was born in Keene, Conn., May 14, 1799, and the mother in Ireland, May 22, 1819. They were married in Chatauqua County, New York, in 1846, and in 1854 or 1855 came west to Adams County, Wisconsin, pre-empting a farm there for which they paid $1.25 per acre. James Woods erected on it a frame house, a log barn and a log granary, and during the nine years that he and his family lived there he cleared 65 acres of the land. At the end of that time he sold out and came to Dunn County. He was not able to sell the farm for any more than he had paid for it, and was moreover beaten out of a part of the selling price, so he came to his new location with a wagon, a yoke of old oxen ,and very little besides. On arriving here he took a homestead claim in that part of Menomonie that was later set off as the town of Sherman. It was a tract of wild land and he began its improvement by building a log house which he roofed with bark, also laying a bark floor. It was a typical pioneer dwelling in a backwoods country, with only two or three white families in the region, and they widely separated. There was no road this side of Menomonie and in driving to the new home they had to pass through 15 miles of dense woods, coming by way of Lamb's Creek Falls and Cedar Falls. James Woods at this time was about 65 years old, and it must have been with a feeling that he had missed his chance in life when he buckled down to redeem his financial failure and create a new farm from the wilderness; but he was assisted by his two eldest sons and lived long enough afterwards to do some good work in developing the place. He finally died on the farm at an advanced age on Jan. 25, 1886. Though his wife was much younger, she had passed away before him, June 28, 1885. Their children, four in number, were: James W., born in New York State, Feb. 13, 1847, who died in Minneapolis, Minn., July 25, 1924; Hugh A., born in New York State, Nov. 30, 1850, who died in Texas in 1884; Susan M., born June 20, 1857, and William H., the subject of this sketch. William H. Woods grew up on the home farm and when old enough helped his parents and cared for them until they died. Shortly before that, he was married, on Feb. 1, 1883, at Twin Brook, Grant County, S. D., to Lena M. Seitz, who was born in Milwaukee, Wis., Nov. 19, 1863, daughter of George and Louisa (Fochs) Seitz. For two years after his marriage he and his wife resided on his parent's homestead. Then in 1888 he bought his present farm, then consisting of 160 acres of wild land in Section 14, town of Sherman. His first buildings here were of logs, but in 1913 he put up a good two-story frame house, with a full basement, and in addition has built a good frame barn, a machine shed, shop, corn cribs and other buildings. He has developed 50 acres of his land, the rest being in timber and pasture, and keeps grade Holstein cattle, milking 14 cows. He also raises hogs and Oxford sheep. His farm is ten miles north of Menomonie (by road), about the same distance southeast of Boyceville and six miles south by west of Wheeler, Menomonie being the greater market but Wheeler the nearer shipping-point. Mr. Woods has been successful through hard work and perserverence and has attained a prominent place in the community. He has served 17 consecutive years as town assessor, and for years was a member of school districts Nos. 3 and 8. He and his wife are the parents of eight children, Ernest A., Lavina J., Goldie E., Frank V., Anna L., Russell V., Esther L. and Charles L., of whom the following is a further record. Ernest A., who was born April 22, 1884, is now on a farm near Gleason, Lincoln County, Wis. He married Alma Schutt and has one child, Alma. Lavina J., born Feb. 14, 1886, is the wife of Carl Tubbs of Cedar Falls, Dunn County, and has five children, Nora, Adeline, Ellen, Harold and Nettie. Goldie E., born July 19, 1888, is now Mrs. George Lehuque of Dresser Junction, Polk County, Wis. Frank V., born Feb. 19, 1891, lives in Menomonie. Anna L., born Sept. 3, 1893, is the wife of Albert Burling, a farmer near Colfax, and has four children, Alva, Merle, Abbie and Richard. Russell V., born Jan. 5, 1896, who is now a farmer in the town of Sherman, married Minnie Gardner, and has two children, Zelpha and Beatrice. Esther L., born March 5, 1898, is the wife of William Budd of the town of Hay River, and her children are Delmar Madelene and Milton. Charles L., born Nov. 10, 1900, is living on the home farm and helping his father. Mrs. Woods was less than a year old when her parents, George and Louisa Seitz, moved from Milwaukee to Winona, Minn. In the latter place they remained but a few months and then moved to Lake City, Minn. That they were very poor at the time may be surmised from the fact that they made the journey (of close to 90 miles) on foot, each carrying a child-for they then had two-and all their other personal possessions with them. In Lake City they resided for three years, Mr. Seitz doing such work as he could find to do. But like most of the pioneers of this region, they had the land hunger, realizing that the creation of a farm was the only way in which they might become independent and have a refuge for their old age. Therefore, in 1865 they came to Dunn County, settling on a piece of wild and rough land near Eau Galle. Mr. Seitz began improvements by putting up the four walls of a cabin, within which enclosure the family lived for a while without either a roof or a floor. As soon as he could, he put a bark roof on it and later put down a bark floor, thus completing his first real improvement on the place. By nationality he was a German and his wife a Swiss. They were both endowed with patience, endurance, and a spirit of industry, and worked together to achieve success. Their children were as follows: John, born in Milwaukee, Feb. 10, 1862; Lena M., born in Milwaukee, Nov. 11, 1863, who married William H. Woods, as already mentioned, Anna, born at Lake City, Aug. 27, 1866, now the wife of John Klaus of St. Paul, Minn.; Elizabeth, born at Eau Galle, May 10, 1870, who is now Mrs. William Chapman of Minneapolis; Minnie, born Oct. 9, 1873, who is Mrs. Albert Crane of Newport, Wash.; Charles, born April 9, 1875, now in Oregon; Frank, born April 24, 1878, residing near Eau Galle, and Henry, born Feb. 10, 1881, who is in Seattle, Wash.

Herman Gunderson, proprietor of a good-sized farm of 320 acres in the town of Grant, and a member of the present county board, was born in Dane County, Wis., Feb. 22, 1874, son of Hans and Kari Gunderson. The parents were natives of Norway, where Hans Gunderson followed the occupation of tailor and dyer. He came to America in 1870, and engaged in farming in Dane County, Wisconsin, where he and his family remained until 1875, in which year they moved to Dunn County, Mr. Gunderson walking the entire distance of about 300 miles and driving a drove of cattle before him. On arriving he bought a farm in the town of Colfax, or, rather, a tract of wild land covered with brush, and the first house he built was a dugout in the side of a hill, putting on a shingle roof and laying a rough board floor, some of the boards in which were 20 inches wide. The rafters were poles. After eight years he built a frame house and barn and with the help of his sons continued to clear his land until old age compelled him to stop working. He is still living, however, being now 90 years old, his wife, Kari, who also survives, Mr. Gunderson's first wife died about 1871. By her he had two children, being 80. Carl and Gust. By his second wife he has had six children, five of whom are living, namely, Herman, Joseph, Hartwell, Edwin and Emma, the one deceased being Martin. Emma married Henry Josvold of Dane County. Herman Gunderson as a youth attended school and worked on the home farm until 21 years old. Then. being his own master, he worked out on farms in summer and in the woods in winter for about four seasons. His next employment was with an implement or agricultural machinery house in Eau Claire, where he remained for two years, after which he traveled for the Vermont Farm Machinery Co., and later spent seven years in buying farm produce for a Chicago concern. Then in 1914 he began farming for himself, buying an improved farm of 320 acres in Sections 3 and 10, town of Grant, and here he has since carried on general farming and dairying, keeping at the present time a herd of 47 high grade Guernsey cattle and also raising Poland-China hogs. He takes rank among the most successful and prosperous farmers of his town and is also one of its most prominent citizens. For four years he served on the board of supervisors of the town of Grant, and in 1922 was elected chairman of the board, being re-elected to the same office in 1923, 1924 and 1925. The incumbency of this office carrying with it a seat on the county board, Mr. Gunderson for the last two years has had a part in directing the affairs of the county and has shown capacity in so doing. He is a member of the Highway Committee of the board. On Oct. 26, 1901 Mr. Gunderson was married in the town of Grant to Lizzie Isakson, daughter of Martin and Sophia Isakson, who came to America in 1864 from Norway, and directly to Dunn County. Mrs. Gunderson's mother is deceased, but her father is still living, being now 90 years old. Mr. and Mrs. Gunderson have six children, namely: Susan, born July 27, 1902; Morris, born Sept. 22, 1904; Helmer, born Sept. 9, 1906; Esther, born Sept. 17, 1908; Martin, born Nov. 26, 1910, and Arnold, born Feb 26, 1917. The family attend the Lutheran Church.

John A. Halgren, M.D., of Menomonie, a prominent member of his profession, was born in Waseca, Minn., Nov. 30, 1886, son of Alfred and Marie (Johnson) The father was a prominent merchant in Waseca, being engaged in Halgren. the hardware business there for 40 years. He died a widower in 1916, his wife having passed away in 1908. John A. Halgren attended both the grade and high schools in Waseca, being graduated from the latter with the class of 1908. From the University of Minnesota he received a bachelor's degree in 1912 and a medical degree in 1916, and in the latter year began the practice of his profession in Bismarck, N. D., as assistant to Dr. E. P. Quain. After remaining there until October, 1922, he came to Menomonie and has since been associated with Dr. B. J. Steves as general surgeon. Dr. Halgren has an exceptionally good war record. He enlisted in May, 1917, was commissioned first lieutenant August 18, and went into service September 7 that year. On October 9 he was attached to the British R. A. M. C., and was stationed at London for six months as general surgeon. He was then made commanding officer of St. John's Hospital in Birmingham, England, an institution containing 300 beds, where he cared for nerve injury cases and did bone construction work for a year. He was then ordered back to the United States and sent to Hospital No. 28, Fort Sheridan, as chief of ward surgeons in the orthoepedic department, where he remained until receiving his discharge on July 19, 1919. He was the only American surgeon decorated by the King of England with the order of St. John of Jerusalem. He is a close student of his profession, aiming to keep in the front rank. Dr. Halgren was married, June 19, 1917, in Morris, Minn., to Lillian J. Hanson, daughter of O. C. and Marie Hanson, who were pioneer settlers in that place, and the father being for many years a member of the Wells Bros.-Hanson Co. Dr. and Mrs. Halgren are the parents of a son, John H., who was born March 16, 1920.

Gunder I. Hovind, whose active career in agriculture and other occupations in Dunn County has covered a period of 40 years or more, was born in Norway, Sept. 20, 1862, son of Ingebricht and Ingebord Hovind. He remained in his native land until he was about 21 years old and then emigrated to the United States, landing at Philadelphia in 1881. In the following year he came west to Menomonie, Wis., and for two summers thereafter worked in the lath mills at Cedar Falls for the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company. In December, 1883, Mr. Hovind returned to Norway but came back to America in March of the following year and worked at lumbering on the Flambeau and Chippewa rivers. He then learned the carpenter's trade and was employed at it by Erick Fonas, a contractor in North Menomonie. In 1894 and 1895 he served as a police officer there, spending the next few years at his trade. It was in 1900 that Mr. Hovind began farming, buying a 50-acre tract of land in Section 16, town of Menomonie. It was stump land, the clearing of which involved considerable labor, but he proceeded energetically with the work, and his farm today shows what he has accomplished. He has 30 acres cleared and has a good set of buildings. He also owns a small sawmill and does some custom sawing for his neighbors. Aside from this, he is engaged in general farming and dairying and is now more prosperous than at any other time in his career. Mr. Hovind was married June 10, 1889, to Mattie Lien, who was born in Thorpen, Nordland, Norway, Dec. 15, 1869, and of this union three children have been born: Inga, now Mrs. Olof Strand of the town of Menomonie; Mabel, of Menomonie, and Egburg, residing at home with her parents.

Karl A. Christiansen, who for some 40 years was a well known and respected citizen of Menomonie, a live factor in business circles, was born in Modum, Norway, Aug. 15, 1855. With the intention of pursuing a business career, he acquired a good education in public and private schools, after which he went to Copenhagen and learned the blacksmith's trade, previously being obliged to pass an examination and receiving a diploma, which was the custom in Norway. In 1878 he came to the United States and to Dunn County, Wisconsin, locating in Mencmonie, where he entered the employ of Knapp. Stout & Co. Company, remaining with them until He then engaged in business for himself and was thus occupied until his 1884. death on April 7, 1919. Mr. Christiansen was married Jan. 15, 1886, to Ragna C. Bjornsen Verp, who was born at Eker, Norway, July 14, 1866, and who came to this country with friends in 1884, locating in Menomonie. To Mr. and Mrs. Christiansen there were five children born, Minnie, Agnes, Adeline Constance, Esther and Charles. Minnie, who was born Oct. 17, 1886, died Oct. 28, 1905. Agnes, born Sept. 4, 1888, died Nov. 20, 1903. Adeline Constance, born July 27, 1891, is residing with her mother. Esther, born Dec. 27, 1894, married Walter Pearce, manager of the Standard Oil Station in Menomonie; she has two children, Luella Reine and Betty La Verle. Charles R., now occupying a clerical position in Eau Claire, was a soldier in the late great war. He enlisted at St. Paul, Minn., when 19 years old as one of the first volunteers to go into the war, and trained at El Paso, Texas. He subsequently went overseas, where he remained nearly two After being a short time in active service he was gassed and for a long time vears. aftewards was confined to the hospital abroad, and was in a hospital for some time at Camp Dix after returning home. He married Carrie Dean of Sand Creek, Dunn County, and they are the parents of a daughter, Shirley Marie. The family are affiliated religiously with the United Lutheran Church. Mrs. Christiansen is also a member of the ladies' auxilliary societies of the church and of the S. F. of A., the S. S. of A. and the Woman's Relief Corps. In May, 1922, with Mrs. Johanna Johnson, she made a trip to Norway, where she visited her old home, relatives and friends. The old home, as described by Mrs. Christiansen is a beautiful place The residence was built by her father upon his marriage in 1852 situated at Eker. and in time passed from him to his eldest son, who in turn gave it to his own son, it being now occupied by the third generation of the family. Mrs. Christiansen, besides having one brother and one sister in Minneapolis, has two brothers and two sisters living in Norway. Her trip to her native land was very enjoyable. She embarked with her friend Mrs. Johnson at New York, six days later landed at New Hampton, England, and went thence to London, where they did some sight From there they went to Bergen, Norway, by way of Newcastle, and also seeing. visited the capital, Christiania, which has lately resumed its ancient name of Oslo, and visited all the northern part of Norway. The return trip was made direct from Norway to New York and took ten days.

Martin T. Jenson, a well known farmer in the town of Elk Mound, who has built up a valuable piece of agricultural property from the raw land of the primitive wilderness which is known today as the Elk Mound Guernsey Farm, is a man of action and achievement. He is also a product of Dunn County, having been born on his father's farm in Section 23, town of Elk Mound, Oct. 6, 1877, son of Torval and Randina (Gullickson) Jenson. The parents were born near Christiania, Norway, and, coming to America when young people, were married in the city of Eau Claire. Torval Jenson owned a farm in the town of Elk Mound and after the marriage knot had been tied he and his wife came immediately to the farm, where wedding festivities were celebrated, after which they got down to the practical business of home making. The place consisted of 100 acres in Section 23, all wild land, and here Mr. Jenson built up a good farm with adequate buildings, conducting it until 1909. He then rented it to his youngest son Eddie, and, buying a house in the village of Elk Mound, he and his wife took up their residence there. On March 23, 1912 Mr. Jenson passed away, but Mrs. Jenson is still occupying the village home. Their children were: Martin T., subject of this sketch; John, a rural mail carrier attached to the Elk Mound post office; Carrie, now Mrs. Albert Howe of the town of Elk Mound; and Eddie, proprietor of the home farm. Martin T. Jenson acquired a public school education and learned agriculture on his parents' From the time he was 16 years old until he was 24 he divided his time befarm. tween working on the home farm and working out for others. In 1897 he bought 89 acres of wild land in Section 22, town of Elk Mound, on which were no buildings, and which he at once began to clear and improve. On Sept. 11, 1901, Mr. Jenson married Olena Gilbertson, who was born in the town of Wheaton, Chippewa County, Wis., March 15, 1880. He and his bride took possession of a house which he built on his farm that year (1901), and at the same time he built a small barn. Twentythree years have witnessed some notable changes in the appearance of the place, changes that have kept up with the march of progress and made Elk Mound Guernsey Farm an ideal establishment of its kind. In 1918 Mr. Jenson built a fine barn of 40 x 80 feet, with 14-foot posts and full basement, and supplied with patent equipment. He has installed an individual carbide gas plant, furnishing light for his home, barns and yards. His out-buildings are substantial and well adapted to their respective purposes, his fences well kept, and his fields well cultivated. He has added to his original tract 40 acres adjoining on the northeast in Section 23, and much of this land he has broken, having now all told 75 acres under cultivation, the rest being in pasture. He raises tobacco, having built a large barn where he cures it, and his stock consists of pure bred Guernsey cattle and Poland-China hogs. He is a stockholder in the Farmers Cooperative Creamery of Elk Mound and in the Bank of Elk Mound, of the creamery having been secretary and manager since 1915 except for one year. He is now rounding out his eighteenth year as town clerk and several years formerly was a member of the school board of Joint District No. 2. Both in his private business and in public service he has shown capacity and a fidelity to duty that have marked him out as a representative citizen. The home life of Mr. and Mrs. Jenson has been blessed by the birth of 11 children, though not all are now living. The first born was Ruth C., the date of whose nativity was Sept. 11, 1902, which was the anniversary of her parents' wedding day. She is now Mrs. Oscar Tiegan of the town of Weston and has one child, Marion. Anna E., Oct. The other children of Mr. and Mrs. Jenson were born as follows 2, 1903; Esther A., April 4, 1905; Edwin T., Jan. 17, 1908; Ella I., May 30, 1910; Melvin O., July 26, 1912; Cora L., Jan. 10, 1917; Margaret E., May 22, 1919. Howard T., Oct. 1, 1921, and Myrtle and Arthur, who died in infancy. Mr. and Mrs. Jenson and family are members of the Elk Mound Lutheran Church at Elk Mound, Mr. Jenson being secretary of the congregation.

Eddie T. Jenson, farmer, of the town of Elk Mound, was born July 11, 1881, son of Torval and Randina (Gullickson) Jensen. He was educated in the local school and, growing up on the home farm, assisted his father until the latter's death in 1908. He then became its manager, continuing as such until 1919, in which year he bought it. It consisted of 100 acresin Section 23, town of Elk Mound, and since then Mr. Jensen has made extensive improvements in the property. He has built a machine shed, a silo measuring 12×30 feet, installed a waterworks, painted the residence, and kept everything about the place in good workable condition. He is engaged in general farming, giving close attention to dairying and keeping a herd of grade Guernsey cattle with a pure bred sire. He is a stockholder in the Elk Mound Cooperative Creamery. He was married Nov. 4, 1908, to Hannah Anderson, who was born in Eau Claire, Wis., Oct. 2, 1881, and he and his wife have had seven children, Wilmer T., Gladys B., Harold H., Charlotte, Ernest (deceased), and Eva D. and Edith D. (twins). The family are members of the Lutheran church.

John R. Mathews, who passed away April 7, 1924, had the notable record of nearly half a century spent in the practice of law in the city of Menomonie, besides many years creditable service in local political office. He was born in the town of Eagle, Waukesha County, Wis., Dec. 14, 1849, son of Andrew T. and Matilda (Wilson) Mathews. As a boy he attended district school in the neighborhood of his early home and came to Dunn County in the spring of 1860 when in his eleventh year. As at that time there were no schools in the northern part of the county, he was forced to lay aside his studies for three years. He then resumed them, attending grade school until he was 17. In the fall of 1867 he went east to Long Island, N. Y., where he attended school for one year returning in the fall of 1868 That winter he taught school, and subsequently for two years attended the high school in Menomonie. The next two years of his life he spent reading law in the office of Judge Bundy, after which he again taught school until the fall of 1877. He then entered the law department of the University of Wisconsin, at Madison, where he finished his law course, being graduated in June 1878. In September, that year, Mr. Mathews opened a law office in Menomonie, where he practiced his profession successfully for many years. From 1880 to 1882 he was in partnership with John Ives, and in 1891 and 1892 with Major Macauley, but the rest of the time he practiced alone. A Democrat in politics, Mr. Mathews first became active in local politics in 1882, when he was appointed a member of the State Central Committee, on which he served for eight years. In the same year, 1882, he was elected the first city clerk of Menomonie and as such served for three years. The city school board profited by his abilities for 29 years, he becoming a member of it in 1891 and resigning in 1920. During that period all the present schools in the city were Elected city attorney in 1885, Mr. Mathews performed the duties of that office for 16 years. In 1905 he was elected mayor of the city, serving one year. Re-elected in 1907, he served for another year, and after that he was elected to the same office on four other occasions, twice for two-year terms and twice for six-year terms, holding the office altogether for 18 years, or till May, 1924. During the last 12 years of his incumbency he served under the commission form of government. In 1894 and 1905 he was a member of the Board of Visitors committee of the University of Wisconsin. From the foregoing data it may be seen that, aside from the practice of his profession, in which he made an excellent record, Mr. Mathews for a period of over 40 years had been active in various public capacities, and his work in each of them benefited the community in which he lived. John R. Mathews was married Nov. 24, 1876, in the city of Menomonie, to Mrs. Mary J. Tome, whose maiden name was Mary J. Robertson. Her parents were Robert T. and Rebecca V. (Cosler) Robertson, the father a native of Franklin, Penn., and the mother of The former died in Pennovlvania and in 1870 Mrs. Robertson came Rome, N. Y. west to Wisconsin; she died in Menomonie in November, 1885. By her first husband Mrs. Mathews had one son, Guy Robertson Tome, who died in 1904. Mr. and Mrs. Mathews were the parents of five children, namely, Xina V., Reine Robertson, Ethel Sterling, Leita Wilson, and John Robert. Xina V., born Sept. 16, 1880, is now Mrs. H. M. Carter of Boyce, Ida., her husband being a superintendent of manual training. Reine Robertson, born Nov. 30, 1884, married J. La Grande Smith; they live in La Grange, Ill., and have two children, Robertson L. and John La Grande. Ethel Sterling, born May 6, 1886, died May 25, the same year. Leita Wilson, born Oct. 30, 1888, married Alfred Buser, who is now director of athletics at Hamline University. John Robert, born Aug. 16, 1892 is general manager at Mellan, Wis., for the Lake Superior Power Co. He married Grace Hodgkins of Marquette, Mich., and has two children, Marie A. and John R. Mr. Mathews was a member of the Episcopal Church, as are the surviving members of his iamily. They occupy a high social position and have a wide circle of friends and acquaintances.

George F. Smith, a prominent young farmer in the town of Menomonie, engaged in operating a farm in Section 7, was born on this farm, Feb. 17, 1888, son of Ulrich and Mary (Varnke) Smith. The father was a native of Switzerland and the mother of Germany. They came to the United States when young and were married in Chicago. Later they settled near Dubuque, Iowa, and came to Dunn Ccunty about 1864, with the Schwartz family, the men driving through with teams and the wives and children coming by train. The Smiths first settled in the town of Weston, but soon moved to the town of Menomonie, Mr. Smith buying 80 acres of land in Section 7, where he began the development of a farm home, but before he had been able to accomplish much he was called away by death on April 1, 1896, leaving his task to be completed by his wife and children. Mrs. Smith survived her husband 16 years and 10 days, dying April 11, 1912. They were the parents of eight children, namely: Martha, now Mrs. William Heidelbaugh of Des Moines, Iowa; William, of Park Falls, Wis.; Mary, wife of John Gebert of Menomonie; Anna, deceased; Della, who is Mrs. August Fisher of Rice Lake; Henry, deceased; Lillie, wife of Philip Kistner of Irvington; and George F., proprietor of the old home farm. George F. Smith was able to obtain but a limited education as he was but eight years old when his father died, and as soon as he was strong enough to work he had to leave school and be of use to the family. It was in 1912 that he took over the home farm, on which he has continued to reside, and where he is successfully carrying on general farming and dairying with a herd of grade Holstein cattle and a pure bred sire. He has improved the old buildings on the place and erected some new ones and it is now in very good condition. He is a stockholder in the Downsville Cooperative Creamery and has served seven years as treasurer of School District No. 6. He is a member of the Odd Fellows' lodge in Downsville. Mr. Smith was married, Feb. 22, 1922, in the town of Weston, to Matilda Madson, who was born in this town, Jan. 21, 1893, daughter of Soren and Anna (Jensen) Madson. He and his wife are the parents of two children: Donald, born April 29, 1923, and Henry, born May 18, 1924. The family are members of St. Paul's Lutheran Church in Menomonie.

Herman Halvorson, proprietor of Dale View Farm in Section 13, town of Menomonie, was born in this town, Jan. 8, 1887, son of John and Bergit (Olson) Hovda Halvorson. As a boy he attended the school of District No. 8, and grew up on the home farm helping his father and acquiring in time 1 good practical knowledge of agriculture. In 1916, being then 28 years old, he felt competent to take care of himself as an independent farmer and accordingly bought the north half of the home place, containing 160 acres, which he proceeded to cultivate on his own account, though until the spring of 1918 he continued to reside with his parents. He then took up his residence on his own farm, on which there was a small house and barn, and he has since made a number of important improvements. He has rebuilt the house, converting it into a good eight-room residence with modern conveniences; and in 1921 he erected a fine barn with a ground plan of 36 x 80 feet and a double tile basement. It is installed with the Louden barn equipment and Simplex drinking cups. The other buildings he has erected include a hay shed, hog house, granary, corn crib, machine shed and chicken house. He keeps a herd of high grade Holstein cattle but expects to change to pure bred Guernseys in the near future. Mr. Halvorson's achievements during the last six years have t en remarkable and show him to be a thorough master of his business and enterprising as well. Mr. Halvorson was married at Elk Creek, this county, on June 15, 1921, to Tillie Hageseth, daughter of Andrew and Sarah (Frederickson) Hageseth. Her parents are now deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Halvorson are members of the Evangelical Lutheran Church in Menomonie.

Peter Lammer, who was one of the early business men of Menomonie, and for some 46 years a resident of the city, was born in Hessen-Darmstadt, Germany, Nov. 3, 1831, son of John and Anna Margaretha (Schmidt) Lammer. He was one of a family of eight sons and four daughters, and in which the father and four of the sons were tailors. Among them Peter learned the trade and followed it there until 1854, when, on July 5, he set out to seek his fortune in the United States. He was landed on Long Island, N. Y., on August 27, and for the next seven years he worked for the best custom tailor houses in New York City. Then he made another move to the westward, coming to Menomonie, Wis., and establishing himself in business here. He erected the building in which he had his shop, and which was located on the site of the present Royal Hotel, and it was the second building to be constructed on a business street on the south side of town. There he conducted a tailoring business until his death, which occurred Feb. 2, 1908, when he was in his seventyseventh year. He was one of the early settlers in Menomonie and as a business man here is entitled to be called a pioneer. He had many friends and acquaint ances, some of whom survived him and were grieved to hear of his passing.

Leonard Lammer, for many years a well known tailor in Menomonie, proprietor of a shop, but who is now deceased, was born in Hessen-Darmstadt, Germany, Dec. 1, 1839, son of John and Anna Margaretha (Schmidt) Lammer. He was reared in his native land, where he attended school, and his father being a tailor, he and three of his brothers learned that trade at home, Leonard working for his father until he came to the United States in 1860. After landing in this country he came directly to Menomonie, Wis., to which place his brother Peter had preceded him. For a while he worked for his brother, but later established himself in a shop of his own at No. 1400 Ninth Street. Still later he added a new and different department to his business, putting in a staple line of groceries, and he conducted both grocery store and tailor shop until his death on Jan. 19, 1910. He was married Sept. 17, 1888, in Menomonie, to Johanna Trinko, who was born April 2, 1860, in Germany and came from that country to Menomonie, Wis., in 1886 to join her two brothers who had previously settled here. For three years before her marriage she was employed on the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company's farm. Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Lammer had two children: Mary, born Aug. 21, 1899, now Mrs. Fred Haase of Menomonie, and John, born Sept. 19, 1892. John, who acquired his education in the grade and high schools of this city has operated . the grocery store for his mother since the father's death. In 1911 they enlarged it and they carry a complete line of staple groceries and enjoy a good trade. On June 12, 1918 John enlisted in the United States navy. He trained at Great Lakes and at Hampton Roads, Va., and was stationed at the latter place until Feb. 8, 1919, when he was discharged. He is a member of Hosford-Chase Post No. 32, American Legion, and also belongs to the Knights of Columbus and the Catholic Knights of Wisconsin, he and the other members of the family belonging to St. Joseph's Catholic congregation.

George M. Cowles, a former resident of Glenwood and Downing, now passed away, was born in the state of Connecticut, April 29, 1848, son of Mr. and Mrs. Martin H. Cowles. When a young man he moved with his parents to Dodge County, Wisconsin, and was there married to Ellen Mae Gibbs. Soon after he moved with her to Salem, Nebr. This union was blessed with five children: Eddie, of Stockholm, Ill.; Mrs. A. L. Billings, of Livingston, Mont.; Elvin, of Tomahawk, Wis.; Ralph, of Ironwood, Mich.; and John, who died in infancy. In 1884 Mrs. Ellen M. Cowles passed to the great beyond, and Mr. Cowles and his children returned to Dodge County, Wisconsin. In 1886 he was married at Brownsville, that county, to Lucy Ann Samson, of which marriage the children were: Wesley, now of Portage, Wis.; Mrs. E. H. Radke, of Downing; Mrs. Howard Blood, of Ontona-gon, Mich.; and Maud, who died at the age of 17 years. In 1910 Mr. Cowles moved with his family to Glenwood City, St. Croix County, and settled on the Landsverk farm, now the Curt Booth farm, where they resided for one year. then moved to Downing, Dunn County, on the Nels Johnson farm, which was their Thev home until Mr. Cowles retired from farming and moved into town. Mrs. Lucy ILucy Ann Cowles passed away in September, 1920, and in 1921 Mr. Cowles was married to Mary Kyle, who was born in Ontario, Canada, Feb. 16, 1861, daughter of William and Margaret (Armstrong) Kyle. Her early years were spent in Canada, where she attended school. Later she accompanied her parents to Crookston, Minn., and her education was advanced by attendance for one year at the Moorehead Normal School. Then for two years she was a student at Hamline University, near Minneapolis and St. Paul, and further qualified herself for the profession of teacher by two years' study in the River Falls Normal School. She taught two years in Crookston, also some time in North and South Dakota, for 11 years in St. Hilaire, Minnesota, and for two years at Wilson, Wis., going to the latter place in 1902. Shortly after his marriage to Miss Kyle, Mr. Cowles purchased a nice, commodious residence in Downing, where he made his home until his death on Monday, March 12, 1923. He was an upright, industrious man who had a large circle of friends by whom his loss was deplored. He was survived by his wife and by eight children of his two former marriages, whose names have been already given. Since his death Mrs. Cowles has transformed the family residence into a hotel, known as the Wayside Inn Hotel, which she is now conducting successfully. She is a member of Downing union church and its Ladies' Aid Society, and is an active member of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

Jacob Henry Snively, who at the time of his death some eight years ago was regarded as the dean of Menomonie merchants, was born at Sharpsburg, Penn., Sept. 29, 1835. In 1850, with his parents, he crossed the Allegheny mountains by

At Pittsburg they took a steamboat down the Ohio River to the Mississippi. team. and ascended the latter river to Fort Madison, Iowa, in the vicinity of which place Mr. Snively first came to Menomonie shortly before the Civil they took a farm. War, but on that occasion remained but a short time, as, returning to Fort Madison on the breaking out of the war, he enlisted in the 44th Iowa Infantry, with which he saw service. After the war he returned to Fort Madison. In May, 1868, Mr. Snively was married at Denmark, Iowa, to Eliza Jane Taylor. He and his bride came at once to Menomonie, journeying up the Mississippi to Read's Landing, thence up the Chippewa on the steamer Phil Scheckel to Dunnville and from there by team to Menomonie. For three months Mr. Snively was in the employ of Knapp, Stout & Co., after which he worked for S. B. French. In the fall of 1874 he left Mr. French's employ and entered into business for himself, establishing a store This enterat No. 600 Main Street for handling and selling sewing-machines. prise proved a success and was conducted by Mr. Snively for 48 years, or until his death on April 11, 1917. Snively's corner has long been familiar to the people of Menomonie and vicinity. Mr. Snively not only gave his attention to his business until the last but also took a lively interest in public affairs, lending his aid and influence to movements for the benefit of the community. Until the close of his life he continued remarkably active, both mentally and physically, for one of his He was a member of William Evans Post, G. A. R., and both he and Mrs. vears. Snively were active workers in the Congregational Church, of which both were Charter Members. Menomonie contained no citizen more universally looked up to than Mr. Snively. Possessed of an even temperament and a kindly disposition, he was a congenial companion and a lovable friend. He and his wife were the parents of five children, Letitia R., Harriet M., Alice F., Harvey K. and Edward T.

