UNIVERSITY UNVEILS NEW IDENTITY PROGRAM

MADISON -- A new institutional identity program for the University of Wisconsin-Madison will be introduced over the next several months.

With approval from Chancellor John D. Wiley, the program includes a new logo, which will replace the UW-Madison wordmark - used since 1990 - for use on institutional messages ranging from printed publications and Web sites, to letterhead and business cards.

"As we enter the new century, we are fortunate to be counted among the nation's leading universities," says Wiley. "One way that we can protect and enhance our reputation is through consistent use of an institutional identity."

Developed by University Communications, the new identity is meant to capture both long-standing traditions and the spirit of the campus. The logo incorporates a familiar architectural detail -- a crest emblazoned with a "W," created in 1929 by an unknown architect or designer for use on the Field House -- paired with the words "The University of Wisconsin-Madison." These elements, along with official colors and a specific typeface, form the new logo.

The new look will be phased in over time. Banners featuring the new logo were flown on Bascom Hill during Homecoming week in October, and "Connecting Ideas," a publication about the campus strategic plan that was distributed campuswide last month, also featured in new logo.

The logo is available for use by university units and licensed vendors. For more information about the institutional identity program, contact Tricia Dickinson, marketing director, University Communications, (608) 265-9005, pmnolan@facstaff.wisc.edu.

MITCHARD IS HOMECOMING PARADE MARSHAL

MADISON -- Homecoming parade watchers have a chance to cheer on a celebrity parade marshal this week: Best-selling author and Dane County resident Jacqueline Mitchard.

The Homecoming Parade is a time-honored tradition at the University of Wisconsin-Madison. Students, alumni and area residents line State Street to cheer on Bucky Badger, floats representing various student groups and the parade grand marshal, who presides over the entire event.

Mitchard is the author of the No. 1 New York Times best-selling novel, "The Deep End of the Ocean," also chosen for Oprah Winfrey's Book Club.

She has also served as a speechwriter for Donna Shalala, former secretary of the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services and former UW-Madison chancellor. Mitchard's third novel, "A Theory of Relativity," was published in June by HarperCollins.

"We feel lucky to have such a celebrity living in our own back yard," says Homecoming Co-Chair Jim Strode.

The role of a parade grand marshal is to help the Homecoming Committee to unite the university and the community via a variety of Homecoming events. The parade grand marshal rides in the parade down State Street and distributes spirit awards at the awards presentation and fireworks display immediately following.

To get times, parade route and details on other events happening this Homecoming Week, see: <http://www.uwalumni.com/homecoming>.

GREEKS SET TO DISCUSS ALCOHOL ISSUES

MADISON - More than 1,100 Greek System chapter leaders, officers and new members will meet Saturday, Oct. 20, for a discussion of the role of alcohol in University of Wisconsin-Madison fraternities and sororities.

With the theme "New Horizons of Responsibility," Alcohol Issues Summit 2001 aims to educate students about university alcohol policies while placing a renewed emphasis on personal accountability, says organizer Ed Mirecki, fraternity and sorority adviser in the Student Organization Office.

The daylong summit will be held at Grainger Hall, 975 University Ave. and at the Wisconsin Union Theater, 800 Langdon St. UW-Madison Chancellor John Wiley and Vice Chancellor of Student Affairs Paul Barrows will address a 10 a.m. opening session in the Grainger Hall auditorium.

National experts on risk management, drug and alcohol abuse, and sexually transmitted diseases will address several informational seminars. Although all sessions will be geared to members of the Greek community, the general public is welcome.

Alcohol is gradually becoming less prevalent in UW-Madison Greek culture, Mirecki says. Last fall, the Panhellenic Association, which governs sororities, agreed to end its co-sponsorship of fraternity house events that include alcohol. Fraternity men and sorority women have implemented changes in their social structures as a result.

In addition, during the past few years, several houses have ended their use of alcohol entirely.

Mirecki says that support for these and other alcohol initiatives must be rooted in personal responsibility and a caring for the well-being of members instead of the fear of breaking university rules.

UW-Madison has 27 fraternities, 11 sororities and seven multicultural fraternal organizations totaling 2,500 members. The summit is sponsored by the Chancellor's Office, the Student Organization Office, the Interfraternity Council and the Panhellenic Association.

CAMPUS TO CELEBRATE HOMECOMING 2001 LUAU-STYLE

MADISON - Several new events will premiere this year as part of the University of Wisconsin-Madison's Homecoming celebrations.

This year's Badger Luau theme celebration includes the new Charity Ball Saturday, Oct. 20. This event, like all traditional Homecoming events since 1987, will benefit the Dean of Students Crisis Fund.

Festivities kick off with a campus cleanup on Friday, Oct. 19, to ready the campus for the more than 20 events planned throughout the week, culminating with the football game against Michigan State Saturday, Oct. 27.

"Homecoming 2001 is an especially important year for us to raise money for the Dean of Students Crisis Fund," says Homecoming co-chair Jim Strode. "This campus organization helps students who need financial support in emergency situations, such as those who traveled home to the New York and D.C. areas after the tragic events of Sept. 11. The whole week will allow us to bring a lighthearted spirit to campus again, while doing our part to help those in need."

Traditional events include the Charity Run/Walk, Red Cross Blood Drive, Yell-Like-Hell competition, fireworks on the Terrace and parade down State Street. Students will honor Dane County resident and best-selling author, Jacqueline Mitchard, as the 2001 parade grand marshal.

"As always, the student volunteers on the Homecoming Committee have done an outstanding job planning a mix of events that appeal to students, alumni, families and community members alike," says Wisconsin Alumni Association President and CEO Paula Bonner. "The time-honored Homecoming traditions such as Yell-Like-Hell and the parade are what keep them coming back, and our students always manage to add a new twist that makes them even more fun than the year before."

FAST PROGRAM TO SERVE HMONG, MUSCOVITES

MADISON -- Wisconsin Center for Education Research researcher Lynn McDonald and colleagues have been awarded grants to adapt their program Families and Schools Together to serve Russian students in Moscow and Hmong immigrant families in Wausau.

A $7,500 grant for work in Moscow has been awarded by the National Institute on Drug Abuse, U.S. National Institutes of Health through the U.S.-Russia Competitive Program. A $99,980 grant for working with Hmong immigrants in Wausau has been awarded by the Division of Program Development, Special Populations and Projects, Center for Mental Health Services, U.S. Department of Health and Human Services.

The FAST program supports development of relationships among parents, schools and the community to enhance children's academic and social performance. FAST meetings are structured around social activities for parents and families. In the eight-week program families gather for a meals and social activities that include music, drawing, family games, children's sports, a parent group and a chance for parents to interact with each other.

Organizers and participants hope that after students participate in FAST, they will experience fewer social or behavioral difficulties, which may promote their academic performance. McDonald is collaborating with Olga Romanova and Tatiana Grechnaia in to Moscow's Institute for Prevention Research in the translation and cultural adaptation of the FAST manual into Russian; focus groups for primary school teachers and parents to discuss cultural appropriateness of FAST; and pilot implementation of the program.

The Center for Mental Health Services award will help adapt and implement FAST with a group of Hmong-American families in Wausau. McDonald will work with UW-Madison professors Thomas Kratochwill and Joel Levin to report the impact of the program on the psychosocial functioning of the Hmong immigrant children and their families and will document the increase in protective factors due to the program over the next 24 months.

The Center for Mental Health Services provides national leadership for policies, programs and activities designed to improve mental health treatment and prevention services for children, adolescents, and adults.

UW PHYSICIST RECEIVES GOVERNOR'S SERVICE AWARD CONTACT: Marshall Onellion, (608) 263-6829

MADISON - Marshall Onellion, a physics professor at the University of Wisconsin-Madison, was honored by Gov. Tommy Thompson for his volunteer weekend program for talented high school students.

Onellion received a certificate of commendation in September from the governor for his 10-year-old mentoring program, held Saturday mornings at the Synchrotron Radiation Center near Stoughton. The program concentrates on thinking skills, rather than rote memorization, and covers topics in mathematics, physics and chemistry.

About 60 high school students from the Madison area have participated in the program over the years. Onellion says the program is helping students choose their careers and also make high school academics more challenging and enjoyable.

The certificate says Onellion's program "enhanced his students' opportunities for success in college and beyond. His donation of untold hours to the mentorship of his students is truly an inspiration."

Onellion, a UW-Madison physics professor since 1987, conducts research on high-temperature superconductivity and other topics.

TEXTILES' MYRIAD MEANINGS TO BE EXPLORED

CONTACT: Beverly Gordon, (608) 262-2015; bgordon@facstaff.wisc.edu

MADISON -- Human ecology professor Beverly Gordon will examine the myriad meanings of textiles in an upcoming presentation at the University of Wisconsin-Madison.

Gordon will present "The Fiber of Our Lives: Why Textiles Matter" at 5:30 p.m. Tuesday, Oct. 17, in 4151 Grainger Hall, 975 University Ave. From the first swaddling cloth or comforting baby "blankie" to the final shroud, from the simplest rope or gauze bandage to the most costly, glittering fabric used to cement a political alliance or marriage, textiles are integral to every aspect of human life, Gordon says.

The talk examines the host of roles and meanings that textiles hold and play in cultures throughout the world. It examines the way they help shape human civilization, their importance as protection and shelter, and how they have furthered economic and political power. Textiles are used as money, as a means of artistic expression, and in ways that symbolized and become integral to transcendent experience, Gordon says.

The lecture, with reception to follow, is hosted by the School of Human Ecology Arts Institute, and Center for the Humanities.

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASEOctober 7, 1999*CONTACT: Stephen Randall or Simon Soomekh, (608) 265-2731BADGER HOMECOMING FEATURES 'BUCKY'S DAD'

MADISON -- The 1999 Badger Homecoming celebration Oct. 10-16 will "Treasure the Tradition - 150 Years," and in that spirit, the Homecoming parade will feature "Bucky's dad" as parade marshal.

Bucky Badger, the university's most popular and recognized icons, will be celebrating his 50th birthday next month. Bill Sachse, now 72 and of Kohler, came up with the winning entry in a 1949 student contest to name the mascot.

Sachse, the pep chair that year, submitted "Buckingham U. Badger." He says he's thrilled to be able to celebrate the tradition of Bucky in this year's parade.

"It's been 50 years since he was created, and he's done a great job," says Sachse. "He is a wonderful ambassador for the university, its students and the whole state. It's a thrill to be able to promote him for another 50 years."

This year's Homecoming parade will be Friday, Oct. 15, starting at 6 p.m. at East Washington Avenue and the Capitol Square. The UW Marching Band, colorful floats depicting this year's theme and other units will travel around the square and down Martin Luther King Jr. Boulevard to Monona Terrace. A Badger pep rally will take place on the center's rooftop garden immediately following the parade.

"As our sesquicentennial comes to a close and the new millennium approaches, we think this as an important time to look back at the deep-rooted traditions of the university's past and celebrate those of the present, as well," says Stephen Randall, co-chair of the 60-member Homecoming Committee. "We invite all students, faculty, staff, alumni and other friends of the university to join us in the festivities."

There are some new Homecoming events this year:

-- Middle- and high school-aged youths from the community will "Paint the Town" Sunday, Oct. 10, showing off their artistic skills by depicting the Homecoming theme on the storefront windows of State Street businesses.

-- A Tug 'o War battle, 4-6 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 14, in the back yard of Witte Hall along Dayton Street, will feature teams from the residence halls, student organizations, sororities and fraternities.

-- An essay contest for students in kindergarten through college. Winners in each of four categories will receive $50 savings accounts at the University of Wisconsin Credit Union. As part of the university's sesquicentennial celebration, the essays will be placed in University Archives and are to be reopened and incorporated into UW-Madison's bicentennial celebration in 2049.

-- Public service opportunities. All organizations taking part in Homecoming activities earn points for their participation. This year, working with the Morgridge Center for Public Service, the Homecoming Committee lined up some 80 community service projects in which groups could participate and earn points for their involvement. Those projects, which began Sept. 24, wrap up Saturday, Oct. 9.

Other Homecoming activities include:

-- An annual Charity 3K Walk/5K Run to benefit the Dean of Students Crisis Fund, starts at noon Sunday, Oct. 10, in front of the Memorial Union. Registration is from 10-11:30 a.m. on Library Mall. Cost: $15.

-- A Celebration of Cultures, 4-7 p.m. in the Pyle Center, 702 Langdon St., features ethnic food and entertainment from around the world, provided by several campus student organizations. There is a modest charge for food items.

All proceeds from Homecoming events and sales of Homecoming apparel and other items go to the Dean of Students Crisis Fund. Since 1987, the Homecoming Committee has donated more than $125,000 to the fund. This year, the committee hopes to raise more than $10,000.

For a complete schedule and list of Homecoming '99 events, check out www.waa.wisc.edu/homecoming/, or call the Homecoming office at 265-2731.

ON CAMPUS

Bluestones "weave harmony"

Renowned classical guitarist Robert Bluestone and weaver/tapestry artist Rebecca Bluestone want to change the way you see and hear the arts.

During a residency Oct. 24-31, the Bluestones will conduct concerts, lectures and demonstrations, including a professional development workshop for artists, school outreach activities, an advocacy speech to business groups and functions designed to build bridges between the arts and the community.

The work of these artists is based upon a common ground: guitar and loom are both handmade, tightly strung wooden instruments requiring a shared love of form and texture, tone and timbre, honed by hours of solitary practice. Robert and Rebecca are each fascinated by the interplay of the subtle variations of sonic and visual tints in their work.

Highlights of the residency include a Robert Bluestone concert starting at 12:30 p.m. Sunday, Oct. 31, at the Elvehjem Museum of Art. Rebecca Bluestone's weavings will be displayed Oct. 16-Nov. 6 at Memorial Union Galleries.

Ward takes tough stance on sweatshop monitoring

In its continuing effort to end sweatshop labor, UW-Madison is adopting some of the toughest standards in the nation for licensed manufacturers, Chancellor David Ward says.

As of Jan. 1, 2000, the university's nearly 500 manufacturers of apparel and merchandise must disclose the locations of their factories and ensure the protection of female workers from discrimination and harassment, Ward says. These guidelines are outlined in the February 1999 agreement reached between Ward and concerned students.

UW-Madison's licensees must also follow the standards of the draft code of conduct from the Collegiate Licensing Company. The new guidelines will be included in current, pending and renewed UW-Madison licensing agreements.

"It is repugnant to have the university's logos and marks appear on articles possibly produced under hostile and abusive working conditions, and safeguards against such practices must be instituted and enforced," Ward wrote in an Oct. 12 letter announcing the changes to the CLC, which manages trademark licensing for UW-Madison.

