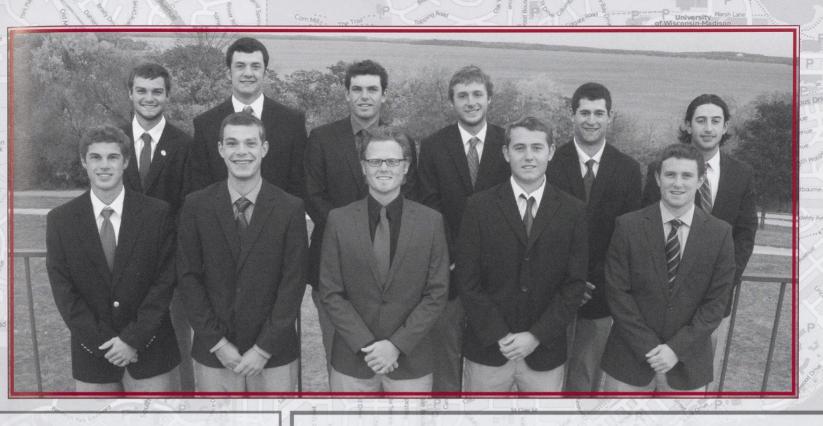

Despite the outcome, the Badgers would surely miss O'Bryan, who was nominated as a UW athlete of the year, and Chris Meyer - who also led the team in four tournaments and was second on the team in scoring. The men also had their smart caps on - they were given the top honor in having the highest grade point average out of all men's sport teams on campus.

The women, alternatively, had an exciting year that took them to Athens, Georgia late in May to compete in the NCAA Division I Women's Golf Championship. Together, the girls finished 23rd — which was their best showing at the championship ever, beating out their only other trek of 24th place in 2003. Kris Yoo tied for 42nd with an 11-over-par score after four rounds, leading the Badger women.

Senior Lindsay Danielson also captured he first career win at the Hoosier Fall Invitational. Along with Danielson's accomplishment, the team also took home the title after an Indiana player signed off on an incorrect scorecard and gave Wisconsin the lead by two strokes. This marked their first tournament title since 2011. Top 30 finishes would also be seen from Yoo, Aaren Ziegler and Alexis Nelson.

Head Coach Michael Burcin and the rest of the men's golf team hoped to improve on the year's finish in 2014, and that enforcing competitiveness and growth would be top-priority on the agenda. "We have set some standards where, if you don't finish in the top 25, you're probably going to have to qualify unless you get picked. So just trying to raise expectations of what's expected around here," said Coach Burcin.

TENNIS

The men finished with a respectable 13-12 record while the women struggled at 5-18.

By Maggie Rasmussen

The Badger Men's Tennis team struggled a bit this year - finishing the season with a 13-12 overall record and were 4-7 in conference play. They did see some bright moments throughout the season, thankfully. For starters, the team recorded three upsets in the Big Ten over Minnesota, Purdue and Nebraska. Senior Alexander Kostanov ended his career with the Badgers as the Most Valuable Player of the team. He led the team with a 14-8 singles record, emphasized with an impressive 11-0 start to the season. In doubles, he earned a #71 national ranking with his partner, senior Billy Bertha. Two freshmen, Oskar Wikberg and Jakhongir Jalalov, led the team in doubles, finishing with a 10-5 record. Wikberg was awarded Hardest Worker by his teammates, while Jalalov received the Newcomer of the Year award. The team had a promising future with these two freshmen as they both planned on continuing their career with Wisconsin.

The young women's tennis team had a rough year, mostly because they had to battle through many challenges, including injuries. Sophomore Nova Patel suffered an injury that would place her on the sidelines for the entire season. This left the team with only one upperclassman, senior Hannah Berner, who struggled with an injury of her own, causing her to miss two matches. They ended the season with a 5-18 overall record and a 3-8 record in conference.

However, they were able to see a lot of potential for the years to come. Lone senior Berner led the team as number one in singles and doubles. She was able to take down ranked opponents, as the team beat No. 52 Ohio State in a huge upset, easily becoming their greatest victory of the season. The team featured six freshmen, which gave each of them exemplary opportunity to play in the big games right away and become successful.

After the season ended, coach Brian Fleishman stepped down after six years with the program. They looked forward to welcoming Tina Samara, a two-time All-American and former professional player, as she was expected to become the new coach next year and help the women's team grow even more with her direction.

TRACK AND FIELD

Nuttycombe retired; Wisconsin named runner-up for the John McDonnell Program of the Year.

By Gregory Lehner

They were not for the slow or the weak – the Track and Field team of 2012-2013 were out to win another outdoor field championship for the second consecutive year. Hosted in Columbus, Ohio, the Men took 3rd place – but found success in the Women's team, which placed a highly respectable 3rd in the NCAA Indoor Championships in late March.

In addition, the teams broke a few school records throughout the semester that set a crazed tone of Badger ferociousness. Danny Block broke his own school record again in the discus with a throw of over 200 feet, while Scott Erickson broke 191 feet in the hammer throw. And Austin Mudd, a sophomore distance runner, broke the 1600 meter run record with a clock-in time under four minutes. The women were none short of record-breaking prowess in their meets either — Taylor Smith smashed her own shot put record in late April, and Ashley Beutler clocked in a 10-minute, 4-second run in the 3000-meter steeplechase event.