Harvey K. Snively, a prominent business man of Menomonie, proprietor of Snively's Art Store and Gift House, at 600 Main Street, the location being known to residents of the city as "Snively's Corner," was born in Menomonie, April 4, 1882, son of Jacob H. and Eliza Jane (Taylor) Snively. He acquired his education in the local schools, being graduated from the high school with the class of 1900. Soon afterwards he went to Chicago, where, during the following year, he was in the employ of Swift & Co. During the next five years he worked for the Saginaw Manufacturing Co., in Chicago, and after that he took up theatrical work, which he followed as a profession for ten years, becoming an actor of considerable note. He was a member at different times of several of the leading stock companies, and during his career on the road appeared in practically every state and many of the largest cities. Upon retiring from the stage, he returned to Menomonie and entered the Stout Institute, where he received the degree of Bachelor of Science in 1921. In May, 1922, he took over from his mother the business which had been founded by his father many years before; and on September 17 that year the mother passed away. Mr. Snively has made a number of changes in the business with the view to improvement. He carries a fine line of stationery, office supplies, gifts and novelties. In the fall of 1924 he established "The Gift House" to take care of that department of his business, housing it in a separate room artistically arranged and decorated. Here one finds objects of art gathered from all parts of the world. His business is the leading one of its kind in the city and has been built up through care and good taste in selection of goods of quality, courteous treatment, and service Mr. Snively is a Chapter Mason, and a member of the Knights of to patrons. For over 20 years he has been an active and useful member of the Lud-Pythias. ington Guard Band. He was married in April, 1914, at Nashville, Tenn., to Irma L. Magerhans of St. Louis. He and his wife are the parents of four children, Mary F., James H., Robert S., and Natalie L. The family are members of the Congregational Church.

P. C. Hanson, in former years an active factor in mercantile circles, but now living retired in the village of Knapp, was born in Denmark, Feb. 28, 1852, son of Hans Corneluison and Kirsten Jorgenson, who were natives of that country. The father died in Denmark in 1887 at the age of 74 years and in the following year the mother came to America, where she spent the remainder of her life, passing away at the home of her son, the subject of this sketch, on Feb. 10, 1901. P. C. Hanson acquired a public school education in his native land, where he grew to manhood. It was in 1872 that he came to the United States, locating first at Perth Amboy, N. J., for a short period. In the fall of the same year he came west to Racine, Wis., and went to work on a farm, where he remained for a year and a half, during which time he was learning the English language. He next went to Rochester, Minn., where he for the following five years was employed in various kinds of labor, including farming. At the end of that period he bought 80 acres of wild land in Olsmtead County, Minnesota, and began to farm on his own account. He had to begin at the beginning by making a clearing and building a house and other structures, all of a more or less primitive kind, after which he began grubbing and breaking the There he remained for four years, at the end of which time he sold the place land. and moved to Pierce County, Wisconsin, where he bought an 80-acre farm. years later, in 1884, he sold that place and came to Dunn County, buying a farm of Two 80 acres in the town of Lucas. On this latter place he spent nine years actively engaged in agricultural operations. Then he sold that also and coming to the village of Knapp, bought the McLaughlin interest of the McLaughlin & Harding Mercantile Company. For the following year he was Mr. Harding's partner, the business being carried on under the style of Harding & Hanson. At the end of the year he and his partner divided the stock of goods, and Mr. Hanson, having purchased the building, remained at the old stand, conducting business there until February, 1917, when he sold out after a proprietorship of 12 or 13 years. During that period he built up a fine trade in general merchandise, including clothing and hardware, and was well and favorably known through his part of the county. He had also combined with it an undertaking department, having taken the necessary studies in the School of Embalming in Minneapolis. Since 1917 he has been practically retired, having accumulated a competence during his years of work. During several years he served as a member of the village council. He is a stockholder in the Home Telephone Co. of Knapp. He owns and occupies one of the pretty residences in the village, and is the owner also of four other residence properties in Knapp and 40 acres of land within the village limits. For many years he has been a consistent member and supporter of the Seventh Day Adventist Church. Mr. Hanson was married July 27, 1879, to Emma Mirrick, who was born in Iowa of English and Scotch parentage or ancestry on July 20, 1859. She was an earnest christian woman and a lovable character, well and faithfully performing the duties of wife and mother. After a married life of over 30 years, she passed away on Feb. 4, 1911. There were three children born to Mr. and Mrs. Hanson: Marie, May 5, 1881; Tena Martha, March 6, 1885, and William Henry, Aug 22, 1886. Marie is now Mrs. Henry Blumer, her husband being a prominent merchant in Knapp. She has one child, Doris Emily. Tena Martha is the wife of John Sampson of Berrien Springs, Mich., a professor in the college at that place. She has two children, Dorothy and Frances. William Henry until 32 years old was his father's partner in the mercantile business. He then went to Berrien Springs, Mich., where he was attending the college as a student and also conducting a College Mercantile Store that he established. On July 3, 1921, while bathing in the public baths, he was suddenly seized with cramps and sank before help could reach him, being drowned. He was married to Gertrude Waite, and left his wife and one child, Lyle, who resides at Berrien Springs. His death was a sad blow to his father and also caused deep regret to a numerous circle of friends.

Frank Dahms, who passed most of his life in the town of Spring Brook, where he was well known and esteemed as a sterling citizen, was born in Monroe County, Wisconsin, April 22, 1859, son of William and Anna (Marquet) Dahms. The parents were among the immigrants who landed in this country from Germany in the late 50's. After living in Monroe County, Wisconsin until 1864, they came to Dunn County, buying railroad land in the town of Spring Brook. It was wild land, but there they remained and in time built up a good farm home. After the death of William Dahms, his wife took up her residence in Menomonie, but later moved to La Crosse, where she spent her remaining years. Frank Dahms, as already shown, was about five years old when he accompanied his parents to Dunn County. Growing up on the home farm, he naturally became his father's assistant, and at the age of 21 he took over the farm, which he continued to operate and to improve, replacing the original buildings with others of modern type, and carrying on general farming and dairying until his death, which took place May 30, 1912. Mr. Dahms was a progressive man and also a helpful one in the community, not only pushing his own business successfully, but being ever ready to assist others and to do what he could for the general welfare. He donated the land on which the Sunny Knoll Schoolhouse now stands, and also for several years served as school director. He was such a man as the community could ill afford to lose and whose life is pleasant to remember. Mr. Dahms was married April 1, 1880, on his farm, to Bertha Zillman, who was born in Germany, July 16, 1860, daughter of William and Minnie (Bast) Zillman. Her parents, who came to the United States in 1866, settled first in Columbus. Wis., later moving to Watertown, Wis., where they spent the remainder of their lives. Mr. and Mrs. Frank Dahms were the parents of four children, who were as follows: Anna, born July 12, 1882; William D. F., born Aug. 27, 1890; Amelia, born May 27, 1893, and Alice, born Jan. 30, 1896. Anna, who married Samuel J. Quilling, died June 20, 1924, leaving six children, namely: Earl and Roy (twins), born Oct. 7, 1904, of whom Roy died in January, 1905; Ralph, born Jan. 7, 1906; Pearl, born April 26, 1910; Mabel, born June 13, 1912, and Florence, born Feb. 4, 1919. William D. F. Dahms, who is now operating the home farm, married Mabel Giese on Jan. 1, 1914, and they have three children: LaVerne, born Oct. 19, 1914; Burnett, born Jan. 11, 1917; and Ethel, born April Amelia, the third child of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Dahms, died on May 17. 1915, when within 10 days of her twenty-second birthday. Alice is now Mrs. Edwin Schaefer of Spring Brook and the mother of two children, Francis and Mar-The family are affiliated religiously with the Salem Evangelical Church in ion. the town of Spring Brook.

Christ A. Howe, a well known and highly respected resident of the town of Lucas, who has resided in Dunn County for nearly 55 years, and has led an active and useful life, first as a lumber worker and later as a farmer, was born in Norway, June 2, 1843. As a young man or youth he learned the flour milling business, which he followed in his native land until 1870, and in the meanwhile was married, in March, 1865, to Ingeborg Ellingson, who was born May 17, 1843. In 1870, with his wife and two young children, Mr. Howe emigrated to America, embarking for Quebec, Canada, where he and his family were landed June 24, and proceeding successively to Montreal, Detroit, Milwaukee and La Crosse. At the last mentioned place they took a boat up the Mississippi River to Prescott, in Pierce County, Wis., where they were met by friends and taken to Martell in St. Croix County. they remained a short time visiting, and then set out for Menomonie. On arriving in the busy lumber town Mr. Howe found employment with Knapp, Stout & Co., with whom he remained subsequently for 23 years, working in their sawmills. The end of that period came in the early 90's, when the company was all through in this region, having exhausted the timber, and a new era began, some of the lumber workers seeking other fields, but many of them taking up land in Dunn County from which the timber had been cut and starting pioneer farms. Mr. Howe, however, did not begin as a pioneer, but bought the old Drowley farm of 160 acres in Section 23, town of Lucas, a place that has ever since been his home however, made extensive improvements on it. He increased its area by buying 80 acres more land, which gave him a farm of 240 acres, and in 1915 he made an important addition to its buildings, erecting a fine barn of 38 x 112 feet in ground plan and installed with modern barn equipment. During 29 years he was actively engaged in general farming, giving close attention to dairying, and keeping grade Shorthorn cattle, of which there are 26 in the milking strain now on the farm. Though he is now 81 years of age, it is only two years ago that he retired from active work, since which time his son Oliver has been the farm manager. He and his wife who has been a faithful companion and helpmate to him for nearly 60 years, are still enjoying good health. They have been the parents of 11 children, all of whom are now living, the record in brief being as follows: Anna Eliza, born Aug. 20, 1866, is now Mrs. Ingweld Mattison of the town of Lucas. Anton C., born Jan. 15, 1868, is on the home farm. Oliver C., born Dec. 25, 1871, is operating the home farm. Caroline C., born April 21. 1874, married Robert Arntson, but is now a widow; she has a son, Clarence A. Gene C., born March 17, 1876. Hannah C., born Dec. 10, 1877, now residing in Minneapolis, and Mary C., born Oct. 24, 1879, are all at home. Carl C., born Oct. 22, 1881, married Anna Brehm, and is operating a farm in the town of Weston; he and his wife being the parents of three children, Eugene, Annella and Maurice. Andrew, born Dec. 13, 1883, now a farmer in the town of Menomonie, married Olive Harrington and has five children, Harold, Lester, Lawrence, Claude and Donald. Matilda, born Feb. 9, 1886, is living on the home farm, while Inga, the youngest child, born Dec. 14, 1888, is a resident of Menomonie.

Michael Mousel, a progressive farmer in the town of Spring Brook, whose career illustrates the value of self-help, was born in the Duchy of Luxemburg, Jan. 8, 1854, son of John and Anna M. (Gasper) Mousel. The parents, who were farmers, spent their lives in their native land. Their children were: Nicholas, who came to this country, worked with his brothers John and Barney and then returned to Luxemburg; Michael, subject of this sketch; Mary, now Mrs. Peter Kramer of Eau Claire; Elizabeth, still in Luxemburg, and now the wife of Theodore Elinger; John, a farmer in the town of Spring Brook, Dunn County; Susan, who became the wife of John Kiefer of Luxemburg, but is now deceased; Matthias, residing in Luxemburg; J. Barney, in the town of Spring Brook, Dunn County; and Anna, who is Mrs. Paul Fellen of Stayton, Ore. Michael Mousel acquired his education in his native land after which he was engaged in farm labor there for a number of In 1881 he showed his ambition and progressive spirit by cutting loose from the old home and emigrating to the United States in search of better opportunities for advancement. From New York he journeyed to Sheboygan County, Wisccnsin, in the following year went to Minnesota, and in his third year in this country came to Dunn County, where for a year he did farm labor in Elk Mound and the vicinity. In 1885 he went back to Luxemburg to get a wife, returned with his bride to this country and in 1887 began to build up a farm home, buying 80 acres of land in Section 9, town of Spring Brook, the tract being a partly improved farm on which was a small frame house. He at once built a small barn to shelter his team and two cows, later adding other buildings as he was able until he had a good and complete set. He also bought 40 acres more land and still later another 40-acre tract, and now has a total of 160 acres, of which he has cleared 70. He carries on general farming and dairying, having started with mixed cattle, which he has since replaced by grade Holsteins. Mr. Mousel in 1921 rented his farm to his son John, but still resides on it. He is a stockholder in the Elk Mound Cooperative Creamery. His marriage, to which reference has already been made, took place in Luxemburg, Dec. 22, 1886, uniting him with Mary Beckius, who was born there Aug. 11, 1864, daughter of John B. and Margaret (Kelsen) Beckius. He and his wife are the parents of six children, Cornelius, Nicholas, Michael, Margaret, John J. and William, whose records in brief are as follows: Cornelius, born Oct. 17, 1887, is now in the employ of George O. Chrislow of the town of Spring Brook. Nicholas, born Aug. 31, 1889, and who owns and operates a farm in the town of Elk Mound, married Anna M. Zimmer, and has had five children, Marie H., Mary (deceased), Agnes, Lawrence, Clarence and James. Michael A., born July 13, 1891, married Margaret Zimmer. They reside at Elmwood, Pierce County, and are the parents of five children, Raymond, Elinora, Donald, Robert and Andrew. Margaret, born Dec. 8, 1893, is Mrs. Michael Yaeger of the town of Spring Brook and the mother of four children, Raymond, Leo, Cornelius and Odellia. John J., born July 17, 1897, is now operating the home farm, and William, born Dec. 12, 1901, is also residing on it. Mr. Mousel and his family are members of the St. Joseph's Catholic village of Knapp, was born in the town of Stanton, Dunn County, Oct. 12, 1885, son of George and Carrie (Cowan) Cole. The father was born in Wallworth County, Wis., and the mother in Illinois but they were married in Dunn County, where George Cole followed farming for the greater part of his life, dying Oct. 10, 1902. He had survived his wife by several years, she having passed away on Feb. 28, 1899. They had two children, Roy and James Omar. The elder, Roy, born Dec. 15, 1880. now resides in Superior, Wis., being deputy county clerk of Douglas County. He married Mildred Kennedy and has two children, Katherine and Jane. James Omar Cole as a boy attended school in Knapp and lived at home until his father's death Thus left an orphan at the age of 17 years, he went to live with his uncle, in 1902. O. F. Cole, with whom he remained until he had attained his majority. He then entered the employ of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway, as fireman on the run between Austin, Minn. and Mason City, Iowa, being thus occupied for a year. Subsequently he worked for the "Soo" line, residing at Abbotsford, Wis., for four years, during a part of which time he was firing on the Penokee Range. He next became car repairer for the Omaha line, first at Washburn, Wis., and later at Spooner, and was with that road for two years. At the end of that time he returned to Knapp and during the next two years was office manager and lineman for the Home Telephone Co. In 1918, with his family, he went to Donna in the Lower Rio Grande Valley, Texas, where he worked on a farm for his uncle, O. F. Cole, spending over a year there. Returning to Knapp, Wis., at the end of that time, he worked one year for the Farmers' Equity Exchange and then bought the variety store and ice cream parlor of A. R. Olson on the south side of Main Street. In 1923 he moved across the street, establishing the restaurant known as "Jimmie's Eat Shop," which he operated until November, 1924, on either regular or short orders, serving food that met the taste of the most fastidious palate, his wife having charge of the kitchen. He also carried a full line of cigars and other smoker's supplies, shelf groceries, hand painted china and notions, ladies hats and fancy goods. In November, 1924, he purchased the Hattie Naaf grocery on the East side of the village into which he moved his staple stock and gives his entire time to the grocery business, having given up the restaurant. Mr. Cole is musical and plays the saxophone in the Knapp band. He is also interested in all outdoor sports and is a member of the base ball team. He is now a member of the village council. Mr. Cole was married Aug. 2, 1916, to Ida H. Price, who was born Feb. 10, 1891, eldest of the 17 children of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Price, well known farming people of the town of Stanton. All of the 17 children in the Price family, except one, are now living. Mr. and Mrs. Cole are the parents of one child, James Frederick, who was born Feb. 14, 1921. The family faith is that of the St. Paul's Lutheran Church in Menomonie.

Ole Hammer, an early settler in the town of Menomonie, now passed away, was born near Torgen, Norway, March 18, 1847. He grew to manhood in his native land, where he attended school and subsequently operated a small farm. On May 11, 1871, he married Johanna Dahl, who was born April 2, 1849. Mr. Hammer remained in Norway for nine years after his marriage. Then, as their family was increasing without a corresponding increase in their means, he and his wife made up their minds to emigrate It was necessary that they should be separated for a while, for he had not money enough to take them all with him, and, besides, there was a possibility that they might not like the new country; so in 1880 he came on alone to Dunn County, Wis., and found employment in the planing-mill of Knapp, Stout & Co. at Cedar Falls. The wages of mill men in those days were not high and it was not until 1882 that Mr. Hammer had saved enough money to be able to send for his family. They then joined him and there was a happy family reunion when they arrived in the little mill town after so long a separation. Mr. Hammer continued working for the famous lumber company above mentioned for ten years longer; but he had ambitions to be something more than a wage worker, and, moreover, could foresee the time when the mills would have to shut down for lack of material, when the timber should become exhausted In 1892, therefore, he made a start in a new direction, buying 40 acres of land in Section 32, town of Menomonie. But on that place he remained only a year, at the end of that time selling it and buying another tract of 60 acres in the same section. Later he bought an 80-acre tract in Section 33, which was covered with stumps and brush. On his land in Section 32 he proceeded to make a home and develop a farm. In course of time he cleared up a considerable portion of the land and erected a fair set of buildings. His agricultural operations were continued until 1914, in which year he sold the home farm to his son Anton, and the 80 acres in Section 33 to his son, Oscar. He continued to reside on the farm, however, until his death on Jan. 23, 1921. Mr. and Mrs. Ole Hammer were the parents of 11 children, seven of whom are now living, as follows: Kari, now Mrs. Ole Evjen of West Duluth; Rena, who married a Mr. Kjellen and is now a widow residing in Park Falls, Wis.; Johanna, who is Mrs. Edward Moe of Eau Claire; Anna, wife of August Frier of Eau Claire; Ragna, who is Mrs. Ben Ingen of the town of Lucas; Anton, residing on the home farm, and Oscar, a farmer in the town of Menomonie. Anton Hammer, the present proprietor of the Hammer farm, was born March 18, 1886, at Cedar Falls, Wis., and as a boy attended district school in the town of Menomonie. He learned agriculture on the home place, which he purchased in 1914, at the time of his father's death, and he has since operated it, successfully carrying on general farming and dairying. In 1916 he built a new barn of $36 \ge 60$ feet, installed with the James equipment. He is a stockholder in the Hudson Road Creamery and the Downsville Cooperative Creamery. He is fraternally affiliated with the Independent order of Odd Fellows. He has never married and is taking care of his aged mother. They are both members of Our Saviour's Lutheran Church in Menomonie.

George Wesley Shafer, proprietor of the Busy Bee Farm in Section 29, town of Lucas, was born in Downsville, Dunn County, Wis., July 22, 1856, son of David and Sarah Ann (Biss) Shafer. The parents were both natives of Jefferson County, Pennsylvania, David being one of a family of nine children, all born in Brookfield, which was the county seat of that county. The eldest son in the family was Jacob, who built a small sawmill on the Little Toby River, but had the misfortune to meet with an accident shortly afterwards, from the effects of which he died. The other eight children, David, Henry, Simon, Michael, William, Andrew, Mary and Cathine, all came to Wisconsin and settled in or near Downsville in Dunn County. David, as above intimated, married Sarah Ann Biss, who, like himself, was born in Brookville, Penn. He engaged in farming in that locality, but not being successful, became discouraged and so came to Dunn County, about 1855, settling at Downsville, where he took a homestead, but, as he found he could not make a living there, in a short time he moved again, this time to the town of Lucas. The Teegardens having erected a small mill in Section 1, he squatted on a piece of land in that vicinity and remained there until the spring of 1865. He then bought 40 acres of wild land in Section 20, town of Lucas, paying $1.50 an acre for it, and started to raise cattle, being one of the first settlers in the western part of the town. From time to time he bought additional land until he owned altogether 13 "forties, or 520 acres, and for his first "forty" he paid with money that he and his wife earned by digging ginseng in the woods. His land he used for grazing purposes and he would kill and dress his cattle, selling the meat to Knapp, Stout & Co. in Menom-For many years he also carried the mail between Knapp and Lucas, often making the trip on foot when the trials were impassible for a horse. Thus he became known to practically everyone in the western part of the county and had a host of friends, as he was a man of integrity with an agreeable disposition and genial man-He died Oct. 28, 1889, and after his death his wife moved to Knapp, where she made her home for some time, but spent the balance of her life with her daughters in Frederic, Polk County, Wis. She died Dec. 28, 1924. at the age of 84 years. Mr. and Mrs. David Shafer were the parents of seven children, namely: May, now deceased; Amanda, who is Mrs. James Parfitt of Frederic, Wis.; George Wesley, of the town of Lucas, Dunn County; Isaac, deceased; Flora, who became the wife of Frank Austin, but is now deceased; Emma, also deceased, who was Mrs. Frank Laflin; and Lillian, who is Mrs. Charles Blyea of Frederick, Wis. George W. Shafer was educated in the school of his district in the town of Lucas. When a young man he took up cooking, which he learned so thoroughly that he was employed at various times in some of the leading hotels in this part of the country. He also cooked in lumber camps and for railroad construction crews. In this capacity he was with the Northern Pacific during the construction of their read from Bismark west to the mountains, and with the Spokane & Northern during the construction of their road from Spokane to Canada. For a time also he operated a restaurant in Wallace, After his father's death he returned to Dunn County, Wisconsin, and since Idaho then has remained at home practically all the time, except for brief periods of absence during the winter months when he has accompanied hunting parties as cook. In 1880 he purchased land in Section 29, town of Lucas, and established his home here, the farm being managed by his wife when he was absent. At one time he owned 320 acres, but has sold all but 160. This does not include a tract of 52 acres that he owns at Donna, in the extreme southern corner of Texas, about 20 miles from the Rio Grande, where his son-in-law, Harry Hubbard, is growing cotton. George W. Shafer was married March 15, 1885, in the town of Weston, to Angie Palmer, who was born in Illinois, daughter of Stephen and Emily (Thatcher) Palmer, the father being a native of England and the mother of Canada. Mr. and Mrs. Palmer were early settlers in the town of Weston, where they spent the re-mainder of their lives, both being now deceased. They had six children, the first born of whom, Sarah, who married Albert Pease, is now deceased. The survivors are: Angie, now Mrs. George W. Shafer; May, wife of Chauncey Tibbetts of Lake Forest, Ill.; Pearl, who married Melborn Haddley and lives in Beaumont. Texas; John, of Dallas, S. D., and Charles, of Port Arthur, Texas. Mr. and Mrs. Shafer are the parents of five children, Lessie, Stella, Velma, Victor and Palmer. Lessie is the wife of Harry Hubbard of Donna, Texas. Stella is Mrs. Harry Metz-ger of Fall City, Dunn County, Wis. Velma is Mrs. Christ Jensen of Albertville Eau Claire County, Wis. Victor, residing at home, married Susan Imel and they have a daughter, Betty L. Palmer lives at home with his parents. The members of the family at home belong to and attend the Lucas M. É. Church. It has been seen that the Shafer and Palmer families were pioneers in the western part of Dunn County and have contributed worthily to its development and civilization.

George H. Hart, formerly active in several Dunn County enterprises, and the creator of a good agricultural estate in the town of Stanton, but new living retired in the village of Knapp, was born in Waukesha County, Wisconsin, Nov. 2, 1856 son of Henry and Eliza (Gross) Hart. The father was a native of Germany and the mother of New York State, where they were married, coming west in 1856. In Waukesha County, Wisconsin, they were engaged in farming but after some time they moved to Walworth County, this state, where Henry Hart engaged in buying and selling stock, transporting much of it in wagons to Milwaukee, where it was He died June 29, 1904, at the age of 76 years, having been born April 29. sold His wife Eliza, who was born in 1836, died about 1906. George H. Hart 1828. was educated in the public schools of Waukesha County and remained at home until he was 16 years old, at which time he began industrial life. In 1881, when 25, he came to Dunn County, locating at Knapp, where he went to work for the Hall & Dan Barrel Co., remaining in their employ until the fall of that year. He then bcught 80 acres of land known as the McClelland farm on Miller's Hill in the town of Lucas, and that fall he went to Milwaukee and bought a team of horses, which he drove back to Dunn County, the trip taking nine days to make. There was no That winter he bridge then at Eau Claire and he had to cross the river by ferry. cut some of the timber on his land and sold it, and in 1882 he sold the land to Mr. Hall and returned to the employ of Hall & Dan, driving a team and working in their mill and remaining with them until 1886. But in the meanwhile he was making preparations for beginning domestic life on his own account by taking a wife, and on Nov. 21, 1882, he was united in marriage with Anna Haffelder. She was born in Waukesha County, Nov. 5, 1863, daughter of Joseph and Mary (Feister) Haffelder, and her parents, who came to Dunn County in 1871, had settled on a farm in the town of Menomonie, where years afterward they both passed away, the father on Sept. 30, 1892, and the mother on April 3, 1919. With the idea of matrimony in mind, Mr. Hart had also laid plans for starting a home of the rural type, and, with the assistance of his wife, and perhaps children, build it up in time to something worth while-a piece of property that would be worth all the toil it would be necessary to go through in order to create it. So he had bought 120 acres of "slashed" land in Section 14 of the town of Stanton, on which there were no buildings, nor even a clearing on which to put up a house. Moreover, in order to reach it, it was necessary to cut a path to it through the timber and brush. This done, he cleared a space, then hauled a load of lumber from Menomonie by mule team, and at the same time brought out a carpenter with all necessary tools and supplies, and within ten days he had a frame house built and himself and wife moved into it. From this starting-point the road they had to travel was clearly indicated. It was the road of plodding, patient industry and self denial; not attractive, perhaps, but it lead to success more surely than any other they had it in their power to take, and so they followed it and in fullness of time reached the desired goal. Both worked early and late and each year saw more land cleared, while from time to time new buildings attracted the attention of the passing wayfarer. After considerable progress had been made on the original tract, Mr. Hart bought 80 acres more land adjoining his place, which gave him a farm of 200 acres. The house was also improved and both Mr. and Mrs. Hart felt proud when a fine barn of $30 \ge 70$ feet at last stood on their property. It had 16-foot posts and a full basement, and was provided with the James barn equipment. Mr. Hart also kept improving his stock, having started with grade Durham and a full blooded sire; but in the latter years, when he became interested in the organization of the Annis Cheese Factory, which was located near his farm—he being one of the owners and directors—he changed his stock to the Holstein breed. One of the active and prominent citizens of his town, he served it for many years as a supervisor, and also for 12 years was a member of the school board of his district, serving thereon as director and treasurer. Among the other business concerns in which Mr. Hart is or has been interested was the Knapp creamery, of which he was at one time a stockholder, and the Home Telephone Co., of which he is now the treasurer and a stockholder, having formerly been its president. In 1915 he rented his farm out and retired, a little later selling the place to his son, William. He and his wife have since resided in the village. They are people widely known and are members of the Old Settlers' Association. They also attend the Methodist Episcopal Church, Mr. Hart belonging fraternally to the Odd Fellows and the Modern Woodmen of America. They had three children, Edward, William J. and Lulu. Edward, born Jan. 14, 1884, and now a farmer in the town of Stanton, married Ruth Carpenter and has two children, Donnie M. and Kenneth. William J., born Oct. 11, 1887, is still the owner of the old home farm. He married Martha Price and has three children, Loraine, Harriet and Marion. Lulu, born Jan. 7, 1894, is now the wife of Charles Suckow, a farmer in the town of Stanton. She also has three children, Howard, Norman and Lilah.

John O. Hovind, a well known farmer of the town of Menomonie, residing in Section 1, north, was born in Norway, Feb. 10, 1860, son of Ole A. and Rocel (Mattison) Hovind. Both parents died in Norway. John O. attended school in his native land and for some time in early manhood was in the employ of a railway construction company as mail carrier. In 1882 he came to America to visit his brother Arndt, who was living in Menomonie. After arriving here and looking around, he concluded to stay a while and obtained employment with the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company in their lumber yards at Cedar Falls. He was so satisfied with his work and with this country that he remained here, and while still working for the company formed the resolution of ultimately becoming a farmer. With this end in view, in 1889, he bought a tract of 40 acres in Section 1 north, town of Menomonie, which was close to the village of Cedar Falls, and in 1890, having been several years married, he took up his residence on it, though he continued to work for the Knapp-Stout people until they closed out their business there in 1900. He had then been in the employ of the company for 18 years. Before that time he had begun to develop his farm, devoting such time as he could spare to it in the evenings, and thus had built a small house and cleared some of the land. As soon as he could give all or most of his time to it he made faster progress, and besides clearing his own land, he also cleared a considerable amount for others, in which respect (counting all he has cleared) he has a record that is probably not excelled, if equalled, by any man now living in Dunn County. To his original tract he added another, of 160 acres, which gave his farm a total area of 200 acres, 160 of which he has cleared. He has also erected a second set of buildings on his place and has kept full pace with the advancement of agriculture along modern lines. During his early period on the farm, and for a number of years, he cut from 200 to 300 cords of wood yearly on his land, selling it in Menomonie; and also, for several years, he rented grazing land and bought many head of cattle in the spring, which he had ready for market in the fall. For several terms he served as pathmaster. He is a stockholder in the Hudson Road Creamery. Mr. Hovind was married Oct. 4, 1884, in the city of Menomonie, to Johanna Johannason, daughter of Ole and Lorine (Sovre) Johannason. Both her parents died in Norway. Mr. and Mrs. Hovind have been the parents of six children, all now living, namely, Julia, Anna, Otto, Sever, Albert and Eckmond. Julia is residing on the home farm. Anna, who is the wife of Roy Taylor of Menomonie, has three children, John C., Frank and Richard. Otto, who married Gertie Otto and lives in Menomonie, has three children, Loraine, Lyle and Elden. Sever married Emma Hafilder and they reside at Tramway. Albert married Sadie Harens, resides at Cedar Falls, and has two children, Neil and Irene. Eckmond also resides at Cedar Falls; he married Edna Dow and has one child, Arnold. He and Arnold work for their father on the farm. The Hovind family are members of the Norwegian Lutheran Church at North Menomonie. They occupy a good social position and have a wide circle of friends.

Arne Tilleson, a retired farmer residing on his farm on Section 28, town of Elk Mound, is a pioneer of this town in a very full sense of the word, as he has made his home here for 64 years, a longer time than any other living pioneer. He was born at Barum, near Christiania, Norway, Sept. 4, 1850, son of Ludwig and Marie (Arneson) Tilleson, and with his parents came to this country in 1854. For six years the family resided in Fond du Lac County, Wisconsin, where Ludwig Tilleson operated farms under rental. In June, 1860 a party of four families set out for Dunn County with ox teams—the families of Ludwig Tilleson, Lars Anderson, Christian Christopherson and Martin Howe-bringing with them cows, sheep and other young stock. They arrived here in the same month and Ludwig Tilleson took 160 acres of raw land in Section 21, town of Elk Mound and began operations by putting up some log buildings. That first summer he broke six acres of land, which was a good performance for the first year's work. The development of the farm occupied him for many years, and a full half century, very nearly, from the time he had settled on it he died there, on Feb. 15, 1910. His wife had died not very long before, on June 12, 1908. They were 83 and 89 years old respectively, he having been born May 19, 1826, and she on Oct. 8, 1818. They were the parents of seven children: Anne, born June 15, 1846, who died in infancy; Anna E., born Oct. 4, 1848, who married Tille Nelson and died Oct. 20, 1879, leaving five children now living, namely, Hendrick, Ludwig, Rudolph, Petronelle and Martha; Arne, subject of this sketch; Tilla, born Feb. 5, 1853, who died in 1854; Tille, born May 10, 1856, who died in the fall of 1860; Petronelle, born Dec. 9, 1858, who is now Mrs. John Hanson of Elk Mound, and Emma, born Jan. 10 1862, who died May 26, 1865. Arne Tilleson was in his tenth year when he accompanied his parents to Dunn County, and doubtless the leisurely journey from Fond du Lac County, made in wagons drawn by oxen in the beautiful month of June was an enjoyable experience He had attended school in Fond du Lac County and continued to do so to him. for some time in the town of Elk Mound, Dunn County. But his whole time was not spent in study for even as a young boy he drove a breaking team on the farm and in other ways assisted his parents, becoming used to hard work and self denial, and also acquiring a good practical knowledge of agriculture. In 1870 he took the first step toward utilizing this knowledge on his own account, buying 80 acres of land lying in Sections 21 and 28, the development of which he commenced while still residing at home with his parents. Later he bought a homestead of 40 acres adjoining. The first building was a small barn, after which he put up a frame house, and in 1875 he moved on to the land with his family, for he had been married on Dec. 31, 1870, to Mrs. Bertha Tilleson, widow of Ludwig G. Tilleson, and whose maiden name was Bertha Anderson. It is unnecessary to describe in detail the various steps which Mr. Tilleson took in the development of his farm, but a few words in regard to its present condition will show what he has accomplished. He has a good barn of 28 x 80 feet, with full basement and with patent equipment; also a fine set of other out-buildings, and he uses a milking machine operated by a gas engine. He also bought additional land until he owned 240 acres, aside from other tracts which he bought and sold. After operating that farm until 1914, he rented it to his son Carl M., and in the following year he moved the house that his father had built over to his farm and remodeled it, and he and his wife now occupy it, the other farm house being occupied by his son and family. During his active career Mr. Tilleson was one of the stirring citizens in the town of Elk Mound, and though now 75 years old is still active physically and may be seen out in the fields almost every day helping his son. He is a stockholder in the Elk Mound Cooperative Creamery, and formerly rendered good service as a member of the town board and as clerk of his school district. He is an active and helpful member of the Barum Norwegian Lutheran Church, in the town of Elk Mound, to which the members of his family also belong, and in which he holds the important office of Mr. and Mrs. Arne Tilleson have been the parents of ten children, Ludwig, deacon. Nels, Martha, Emma, Alfred, Matilda L., Alba B., Ella A., Carl M. and Mabel A. Ludwig, born June 7, 1872, married Bertha Walstad and has three children, Ernest, Lawrence and Julia. Nels, a farmer in the town of Red Cedar, married Edith Owens and has one child, Jay. Martha, born Oct. 5, 1875, first married Herman Anderson, by whom she had three children, Alfred, Barnhart and Hazel. After Mr. Anderson's death, she married Harry Olson of the town of Colfax. Emma, born Feb. 3, 1878, died Feb. 17, 1895. Alfred, born March 6, 1880, died June 6, 1891. Matilda L., born Feb. 15, 1882, died October 2, that year. Alba B., born Feb. 15, 1882 (twin of Matilda) is now in Everett, Wash. Ella A., born Sept. 20, 1885, is Mrs. Herman Hanson of Elk Mound and they have one child, Lucille. Carl M., born March 7, 1889, now conducting the home farm, married Hilda Braaten, and has five children, Borghild, James, Norma, Kenneth and Ervin. Mabel A., born May 18, 1890, is Mrs. Hans Solberg of Elk Mound and her children are Arnold, Blanche, Ruby, Gordon, Victor and Betty. By her first husband Ludwig G. Tilleson, Mrs. Tilleson had a daughter, Karen, who is now deceased.