Only a select number of universities — Arizona, Duke, Georgetown, Michigan and North Carolina — have imposed such strict requirements for its licensees.

Enrollment exceeds 40,600

The university has enrolled 40,610 students this fall, a 1.2 percent increase from the 40,109 students enrolled in fall 1998.

The total includes 28,351 undergraduates, a 2 percent increase over last year, and 8,523 graduate students, up 29 students from last fall. The undergraduate total includes 5,675 new first-year students, up from 5,596 last year.

Among the university's four professional schools, there are 2,122 students: 859 in the Law School, 583 in the Medical School, 317 in the School of Veterinary Medicine and 363 in the School of Pharmacy. There were 2,069 professional students last fall.

Minority students total 3,776, compared to 3,748 last fall. Of that group, African Americans account for 856 (570 of them undergrads); Hispanic/Latino students, 1,002 (662 undergrads); targeted Asian Americans, 256 (185 undergrads); and American Indians, 224 (142 undergrads).

University officials believe these totals are incomplete because an all-time high of 951 students, about 2.4 percent of all enrollees, did not provide any ethnic designation on their registration materials.

Work to reroute traffic

The next phase of the water main replacement project along Babcock and Observatory drives is scheduled to begin Monday, Oct. 25, weather permitting. The project will affect traffic patterns and bus service in that area for several weeks.

On Monday, Babcock Drive between Linden and Observatory will be closed to traffic, and by mid- to late next week, work on Observatory Drive from Babcock Drive to Liz Waters should be under way. At that point, there will be no thru traffic on Observatory Drive between Charter Street and Babcock Drive until the project is completed. Access to parking lots along Observatory Drive will be allowed from one direction or the other for as much of the construction period as possible. Permit holders will be notified about alternative lots in the event they are unable to park in their assigned ones.

Buses will be rerouted along Linden Drive to Elm and Observatory drives.

Rankings: Hospital is consumers' choice

UW Hospital and Clinics has been named a 1999 Consumer Choice Award winner by the National Research Corporation, a nationally recognized health care performance measurement firm.

The designation, given to just 126 hospitals nationwide, is based on a national study of consumer assessments of their health plans, personal physicians, local hospitals and health systems as well as their own current health status. This year, more than 170,000 households representing approximately 400,000 covered lives responded to the mail survey, which concluded in June.

"Consumer choice award" winners are those organizations in each market achieving the highest composite score on four measures of consumer preference: best physicians, best nurses, best reputation and best overall quality. In some markets, co-winners were chosen where findings fell within the error range for that market. UW Hospital was the only Madison hospital named and one of two in Wisconsin.

Bats in the Rath?

Just in time for Halloween, the university's Zoological Museum will be hosting the North American Symposium on Bat Research Oct. 27-30. Bat authorities will be roosting at the Memorial Union, where the latest research on bat conservation, population biology, ecology and reproduction will be presented. In addition, a special workshop is being planned to help teachers get acquainted with bats and introduce these important animals into school curricula.

New: Labor group forming

There is a nascent institution on campus dedicated to campus worker/labor education and activism called the UW-Madison Labor Center. The UW Labor Center is a project of the UW Federation of Labor, which says it wants to nurture collaboration between UW workers, students and faculty on labor issues. Who knew?

Q. Who are those crazy students who dash across the football field at the Homecoming football game and throw sticks at the goalposts?

A. Law students, obviously. (OK, maybe it's not obvious.) But each year at the Homecoming football game, third-year law students undertake this traditional run, which they believe forecasts the results of their first official cases as lawyers.

The goal is for students to toss canes over the goalpost and catch them on the other side. Legend holds that those who catch successfully will win their first cases; those who catch the wrong cane will have to settle.

Meghan McCormick, treasurer of the Student Bar Association, says she knows of no studies to determine whether those who drop their canes really do lose their first cases.

Perhaps with a nod to a future working relationship, the plain, black canes this year were ordered from a medical supply company, the cheapest source. "A lot of times people decorate them in different ways so they can recognize their canes so they get a 'win' rather than a settlement in their first case," McCormick notes.

Despite some top legal research, the origin of the cane toss remains murky. Many believe it dates to the arrival of professor William Herbert Page from Ohio State University Law School in the 1930s.

Keep an eye out for this event during the game Saturday, Oct. 16, and wish the future jurists luck — unless you plan to be on the opposing side of the courtroom for a new graduate's first case.

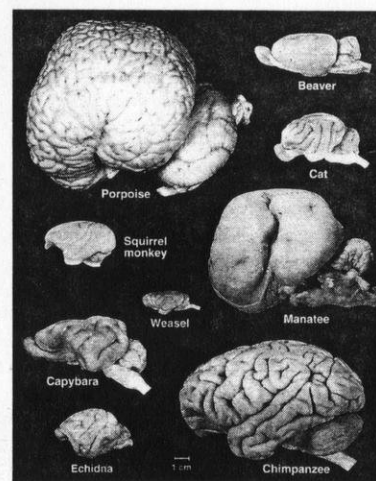

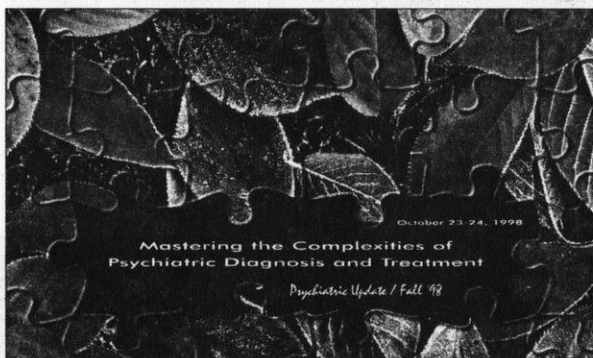

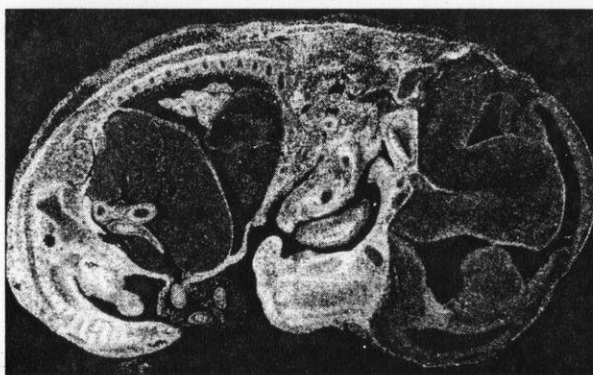

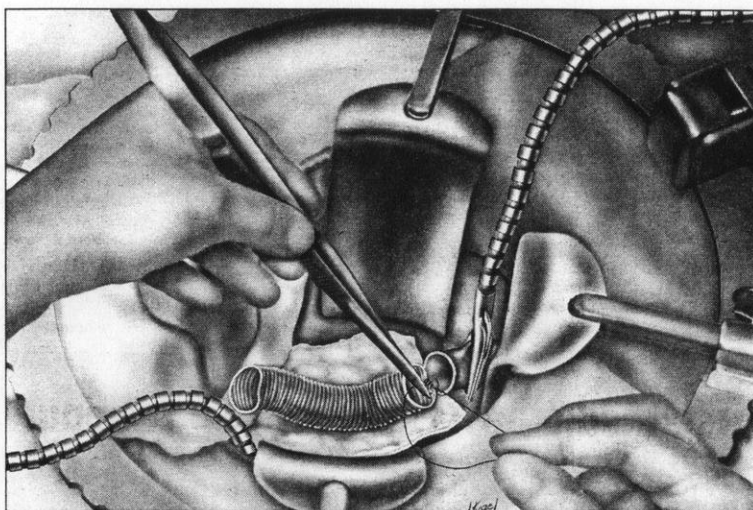

Q. Where did the Bucky Wagon come from?

A. The Bucky firehouse, of course. Or would you believe Wisconsin Rapids?

The Bucky Wagon, which carries Bucky and the cheerleading squad onto the football field before games, actually is the third in a line of Bucky wagons. Originally, the wagon was used to transport shells for the crew team from lake to lake. Then the wagon's cargo expanded to include the football team. The tradition dates to the turn of the century when fans pulled the football team in a "Little Red Wagon" to and from the train station for out-of-state games.

At one point, the wagon was an antediluvian Ford chassis with a wooden framework. An old fire truck followed, until the current restored truck, a 1932 La France fire engine, was donated by Mr. and Mrs. Jay J. Northington of Wisconsin Rapids in the mid-1970s.

Now the team travels by bus or airplane, and the Bucky Wagon is reserved for taking Bucky and his contingent onto the field at Camp Randall stadium.

Image conscious: Service helps illustrate work

Images tell the story in this age of visual communication, and to help faculty and staff tell their stories better, a low-profile unit in the Medical School has been quietly expanding its range of high-quality art and photography.

The images on this page are a tiny sample of a wide range of digital and traditional art and photography services produced by the Medical Illustration and Photography staff.

Staff members support clinical, teaching and research projects at the Medical School, University Hospital and Clinics, health sciences and for other university faculty and staff.

Director Leta Hensen says the unit has branched out since another service, Photo Media, closed in 1997. For example, the Medical Photography unit at the Medical Science Center now offers a new service, extremely high-resolution macrophotography of specimens (including large specimens up to 9 centimeters across) at magnifications of up to 50 times.

"This service will be of particular interest to researchers wishing to have outstanding images of stained tissue sections, embryos, histological specimens and other images for publication, poster sessions and other applications where only the best quality will do," says Doug Austin, a photographer who handles these special projects.

Medical Illustration and Photography also is the only place on campus where faculty and staff will find a computer slide-imaging service bureau. Files composed on computer can be imaged onto slide film for presentations and other uses.

In other graphics areas, staff also produce illustrations and animations, publications and web pages, and general design services. Faculty and staff outside the health sciences can use these services, but should check to make sure their own school doesn't provide similar presentation help.

"We don't turn anyone away, but whether we compete or not may not be our decision," Hensen explains. "We will service staff from schools who have a service but choose to come to us for various reasons."

Conferences to explore role of Judaism

Barbara Wolff

In the middle of the 17th century, Baruch Spinoza was expelled from his Amsterdam synagogue, apparently for heresy. How that experience, and Judaism itself, shaped his life and work — and how he himself shaped modern Judaism — will be the subject of a conference Oct. 7-10.

According to conference organizer Steven Nadler, professor of philosophy, Spinoza made his mark as a philosopher by pursuing his unswerving belief that God is nature, that the roots of organized religion are in the passions and superstition, and the Bible is just a work of literature.

Scholars from Yale, Stanford, Vanderbilt, the University of Chicago, University College London, Tel Aviv University and elsewhere will consider the role Spinoza's Jewish background played in the formation and evolution of his philosophical principles, and Jewish reception of them.

A century or so after Spinoza, Johann Wolfgang Goethe came to prominence as a champion of the Sturm und Drang movement in which young writers revolted against prevailing literary standards of the day. His work, greatly influenced by Spinoza's, led to the importance of characters' psychological development in later German novels. Equally accomplished as a scientist as well as a literary figure, Goethe's discovery of the itermaxillary bone in 1784 played a role in Darwin's theory of evolution.

Klaus L. Berghahn, professor of German and coordinator of the symposium, says the question of whether Goethe was anti-Semitic has been debated endlessly; the Jewish reaction to Goethe, the Jewish direction of inquiry, will be explored at UW-Madison Oct. 28-30.

"We want to show the complexity of the German-Jewish symbiosis on which the reception of Goethe's works by a Jewish audience played an important role," Berghahn says.

Organized by the UW-Madison Center for European Studies in cooperation with the Department of German and the Center for Jewish Studies, the symposium will bring together faculty from across the country and around the world. Opening the event Thursday, Oct. 28, at 7:30 p.m. will be Michael Engelhard, consul general of the Federal Republic of Germany. ■

Kutler: Reagan bio clouded

Critics are wading through the revelations in Edmund Morris's new biography, "Dutch: A Memoir of Ronald Reagan," Professor Emeritus of History Stanley Kutler, who is reviewing the book, was quoted in USA Today (Sept. 22) saying that the book primarily illustrates Reagan's skill as a "great practitioner of symbolic politics." Kutler finds other parts of the book less illuminating. In the book, Morris inserts his own presence through the inclusion of sometimes-fictional characters, a practice that clouds the narrative, says Kutler.

Reasons to drink grape juice

Reporting on a study by John Folts of the Medical School, the San Antonio Express News (Sept. 21) identifies the newest health benefit associated with drinking purple grape juice. Drinking the juice seems to be significantly increasing the elasticity of blood vessels, thus fighting the narrowing of arteries that leads to coronary artery disease. In Folts' study, subjects with coronary artery disease drank purple grape juice for two weeks. Folts found after that period that arteries were more elastic and the rate at which LDL cholesterol oxidized had increased. "Previously, much of the potential benefit of consuming purple grape juice was attributed to its apparent ability to make blood less likely to clot," says Folts. "Now we see that there appear to be two other beneficial factors at work as well."

Scary movies: Pickup strategy?

Author Jennifer Kornreich ponders in Salon (Sept. 19) whether scary movies such as "The Blair Witch Project" may prompt closeness between couples who see the movie together — or perhaps even induce some women to invite men to their bedrooms to calm their fears. Joanne Cantor, communication arts professor and author of a book on reactions to frightening media images, says that getting through a scary scene together can indeed be a bonding experience. But Cantor says the fright reactions can be more enduring than something that can be allayed by a night's companionship. "I see 40-year-old women who say, 'I have this thing ever since "Psycho" about showering [alone in the house]," Cantor says. The professor says a blind date took her to "The Collector," a creepy 1965 horror film about one man's sexual obsession. "I never wanted to see a man for the rest of my life!" Cantor recalls.

That pesky swamp gas again?

Physics professor Donald Cox was among those weighing in as scientists and citizens search for answers as to what might have caused a series of colorful blinking lights in the night sky above Menominee. An Associated Press item (Sept. 17) says local officials believe the lights may have been caused by reflection from a planet. But Cox says reflections usually appear as tiny spots, and he finds equally incredible the notion that the lights may have come from a flying saucer. "I would say the chances is about zero, but that is a prejudice," Cox says. "When I see one, I will change my mind." More likely, he says, is that the lights were caused by something more terrestrial, such as reflections from swamp gases.

Hoyt: Cameras no problem

As a bipartisan bill that would allow cameras in the Wisconsin Supreme Court nears becoming law, journalism and mass communication professor James Hoyt, quoted in the Minneapolis Star Tribune (Sept. 13), says research shows cameras seem to have little effect. Hoyt helped run a study on the subject that shows witnesses pay little attention to cameras or anything else outside the scope of the trial. "Whether there's a camera tucked back in the courtroom or not doesn't even register on the radar screen," he says.