Wisconsin also saw promising finishes from the newcomers who joined the team this year. Women's track middle distance runners Taylor Twedt and Lauren Holtz found top 10 finishes in the 800 meters events. Charlie Foss clocked in underneath 11 seconds in the 100 meter dash at the Big Ten Championships, and Andrew Brekke came in as a promising red-shirt freshman who hit 55 feet in the shot put at the Yellow Jacket Invitational, placing first.

Shortly after the conclusion of the season, Men's Track Head Coach Ed Nuttycombe announced his retirement, after having added his 52nd title to his already outstanding resume. This time, he had the honor of bringing home the trophy in the Big Ten Conference Indoor Championship. Nuttycombe had already been named the Big Ten's top coach earlier in February.

"We took a lot of pride in being in the mix for this award right down to the end. It told us that we'd built a complete team that could compete at a high level nationally, all the way from cross country season in September through the end of the outdoor season in June."

Members of the track team regretted that Nuttycombe would not be back, but eagerly awaited the announcement of their new head coach for 2014.

SWIMMING & DIVING

Individual records broken - lightened spirits - team looked forward to a successful 2014.

By Cassandra Caswell

While the 2013 season was filled with its share of losses, the Badgers Swimming and Diving teams ended the season with several highlights for both individual members and for the school.

In particular, Sophomores Ivy Martin and Drew teDuits had exceptionally outstanding seasons. Martin was the second woman in Big Ten history to break the 22-second barrier with a time of 21.84 in the 50-yard freestyle at the preliminary round of the conference championships in Minneapolis. teDuits' season was filled with memories of a missed opportunity the year before when he did not make it to the NCAA Championships. In 2012-13, teDuits not only broke both the 200 and 100-yard backstroke school records, but he was also the third men's swimmer at UW to earn an individual NCAA first place finish – the first to do so since 1959.

Not all of the honors occurred on the collegiate front for the UW team, however. Seniors Daniel Lester and Michael Weiss were named to the Australian and U.S. World University Teams respectively. Lester swam the second-fastest 200-yard butterfly in UW history. Weiss would be competing in the 400-meter individual medley with olympians Ryan Lochte and Michael Phelps.

Again, the highlight of the year came at the NCAA Championships, where the Men's Swim & Dive team placed 13th - their fifth-best finish in school history - and teDuits' first place finish.

Despite these personal successes, the team as a whole ended the season with hopes and expectations for a better season next time. With 13th and 15th place finishes for the men's and women's teams respectively, the team and their coaches looked ahead to the next year and another chance. While they were losing some swimmers due to graduation, the teams held onto hope with the addition of several swimmers for the next year — which included an international signee from Australia.

The team closed the school year on a high note however when former teammate and commencement speaker Anders Holm joined them in the pool for relaxation, and a little competitiveness. Surely some words of wisdom were shared from the comedian to the people whose shoes he had filled previously.

Cross Country

Men churned out 2nd-place finish at NCAA; Women 5th at Big Ten Championships.

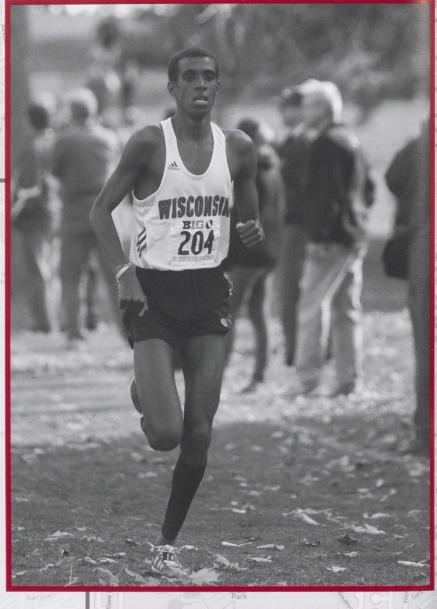

By ALEX ROGERS

As the defending national champions, the Wisconsin Men's Cross Country team started the 2012 season strong at home at the Badger Invitational, where the team won five of the top six spots and took first overall as a team. Junior Alex Brill finished first in individual competition, running the Zimmer course in 18 minutes and 50 seconds. The Badgers continued their winning streak, earning first place at both the Stony Brook Invitational and the Sean Earl Lakefront Invitational. The Wisconsin Adidas Invitational proved to be a little more difficult, as the Badgers finished seventeenth as a team.

Two weeks later, senior Maverick Darling helped the team win their 14th consecutive Big Ten title in East Lansing. The Great Lakes Regional, the last event before the NCAA Championships, was once again dominated by the Badgers, who claimed their 11th-consecutive Great Lakes title. Senior Mohammed Ahmed, who had competed in the 2012 Summer Olympics, won the individual title by completing the 10K race with a time of 30 minutes and 37 seconds: a course record. The season ended at the NCAA championship with the Badgers taking second place to 0klahoma State.