Marcellus F. Stevens, whose life covered the period of 80 years lacking but a few days, and who was at different times hunter, Civil War soldier, river pilot and farmer, was born at the forks of the Kennebec River, abcut 50 miles above the village of Colon, in the state of Maine, on July 13, 1838, son of Mr. and Mrs. Elijah G. Stevens. When he was two years old his parents moved to Enidon, Maine, where later he attended school. While still in his boyhood there was another removal of the family, this time to Green County, Wisconsin, where he completed his When he was 15 he went with his father to Dead Lake Prairie in school studies. Pepin County, the trip being made with a wagon and ox team and he, himself, Elijah Stevens having taken land there, Marcellus and a brotherdriving the oxen. with a hired man, remained on the place, to begin the work of clearing and improve, ment, while the father went back to Green County for the rest of the family. In their new location wild game was plentiful, including welves, deer and bear, and Marcellus soon became an expert with a rifle and became a mighty hunter. It was easy to kill deer, which often came within sight of the cabin and could be shot from the door, so that a supply of venison could always be obtained. One evening as he was returning home with some, having had to go a distance for it, he was followed by wolves, which scented the meat, and, as the situation seeemd likely to prove dangerous, he hung the veniscn on a tree, where the wolves could not reach it, succeeded in reaching home safely, and the next day returned for it in broad daylight. A few years later the father. Elijah Stevens, engaged in lumbering on the Red Cedar River and while awaiting the arrival of the choppers he was left in charge of the shanty for about two weeks. One morning he started out and shot a bear, and had begun to dress it when he was startled by the appearance of another bear, with two cubs, probably the mate of the first one. He then discovered that he had left his amunition at home, so immediately hastened after it, but when he returned he found only the carcas of the bear he had killed, and which weighed nearly 400 pounds. Later for several seasons he made a business of hunting and killed as many as eight deer in a single day. At one time, with a single barrel shot gun he killed 60 within six weeks. At the age of 17 he began work on the river and was thus employed for years subsequently during the open season. The Civil War began in April, 1861, and in December of that year, young Stevens, then 23 years old, enlisted in Company L, Second Wisconsin Cavalry. As a soldier he was chiefly employed in scouting duty in Missouri and Arkansas, which involved occasional skirmishes with the enemy. The climate of that part of the country not suiting his health, he was taken ill and sent to a hospital at Memphis. In April, 1883, he was honorably discharged for disability, and about a year later he was sufficiently recovered to resume his work on the river. In 1871 he became pilot on the steamer Pete Wilson, and later on the Phil Scheckel, remaining as such until 1890, when he gave up river life, and took up his residence on a farm he owned in the town of Dunn. Although never the actual captain of a boat, he had qualified as such and the title was regularly given him. In time, with the help of his family, he developed two fine farms, and on one of them he finally passed away on July 7, 1918. He was an Odd Fellow and a member of the Grand Army of the Republic. Captain Stevens was married July 18, 1869, to Barbara H. Robinson, who was born in Jefferson County, Penn., Aug. 8, 1841, daughter of Thomas and Margaret (McCain) Robinson. Her father, who was of English descent, died and her mother later became the wife of Edward E. Hanagan. In 1855 the family removed to Lakeport, and in 1861 to Downsville, where Mr. Hanagan was employed in bridge building, in the mills and on the river. Mrs. Margaret Hanagan died in December, 1879, and Mr. Hanagan subsequently made his home with his step-daughter, Mrs. Stevens until his own death, which occurred in 1892. Mrs. Stevens prior to her marriage was a school teacher. To Captain and Mrs. Stevens four children were born, Elmer E., Lawrence G., Paul M. and Nellie M. Elmer E. Stevens was born Dec. 11, 1872. In early life he taught rural school and later, under President Cleveland's second administration (1892-1896), was postmaster at Downsville. He also served as town clerk for several years. He then went to Brainerd, Minn., where for two years he was in the employ of the Gt. Northern Railway. After that he was with the Bell Telephone Co. in Gt. Northern Railway Depot at Minneapolis, and still later was salesman for the International Harvester Co. in South Dakota. He next took a position as traveling salesman for the George H. Clark & Sons hardware concern of Minneapolis, and is thus employed at the present time (March, 1924). He married Jennie Sloan and they reside at Watertown, S. D., and have two children, Earl M. and Remona. Earl M. is now a clerk there. Remona, who was graduated from the University at Aberdeen, is now teaching in the Junior high school at Brownsville, McLeod County, Minn. She specializes in English, history, reading, spelling and music, being supervisor of music in the grades. Lawrence Grant Stevens was born March 23, 1875. He was educated in the Downsville public schools and when old enough took up railroad work. He became assistant postmaster under his brother at Downsville, and from 1909 to 1918 was agent for the Chicago & Northwestern road at Menomonie. Aside from the above mentioned occupations, he has always resided on the home farm, which he is now conducting with his mother. He has proved efficient and capable in whatever he has undertaken to do, and is fraternally affiliated with the Odd Fellows and Beavers. Paul Stevens was born Jan. 13, 1879, and except for one year, during which he worked in a hardware store, he has always followed farming, which he is doing now in the town of Dunn. He married Nellie Gable and they have four children, Leone, Ardale, Lyle and Verle. Nellie Maude Stevens, born Aug. 26, 1882, married Arthur Carpenter, who is clerk in the general store of H. L. Kvle, in Downsville. They have two children, Marcellus S. and Brooks. Mrs. Stevens is a member of that branch of the Odd Fellows order established for women and known as the Rebekahs; for several years she was treasurer of her lodge.

Michael Mattison, the active and enterprising proprietor of Airy Knoll Farm in Section 14, town of Spring Brook, was born in Gudbrandsdalen, Norway, Dec. 31, 1867, son of Matthias and Mattie (Jenson) Peterson. The mother died in Norway in 1874 and the father, after remaining there until 1893, when he was getting old, came to this country and resided thereafter with his sons Michael and Ingvold. He died in 1908, while visiting his brother Ole in Cheeseburg, Vernon County, Wis. Mr. and Mrs. Matthias Peterson were the parents of eight children, namely: Even, of North Menomonie; Ingvold, a farmer in the town of Lucas; Michael, subject of this sketch; Paul, now of North Dakota; Amond, who is in New Orleans; Martin, of Osseo, Wis.; Edward, of Buffalo, and Thea, now Mrs. Elmer Johnson of Mt. Vernon, Wash. Michael Mattison was educated in Norway and subsequently did farm labor there until he emigrated to America in December, 1884. Landing at New York, he came directly west to Menomonie, Wis., which place he reached a few days before Christmas, and where he met his brothers Even and Ingvold, who had been located there for several years. In the spring of 1885 he found work on the Jacobson farm in the town of Red Cedar and worked there seven months at wages of $16 per month, which was fairly good pay in those days, as it would buy twice as much as it would today; and moreover he had his board and lodging. In the fall of 1886 he went to the woods as a lumber-jack for the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company, working on the river the next summer, and in this manner he was occupied until 1897. It was during that period of his life as a lumber worker that he was married in 1889, in North Mencmonie, to Emma Haugen, who was born in Gudbrandsdalen, Norway, March 21, 1867, daughter of Hans and Anna (Haugen) Haugen. In 1897 Mr. Mattison began his career as a farmer in the town of Spring Brook, starting with 80 acres in Section 14 west. It was a tract of timber land, w h no buildings, and the task of converting it into a good farm was no light one. For two months he and his family lived in a tent until he could put up a house, the latter being a two-roomed affair-one up-stairs and one down-and this somewhat primitive dwelling is still standing on the farm, and was occupied by the family until 1918. The stock with which he started was confined to a cow and calf and one horse, while now he has a herd of mixed grade cattle with a high grade sire. He has cleared and grubbed by hand 70 acres of his farm, and in 1912 he bought an additional tract of 40 acres. He has a complete set of well constructed buildings, the house containing ten rooms and supplied with hot water heat and electric lights; his barn measures 16 x 70 feet in ground plan, his silo is 11 x 41 feet and of concrete construction, and he has a combined granary and corn crib and a large machine shed. He is a stockholder in the Downsville Cooperative Creamery and for seven years he served as clerk of the Shady Lawn School. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Michael Mattison, five in number, are: Halmer, born Jan. 4, 1890, and now living in Menomonie, who married Clara Koepke, Nov. 25, 1911, and has one child, Herman C.; Arthur, born Jan. 1, 1892, who on July 29, 1922, married Hazel Jenson, and resides with his wife on the Mattison farm; Edna, born March 15, 1894, also living on the home farm; Agnes, born Jan. 1, 1897, who was married Nov. 10, 1920, to Lyman Owens, resides at home on the Mattison farm, and has one child, Harold; and Lene, born Jan. 20, 1900, who was married to James R. Jones, Aug. 18, 1923, and resides in Fall City. The Mattison family belong to the Little Elk Creek Norwegian Evangelical Lutheran Church. The parents of Mrs. Michael Mattison, Hans and Anna Haugen, were both natives of Norway, and the father died in that country in 1880. In 1883 Mrs. Haugen, with three children, Emma, Hans and Mary, came to the United States and to Menomonie, Wis., where she had four other children living. Peter, Andrew, Kari and Matthew, who had come to this country several years before. In 1891 Mrs. Haugen married for her second husband, Erick Aasing of Prairie Farm, Barron County, and there she spent the remainder of her life, dying in 1902. Mr. and Mrs. Hans Haugen were the parents of seven children: Peter, now of Minneapolis; Andrew, of Barron County; Kari, who is Mrs. Eber Flaten of Prairie Farm; Matthew, of Eau Claire;

Emma, who is Mrs. Michael Matthison; and Hans and Mary, who are deceased.

John A. Howe, proprietor of Bruce Hill Farm in the town of Menomonie, but now living retired in North Menomonie, has been a well known and popular citizen of this town for many years. He was born in Sweden, Dec. 24, 1846, and was there reared and educated. In addition to acquiring book knowledge he took a course in 1871 and 1872 in an agricultural school. Then in 1875 he went to Norway, in which country he spent five years as foreman on two large farms. It was in 1880 that Mr. Howe came to America, landing at New York, whence he came directly to Menomonie. There he entered the employ of the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company for whom he worked for 18 years, during the summers in the sawmills and during the winters in the woods, driving ox teams and skidding logs. In 1898 Mr. Howe, foreseeing the speedy end of lumbering here, bought 80 acres of wild land, in Section 2, town of Menomonie, and began farming. There he lived until October, 1924, by which time he had cleared about 35 acres of his land. He carried on general farming and dairying, keeping grade Holstein and Red Pole cattle, having a complete set of buildings, and his record as a farmer and citizen of the town of Menomonie is one to reflect credit upon him. He is a stockholder in the New Hudson Road Creamery. Mr. Howe was married Nov. 12, 1891, in the city of Menomonie, to Dena Gregorson, who was born in Norway, July 13, 1871, and who came to America in 1890. The fruit of this marriage is one child, George M., born Aug. 1, 1903, who married Minnie Benzel, and they now operate the home farm. Mr. and Mrs. George M. Howe are the parents of one child, John G. The Howe family are members of Our Saviour's Lutheran Church in Menomonie. They are people of good standing who have a wide circle of friends.

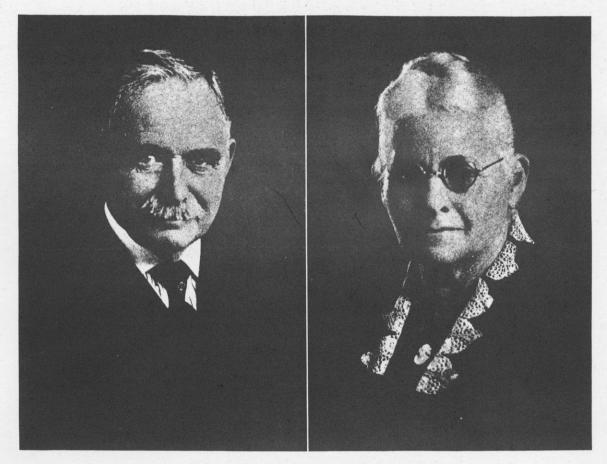

Anton H. Traxler, formerly a well known and respected citizen of the town of Red Cedar, but new deceased, was born in a house on the Hudson Road in the town of Lucas, June 13, 1858, son of Albert and Theresa (Sager) Traxler. His parents, of German nativity, were pioneers of Dunn County, having come to this country in 1846, and to Dunn County from Milwaukee in 1848, the father at first working for Knapp, Stcut & Co., as a carpenter. His wife dving in 1862, he made his home with his children in the following year on a piece of land on the Hudson Rc. 1, taking possession of it as a squatter, and it was there that the subject of this sketch was born. Afterwards he became a farmer in Section 8, town of Menomonie, but sold out there in 1884, and subsequently resided in the city of Menomonie until his death in January, 1888. His children were Mary, John, Mark, Anton and Nicholas, of whom Mary, John and Nicholas are now living. Anton H. Traxler as a boy attended school in Menomonie, and subsequently remained with his father until 1885, when he rented what was known as the Young farm in Section 29, town of Red Cedar, and started in for himself. In 1893 he bought the place and continued to improve it, putting up a fine set of buildings, and residing there until his death on Aug. 1, 1907. He was a stockholder in the Rusk Cooperative Creamery, was agent for the Farmers Mutual Insurance Co. for 12 years, and for ten years was clerk of the town of Red Cedar. A man of energy and reliable character, he was one of the upbuilders of his town and county and his passing was a loss to the community. Anton H. Traxler was married Jan. 8, 1885, in the city of Mencmonie to Mary Young, who was born near Milwaukee, Wis., May 13, 1862, daughter of Matthew and Mary (Philips) Young. Of this union eight children were born, three of whom, Arthur, Peter and Frank, are now deceased. Those living are: Mary, born May 9, 1886, now Mrs. James Smith of Chippewa Falls, and the mother of four children, James, Loretta, Frances and Nacmi; Anna, born Sept. 30, 1890, who is Mrs. Joseph Cramer of the town of Red Cedar, and has one child, Joseph; Florence, born April 1, 1896, who married John Breitzman, lives on the home farm. and has three children, John, Robert and Betty; and Leona, born March 30, 1901, who is employed as clerk by the Waterman-Erhart Co. of Menomonie. After her husband's death Mrs. Traxler conducted the farm for ten years and built up a fine herd of Holstein cattle. She is now renting the place to her son-in-law, John Breitzman. She and her children are members of St. Joseph's congregation in Menomonie. Matthew Young, father of Mrs. Anton H. Traxler, was born in Germany, where he grew to manhood and married Mary Philips. They came to the United States in 1857, settling near Milwaukee, where they remained until 1863, when they came to Dunn County and bought the farm that Mrs. Traxler now owns. After residing on and operating it until 1885, they took up their residence in Menomonie, where they made their home for the rest of their lives, Mrs. Young first, passing away on Nov. 22, 1891, and Mr. Young on July 11, 1894. They were the parents of ten children, of whom the four now living are: Anna, who married Jake Reidhar, and lives near Clarkston, Wash.; Mary, who became the wife of Anton H. Traxler, whom she survives; Peter, who is in the state of Oregon; and Michael, residing in the town of Menomonie, Dunn County, Wis. The six deceased are John, Nicholas, Frank, Andrew, Katherine and Elizabeth.

Sheperd S. McGilton, a retired farmer living in the village of Eau Galle, was born in the town of Hemingford, Quebec, Canada, Jan. 16, 1841, son of Thomas and Isabelle (Kirk) McGilton. The parents were born in Dublin, Ireland, the father on June 14, 1793, and the mother on Dec. 25, 1799. They were married in Ireland in 1819, and emigrated to Canada in 1823. In 1825 they were married in Heland to the village of Mooers in Clinton County, New York, but returned in 1840 to Canada, where Thomas McGilton died May 16, 1846, at the age of 53 years and four months. Mrs. Isabelle McGilton, thus widowed, remained in Canada until 1856, when she came with her children to Dunn County, Wisconsin, and settled in the town of Eau Galle on a farm that was operated for her by her sons until her death on Jan. 14, 1863, when the family broke up and scattered. She and her husband were the parents of 11 children, the eldest of whom was 36 years old and the youngest 15, when they came to Dunn County. They were as follows: Adam, born April 26, 1820, who died Nov. 27, 1894; Andrew, born Oct. 23, 1822, who died Dec. 8, 1895; Eleanor, born Oct. 17, 1823, who died in December, 1892; James W., Oct. 11, 1901; George, born Dec. 9, 1827, who died in December, 1892; James W., born Sept. 29, 1829, who died Jan. 17, 1917; Wesley, born Feb. 17, 1832, died March 22, 1861; Benson, born May 20, 1834, died Dec. 22, 1897; Margaret, born March 24, 1836, who married Stewart Havenstrite, and died June 30, 1909; Isabelle, born Aug. 11, 1838, who died July 23, 1855; and Shepherd S., born Jan. 16, 1841, and now living in the village of Eau Galle, the youngest child and only survivor of the family. Shepherd S. McGilton attended school both in Canada and in Eau Galle, Dunn County, Wis. Having so many grown-up brothers, his services were hardly needed on the farm; so, although he lived there until he was 22 years old, he was during all or most of that time a lumber employee, doing sawmill work or driving teams in the woods, which he did eight years for the Carson-Rand firm of Eau Galle. Then in 1866 he married and settled on a farm in Sections 26 and 27, town of Dunn, a place that he operated for 46 years, and which contained 272 acres when he retired in 1910, selling it to his son, Stewart. He had cleared 80 acres of it and erected a fine set of buildings. He had also proved himself a useful and valuable citizen in the community, helping to build many miles of road, to establish schools, and to promote the interests of the town in various ways. As such he became widely known, not only in the town of Dunn, but in most other parts of the county as well, and is respected and esteemed by the many hundreds of men and women who know him either personally or by record. Since 1910 he has re-sided in the village of Eau Galle. Mr. McGilton was first married on June 18, 1866, in Independence, Iowa, to Ruth Sherwood, who was born in East Fairfield, Vt., daughter of Obadiah and Amy (Gleason) Sherwood, both of whom died in Waterloo, Quebec, Canada. Mrs. Ruth McGilton, after 21 years of married life, died Sept. 18, 1887. She had been the mother of three children: Myrtle, born Feb. 23, 1868 who is keeping house for her father in Eau Galle; Earl W., born Dec. 28, 1872, who died July 18, 1874, an infant under the age of one year and seven months; and Stewart H., born April 9, 1876, who is a resident of Menomonie. Mr. McGilton's second marriage, which occurred Dec. 25, 1889, united him with Anna Edwards, and they lived together for 30 years until she died Feb. 23, 1920. Since then his daughter Myrtle has been his housekeeper and companion. Her career for a number of years previously had been an active and independent one. Her elementary education was acquired in the school at Waubeek, and she subsequently took courses in the high school at Pepin, the River Falls Normal School and a commercial college in Winona, Minn. She then taught school for some time in Dunn County, Wis., and in South Dakota. She was also for one year stenographer for the Stacey Mercantile Co. in Valley City, N. D., and for 12 years was employed in the city auditor's office in Fargo, N. D., leaving that place to return to Eau Galle on her step-mother's death. The McGilton family has had a prominent part in the building up of Dunn County and mention of other members of it may be found elsewhere in this volume.

Andrew O. Strand, a retired business man of Menomonie, who has been a resident of Dunn County for over half a century, was born in Norway, Nov. 18, 1848, son of Ole Olson and Henrietta (Jenson) Strand. He attended school in Norway, where he subsequently did farm labor, and in 1870, seeking to better his fortunes, he came to the United States. After a three months' stay in Lansing, Iowa, he came to Menomonie, Wis., where he found Knapp, Stout & Co. (subsequently the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company), vigorously pushing their operations in the woods and mills, in both of which branches of the lumber business he was employed by them for five years. He then conducted a saloon for two years, but in 1878 established himself in the butcher business at 520 Main Street, which occupation he followed, remaining in that location, for 30 years. Then in April, 1908, he retired, selling the business to the Schneider brothers. He has since been retired and has a fine residence at 1102 Eighth Street. Mr. Strand was married June 22, 1879, at Elk Mound, Dunn County, to Mary Ludvigson, who was born Feb. 23, 1857, at Waupun, Wis., daughter of Hans and Helen (Johnson) Ludvigson. Her parents, natives of Nerway, came to this country in the spring of 1850, settling at Waupun, where they resided for eight years. In 1858 they came to Dunn County, and settled on a farm at Elk Mound, where they were engaged in farming for the rest of their Mr. and Mrs. Andrew O. Strand have been the parents of a large family lives. numbering ten children, as follows: Hilda, born July 1, 1880, now Mrs. Albert Barbo, is a widow. She resides in Menomonie and has three children, Marion, Agdur and Ingmar. Myrtle, born Nov. 23, 1881, died Dec. 2, 1887. Carl, born July 3, 1883, is in the employ of the Winton Lumber Co. at St. Joe, Idaho. Emma, born Aug. 30, 1885, is Mrs. Julius Rockman of Barron, Wis., and has four children, Julian, Helen, Natley and Jane. Evelyn, born Sept. 12, 1887, is the wife of John Strand of Abercrombie, N. D., and the mother of four children, Morine, John A., Elder and Evelyn L. Eugene, born Sept. 13, 1889, married Nora Bissonnette and resides at Barber, Mont. He has four children, Mary E., Eugene, Loraine and Margaret. Myrtle, born Nov. 23, 1891, is employed at the Stout Library and lives at home. Verna, born Sept. 16, 1893, is employed in the dental office of Dr. C. F. Clark. Oscar, bern March 19, 1895, is engaged in farm labor. Morris, born April 29, 1898, resides at home. The family are members of the Norwegian Lutheran Church.

George S. Carpenter, a well known and respected resident of the village of Knapp, who came to Dunn County over 40 years ago, was born in Lee County, Iowa, Dec. 30, 1850, son of Abel and Emeritt (Britt) Carpenter. As a boy he attended school in his native country and remained with his parents until 1870. Then for a year he worked on farms in his neighborhood, in 1871 going to Rice County, Minnesota, where he engaged in agricultural work on his own account on rented farms. After being thus occupied for 12 years, in 1883 he came to Dunn County, Wisconsin, accompanied by his family—for he had then been married ten years-and made his home in Menomonie. He worked a short time in the sawmills and subsequently did farm labor. In 1890 he went to Louisville and for two years was employed on the Jesse Hughes' farm, then for ten years on the E. O. Massee It was in 1902 that Mr. Carpenter came to Knapp, where he has since refarm. During his first eight years here he worked on the Hall dairy farm and since sided. then has followed various light occupations. For one year he was a member of the village board. Mr. Carpenter was married in Rice County, Minnesota, Oct. 18, 1873, to Belle Glyzer, who was born in Indiana, Dec. 20, 1855, daughter of Daniel and Caroline (Klapp) Glyzer. Her father, a native of Pennsylvania, and her mother of North Carolina, were married in Indiana and moved west to Minnesota in 1862, subsequently making their home in Rice County, that state. Mr. and Mrs. Carpenter were the parents of eight children, as follows: Bernice, now Mrs. Alex Peck of Saskatchewan. Canada; Arthur, of Downsville, Dunn County, Wis.; James, deceased; Ruth, now Mrs. Edward Hart of the town of Stanton, Dunn County; Earl, of Montana; Jessie, a teacher residing in Knapp; Olive, now Mrs. Glenn Mallory of Sawyer County, Wisconsin, and Myrle, who is engaged in railway construction work in Georgia. Jessie, above mentioned, acquired her education in the Knapp school, the River Falls Normal and the Eau Claire Normal, and subsequently taught rural school for five years, being four years teacher in the Elk Mound school. She then taught four years in the Knapp school, being teacher of the upper grade and also special teacher of arithmetic. She is now teaching in Boyceville. The Carpenter family are affiliated religiously with the Methodist Episcopal Church.

Gunder Robbe.-The name of Robbe is one familiar to every old resident of the town of Elk Mound, as well as to others in many parts of Dunn County, and there is reason why it should be so, for, as borne by the subject of this sketch, it stood for the highest qualities of pioneer achievement, civil distinction and sound American The story of his life is woven into the warp and woof of the history citizenship. of the town of Elk Mound and of the county of Dunn, and is one that must needs be placed on record for the benefit and instruction of this and succeeding generations. Gunder Robbe was born at Robbe, Roldal, Christiansand, Norway, on Jan. 11, He was educated in a private school in Norway and came to America in 1838. 1857, when about 19 years of age. Settling first at Waupun, Fond du Lac County, Wis., he resided there for three years and attended the public schools of that Then he came to Dunn County, the latter part of his journey, from La county. Crosse, being made by steamboat up the Mississippi River to Read's Landing and by the Chippewa River to Eau Claire; and from the latter place he traveled to the town of Elk Mound on foot, or, rather, to what is now the town of Elk Mound, as it was then a part of the town of Spring Brook. He had with him a land warrant. that he had procured in Fond du Lac, which entitled him to 160 acres of government land—any tract that size that had not yet been taken. He selected it in Section 23. and also took a government tract of 40 acres, making a total of 200 acres, this showing that he had planned his future activities on a broad scale. For three years after he had purchased his land Mr. Robbe boarded with Martin Howe and was chiefly engaged in working for Knapp, Stout & Co. During that period he was preparing for his life on the farm by living frugally and saving his money, wasting nothing on dissipation. In 1863 he was ready to take up his abode on it, and, as he wanted to make it a home from the first, he was united in marriage in the fall of that year to Maren Kristina Nelson, with whom he was to live in harmonious and loving companionship for 48 years. She was born at Molselven, Tromso, Norway, on May 3, 1837, and had come to this country with her parents in 1861, the family settling on a farm in the town of Elk Mound, or what is now such. Through the almost half century of her life as wife and mother she not only trod the path of duty, but did so with such winning grace and affectionate heart as won her the love of her husband and children and the high esteem of all in the community in which The house in which she and her husband made their first home was a she lived. frame structure erected by Mr. Robbe himself, and at the same time he had built one or two log out-buildings with straw roofs. It was pioneer life for both of them for many years, and there are many now living who know what that meant, especially in the 60's and 70's. At all times it meant hard work and often it meant privation and great self-denial, but Mr. and Mrs. Robbe were building for the future and were content to endure the hardship and toil. In time they had their reward. It must have been a proud day for them when in 1882 Mr. Robbe completed a large dairy barn 40 x 60 feet and provided with a full basement, which was one of the first basement barns in the community. The frame of this building was constructed of oak timbers which Mr. Robbe had cut from his own land, and which were handhewed, some of the beams being 40 feet long and 10 x 12 inches in width and thick-In time the old house gave way to a large, roomy, and well-designed frame ness. residence, and other buildings were erected from time to time as they were needed. Occasionally, also, he would buy an additional piece of land until he finally owned 360 acres. In 1907 another barn was erected of 22 x 48 feet in ground plan. Mr. Robbe was a man of strict method, his favorite motto being "A place for everything and everything in its place." He never procrastinated; when repairs were needed they were made at once and not put off until another day, and he followed out that policy in everything. With such business habits joined to steady industry, and with a character marked by strict integrity and an observance of the Golden Rule in his relations with his fellow men, it is no wonder that he prospered and became a leader in the community, where his superior qualities were early recognized. He was a member of the first town board of Elk Mound and was chairman of the board for 25 years, having also been chairman of the meeting that was called to set off Elk Mound from Spring Brook, and it was only through his efforts that the vote was cast in favor of the proposition. At his death he was the last surviving member of that early town board. He was also the first treasurer of the town of Elk Mound, and for over 50 years he held various school, church and town offices. In addition to the hard labor he performed in the development of his farm he did much land breaking for others, in this work being associated with his brother-in-law, Erick Nelson, and ox teams were used for the work. Mr. Robbe was an active factor in the building up and maintenance of the Lutheran Church, of which he was a consistent member. He continued the active management of his farm until 1913, when he rented it to his son, Martin G., although he continued to reside on it until his death, which occurred Aug. 13, 1923. He had been a widower for more than 11 years, his wife having passed away on April 5, 1912. They had been the parents of seven children: Nils H., born May 10, 1865; Henry N., March 3, 1868; Lizzie D., Oct. 6, 1870; Mary D., Nov. 8, 1873; Lena M., June 18, 1875; Martin G., Dec. 17, 1878, and Arthur B., June 20, 1882. Lizzie D. died in her forth-eighth year on July 18, 1918. Nils H., who is now a prominent merchant of Strum, Wis., married Clara Peterson and he and his wife have seven children, namely: Marshall, Gladys, Noble, Alice, Helen, Frances and Vivian. Henry N., who taught public school for seven years, is now cashier of the First State Bank at Strum, Wis. He married Malena Albertson and has three children, Gordon, Harvey and Ethel. Mary D. is now Mrs. C. O. Sandvig of Menomonie and has five children, Clarence, Arthur, George, Mabel and Howard. Before her marriage she was a teacher and showed proficiency in that profession. Lena M., received her education in the rural schools and at River Falls State Normal School and taught school successfully for ten years in Dunn County and in the state of Washington. She gave up her teaching career to obey the call of duty. Her mother's failing health called for her presence at home. Between ambition and duty she did not long hesitate, but took her place in the house, caring for her mother until she passed away. Then she became her bereaved father's companion, comforter and helper, and as her brother's partner in making good and proving her solid worth. Arthur B., who is single, is a graduate of Menomonie High School and for the last 20 years has been mail clerk on the Northwestern road from Minneapolis to Elroy, Wis. Martin G. Robbe, who was educated in the rural schools, has always remained on the home farm assisting his parents, except for one season during which he worked for the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company. As already stated, in 1913 he rented the home farm, which he conducted under rental until just shortly before his father died in 1923. He and his sister, Lena M., then bought it and have since conducted it together with splendid success. Dairying is the main industry carried on, a good herd of Holstein cattle being kept, with a pure bred sire at the head. A milking machine has been installed and also a feed grinder, the power for both being furnished by an electric motor. Electric lights were installed in 1920. The farm is well known to all in the eastern part of Dunn County as the Robbe farm.

Charles Stewart, a substantial farmer residing in the town of Lucas, and who has been a resident of Dunn County for nearly 45 years, was born in Milwaukee, Wis.,

Nov. 18, 1860, son of Charles and Clara (Knapps) Stewart. The father, who was born in Scotland but reared in England, spent many years of his life as a sailor. At the age of 40 years, however, he left the sea, and, settling in Milwaukee subsequently followed various occupations there until his death. Charles Stewart was reared and educated in Milwaukee and also followed various occupations until 1880. He then came to Menomonie, Dunn County, where he resided until October, 1886, working for Mr. Hughes in the Hydraulic Brick Co.'s plant. He then settled in 120 acre of wild land in Section 13, town of Lucas, which he had purchased in 1883. and out of this tract he developed a fine farm, erecting a complete set of modern buildings. In 1914 he rented out the farm and took up his residence in Menomonie, but, not liking the city he returned to his farm, which he operated for two years more. At the end of that time he sold it and bought 200 acres of woodland in Sections 17 and 18, town of Lucas, where he has since lived, having erected a good set of buildings on the place. In 1922 he and his wife established a store in their residence, which they are now conducting, Mr. Stewart, however, spending most of his time in getting out logs and operating a portable sawmill. Mr. Stewart was married on Oct. 25, 1884, in the city of Menomonie, to Theresa Cockeram, who was born in the town of Lucas, Jan. 5, 1864, daughter of Osmond and Ann (Rick) Her parents were natives of England who emigrated to the United Cockeram. States in 1851, resided five years in Brooklyn, N. Y., then five years in Waukesha County, Wisconsin, and then in 1861 came to Dunn County with an ox team and arriving at Menomonie with only enough money to pay the ferry charge across the river. They became pioneer settlers in the town of Lucas, where they started with only seven dollars, but in time became prosperous farmers owning 400 acres of land, and Mr. Cockeram being one of that town's leading citizens.

Verne Curtis, who is engaged in business in Fall City as a general merchant, was born in the town of Spring Brook, Dunn County, June 7, 1891, son of Elbridge and Ella (Wiggins) Curtis. The parents were born and reared in Dunn County and after their marriage settled on a farm in the town above mentioned, which they improved and also operated for many years. Elbridge Curtis died on Jan. 10, 1923, but his wife still resides on the farm, which is operated by her son Harry. The children in the family, all living, are as follows: Lola, now Mrs. Fay Owen of the town of Spring Brook; Verne of Fall City; Harry, on the home farm; Arlo, in the employ of the Menomonie Grocery Store in Menomonie; and Gladys and Gordon, who are at home on the farm. Verne Curtis in his youth worked for his parents on the farm, which he later rented, operating it until 1915. Then he and his father bought the general store of T. H. Owen in Fall City, which they conducted together under the firm name of E. Curtis & Son, until the father's death, since which time Verne has been sole proprietor of the business. He carries a staple line of groceries, light hardware, shoes, flour and feed, and other commodities calculated to meet the needs of the country trade, and is doing a considerable business. He is a member of the local camp of Modern Woodmen and at present holds office in it as its advisor. Mr. Curtis was married in Fall City, in June 4, 1913, to Alice Owen, who was born in the town of Spring Brook, Dec. 10, 1895, daughter of Henry and Marcia (Doane) Owen. Of this union one child has been born, Beulah, on Nov. 10, 1923.