BADGER HOMECOMING FEATURES 'BUCKY'S DAD'

MADISON -- The 1999 Badger Homecoming celebration Oct. 10-16 will "Treasure the Tradition - 150 Years," and in that spirit, the Homecoming parade will feature "Bucky's dad" as parade marshal.

Bucky Badger, the university's most popular and recognized icons, will be celebrating his 50th birthday next month. Bill Sachse, now 72 and of Kohler, came up with the winning entry in a 1949 student contest to name the mascot.

Sachse, the pep chair that year, submitted "Buckingham U. Badger." He says he's thrilled to be able to celebrate the tradition of Bucky in this year's parade.

"It's been 50 years since he was created, and he's done a great job," says Sachse. "He is a wonderful ambassador for the university, its students and the whole state. It's a thrill to be able to promote him for another 50 years."

This year's Homecoming parade will be Friday, Oct. 15, starting at 6 p.m. at East Washington Avenue and the Capitol Square. The UW Marching Band, colorful floats depicting this year's theme and other units will travel around the square and down Martin Luther King Jr. Boulevard to Monona Terrace. A Badger pep rally will take place on the center's rooftop garden immediately following the parade.

"As our sesquicentennial comes to a close and the new millennium approaches, we think this as an important time to look back at the deep-rooted traditions of the university's past and celebrate those of the present, as well," says Stephen Randall, co-chair of the 60-member Homecoming

Committee. "We invite all students, faculty, staff, alumni and other friends of the university to join us in the festivities."

There are some new Homecoming events this year:

-- Middle- and high school-aged youths from the community will "Paint the Town" Sunday, Oct. 10, showing off their artistic skills by depicting the Homecoming theme on the storefront windows of State Street businesses.

-- A Tug 'o War battle, 4-6 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 14, in the back yard of Witte Hall along Dayton Street, will feature teams from the residence halls, student organizations, sororities and fraternities.

-- An essay contest for students in kindergarten through college. Winners in each of four categories will receive $50 savings accounts at the University of Wisconsin Credit Union. As part of the university's sesquicentennial celebration, the essays will be placed in University Archives and are to be reopened and incorporated into UW-Madison's bicentennial celebration in 2049.

-- Public service opportunities. All organizations taking part in Homecoming activities earn points for their participation. This year, working with the Morgridge Center for Public Service, the Homecoming Committee lined up some 80 community service projects in which groups could participate and earn points for their involvement. Those projects, which began Sept. 24, wrap up Saturday, Oct. 9.

Other Homecoming activities include:

-- An annual Charity 3K Walk/5K Run to benefit the Dean of Students Crisis Fund, starts at noon Sunday, Oct. 10, in front of the Memorial Union. Registration is from 10-11:30 a.m. on Library Mall. Cost: $15.

-- A Celebration of Cultures, 4-7 p.m. in the Pyle Center, 702 Langdon St., features ethnic food and entertainment from around the world, provided by several campus student organizations. There is a modest charge for food items.

All proceeds from Homecoming events and sales of Homecoming apparel and other items go to the Dean of Students Crisis Fund. Since 1987,

Conservator to describe Abe's cleaning
Cameron Wilson, a professional conservator from New York City, will give the well-known statue of Abraham Lincoln a gentle cleaning Sept. 21-25, and he'll lead an informal on-site discussion of his work at noon Thursday, Sept. 23.

The Elvehjem Museum of Art will sponsor the free talk. The statue is about to be cleaned for the first time because the bronzed likeness of Lincoln is coated with a patina of corrosion that's very bad for its long-term survival.

Wilson was asked by the university to save Abe from eventual disfigurement. The statue is minutely corroding away with each drop of acid rain. If left to its own devices — and how many of those does a statue have? — Abe will start to lose his features to the predations of pollution.

"Maintenance of the Lincoln statue is part of our stewardship as its owners," says Russell Panczenko, director of the Elvehjem Museum.

Evacuation drills scheduled

Evacuation drills will be conducted on campus Sept. 14, 15 and 16. Exact times will not be announced.

Safety Department personnel and the Madison Fire Department will act as monitors on each floor of a building, and it will be necessary to run evacuations throughout class periods.

At the time of the evacuation, faculty members should direct students to an alternate exit, assuming the generally used exit is blocked because of fire or smoke.

"When the fire alarm sounds, we expect, and will appreciate, as complete an evacuation as possible, subject to the proper security of experiments in progress," says Rhonda Lenerz, Safety Department.

Building occupants should move at least 100 feet from their building and remain there until an all-clear signal is given. The total exercise should not take more than 10 minutes, Lenerz says.

UPDATE

Speakers hit the road

The Speakers Bureau, starting its first full school year of operation, has already given new voice to the Wisconsin Idea.

Based in the Chancellor's Office, the Speakers Bureau began last semester to send university speakers across the state.

They have spoken to service clubs and other organizations of all kinds.

"We've selected a cadre of speakers on a host of topics," says Susan Stein, director of the Speakers Bureau. "The one thing they all have in common is their commitment to UW-Madison and its role in Wisconsin as a resource for a lifetime."

Venues so far have been diverse, including the Geological Society in Racine, the Brown County Bar Association in Green Bay and the Appleton Evening Lions Club. The topics vary with the speakers, but a consistent message has been the value of UW-Madison to the state.

Stein says the feedback from groups has been very positive: In fact, several clubs have sent second and third requests to the Speakers Bureau.

Other benefits of speaker placement, says Stein, have been positive local press coverage and a strengthening of the university's ties to community leaders.

Participants in the Speakers Bureau since its inception in January include: David Armstrong, Stephen Barclay, Pat Berry, Will Bleam, Bob Bock, John Bollinger, Bradford Brown, Nick Cahill, Kevin Check, J. Frank Cook, Ken Davis, Werner De Bondt, Joy Dohr, Pete Dörner, Eugene Farley, Linda Farley, Susan Farmer, Phil Farrell, Betty Ferris, Laura Hartman, Marcy Heim, Dianne McAfee Hopkins, Charles Hosler, Art Hove, David Jarrard, John Kaminski, Phil Keillor, George Kliminski, Beth Knetter, Tim Kratz, Jim Leary, Roger Maclean, John Mathis, Mike Moss, Bruce Murray, Ron Numbers, Linda Oakley, Jean O'Leary, Ruth Olson, Steve Price, Bob Pricer, Noel Radomski, Charles Read, Ann Schensky, Megan Schliesman, Don Schütt, Rob Seltzer, Bill Sonzogni,

Biotechnology training renewed

A National Institutes of Health grant that promotes graduate training in biotechnology has been renewed for an additional five years, says bacteriologist Timothy Donohue, who directs the program.

At more than $980,000 per year, the UW-Madison grant is the largest program of its kind in the country. Funded by the National Institute of General Medical Sciences, the program supports 33 graduate students each year. Those students come from the College of Agricultural and Life Sciences, the College of Engineering, the Graduate School, the College of Letters and Science, and the Medical School. The UW-Madison Graduate School provides matching support to help administer the training program.

"The program's objective is to develop a new cadre of scientists and engineers whose training and experience cross traditional academic boundaries," Donohue says. "As we enter the 21st century, there is an increasing need for cross-disciplinary teams of scientists and engineers to work closely on biomedical and agricultural problems. This program prepares students to function at the interface between the biological and physical sciences."

Graduate School Dean Virginia Hinshaw said the program is "highly successful in many dimensions," including its cross-disciplinary emphasis, strong partnerships with industry, diversity, enthusiastic leadership and research.

During the past 10 years, more than 120 UW-Madison doctoral students from more than 20 different graduate programs have been trained by the program.

How we stack up

The university heads a national list of institutions recognized for efforts to create a "disability-friendly" atmosphere for their students, visitors and staff. WE magazine (July-August 1999, page 91) cites UW-Madison for "superior services and facilities (paratransit vans, accessible and well-lit lecture halls, TDD pay phones), avid students in the School of Engineering (who) have designated assistive listening devices for fellow students in the community, home to the McBurney Disability Resource Center."

How we don't stack up

The university, once the nation's No. 2 "party school" as ranked by the Princeton Review, didn't even crack the top 10 this year. Florida universities rule the top two spots.

Youngblood, Room 302, Union South, is the only permanent Red Cross blood donation center on any campus in the country. The All-Campus Blood Drive runs Thursdays and Fridays while classes are in session, from 10 a.m. - 4 p.m. Jennifer Suemnicht, donor recruitment representative, says about 3,000 blood donations are given at the campus center each year. Red blood cells only last 42 days and platelets only five days, so the Red Cross needs a constant flow of blood donors to ensure the availability of life-giving fluids to hospital patients. Cheerleaders enter Camp Randall aboard the Bucky Wagon as part of recent pregame festivities. The 'ol Badger spirit will be roused at this year's Homecoming by many other activities inside and outside the stadium. This year's theme is "Generation Red," a variation on the "Generation X" tag.

Homecoming festivities extended by late game

Liz Beyer

Organizers are confident this year's Badger Homecoming celebration is going to be bigger and better than ever, largely because the Homecoming game between Wisconsin and the Purdue Boilermakers Oct. 10 will be played under the lights at Camp Randall starting at 7:30 p.m. It will be the first nighttime homecoming contest held there.

The Homecoming Committee is taking advantage of this unusual opportunity to maximize game-day festivities and give more alumni and friends of the university a chance to be a part of the celebration.

Game day will begin with the First Annual Homecoming Golf Outing, an 18-hole shotgun at University Ridge that is limited to 24 foursomes. Tee times start at 8:30 a.m.

The Homecoming Parade, which has been held Fridays on the west end of campus, moves back to downtown Madison and State Street. It begins at 11:30 a.m. at Langdon Street and Wisconsin Avenue, travels down Wisconsin to Gilman Street, Gilman to State, and State to Library Mall, where there will be a pep rally immediately following (at approximately 1 p.m.).

This year's theme, chosen by the Homecoming Committee, is "Generation Red."

"It unites all Badger fans past, present and future," says committee co-chair Danny Nicholas. "We wanted a short theme that incorporated that famous Badger spirit and summed up the traditional celebration we call Homecoming. It relates to our generation because we've been tagged 'Generation X.'"

Some of the other Homecoming activities include:

A Charity 5K Run/3K Walk Oct. 4 at noon across from the Memorial Union. Fee: $12 until Sept. 28, $15 on race day. Race day registration is from 10-11:30 a.m. T-shirts will be given to all pre-registrants (not guaranteed the day of the race). Individual awards are given to the top three male and female finishers and for best participation from residence halls, student organizations and Greek houses.

Also Oct. 4, join in "A Celebration of Cultures" from 4-7 p.m. at Memorial Union. This event features ethnic food and music presented by student organizations, and is a great opportunity to learn more about the various cultures that help make UW-Madison such a diverse community.

All proceeds from Homecoming events and apparel sales go to the Dean of Students Crisis Fund. Last year, $10,000 was raised.

Faculty and staff are also encouraged to participate in the Homecoming Blood Drive Oct. 8-9, 10 a.m.-4 p.m., at Youngblood, 319 Union South.

Also, the Kohl Center will hold an open house Oct. 10, 1-4 p.m. Free guided will be offered every half-hour. Only the first-floor Kohl Concourse will be open. Visitors should enter the building at Gates A or B. Free parking will be available in Lot 91 on Frances Street in spaces marked with yellow stripes.

For information, call the Homecoming office, 265-2731, or visit the Alumni Center on North Lake Street. A detailed event schedule and apparel order form are available at: www.waa.wisc.edu/homecoming

Student drinking declines

The findings of the nationwide 1997 College Alcohol Study, conducted by Henry Wechsler and colleagues at the Harvard School of Public Health, closely match the changes seen at the UW-Madison since Wechsler did his first national study in 1993.

Wechsler released the results of his 1997 study Sept. 10 in Cambridge, Mass.

The new nationwide data show some increase in the percentage of students who abstain from drinking, a slight decrease in the percentage who binge drink, and increases in the intensity of drinking among students who drink (drinking for the purpose of getting drunk, for example).

The data also show a slight increase in the percentage of students experiencing negative secondary effects of drinking, such as suffering property damage, study and/or sleep interruptions, unwanted sexual advances, or taking care of a drunk friend or roommate.

"The bottom line is that the data, both nationally and locally, do not suggest huge changes in general, and, with only two points in time, it's hard to determine a trend," says Richard Keeling, University Health Services director. "If, however, we saw only the 1997 data, we would surely all agree that binge drinking is a critical public health problem for our campus."

Keeling is a co-principal investigator with Aaron Brower, associate professor of Social Work, on The RWJ Project, a major six-year grant from the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation to reduce high-risk drinking at UW-Madison.

"We're seeing progress," says Rob Adsit, RWJ Project coordinator. "New partners now come to us asking how they can help. There's growing faith in the ability of this project to effect major, sustainable change."

Following is a summary of the study results for UW-Madison. Some of the changes reported here may not be statistically significant.

From 1993 to 1997 there was an increase in the number of students who were "abstainers" (didn't drink during the previous year) and a slight decrease in the number of students who were binge drinkers. These trends parallel national trends. Binge drinking is defined as five drinks or more in a row for men and four drinks or more in a row for women.

- The percentage of students who were abstainers increased from 6 percent in 1993 to 9 percent in 1997.
- The percentage of students who drank but did not binge increased slightly from 29 percent in 1993 to 32 percent in 1997.
- The percentage of students who binge-drank one or more times during the two weeks prior to the survey decreased from 65 percent in 1993 to 59 percent in 1997.

In addition, 33 percent of students in 1997 reported that they binge drank in high school compared to 41 percent in 1993.

The drinking styles of students who did drink increased in intensity from 1993 to 1997.

- The percentage of UW-Madison students who drank on 10 or more occasions over a 30-day period increased from 17 percent in 1993 to 25 percent in 1997.
- The percentage of students whose typical drinking pattern is to binge decreased slightly from 51 percent in 1993 to 49 percent in 1997.
- The percentage of students who were drunk on three or more occasions during the month prior to the survey increased from 32 percent in 1993 to 39 percent in 1997.

The percentage of students who drink to get drunk increased from 55 percent in 1993 to 62 percent in 1997.

