UNION BUSTING

CONFERENCE

PICKETING:

FEB. 19-21, MON-WED, WIS. CENTER
MASS RALLY WED, NOON MALI

The University Extension Department of Business and Management is holding a three day union busting conference Monday through Wednesday at the Wisconsin Center.

FINE, BUT WHO GIVES A SHIT ????????

The links between students and workers are organic and very real. As students we tend to believe that unions are simply for wage workers. We as college graduates with our 'above average' GPA's and dazzling diplomas will not have to bother with unions. But this is all mystification.

In the mass university today alienation and powerlessness pierce our daily individual lives--conditions that have always oppressed workers. Under the guise of learning we are trained to adopt concepts and skills which are outside of our personal needs. Competition separates us and denies us community. Instead of learning from and growing with fellow students, we bid for our own individual 'success.' But this dangling carrot is illusory.

Any college graduate knows jobs are scarce. And even when a job is found, it does not fulfill our fantasies of success. In the end, most graduating students will enter the working class. College graduates may enjoy relative material advantage to most workers today, however this difference proves superficial. Students and workers alike serve the demands of those who control the means of production. In order to make for an ever expanding pie, the ruling class squeezes and divides us along lines of race, sex, and class. With this faltering of American imperialism abroad, we as workers will be subject to more intensified attacks at home.

Unions protect us from this exploitation. Non-union workers average 30% less pay. Moreover, where the bosses divide us, unions bring us together. Unions provide a form for instigating social change. With a strong union base workers can build a class wide struggle to eliminate these forms of economic exploitation and personal alienation. Unions can return the products of the society back to the people who produce them.

UNION BUSTING IS THE PACIFICATION STRATEGY FOR DOMESTIC WAGE WORKERS. We must be vigilant and struggle against such repression. Help yourself by helping us fight union busting!