Fred Stewart, a general farmer and dairyman of the town of Lucas, who began the development of his farm in Section 16, nearly 30 years ago, was born in Waukesha County, Wis., Nov. 27, 1874, son of Charles and Catherine (Knopps) Stewart. The father, who was a native of Scotland, for many years was a deep-water sailor who six times navigated the globe. In 1868 he gave up sea-faring life and coming west, settled in Waukesha County, Wisconsin, where he spent the remainder of his life. After his death, which took place about 1881, his wife, having several brothers in Dunn County, came here with her children, and it was here that she spent the rest of her life. Fred Stewart was six years old when he accompanied his mother to Dunn County. Thenceforth he was reared and educated in the town of Menomonie, after which for some years he did common labor and worked in the brick yards in Menomonie. In 1895 he settled on his present farm in Section 12, town of Lucas, which he bought in 1890, a tract of 80 acres, which he has developed into a fine farm supplied with a good set of buildings and well stocked with mixed grade cattle. Here he is carrying on general farming and dairying to good advantage. He is a stockholder and director in the New Hudson Road Creamery and also a stockholder in the Waterman-Ehrhart store in Menomonie. One of the prominent citizens of his town, he has taken an active and helpful part in local affairs. Elected supervisor a number of years ago, he served in that office for three years, and then became chairman of the board, and as such he remained for 12 years, being at the same time, and by virtue of that office, a member also of the county board. On March 11, 1895, Mr. Stewart was married in the city of Menomonie to Pauline Berkhardt, who was born at Read's Landing, Minn., Feb. 5, 1879, daughter of Gottfried and Sophia (Brenner) Berkhardt. Her parents, who were natives of Switzerland, came to this country when young, and, coming west to Read's Landing, which was then a lively place on the west bank of the Mississippi, opposite the mouth of the Chippewa, remained there until 1888, when they came to Dunn County, and in Menomonie Gottfried Berkhardt built up the Berkhardt brewery, which he operated until his death. He and his wife were the parents of ten children, four of whom are now living, namely: Emma, wife of Frank Stewart, of the town of Menomonie; Mary, who is Mrs. William Frank of the town of Lucas; Lillian, now Mrs. Joseph Kelly of Minneapolis, and Pauline, who is Mrs. Stewart. The six deceased are Sophia, Lena, Mary, Oscar, Louis and Ida. Mr. and Mrs. Fred Stewart are the parents of four children: Clara, born June 30, 1896, now Mrs. Chester Lierman of the town of Lucas; Frank, born Feb. 8, 1898, who is residing on the home farm; Walter, born Oct. 21, 1903, now employed on the P. C. Wilson farm and Emma, born Feb. 14, 1915, who is attending school. The family are members of the German Lutheran Church in Menomonie.

Albert Quilling, whose record as a leader in finance and business, and as a prime mover on numerous occasions in the work of civic improvement in the city of Menomonie and Dunn County, has made his name known not only throughout this county but far beyond its borders, may almost be regarded as a pioneer, as he came here some 70 years ago with his parents when an infant. He was born in Prussia, Germany, Feb. 26, 1852, son of Christian and Dorothea (Hecht) Quilling. It was in the year after his birth, 1853, that his parents emigrated to the United States, and, coming directly west to Illinois, settled at Dundee, near Elgin, where they remained for two years. They left Dundee in May, 1855, together with four other families, bound for Henderson, Minn., where relatives lived. On June 4, 1855, they arrived in Dunn County, where the country looked good to them; so, as they were tired of traveling, they decided to locate on Iron Creek in the town of Spring Brook, and this decision proved fortunate. The journey had been made with a wagon drawn by oxen. Christian Quilling bought a wild tract of government land and began at once the strenuous task of developing it into a farm. Years of steady industry and patient endurance of hardship by himself and wife finally brought their due reward in the attainment of the object of his ambition and the wild tract had become a nice rural home, where Mr. Quilling carried on general agriculture successfully for some 20 years. The death of his good wife in 1870 was a grievious affliction, but he continued to operate the farm for five years longer, then finally turned his farms over to his sons, John and Henry, and removing to Menomonie, he lived here virtually retired until his own death on Oct. 13, 1898. Representing the highest type of pioneer citizenship, he left to his children the priceless heritage of a good name, and his demise was regretted by the many who knew him as a man of honor, just in all his dealings with his fellow men, a good husband and father, and, moreover, a christian gentleman, for both he and his wife were devout members of the German Evangelical Church. In political principles he was a Republican. Mr. and Mrs. Christian Quilling were the parents of seven children, five sons and two daughters, of whom one son and the two daughters died in infancy. Albert Quilling, with whom this narrative is directly concerned, early learned the lessons of honest industry on the home farm, in the meanwhile acquiring his elementary education in the district school, which he attended up to his seventeenth year. During the winters of 1870-71 and 1871-72 he was a student in the Menomonie

High School. After completing his studies there, he resided at home for a while, but soon put his scholastic acquirements to practical use as teacher of a district school at Eagle Point, Chippewa County, being thus occupied for seven months. In 1873 he engaged in mercantile business in Menomonie, in partnership with William Schutte under the firm name of Schutte & Quilling. This proved a fortunate connection, as the business, small at first, under the effective management of the two well matched partners, developed in time into one of the most solid and best known concerns in this part of the state. The partnership lasted for 34 years and was only terminated by the death of Mr. Schutte in 1909, an event that caused Mr. Quilling the most profound sorrow and was felt as a severe loss to the entire com-The concern had not only been successful from a financial standpoint munity. but had built up a fine reputation for honesty and reliability. Mr. Quilling retired from the mercantile business in 1907, and subsequently gave his attention to the affairs of the bank, of which he was president, with William Schutte, Jr., son of his former partner, cashier, and Ole C. Inenfeldt, constituting the direc-Thus the institution was conducted until 1924, in which year The Schutte torate. & Quilling Bank was merged with the First National Bank, Mr. Quilling then selling his stock and giving up regular banking to organize the Security Loan and Trust Company, of which he is now president (see article on the bank and company on pages 104 and 106 of this volume). As to Mr. Quilling's other activities, he was one of the organizers of and a stockholder in the Menomonie Electric Light & Power Co., and a director of it until it was sold to the Chippewa Valley Railway Light & Power He is treasurer of the Menomonie Mutual Fire Insurance Co., and the new Co. Hudson Road Creamery Co., and of the Menomonie Hotel Co. for many years until elected president of same, of which last mentioned corporation owned and controled the fine hotel property (recently sold) that adds so much to the attractions and public facilities of the city. Broad minded, liberal, and progressive as a citizen, Mr. Quilling has for many years been one of the most conspicuous figures and influential citizens in the upbuilding of the community, and there have been few local enterprises of importance started, if any, in regard to which his advice has not been asked or his assistance sought. These have been readily given when the proposition seemed to him to be sound and well conceived, whether it was of a business or civic nature. Though a man of liberal mind, as already stated, he makes his actions square with his conscience, and has never lent his aid to any scheme of extravagance, doubtful morality, or otherwise lacking in the elements of honest success. He has a personal pride in the city which has so long been his home, and his record as one of its foremost citizens has always been open to inspection and found worthy of praise. In politics he is a loyal supporter of the Republican party and has rendered good service in its local ranks, for four years serving as chairman of the Republican County Committee. In 1875 he was elected city clerk, in which office, through re-election, he served two years. He was also a useful and valued member of the city council for two years, and served on the board of education for six years. He has done much to bring about those progressive movements that have given Menomonie wide prestige as a city of educational initiative and precedence, and is now serving in his seventeenth year as president of the board of education. He and his wife are earnest and prominent workers in the Methodist Episcopal Church in this city, and the family is one of distinctive popularity in connection with the leading social activities of the community. It was on July 17, 1873, that Mr. Quilling was united in marriage with Henrietta Schmidt of Eau Claire County, Wisconsin, who died July 20, 1922. Of the seven children born of this union, three are living, all of whom are graduates of the Menomonie High School, and two of Northwestern College at Naperville, Ill. The respective names and birth dates of these three children are as follows: George A., Sept. 25, 1875; Herbert W., Dec. 6, 1881, and Edwin A., Dec. 2, 1890. Mr. Quilling's second marriage, on Nov. 27, 1923, united him with Mrs. William Grote of Elgin, Ill., who in maiden life was Mary A. Vanvolkenberg.

Royal C. Taylor, postmaster of Boyceville, was born in St. Croix County, Wis., Aug. 24, 1883, son of Winfield S. and Abbie (Schwartz) Taylor. The father, a native of New York State, came west with his parents when young, the family settling in what would now be the western part of the city of St. Paul, Minn., the location then, however, being just outside the city limits. Later they moved to Pepin County, Wis., where in time the parents (grandparents of the subject of this sketch) died. Winfield S. Taylor remained in Pepin County until 22 years old, at which time he went to Hersey, St. Croix County, where for some time he was engaged in sawmill work, later doing farm work there. In the fall of 1891 he came to Dunn County and settled on a farm near Connersville in the town of New Haven, which he operated until 1923. He then sold the place and is now living retired at Boyceville, Wis. He and his wife, Abbie, have been the parents of five children: Royal C. of Boyceville; Ella, now Mrs. E. D. Payne of Pequaming, Mich.; Lily, wife of Edward Jacobs of Chicago; Ethel, now Mrs. Amos Stark of St. Croix County, Wis., and Walter, who is employed in the Henry Ford works at Pequaming, Mich. Royal C. Taylor was educated in the district and high schools of Glenwood City, St. Croix County, Wis., being graduated from the latter with the class of 1904, after which for several years he followed carpenter work in St. Croix and Dunn counties. He then turned his attention to agriculture, for three years operating a farm in the town of New Haven, Dunn County. He then went to Owen, Clark County, where he followed his trade for a year, or until 1912, when he came to Boyceville, and for three years thereafter was employed in the meat market of W. J. Elithrop. The next two years were spent in operating a farm, though he continued to reside in Boyceville. In 1918 he went into the produce business which he carried on his own account until he was appointed postmaster of Bovceville on Feb. 1, 1921. He received his commission on March 7, 1922, and has since served in that capacity, proving a popular official. Fraternally he belongs to the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. Mr. Taylor was married in Menomonie, Wis., April 4, 1910, to Winnie Elithrop, daughter of William J. and Alice (Bentz) Elithrop, and he and his wife are the parents of one child, Gladys, who was born March 3, 1911. Mr. and Mrs. Taylor are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Boyceville.

Malcolm F. McLeod, who for over five years efficiently performed the duties of register of deeds for Dunn County, was born in eastern Canada, March 19, 1876, son of John and Catherine (Frazer) McLeod. The parents were both of Scotch ancestry and the father of Scotch nativity, having accompanied his parents to Canada when he was a babe. It was in Canada that John McLeod and Catherine Frazer were married, the latter having been born and reared in the Dominion; and it was in 1884 that they came to the United States, settling at Stanley in Chippewa County, Wis., where they spent the remainder of their lives. There Mrs. Mc-Leod died in June, 1922, and she was survived little more than a year by her husband, who followed her to the world beyond the tomb in July, 1923. The years of their married life had seen six children born to them, all of whom are now living but the first-born, Murdock. The survivors are: Alexander, now of Gilman, Wis.; Margaret, wife of William Mates of Gilman; John, of Seattle, Wash.; Malcolm F., of Menomonie, and Daniel H., of Duluth, Minn. Malcolm F. McLeod was educated in Stanley and Janesville, Wis. He then became connected with the lumber industry, scaling and grading lumber for different companies until the fall of 1918. Among them were the Chippewa Lumber & Boom Co., the Della Paper & Pulp Co., the Wisconsin Oak Lumber Co., and the Davis & Star Lumber Co., with the last mentioned of which Mr. McLecd continued for 15 years, having started with them in 1904, when on October 17, he went to Weston, Dunn County, to become manager of their retail yards there. While there he represented his town on the county board for seven years and became well and favorably known to many

Dunn County citizens, so that when in the fall of 1918 he ran for the office of register of deeds he was elected. Thereupon resigning his position with the lumber company he came to Menomonie and on Jan. 1, 1919, took up his public duties here. He was twice re-elected and served three terms. In January, 1925, he opened an abstract office, to which he gives all his time. He is a member of the Menomonie Commercial Club, being interested in everything that makes for the growth and improvement of the city and county, and also belongs to the fraternal societies of Masons. Knights of Pythias, Odd Fellows, Modern Woodmen and Beavers. Mr. McLeod began domestic life some 20 years ago, being united in marriage in Stanley, Wis., on April 15, 1903, to Jane Smith, the daughter of George and Mary (Steele) Smith. Her mother is now deceased but her father is living and resides in Gilman. Mr. and Mrs. McLeod are the parents of four children, Charlotte, Eugene, James and Robert. The family attend the Congregational Church.

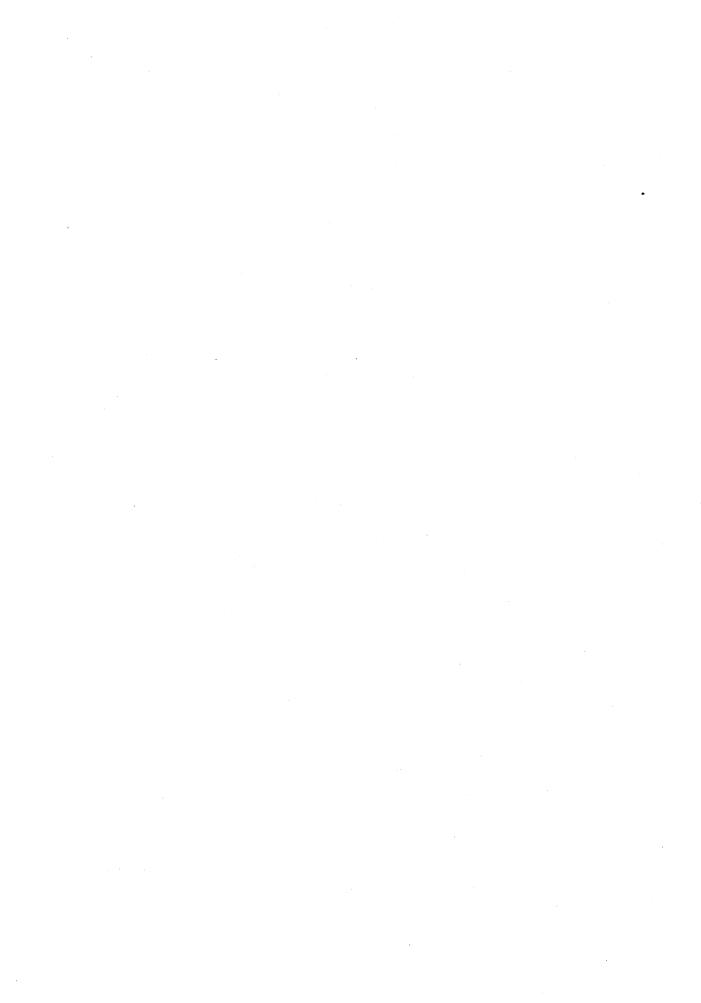

Henry H. Steves, one of the genuine pioneers of Dunn County, so far as its actual settlement was concerned, was a native of Rome, N. Y., and when a young man moved west to McHenry County, in northern Illinois. There he married Caroline Thatcher, a native of New Hampshire and they settled on a farm in that county, where they remained until 1856. It might have been thought that that section was good enough in which to establish a permanent home, but Mr. Steves had the true pioneer instinct; he wanted to be in at the beginning of things and not take somebody else's leavings; to put his money, brains and work into the virgin soil and see what he could build up from original conditions. So in 1856, having in the previous year bought a tract of 420 acres in Dunn County,-180 acres for himself and 240 for his friends—he loaded his family and household goods into covered wagons and started out on the new venture. The journey to Dunn County took four weeks, as the wagons were drawn by oxen, and good or even passable roads were rare in the Northwest in those days, but at the end of that time the district around Louisville witnessed the approach and arrival of the Steves caravan. There, at Louisville in the town of Dunn, settlement was made on land which formed a part of Mr. Steves' previous purchase. During the latter part of their journey they had followed trails and tote roads, and it came to an end when they halted under a large pine tree which continued to be a land mark for many years thereafter. The wagons had to serve as dwellings until Mr. Steves had erected a small shanty, after which they took possession of it and the daily order of things fell into the usual pioneer routine, consisting chiefly of muscle-tiring work. As they were provided with six yoke of oxen, with several other head of stock, and had a few hundred dollars in cash, they were not as badly off as some of the other pioneers of the county who had little or nothing but their bare hands to start with. Mr. Steves proceeded to develop a farm large enough to furnish him and his growing family with abundant occupation for many years; but the result was worth the labor and stands today as mute evidence of the toil, intelligence and determination that accomplished it. There Mr. and Mrs. Steves passed 37 years of their lives, their active work terminating in 1893, when they passed it on to others and retired, taking up their residence in Menomonie. Here in this city Mr. Steves laid down the burden of life on May 3, 1903, and his faithful wife and helpmate less than seven years later, on Jan. 29, 1911. Other things had entered into Mr. Steves' life than the struggle to succeed as a farmer, though it was chiefly the energy he showed in the latter capacity that led to them, by impressing upon the minds of his fellow townsmen his fitness for leader-ship in community affairs. Thus he was frequently an incumbent of public office, wherein he showed his capacity as plainly as he did in the taming of the soil For many years he was chairman of the town board of supervisors and a member of the county board and took an active part in the setting off of new towns, the laying out of school districts and the building of roads, and—to refer back to a now long distant period-he served on the local draft board in Civil War days. The family of Mr. and Mrs. Henry H. Steves consisted of seven children, namely: William F., residing in Burnett County, Wisconsin; Edwin H., who died Dec. 6, 1924; Ora H., now in Wing, N. D.; Ella J., who married William Love and is now a widow residing in Menomonie; Harvey M., of Menomonie; Carrie, who is Mrs. Edwin Kinney of Rusk, Dunn County; and Eva, for many years a trained nurse, who is now Mrs. W. P. Massuere of Newville, N. D.

Edwin H. Steves, who spent the greater part of his life in Dunn County, and died at his home in Menomonie, on Dec. 6, 1924, was born in McHenry County, Illinois, July 12, 1850, son of Henry H. and Caroline (Thatcher) Steves. When a child not more than six years old he accompanied his parents to Dunn County, the journey being made in a covered wagon. It was a long ride for one so young, but he had a kind mother to care for him, and doubtless the daily change of scene excited his childish interest and curiosity. Life in the small and hastily constructed shanty on his parents' land at Louisville in the town of Dunn may have seemed more monotonous, but soon he began to attend the district school and make youthful acquaintances; then, as he grew older and stronger, his father found him plenty of work on the farm and in time he became expert in all the ordinary branches of After remaining at home until he was 21 years old, and his own master, agriculture. he began buying and selling grain, an occupation which he followed for some years. In 1888 he went to North Dakota, where he took a claim which he proved up. In 1892, letting it out to a tenant, he returned to Dunn County and purchased the old home farm, later selling his Dakota land. The home farm he operated for four years, selling it in 1896 after a successful career and moving with his family to Menomonie. Here he became associated with Cronk & Eull, railroad construction men, and he entered into that line of work which he followed for 13 years, or until As road builder for the Chicago & Northwestern, Chicago, Milwaukee & 1909. St. Paul, and Northern Pacific railroads, his work took him into various states and he acquired considerable geographical and topographical knowledge. In 1913 he retired from active work, and the rest of his life-a period of 11 years-was spent in the enjoyment of the competence he had acquired. His life of 74 years and five months, lacking but a few days, had for the most part been an active one and he had put to good use the lessons of industry and determination which he had learned in his youth from his pioneer parents. Mr. Steves was married April 15, 1873, at Louisville, Dunn County, to Minnie B. Cronk, daughter of Solomon and Hannah (Weasels) Cronk. Forty-four years later, on June 4, 1917, after having well played her part on the stage of life as a faithful and loving wife and mother, she passed away on June 4, 1917. The two children of Mr. and Mrs. Steves are still living, namely: Bert O., who is now a contractor in Minneapolis; and Edra H.

Samuel Moen, formerly a well known citizen of Menomonie, who passed away a number of years ago but is still well remembered, was born in Ostdalen, Norway, Oct. 7, 1855. As a boy he attended school in his native land and remained there until he was 18 years old. In 1873 he came to America and located at El Paso, Pierce County, Wis., where he remained for a year with an uncle who gave him lessons in English. He then came to Menomonie, where he entered the employ of the Knapp, Stout & Company, working in their mill until 1880. He then engaged in the meat business, being associated with O. A. Strand for four years on Main Street and subsequently establishing a place of his own on Broadway, which he conducted until his death on Sunday, July 22, 1906, in a hospital at Rochester, Minn. He had been in business for 26 years and had built up a trade that was second to none in the city. Affable of manner, Mr. Moen was a man pleasant to meet at all times, and in his death the community lost a good citizen, who exemplified the best qualities of manhood. His family lost more than that. Mr. Moen was married May 10, 1884, to Anna Hanson of Prairie Farm, Barron County, Wis., who was born in Voga-Prestjel Norga, Norway, Aug. 6, 1856. She came to this country in 1868, her first home being in La Crosse, where she remained two years, then coming to Prairie Farm. Mr. and Mrs. Moen had five children, Louis, Agnes, Oscar, Sarah and Ragna. Louis, born Feb. 16, 1885, was graduated from the Menomonie High School, and afterwards took up the study of drawing and painting. He has since become a skilful artist and is now living in Montreal, Canada. He married Ethel Patten and they have one child, Louis Patten, Jr. Agnes, born Dec. 20, 1887, is a graduate of the Menomonie High School and the Mankato (Minn.) Business College. She married William Force of Mankato, where she now lives, and is the mother of five children, Moen, Helen, Emily, Donald and Della Ann. Oscar, born Oct. 6, 1889, met a sad and accidental death on Aug. 16, 1909, falling from the tower at the gas plant, on which he was working. never regained consciousness after striking the ground. Sarah, born Dec. 3, 1891, He was graduated from the Menomonie High School and the Stout Institute and was teaching domestic science in a high school at Detroit, Mich., when she was attacked by the influenza and died Jan. 19, 1919. Ragna, born June 1, 1894, died March 10, She was a graduate of the Menomonie High School and of the Minneapolis 1920. Art School, having just completed her course at the last mentioned institution when death called her. Thus with respect to these two daughters were high and reasonable hopes disappointed, as they were cut off from careers of usefulness for which they had carefully prepared. After the death of her husband Mrs. Moen sold out the meat market, and for the past few years, since her children went, she has rented rooms to girl students so as not to be deprived of society. She is a member of the Norwegian Lutheran Church, and is a lady of refinement and pleasing social manners. Her home is at No. 116, East Main Street.

Charlie A. Sahlie, part owner of "The Wheeler Store," in the village of Wheeler, was born May 21, 1883, son of Andrew L. and Kari (Johnson) Sahlie, who were farmers in the town of Sherman. Educated in the district school, he assisted his father on the home farm until he was 18 years old, at which time he went to North Dakota, where for three years he was engaged in carpenter work. Then at the age of 21 he returned to the town of Sherman, Dunn County, Wis., and rented his father's farm, which he conducted for two years. He then started a general store in Wheeler, which he conducted for two years, at the end of which time it burned The next four years he spent as a potato buyer for the Albert Miller Comdown. pany, and for two years after that was manager of the P. Nooney Co.'s store in Wheeler. In March, 1916, he became the manager of the well known "Wheeler Store," which is a branch established by the Colfax Store Co., and was thus occupied until June 1, 1925. On that date he and his brother John purchased "The Wheeler Store" from the Colfax Store Co. and they are now its proprietors, continuing to conduct it under its old name. Both being energetic and familiar with mercantile business, they are building up a good trade. They keep a large and well selected stock of dry goods, groceries an shoes. The subject of this sketch has served as town clerk and justice of the peace, is a member and was for seven years secretary of the Wheeler Commercial Club. Fraternally he is connected with the Odd Fellows and Modern Woodmen of America. He was married Oct. 10, 1908, to May Noble, of Glenwood City, who was born Oct. 4, 1886. He and his wife are the parents of two children: Hannah, born Dec. 12, 1909, who is a student at the Red Wing (Minn.) Seminary; and Hugh, born Nov. 9, 1913, who is residing at home.

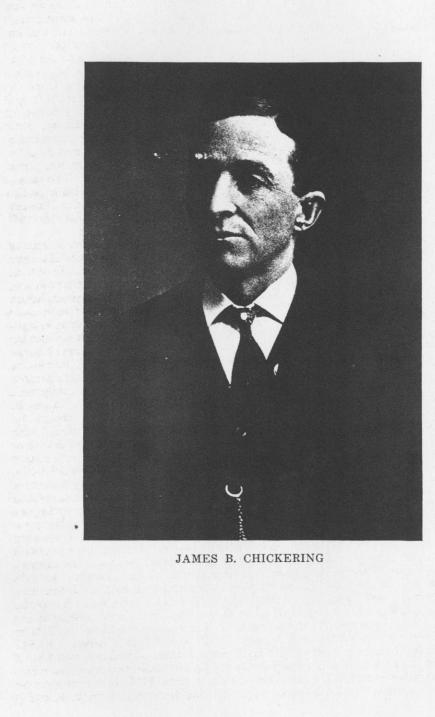

Lewis Sahlie, a retired farmer residing in Wheeler, was born in Hamer, Norway, Feb. 23, 1863, son of Andrew L. and Agnes (Johnson) Sahlie. When a babe of two years he lost his mother, but it was not long before he had a step-mother, whose maiden name was Kari Johnson. With her he came to America in 1870, his father having emigrated in 1868. It was in September, 1874, that he came to Dunn County, Wisconsin, with his father and step-mother, the family locating in the town of Sherman. There he attended the "Woods School." He made the farm his home or headquarters until 1891, although part of his time was spent in the lumber woods and in working on the railroad. In the summer of 1891 he worked in a brick yard. In the fall he went to New Richmond, where he worked in lumber yards, also spending one winter in the woods, and he also worked for a while in a feed mill at Boardman. In the spring of 1894 he returned to Dunn County, and located on the farm of 120 acres which he had previously acquired, 80 acres of it being a homestead right purchased from William Reeves, and the balance being railroad land. It was in the town of Sherman, and at different times he added to it until he owned 280 acres in Sections 1, 11 and 12. There he farmed for 18 years, or until 1912, erecting buildings and clearing and cultivating the land, a large part of which he developed. He then came to Wheeler, buying a house here which he remodeled and improved, residing in it until 1914, when he sold it to Ole Peterson and returned to the farm. In this deal he acquired another farm of 160 acres in the town of Hay River, which he now rents out. In 1917 he finally retired and since then has made his home in Wheeler, having built a nice bungalow residence. Mr. Sahlie was first married June 8, 1891, to Carrie Myhrsven, who died Dec. 21, 1912, leaving no children, and on May 15, 1915, Mr. Sahlie was united in marriage with Julia Evenstad. He and his wife are members of the Norwegian Lutheran Church in Wheeler, of which he is a deacon.

George Bowes Sheraton, assistant superintendent of the Hydraulic Pressed Brick Company, of Menomonie, was born in Rock Ferry, Cheshire, England, Nov. 30, 1865, the son of Harry and Rebecca (Pritchard) Sheraton, the former of whom was born in February, 1824, and died in 1910, and the latter of whom was The Sheraton family was of the landed gentry and born in 1834 and died in 1890. the grandfather, William Sheraton, was an extensive land owner and agriculturist. Upon his arrival he at once entered the employ of the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company as assistant bookkeeper and accountant. In the spring of 1886, desiring to see more of America, he went to Minneapolis, and from there made an extensive tour of the western states as far as Montana. In the spring of 1887, he returned, and spent a year in St. Paul. He once more located in Menomonie in 1888, and entered the employ of the Menomonie Pressed Brick Company, filling the position of accountant and shipping clerk until January, 1898, when he assumed the duties of his present position. Since then his work, energy, enthusiasm and ability have been an integral part of the success with which that company has met. an experienced and well trained expert in his chosen line of work, and is thoroughly familiar with every aspect and detail of the manufacture of brick, from the time the clay is first dug from the earth to the moment when the finished product is ready for For four decades, Mr. Sheraton has been a well known figure in Menomonie life, and has many close and loyal friends. He stands high in the community and has done his full share in its upbuilding.

James Doyle, one of the pioneer settlers in the city of Menomonie, a veteran of the Civil War, and for many years in the employ of the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company, but now deceased, was born in Carlow, Queens County, Irelant, May 18, 1826. At the age of ten he came to the United States in company with his parents and eight brothers. Landing in New York City, they made their home there, for . a number of years at least, for it was 12 years later when James, then a young man of 22, came west as far as Pittsburg, Penn. After a short stay there he came to Wisconsin locating in Green County, where, a few years later, on June 12, 1856, he was united in marriage with Anna Tracy, who was born in Liverpool, England, May 10, 1836, and was therefore a young woman about 20 years old. Immediately or not long after their marriage they came to Menomonie, where Knapp, Stout & Co., as the firm was then known were busily pushing their lumber interests and giving employment to almost every new comer. Among the rest they took on Mr. Doyle and he worked for them steadily until the breaking out of the Civil War, at which time he enlisted as a soldier to fight for the Union. After serving until the close of the war, he returned to Menomonie and resumed work for Knapp, Stout & Co., remaining in their employ until a short time before his death, which occurred July 14, 1896. Altogether he was in their service for nearly 40 years. His wife survived him a few years, dying Jan. 18, 1902. They had eight children: James, deceased, John, deceased; William A., of Mencmonie; Knoble G., of Portland, Ore.; Katherine, deceased; Mary J., who is now Mrs. Martin G. Greeley of Bisbee, Ari.; Sarah, who is now Mrs. Mark Cummings of Menomonie, and Lillian, who is now

William A. Doyle, assistant postmaster of Menomonie, was born in this city, on what is known as Doyle's Hill, on Aug. 28, 1873, son of James and Anna (Tracy) Doyle. He was educated in the common and high schools, and worked for the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company during the summer vacations. In 1889 he began steady work for the company in their land department, continuing there for two years, afterwards being connected with the power and light plant as operator and lineman until 1910. He then entered the Menomonie post office as clerk and has since been constantly employed there, being appointed to his present position as assistant postmaster in May, 1922. On July 27, 1895, Mr. Doyle was married in Menomonie to Elizabeth Hennemann, daughter of John and Mary Henneman, both of whom are now deceased. Of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Doyle 11 children have been born, namely: Dewey, a graduate of the Stout Institute and now a director of manual training in Kansas City, Mo.; Anna L., also a graduate of the Stout Institute, and who is now Mrs. Theodore L. Roswell of Blaire, Wis.; John T., a graduate of the Stout Institute who is with the La Pointe Lumber Co. of Menomonie; James K., attending the Stout Institute; Thomas H. and Paul Q., who will complete a course in the Stout Institute; Betty A. and Eugene W., pupils in the grade school; and Peter, William and Philip, who are deceased. are members of St. Joseph's Catholic Congregation, and Mr. Doyle belongs also The family to the Knights of Pythias, the Modern Woodmen of America and the Beavers. He was also a member of Company H, 3rd Reg., W. N. G., from 1889 to 1892, and a member of the Menomonie Home Guard during the World War.