There were slight increases in the problems associated with binge drinking. These increases parallel national trends. As a result of their own drinking in 1997:

- 48 percent of UW-Madison students did something they regretted.
- 40 percent missed a class.
- 24 percent engaged in unplanned sexual activity.
- 23 percent drove after drinking.
- As a result of other students' binge drinking in 1997:
 - 66 percent of UW-Madison students had their studying or sleep interrupted.
 - 60 percent had to take care of a drunken roommate or friend.
 - 41 percent were insulted or humiliated.
 - 29 percent experienced an unwanted sexual advance.

FLU SHOT CLINIC COMING

Influenza, that nasty denizen of winter, is comin' round the mountain when it comes, when it comes, and drivin' six white horses when it comes, when it comes.

And do you know where that herd is headin'? Straight for your respiratory tract, pardner.

Unless you get a flu shot, of course, and such a shot is a snap to get this fall. Influenza immunization clinics will again be provided to faculty, staff and students by University Health Services, the Occupational Health Program of the UW-Madison Safety Department and the Visiting Nurse Service of Dane County.

The clinics are scheduled for 11 a.m. to 5 p.m., Nov. 2-3, at Memorial Union and Nov. 9-10 at Union South. More information on the immunization clinics can be found on the UHS web site, www.uhs.wisc.edu; for information about the flu, visit: www.cdc.gov/ncidod/diseases/flu/fluinfo.htm. WAR CRIMES PROSECUTOR

A former member of the legal team that prosecuted Nazi criminals after World War II will deliver a guest lecture Thursday at the UW-Madison Law School.

Walter Rockler, now a prominent Washington, D.C., attorney, will speak in Law Professor Frank Tuerkheimer's course on "The Holocaust: Facts, Trials, Verdicts and Post Verdicts." Rockler will discuss his experiences and answer questions. The class is open to the public and will meet in Room 2260 of the Law School, 975 Bascom Mall, from 3:30-5:30 p.m.

Jeff Isesinger

It's that squinty-eyed, snooze-button time of the morning, so early that owls are still flapping home after a hard night of hooting, so early that exercise seems, at least to some, a thoroughly unnatural act at this hour.

But for the women coming to this large Natatorium gym today at 6:40 a.m., as they do every Monday, Wednesday and Friday, exercise offers entry into a world of fitness and friendship they would be loath to ever leave.

Their leader is Mona Melms, aerobics coordinator for this exercise program sponsored by the Department of Preventive Medicine. She's cueing up her music and strapping on a headset and microphone, as 50 women walk around the gym to warm up.

"My goal is to make exercise so much fun they'll come back and back," says Melms. "I want to give them an important reason to wake up and get out of bed."

This exercise group began in 1980 as part of an osteoporosis study by Everett Smith, now an associate professor of preventive medicine. The study, which involved women from ages 35 to 65, found that participants showed reduced skeletal loss and greater bone density in the spine, as well as better cardiovascular fitness, compared to a control group.

The study concluded long ago, but the group stuck together — in more ways than one — and added new women. The question is, What nudges them out of bed so early for an hour of exercise three times a week, 50 weeks a year?

"This is one of the best things I've ever done in my life," says Ilse Riegel, 82, one of the group's original members. "I've always walked, but this program gives you a wide range of movement and balance. It proves you can be wonderfully active for as long as you live."

And Riegel is. She warms up for her thrice-weekly workout with a three-mile walk from home to the Nat. A native of Germany who moved to America at age 10, she now works parttime for the McArdle Lab for Cancer Research and does technical editing for scientific journals.

"Feel those calf muscles stretch!" says Melms with exuberance. She leads the women in warm-ups, accompanied by music that pops open the most sleep-encrusted eyes. The women pair up to do variations on a country-western theme of do-si-do and then briskly walk-on-the-Cajun-side around the gym.

"I couldn't run across the street before I joined this group," says Rosie Bass, 72. "I was asthmatic and taking lots of medications. This group saved my life."

Now retired, Bass formerly worked for the Memorial Union food service. She's active in fundraising activities for St. Jude's Children's Hospital in Memphis and Easter Seals of Wisconsin. And she keeps her food service skills sharp by making eggs continental for exercise-group parties at Halloween and other times.

The percussive beat of Paul Simon and company singing "Call Me Al" picks up the tempo as legs kick and arms swing, followed by an even-sprightlier "Leroy Brown" by Jim Croce, with the women strutting their stuff like dancers in an old Fred-and-Ginger movie. (Those who prefer a more "joint-friendly" workout, as Melms calls it, can choose a low-impact option in the class.)

The beauty of a big gym is that exercisers can move around, instead of going up-and-down while staying in place. No confinement, no machines, just natural movement.

"I like the camaraderie," says fiber artist Ginger Long, 62. "I joined the group in 1991 because I wanted to exercise with other people. When I'm away from them on travel, I feel the difference."

The women are doing aerobic dance steps from wall to wall, while Shirley Ellis sings that smash hit of hers from 1965, "The Name Game." Then comes a boogie-woogie sax number, and by the time Spyro Gyra's jazzy piece called "Shakedown" comes up, things are really jivin'. And just when you think the class has peaked, here comes a big-band rendition of "Flat Foot Floogie" as Melms counts the steps, "8-7-6-5, 4-3-2-1."

"I joined the group in January three years ago," says Peg Wallace, 52, "because I was feeling sluggish and needed a New Year's resolution. This is the first one I've ever kept." Wallace works for the Wisconsin Humanities Council. "It's improved my life tremendously by giving me more energy and friendships with women over a 40-year age range."

Now the cool-down. The women swing and sway to "Spanish Harlem," do sit-ups to "Singin' in the Rain" and stretch to "The Sunny Side of the Street."

"If I didn't come here, I wouldn't know how Lynn's daughter is doing in college or if Dorothy's sciatica has cleared up," says Sara Kerr-Persing, 42, who joined the class a year ago. "Everyone was so welcoming when I first came. My husband said it's like a cult, but no deprogramming is needed."

The cost of this "cult" of fitness and friendship is $120 for three months, and all are welcome. Call 263-2878 for details.

And for $120, you get a rare and wonderful package deal. "This has been a support group for us through illnesses and other family hardships," says Kathi Dwelle, 54, the "baby" of the original group and information technology worker.

Testimony to how much this group means to its members shines through in a story that Dwelle tells about a classmate. This woman had to undergo chemotherapy and missed several workouts. One reason she had to pull through, she told others in the group, was this: She then could climb out of bed three times a week expressly to jump and jive with her friends.

And, as it turned out, she did — and still does. ■

'GENERATION RED' PREPARES TO CELEBRATE BADGER HOMECOMING

MADISON - Organizers are confident this year's Badger Homecoming celebration on Saturday, Oct. 10, is going to be bigger and better than ever, largely because the Homecoming game between Wisconsin and the Purdue Boilermakers will be played under the lights at Camp Randall. The 7:30 p.m. kick-off will mark the first nighttime homecoming game held there.

The Homecoming Committee decided to take advantage of this unusual opportunity to maximize game-day festivities and give more alumni and friends of the university a chance to be a part of the celebration.

The day will begin with the First Annual Homecoming Golf Outing at University Ridge. The 18-hole contest will have a shotgunned start (tee time is 8:30 a.m.) and has been limited to 24 foursomes.

The Homecoming Parade, which has been held Fridays on the west end of campus in recent years, moves back to downtown Madison and State Street. It begins at 11:30 a.m. at Langdon Street and Wisconsin Avenue, travels down Wisconsin to Gilman Street, Gilman to State, and State to Library Mall, where there will be a pep rally immediately following (at approximately 1 p.m.).

The grand marshal of this year's parade will be Billy Marek, who was Wisconsin's all-time leading rusher until tailback Ron Dayne broke his 23-year, 3,709-yard record during the Sept. 19 game against UNLV. Marek, who played for the Badgers from 1972-75, is now an Illinois sporting goods executive.

Parade-goers may also want to stop by the Kohl Center, where there will be an open house from 1-4 p.m. Free guided tours of the first-floor concourse will be offered every half hour. Visitors should enter at Gates A or B. Free parking will be available in Lot 91 on Frances Street in spaces marked with yellow stripes.

This year's Homecoming theme, "Generation Red," unites all Badger fans past, present and future, according to Homecoming Committee co-chair Danny Nicholas.

"We wanted a short theme that incorporated our infamous Badger spirit and summed up the traditional celebration we call Homecoming. It relates to our generation because we've been tagged 'Generation X,'" says Nicholas.

Other Homecoming activities leading up to Saturday's finale include:

- * A Charity 5K Run/3K Walk, Oct. 4, noon, across from Memorial Union. Registration is from 10 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. on Library Mall, and costs $15. Individual awards are given to the top three male and female finishers and for best participation from residence halls, student organizations and Greek houses.

 "A Celebration of Cultures," Oct. 4, 4- 7 p.m., Memorial Union.

This event features ethnic food and music presented by student organizations, and is a great opportunity to learn more about the various cultures that help make UW-Madison such a diverse community.

 Badger Games, Oct. 5, 7 p.m. at the McClain Center.

Greek, residence hall and student organizations face off in a variety of fun and interesting competitions.

 "Yell Like Hell," Oct. 6, 7 p.m., Memorial Union steps, weather permitting.

This is a long-time Badger tradition in which Greek organizations and student groups create and perform chants and cheers based on the Homecoming theme in hopes of taking home the honors.

 Swap Day, Oct. 7.

University and area celebrities and community leaders will swap places with students for half a day. Students purchase raffle tickets for a chance to make the swap.

 Banners competition, Oct. 7, noon to 3 p.m., Library Mall.

Participating organizations create murals based on the Homecoming theme, using many different types of materials. The entries are judged by a panel of faculty and staff.

 "Dizzy Izzy," Oct. 8, 4:30-6:30 p.m., Bascom Hill.

A timed relay of sorts involving eight-member teams from residence halls and student organizations. Participants run halfway down the hill, try to put their foreheads on a baseball bat standing upright on the ground and run around it eight times, then attempt to run back up the hill and tag the next team member. If you think it sounds confusing, wait until you see it!

All proceeds from Homecoming events and apparel sales go to support the Dean of Students Crisis Fund. Last year, $10,000 was raised.

1997 BADGER HOMECOMING PROMISES TO BE A 'MASTERPIECE IN MADTOWN'

MADISON - Homecoming at the University of Wisconsin-Madison will be celebrated a bit later than usual this year, but organizers don't expect the November chill to dampen the enthusiasm of their fellow students, alumni and the community.

The festivities will begin on Sunday, Nov. 2, and end with the Wisconsin-Iowa football game on Saturday, Nov. 8. Homecoming co-chairs Phyllis Sklar and Sara Norton have high hopes for this year's theme, "Masterpiece in Madtown," subtitled "A Classy Craziiness."

"This is a crazy town and we have our own brand of humor, tradition and fun, infused with a degree of style and charm," says Sklar. "Everyone knows that football fans are some of the craziest in the world, making students at Madtown and our football team a force to be reckoned with!"

"At the same time, a masterpiece is being made," adds Norton. "Our classrooms have some of the top professors and our students are constantly at the top of their class. And the traditions and masterpieces that students before us have made create the whole UW-Madison experience."

The public is invited to join in the Homecoming events, which include:

 the Charity Run/Walk, starting at noon on Sunday, Nov. 2, on the Library Mall. Registration is $15 on the day of the race, and begins at 10 a.m. on the mall.

 the Celebration of Cultures, featuring ethnic foods and entertainment provided by various student organizations, Sunday, Nov. 2, 3:30-7 p.m. in the Memorial Union's Lakefront Cafeteria. There is a small charge for food items.

 the Homecoming parade on Friday, Nov. 7, starting at 5:30 p.m. at Lot 60 on the west end of campus. Suzy Favor Hamilton, former Badger and nine-time NCAA champion, two-time Olympian, and the winner of the most Big Ten titles of any male or female athlete with 23, will be this year's grand marshal.

The units will travel along Walnut Street to Observatory Drive, then east on Observatory Drive to Elm Drive, south on Elm to Linden Drive, east on Linden to Babcock Drive, north on Babcock Drive to Observatory, and west on Observatory to Elm Drive

A pep rally will follow the parade at approximately 6:30 p.m. on the Natatorium fields at Elm and Observatory drives.

(Parking will be available in several university lots along the parade route. The route itself will be closed to traffic from approximately 5:25 p.m. until the parade is over.)

University employees and students who park in campus parking lots along the parade route, including in the Lakeshore residence halls area, should be aware that the route will be closed to thru traffic for about an hour beginning just before 5:30 p.m. Cars left in those lots after 5:30 p.m. will have to remain there until the parade is over.

Observatory Drive between Charter Street and Babcock Drive and Linden Drive between Charter Street and Babcock Drive will be open to local traffic only during the parade. There will no thru traffic east or westbound on Observatory and Linden drives during the parade.

People who need to access to University Hospital and Clinics or Eagle Heights while the parade is in progress should plan to take Highland Avenue or University Bay Drive.

Parade goers should be able to find parking in one of several campus lots which are open to the public after 5 p.m., and will have plenty of good viewing opportunities along the route.

• The Amazon: development may not be so bad after all

The common wisdom among many people who study the social and economic realities of the Amazon basin is that extractive foreign development — mining, timber harvesting, agriculture and rubber tapping — contributes to the impoverishment of the people who have settled there. However, the first detailed study of the socioeconomic development of the people in Brazil's two million square miles of the Amazon basin by a long-time Amazon scholar indicates that the conditions of the estimated 16 million people living there actually improved over time.

Using data for the decade 1970-80, UW-Madison professor of rural sociology Archibald Haller found that large-scale economic development of Amazonia raised socioeconomic levels in virtually every corner of the Amazon frontier. 1970-80 is the only time frame for which data on the economic well-being of the people who live in the Amazon exist, and it was the decade when substantial investments were made in development of the region.

Haller's findings run counter to the widely-held perception that large-scale development imposed a decline in the economic well-being of the people who have settled the Amazon. Haller cautions, however, that the material benefits have not improved the personal security of people who have made the Amazon their home. As in the "old west" of the U.S., conflict is more than common, he says. Reach Haller at (608) 271-0852, 263-2899.

A new way to go home

Parade cuts through west side of campus

Liz Beyler

This year's Homecoming parade on Oct. 18 will travel a new route through the campus. It will begin at Lot 60 at 5:30 p.m., with staging to take place in the lot starting at 3:30 p.m. The parade will head south on Walnut Street to Observatory Drive, then follow this route: east on Observatory to Elm Drive, a right turn onto Elm, proceed to Linden Drive, take Linden east to Babcock Drive, take Babcock north to Observatory, take Observatory west to Elm and go north on Elm.

The parade will feature dozens of units, including many floats, local celebrities and members of the UW Marching Band. It will be followed by a Badger pep rally on the field east of the Natatorium.