The Women's team also had a very successful 2012 season. The team took first overall in their three opening competitions. Senior Ashley Beutler, sophomore Gabrielle Anzalone, and senior Hanna Knurr led Wisconsin to a fifth place finish at the Big Ten Championship meet. During the season, nine of the women were also honored as members of the Big Ten Academic All-Conference team, led by red shirt freshman Dana Steffen with a 4.0 cumulative GPA. Beutler and Anzalone would finish the season strong at the NCCA National Championships, with finishing spots of 65th and 86th respectively.

QUESTIONS ARE THE ANSWER

Yant learned to make decisions despite unanswerable questions in college.

BY ALEX YANT

I can safely say that, as a college graduate reflecting on his remarkable four years in this incredible institution, the biggest lesson I learned from all of my studies is that the best questions are never fully answered, and the most curious and open-minded individuals achieve the most long-term success.

Perhaps I'm getting a little ahead of myself; allow me to explain.

My young life, like that of most of my fellow graduates, consisted of following well-worn grooves in the fertile soil of the education system. Each step carefully planned, so that every student was equal, and everyone's experience was as similar as could be. Those were the days where boys ruled and girls drooled...or was it the other way around? I guess it depended on whom you asked.

Daily homework offered enough of a challenge to keep young minds occupied and growing, but in the grand scheme of things, there were relatively few options. Alarm clocks told you when to wake up and Mom and Dad told you when to go to sleep. Yeah, we whined and complained about this lack of freedom at the time, but I'd argue that at that stage, it was a good thing. The groove was deep enough so the wheel kept pushing forward without straying far off course.

And let's be honest, many of us were too busy trading Pokemon cards and collecting beanie babies to begin reflecting on who we were and where we were going. Few questions were asked, and most of them were easily answered.

Yet as high school rolled around, the groove became more shallow. Suddenly, there were cars to drive, boys and girls to impress, courses and extracurriculars to choose. So many choices, it made my head spin!

It made me wonder: which choices were the "right" choices? What is real? Who are we, and what really matters? The tables had turned—so many questions, so few clear answers.

I vividly remember my communication theory classes, and how many different ideas the professor introduced. There were models upon models upon models, all introduced by brilliant minds at different times. Interestingly enough, none of these geniuses could ever completely agree on what was happening, nor could they come up with a universal theory of how each piece of the puzzle fit together. While the ideas we covered in class were certainly important, I think the "big picture" concept is the most revealing: Much in life is neither completely wrong or right. Life is complex, and answers often depend on the individual's perspective.

UW-Madison taught me how to think, not just what I could choose to think. I'll always believe that the former is much more important, because this spirit kindles the fire of curiosity which drives passion for success in whichever way a person defines it. Open minds create connections where closed ones all too often burn bridges.

I have so many fond memories here — from meeting friends at a bonfire the first week of school, to proudly singing for the President and First Lady with the MadHatters, and even more proudly walking across the Kohl Center stage, diploma cover in hand, a year and a half later. I'll never forget the pure, unadulterated joy that came along with those moments.

However, because I received the education that I did, I know these moments will continue to happen. That's not to say there won't be struggle and confusion - along with countless difficult questions - along the way, but I believe it's within difficult times that the soul is stretched, character is shaped and through moments of sudden mental clarity, answers may be discovered.

Are you feeling somewhat lost and confused, now that the groove has disappeared and you're the only one holding the reins? I hope not, because regardless of what happens, remember that you're the only one in control of how you see, react and respond to those events. While the questions will never stop coming, we develop the wisdom to understand that not all of them need to be answered, and the strength to accept this fact.

With the windows to the world suddenly thrown wide open, and the emergence of half a gazillion paths to potentially pursue, sometimes I begin to question my most mundane daily choices. In these moments of confusion, I take a deep breath, walk to the Terrace and simply enjoy the beauty of what's in front of me.

Because there's nothing like a gorgeous Madison sunset to inspire contemplation of life's greatest mysteries.

At a school of over 40,000 faces, it was not always possible to know the name of each student in every photo - but we sure did try! Below is an alphabetical list of every person that (to the best of our knowledge) is pictured, connected to or mentioned somewhere in this book. And even if you don't find your name below, it's still worth taking a look through the book!

The 2013 Wisconsin Badger Yearbook was printed by Suttle-Straus, Inc. of Waunakee, Wisconsin. Portrait photography was provided by Empire Photography of Madison, Wisconsin. The annual was written, edited and typset using Adobe InDesign CS6, Adobe Illustrator CS6, Adobe Photoshop CS6 and various versions of Microsoft Word.

Proof pages were created on a personal Laser-Jet and final pages were output by Suttle-Straus, Inc. Captions, body content, and photograph credentials were set in Bell Gothic Std. All titles were set in Book Antiqua. Greek letters for the "On Langdon..." section were set in Cochin.

The cover and division pages were designed by Gregory Lehner and Pa Shoua Thao. Cover photographs were taken by Claire Larkins (Capitol photo) and Aaron Redlich (Camp Randall photo). Interior pages were designed by Gregory Lehner. The front and back endsheet photographs were taken by Derek Shimeck and Brianne Gohlke respectively.