James B. Chickering, for a number of years a prominent business man of Menomonie, founder of the Chickering Insurance Agency, and who was well known throughout Dunn County as a man of various activities, some of a public nature, was born in Green Lake County, Wisconsin, June 24, 1856, son of Farnum and Sally Ann (Newhall) Chickering. Both parents were born in the United States, the father in Massachusetts and the mother in Indiana. It was in Green Lake County, Wisconsin, that they were married and there they were engaged in agricultural pursuits until 1864. Then coming to Dunn County, Farnum Chickering bought 160 acres of wild land in Section 17, town of Red Cedar, where he began to develop a farm. After working on it for four years, he went on to Minnesota, leaving his family behind on the farm, which the subject of this sketch operated for his mother until her death in December, 1874. The children in the family were Esther, Farnum, Anna and James B., all of whom are now deceased. James B. Chickering acquired his education in the rural school and was still quite young when the management of the home farm fell into his hands. He was familiar enough with agriculture, but he had not yet attained his full size and strength, so for a year or two his new duties proved rather heavy. But he was equal to them and during his subsequent years of agricultural activity he improved the place considerably. He became the sole owner of it in 1874. Out of the small house built by his father he made a fine, large, and comfortable residence, also building capacious barns and other substantial and necessary buildings. In the meanwhile he was improving the land and adding to it until he had 520 acres, which was in one piece except for a quarter section. The new land purchased was undeveloped except a 160-acre tract, which was improved and had good buildings on it. During those years on the farm and until he became secretary of the insurance company he was engaged in stock buying and became one of the best known men in Dunn County. Mr. Chickering left the farm and took up his residence in the city of Menomonie, buying a house at No. 915 Sixth Street, where he resided for about nine years. He continued, however, to carry on the farm by means of hired help, he supervising About 1907 he returned to it and made his home there until 1912. He then sold it and returned to Menomonie, buying a home at 608 Ninth Street. In 1915 Mr. Chickering became secretary of the Farmers Mutual Fire Insurance Co. of Dunn County, with which he had been associated for 20 years-ten years as a director and ten as president. He remained secretary until 1919, in which year he resigned the position and established the Chickering Insurance Agency, handling loans, real estate, and all kinds of insurance, and representing 24 different companies. In 1921 Paul E. Bailey became manager for him, and in 1923 established the Bailey Insurance Agency, which he conducts besides managing the Chickering business, the two agencies together, with offices at No. 715 Fifth Street, representing 42 different insurance agencies, and the Bailey agency handling life insurance as well as all other lines. In September, 1924 Mr. Bailey bought the Chickering agency and combined the two, which he is now conducting as the Chickering-Bailey Agency. Mr. Chickering was also a stockholder in the Rusk Co-operative Creamery. In 1920 he sold his home on Ninth Street and bought one at the corner of Fifth Street and Wilson Avenue. While on the farm he served for six years as clerk of the town of Red Cedar, and was a member of the school board of his district, and in the year 1916 he was a deputy assessor of incomes for Dunn County. His religious affiliations were with the Unitarian Church and he belonged fraternally to the Modern Woodmen of America. His death took place on Thursday eve, Nov. 27, 1924, when he was in his sixty-ninth year. Funeral services were conducted at the home on the following Sunday afternoon by the Rev. A. E. Westenberg, pastor of the Congregational Church. Mr. Chickering was married March 21, 1879, to Carrie M. Bennett of Menomonie, who was born Feb. 25, 1860, Juighter of Richard L. and Mary (Snively) Bennett. Mr. and Mrs. Chickering were the parents of three children: Helen A., born March 22, 1885, who died March 8, 1902; Mary Esther, born Feb. 8, 1887, and Ruth Bennett, born Sept. 20, 1893. Marv Esther is the wife of M. B. Porch, a chemist in the employ of the Heintz Pickling Co. of Pittsburg, and they have four children; Mary Genevieve, born Oct. 22, 1917 Ruth Elizabeth, born June 14, 1919; Ella May, born Oct. 9, 1921, and James Madison, born March 26, 1923. Ruth Bennett is the wife of Paul E. Bailey, of Menomonie, and has two children: Paul Edward, born Sept. 4, 1918, and James David, born Sept. 3, 1922.

Carl Labs, an early settler in the town of Eau Galle, but now deceased, was born in Pommern, Germany, where he grew up and learned the blacksmith's trade. Married in his native land to Henrietta Thurow, he came with her in 1866 to the United States, settling in Milwaukee, where he worked at his trade of blacksmith. After a residence there of three years they moved to Dodge County, Wis., where they were engaged in farming until 1874, in which year they came to Dunn County, Mr. Labs buying 40 acres of wild land in Section 5. There was a log cabin on the tract, into which he and his family moved, and he added to it a set of out-buildings and operated that farm until 1903, in which year he sold it to his son Charles, taking up his home with another son, Gust, who owns a farm in Dunn County situated partly in the town of Weston and partly in that of Menomonie. There Carl Labs died March 8, 1923 at the venerable age of 92 years. His wife had passed away some years previously, in October, 1907. They were the parents of six children: Amelia, now Mrs. Fred Eckert of Menomonie; Gust, of Menomonie; Mary, who married August Elfman and is now deceased; Charles of Elmwood, Wis.; Rose, now Mrs. August Beauheusen of Beloit, Wis.; and Ida, who is Mrs. August Stark of Janesville, Wis.

Charles Labs, now living retired in Elmwood, Wis., but who was for a number of years an active farmer in the town of Eau Galle, was born in Milwaukee, Wis., April 27, 1868, son of Carl and Henrietta (Thurow) Labs, the parents being natives of Germany who had settled in Milwaukee in 1866. When young Charles was old enough to observe things they were living on a farm in Dodge County and his earliest recollections are of the country—the woods, the fields and the animals on the farm. In 1874, when he was about six years old, they came to Dunn County, and to a 40-acre farm in the town of Eau Galle, Section 5, where he subsequently spent many years of his life. Soon after the family's arrival there he began attending the Morton Hill School, and a few years later he began assisting his father on the farm. This he continued to do until he was 17 years old. He then began working out in the lumber industry, being successively in the employ of the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company, Carson & Rand, and other concerns, until he was 25 years old. He then returned to the home farm, of which he was manager until 1903, in which year he bought it. It contained the original 40 acres and there were some poor out-buildings and a log cabin residence. He proceeded at once to improve the place, tearing down the buildings and erecting in their place a fine frame house, a basement barn measuring 32×60 feet, and a set of other buildings of adequate size and substantial construction. This made a vast improvement in the place, but that was not the end, for Mr. Labs increased the size of his farm by the purchase of an 80-acre tract that cornered his 40 on the southeast, but situated in Section 9; and still later he bought another 40-acre tract joining his original 40 Later, however, he sold 30 acres, reducing the area of the farm to 130 on the north. Among his other improvements were the drilling of a well and the erection acres. of a windmill. For 20 years Mr. Labs gave considerable to the breeding of Holstein cattle, and his place, known as Twin Willow Stock Farm, was well managed under In June, 1922 Mr. Labs retired, turning over the management of the farm to his son Reanold and residing for the next year and a half in Menomonie, after which he bought and moved to his residence in Elmwood. During his active career he served for 14 years as clerk of his district school board. Mr. Labs was married April 2, 1894, to Lena Melchow of Menomonie, who was born in Buffalo N. Y., Feb. 4, 1871, daughter of Henry and Lena (Schroeder) Melchow. Her parents, natives of Mecklenberg, Germany, had settled in Buffalo in 1869 on their arrival in this country. Later they came to Dunn County, Wis., where Mr. Melchow worked seven years for the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company. He then bought land in the town of Spring Brook, out of which he developed a fine farm, and there he died scme 20 years later, on Dec. 11, 1896. His wife Lena, surviving him several years, passed away on June 27, 1899. They had three children: Mary, who became the wife of Gust Eckert and died March 8, 1923; John ,who died Jan. 9, 1907, and Lena, who became the wife of Charles Labs. Mr. and Mrs. Charles Labs are the parents of two children: Mata born Dec. 24, 1895, and Reanold C., born Feb. 11, 1901. Mata is now Mrs. Frank Schutz of the town of Weston, and the mother of four children, Evangeline, Evelyn, Vera and Edwin. Reanold Labs when a boy attended the Morton Hill School and grew to manhood on the home farm that he is now conducting. He early began to assist his father in its operation and in time became his right hand man. In February, 1922, he rented the farm and has since continued to operate it along modern lines as a dairy farm, having a fine herd of Holstein cattle with a pure bred sire. He was married May 18, 1922, to Mary Leone Thompson of the town of Eau Galle, who was born April 17, 1902. Mr. and Mrs. Reanold Labs are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

John Gebert, now living retired in the city of Menomonie after many years of activity along agricultural lines, was born in Mencmonie, Wis., May 29, 1869, son of William and Louise (Everman) Gebert. The parents were natives of Germany, who came to the United States in 1868, landing in New York in April, whence they came directly to Menomonie, then the headquarters of the active lumbering concern of Knapp, Stout & Co., which, some eight years later, became the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company. Almost any new comer, if sturdy enough, could find work for them at once and remained with them subsequently until the spring of 1882. He then entered upon a new career, destined, however, to be a short one, as a pioneer farmer, buying 80 acres of railroad land in Section 9, town of Me-The land was covered with pine stumps and its clearance involved nomonie. much labor. Mr. Gebert built a small house and a log barn and applied himself to the task, which he would doubtless have succeeded in had his life been spared long enough, but he was called away by death on Oct. 18, 1884. After the sad event, which cast a gloom over the family, his wife, with the assistance of her two sons, William and John, continued the work of improvement and the building up of the farm, in which they were ultimately successful, and she lived to enjoy many comforts in the society of her children. Of these children there were six, namely: Anna, who married Henry Smith and is now a widow residing in Menomonie; Mary, also a widow residing in Menomonie, who was the wife of Henry Retelstorf; Minnie, who is Mrs. August Bressler of Menomonie; William, deceased; Dora, who married Aditon Emmery, and lives in Madison, Maine, and John, subject of this

They operated and improved it together until a few vears before the latter's death, which occurred Dec. 28, 1920. In 1904 they bought 40 acres of additional land, and altogether broke 55 acres. They also erected a fine set of buildings, including a house, a machine shed, wood shed, ice house, separator room and garage, all of these except the house comprised in one building; also a barn of 34 x 62 feet in ground plan, installed with the James equipment, and a tile silo of 12 x 36 feet. The farm is installed with the Lally lighting system. John Gebert conducted it after his brother William's death until June, 1923, when he rented it to his son Allen, and has lived retired in the city of Menomonie. It is well stocked with high grade Jersey cattle. Mr. Gebert is a stockholder in the Downsville Cooperative Creamery. He was married July 5, 1899, in the city of Menomonie, to Mary Smith, who was born Jan. 9, 1879, in the town of Weston, Dunn County, daughter of Ulrich and Mary (Varnke) Smith. Mr. and Mrs. Gebert have one child, the son Allen, above mentioned, born Sept. 17, 1900, who married Alma Walter, daughter of Charles and Anna Walter of the town of Weston.

Theodore Louis, one of the most notable pioneers of Dunn County, was born at Duisburg-on-the-Rhine, Germany, Dec. 4, 1829. There he spent his boyhood and was educated. As a youth he learned the trade of silversmith, completing his apprenticeship at the age of 18 and sailing in the following year for America. In New York he lost his trunk containing all his clothing and soon after arrived almost penniless in Milwaukee. In fact for a time he suffered for want of proper food and clothing, finding it hard to make a living. At Watertown, to which place he walked from Milwaukee through a blinding snow storm, he met a friend of his boyhood days-one Wiggenhorn-who cheered him up and gave him new heart for the battle of life. He took a piece of land near Manitowoc, but being without money or tools he was unable to work it and he returned to Milwaukee through snow four feet deep. Now and then he met people who treated him kindly, but as a rule they were poor and could help hin but little, and he tramped from place to place in winter time looking for work. At Sheboygan he sawed wood for his board and spent his last quarter for a fur cap, having previously worn an old straw one. While working in the woods near Two Rivers he froze his feet and had to return to town and work in the mill as fireman and engineer for the not very munificient wages of eight dollars per month. In the following summer his feet gave him trouble and he had to go to Milwaukee and spend money for treatment. At one time he worked in a distillary at Watertown and took care of a drove of hogs, and it was there that he learned some valuable lessons in hog feeding. But even there misfortune followed him, for he cut his ankle quite badly and was laid up for a long time. He returned to Milwaukee and later went to Galena, Ill., where he worked for a jeweler named Smith, a warm friend of U.S. Grant, afterwards commander in chief of the Union armies and President of the United States, who was a customer There he caught the cholera but recovered and went to St. Louis, at the store. where he fell in with Prince Nicholas of Naussau and his party, who were touring this country incognito and who hired him to go with them and act as scout for $20 a With them he traveled through the wildest parts of the West, but, not month. being able to agree with the Prince, he left the party and entered the employ of the American Fur Company. He was now a man six feet in height and weighing 180 pounds, a dead shot with a rifle and afraid of nothing. He was also familiar with the country and with the habits of the Indians, and hence was a valuable man to the company, and he remained with them two and a half years, during which time he met with many thrilling adventures. In 1855 he returned to Wisconsin, and, coming to Dunn County, took a farm in the town of Dunn, about three miles southeast of Downsville, the locality, after the establishment of a post office there taking the name of Louisville in his honor, that being also the name of the post office. Previously the locality had been known as the Massee Settlement. Mr. Louis built a log shanty there and for a year or two did considerable hunting. On Oct. 4, 1857, Mr. Louis was married to Martha Massee, in the Rev. William Massee's log house at Louisville, and the following day they drove to Pepin in a lumber wagon and there bought their meager stock of household furniture. Mrs. Louis, who was born in the town of Western, Oneida County, N. Y., March 17, 1832, came to Dunn County with her brothers, William, Fletcher and Thomas, in 1857, the year of her marriage. She was a woman of remarkable qualities, whose death, when it occurred on Aug. 27, 1902, was an event that brought sorrow to many hearts. The children of the union were: Gustavus, who died at the age of 22 years; Frank, now in Oregon; Anna C., who became Mrs. E. O. Massee and died March 1, 1912; Susan, now Mrs. Sherman W. Campbell of Staples, Minn., and Martha, who is Mrs. Frank May of Los Angeles, Calif. Mr. Louis early devoted his attention to scientific hog raising and achieved phenominal success. In 1887 he entered the Wisconsin farm institute work as a lecturer with Prof. W. H. Morrison, who was in charge. He had previously delivered many lectures at different points in Wisconsin and Minnesota, and his magnetic power and direct forceful expression were recognized by such men as W. D. Hoard, Prof. W. A. Henry, Hiram Smith and other giants in the lecture field. Invited to go to New York by the New York State Board of Agriculture, he did some of his best work in that field and was largely quoted in the agricultural and stock journals. Canada also sent for him and he delivered a series of lectures in Ontario under the auspices of the government. The effect of his work, both in the United States and Canada was immediately felt, and in many places, as in the Red River Valley, a complete transformation was wrought in methods of farming, the value of his work to the farmers of the country being incalculable. He was one of the first to urge the abandonment of exclusive wheat growing and the substitution of stock raising in northern Wisconsin, and Hon. D. L. Holcomb of Trempealeau County said at one time that his work was worth a million dollars to the farmers of that county alone. Mr. Louis retired from active institute work in 1900 and also from active farm management, but for some years thereafter continued his residence in the old home in Louisville, surrounded by many comforts and by relics of his interesting career, and enjoying the respect and esteem of a wide circle of friends and acquaintances. He died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Ellery O. Massee, of Menomonie, on Nov. 16, 1907, at the age of nearly 78 years, having survived his wife about five years and four months.

George Massee, a former resident of the town of Dunn, and later of the city of Menomonie, member of a well known pioneer family, was born in Chester County, Pennsylvania, March 30, 1821. He was a brother of Thomas, William and Fletcher Massee, mention of whom may be found on this or other pages of this volume. On Nov. 1, 1848, he was married at Rome, Oneida County, N. Y., to Eliza B. Midlam, who was born in the city of Leeds, England, Sept. 29, 1821, and came to the United States with her parents at the age of two years, the family settling in New York State. Some time after their marriage Mr. and Mrs. George Massee moved west by way of the Lakes to Chicago, and from there drove to McHenry Ccunty, Illinois, the northern part of which adjoins the Wiscensin line. There they bought 80 acres of land and were engaged in farming until 1857. Then they sold their farm and moved to the vicinity of Aurora, in Kane County, Ill., where they continued farming until 1881. In that year they sold out and came to Dunn County, whither several of Mr. Massee's brothers had preceded him, and bought 20 acres of land in Section 5, town of Dunn, where he and his family resided until 1888. He then retired and took up his residence in Menomonie, where he and his wife passed their declining years, finally passing away within 60 hours of each other, Mrs. Massee on February 16 and Mr. Massee on Feb. 18, 1908. They were the parents of two children: Ellery O., born Sept. 1, 1851, now residing in the town of Dunn; and Adella S., born in the town of Richmond, McHenry County, Ill., Feb. 9, 1856, who died July 9, 1873, at the age of 17 years and six months.

William Massee, a pioneer of Dunn County, who passed away some 12 years ago, was a native of New York State, who had moved with other members of the family to Illinois, whence in 1857 they came to Dunn County, Wisconsin, settling close together in or near the Louisville Settlement in the town of Dunn. The land had been previously selected, William and others coming here in 1856 for that The tract he took was one of 214 acres of government land, which was purpose. all wild and which he bought for $1.25 an acre. Having transacted this business, he returned to Illinois for his family, the journey with them to Dunn County being made by railroad as far as La Crosse, and from there to Dunnville by boat. When they reached the latter place they were not more than two or three miles from their farm. Having built a log house and barns, he again went back to Illinois, this time for his oxen and other stock, which he drove all the way to Dunn County. Mr. Massee was a Methodist minister, and after he had got his farm well started, he followed the ministry, continuing to serve and preach for 20 years, after which he confined his attention to his farm, operating it until 1905. He then sold it and moved to River Falls, whence he later moved to Menomonie, and still later to Portland, Ore., where he died June 13, 1912. His wife, whose maiden name was Laura Davenport, who was born Sept. 2, 1837, and to whom he was married on May 11, 1856, survived him a few years, dying in Portland, Ore., Nov. 1, 1916. They had ten children, as follows: Morrell, now of Appleton, Wis.; Clara, who is a teacher in the Massee County School for Boys at Stamford, Conn.; Emma and Abbie of Portland, Ore.; Freedom, of East Grand Forks, Minn.; Edward, who is a lieutenant-colonel in the United States' army, and now stationed at Honolulu; Eva, wife of Dr. Newton Emery of Springfield, Ore.; Wellington, founder and president of the Massee County School for Boys at Stamford, Conn.; C. W., of St. Louis, Mo.; and Clarence, a twin brother of C. W., to be given separate mention on these pages.

Fletcher Massee, brother of Thomas, William and George Massee, all well known in Dunn County, either now or formerly, was born in the town of Western, Oneida County, N. Y., Oct. 8, 1834. He came west to McHenry County, Illinois, with his brothers, Thomas and William, and was there married, April 22, 1857, to Fannie Vasey. In the same year he came to the town of Dunn in Dunn County, Wisconsin and bought 80 acres of land in the Louisville Settlement, in Section 8. Later he bought 160 acres in Section 5, town of Dunn, and farmed it for a while. Then selling that farm, he moved to Menomonie and cleared up a farm that is now within the city limits. His last years were spent in Santa Bara, Calif., where he died Dec. 25, 1918. His first wife Fannie had passed away before him, on Oct. 29, 1902. They had been the parents of two children: Oscar, now of Santa Barbara, Calif.; and Herbert, who lives in Madison, Wis. Fletcher Massee married for his second wife, Georgia Warner, who is still living.

Thomas Massee, a worthy pioneer of Dunn County, now deceased, was a prominent representative of a family that gave its name to the locality originally known as the Massee Settlement, but later as Louisville, this county. He was born in the town of Western, Oneida County, N. Y., June 3, 1836. When 19 years of age, he, with his brothers, William and Fletcher, came west to McHenry County, Illinois, and from there in 1857 to Dunn County, Wisconsin, settling, as already intimated, at Louisville in the town of Dunn, where several of his brothers and sisters also settled, thus giving their name to a locality. Here Thomas bought 80 acres of land and began farming. From time to time he added to his holdings until he had 200 acres which he developed into a good piece of agricultural property, clearing and fencing the land and erecting a good house, barn and out-buildings. After following general farming successfully until 1898, he sold the place to his son, George E., and retired, buying a residence at No. 1208 Seventh Street, Menomonie, where he spent the last years of his life, dying Feb. 28, 1906. Thomas Massee was married Nov. 28, 1864, to Rachel E. Elting, who was born in Walworth County, Wisconsin, Oct. 7, 1842, when this state was still politically a territory, her parents being Davis S. and Eliza (Esterly) Elting. With them she came to Dunn County, the family settling on land in the town of Rock Creek, where Mr. Elting was engaged in farming for the rest of his life, dying in 1870. He had been for some years a widower, his good wife having passed away in 1863. Their daughter Rachel, who became Mrs. Thomas Massee, was educated in the rural schools and in the Weslevan Seminary at Eau Claire, Wis., and taught school for four years prior to her marriage.

E. O. MASSEE

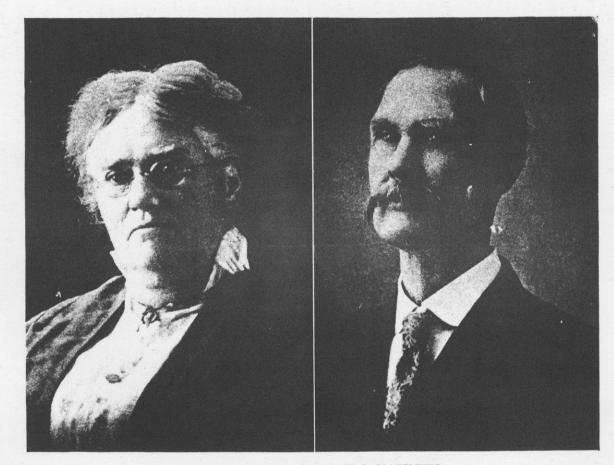

Mr. and Mrs. Massee had three children, Everett, George E. and Frank, of whom the following is a fuller record. Everett, born July, 1866, is now a surveyor and estimator of timber, residing at Beaverton, Ore. He first married Minnie McGhan, who died about five years later. His present wife was in maidenhood, Eva Lalone, and their children are Helen, Madge and Virginia. George E., born Sept. 11, 1873, who is engaged in the dray business in Menomonie, married Anna K. Ordemann and has two children, Ethel R. and Lewyllen W. Frank, born Aug. 28, 1875, owns and conducts a large fruit farm at Hood River, Ore. He married Lenora Steves of the town of Dunn, Dunn County, and has one child, Theodore Marlin. Mrs. Thomas Massee, still survives and occupies the residence at 1208 Seventh Street, Menomonie. Though 82 years old, she is still quite active and able to attend to her household duties. She is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and for many years has been an active member of and worker in the Women's Christian Temperance Union, having served as delegate to the state convention of that organization held at Milwaukee.

Clarence Massee, a prominent farmer in the town of Dunn, and at present serving as a member of the town board, was born on his parents' farm in Section 5, this town, May 7, 1876, son of William and Laura (Davenport) Massee. He acquired his education in the Louisville public school in the town of Dunn and grew to manhood on the home farm, which he helped to develop. He then spent a year at Hood River, Ore., after which he returned to Wisconsin and for the next three vears he was engaged in conducting the Fletcher Massee farm within the city In 1912 he bought his present farm of 180 acres in Section 5, town of Dunn, limits. which was known as the Oscar Massee place, and the buildings of which he has since greatly improved. He has erected a horse barn, machine sheds, and a large silo, besides several other out-buildings and now has a good set. As a dairy farmer he has met with marked success and is now one of the leading men in that line in his He also raises some crops, following modern methods in every branch of town. his business, and having at present 35 head of pure bred Holstein cattle. His farm. known as Shady Lawn Stock Farm, presents an appearance showing efficiency and good management on the part of its owner, its name being derived from the fine, shady lawn which picturesquely sets off the residence. In addition to his present service as supervisor, he is also clerk of School District No. 4, and gives the same careful attention to public business as he does to his own. He is a member of Menomonie Lodge, No. 164, F. & A. M., and also has membership in the Beavers' Reserve Fund. Mr. Massee was united in marriage, March 19, 1900, to Florence Fox, who was born in Eau Claire, Wis., Oct. 9, 1875, daughter of O. G. and Susan (McLean) Fox. Her parents in 1880 settled in Menomonie, the father for about 25 years being an engineer on the Omaha Short Line. He then moved to Stillwater, Minn., and while there was a railroad conductor for several years, but is now retired. Mrs. Susan Fox died in Mencmonie, March 23, 1885. To Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Massee one child has been born, Margaret Laura, on Aug. 3, 1904. She was graduated from the Menomonie High School with the class of 1920 and is now a student at the Stout Institute. The family are members of the Louisville M. E. Church.

Ellery O. Massee, a well known and respected resident of the boulsville M. E. Church, now retired, was born in the town of Richland, McHenry County, Ill., Sept. 1, 1851, son of George and Eliza B. (Midlam) Massee. As a boy he attended public school in that county, was later graduated from the Jennings Seminary at Aurora, Ill., and afterwards took courses at the Chicago Business College in Chicago. Until reaching the age of 22 years he resided for the most part with his parents— except when pursuing his later studies—and then came to Dunn County, Wisconsin, and to the town of Dunn, where he had several uncles living. With his uncle Fletcher, of the Louisville Settlement, he engaged in buying, selling and shipping horses, and was thus engaged for 15 years. Then, about 1888 or 1889, he engaged in the hardwood lumber business, buying large tracts of land in Price and Chippewa counties largely covered with hardwood timber, which he logged, sawed and piled for seasoning, selling and shipping it on contract. In this business he continued until 1912, in which year he retired. He has since made his home for most of the time with his cousin Clarence, on the latter's farm in Section 5, town of Dunn. Ellery O. Massee was married Sept. 1, 1881, to Anna C. Louis, who was born in this town, April 15, 1859, daughter of Theodore and Martha M. (Massee) Louis, her father being the noted pioneer for whom the Louisville settlement was named. Mrs. Anna C. Massee died March 1, 1912, leaving one child, Fontana Adella, who was born March 1, 1887. This daughter later became the wife of Fred Cole, and died July 26, 1922. Mr. Massee is a member of the M. E. Church, to which the family in general have belonged for many years, our subject's uncle William, having been a preacher in the denomination.

William J. Mathews, for many years one of the leading citizens and farmers of the town of Tainter, but now deceased, was born at Eagle Prairie in Waukesha County, Wis., April 19, 1852, son of Andrew T. and Matilda (Wilson) Mathews. The parents were natives of Ireland who emigrated to the United States at an early day, and were farmers in Waukesha County, this state, until 1860. Then, loading all their movable property into a "prairie schooner," or large wagon with a canvas top, they came with their children to Dunn County, settling on a farm in the town of Colfax, of which they were noted pioneers. They had in all four children, three sons and a daughter, namely, Sarah, John R., William J. and Wilson W., of whom Sarah, William J. and John R. are now deceased. William J. Mathews was eight years old when he accompanied his parents to Dunn County. He attended school in the town of Colfax, and, after remaining home until 26 years old, started farming on his own account, buying 160 acres of land in Section 23, town of Tainter. Τo this he subsequently added by other purchases until he was the owner of three farms, with a total area of 460 acres, all in the town of Tainter, and he continued actively engaged in general farming and dairving until near his death, which occurred Oct. 5, 1921. Mr. Mathews was a man of energy, good judgment and ability, in addition to rectitude, which earned for him the respect and confidence of his fellow citizens. Naturally they looked to him to shoulder some of the responsibilities of public affairs, which he did willingly and ably, serving for a number of years as chairman of the town board, which made him a member of the county board, and for two terms being chairman of the latter. As to other business interests aside from his farm, he was president of the Colfax Creamery, a director in the Equity Association and a stockholder in the Peoples State Bank of Colfax and the New Richmond Packing Company. In 1879 William J. Mathews was married at Baldwin, St. Croix County, Wis., to Margaret Simpson, who was born on Staten Island, New York, in 1858, her parents being Arthur and Eliza Jane (Kidd) Simpson, natives of Ireland. With them she came to Wisconsin in 1868 at the age of ten years, the family settling on a farm in the town of Tainter, Dunn County, where in time Mr. and Mrs. Simpson passed away. In the family were five children, four of whom are now living, namely: Margaret (Mrs. William J. Mathews); Anna, who married Jacob Sties, now of the town of Tainter; Louise, wife of William Hill of Wheeler, and Fred of Colfax. Edith, who married Samuel Caw, is the one now deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Mathews became the parents of seven children, Elsie, Lulu, Lloyd, Nina, Ethel, Lyle and Clifford. Lulu is now a teacher in Montana. Elsie, who married Charles Holland of Montana, is now deceased. Nina, Ethel, Lyle and Clifford, are all on the home farm, the boys helping their mother in carrying it on. They are engaged in dairying and stock raising, having 30 head of grade Holstein cattle, and are raising on an average of 125 Duroc-Jersey hogs each year. In 1917 Lyle and Clifford entered the army for war service, enlisting at Eau Claire in the U.S. Coast Artillery and training at Norfolk, Va. Lyle, who was in France 11 months with the 60th Coast Heavy Artillery, having charge of a motor squad. Clifford's service was in this country, at Fort Monroe.

Otto Martinson, a former well known resident of Menomonie, was born in Drammen, Norway, Dec. 14, 1852. He was educated in the public schools and at the age of 17 years became a sailor boy and also learned ship carpentering. He sailed between most of the principal ports of France, Germany and the West Indies, and also the Atlantic ports of the United States. Thus engaged until 1879, he then abandoned the sea and came west to Wisconsin, locating in Menomonie, where he made his home for many years thereafter. He worked for the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company, and also for others, contractors and builders, and also did some contracting and building himself, being a good practical carpenter. In 1893 he erected a fine residence for himself, consisting of 11 rooms and bath, at 121 Twelfth Avenue West. But the occupation he had adopted as a landsman proved more dangerous to him than the sea which he had followed in his younger days, in fact, fatal, for on May 29, 1899, while he was engaged in raising the roof of a building, it collapsed and he was instantly killed. He was a very well known citizen with a large circle of friends and had served as alderman from the first and second wards. Mr. Martinson was married in Drammen, Norway, July 4, 1874, to Catherine Christopherson Selvig, who was born in Drammen, Norway, Nov. 21, 1853. He and his wife had seven children, Manville, Axel, Josephine, Thomas, Ovedia, Charlotte and Effie. Manville, born Feb. 27, 1875, is now deceased (see separate Axel, born Nov. 23, 1877, is a farmer in Dunn County. He married mention). Anna Neverdahl and they have one child, a daughter, Orell, who is now Mrs. William Diedrichson and has a son, William. Josephine, born July 2, 1880, resides in Minneapolis. Thomas, born April 26, 1883, is a traveling salesman living in Crookston, Minn. He married Lillian Smith and they have two children, Ethel M. and Dorothea. Ovedia, born Jan. 30, 1885, is now Mrs. Abraham Brill and has two children, Thomas and Robert. Charlotte, born Nov. 6, 1887, is the wife of Emil Brietson of Glenwood, Minn., and has four children, Catherine, Thomas, Emogene and Gold Manville. Effie, born Jan. 29, 1892, is residing at home.

Manville Martinson, for many years a successful Menomonie business man and public spirited citizen, whose death on Wednesday, Feb. 4, 1920, was an event much deplored in the community, was born in Drammen, Norway, Feb. 27, 1875, son of Otto and Catherine (Selvig) Martinson. When four years old he came to America with his parents, who settled in Menomonie, Wis., and here he attended school and grew to manhood. His first work was as a mail carrier and then he became an employee of Knapp, Stout & Co. in their shingle mill. Following that he served as a clerk in the general store of E. H. Larson, after which he started a livery business in a small way at 121 Twelfth Avenue on the home premises. He was but 21 years old at that time. In 1900 young Martinson engaged in the livery business with Chris Pauly, where the Palace livery is now conducted. Mr. Pauly retiring from the firm about 1903, Mr. Martinson purchased from Al. C. Anderson a livery property on the lake front, which was his business place for the next seven years. Then in 1910 he erected the large brick stable which he called the Main Street Livery, but which soon after was converted into a combination horse and auto livery, and finally became exclusively a garage, conducted under the name of the Menomonie Auto Company. In this enterprise Mr. Martinson was associated for a time with John Fuller, but subsequently conducted the business alone. During part of that time he owned the old Palace livery as well. He conducted a large business, with a repair shop and livery, and also dealt in cars, being agent here for the Ford car. His garage was one of the largest and best equipped in the county, the large repair shop being installed with six machines which were kept constantly busy. Three salesman found ample occupation in the sales department, the sales and show rooms being located in the basement of the Masonic Temple building, which joins the garage on the east, while a large accessory department completed the establishment such as it is today, save that another manager has taken Mr. Martinson's place, and the services of a bookkeeper are also employed. The building up of this highly successful business reflects credit on Mr. Martinson's ability. He devoted most of his time to it but also took an interest in all things pertaining to the welfare and advancement of the community, and was a man who enjoyed a wide popularity. For years he had been a prominent member of the Masonic order and in 1918 served as master of the Menomonie lodge. He was but 45 years old at the time of his death, which was the result of pneumonia following influenza, yet he had achieved much and done so through honest and legitimate methods, which gained for him the respect and esteem of his fellow citizens. Mr. Martinson was married July 22, 1903, to Sophie Swenson, who was born in Menomonie, Dec. 2, 1875.

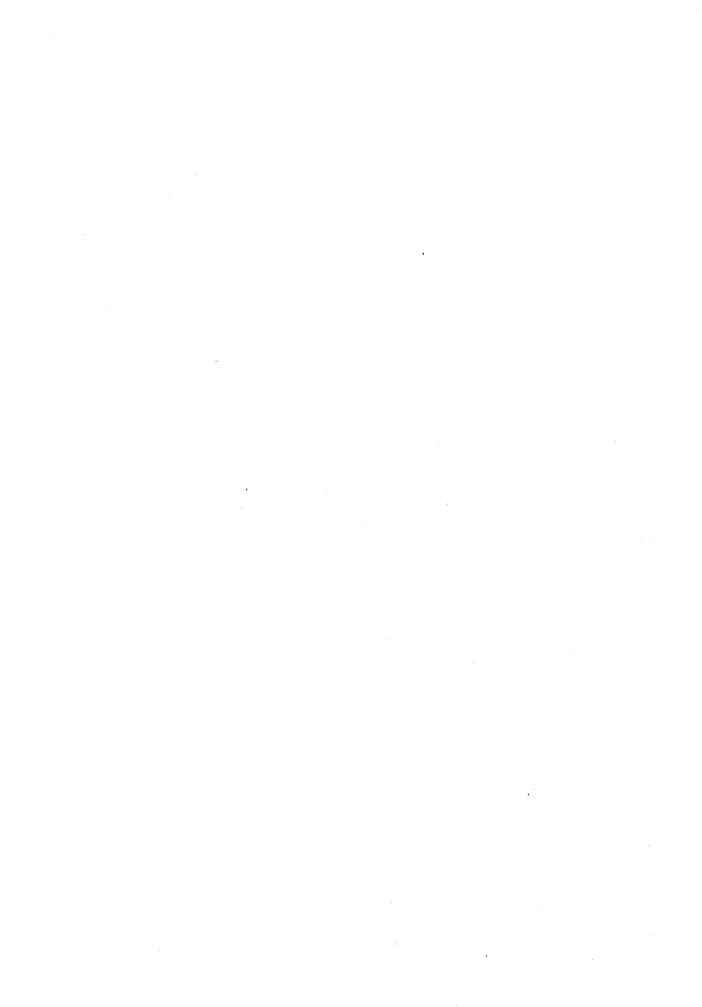

daughter of Peter and Matilda (Thompson) Swenson, who were natives of Norway. Since the death of her husband, Mrs. Martinson has been proprietor of the garage and auto business which he established, and which is managed very successfully by her brother, Thomas Swenson. Her residence is a beautiful brick bungalow at 819 Wilson Avenue, which was built by Mr. Martinson in the spring of 1917. She is a member of Our Saviour's Lutheran Church and enjoys an established position in society. Mr. Martinson was survived by his mother, Mrs. Catherine Martinson. His father, Otto Martinson, died May 29, 1899.