Actor, singer/songwriter and UW-Madison alumnus Tom Wopat will serve as the parade's grand marshal.

This year's Homecoming theme is "Making A Statement," which Homecoming Committee co-chair Will Campbell says fits UW-Madison well.

"No matter what the occasion or season — whether it's a rally to register voters, a protest, a parade or a football game — UW-Madison and its students always make a statement," says Campbell. "This year's theme is a celebration of the energy, excitement, enthusiasm and commitment that the university community has for whatever reason or cause."

The dollars raised through Homecoming events go to support the Dean of Students Crisis Fund.

Those who park in lots along the parade route, including near the Lakeshore residence halls, should be aware that the route will be closed to thru traffic for about an hour beginning just before 5:30 p.m. Observatory Drive between Charter Street and Babcock Drive, and Linden Drive between Charter and Babcock will be open to local traffic only during the parade.

Inventions include the lawn mower, invented by John A. Burr; the gas mask and traffic signal, invented by Garrett Morgan; the fire extinguisher, invented by Tom J. Marshall; the refrigerator, by J. Standard; and the roller coaster and telephone transmitter, by Granville T. Woods.

Shown in dozens of universities, churches and libraries across the country, the museum is a non-profit corporation founded by book publisher Lady Sala S. Shabazz.

The museum has great value in bringing out the faces and names behind inventions, and showing their connection to black history, Harris says. "Just the awareness of these contributions can lead to more confidence and motivation in young people. It's all about changing mindsets."

Another portion of the exhibit deals with major advances in African civilization, such as paper, medicine and the alphabet, which are illustrated through ancient African artifacts.

WBESS is working with local schools to organize field trips to the exhibit. For details, call Harris at 262-5139 or via email at harris@cae.wisc.edu.

Funding for the exhibit was provided by the Wisconsin Alumni Research Foundation and 10 UW-Madison offices.

RE: Homecoming traffic/safety advisory for 10/27/95

Several streets in the campus area will be closed to traffic during portions of Friday, Oct. 27, for the UW-Madison Homecoming parade and preparations leading up to it. We would appreciate it if you could notify your readers, listeners and viewers of these closings to help minimize traffic problems in the area on parade day. The parade itself gets underway at 5:30 p.m.

Here are the street closings and times:

- From 12:30 p.m. to 3 p.m., Langdon Street between Lake and Henry streets will be closed to vehicle traffic;
- At 2 p.m., the block of Marion Street (on the side of Howard Johnson's) between W. Johnson and W. Dayton streets closes;
- At 3 p.m., Frances Street south of W. Johnson Street and Lake Street south of W. Dayton Street, will be closed to traffic until the end of the parade;
- At approximately 5:20 p.m., the parade route itself will be shut down until the end of the parade. This includes W. Dayton Street from Bassett Street west to Randall Avenue, Randall Avenue from W. Dayton Street to Monroe Street and Monroe Street to Regent Street. In addition, Park Street from W. Johnson to Spring streets will be closed during the parade. These streets will be re-opened following the parade, at approximately 6:30 p.m.

Madison police would like to remind spectators to stay out of the roadways along the route while the parade is in progress. Some dangerous situations have existed in recent years when the crowd encroached on parade units and children ran out to gather candy and other items thrown from passing floats and vehicles. To ensure everyone's safety, parade watchers are asked to stay on the curbs and sidewalks.

1995 HOMECOMING PROMISES TO BE 'CELEBRATION OF THE CENTURY'

MADISON — Homecoming Week 1995 at the University of Wisconsin-Madison is being billed as the "Celebration of the Century," a theme chosen to coincide with the 100th anniversary of the Big Ten Conference.

In January 1895, the University of Wisconsin was among seven Midwestern universities represented at a meeting in Chicago which led to the formation of what is still officially known as the Intercollegiate Conference of Faculty Representatives. The organization subsequently adopted uniform procedures for athletic competition among the schools involved.

The public is, of course, invited to join in this year's Homecoming festivities. The annual Homecoming parade will take place on Friday, Oct. 27, starting at 5:30 p.m. More than 70 units, including many floats and the UW Marching Band, will be participating.

The parade begins at Frances and W. Dayton streets, travels west on Dayton to Randall Avenue and up Monroe Street to the Field House, where there will be a pep rally at 6:30 p.m. The crowd is invited to stay and cheer for the UW women's volleyball team as it takes on Penn State at 8 p.m.

Other Homecoming events which might be of interest to the community include:

- Sunday, Oct. 22 — the annual Homecoming Charity Run/Walk, noon, originating on the Library Mall, with registration starting at 9:30 a.m. at that location. The registration fee is $15 on the day of the event. Proceeds from this and other Homecoming events go to support the Dean of Students Crisis Fund.

- Sunday, Oct. 22 — "A Celebration of Culture," 3:30 p.m.-7 p.m. in the Memorial Union's Lakefront Cafeteria. This gathering features ethnic foods (at a minimal cost) and entertainment provided by several student organizations. Come and learn more about the different cultures and ethnic groups that make up the UW-Madison community.
- Monday, Oct. 23 — Badger Games, 7 p.m.-9 p.m. at the McClain Center. It's not quite like the Olympics! Students participate in some crazy team competitions, including the dress-up three-legged relay, hoola hoop relay and tower building. Organizers are urging faculty teams to enter the games, too. Teams report at 6:30 p.m.
- Tuesday, Oct. 24 — the time-honored "Yell Like Hell" competition, 7 p.m.-8 p.m. on the steps of the Memorial Union; teams from the Greek system, residence halls and other independent student organizations are judged on creativity, originality and presentation as they chant, scream or yell cheers and songs they have prepared.
- Saturday, Oct. 28 — the big Homecoming football game! Watch the Badgers take on Michigan State and join in celebrating the 100th anniversary of the Big Ten. Kick-off has been moved up to 11:20 a.m. to accommodate television coverage.

The co-chairs of this year's Homecoming Committee are Amy Martinez and Scott Hawley. For more information or a complete schedule of Homecoming events, call the Homecoming Hotline at (608) 265-2731.

Homecoming celebration focuses on 'building a legend'

By Liz Beyler

"Building A Legend" is the theme of the week-long Homecoming celebration which closes with the Wisconsin-Minnesota football game at Camp Randall on Saturday, Oct. 22.

"Homecoming week serves as a platform to show off the university and all of its present and past successes," said Nelson Corazzari, Homecoming Committee co-chair.

"In choosing this theme, we wanted to build on the legend of UW-Madison's first Rose Bowl victory and recognize other athletic teams for their success," Corazzari said. "But Homecoming is about more than athletics. Our legends are building in other areas, too, such as the new Grainger Hall of Business and our highly rated medicine and engineering programs. A legend is something that will stand the test of time and so will the university and its accomplishments."

Wisconsin fans are invited to cheer on their Rose Bowl-winning team at a big Homecoming pep rally on Thursday, Oct. 20, at 7 p.m. at the Field House. The Badgers' starting lineup and some of the coaches will be there, along with Bucky Badger, members of the UW Marching Band, the cheerleaders and pompon squad. Basketball coaches Stan Van Gundy and Jane Albright-Dieterle also will join in the festivities.

The Homecoming parade, featuring some 80 units including floats, the UW Marching Band and Milwaukee's award-winning North Division High School Marching Band, steps off from the corner of Frances and Dayton streets on Friday, Oct. 21, at 6 p.m. The parade will travel west on Dayton Street to Randall Avenue, down Randall to Monroe Street and up Monroe to the Field House. Organizers hope that thousands of spectators will line the route.

Here are some of the other scheduled events:

• Thursday, Oct. 20: The disorienting "Dizzy Izzy" takes place on Bascom Hill from 3:30 p.m. to 5:30 p.m. Participating students run part way down the hill, then try to put their foreheads on a baseball bat standing upright on the ground and run around the bat eight times. Then they attempt to run back up the hill and tag the next team member. This timed event, involving eight-member teams, is open to students who live in residence halls or belong to general student organizations.

At 5:30 p.m., the cheerleaders, Bucky Badger and the pompon squad leave the Natatorium aboard the Bucky Wagon to round up students as part of the Spirit Parade to the Field House pep rally.

• Saturday, Oct. 22: Homecoming game, Wisconsin vs. Minnesota, 1:05 p.m., Camp Randall Stadium; the Homecoming Court will be introduced at half time.

Proceeds from all Homecoming events and product sales are donated to the Dean of Students Crisis Fund. Homecoming Committee Advisor Ann Groves Lloyd of the Wisconsin Alumni Association said the amount raised has varied from $5,000 to $17,000 in past years.

Alumni House: Breaking ground for the 21st century

Official groundbreaking ceremonies for the Alumni House expansion and renovation are set for 3:30 p.m. on Oct. 21. Members of university community have been invited to attend, along with donors to the expansion fund. A reception in the Alumni House Lounge will be held immediately following groundbreaking presentations.

Dignitaries invited to participate in festivities include Governor Tommy Thompson, Chancellor David Ward, UW System President Katharine Lyall, WAA President Tom Prosser, Building Committee Chair Ted Kellner, and the family of Martin and Florence Below — represented by Beverly Below Fetzer and Wade Fetzer.

At last year's Homecoming events, WAA announced a lead gift of $1.1 million to honor the leadership of Martin and Florence Below — both members of the Class of 1924. Given by Bev Below '60 and Wade Fetzer '59 of Glencoe, Illinois, this gift acknowledges a long-time commitment to Wisconsin by the Below-Fetzer family. The UW Board of Regents and the State Building Committee have approved a request that the new facility be named The Martin and Florence Below Alumni Center.

The Alumni House marks the entrance to the lower campus and the beginning of the Lakeshore Path, which extends to Picnic Point, Frautschi Point and beyond. Expansion plans call for an addition toward Lake Street to create a grand lobby, conference room, alumni library and terrace overlooking Lake Mendota. Looking toward the Memorial Union Terrace, an extension is planned to include a lunch room and terrace on the lake and administrative offices for WAA staff.

A third extension is planned between the current facility and the Wisconsin Center. This area will house a new Student Relations Center for the 100-plus student volunteers working with WAA.

Actual construction will begin a few weeks following groundbreaking ceremonies and it's anticipated the project will be completed within 10 to 12 months. While the project is underway, the WAA administrative offices will relocate to a dining room on the ground floor of the Gordon Commons Residence Halls complex — between Sellery and Witte. Telephone numbers and the WAA mailing address will remain the same.

WAA continues to encourage alumni and friends to make gifts to the UW Foundation, earmarked for the Alumni House Expansion Project, until the goal of $2.2 million has been reached.

Chancellor's Scholarship Program helps 'personalize the campus'

fall 1995. Shears has a bit of advice for others who are considering applying to be a Chancellor's Scholar: "Pursue it with all of your vigor, because there's nothing that can contribute to your self-confidence like having others confer confidence in you," Shears says.

Quynh Bui, an Asian American senior majoring in chemistry education and a member of the 1990 class of scholars, told the audience that the program's mentors and sponsors have "shaped the rest of our (scholars') lives." "My wish is for everybody at this university to have the same opportunities that we as scholars have had," said Bui, who is from Coon Rapids, Minn.

"The Chancellor's Scholarship Program has enriched the diversity of our student body, expanded the educational opportunities available to the participants and enhanced the quality of education for all students."

Chancellor David Ward

To date, the Chancellor's Scholarship Program has provided valuable financial resources as well as academic and co-curricular activities to enhance the undergraduate educational experience of 169 students from historically underrepresented ethnic minority groups (African American, Hispanic American, American Indian and Asian American). And not just any level of academic achievement qualifies a student for a scholarship: The program's scholarships are awarded based on merit — not hardship.

Once selected, each scholar is paired with a faculty or staff mentor knowledgeable about university resources, and through activities with people in the business, professional and corporate worlds, scholars may explore career opportunities or participate in internships.

Sage Fuller Cowles, a UW-Madison

graduate and the program's most generous donor, says when she first learned about the CSP she felt that it was "just right" — a program that matched her beliefs and her dreams for the future. "I feel very strongly about people getting a fair shake in this society, and I think people of color — especially people of African American heritage — have a very difficult time. I think this program gives the students and all of us a positive boost for the future."

The special relationship between scholars and mentors can be seen in the case of former UW-Madison Chancellor Irving Shain — who endorsed and approved the program and who is one of its strongest supporters — and Julian Bobb, a first-year biochemistry major from Maryland.

"Irving Shain is a wonderful person," says Bobb, an African American. "It's just nice to have an older friend who is established and who's so knowledgeable in the ways of the university and in the ways of the world. It's just good to form a personal bond with other people — especially someone like Mr. Shain."

"Julian is a very sharp young man, and I think that he's going to be very successful and a real credit to the university and to the program," says Shain, who is a very active retiree.

Chancellor Ward says the CSP is unique for the contributions made by and the involvement of faculty and staff. "Some of our finest faculty and staff serve as mentors for the scholars. They help to personalize the campus through interaction and activities beyond the classroom," Ward says.

Overall, he says the CSP has been a valuable asset to UW-Madison and one of its most successful programs.

"The Chancellor's Scholarship Program has enriched the diversity of our student body, expanded the educational opportunities available to the participants and enhanced the quality of education for all students. By their achievements, these scholars promise to bring great credit to UW-Madison and to the Chancellor's Scholarship Program," Ward says.

Lee says two goals that were set when the program was established — to enroll 25 scholars annually and to establish an endowment to support 100 continuously enrolled scholars — are 50 percent fulfilled. "Twenty-five scholars enrolled this fall, and we now have an endowment of about $1.7 million."

"We are confident that we will achieve the endowment goal in the years ahead with the generous support of our friends," Lee says.

"I'm very excited about the future — these talented young people will be leaders in their communities and professions — the support and gifts that we've received have truly made a difference."

For more information about how to support the program, please call the UW Foundation at 263-4545.

Chancellor Emeritus and mentor Irving Shain, above right, talks with Julian Bobb, first-year student and Chancellor's Scholar class of 1994, above left, at a celebration marking the 10th anniversary of the Chancellor's Scholarship Program. At left, Mercile Lee, assistant vice chancellor and the program's director, greets donors Sage Fuller Cowles and John Cowles. "I think this program gives the students and all of us a positive boost for the future," says Sage Cowles.

Happy times

There was plenty to cheer about as a myriad of activities filled last weekend's Homecoming. Students showed school spirit during Friday evening's parade, at left, as they walked along a float sponsored by Delta Upsilon and Kappa Kappa Tau. And during the 5th Quarter celebration following the football game, below, Homecoming King Kevin Waeghe danced with Homecoming committee member Joni Schroeder. The Badgers secured a 53-14 victory over Northwestern at Saturday's game.