Thomas Swenson, manager of the large business of the Menomonie Auto Co., was born in the city of Menomonie, April 4, 1881, son of Peter and Matilda (Thompson) Swenson. The parents were natives of Norway, the father coming to this country in 1866, and the mother in 1868. They were married in Menomonie, Wis., Oct. 17, 1871, and for several years Mr. Swenson was foreman for Knapp, Stout & Company. For many years after that he was engaged in the hotel business in Menomonie, and in later life was in the coal and wood business, also doing some farming. He was a man of sterling worth, efficient in business, a good husband and a loving father. In 1899 he retired from active business life and on April 14, 1901, he passed from this life. His wife is still living and resides with her daughter, Mrs. Manville Martinson. Their children were as follows: Jennie, who is now Mrs. E. W. Gilbertson of Devils Lake, N. D., where Mr. Gilbertson is in the furniture business; Thomas, born April 4, 1881, subject of this sketch; Sophie, born Dec. 2, 1875, who is the widow of Manville Martinson; Bernhart (first), and Gina, who died in infancy, and Bernhart (second), who died in 1901. Thomas Swenson was educated in the public schools of Menomonie, after which he was employed successively in various occupations until 1920, when upon the death of his brotherin-law, Manville Martinson, he was made manager of the Menomonie Auto Co., distributors of and dealers in Ford cars and tractors and Lincoln automobiles, also running a large supply and repair shop. He has shown a marked aptitude for the work and has established himself in a firm place among the successful and respected business men of the city. His society affiliations are with the Commercial Club and the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. On Aug. 3, 1905, Mr. Swenson was married to Eva Cook, and he and his wife are the parents of one child, Jane, who was born April 9, 1913. The Swenson home is at 1109 Broadway. William Kent, in former years a well known and highly respected farmer in the town of Red Cedar, was born near Hamilton, Ontario, March 18, 1833, son of Joseph D. and Mary (Miller) Kent. As a boy he attended school in Canada, and in 1845, at the age of 12, came with his parents to Wisconsin, the family first settling near Janesville. In 1850 they became pioneers of Dunn County, settling on land in Section 9, town of Red Cedar. The county at that time was practically a wilderness and settlers were few and far between. Consequently the life of a pioneer who started to develop a farm was to a large extent a lonely one. He had no one but the members of his own family with whom to hold converse and his daily routine was one of hard work without recreation, or anything to divert the mind save a change in the weather or in the seasons, or perhaps a visit once in a while from some wandering redskin, or some white man looking for a spot on which to settle. William Kent as he grew up assisted his father in the development of the home farm. In 1857 he was married to Alice Taylor and they lived on the Kent farm until 1865. He then started in for himself, buying the Ed Ranny farm, a tract of 80 acres in Section 16, town of Red Cedar. He later increased the size of his farm by buying the 80 acres adjoining on the south, and still later bought more land until he owned 380 acres, all in the town of Red Cedar. In 1872 Mr. Kent suffered a bereavement in the loss of his first wife, Alice. On April 19, 1876, he married Mrs. George Harsh, whose maiden name was Caroline Maria Sherburne, and who was born in Catteraugus County, New York. By her first husband, Mr. Harsh, she had a son, George A., who is now a citizen of Eau Claire, Wis. By Mr. Kent she had two sons, Joseph S. and Harry W. She and Mr. Kent also reared a girl, Lydia Plemon, who is now Mrs. M. H. Wilson of Eau Claire, Wis. Mr. Kent cultivated his farm successfully and continued to improve it until the year 1900, when he retired from active

HISTORY OF DUNN COUNTY work, turning over the management of the place to his sons, Joseph S. and Harry W.

He continued to reside thereon, however, until his death on Aug. 23, 1910. He was a man held in high esteem for upright life and kind disposition, and had a wide circle of friends. He was affiliated religiously with the Baptist Church, which he helped to support. His wife is still living on the old farm, which is operated by her The Kent Brothers, Joseph S. and Harry W., are now the owners of Prairie sons. View Farm, the old Kent family home. They were both reared on it and have spent their lives here up to the present time. They are both practical farmers, and in keeping up with the times have gradually worked into stock raising and dairving. which they are now practicing on a somewhat extensive scale. Their milch cows are of the Guernsey breed, and 28 out of their 53 animals are pure bred, while 42 head are Shorthorn beef cattle, such being the composition of their herd at the time of this writing (July, 1924). The two brothers are members of the Guernsey Breeders' Association, and stockholders in the First National Bank of Menomonie. Harry W. Kent, besides holding the office of treasurer of the Guernsey Breeders' Association, he has served as clerk of the town of Red Cedar since 1908; as clerk of the school board since 1903; as treasurer of the Rusk Creamery Co. since 1921, and as president of the Rusk Mercantile Co. since November, 1923. He was married Oct. 19, 1911, to Jessie Crislaw, daughter of John and Etta (La Mont) Crislaw, and he and his wife are the parents of five children, Margaret, Eleanor, Ruth, Mary and Grace. The Kent family are members of the Baptist Church. Frank W. Meisner, secretary and manager of the Boyceville Farmers' Cooperative Creamery Association, was born in Shawano County, Wisconsin, April 12, 1883, son of William and Freda (Wurl) Meisner. The father was born in the state of New York in August, 1854, and the mother in Prussia, Germany, in August, 1852. Married in Shawano County, Wisconsin, they settled on a farm there, and in addition to carrying on agriculture, William Meisner taught school, being efficient in both capacities and also as a business man generally. He stood high as a citizen of this town—that of Belle Plaine—of which he was treasurer for 30 years, also serving as school clerk of his district, and he was for years a member of the board of town supervisors, being elected its chairman, which made him a member of the county board. He and his wife are still residing on the farm, though they are now enjoying comparative ease, the active work being carried on by others. They are the parents of nine children, Anna, David, Frank M., William, Rosa, Henry, Mark, Edwin and Lillie. Frank W. Meisner acquired his elementary education in the district school and subsequently attended high school at Clintonville, Waup. ca County Wis., taking the three year course. He then took up cheese and butter-making, also taught school for a year, and subsequently entering the state university at Madison, was graduated from the dairy department with the class of That summer he conducted the Lime Kiln cheese factory in Shawano 1908. Then in the fall of 1918 he was tendered a call to the dairy school at County. Madison as an instructor in boiler mechanics, and butter-making, and, having accepted, held the position for six years, he then became buttermaker and manager of the Peacock creamery at Fennimore, Grant County, a position that he held for two years. At the end of that time he purchased the Wittenberg creamery at Wittenberg, Shawano County, which also he conducted for two years, finally selling out to the Farmers' Company. On Feb. 16, 1918, Mr. Meisner came to Boyceville as butter maker for the creamery here. On a reorganization, which took place in the following year, he was made manager and secretary, but has continued as head butter maker up to the present time. He has gained a reputation as one of the best butter makers in the state and the growth and present prosperity of the Boyceville creamery is due to his untiring efforts and efficient management. The butter is sold under the name of the Tiffany Creek brand. Mr. Meisner has exhibited at most of the county, state and national dairy shows and gained his share of prizes and diplomas for good product. In 1920 he won the First District prize held by the Wisconsin Butter Makers' Association at LaCrosse. In the same year he won the first prize at Marshfield held by the Cheese and Butter Makers' Advancement, and he has won many other prizes for butter making and several diplomas for high scoring. He is one of the stockholders of the creamery and an active and useful citizen of Boyceville, having been a member of the board of trustees of the village since its incorporation, On April 2, 1913, Mr. Meisner was united in marriage to Rose Kohel of Marshfield, and he and his wife are the parents of one child, Ceylon Mark, who was born June 9, 1914. The family are members of the German Lutheran Church.

Fred H. Martin, a director of the A. J. Martin Lumber Co. and manager of their retail yard at Colfax, was born at Bloomer, Wis., Feb. 26, 1889. He was educated in the public schools of his native place, being graduated from the high school with the class of 1906, after which for a few years he was engaged in business as contractor and builder in association with his brother, A. J. Martin. In 1914 the brothers bought the retail lumber yard of the Colfax Lumber Co., and in 1916, Fred H. came to Colfax as general manager of the yard. In the latter year the business was incorporated and its name or style changed from the Colfax Lumber Co. to the A. J. Martin Lumber Co., with A. J. Martin, president; H. T. Bonham, vice president; and L. Jones, secretary, with Fred H. as a director. The company has a line of yards in different places including Bloomer (where the main office is located), Colfax, Holcombe, Sheldon and Exeland. They do a large business covering a considerable extent of territory and handling all kinds of manufactured lumber for building purposes, together with building supplies, blue prints and everything They furnish estimates and build houses to order on connected with the trade. Since Fred H. Martin came to Colfax he has identified contract, or by the day. himself closely with practically all the main interests of the village and has proved a strong factor in its prosperity and advancement. He has never shirked public office when he could do any good by accepting it, and was for five years a member of the village bcard of trustees, being its president one year, and he was also school clerk one year. He is a stockholder in the Bank of Colfax. He has advanced high in the Masonic order, being a member of Masonic Lodge No. 164 of Menomonie; R. A. M., No. 34 of Menomonie; K. T., No. 8, of Eau Claire; R. & S. M., No. 25, of Chippewa Falls; also of Tripcli Temple of the Mystic Shrine at Milwaukee. He was married Oct. 25, 1915, to Anna Schwartz of Bloomer, Wis., and is the father of a son, Harold H., born June 3, 1917. He and his father attend the Methodist Episcopal Church.

Charles J. Mowers, an enterprising and prosperous merchant of Menomonie, not yet two years established at his present location, but doing a good business, was born in the town of Gilmanton, Buffalo County, Wis., Dec. 17, 1880, son of Charles A. and Martha (Simonson) Mowers. The father was a native of Wisconsin, and the mother of Christiania, Norway, the latter coming to the United States with his parents when two years old. They were married in the town of Gilmanton, Buffalo County, this state, where their son Charles was born. The mother, Mrs. Martha Mowers, is now a resident of Chicago, Mr. Charles A. Mowers being de-Charles J. Mowers as a youth attended school in Eau Claire, after which ceased. he learned the manson's trade. In 1901 he came to Menomonie, and for 17 years afterwards followed his trade here. It was in July, 1918, that he established his present store at the corner of Twelfth Avenue and Broadway, where he carries a complete line of staple groceries. His store possesses attractions in its neat and orderly arrangement, and one of the conveniences appreciated by customers is his motor service for quick delivery of goods bought. He has built up a good trade and won popular approval. Mr. Mowers is associated by membership with several fraternal societies, including the Modern Woodmen of America, and the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, also the Rebekahs, a branch of the latter order. He was married Feb. 5, 1902, in Menomonie, to Bessie Mason, daughter of James and Carrie (Cook) Mason. Her parents were early settlers in Dunn County, and the mother is still living, being a resident of Menomonie. James Mason, the father, is deceased. To Mr. and Mrs. Mowers have been born three children: Arthur, born Dec. 10, 1903, who is a graduate of the Stout Institute, class of 1923, and is now teaching printing and electricity at Ottumwa, Iowa; Marguerite, born Aug. 5, 1904, who was graduated from the Stout Institute in the class of 1924, and · · is now teaching domestic science in the high school at Rice Lake, Wis.; and Dorothy, born Oct. 20, 1906, who died in November, the same year. The family are attendents of the Lutheran Church.

William N. Curtis, now living retired in the city of Menomonie after an active and successful career as farmer and business man, was born in the town of Spring Brook, Dunn County, on Nov. 6, 1861, son of Hiram S. and Julia (Tuttle) Curtis. The father, Hiram S. Curtis, was born in Ohio, July 16, 1834, and acquired his education in that state. In 1855, after attaining his majority, he came west to Dunn County, Wisconsin, but after remaining here only a short time, he went on to Hudson, Wis. In 1856 he returned to Ohio, and was there married May 1, 1856, to Julia Tuttle, who was born in Ohio, Feb. 14, 1838. Immediately after their marriage they came to Dunn County and settled on Mud Creek in the town of Spring Brook, Mr. Curtis working out for a few years. At the end of that period he bought 80 acres of wild prairie land in Section 28, town of Spring Brook, on which stood a set of log buildings. There he started farming for himself, and he continued to operate that land until 1869, when he traded the farm for one of 80 acres in the same section but half a mile farther west. A year later he sold the latter place and bought 80 acres of heavy timber land in the town of Weston, to which he had to blaze a trail in order to avoid losing his way. He began the work of improvement by making a clearing and built a log house with a shake roof. In building the house he used no nails, the ends of the logs being mortised and fastened together by wooden pegs. He also erected other buildings and began the clearing and improvement of the land. In 1884 he moved back to the town of Spring Brook and bought an 80-acre farm in Section 28, where he was engaged in agricultural pursuits until He owned a house and lot in the village of Elk Mound, and after his re-1906. tirement he lived there for a part of the time, spending the rest of it in the homes of his various children, whom he visited in succession. He died March 21, 1908, hi wife having died previously, on Oct. 26, 1906. They were the parents of ten children, namely: Preston L., born June 12, 1857, who died at the age of six years, on June 17, 1863; Luna L., born Jan. 9, 1860, who married Guy Irvine of Menomonie and is now a widow; William N., born Nov. 6, 1861, now living retired in Menomonie; Hiram Elbridge, born June 29. 1864, who died in his fifty-ninth year on Jan. 10, 1923; Alice Adella, born Feb. 2, 1867, who died at the age of 38, on June 21, 1905; Walter P., born July 12, 1869, now a resident of St. Paul; Martha E., born July 28, 1873, who is Mrs. Alfred Stavrum of St. Cloud, Minn.; Minnie M., born March 30, 1876, now Mrs. George Langdon of Eau Claire; Arlo S., born Dec. 16, 1878, who died July 22, 1895, in his seventeenth year; and Giles, born Oct. 11, 1892, now living in Stella, Wash. William N. Curtis acquired his education in district schools in the towns of Spring Brook and Weston, and until he was 24 years old lived with his parents, assisting his father to improve the several farms which the family successively occupied during that period. He then started in for himself, buying an 80-acre farm in Section 32, town of Spring Brook. There were some buildings on it and some of the prairie land had been broken. For three years Mr. Curtis remained on that place. Then selling it, he bought 40 acres of timber land in the town of Menomenie, a small portion of which tract had been cleared. There he erected a dwelling and farmed for a few years, after which he sold that place also, and from his father-in-law, Silas Blodgett, purchased an improved farm of 80 acres in the same town. There he farmed until 1914, for some years carrying on both diversified crop farming and dairying, but for the last 12 giving practically all his attention to dairying, keeping grade Durham cattle, besides having a large flock of sheep. He was a stockholder in the Downsville creamery. So successful was he that by the end of that period he was recognized as one of Dunn Ccunty's leading and representative farmers. When he sold the farm in 1914 and retired he bought his present residence at 2120 South Broadway, the site comprising four lots. He has since made this place his home and has remodeled and greatly improved the house. In 1920 Mr. Curtis, with two of his brothers, Walter and Giles, bought the Lucas building on Main Street, Menomonie, and conducted a farm machinery business until the spring of 1923, when he and his brothers sold the business and leased the building to A. L. Mitten, who is now operating it. While on the farm Mr. Curtis served for nine years as clerk of his school district. William N. Curtis was married Aug. 5, 1885, to Marvetta Blodgett, who was born in the town of Spring Brook, this county, on Feb. 26, 1859, daughter of Silas and Lavina The children of this marriage are as follows: Pearl Ethel, (Stowell) Blodgett. born Sept. 18, 1888; Sylvia Evelyn, Dec. 23, 1890; Ora Fay, July 24, 1893; Lavina Julia, March 30, 1896; Effie Lois, Jan. 24, 1898; and Ruby Esther, April 1, 1902. Pearl Ethel was married Dec. 24, 1913, to Allen Carver and they reside in Minne-She has five children, who were born as follows: Clyde C., Sept. 27, 1914; apolis. Howard L., Jan. 14, 1916; Lela M., Jan. 28, 1918; Loraine, July 27, 1921, and Morris, Aug. 29, 1922. Sylvia Evelyn was married Oct. 19, 1912, to Frank L. Knippel and they reside on a farm in the town of Lucas. Their children are: Robert E., born Aug. 31, 1913; Ruth Lillian, born Aug. 24, 1917, and Herbert F., born Feb. 26, 1922. Ora Fay is the wife of Phillip F. Burton of Minneapolis, their marriage having taken place Dec. 5, 19-. Lavina Julia died on Feb. 5, 1911, in her fifteenth vear. Effie Lois was married June 4, 1919, to Bert E. Brunn and resides in Menomonie. She has two children; Betty Genevieve, born Sept. 19, 1921, and Dorothy May, born April 24, 1924. Ruby Esther was married June 20, 1923, to Waldemar D. Johnson and resides in St. Paul. Mr. Curtis is a man with a good record as farmer, business man and American citizen. Always industrious, he is also far-sighted and quick to take advantage of changing conditions; but he never took an unfair advantage of his neighbor, and in building up the edifice of his own prosperity he also helped to build up that of the county in which up to the present time he has spent his life, and where he is widely known and as widely respected. His children, receiving good parental care and the best moral training, have reflected honor on the family name.

Silas Blodgett, a pioneer of Dunn County, now deceased, was born at Camden, Maine, March 20, 1808. He was married in southern Wisconsin, May 26, 1848, to Lavina Stowell, who was born at Windsor, Vt., Oct. 2, 1824. Accompanied by several children, they arrived in Dunn County in 1856, locating at Fall City in the town of Spring Brook, where they made their home for ten years. In 1866 they moved to the town of Menomonie, where Mr. Blcdgett bought 80 acres of wild railroad land and cleared up a farm, in time becoming a well known and representative citizen. His death took place on June 6, 1882, his wife, who survived him over 16 years, dying Dec. 20, 1898. They were the parents of six children: Albin C., born March 7, 1849, now of Siloam Springs, Ark.; Helen O., born April 11, 1853, who died May 12, 1886; Francis C., born Aug. 19, 1854, now living in Connersville, Dunn County; Hattie N., born March 2, 1856, who is Mrs. Theron French of Connersville; Mark C., born July 20, 1857, now residing in Menomonie with Mr. and Mrs. William N. Curtis; and Maryetta, born Feb. 26, who is Mrs. William N. Curtis of Menomonie. Before coming to Dunn County Mr. and Mrs. Blodgett for several years conducted a tavern or stopping-place for travelers.

Nicholas Mickelbook, a retired farmer residing in the town of Elk Mound after an industrious career of many years during which he built up a good farm, was born in Sheboygan County, Wis., Feb. 11, 1855, son of Henry and Theresa (Wagner) The parents came to this country from Luxemburg in 1851 and in Mickelbook. Sheboygan County, Wisconsin, engaged in farming. Henry Mickelbook also ran a blacksmith's shop on his farm, having followed the trade in Luxemburg, and picked up many extra dollars that way. In fact he was a handy man well adapted to succeed in a pioneer community. In 1884, when getting along in years, he came to Dunn County with his son Peter, who engaged in farming in the town of Spring Brook, and at his home he lived retired for the rest of his life, dying in 1907. He had survived his wife several years, she having passed away in 1904. They had seven children: Catherine (first), Peter, Catherine (second), Matthew, Nicholas, Julia and Susan. Peter is now living in Menomonie, Matthew in Washington, Julia in Oregon, and Susan, who is now Mrs. Peter Schumacher, in the town of Spring Brook, Dunn County, Wis. The others are deceased. Nicholas Mickelbook was educated in a district school in Sheboygan County, and grew to manhood on his parents' farm, where he resided until he was 22 years old. His father then deeded to him 40 acres of land, which he farmed until 1883. He then sold it and came to Dunn County, buying a farm of 80 acres in Section 3, town of Spring Brook. About 30 acres of the land had been cleared and broken, but the buildings on the place were poor. Such as it was, it presented opportunities for work, which Mr. Mickelbook took hold of. In the course of years he not only cleared the remaining 50 acres but bought 20 acres adjoining, and erected good, substantial, modern buildings, including an excellent residence, a dairy barn of 34 x 56 feet, with patent equipment and waterworks, and other well planned out-buildings. He followed general and dairy farming, keeping a herd of good grade Holstein cattle. In 1917. turning the farm over to his son John, he retired, though he continued to live on it for two years longer, at the end of that time taking up his residence with his daughter, Mrs. Anton Green in the town of Elk Mound, which is his present home. Nicholas Mickelbook was married in January, 1879, to Margaret Schrantz, who was born in Sheboygan County, Wis., Feb. 28, 1854, and who, after a wedded life of 33 years, died on April 2, 1912. The children of this marriage were four, Catherine, Mary, John and Margaret. Catherine, born Jan. 27, 1880, is now Mrs. Emil Tilleson of Elk Mound. She was first married to Arthur Keen, who died in 1905, and by that union had one child, Florence, who is now Mrs. Elliot C. Nelson. Mary, born March 19, 1881, and who became the wife of Fred Paff, died March 1, John, born Oct. 30, 1889, now owns the old home farm in Section 3, town of 1924. Spring Brook. He married Catherine Green and has one child, Cecelia. Margaret, born Feb. 27, 1892, is the wife of Anton Green of the town of Elk Mound, as already mentioned, and has two children, Vernon and George. Mr. Mickelbook is a member of St. Joseph's Catholic Church in Elk Mound.

John N. Mickelbook, a prominent young farmer in the town of Spring Brook, was born Oct. 30, 1889, on the farm that he now owns and operates in Section 3, town of Spring Brook. His parents, who are given separate mention in this volume, were Nicholas and Margaret (Schrantz) Mickelbook. He was educated in the old Lee school and has always remained at home, assisting his father in the development of the farm until the latter's retirement. In December, 1917, he bought the place from his father and has since operated it along similar lines, keeping grade Holstein cattle with a pure bred sire in the herd. He is a stockholder in the new Hudson Road Creamery. John N. Mickelbook was married Nov. 14, 1917, in Elk Mound, to Catherine Green, who was born in the town of Elk Mound, Dec. 26, 1886, daughter of Anton and Margaret (Lorg) Green. Her father is now deceased and her mother, who married again, is Mrs. John Mousel of the town of Spring Brook. Mr. and Mrs. Mickelbook are the parents of a daughter, Cecelia, who was born Aug. 30, 1921. The family are members of St. Joseph's Catholic congregation at Elk Mound.

Alexander Miller, who in the middle 70's settled in the town of Lucas, where he made agricultural improvements, was born in Glasgow, Scotland, and came to the United States when a young man. In Waukesha County, Wisconsin, he married Catherine Hughes, a native of Wales, and after residing there some years, they arrived in Dunn County as prospective settlers on Sept. 10, 1875. From the Fox River Land Co. Mr. Miller bought 160 acres of heavy timber land, the tract being the northeast quarter of Section 7. After making a clearing he built a log house, barn and other out-buildings and began the work of development, cutting timber, clearing land, and doing general farming. Later, after he had made some progress, he bought 160 acres in Section 6, also 80 acres in Section 8 and 40 acres in Section 5, all being united in one farm, situated in the northwest corner of the town. Mr. Miller cleared 120 acres of it, some on each purchase. Later he built a sheep barn of 24 x 60 feet and a basement barn, 36 x 58 feet; also a two-story house of 12 rooms, the buildings being on the original purchase in Section 7. In 1923 he sold 80 acres of his farm to his son William H., but continued to operate the remainder until 1904, in which year he sold to the same son the original "80", with buildings, in Section 7, and after that he and his wife made their home with William. He died March 13, 1913, at the age of 78 years, after a long, active and useful career, and was survived less than a year by his wife, who passed away Jan. 14, 1914, at the age of 81. They were the parents of five children, Alexander, Thomas, William H., James and Elizabeth. Of William H. mention is made in a separate article. The record of the other in brief is as follows. Alexander went to Oregon, where he is now living. He married Kate Teare and they have one child, Marjorie. Thomas, who died Sept. 29, 1916, came into possession of a part of the home farm, where he resided until shortly before his death. He married Elva Icylene Bailey, who died April 17, 1906; their children were, Hazel and Marion. James, now a merchant at Kirkhoven, Minn., married Anna Cox and has two children, Alexander and Laura. Elizabeth is the wife of C. L. Hill, a teacher in the Normal Training School at Viroqua, Wis., and has seven children, Lloyd, Lester, Catherine, Glayds, Ruth, Marjorie and Lois.

William H. Miller, formerly active in the farming and dairying industry but now living retired in Menomonie, was born in Waukesha, Waukesha County, Wis., Jan. 1, 1868, son of Alexander and Catherine (Hughes) Miller. He was a boy in his eighth year when he accompanied his parents to Dunn County, and he was soon one of the pupils in the rural schoolhouse, which stood on his parents' farm in the norwest part of the town of Lucas. But as a member of a pioneer family he was soon obliged to make himself useful on the home farm, each year bringing additional In the meanwhile, however, he was gaining a practical knowledge of agriduties. culture in its various branches, and by early manhood he was competent to handle any problem that the farm presented. Until 1893 he remained his father's assistant; then he began his independent career as a farmer, buying 80 acres of his parents' farm, on which he erected some buildings, also improving the land. There he farmed for 11 years by the end of which time the property was greatly improved. In 1904 he sold that farm to his sister and purchased the original home tract of 80 acres in Section 7, also 80 acres in Section 8 from his sister, thus coming into possession of a farm of 160 acres, which he operated, doing general farming and dairying, until August, 1917. He then retired and moved to the city of Menomonie, buying a residence on Sixth Avenue, which was the home of himself and wife until the spring of 1920, when he sold it and bought their present residence at the corner of Thirteenth Street and Stout Road. He still owns the farm, which he rents out to his son, Howard on shares. Over 30 years have elapsed since Mr. Miller assumed the duties and responsibilities of married life, the ceremony that united him with Jane Mullen having been performed Nov. 15, 1893. She was born in Pierce County, Wisconsin, June 22, 1870, daughter of Samuel and Mary Jane (Torrence) Mullen, who were early settlers in that county. Her father died in 1881, being survived by his wife, who is still living, being now a resident of River Falls, Wis. Their children were five in number: William of Bellingham, Wash.; James, of Seattle, that state; Margaret, now Mrs. Robert Rea of Fargo, N. D.; Priscilla, wife of William Thompson of Stillwater, Minn., and Jane, wife of William H. Miller. Mr. and Mrs. Miller are the parents of three children, Howard I., Margaret and Grace E. Howard, born Aug. 11, 1894, and now conducting the home farm, as already mentioned, married Ida Mattison, and they have two children, Lloyd M. and Ralph Margaret, born June 16, 1897, resides at home with her parents and for the Α. last four years has done clerical work. Grace E., born Dec. 13, 1903, was graduated from the Menomonie High School and the River Falls Normal School and is a teacher. The family are affiliated religiously with the M. E. Church.

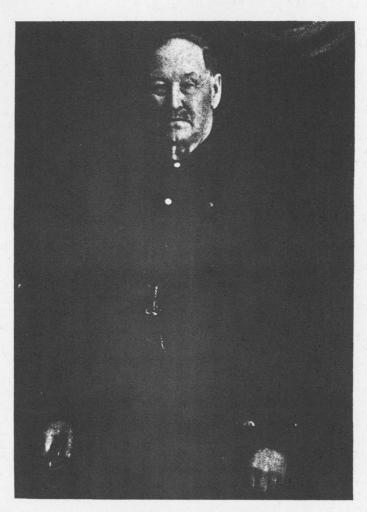

August Miller, Sr., now living retired in the city of Menomonie, whose active career was connected with the two industries that have had the most to do with the building up of Dunn County—lumbering and farming—was born in Germany, Feb. 4, 1854. He acquired a public school education in his native land and afterwards was employed in teaming until he was 19 years old. Then in 1873 he came to the United States to seek his fortune in a land of greater opportunity. The lumber industry was then at the height of its prosperity in the Northwest, and Mr. Miller, locating in Menomonie, Wis., easily found employment with the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company, then, and for several years later, known as Knapp, Stout & Co. For the first year he worked on the Moore farm, owned by the company, but for the next ten years he rafted lumber and worked in the sawmills. He realized. however, that lumbering in this section could not last forever, as the forests were being rapidly felled, and in thinking of a more permanent occupation his mind naturally turned to farming. Many former lumber workers were quitting lumbering and taking up the land made available by the removal of the timber, and though the grubbing and clearing involved hard work, they were gradually building up Mr. Miller followed their example, buying 160 acres of wild land in Section farms. Making a small clearing, he built a board shanty for tem-9, town of Red Cedar. porary shelter and began operations. He had been married July 24, 1879, to Minnie Borchert, who was born in Mecklenberg, Germany, May 8, 1861, and who had come to this country with her parents in 1863, settling in Menomonie. She proved a good wife and helpmate, and together they worked to build up a home. In time the board shanty was replaced by a fine frame house, and commodious barns and other necessary or convenient outbuildings sprang up one after another to testify to their industry and advancing prosperity. At the same time Mr. Miller was increasing his area of cultivated land and was following diversified farming with gratifying results. After he and his wife had lived for about 25 years on that place and reared a good-sized family, he sold it in 1909 to his son, August, Jr., and bought an improved farm of 120 acres in Section 8, town of Red Cedar, on which he carried on general farming until 1923, in which year he retired, renting the farm to his son, George. He and his wife then took up their residence in Menomonie. where he bought the comfortable house they are now occupying at 1103 14th Mr. and Mrs. August Miller, Sr., have been the parents of 11 children, Avenue. namely, August, Jr., Minnie, Ida, Mary, Anna, Lena, Martha, Nettie, Margaret, George and William, of whom the last mentioned is deceased, while August will be found separately mentioned in this volume. In regard to the others the following facts are available. Minnie is now Mrs. Herman Kathlow, residing in Menomonie, and is the mother of two children, Helen and Elinor. Ida, who is the wife of John Hussman of Menomonie, has also two children, Grace and Ruth. Mary, who is Mrs. Herbert Beguhn of the town of Elk Mound, has three children, Herbert and Gilbert (twins) and Marion. Anna, wife of William Dennis of Menomonie, has two children, Edna and William. Lena is Mrs. Fred Sipple of the town of Elk Mound, and has four children, Margaret (deceased), Clarence, Earl and Dorothy. Martha is Mrs. Albert Cook of the town of Spring Brook, Dunn County, and has two children, Levern and Gerald. Nettie, who is Mrs. Sherman Schaffer of the town of Spring Brook, has two children, Marjory and Deloris. Margaret, whose husband is Louis Peckmiller of the town of Menomonie, has a son, Lawrence. George, who married Lulu Beguhn, has two sons, Lloyd and James. The family are members of the German Lutheran Church.

August Miller, Jr., proprietor of Little Elk Creek Farm in Section 8, town of Red Cedar, was born in Menomonie, Wis., Jan. 14, 1880, son of August and Minnie His father was then in the employ of the Knapp, Stout & Co. (Borchert) Miller. Company, but when young August was four years old the family moved onto the tract of land in Section 9, town of Red Cedar, which August Miller, Sr., proceded to develop into a family homestead. Within two or three years afterwards young August began to attend District School No. 4, and his life thereafter for many years was the same as that of most farm youths who remain at home with the old folks. Until 1905 he was engaged in helping his father, and then, being 25 years old and anxious to start in for himself, and the father not being ready to quit work nor to part with the old place, August Miller, Jr., rented the Michael Cramer farm, which he operated for three years, or until 1908. His father then sold him the home farm and for the next seven years he was busily engaged in working the place on which he had spent his youth and early manhood. In 1915 he bought the old Charles Johnson farm, a tract of 120 acres in Section 8, and has since operated the two farms as one, having altogether 240 acres. On the Johnson place he has erected a complete set of new buildings, his residence being a 12-room, modern house, one of the finest rural dwellings to be found in Dunn County. His barn, supplied with the Stevenson equipment, has a surface measurement of $36 \ge 90$ feet, while he has a chicken house of 24 x 30 feet, a good silo, and several other out-buildings. He is successfully following general farming and dairying, keeping grade Holstein cattle. Mr. Miller was married in the city of Menomonie, to Ida Schroeder, who was born in the town of Red Cedar, Dunn County, April 3, 1882, daughter of Charles and Charlotte (Wintler) Schroeder. The Miller family circle has been enlarged by the birth of eight children, as follows: Arnold, July 7, 1903; Elmer, Aug. 24, 1904; Harold, Aug. 20, 1906; Walter, Oct. 4, 1907; Gladys, Aug. 4, 1910; Norman, May 20, 1915; Francis, June 7, 1917, and Charles Galen, born Jan. 23, 1920. Charles Schroeder, the father of Mrs. Miller, was born in Germany, Feb. 28, 1845, and came to the United States when quite young. He was married in Menomonie to Char-lotte Winkler, who was born in Germany, Feb. 14, 1856, and who had also come to America when quite young. After working for Knapp, Stout & Co. for several vears, Mr. Schroeder began farming and in the course of time developed three different farms in the town of Red Cedar. Mrs. Charlotte Schroeder died Oct. 2, 1896, on the farm of William Schroeder in the town of Red Cedar (a half brother of Mrs. August Miller, Jr.). Her husband, surviving her for some 17 years, passed away on March 27, 1904. Their children were: Ida, now Mrs. August Miller, Ir.; Chailes, of the town of Red Cedar; Augusta, now Mrs. Albert Suckow of Cedar Falls; Alvina, who is Mrs. Charles Harnisch of the town of Spring Brook; Theophilus, of the town of Spring Brook; Ernest, of the town of Red Cedar; Charlotte, who is Mrs. Frank Beguhn of Menomonie, and Meda, who is the wife of Robert Cook of Menomonie. In addition to her half-brother, William Schroeder, Mrs. August Miller, Jr., has two half sisters; Anna, who is now Mrs. John Hintz of the town of Red Cedar, and Caroline, who is Mrs. John Gollman of the same town. These half-sisters and the half-brother, William, are the children of Charles and Mary (Heller) Schroeder.

Henry K. Carrington, now retired and living in Menomonie, whose life work has been for the most part concerned with agricultural development, who has been a resident of Dunn County for some 56 years, was born in Atwater, Portage County, Ohio, April 23, 1844, son of Jarvis C. and Margaret (Rcbertson) Carrington. The parents were natives of the village of Poland, in the adjoining county of Mahoning, where they were married Oct. 8, 1838. They settled on a farm at Atwater, which they made their home until 1865, when they came to Wisconsin and settled at Dead Lake Prairie, town of Waterville, Pepin County, where Mr. Carrington passed away Dec. 20, 1890. Mrs. Carrington passed away Dec. 23, 1908, at the home of her son, Charles E., near Park Falls. They had a family of eight children, of whom five are now living, the full list being as follows: Mary J., born Sept. 1, 1840, who died May 1, 1841; Emily, M., born May 18, 1842, who married John Schwartz and is now a widow residing with her son, at Glenwood City, Wis., Henry K., subject of this sketch; Mary A., born March 8, 1846, now Mrs. Charles Richardson of Pepin, Wis.; Melvina, born March 25, 1848, who died May 30, 1905; James O., born Jan. 23, 1850, now residing in the state of Washington; Charles E., Sept. 23, 1853, who lives at Elmwood, Pierce County, Wis.; and Ira, born Oct. 3, 1855, who died Aug. 18, 1860. Henry K. Carrington acquired a limited education in his native village at Atwater, Ohio, and remained at home with his parents until he was 17 years of age. He then worked at farm labor by the month for a year and at the age of 18 went to Alliance, Ohio, to learn the wagon-making trade of his After he had been there one month the business was sold, and he then went uncle. to Marlboro, Ohio, where he found work in a blacksmith's shop, remaining there until January, 1864. He then enlisted in the Tenth Ohio Cavalry for Civil War service and followed the flag as long as the war lasted, being discharged in August, 1865. Then returning to Ohio, he became associated with an uncle in the operation of a large farm in Stark County and was thus occupied for a year, in 1886 coming west to Pepin County, Wisconsin, where he settled on a tract of land which his father had bought for him with money that he had sent home while in the army. There he remained 18 months, putting up a few buildings and making general improvements, at the end of which time he sold that place and bought a piece of land at Fall City, Dunn County. That also he sold soon after, taking a homestead of 160 acres, in the town of Spring Brook, which he proved up, residing on it for 19 years. He then moved to another farm one mile north of Fall City on which he resided until After that he lived in the village of Fall City for about six months. 1906. In 1907 he came to Menomonie and bought a piece of property of two acres on South Broadway, where he made his home until the fall of 1923, since which time he has resided with his son, William H. Mr. Carrington was married Nov. 29, 1869, in the town of Spring Brook, Dunn County, to Mrs. Harriet Rogers, who maiden name was Harriet Wiggins, and whose parents were Elijah and Matilda Wiggins. It is worthy of note that Mrs. Carrington taught the first term of school in the Fall City District School No. 2; she was then Harriet Wiggins. After a married life of 43 years she died May 15, 1912. The fruit of this union was two children: William H., who was born April 29, 1872, at Falls City, Dunn County, Wis., and Allen who died in infancy.

William H. Carrington, proprietor of a profitable tonsorial business in Menomonie, was born, as mentioned in the preceding article, at Falls City, Dunn County, on April 29, 1872. He was educated in the district school and remained at home with his parents, Henry K. and Harriet (Wiggins) Carrington, until 1892, when he came to Menomonie and began to learn the barber's trade. In September, that year, he went to St. Paul, Minn., where he followed his trade for eleven years, at the end of that time returning to Menomonie. For the past 20 years he has been proprietor of a barber shop, located in the First National Bank Building, and he is popular with his many customers. He was married in St. Paul, Jan. 15, 1893, to Laura M. Furbur, who was born in the town of Sherman, Dunn County, Sept. 8, 1874, daughter of Roger and Mary Ann (Adams) Furbur. Her parents were natives of England, the father coming to America when 17 years of age and the mother when five years old. After their marriage they settled first in Adams County, Wis., coming to Dunn County in the late 50's as pioneers of the town of Sherman. The trip from Adams County was made with ox teams, and the tract of land on which they settled being in the midst of the dense forest, they blazed a trail as they advanced, so that they might be able to find their way back again. In time they developed a fine farm there, though the early years were years of hardship and pri-vation. There Mr. and Mrs. Roger Furbur spent many years of their lives. In 1893, they retired to Menomonie, where the last years of their lives were spent, Mr. Furbur dying March 20, 1904 and Mrs. Furbur, June 1, 1913. They had a family of 11 children, of whom eight are now living, as follows: Jennie, who married Herman Ranney and is now a widow residing in Menomonie; Belle, wife of Carl Ranney of Menomonie; John, residing at Starkweather, N. D.; Clara D., who is Mrs. Jacob Douglass of Superior, Wis.; George, of Albert Lea, Minn.; Laura, now Mrs. William H. Carrington of Menomonie; Edward, of Hampton, N. D.; and Mattie, wife of Hans Swenby of Menomonie. Mr. and Mrs. William H. Carrington are the parents of two children, Ethel H. and Roger. Ethel H., born Oct. 22, 1893, is now Mrs. J. S. Farmer of Duluth and has two children, Harriet L. and William H. Roger, born Nov. 2, 1899, married Margaret Deering, lives in De-troit, Mich., and has one child, Elizabeth Jean. The pioneer element is strongly marked in the Carrington and Furber families and is responsible for a solid structure of character that stands for good citizenship and produces good personal records.

Edward C. Rosseter, a representative farmer of the town of Red Cedar, was born in Olmsted County, Minnesota, Oct. 5, 1869, son of Edison and Melissa (Edes) Rosseter. The father was a native of New York State who in early manhood came west to Minnesota, where he married Melissa Edes. Coming to Dunn County, Wis., they located on a farm west of Downsville, where Mrs. Rosseter died in 1871, leaving him with four small children, whom he reared and educated. He continued to reside on and cultivate his farm until his death in 1909. The children above mentioned were: Nellie, now Mrs. Walter Schaffer of the town of Dunn; Edward C., of the town of Red Cedar; Oscar, residing in North Menomonie; and Delbert, of California. Edward C. Rosseter acquired his education in the district school and soon became industrially active on his father's farm, where he gained a practical knowledge of agriculture. As a young man he also had experience in the lumber business, working in the woods and in the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company's sawmill at Downsville until the mill was shut down in 1900. After that he owned and operated three different farms, selling each of them in succession. In 1910 he came to the town of Red Cedar and bought the old Frank Miller farm, containing 240 acres, in Sections 10 and 3, town of Red Cedar, cn which he made some minor improvements, operating it until 1921. He then turned the farm over to his son, Charles, and moved to Menomonie, where he resided for two years, during which time he served as road overseer. In March, 1923, he accepted the position of manager of the Rusk Cooperative Store in Rusk village and conducted it for one year. Since March, 1924, he has made his home on the farm, but no longer does active work. He is a stockholder in both the Rusk Cooperative Creamery and For eight years he served his town on the board of supervisors and for in the store. some years was a school director. As a citizen he has always stood high and he and his family are well regarded from the social standpoint. Edward C. Rosseter was married in Louisville, this county, on April 7, 1891, to Emma Billings, who was born in Dunn County, Oct. 6, 1869, daughter of Charles and Maggie (Hannigon) Billings, both her parents being now deceased. The children of this union are Bernice, Bernam, Rcbert, Margaret, Charles, Leona, Nellie, Dorothy, James and Carrie, whose further record is as follows. Bernice, born Jan. 8, 1892, is now Mrs. Otto Sheriff of Duluth and has two children, Maude and Ralph. Bernam, born June 19, 1893, is residing on the home farm. Robert, born Jan. 12, 1895, married Sarah Cook and resides in the town of Red Cedar. He has two children, Hazel and Ethel. Leona, born Aug. 23, 1896, is now a teacher in Evanston, Ill. Charles, born April 3, 1898, is, as already mentioned, operating the home farm. Margaret, born July 6, 1899, is the wife of Lou Boles of Menomonie and has two children, Harry and Edison. Carrie, born April 4, 1902, is the wife of Alvin Leach and has one son, Nellie, born Feb. 14, 1904, is a teacher in Dunn County, and James, Gavlen. born Sept. 7, 1907, is attending high school in Menomonie.

Detlof J. Danielson, a well known representative of the farming industry in the town of Colfax, is, like many other successful farmers of the Northwest, a native of Norway, having been in Skogen, that country, May 8, 1859, son of Daniel Erickson and Paulina (Olson) Erickson. It was in 1880 that the family came to the United States to build a new home, settling first at Deer Park, St. Croix County, Wis., whence they later moved to Stoughton, Dane County. From there they came to Dunn County in 1899, settling on 160 acres of improved land in the town of Colfax. There Daniel Erickson died on Jan. 2, 1915, and his wife on March 31, 1891, at Stoughton, Wis. They had a family of eight children, of whom seven are now living, namely, Signal, Ole, Detlof J., Andrew, Peter, John H. and Marie. Detlof I. Danielson was reared and educated in Norway, and after leaving school became connected with the farming and fishing industries. In 1880, at the age of 21 years, he accompanied his parents to America and in 1899 to Dunn County. Here he bought a farm of 160 acres in Section 3, town of Colfax, on which stood a small house and log barn. From that beginning he has advanced steadily through hard work, clearing and cultivating his land and erecting better buildings. He now has a good frame house of ten rooms, equipped with furnace, hot and cold running water His barn is a fine structure of 32 x 64 feet and his silo measures 14 x 36 and bath. Among his other buildings are a machine shed, granary and tobacco barn. feet. Mr. Danielson was the first man to raise tobacco in Dunn County and he has since made a speciality of it, also doing general farming and dairying. He has a good herd of grade Holstein cattle, with a pure bred sire at the head, and he also raises Poland-China hogs. Mr. Danielson was married at Stoughton, Wis., Oct. 5, 1881, to Oleana Olson, who was born at Finsness, Norway, May 28, 1859, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Olson, her parents being early settlers in that locality. After a married life of over 38 years Mrs. Danielson died July 14, 1920. They were the parents of six children, Pauline I., Andrew D., Arthur E., Emil O., Dora O. and Tingka S., of whom Emil O., the fourth child, born Feb. 12, 1888, died June 30, 1923. The other children are all living. Pauline I., who was born Dec. 19, 1882, is the wife of Sewell Kongsgaard of Helena, Mont. and the mother of two children, Sewell,

DETLOF J. DANIELSON AND FAMILY

Jr. and Paul. Andrew D., born March 14, 1884, is foreman in a tobacco warehouse at Independence, Wis. He married Emma Bjornson and has three children, Erling, Dalmer and Thelma. Arthur E., born April 17, 1886, who is a farmer in the town of Colfax, married Stina Sampson and has two children, Agnes and Selmer. Dora O., born Feb. 4, 1891, is keeping house for her father. Tingka S., born Aug. 21, 1893, is now Mrs. Melvin Christianson of Aberdeen, Wash. The Danielson family are members of the Norwegian Lutheran Church and are representative of a high class of citizenship.

Fred G. Morgan, a prominent farmer of the town of Lucas, proprietor of Idle Wild Farm in Section 27, was born in Sheboygan County, Wis., June 13, 1872, son of Thomas and Margaret (Cummings) Morgan. The house in which he was born stood on land that is now included within the city of Sheboygan. Thomas Morgan, the father, was born Aug. 30, 1830, in an Irish port, while his parents were enroute to Canada. In 1849 he came from the Dominion to the United States, locating in Oakfield, Fond du Lac County, Wis., where he was married on March 3, 1850, to Margaret Cummings. On Sept. 16, 1861, he enlisted for service in the Civil War in the First Wisconsin Infantry. This regiment being attached to the Army of the Cumberland, Mr. Morgan followed the fortunes of that army, the movements of which were chiefly in Tennessee and Georgia, and which involved some sharp battles. He was honorably discharged Oct. 14, 1864, and after the close of the war returned to Sheboygan, Wis., where for several years he operated a foundry. 1875 he came to Dunn County, and with Knute Hubbard established the Morgan & Hubbard hub and spoke factory at Knapp, which they carried on together for several years, together with a general store and blacksmith shop. Then in 1878 Mr. Morgan disposed of his interests there, taking in part payment 240 acres of wild land in the town of Lucas. Of this he sold all but 80 acres in Section 23, where he developed a farm that is now owned by Osmond Cockeram, Jr. In 1902 he moved to Menomonie, where he spent the short time that still remained to him, passing away on Jan. 12, 1904. His wife, who survived him, subsequently resided with her children until she too passed away, in April, 1918. Their children, 11 in number, were: William and Levi, both deceased; Harry, of Spooner, Wis.; Emma, deceased; Charles, in the state of Washington; Hattie, who is Mrs. William Mabee of Glasgow, Mont.; Nettie, now Mrs. Anton Brehm of the town of Lucas; Fred G., subject of this sketch; Thomas, now of San Francisco, Calif.; and Eddy and Teddy, who are deceased. Fred G. Morgan was reared and attended school in the town of Lucas and remained at home with his parents until reaching the age of 20 years. In 1896 he purchased 40 acre of land in Section 27, town of Lucas, where he has built up and developed a fine farm. His main industry is dairying and he has a fine herd of pure bred Jerseys, now numbering 22 head. He is a good representative citizen of his town and during the war served as chairman of the council of defense. He is a stockholder in the new Hudson Road Creamery. Mr. Morgan was married Aug. 2, 1893, in Mantorville, Minn., to Blanche Foster, who was born in the town of Lucas, Dunn County, Wis., April 3, 1872, daughter of Andrew and Matilda (Anderson) Foster, the parents being natives of New York State. Andrew Foster came west to Dunn County in 1865, and Matilda Anderson in 1867, she teaching school until they were married in 1871. Then they took a homestead in section 28, town of Lucas, where they resided until Mr. Foster's death on June 30, 1907. Mrs. Foster passed away at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Fred G. Morgan, on April 18, 1917. The children in the Foster family were: Blanche, wife of Fred G. Morgan; Bertha, who is Mrs. Frank Brown of Dodge Center, Minn.; Jessie, now Mrs. Ray Chaffee of the town of Lucas; Maggie, wife of Alfred Cockeram of Cadilac, Mich., and Roy, who is now operating the old Foster farm in the town of Lucas. To Mr. and Mrs. Fred G. Morgan three children have been born: Charlotte, who is now Mrs. Anthony Bailey of Dunn County; Marjory, who is Mrs. Ira C. Graff of the town of Lucas; and Freddie, who is deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Morgan also have an adopted son, Chester, who resides with them.

Alexander McPherson, a well known resident of the village of Wheeler, where for some years he has lived retired from active work, was an early settler in the town of Hay River, and took part in its agricultural development. He was bern in Glengary County, Ontario, Canada, Aug. 15, 1855, son of Duncan and Charlotte (McMullen) McPherson, the father being a native of Scotland and the mother of Canada, in which latter country they both died. Alexander, the subject of this sketch, attended public school in Canada and resided with his parents until he had attained his majority. He then crossed over into the States, and coming to Wisconsin, located in the town of Hay River, Dunn County, where he had a brother, D. D. McPherson, who had preceded him here and was operating a mill. Alexander worked in the woods at logging, as almost every able-bodied man and youth did in those days for a while after his arrival in this section. Thoughts of a homestead were, however, already in his mind, and as soon as he was ready he bought a tract of 100 acres, to which he later added 40 more. This property, when developed as he developed it, made a fine farm, one of the prominent features of which was the neat and substantial set cf buildings. There Mr. McPherson spent his years in general farming until 1913, when he sold the place to his son-in-law, Alfred Olson and took up his residence in Wheeler, building here a semi-bungalow of cementblock construction, which he and his wife now occupy. During 25 years of the time that he was on the farm he was also associated with his brother in the feed mill at Lochiel, which they later remodeled into a feed and grist mill. Mr. McPherson was married July 4, 1885, to Minnie Hays, who was born in Jefferson County, Wis., Sept. 20, 1862, daughter of Ansel and Hannah (Terwilliger) Hays. Her ancestors, on at least one side, came to this country from Europe many years ago and some of them took part in most of this country's wars; one being a soldier in the War of the Revolution, another in the War of 1812-15, and her father in the Civil War. The last mentioned, Ansel Hays, was born in Tonawanda, N. Y., Aug. 8, 1832. In Iowa, in 1866, his wife Hannah died, and in 1868 he came to Dunn Ccunty, Wisconsin. settling in the town of Tiffany, where he built a sawmill, and for many years there after was engaged in the lumber business. When that declined so as to be no longer profitable in this section, he transformed the mill into a grist mill. One of the pioneer settlers of the county, he witnessed its development from a wild region of timber land into one of the highly civilized sections of the state, with busy and prosperous towns and villages, with good roads, electric lights, telephones, automobiles, and other things, the possibility of which he would have refused to believe in 56 years ago when he came here and started to carve out his fortune. He died June 9, 1921, widely known and respected. His daughter, Mrs. Minnie McPherson, has lived in Dunn County since she was six years old, and before her marriage was a proficient teacher. With the passing years four children came to enlarge the McPherson family circle and grow up around the hearthstone, all of whom are now living and have homes of their own. They are as follows: Anna, born Aug. 22, 1886, who is now Mrs. Theodore Johnson of Wheeler; Murzella, born Aug. 30, 1888, who is Mrs. Alfred Olson of the town of Hay River; Arthur, born March 28, 1890, who married Elsa Stracker, and is now telegraph operator on the "Soo" road at Auburndale, Wis.; and Marjorie, who is now Mrs. Carl Strope of Stevens Point, The members of the McPherson family are affiliated religiously with the Wis. Evangelical Church.

Ole Danielson, a well known farmer and tobacco raiser of the town of Tainter, was born in the northern part of Norway, within the arctic circle, July 16, 1856, son of Daniel Erickson and his wife Pauline Erickson, the father being a fisherman by occupation. In 1880 the family came to the United States, seeking better opportunities for advancement. Coming west as far as Baldwin, St. Croix County, Wis., they went on from there to Deer Park in the same country, and from the latter place to Stoughton in Dane County. In the last mentioned place Ole bought a farm, which he subsequently operated for 20 years, and during that period he was married March 9, 1896, to Inga Anderson, daughter of Anders P. and Hannah Anderson, natives of Norway who settled in this state and are both now living at Colfax. At the end of the 20 year period mentioned the family, including Mr. Danielson's father, went to southern Texas, in which state they spent three years growing cotton. At the end of that time they all returned to Stoughton, Wis., where they spent a year and a half more, coming from there to Dunn County. Here the father died Jan. 2, 1915, the mother having died at Stoughton, March 31, 1891. They had had eight children, six sons and two daughters, those now living being, Signal, Ole, Detlof J., Andrew, Peter, John H. and Marie. Signal is now Mrs. Thomas Orvold of Chippewa Falls. Marie lives with her brother, John H., in the town of Grant, Dunn County. While still residing in Stoughton Ole Danielson had made a trip to Dunn County and bought 120 acres of land in Section 10, town of Tainter, of which tract a few acres had been broken, the rest being wild land, and without buildings. On settling in this county he built a frame house, barn and tobacco shed on his place, and has since put up other buildings for the purpose of general farming and dairying, keeping a herd of grade Holstein cattle, and milking 15 cows; he also makes a specialty of tobacco raising. He has developed his farm to a considerable extent and it is now in first class condition. He and his wife are the parents of two children, both sons: LeRoy, who conducts a general store at Norton, this county; and Oluf, who is attending Colfax High School. LeRoy married Gudrun Lindberg and he and his wife have three children, Dennis, Reuben and Donald.

William H. McIvor, a successful farmer, who is the present assessor of the town of Dunn, was born in Manitowoc County, Wisconsin, April 26, 1859, son of James and Melissa (Edes) McIvor. The father was a native of Canada and the mother The latter was twice married, her second husband of the state of New York. being E. Rossiter, with whom she settled in Dunn County in 1872, buying 40 acres of land in Section 4, town of Dunn. William H. was then 13 years old and his schooling was finished here. In the fall of 1876 he went to work for the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company in their mill at Downsville and he remained in their employ for 20 years. At the end of that time he turned his attention to farming, as many former lumber workers were doing, and bought 80 acres of wild land in Section 33, town of Dunn, which by 1912 he had developed into a good farm. Then he sold it and moved to St. Croix County, near Hudson, where he bought a farm that he operated for five years. He then sold that and returing to Dunn County, bought his present farm of 130 acres in Section 4, town of Dunn, an improved piece of property known as the Fayerweather Farm, and finely situated two and a half miles west of Downsville. He has remodeled and painted the house, installed waterworks on the place and made a number of other improvements, including a silo of 12 x 30 feet, built in 1924. He is now following dairy farming, having a herd of 21 Holstein During the early period of his active career in this town Mr. McIvor served cows. 11 years on the Downsville school board. In 1922 he was elected assessor of the town of Dunn, being reelected to that office in 1923 and 1924 and still serving in it. He was reared in the Universalist faith and his fraternal society affiliations are with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. Mr. McIvor was married Oct. 7, 1883, to Matilda Shiveley, who was born in Downsville, Dunn County, Wis., Feb. 14, 1861, daughter of John and Anna Shiveley, who were natives of Switzerland and pioneers of the town of Dunn. Mr. and Mrs. McIvor have been the parents of four children, all now living, namely, Guy, Lloyd, Noble and Marshall. Guy, born July 5, 1889, has a military record in the war with Germany. He entered the army at Seattle, Wash.; was sent to the camp at Waco, Texas for, training, and while there was promoted on March 12, 1918, to the rank of Sergeant in the 28th Balloon Company of the Regular army. He was later promoted in rank, and at camp in Virginia had charge of transportation trucks until discharged. Lloyd, born Oct. 16, 1891, was also in the army and went overseas. He entered it July 23, 1918, and became a member of Company D, 334th Regiment, 86th Division; trained at Camp Grant, Ill.; went overseas September 8, being landed at Liverpool, England. He was there transferred to Company L, 148th Regiment, 37th Division, and was sent to the Ypres-Lys front, Belgium, and was there until Nov. 11, 1918, when the armistice was signed and war ended. He reached Philadelphia on his return home in April, 1919, and was discharged at Camp Custer, Mich., in April, 1919. He is now associated with his father in conducting the home farm. Noble, born July 17, 1899, is now a student at the Dunn County Agricultural School. Marshall, born March 28, 1902, is at home.

J. William Meyer, proprietor of Fairview Stock Farm in Sections 22 and 27, town of Elk Mound, which is the product of 23 years' hard work on the part of Mr. Meyer and a credit to his creative genius, was born in the town of Eagle Point (now Tilden), Chippewa County, Wis., April 13, 1869, son of Ludvig and Anna Catherine (Todter) Meyer. The parents were among the considerable number of immigrants who came to this country from Germany, in 1848, the year of the unsuccessful revolution, though there is nothing to show that their emigration from their native land partook of the nature of a flight. The struggle for a greater degree of liberty having been suppressed, they were doubtless seeking a land of wider opportunity with less restraint upon the individual and with fewer taxes to pay. When they embarked on board the vessel bound for the United States they were as yet single, but on the vessel they were married and as man and wife they landed. Evidently they had small means, for on coming west to Washington County, Wisconsin, they settled on 40 acres of timber land, made a clearing, built a log cabin, and remained there for ten years, moving in 1858 to the town of Sigel, Chippewa County. But soon they went to Chippewa Falls, where they spent a year, and from there moved to the town of Eagle Point (now Tilden), where Mr. Meyer bought 140 acres of wild land and began the development of a new farm, in time putting up excellent buildings and clearing all but 40 acres of the land. On March 27, 1896, he sustained a severe bereavement in the death of his wife, who had proved a loving companion and effective helpmate. He continued, however, to live on the farm for 19 years longer, or until his own death on March 28, 1915. They had been the parents of nine children, Herman, Louis, Anna, Otto, Gustave, Adolph, Caroline, Michael and J. William, all of whom are now living except Gustave. J. William Meyer acquired a public school education in what is now the town of Tilden and resided there until Then coming to Dunn County, he bought an 80-acres farm in Section 25, 1898. town of Elk Mound, which he operated for three years. It was at the end of that time that he bought his present farm of 160 acres in Sections 22 and 27. There was an old house and a poor set of buildings on it and Mr. Meyer started with them, making his improvements gradually. From time to time he would tear down one of the old buildings and put up a new one of more modern type. In 1912 he erected his present fine residence of nine rooms and bath, installed with a hot water heating plant and lighted by electricity. Two fine porches add to the architectural beauty of the front of the house, one for each story. In 1901 Mr. Meyer built a full basement barn of 34×64 feet in ground plan, with an "L" attachment to serve the purpose of a horse barn. This barn has a full patent equipment of stanchions, drinkingcups, litter carriers, etc., has cement floors and is electrically lighted. The year 1910 saw the erection of a cement block silo and among Mr. Meyer's other substantial buildings are a granary, machine shed and chicken and hog houses, a garage and a pump and milk house. On the farm he has two drilled wells. His Phelps individual electric light plant provides abundant illumination for all the buildings and vard, and also the power to operate his milking-machine and pump. He carries on general farming and dairying, keeping grade and full blooded Holstein cattle, with a pure bred sire; also Poland-China hogs. He still owns the 80 acres he first brught in Section 25, and also has 15 acres of woodland in Section 29 and 20 acres of woodland in Section 10. One of the organizers of the creamery, he served on its board of directors for 17 years and is still a stockholder, being also a stockholder in the Bank of Elk Mound. For many years he has been one of the prominent citizens of his town, for seven years serving as supervisor, and for four years being chairman of the town board and a member of the county board. Mr. Meyer was married Dec. 29, 1895, to Mary Scheibe of Elk Mound, who was born in Germany, Sept. 18, 1868, and came to this country with her parents when only six months old. Six children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Meyer, namely, Irene, Agnes, Reual, Lawrence, Wilbert and Vernon. Irene, is now Mrs. Herbert Paff, her husband being a farmer of Chippewa County; she has one child, Robert. Agnes, is the wife of William Hart, a farmer of Chippewa County, and has two children, Merlin and James. Mr. Meyer and family are members of the Evangelical Church in Elk Mound village, of which he is a trustee.

HISTORY OF DUNN COUNTY

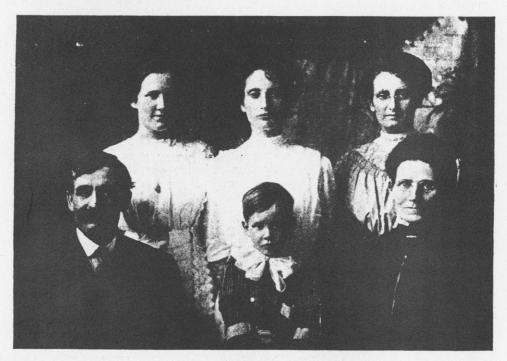

i de al

Henry F. Miller, whose death on Jan. 20, 1925, from an accidental and unexpected cause, came as a shock to his relatives, friends, and the community at large, and was an event deeply deplored by all, was a retired farmer who had a highly creditable record as a county official and whose personal character as a man and citizen was such as to command the respect and esteem of all who knew him. Mr. Miller was born in Dodge County, Wisconsin, May 6, 1855, son of William and Henrietta (Melcher) Miller. The parents were natives of Germany who were married in Dodge County, this state, and who settled on a homestead or tract of wild land there, putting up a house of slit logs, in the building of which the only expense incurred was that of 37 cents for a window frame. Their nearest trading point at that time was Watertown, 18 miles away. On that property they remained until 1877, in which year they came to Dunn County, buying a farm which lay partly in the southwestern part of this county and partly in Pierce County, it being divided by the county line. The residence stood in Pierce County. There Mr. and Mrs. William Miller resided until the former's death in 1891. After that event Mrs. Miller sold the farm and thereafter for the most part lived with her children until she, herself, passed away at Stanley, Chippewa County, in 1912. They were the parents of six children, all sons, namely: Henry F., Frank, Herman, Otto, Julius and Fred. Of these Frank is now residing in Stanley, Wis., Herman in Cottage Grove, Ore., Otto in Tomahawk, Wis., Julius in Chippewa Falls and Fred in Plum City, Pierce County, Wis. Henry F. Miller was graduated from the public schools of Dodge County and remained on the home farm until 18 years old. He then went to Clark County, where he was engaged one winter in logging. In 1875 he came to Dunn County and brught 80 acres of timber land in the town of Eau There he built a house and cleared some of the land. It was about that Galle. time that the village of Cumberland, Barron County, was being started, and young Miller, not wanting to overlook any chances, went there and remained about a year. By the end of that time, not having seen any chance to make a rapid fortune in Cumberland, he returned to Dunn County and bought 120 acres of land in Sections 30 and 31, town of Weston, which was the first step in the development of the now well known Clover Leaf Guernsey Farm. The place was originally railroad land and was first settled on by Mr. Miller's father-in-law, Andrew Howison. It had a few improvements and Mr. Miller proceded to make others and to clear the land. He began the development of a herd of Guernseys, buying a pure bred sire, and it was not long before his farm began to be talked about. These operations he continued for 25 years, during which period he was one of the busiest men in the county. In 1884 he built a large frame residence and later a large dairy barn, 36 x 120 feet in ground plan, from time to time putting up other buildings as they were needed. After remaining on this place until 1893 Mr. Miller was elected to the office of sheriff and took up his residence in Menomonie. Two years later, at the expiration of his term of office, he went back to the farm, where he again made his home, remaining two years. At the end of that time he was appointed under-sheriff and it was again necessary for him to move to Menomonie. When his two years' term in the subordinate office was ended he was again elected sheriff, which prolonged his service in political office for another two years. At the end of that time he engaged in the live stock business, in which he continued for six years, after which he returned to his dairy farm, where he spent the remaining years of his life. He added another tract of 100 acres to it, converting it into a farm of 220 acres, and remodeled the house so as to make a double house of it, in one part of which he and his wife resided during the summer months, their winter residence being with their daughter, Mrs. D. W. Chamberlain at No. 1312 Main Street, Menomonie. The farm he rented out. The account of Mr. Miller's death was contained in the Dunn County News as follows: "Bunted by a bull, which he was attempting to lead into the barn, Henry Miller, aged 69, died at about 6'clock Tuesday evening, from an internal hemorhage on his farm in the town of Weston, 12 miles from Menomonie. Mr. Miller was not bruised by the blow which struck him just below the ribs and his body was uninjured, according to Dr. F. E. Butler, who arrived shortly before he died. The accident happened at about five o'clock, when, it is believed, Mr.

Miller attempted to attach a staff to the animal's nose ring, preparatory to leading him into the barn. Apparantly the animal was not enraged, as he did not follow up his attack after he had struck Mr. Miller with his horn. No one witnessed the accident. The sisters of Mrs. Teigen, the farm tenant's wife, first noticed that Mr. Miller was suffering when they saw him sitting on a sleigh in the yard. They persuaded him to retire to the house, where he sank into unconsciousness. He did not regain his senses and the details of the accident were not learned." The funeral was conducted Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the Congregational Church by the Rev. A. E. Westenberg. Mr. Miller was chairman of his town board for many years, during one period for nine consecutive years, and for several shorter periods, by virtue of that office being at the same time a member of the county board. He also served some years as assessor of his town, was highway commissioner of his district for two years under the present laws, and served on the school board of his district both as director and treasurer. He had been more or less interested in several business enterprises aside from his farm, as for five years he was a director of the Dunn County Farmers Mutual Insurance Company, and was a stockholder in the Downsville creamery and a director in the Downsville Telephone Company, both of which he helped to organize. He had also rendered service as a trustee of the Dunn County Normal School and as trustee of the Dunn County Agricul-When Congress enacted the conscript or draft act, after this country tural Society. had entered into the World War, President Wilson appointed Mr. Miller a member of the Dunn County Selective Service Board, in which capacity he served part of the time as chairman of the board, without compensation, until honorably dis-He had also performed public service in city office. Thus, as a town, county, or city official, his name had become a household word and he had come into personal contact with practically all the leading men in Dunn County. Mr. Miller was married Sept. 23, 1879, to Capitola Howison, who was born in Canada, June 5, 1859, and whose parents were early settlers in Dunn County. Of this union three children were born, Clara, Elmer E. and Mildred. Clara, who married D. W. Chamberlain and is now a widow, resides in Menomonie, as already mentioned. She has five children, Dorothy, Daniel, Helen, Robert and George. Elmer E., now in Ironwood, Mich., is a director of manual training in the high school there. He married Blanche Farquaharson and they have two children, Dorothy and Elizabeth. Mildred is now Mrs. Edward A. Gibson of Menomonie. When Menomonie got city mail delivery it was Mr. Miller and his son who perfected the plans for the numbering of the residences. He was a member of the Old Settlers' Association, to which Mrs. The family is one of high social standing. Miller also belongs.