Homecoming '92: Campaign for Victory

Campaign for Victory is the theme for Homecoming '92 at UW-Madison. Special events begin this Friday and will run through the Badger/Boilermaker football game on Saturday, Oct. 17.

While Homecoming is a time for alumni to return to their alma mater, it is also a time for current students to celebrate and to help raise money for the Dean of Students Crisis Fund—an emergency loan program for students.

Highlights of this year's events include:

Oct. 9: Multicultural Food and Dance Extravaganza

• Once again Homecoming's kick-off event, there'll be dancing and ethnic foods from 7 to 9 p.m. in the Beefeaters Room of the Memorial Union. Admission is free. The event will be followed by stand-up comedy from Pat McCurdy.

Oct. 11: Charity Run/Walk

• Up to 1,500 contestants will take part in this 5K run and 2.5 mile walk, leaving at 10 a.m. from the Memorial Union; proceeds from this event and from all Homecoming activities benefit the Dean of Students Crisis Fund.

Oct. 12: Badger Games

• Students from residence halls, Greek houses and student organizations compete in events ranging from miniature golf to tug-of-war. Activities get underway at 7 p.m. in the McClain Center.

Oct. 13: Yell Like Hell

• In this time-honored tradition, residence halls, student organizations and Greek houses compete to see who can come up with the best cheer. Hear it all from the Memorial Union Terrace at 7:30 p.m.

Oct. 14: Swap Day

• Students buy raffle tickets for a chance to trade places for a half-day with university and business leaders. The administrators and executives attend classes while the students "cover" their jobs, and then they all convene for lunch. Those scheduled to participate are: Mike Leckrone, marching band director; Mary Rouse, dean of students; Pat Richter, athletic director; Jeff Sauer, Badger hockey coach; Paula Bonner, assistant director of the WAA; Ann Zanzig, director of the Center for New Student Development; Peg Davey, assistant to the chancellor; Sue Riseling, chief of police; Bucky Badger; Paul Berge, M&I president; Bill

Haight, publisher of In Business; and Randy Wright, former quarterback and now the voice of the Badgers.

• Banners competition: Banners created by students are judged on their creative rendition of the Homecoming theme. The proud pennants will be displayed for the public on the Library Mall from 3 to 6 p.m.

Oct. 15: Dizzy Izzy

• Members of residence hall houses run circles around a baseball bat until they get dizzy and then test their equilibrium by racing up Bascom Hill. It all begins at 4 p.m. on Bascom Hill.

Oct. 16: Homecoming Parade/Pep rally

• Grand Marshall Bucky Badger will reign over the ever-popular parade, which will depart at 6 p.m. from the corner of Frances and Dayton streets, heading over to the Field House for a pep rally with the UW and alumni bands. The Badgers play host to Ohio State in volleyball at 8 p.m.

Oct. 17: Football

• Wisconsin plays host to Purdue at 1:05 p.m. at Camp Randall Stadium.

Will you be true?

The UW Homecoming Committee is hard at work to make sure you will.

"Be True to Your School."

Homecoming 1991 is quickly approaching and I want to extend a special invitation to you to join in this time honored tradition.

Homecoming is a time of excitement, healthy competition, reminiscing college days and for some it is a time of anticipation about what the next four years will offer.

Over the past five months, the UW Homecoming Committee has been hard at work planning the week long celebration. This years homecoming is sure to bring many new exciting changes that will make you true to your school. Homecoming was planned with three major goals in mind: to allow students to participate in the celebration and show pride in their school, to encourage alumni and the Madison community to join in the festivities (many of the events have been moved to evening times and to indoor locations for convenience and appeal to all), perhaps, however, the most important reason the activities are organized is to raise money for the Dean of Students' Crisis Fund. Last year

$13,000 was raised. This year it is our goal to raise $20,000. The Dean of Students' Crisis Fund provides dollars quickly for students who have no other source in case of crisis or emergency. This allows the student to deal with the problem at hand and remain in school.

UW Homecoming week begins Saturday October 19th with a Multi-Cultural Dance and ends Saturday October 26th when the Wisconsin Badgers take on Indiana. Residence halls, student organizations and the Greek system are participating in full force this year and are looking forward to a little friendly competition. However, this year's Homecoming Committee has been actively seeking more participation and awareness in the Madison community and with the UW Alumni. For the successful attainment of this goal, the UW Homecoming Committee relies heavily on the exposure the events receive before and during homecoming week. It is our hope that proper coverage of all of the events will allow the University and the Madison community to work more closely in the future. Please join us in our celebration of tradition as we are "True to Our School!"

Homecoming activities "Red Hot"

WI. Week 10/26/88

By Liz Garton

Homecoming evokes simple images of old friends, tissue paper floats and football games, but the modern-day version of the homecoming tradition is a week-long, spiced-up event.

"Red Hot In '88 . . . The Heat Is On" is the theme for this year's UW Homecoming. The week of activities, organized by a student-run Homecoming committee, began last Saturday with a charity run.

Homecoming includes a series of competitions and get-togethers that all benefit the Student Crisis Fund in the Dean of Students Office. The Homecoming committee has donated its proceeds from the charity run, Union barbecue and other events for the last three years. Last year's donation totaled $7,500. That figure is expected to at least double this year.

Another campus organization will benefit from the week as well. Youngblood at Union South is the blood donation site for the Homecoming Blood Drive, which runs Wednesday, Oct. 26 through Thursday, Oct. 27 from noon to 4 p.m. All students, faculty and staff are encouraged to give blood.

The charity aspect of Homecoming began in 1985, the first year Homecoming made a profit. A $2,000 donation was made to the Crisis Fund that year.

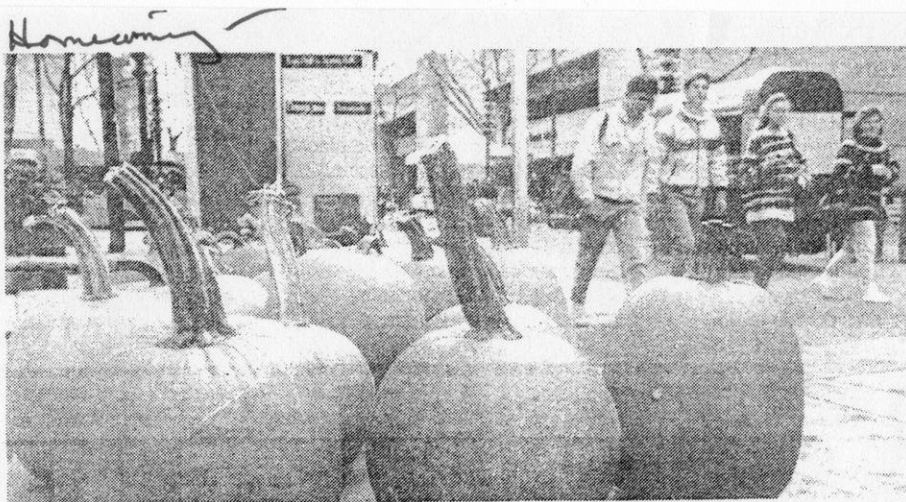

According to Mike Kraus, co-chairman of the Homecoming committee, Homecoming is changing, but not dying out.

"This year will be the biggest ever, by far," Kraus said.

At least 21 teams from the Greek community, university residence halls and campus organizations will be competing in the week's events. Paired teams of sororities and fraternities make up the largest group of participants. The float contest is the big event, and competitors will be busy all week building floats to the "Red Hot" theme at the fraternity houses.

Invitations to all Homecoming events are extended to the university community. The traditional parade (Friday, Oct. 28 at noon) down State Street will include the float competition and the Homecoming court. The band, the cheerleaders and Bucky will be on hand to help boost Badger spirits at the Friday afternoon pep rally on the Memorial Union Terrace beginning at 1:30 p.m.

Homecoming will culminate with the Wisconsin-Purdue game at Camp Randall on Saturday beginning at 1:05 p.m. ■

A PACK OF PUMPKINS beckoned students to buy them this week on the Library Mall. Halloween this year brings a first "Monster Bash" at the UW Field House and reminders from Madison Police that, without the sponsorship of the Wisconsin Student Association for a State Street party, open alcohol containers will not be allowed there on Halloween.

Monster Bash to offer alcohol-free celebration

WI. Week 10/26/88

By Chuck Nowlen

As many as 6,000 ghosts, ghouls and goblins are expected to revel in an alcohol-free UW Field House this Halloween night when the Wisconsin Student Association, the Wisconsin Union Directorate and other groups put on "Monster Bash '88."

The event, to be held Monday, Oct. 31 from 8 p.m. to 2 a.m., will draw party animals from UW-Madison and many other system campuses, said Ralph Russo, WUD program adviser.

Costume contests, two $500 cash door prizes and continuous screenings of 3-D movie classics, "It Came From Outer Space" and "Return of the Creature" will highlight the rain-sheltered party, Russo said.

And of course there will be plenty of opportunity to strut the Monster Mash and Transylvania Twist, he said.

"Basically, it's going to be one big dance party," he said. "There's going to be a lot of wild stuff going on."

The party is free for anyone with UW System identification, and each participant may bring in one friend, Russo explained.

The first 700 people will be given 3-D glasses. The list of "hundreds of door prizes" includes albums, T-shirts, movie tickets, food and clothing coupons and many other items donated by State Street merchants, Russo said.

Free parking will be provided at campus parking lots 17, 18 and 19, which are adjacent to the Field House and Camp Randall Stadium.

Free shuttle buses also will run to and from Monster Bash '88, the Southeast area residence halls, Elizabeth Waters Hall, Schlichter Hall and the Memorial Union.

Russo said Monster Bash '88 will replace past WSA-sponsored Halloween parties on State Street. The change was made in part because insurance costs for a State Street location were prohibitively high, especially during the Memorial Library construction.

Organizers also wanted to come up with rain- and alcohol-free fun, he added.

"People thought State Street had gotten somewhat out of hand," Russo said.

"They got tired of what had become just a lot of totally drunken craziness. They thought, 'Hey, it'll be a lot of fun without all the alcohol.'"

Madison Police Lt. Michael Hughes said he expected some Halloween night activity on State Street. He noted, however, there have been no permits issued to close streets or allow drinking outside.

Open liquor containers on the street will bring $91 citations, and other problems will be handled as circumstances dictate, Hughes said.

"We're hopeful that we'll have minimal activity on State Street, just based on the fact that WSA isn't sponsoring a party there this year," he said. "We're definitely encouraging people not to go down there unless they're willing to comply with all the ordinances . . . We'll try to be a position to take whatever action is necessary."

A beefed-up force of about 50 police officers will be on duty in the State Street and Field House areas, Hughes said. Campus Police and Security also plan to add extra officers around the Field House and the Memorial Library Mall, Capt. Robert Hartwig said.

The UW-Madison Athletic Department, the Chancellor's Office, Pizza Pit, Z-104 radio, La Croix beverages and MTV are co-sponsors of Monster Bash '88. ■

Aladdin dedicated

WI. Week 10/22/86

Monday's (Oct. 20) dedication of "Aladdin"—the electron storage ring at UW-Madison's Synchrotron Radiation Center—could be called the light at the end of the tunnel.

Recalling "darker hours" when technical troubles dimmed Aladdin's future, UW-Madison Chancellor Irving Shain said he now can leave UW-Madison "with considerable confidence that people here will indeed insure that Aladdin's future will be bright."

SRC director David L. Huber said Aladdin fills a niche in the nation's demand for high energy light sources needed to keep the U.S. competitive in manufacturing such things as computer microchips.

Aladdin generates and houses a powerful electron beam which races around its 286-foot ring at nearly the speed of light. However, early in the ring's development, trapped ions—positively charged atoms—limited Aladdin's beam to a tiny fraction of its intended output. That caused the National Science Foundation to withdraw its heavy funding of the project in June, 1985.

Aladdin designer Ednor M. Rowe credited Shain with "coming to the rescue and giving us the chance to prove that the machine would really work."

Shain recalled, "Every night I checked my electronic mail to see what Aladdin's currents were for that day. I'd watch them inching up, inching up, to see if the commitment we'd made to the viability of Aladdin was going to come true."

Members of the Madison area press toured Aladdin Synchrotron Radiation Center after the dedication program on Monday.

The long-awaited moment came early in 1986, when Aladdin surpassed performance goals. Last spring, NSF restored funding to Aladdin at just under $9 million for three years.

"There were genies hidden in this Aladdin's lamp," Shain said. "It took the right kind of stroking to get them to emerge."

Rowe added, "A lot of people said the machine wouldn't work. But like the bumblebee which aerodynamically shouldn't fly, we went ahead and did it anyway." ■

'Surf's up' for Homecoming '86 action

WI. Week 10/22/86

By Mary Ellen Bell

Organizers for Homecoming '86—"Catch the Wave"—plan to flood UW-Madison this week with competitions and celebrations of student and alumni pride.

Festivities crest Saturday with the football game against Illinois and the semiformal Homecoming Ball, but related events have been under way since last weekend.

This year's activities are sponsored by Coca Cola rather than a beer company, said Homecoming Chair Debbie Osborn, who explained that the committee hopes to de-emphasize drinking at this year's celebrations. She also said proceeds earned from entry fees and tickets for homecoming events will be donated to the Dean of Student's Crisis Fund.

Here's what's coming up during these last days of homecoming week:

The traditional spirit parade featuring the marching band, cheerleaders, and Bucky Badger will circle the campus starting at 6 p.m. Thursday, rounding up participants and spectators for "Yell like Hell" on the Memorial Union steps from 7 p.m. to about 9:30 p.m.

Another parade, with three Zor Shrine camels leading homecoming floats around Capitol Square and down State Street to the Library Mall, will begin at noon Friday. A pep rally on the Mall follows at 1 p.m.

A barbecue on the Memorial Union Terrace highlighted by a performance by the Wisconsin Singers and a fireworks display over the lake will run from Friday afternoon through early evening.

The Class of 1961 and School of Business alums will get together at reunions Saturday morning before the Badgers face the Illini. The game begins at 1:05 p.m. at Camp Randall Stadium. During halftime, the homecoming king and queen and their court will be presented. The Homecoming Ball, in Memorial Union's Great Hall, starts at 8:30 p.m. with music by Allen Chase's 17-piece big band. Tickets for the ball cost $7.

Other homecoming events have included an unsuccessful attempt to break the world record for the largest game of Twister, which attracted 1,400 players last Sunday, a five-kilometer run along the lakeshore last Saturday and an all-campus blood drive. ■

UW PARTIES FOCUSING ON FUN, NOT LIQUOR

By MARY ELLEN BELL
University News Service

MADISON--Homecoming and Halloween -- two of University of Wisconsin-Madison's annual major-league parties -- promise plenty of the traditional hoopla, high spirits, and hilarity. But organizers this year are de-emphasizing the "hootch."

For years, UW-Madison homecoming events have been sponsored by a brewery. This year the homecoming committee sought out a soft drink company, Coca Cola, as its sponsor. WSA, which turned the spontaneous Halloween street gathering into an organized university event in 1979 by booking bands, sponsoring a costume contest and setting up beer booths, has announced it will sell no beer this year.

The change reflects an increasingly sober trend in planning university social events. Dean of Students Paul Ginsberg believes these changes are not simply reactions to the state law raising the drinking age to 21 years of age.

"I believe that, finally, people are beginning to think differently about drinking," Ginsberg said. "Right now, these actions might be more symbolic than substantive, but it is important symbolism. I am very pleased by it."

Debbie Osborn, who is the chair of the homecoming committee, said her group decided to find a non-alcoholic sponsor as a way of discouraging drinking at homecoming parties and other events.

Add 1--celebrations

Proceeds from money-making events during homecoming week, culminating with Saturday's (Oct. 25) Wisconsin-Illinois football game, will benefit the Dean of Students Crisis Fund. The fund is used to help students who are facing emergencies. Osborn said the committee hopes to raise several thousand dollars from entry fees for a five-kilometer run and several other contests and from ticket sales for the Homecoming Ball.

"We know that some people will be drinking this weekend," Osborn said. "But we wanted to find a non-alcoholic sponsor because we do not believe we should be encouraging people to drink."

WSA treasurer Michael Inners, a member of the committee organizing the Halloween party, said the student government organization expects at least 40,000 people to show up in weird costumes on State Street on Oct. 31. He said the absence of beer stands should have not affect attendance.

"The beer is not what brings people out there," he said.

Inners said WSA has sold as much as $50,000 worth of beer at Halloween parties in past years, but he said beer sales brought high expenses for overhead and liability insurance. This year the Madison City Council would have required WSA to purchase $500,000 in liability insurance if beer were sold at the event.

"Trying to sell beer again would have been an administrative nightmare," Inners said.

Although WSA is not selling beer, revelers will be allowed to bring alcoholic beverages to the street party. WSA also has accepted $14,000 in sponsorship funding from a brewery and a beer distributing company. Inners expects that money will cover WSA expenses, including paying the five bands that will play from 6 p.m. until about midnight on a stage in the Memorial Union parking lot.

UW-MADISON GETS READY FOR HOMECOMING, 1979

MADISON---It's an old tradition that never loses its popularity on the campus of the UW-Madison, heightened by the crisp autumn air, the thrills of Badger football and the chance to renew acquaintances. It's another Homecoming for all former students, with special attention being paid the classes of 1959, 1964, and 1969.

This year the date is Oct. 26-27, and the homecoming game is against the Iowa Hawkeyes.

Beginning on Friday, there will be the crowds milling along Langdon Street to view the decorations. That night there will be the annual Homecoming show in the University Field House.

On Saturday, there's the Badger-Warmup in Union South, sponsored by the Wisconsin Alumni Association, with coffee, cranberry punch, cheese and a cash bar. And at that same location the Union will offer its weekly beer-and-brat cookout, highlighted by a noon-hour pregame concert by the UW Marching Band.

Alumni who majored in medicine or animal sciences will get together for brunch before the game. The classes of 1959, 1964, and 1969 will sit in a special section for the game, then hurry across the street to Union South for their individual class receptions. Other alumni will take the same route, but go upstairs in the Union South for the weekly Badger Bash in the Carousel Room.

And a lot of them, from whatever class, will join in the Homecoming event remembered from student days, the Homecoming Ball, still held in Great Hall of Memorial Union.

Add one --homecoming

Homecoming committees have mailed announcement to all traceable members of the three guest classes, but any who did not receive them can make a reservation before Oct. 19 by sending $3.50 to the Wisconsin Alumni Association, 650 N. Lake St., Madison 53706.

Football tickets in the special block are still available to those who identify themselves as members of the class of '59, '64 or '69. These must be ordered direct from the UW Athletic Ticket Office, 1440 Monroe St., Madison 53708. The charge is $8 per ticket (with a limit of two tickets per order) plus a $1 handling fee. The deadline for ordering is Sept. 28. Checks should be made out to the UW Athletic Department.

Those who remember one other Homecoming tradition won't be disappointed this year. Students still elect a queen and her court, to be presented at half-time ceremonies.

BUCKY TO CELEBRATE HOMECOMING IN THE 'WILD, WILD WEST'

MADISON--Bucky Badger will travel west, at least in spirit, for the University of Wisconsin-Madison's annual Homecoming festivities, scheduled this year from Oct. 22-27.

Homecoming floats, banners and the traditional "Yell Like Hell" contest will center on the theme of "Bucky's Wild, Wild West." The week's events will include a Homecoming show for the first time since 1976, but the talent will be "home-grown" instead of imported with the University Marching Band and Wisconsin Singers to perform.

Mary Mayer, a student on the Homecoming committee, said the group is seeking more "community support and enthusiasm this year. We want Homecoming to be an activity for the city of Madison as a whole."

With that in mind, festivities get under way on Monday (Oct. 22) with an a.m. 11:30/appearance by the Homecoming court at the Kiwanis Club and a 7 p.m. trip to the West Towne Mall by the court, committee, Pep Band, pom pon squad, cheerleaders and Bucky Badger. The same group will be at the East Towne Mall at 7 p.m. Tuesday.

On Wednesday, the Rotary Club will meet the court at 11:30 a.m. and the Bucky Fire Engine will make a run through the city at 12:45 p.m. Judges will study banners on the State Street Mall at 3:30 p.m. and will move on to a residence halls decoration competition at 6:30 p.m.

Add one--homecoming

The fire engine will make another run at 12:45 p.m. Thursday. A "spirit parade" will begin at 6:30 that evening at the Natatorium on campus and will snake its way up Observatory Drive, gathering students from the dorms, until it joins the "Yell Like Hell" contest in front of the Memorial Union at 7 p.m. Groups representing dorm floors, fraternities and sororities will shout and sing original cheers in that competition.

A Badger Bash featuring the band Spooner will perform in the Memorial Union Rathskeller following "Yell Like Hell."

On Friday, 10 floats along Langdon Street and Breese Terrace will be scrutinized by judges at 1 p.m.

The Homecoming Show, which is open to the public, is set for 8 p.m. Friday at the Field House. It will be the first time the Wisconsin Singers and Marching Band have performed in the same show, although each usually attracts a sellout audience when performing individual concerts on campus. Winners of all the contests and the Homecoming king and queen will be announced at the show.

General admission tickets for $2 are available at the Athletic Ticket Office, Memorial Union Box Office and Anchor Savings & Loan at its downtown, Hilldale and Sherman Plaza offices.

Wisconsin's football team will meet the Iowa Hawkeyes in Camp Randall Stadium at 1:30 p.m. Saturday for the Homecoming game.

This week's activities will conclude that night with the Vilas House Homecoming Ball to be held in Great Hall of Memorial Union from 8:30 p.m. to 12:30 a.m.

WISCONSIN MAKES ORANGE BOWL BID, HISTORICALLY SPEAKING

MADISON--As the college football bowl season begins, the University of Wisconsin-Madison is staking its claim as the birthplace of a nationwide football tradition: homecoming.

The Badgers might have to dig in against a counter claim from their Big Ten rival, the University of Illinois. The historical question may not be settled until the semantic one is: what makes a homecoming?

Wisconsin's claim was spurred by a New York public relations firm which is promoting a Homecoming Queens float in the Orange Bowl Festival parade in Miami.

Charles Caudle, of Carl Byoir & Assoc., Inc., found that Illinois had a full-scale homecoming celebration, complete with a parade and a queen, in 1909. But some honest soul at Illinois tipped him off that Wisconsin set the precedent in 1908. Caudle asked UW-Madison for confirmation.

Much of Wisconsin's claim appropriately rests on the Webster's New Collegiate Dictionary's definition of homecoming: "the return of a group of people especially on a special occasion to a place formerly frequented."

In 1906-07 faculty at Wisconsin and other Midwest schools were criticizing football for professionalism. Some wanted to ban the intercollegiate version.

Wisconsin students rallied to their team's defense and cooperated in a number of reforms. In 1907, students asked the alumni to join them after a game and show they supported the team, too. In 1908, alumni were called to speak at a mass rally before the big conference championship game with the University of Chicago.

Add one--Homecoming

"The gathering tonight marks the first public utterances in late years of many of our university's most prominent alumni on intercollegiate football," said the student newspaper, The Daily Cardinal, on Nov. 19. "To get their views is one purpose of the meeting, but the immediate object is to present the situation as it will exist Saturday, and arouse genuine enthusiasm and support."

The next day's edition reported alumni from Manitowoc, Sheboygan, Racine, Kenosha and Waukesha were present, plus 500 Milwaukeeans, including a 24 piece Milwaukee Alumni Band.

The ensuing Chicago game, won by the invaders 18-12, is listed in the official UW-Madison "Football Facts Book" as the first homecoming game.

Most other sources cite 1911 as the first homecoming year at Wisconsin. A parade and other now-traditional activities were organized, and the whole event was called the first annual homecoming by the Cardinal, the alumni association and other supporters. By then, of course, the Illinois event was two years old.

Besides the expanded program and the growing popular use of the word "homecoming," another difference exists between the homecomings of 1908 and 1911. In 1908 the students wanted the alumni to support the football team, with their cheers. By 1911 a special edition of the Cardinal was asking the alums to support dormitories and other university building plans, with their dollars. Now that's tradition.

BIGGEST MARCHING BAND IN BADGER HISTORY WILL GO HOLLYWOOD FOR HOMECOMING

MADISON--Nearly 200 strong at an all-time membership peak, the University of Wisconsin-Madison marching band is preparing a Homecoming show with a theme of "Those Great Hollywood Epics."

Saturday's half-time show at the game with Northwestern will feature songs from "West Side Story," "Ben Hur," "Lawrence of Arabia," and "Three Coins in a Fountain."

This year's band boasts 197 musicians. Last year there were 148, before about 120. Director Michael Leckrone speculated about the increase:

"Enrollment had something to do with it. But I personally think the values have changed and students are interested more in this kind of activity now. Also, all the favorable pre-season talk about the football team had some effect."

The band also has increased its women musicians to 14.

Women never played in the band until last year, because of a long-standing tradition, rather than a rule against them, said Leckrone.

"We don't use any flutes or piccolos, so naturally this cuts down on the number of women in the band," he said. "But I really don't like to classify it this way, because some of the best trumpet players I've had in bands have been women, and some of the best clarinet players in this band are men."

The band has developed a different sound and look in the past few years.

Add one--marching band

"The biggest change we've made in the sound is what I would call the big band-jazz kind of style. The band, at times, has that Buddy Rich-Woody Herman approach," said Leckrone.

The band also has developed a unique marching style.

"We use the 'high knee lift' but we've put a little more physical action into it. It's just the way we point our toes, and the way we bring our feet up and down and make them stop momentarily, that gives more energy and snap to what we're doing."

The students' hard work and enthusiasm has paid off. Leckrone said audiences have become more responsive in the past two seasons.

MADISON--Emeritus Prof. Raymond F. Dvorak, long-time director of University of Wisconsin-Madison bands, will step out of retirement Saturday to lead more than 100 members of the UW Alumni Band in Camp Randall stadium.

Because it will be the 20th anniversary of the 1953 band that went to the Rose Bowl, more than the usual number of alumni are expected to show up for the morning rehearsal and the afternoon performance in the west stands during the Hawkeye-Wisconsin football game, a feature of homecoming weekend.

Among band alumni in their red caps with the white W's will be UW System Pres. John C. Weaver, who played French horn in the early 1930's.

"Our emphasis will be on nostalgia," Dvorak says. "We'll play marches and popular tunes of bygone days. We'll include 'Wisconsin Pride March,' 'Glory to the Gridiron,' and a work by Karl King. The Iowa Band won't be here, so it will be our job to play 'On Iowa' when they make a touchdown."

Prof. Dvorak keeps an office in the School of Music to do his research and writing, which includes arranging 10 works of March King John Philip Sousa. He devotes his spare time to his determined campaign, as national committee chairman, to get Sousa into the Hall of Fame for Great Americans. At the last election to the hall, Sousa lost by three votes.

"We'll make it next time," Dvorak vows.

Homecoming

By THOMAS H. MURPHY
UW ALUMNI ASSOCIATION

MADISON--From across the state and nation, University of Wisconsin-Madison alumni will head back here the weekend of Nov. 3-5 for Homecoming. And while this used to mean that the old grad roamed around the campus and his favorite haunts looking for familiar faces, in recent years homecomers have known right where to go to find friends.

These days, special get-togethers are scheduled for certain classes and for graduates of various schools and colleges of the University at Madison. There's plenty of time for each returnee to do his own thing, but there is also a well-planned social schedule which practically assures him or her of being at the right place at the right time.

The major attraction, of course, is the Badgers' football game with Iowa.

This fall there are reunions of the classes of 1952, 1957, and 1962; for alumni of all classes of the College of Agricultural and Life Sciences, the School of Pharmacy and women's physical education department; and for all former UW cheerleaders.

The classes of 1952 and 1957 will hold brunches at 10:30 a.m. Saturday in the Wisconsin Center and Alumni House, corner of Lake and Langdon streets. Then busses will take class members to and from the game at Camp Randall before they meet at 4:30 p.m. at Alumni House for a social gathering. The class of 1962 will join them.

Add one--homecoming

For College of Agricultural and Life Sciences graduates of all classes, the weekend begins Nov. 3, with dedication of the new Animal Science Building at 1 p.m. This will be followed by a business meeting of the Wisconsin Agriculture and Life Science Alumni Association. Then there will be a social hour and dinner-dance at Lowell Hall, 610 Langdon st., beginning at 7 p.m. There'll be a breakfast Saturday at 8 a.m. for alumni of the meat and animal science department. Delta Theta Sigma, one of the agriculture fraternities, holds its annual meeting at 10:30 a.m., and joins another, Alpha Gamma Rho, and Babcock House in planning a series of social events for that evening.

The UW-Madison Cheerleaders Alumni Association was established a year ago, but some former yellors probably don't know about it. Athletic department records, which list members of each year's cheerleading squad, only do so back as far as 1958. So despite extensive detective work by the two young men who founded the alumni group, they believe there must be many who don't know they are potential members of this new and admittedly exclusive group. The former cheerleaders will have a luncheon in new Union South at 11 a.m. Saturday, and a post-game social hour at Wisconsin Center.

For pharmacy graduates, it's one of the bigger campus weekends of the year. The Wisconsin Pharmacy Institute--a two-day series of scientific meetings--begins at Wisconsin Center Thursday. Attendees will join pharmacy alumni of all classes at a dinner-dance at the Park Motor Inn Friday night.

Throughout the weekend, special recognition will be given members of pharmacy classes of every fifth year, starting with 1962 and going back through 1957, 1952, 1947, 1942 and so on, to the class of 1922. An open house and luncheon will be held Saturday in the School of Pharmacy, beginning at 10:30 a.m.

Women's physical education alumnae will hold their annual homecoming breakfast at Wisconsin Center at 8:45 Saturday.

The board of directors of the UW Alumni Association has a heavy schedule for the weekend, starting with a business meeting Friday in Wisconsin Center.

Members of the classes of 1952, 1957, and 1962 as well as College of Agricultural and Life Sciences alumni can purchase game tickets in special sections by contacting the athletic ticket office.

For alumni who want their weekend to include hob-nobbing with students, there are several activities. The traditional "Yell-Like-Hell" rally will take place on the steps of Memorial Union at 7 p.m. Thursday. After this, they have a choice of a Blue-Grass concert or a rock concert. This year's homecoming show, on Friday night at the Field-House, features mimic David Frye and the Lettermen. Tickets, starting at $3, are available through the athletic ticket office or the Memorial Union box office.

On Saturday morning, all alumni are invited to drop in at open houses sponsored by the UW Alumni Association, between 9:30 a.m. and noon. One will be held in Alumni House, the other at Union South, across from the Camp Randall gate.

Chairmen for the various special homecoming events have spent the past months sending out mailings to classmates, giving information on times, places and costs. However, alumni who have not been contacted can get all details by phoning (262-2551) or writing the UW Alumni Association, 650 N. Lake st., Madison 53706.

MADISON--Homecoming 1970 at the University of Wisconsin at Madison has more attractions than a three-ring circus this weekend.

The array of activities includes:

A pep rally, house displays, seaplane rides, a dance featuring rock, rhythm and blues music, a concert starring a Canadian folksinger-poet, alumni reunions, and the big one--the football game between the University of Michigan and the Badgers at Camp Randall.

Sponsors are the student W Club, with the UW Interfraternity Council and Panhellenic Association underwriting expenses. Theme of homecoming is "Yesterday's Children--Tomorrow's Child."

The seaplane rides at a penny-a-pound, starting at the Wisconsin Union's Lake Mendota shoreline, will inaugurate the weekend program Friday from 1 to 5 p.m., according to Fred Newport, Davenport, Ia., student chairman of the homecoming committee.

Friday night's activities begin at 6:40 p.m. with the "Yell Like Hell" pep rally in front of the Union. Scheduled to appear at the rally are Athletic Director Elroy Hirsch, Football Coach John Jardine, team members, cheerleaders, the pom pom squad, Bucky Badger, and a pep band.

After the rally ends at 9 p.m. the pep band will lead a snake dance through the dorm areas seeking out students to attend the homecoming dance at Camp Randall Memorial Building.

"Oz," a three-piece rock group from Denver, and "Yesterday's Children," a rhythm and blues band from Milwaukee, will play alternately from 9 p.m. to 1:30 a.m.

During the dance the 1970 homecoming queen will be announced and presented with her court of honor.

Main attraction of the weekend will be the Michigan-Wisconsin football game at 1 p.m. Saturday. The largest crowd ever to attend a football game in Camp Randall stadium, estimated at 70,000, is expected.

During the halftime ceremony, the homecoming queen will be presented with a trophy by Robert Draper, Hinsdale, Ill., president of the UW Alumni Association.

MADISON, Wis.--Jazz singer Ella Fitzgerald and the Glenn Miller orchestra, under the direction of Ray McKinley, will headline the 1962 Homecoming Show at the University of Wisconsin Fieldhouse at 8 p.m. Friday, Nov. 9, it was announced this week.

No stranger to the Wisconsin campus, Miss Fitzgerald last appeared here in 1959 for the Union's Jazz Festival. Her other appearances here have been with Jazz at the Philharmonic. The vocalist has won the Downbeat Magazine critics poll every year since the poll began.

McKinley, drummer and vocalist, directs his orchestra in the Miller tradition, using authentic arrangements. Once a fellow sideman in the Dorsey Brothers' band and then a rival band leader, McKinley helped shape a Miller revival ten years after the famed composer lost his life in a flight over the English Channel in 1944.

The show is the highlight of Homecoming Week, directed by Homecoming Committee chairman Leo Rideout.

Homecoming
FROM THE UNIVERSITY OF WISCONSIN NEWS SERVICE, MADISON 6, WISCONSIN
RELEASE: Immediately

By HAZEL McGRATH

MADISON, Wis.--Camp Randall Stadium at the University of Wisconsin may be knee-deep in nostalgia Saturday afternoon at half-time, for the UW marching band plans to salute old grads with a selection of old tunes.

Thousands of alumni are expected to be on hand for Homecoming, to cheer the Wisconsin team on to victory over an unbeaten Northwestern eleven.

"We will play old favorites in the manner of various well-known bands," marching band director James Christensen explains. "For example, Benny Goodman's 'Stompin' at the Savoy'; Glenn Miller's 'Tuxedo Junction'; Les Brown's 'This Could Be the Start of Something'; and Count Basie's 'Orange-Colored Sky'.

"We also will salute the Homecoming Queen and her court with a number, 'Ballet in Brass,' especially arranged by UW bandsman Nick Vendon. As usual, we will end our football day by playing outside the Orthopedic Hospital for the kids," he says.

Homecoming music won't end there this year, however. The UW Men's Glee Club will take to the stage of the Wisconsin Union Theater at 8 p.m. Saturday for a musical bout with the Northwestern Glee Club, to include such works as "Hallelujah, Amen," "Tee Roo," and highlights from "South Pacific." This program is open to the public for a small charge.

The Wisconsin band, founded in 1885 by F. O. May, who was able to muster a total of 11 men, is America's oldest college band. By 1894 the group had grown to 26 men who played for football games, and by 1915, 60 members traveled to the Panama Pacific National Exposition in San Francisco by special train to play daily concerts for a week. The band returned twice to the West Coast in the 1950s to encourage the Wisconsin team in the Rose Bowl. Funds were raised both times by popular subscription.

In February, 1917, the UW band began to tour the state, thus launching a pleasant custom that has continued to this day and earned generations of well-behaved and well-trained bandsmen the proud title, "Ambassadors of the University of Wisconsin." That first tour included concerts in Baraboo, Superior, Wausau, Appleton, and Fond du Lac. Members traveled by train.

Today's tours are scheduled in the week between semesters and are booked months in advance by interested communities. Band members pile into busses and take to the highways to play three concerts a day in widely separated towns and cities.

The men are lodged in local homes and fed by sponsoring organizations, which invite them back year after year. According to observers, and to judge by stacks of newspaper clippings collected by the band over the years, a band tour is in the nature of a triumphal progress from community to community, with local bands sometimes marching out to greet the UW musicians and escort them down Main Street.

Between appearances at the beginning of the University year, when they help to welcome new students, and Commencement at the end, band members follow a full schedule, including annual Palm Sunday concerts in the Wisconsin Union Theater and special programs for special occasions.

Prof. Raymond F. Dvorak has been director of UW bands since 1934 except for the hiatus in 1948-50 when Prof. Emmett Sarig took over while Prof. Dvorak recovered from a near-fatal train accident. This year, for the first time in band history, he is enjoying the help of a full-time assistant, Christensen, who was band president as an undergraduate.

Other directors over the years were F. O. May, 1885-86; C. M. Williams, 1886-90; Spencer Beebe, 1890-92; W. R. Sired, 1892-93; W. S. Wadleigh, 1893-94; Earl Chapin May, 1894-95 and 1896-97; Hugh R. Schofield, 1895-96; Orin W. Joslin, 1897-98; Charles Nitschke, 1898-1904; Herman C. Owen, 1904-07; Charles A. Mann, 1908-15; Jesse Saugstad, 1915-18; W. E. Yates, 1918-20; and E. W. Morphy, 1920-34.

"The band is bigger this fall than it's been in years, and we have a long waiting list," Dvorak says.

MADISON--Dedication of a Civil War historical marker and the University of Wisconsin band's "Songs of the Century" tribute to returning alumni will top the Homecoming halftime festivities Saturday at Camp Randall stadium. The Badgers will meet Ohio State's Buckeyes in a game to be televised by ABC.

The marker, to be dedicated by Gov. Nelson and UW President C.A. Elvehjem, is being erected in recognition of Wisconsin's role in the Civil War. Camp Randall was the state's largest troop staging and training facility and more than 70,000 Wisconsin soldiers trained there. The marker was a project of the State Civil War Centennial Commission.

The band's pre-game show will include traditional flag ceremonies, according to Prof. Ray Dvorak, director.

Following the national anthem, Dean George Young of the UW Law School will lead the traditional law student cane parade. Young will be accompanied by John Whitney, president of the Wisconsin State Bar Association; Walter J. Bjork, president of the Wisconsin Law Alumni Association; Maurice Paasch, member of the UW Board of Regents; and law school faculty. As tradition has it, the law student will win his first case if he tosses the cane over the goal post--and catches it.

The band, led by drum major Ron Smith, Baraboo, will open its half-time program with a eschelon drill, followed by "On Wisconsin." The marching band will be joined by the alumni band in singing and playing "Varsity."

add one--homecoming festivities

The band will salute alumni of years gone by with a favorite of all ages, "Ta Ra Ra Boom De Ay," while doing a diamond drill. For the graduates of 1935-45, the band is to play "Tea for Two," and then dedicate "Lady of Spain" to the 1945-50 graduates.

Homecoming chairman Thomas R. Toman, Ripon, will introduce his Queen, Judy Beverley, Wayne, Ill. Not forgetting the present generation, the band will present a special arrangement from "Sound of Music."

As a musical reenactment of the Civil War, the band will divide into two bands, one representing the North and the other the South, led by the two flags of 1861. The bands will march toward the center of the field playing "Dixie" and "Yankee Doodle."

After the dedication, Michael Cuthbert (425 Hawthorne Ct., Madison) will play taps at the north goal with an echo at the south goal by Cecil Richmond, Economy, Ind. Singing of "The Battle Hymn of the Republic" is to conclude the dedication.

In addition to its appearance at halftime, the 100-piece alumni band will play a short program before the game.

Alumni of the band have played together for several years, and this is the biggest group of alumni ever recruited, according to Robert L. Tottingham, instructor in Extension Division journalism, the group's president.

The alumni plan to rehearse in the practice field building for an hour and a half, beginning at 9:30 a.m. The director is Prof. W.J. Dennis, chairman of the department of music at Wisconsin State College, Platteville.

MADISON--Nearly half a hundred decorated student houses, about a dozen colorful floats in a two-mile parade, a famous musical show from Broadway, two dances, a "Yell-like-'ell" pep rally contest, and a Big Ten football game between Wisconsin's Fighting Badgers and Northwestern's Surging Wildcats--these are highlights of the University of Wisconsin's annual Homecoming celebration Friday and Saturday (Nov. 7-8).

Climax of the weekend is the football game at 1:30 p.m. Saturday in Camp Randall Stadium. The game could have a definite bearing on the outcome of this year's Big Ten championship race--and the Western Conference's Rose Bowl contender, come next New Year's day.

Performing at the halftime ceremonies will be two top student bands of the Big Ten. The UW band will give Wisconsin alumni homecomers welcome to the campus and musically portray the past and future of UW alumni activities. The Northwestern band will present its colorful Toyland Show.

Presiding over the homecoming weekend program will be King Brian Kulas (711 S. Dickinson), Madison, general chairman, and his queen, Dona Penn, of Wausau, a graduate nurse at Bellen Memorial Hospital School of Nursing in Green Bay.

The weekend celebration will start after most UW classes are done for the week at 3:30 p.m. Friday when about a dozen colorful floats will start their Homecoming Parade on streets in the University area.

The parade will start at the intramural sports fields on the west end of the campus, go east up Linden Dr. to University Ave., to Park St., to State St., to Gilman St., to Wisconsin Ave., then down Langdon St.--fraternity-sorority row-- and up over Observatory Dr., past Elizabeth Waters Hall to end at Slichter Hall.

Meantime Friday some 50 fraternities, sororities, independent residence halls, and UW dormitories will be setting up colorful lighted decorations, all of them showing with good old Badger spirit the Wildcats taking a beating one way or another.

Immediately after the parade, shortly before 5 p.m. Friday, the "Yell-like-'ell" pep rally contest will be held in front of Wisconsin's Memorial Union on Langdon St. Combined men's and women's houses on the campus will yell just like it says, to give the Homecoming pep rally that rousing spirit. Coach Milt Bruhn and members of the Badger team will be presented.

The annual Homecoming Show in the Wisconsin Field House at 8:30 p.m. Friday will feature the smash musical hit, "Li'l Abner," which brings to life the fabulous hillbilly brainchildren of famous cartoonist Al Capp. The original musical show has been popular on Broadway and on tour for three years.

Just before the show starts at 8:30, the winning Homecoming parade floats, winning Homecoming house decorations, and the "Yell-like-'ell" contest winners will be announced.

Completing Homecoming festivities Saturday night will be two annual Homecoming Balls, one in the Memorial Union, the other in Van Hise Hall of the UW's Residence Halls, the former from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m., the latter from 8 p.m. to midnight.

MADISON---What may become a new University of Wisconsin tradition will have its beginning at the Homecoming Show Friday night when Michigan State University presents a pitchfork to the Badgers.

At intermission during the show in the Fieldhouse, William Mansfield, president of Student Government at Michigan State, will give the three-tined implement, on behalf of his alma mater, to his brother Jack who is general chairman for the Badger Homecoming.

Both of the men have strong Wisconsin ties. They are the sons of Arthur W. (Dynie) Mansfield, UW professor of physical education and Badger baseball coach. Jack, following in his father's footsteps, is a senior in physical education. Bill is a senior in forestry and wildlife conservation at Michigan State.

The pitchfork will remain in Wisconsin hands until the outcome of the Wisconsin-Michigan State game on Saturday is known. If Wisconsin wins, the fork will remain in Badger hands for the year. In succeeding years it will reside for 12 months with whichever school is victorious in the annual pigskin battle.

"The pitchfork was chosen as the symbol," Homecoming Chairman Jack Mansfield explained, "because both universities have fine agricultural colleges, and both are land grant colleges."