C. H. Mau, manager of the D. E. Kiser Lumber Co.'s yards and office at Elk Mound, was born at Manistee, Mich., Nov. 9, 1864, son of Henry and Augusta (Mueller) Mau. The father was born on the Isle of Feman, off the German coast, and the mother in Saxony, Germany. They were married, however, in the United States and settled at Manistee, Mich., where Henry Mau conducted a hotel and general In 1870 they moved to Milwaukee, where for some years he was engaged store. in mercantile business. Mrs. Augusta Mau died in 1897, and Mr. Mau spent his latter years with his children, dying in 1902. C. H. Mau acquired a public school education in Milwaukee, and then learned the wagon-maker's trade, which he followed for four years at Batavia, Wis. He then learned the trade of carpenter and builder, at which he spent a longer period of his life-about 23 years-working in Milwaukee and in Washington County, Wisconsin. It was in 1902 that he came to Elk Mound, Dunn County, and engaged in business as a contractor and builder, and for three years he was thus engaged. On April 23, 1905, he once more changed his occupation, becoming local manager for the Badger State Lumber Co., a position that he held for six years, at the end of which time he accepted his present position as manager of the D. E. Kiser Lumber Co., of which concern he is also a stockholder and secretary. This company handles all kinds of lumber, besides building . • material and coal; conducting a retail business. Mr. Mau is also secretary-treasurer of the Independent Lumber Co., having yards at Brill and Mikana in Barron County. He has taken an active part in the community affairs of Elk Mound, having served as president of the village board, and several terms as village trustee and proving himself a live factor in general advancement work. He is fraternally affiliated with Menomonie Lodge No. 164, F. & A. M., and Menomonie Chapter No. 53, R. A. M., also with the local camp of Modern Woodmen of America. On June 26, 1891, Mr. Mau was united in marriage with Alma Hausler of Boltonville, Wis., and he and his wife are the parents of three children: Lillian, born Feb. 5, 1895, now Mrs. Roy McDonald, residing on Federal Highway No. 25, town of Dunn; Chester W., born Dec. 19, 1904, who was graduated from the Eau Claire State Normal School with the class of 1924 and is now teaching; and Eileen M., born Aug. 10, 1914, who is a pupil in the Elk Mound public school.

Chauncy Dean, a representative of the agricultural interests of the town of Grant, who has been farming for himself for more than 40 years, was born at Oxford, Adams County, Wis., Sept. 17, 1860, son of Lafayette and Amelia (Buell) Dean. The parents, natives of New York State, the father born Nov. 29, 1836, settled in Adams County, Wisconsin, at an early day, probably a few years before the out-break of the Civil War. There they remained engaged in farming until June, 1862, when they came to Dunn County, taking a homestead consisting of 160 acres of wild land in Sections 5, town of Grant, and 32, town of Sand Creek. But owning to the war and other causes, times were so hard that Lafayette Dean found it impossible to make a living. Possibly he might have found employment at lumbering, but he preferred instead to enlist for a soldier, which he did in the same year, 1862, in a regiment of Wisconsin infantry. He took part in a number of battles and skirmishes and remained in the army until he was wounded, when he was discharged for disability and returned home. His family in the meanwhile had lived on his He now set to work to clear up his farm, breaking it with a team of six oxen, pav. and he was kept busy improving it for many years. Then he moved to Hay River, where he died on May 24, 1909. His wife, Mrs. Amelia Dean, is still living in Hay River. They had a family of 11 children, of whom four are now living: Charles. a farmer in the town of Sand Creek; Chauncy, of the town of Grant; Carrie, wife of Joseph Baker, residing near Seattle, Wash., and Lamont, of the town of Hay River, Dunn County, Wis. Chauncy Dean was two years old when he came with his parents to Dunn County. He grew up on the farm, attending school and helping his father to clear and break the land. After remaining at home until he was 21 years old, he began farming for himself on a tract of wild land which constituted the homestead of his grandmother and is the farm he now owns and operates, located in Section 5, town of Grant, except that he has added to it until it now contains 200 acres, 110 of which he has under the plow. Among his important improvements he has built a frame house of 11 rooms, also a barn and other buildings. As a general farmer and dairyman, he keeps a variety of stock, including 22 head of grade Holstein cattle, a herd of Duroc-Jersey hogs, and of Shropshire sheep. Mr. Dean is one of the prominent citizens of his town, which he served for 25 years as a member of the board of supervisors, and he has been for 15 years a member of the school board of his district, in both capacities showing a good knowledge of local requirements. That he has been a public official for so long is evidence that his fellow citizens have confidence in his judgment and honesty. On May 10, 1885, Chauncy Dean was married in the town of Grant, to Maggie McCarty, whose parents, natives of Ireland, now deceased, were early settlers in the town of Sand Creek, this county. Of this marriage four children have been born: Florence, wife of Arnold Krause of Eau Claire; Ella, wife of Clyde Curtis of Eau Claire and the mother of two children, Dean Curtis and Vivian; Carrie, who is Mrs. Charles Christianson of Eau Claire and the mother of one child, Shirley; and Norman, residing on the home farm with his parents.

Ole Maukstad, now deceased, but who for many years was a well known and respected citizen of the town of Grant, where he successfully carried on agricultural activities, was born in Norway, May 10, 1858, son of Ole and Berit Maukstad.

Reared in his native land, he worked on his parents' farm until he came to the United States in 1882, settling at once in Dunn County, Wisconsin. Here he began farming on his own account, buying 240 acres of wild land, without improvements, in Sections 31 and 32, town of Grant. During his agricultural career of some 27 years on the place, he cleared a considerable part of it and erected the necessary buildings, carrying on general farming until his death on April 2, 1909. At the present time 130 acres of the land are under cultivation. Mr. Maukstad was married Feb. 23, 1893, to Marie Gunderson, daughter of Gunder Olson and his wife Anne, natives of Norway who came to the United States and settled in Dunn County, Wisconsin, in 1869. They are still living, though now well advanced in years, Mr. Olson being 90 years old and Mrs. Olson 85. They had nine children, four of whom are now living, namely, Sed, John, Bertha and Marie. Bertha is the wife of Pater Maukstad a farmer in the town of Grant. To Mr. and Mrs. Ole Maukstad three children were born: Olga, now Mrs. Magnus Fruvog; Oliver, who is helping his mother to carry on the home farm; and George, who is a farmer in the town of Grant. Since her husband's death, Mrs. Maukstad has erected a modern frame house of nine rooms, installed with furnace heat and hot and cold water. She has also running water in the barn. General farming and dairying are carried on, Mrs. Maukstad keeping a herd of 20 head of Durham and Guernsey grade cattle. She is a member of the United Lutheran Church.

Magnus Fruvog, an active and successful farmer in the town of Grant, was born in Norway, in 1892, son of Fred and Margaret Fruvog, the parents being natives of that country, where the father obtained a living as a sailor and fisherman, also at times working as a carpenter. The family came to the United States in 1892, locating in Crookston, Minn., where he followed the carpenter's trade, and he also followed that trade in St. Paul for a while. In 1894 he came to Colfax, Dunn County, did carpenter work for a while, and then bought a farm in the town of Colfax, which he operated until 1907. Then selling the farm, he moved to the village of Colfax, where he died in 1921, being survived by his wife, who is still living. Their children were: Martin, Magnus, Palmer, Herman, Fritz, William, Olga, Hilda and Ella. Of these, Hilda is the wife of Lawrence Entzminger. Herman, who was inducted into the United States' service early in 1918, and was a member of the 136th Machine Gun Battalion, went to France and was killed in action in Belgium. William also is deceased. Magnus Fruvog was married in 1915, to Olga Maukstad, daughter of Ole and Marie (Gunderson) Maukstad. He and his wife have two daughters, Norma and Herman.

Peter O. Maukstad, proprietor of a good farm in the town of Grant, which he has himself built up from wild land, was born in Norway, May 1, 1856, son of Ole Peterson and his wife Bertha, whose name before marriage was Bertha Thompson. Ole was a native of Sweden and a farmer by occupation, while the father of Bertha Two of the children of Mr. and Mrs. Ole Peterson are was a hunter and fisherman now living, Peter O. and Ellen, the latter residing in Norway. Those who died were Parmelia, Catherine and Ole. Peter O. Maukstad was reared in his native land, where he attended school when a boy and subsequently worked on farms and at the carpenter's trade. In 1884, at the age of 18, he came to the United States to better his fortune and for five years thereafter worked at anything he could find to do. At the end of that time he entered upon his career as an independent farmer, buying 120 acres of wild land in Sections 18 and 20, town of Grant, Dunn County, Wis. The tract was covered with brush and timber, and Mr. Maukstad commenced operations by building a small house, after which he began the work of clearing the land. These initial labors were not only for the development of a farm but also for the creation of a home, for in that year, 1889, he had been united in marriage with Bertha Gunderson, daughter of Ole and Anna Gunderson, immigrants from Norway, and early settlers in Dunn County. Mr. Maukstad subsequently bought more land, his farm containing 240 acres, of which 120 are under the plow. He has also built a good modern frame house of 11 rooms, installed with electric light and other conveniences; has built a barn of 39 x 90 feet, in modern style, and also electrically lighted, and has erected other necessary buildings, so that he now has a thoroughly good farm, and is successfully carrying on general farming and dairying, besides cultivating tobacco. He has a herd of 40 grade Shorthorn cattle, with a pure bred sire, and is widely recognized as one of the leading farmers of his town. Mr. and Mrs. Maukstad are the parents of nine children, Oscar, Gerhard, Palmer, Norman, Walter, Ella, Nora, Gena and Myrtle. When the World War was in progress, Gerhard and Palmer were inducted into the United States' service. Gerhard, who was in an infantry regiment, trained at Camp Grant, and went to France, where he took part in some of the hard fighting. Palmer was in the navy but did not go to France.

Ole Madson, a general farmer and dairyman of Section 27, town of Colfax, was born in Norderhove, Ringarekka, Norway, Jan. 28, 1866, son of Ingebret and Thorena Madson, the parents being also natives of that country. The father, who was a carpenter, followed his trade in his native land until 1890, when he and his wife came to the United States to make their home with their son Ole, who had preceded them here. But their lives were not spared much longer, as Ingebret Madson died in 1892, and in the following year Mrs. Thorena Madison was was killed by a cyclone that passed over Ole's farm. They had been the parents of eight children, all of whom are now dead but Ole. The latter was reared in his native land and attended school there, subsequently working at the carpenter's trade until he came to the United States in 1884. Settling in Dunn County, Wisconsin, he bought 160 acres of land in Section 32, town of Colfax, 80 acres of which had been broken. To this he gave his attention in summer, and for ten winters he worked in the woods. In 1892 he was married in Colfax to Rena Jacobson, who died in the following year, that in which his mother was killed. He then sold the farm and bought another one of 160 acres in Section 27, town of Colfax. This was an improved farm, and there Mr. Madson followed general and dairying farming for a period of ten years, at the end of which time he sold it. Soc., afterwards he traded a store building that he owned in Colfax village for his present land in the same Section (27). This was wild land and Mr. Madson had to begin at the beginning, erecting a frame house, barn and other buildings, and then starting in to clear the land, which was the longer and harder task. Now he has 60 acres under the plow and has ten head of milch cows. His record as a farmer and dairyman is good, and the fact that he has served as a justice of the peace proves that his neighbors recognize him as a man of good civic qualities and attainments. In addition to his personal farming interests, he is a stockholder in the Colfax Co-operative Creamery. Mr. Madson was married secondly, Oct. 3, 1917, to Edith Groezinger, who was born at Chippewa Falls, Wis., Feb. 3, 1882, daughter of Charles and Minnie (Krause) Groezinger, and of this union three children have been born, Anna Bernice, Ellen Marie and Sylvia Mrs. Madson's father, Charles Groezinger, died Feb. 14, 1906, but her Margaret. mother is still living.

Thaddeus H. Moore, superintendent of the Dunn County Asylum and the Dunn County Home, was born at Hillsboro, Vernon County, Wis., July 19, 1873, son of William H. and Belle (Markee) Moore. Thaddeus H. Moore acquired his education in the common and high schools of Wonewoc, Juneau County, after which until 1898 he was engaged in farm labor. He then came to Dunn County, finding employment in the Dunn County Asylum and Dunn County Home, and in course of time he proved so useful and so conversant with the work of the institution, that on April 1, 1912, he was promoted to the position of superintendent, which position he has since held. He has erected a fine set of barns and out-buildings, and, with his wife as matron, the institution has been maintained at its highest point of efficiency and the comfort of the inmates properly cared for. Mr. Moore was married in Wausau, Wis., Aug. 25, 1904, to Delmetia C. Dickens, daughter of Manning and Elvira (Jackson) Dickens, the father being now deceased and the mother residing with the Moore family. Mr. and Mrs. Moore attend the Methodist Episcopal Church, and the former is a member of the Masonic order, in which he has advanced as far as the commandery, being a Knight Templar, while Mrs. Moore is a member of the Eastern Star, and also of the Women's Club and the Ladies' Aid Society of the church. They have one child, Elva V., who was born Oct. 18, 1918.

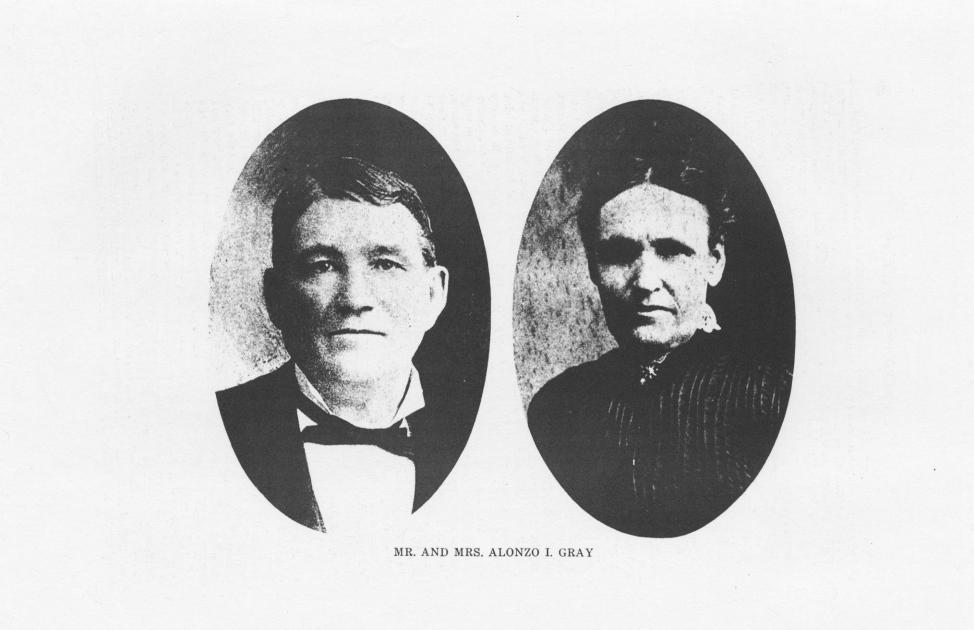

Andrew Kolkind, for many years one of the leading dairymen of Dunn County, who built up the fine dairy farm now known as the West Side Guernsey Farm in Section 34, town of Menomonie, was born in Norway, Feb. 14, 1864. He attended school in his native land and as a youth of about 19 years came to America in 1883 with his brother Louis, locating in Menomonie, Wis. Andrew at once became an employee of the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company and was with them for some 11 or 12 years until they closed out their business there. He worked 11 winters in the pineries, and was engaged in log driving in the spring and summer months. Foreseeing the end of the lumber industry in this section, he resolved to get onto the land and build up a farm, and with that purpose in view in May, 1899, he bought 80 acres from the company, situated in Section 34. Improvements had been started by some predecessor, as there was a set of log buildings, which he used for some years, in time replacing them with others of modern construction. In July, 1902, he established the West Side Dairy, delivering milk and cream to patrons over a route which he covered for 10 years without missing a day. A man of progressive ideas, in 1913, he began to replace his grade cattle with pure bred Guernseys, starting with four head of this breed, and at the time of his death, which occurred on Jan. 8, 1918, he had a herd of 51 head. In these cattle he took great pride and for years was very active in advocating the merits of the Guernsey breed. He helped to organize the cow testing association in the county, of which he was a member, and was also one of the organizers and a member of the breeders' association. In 1915 he took the first prize in a farm management contest and was recognized as one of the foremost men in his line of agricultural activity. He was also a man of sterling personal character and highly respected by all who knew him. Mr. Kol-kind was married in the city of Menomonie, Jan. 8, 1896, to Agnes Lund, who was born in Norway, Nov. 29, 1872, and came to America in 1892. Previous to her marriage she was employed in the Louis Tainter home. The children of this union are: Philip H., born May 11, 1897; and Gladys, born July 3, 1899, who married Christ Nelson and has a child, Caroll Geraldine. Since his father's death Philip H. Kolkind has managed the farm for his mother, operating it along the same lines. He has added another industry, however, to his dairy business, as in 1922, he bought three pairs of Alaskan black silver foxes, and now has 10 pairs, his plan being to build up a large fox farm. The Kolkind family are members of Our Saviour's Lutheran Church in Menomonie.

William Otto, who for nearly half a century was active in farm improvement work in the town of Menomonie, starting under pioneer conditions and achieving results that place him among the upbuilders of this county, was born in Milwaukee, Wis., Sept. 7, 1857, son of William, Sr. and Johanna Otto, who were natives of William, Jr., was reared and educated near Watertown, Wis. He came Germany. to Dunn County in 1877 and for one year resided in Menomonie. Then he began his agricultural career, buying 40 acres of heavy timber land in Section 3, town of Menomonie, on which he erected a log house. He was already a married man, having been united in the bonds of matrimony in the city of Menomonie, in 1877, to Mary Price, who was born in Germany, June 17, 1859, daughter of Ernst and Tena (Schultz) Price, and had accompanied her parents to this country in 1870. Money was scarce when Mr. and Mrs. William Otto, Jr., began domestic life together, though a dollar would buy more than twice as much then as it would Still, it was needed, and as the farm for a while would not support them, today. Mr. Otto worked for the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company and also at times cut wood, which he sold to the "Omaha" Railway Co. After making some progress he bought 40 acres more land to increase the size of his farm, and there he and his wife lived until 1896. In that year Mr. Otto bought 40 acres in the southwest corner of Section 3, there being a better house on that tract, in which he and his family took up their abode. A further step in advance was made in 1904, when he built a fine, ten-room house that was amply commodious and comfortable. The year 1912 saw the erection of a fine barn of 36 x 72 feet in ground plan, which was Mr. Otto's crowning achievement, for though he continued to work for several years after that, his life was drawing near its close and he died on Sept. 23, 1916. Mr. and Mrs.

Otto were pioneers of their locality and endured the usual pioneer hardships in the early days, Mr. Otto using exen in his plowing and other farm work and carrying provisions, packed on his back, from Menomonie, a distance of three or four miles. He became a prominent citizen of his town and had a kind and friendly disposition, so his loss was severely felt. Mr. and Mrs. William Otto, Jr., were the parents of 11 children, namely, Martha, Emma, Ida, Herman, Arthur, Clara, Arnold, Edwin, Gertrude, Olga and Frederick, whose record in brief is as follows. Martha, born June 4, 1878, has been twice married; first to John Hintzman, by whom she had five children, Walter, Roy, Esther, Adillia and Edna. After Mr. Hintzman's death she became the wife of Joe Hintz and is now residing in Mencmonie with her husband. Emma Otto, born July 2, 1880, died Oct. 8, 1916. She was the wife of Robert Brimer and left three children, Albin, Evelyn and Edward. Ida Otto, born Dec. 25, 1884, is now Mrs. Herman Price of North Menomonie and has three children, Mabel, Hazel and Raymond. Herman Otto, born Feb. 7, 1887, married Martha Stobb, who died March 10, 1922, leaving six children, Richard, Roy, Irene, Hazel, Frances and Adellia; they reside in the town of Lucas. Arthur Otto, born April 11, 1889, married Anna Boetticher and resides in the town of Menomonie. Clara Otto, born Aug. 14, 1891, married Pearl Brown and has two children, Lois and Leonard; they reside in the town of Menomonie. Arnold Otto, born March 14, 1893, married Martha Siefert and has three children, Irma, Elmer and Margaret. Edwin Otto, born March 20, 1895, married Elizabeth Tucker and has two children, Lawrence and Irvin. He and his family live in the town of Menomonie. Gertrude Otto, born Nov. 15, 1896, is now Mrs. Otto Hovind of Menomonie and has three children, Loraine, Lyle and Elden. Olga Otto, born Nov. 8, 1898, is now Mrs. Gust Keister of the town of Menomonie. Frederick Otto, who was born April 4, 1901, is operating the farm for his mother. The members of the Otto family belong to St. Paul's Lutheran Church of Menomonie. Mr. and Mrs. Ernst Price, the parents of Mrs. William Otto, after arriving in this country from Germany in 1870, as already mentioned, settled first near Hartland, Wis., whence they moved in 1873 to Menomonie. Mr. Price worked several years for the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company, after which he settled with his family on a farm in Section 3, town of Menomonie, not far from the Otto place. There he and his wife spent the remainder of their and Mrs. Price in 1883. Their children, ten in lives, Mr. Price dying in 1881 and Mrs. Price in 1883. number, were as follows: Mary, who married William Otto; Etta, now Mrs. William Brightsman of Menomonie; Caroline, who became the wife of Ed Lucas but is now deceased; Fred, a farmer in the town of Stanton; Charles, living in St. Paul; Ernst, deceased; Crystal, who, being born on board the ship on which the family came to America, was named after it, and who is now Mrs. Charles Kendall of Battle Creek, Mich.; Henry, deceased; August, of Comstalk, Wis.; and Bertha, who is now Mrs. Ed Lewis of St. Paul. It is creditable to the Otto and Price families that their respective members have proved industrious and useful men and women, respected in the communities in which they have made their homes.

Alonzo I. Gray, a former lumberman and hotel keeper, once an active factor in the busy life of Dunn County and other localities, but now living retired in Menomonie, was born in Bangor, Maine, May 3, 1849, son of Ervin and Olive (Blake) Gray. The parents, who were also natives of the Pine Tree State, came west with their family, in 1851, locating at North Pepin, Wis., where they remained several years, Ervin Gray being engaged in running rafts down the river. In 1854 they removed to Eau Galle, Dunn County—this county being set off in that year and including what is now Pepin County—and operated the boarding-house for the lumber firm of Carson & Eaton. Later he operated boarding-houses on the line of the Union Pacific Railroad during its construction, going as far west as Salt Lake City, Utah, and returning in 1868 to St. Paul, where for two years he was engaged in the truck business. From 1870 to 1875, with his wife's assistance, he operated a boarding-house in Menomonie for Knapp, Stout & Co. She then died and he returned to Minneapolis, where he spent the balance of his life. Mr. and Mrs. Ervin Gray had eight children: Lena, now Mrs. Hugh McMaster of Eau Claire; Alonzo I., of Menomonie; Milton and Lucetie, who are deceased; Frank, now at Sand Point, Idaho; Louis, in New York State, and Nellie, who died in infancy. Alonzo I. Grav as a boy attended school in a log schoolhouse in Brookfield, Dunn County. At the age of 15 years he began driving a stage between Menomonie and Hudson, and after being thus employed for a while did some farm labor. In 1865, when under 16 years of age he enlisted in the army, hoping to see service in the Civil War, and was a member of the 37th Wiscensin Volunteer Infantry until the war came to an end, which was the case soon afterward. After being honorably discharged he returned to Hudson, where for some time he did farm labor, later going to St. Paul, in which city, in 1871, he drove a bus for J. B. Cook. In that year he returned to Menomonie and entered the employ of Knapp, Stout & Co., who placed him in charge of their barn, and he was thus occupied until the death of his mother in 1875. His father at that time giving up the operation of the company's boarding-house, young Gray took charge of it and subsequently remained with the company until their mills closed. After that until 1910, he was a partner in the saloon business with Oscar Huber, and from 1910 to 1920 he conducted the Central House, since which time he has been retired. Alonzo I. Gray was married in St. Paul, May 21, 1870, to Mary Maksey, with whom he passed nearly half a century of wedded life, it terminating only with her death on June 9, 1920. Three children were the offspring of this union: Albert, who is with the Chicago branch of the Lipton Tea and Coffee Co.; Nellie, wife of Dan Holland and residing in Gompers, Calif; and Irving, who lives in Chicago. Mr. Gray is now 78 years old, and is said to be one of the oldest survivors of the pioneer settlers of Dunn County. He has had an eventful life and is now entitled to rest and enjoy the ample competence and ease which he has gained through long continued industry.

Erick Olson, who settled over half a century ago in the town of Dunn, of which he subsequently became a prominent citizen, being a large land owner and cultivator, was a native of Norway and came to this country when a young and single man. He was later married to Mari Christopherson, who was born in Winnebago County, Wisconsin, and in the late 60's they came to Dunn County, Mr. Olson buying 160 acres of wild land in the town of Dunn. Like practically all the other early settlers, he worked some time for the lumber firm then known as Knapp, Stout & Co. and later (after 1876) as the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company, improving his land as he found opportunity, for it was a number of years before he could make a living off Much of his work was done at night by the light of a lantern, and he had to it. walk five miles to and from work each day. It is thus easy to see that those were strenuous days for him. His first set of buildings were constructed of logs, but were replaced with good frame buildings in later years. Not content with a small farm, he bought more land from time to time until he owned between 400 and 500 acres, which was the size of his estate at the time of his death in 1910. Besides working for himself, Mr. Olson helped his town, and that in various ways. He was always ready to assist new settlers as they came in, and he helped to get school districts laid out, schoolhouses built, and roads constructed. When he passed away his fellow townsmen felt that they had lost a good friend and neighbor and a public spirited citizen. He and his wife were the parents of eight children, all of whom are now living, namely: Edward, a farmer in the town of Dunn; Lizzie, now Mrs. Ole Burgum of Detroit, Mich.; Ida, now Mrs. Vallander of Superior, Wis.; Inga, residing on the farm with her brothers; Nellie, wife of Henry Linseth of Minneapolis; Carl, who is in the undertaking business in Menomonie; Alfred, operating the old home farm, and Ingvald, who lives on the farm. The mother, Mrs. Mari Olson, passed away in 1916.

Carl Olson, proprietor of the Olson undertaking parlors at 511 Broadway, Menomonie, was born on a farm on Little Elk Creek in the town of Dunn, son of Erick and Mari (Christopherson) Olson. As a boy he attended the school of his district and remained on the home farm with his parents until 16 years old. He then came to Menomonie and for the next five years was employed by the Kraft Mercantile Co. as a grocery clerk. After that and until 1913 he was in the employ of the Waterman-Ehrhardt Co. He then went to work for the Hans-Swenby Furniture Co., with whom he served a two years' apprenticeship to the undertaking business. In January, 1916, he went to Chicago, where he attended the Worsham Training School, receiving his diploma as an embalmer and undertaker on July 21, 1917. After his return to Menomonie he spent eight months looking for a good opening and location, which he found in March, 1918, purchasing the undertaking business of Hans Swenby. In January, 1920 Mr. Olscn established his parlors at 511 Broadway, where he has since carried on his business, carrying a good line of of funeral supplies and caskets. In 1921 he was elected coroner of Dunn County. in which office he is still serving. He belongs to the D. O. K. K. and the Knights of Pythias. Mr. Olson was married in Menomonie, Dec. 31, 1913, to Clara Eiseth, daughter of Sever and Martha Eiseth, the parents having been early settlers in North Menomonie. Mr. Olson has a well established business and the personal service he renders in the saddest moments of life is satisfactory to his patrons.

Fred W. Marine, for nearly 50 years connected with the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway and now engineer on the line running from Menomonie to Durand, was born in Germany, Nov. 23, 1862. It was at the age of four years that he came to the United States with his parents, who settled in Minnesota. He acquired a very limited education in the public schools and at the age of 15 years became an employee of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway as call boy in the round house at Wabasha. By fidelity to his duties he worked his way up until he became a fireman and, in 1890, an engineer. For many years he had the run from Menomonie to Wabasha, but which was later shortened so that for a few years past it has been between Menomonie and Durand. Since 1899, his permanent residence has been in Menomonie, where he has a fine and comfortable house at No. 1314 Broadway. He is a member of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers; the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. and the Order of Maccabees. Mr. Marine was first married to Anna Butzerine, who died Jan. 19, 1889, leaving cne son, Edward Albert, who died Feb. 11, 1899. On April 28, 1890 Mr. Marine was married to Bertha Fellmeth Butzerine, a foster sister of his first wife. She was born Nov. 19, 1868. Mr. and Mrs. Marine are the parents of five children, whose records in brief are as follows: Lois Anna, born March 30, 1891, who is now Mrs. Carl Schultz of Menomonie and the mother of two children, Marine Ruth and Robert Farrell; Ruth Agnes, born Dec. 10, 1892, a graduate of the Menomonie High School now doing office work; Eugene Earl, born Aug. 1, 1894, a painter living in North Menomonie, who married Sadie Olson; Gladys Esther, born June 26, 1898, who is a graduate of the Menomonie High School and the Minneapolis Business College, and now a stenographer with the Carter Ice & Coal Co., Menomonie; and Harold Ross, born Feb. 5, 1900, who is a brakeman on the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway; he married Sophie Aune and has one child Donald Eugene, born Oct. 6, 1924. Mrs. Marine has two sisters living, Anna, wife of Herman Werth of Menomonie, and Minnie, now Mrs. namely: Frank Karbaum, who reside at Dover, Delaware.

Abraham Lincoln Knapton, a representative of the lumber industry, and a prominent business man and citizen of Ridgeland, was born in Adams County, Wisconsin, Aug. 8, 1860, son of John and Sarah (Bulmar) Knapton. The parents had come to this country from Yorkshire, England, in 1848, first settling in Dane County, Wisconsin, where the father, being a millwright and carpenter, worked at his trade. In 1857 the family moved to Adams County, where they resided for four years, and it was in that period that the subject of this sketch was born, and named Abraham Lincoln, evidently because John Knapton was a member of the new Republican party and an admirer of the rugged Kentuckian who was then making his great speeches on the slavery question in opposition to Stephen H. Douglas, and who was soon to become President and guide the nation through a long and bitter war. In the first year of that war the Knapton family returned to Dane County, settling in Madison, where John Knapton worked in mills for a while. During a part of the war period he was employed at Camp Randall. He and his wife after coming to this country spent nearly all the remainder of their lives in Wisconsin and finally passed away, the mother at Downing, Dunn County, in 1896, and the father at Bloomington, Ill., in 1902. They had been the parents of ten children, three of whom died in infancy, and four of whom are now living, namely: William, of Downing, Dunn County, Wis.; John of Farmville, Va.; Abraham L., subject of this sketch; and Priscilla, wife of Harvey Dickerson and residing in Colorado. Of the others, Ellen, who married Vern Ward, died in Glenwood City, Wis.; Kate, the wife of Nels Sanford, died in New London, Wis., and Agnes died at Bloomington, Ill. Abraham L. Knapton when about one year old returned with his parents to Dane County, where he resided until 1869, when the family removed to that state of Iowa. In that state he attended school until 1876, when he again returned with the family to Wisconsin, residing successively in the counties of Lafayette and Rock. Mr. Knapton came to Dunn County in 1888. At Downing he spent seven years, during which time he worked for the Downing Manufacturing Co., and acquired a thorough knowledge of the lumber business. Then for several years he traveled for lumber companies. It was in March, 1902, that he came to Ridgeland and started a lumber office for Osborn & Clark, and he has since continued in the lumber business here, being now connected with the Jake Lampert yards, the main office of the company being in St. Paul. Mr. Knapton is a stockholder in the Ridgeland creamery, of which he was secretary for 16 years; also in the Prairie Farm, Ridgeland & Dallas Telephone Co., having formerly served as a director in this concern. Since taking up his residence in the village he has been identified more or less closely with public affairs. He was the first supervisor of Ridgeland at a time when village supervisors had a seat on the county board; he has served as a member of the village council; was for some time a member of the school board serving on the building committee of the new school-He was clerk of the town of Wilson five years, and for 20 years has been a houses. notary public. In all these various capacities he has shown himself to be honest and efficient; in short, a man of good business sense working for the interests of the community in which he lives, and he is so recognized both in Ridgeland and throughout the town of Wilson generally. Mr. Knapton first married Mary Holcomb, in Cambridge, Dane County, Wis., in May, 1886. She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Holcomb, and her father, who went out as a soldier in the Civil War, died while in the service. Mrs. Mary Knapton is now deceased. She had been the mother of five children, namely, Eldred, Mabel, Normal, Della and Zerpha. Mabel is the wife of H. E. McNeil of Barron County; Normal is a trained nurse in Milwaukee; Della, the wife of Glen Halsted of Ridgeland; Zerpha, married H. P. Alderman, who was killed in action in the World War; she now resides in Duluth, Minn. In March, 1901 Abraham L. Knapton was married secondly in Linstrom, Minn., to Mrs. Donella Seymour, widow of William Seymour. By her first husband she has a son, George W., now of Espanola, Ontario, Canada.

Nicholas Cook, an early settler in the town of Red Cedar, who passed away some 20 years ago or more, was born in Berlin, Germany, Feb. 14, 1822. In 1847 he was married in his native land to Sophia Schlecker, who was born in Berlin, Oct. 26, 1828, and immediately after their marriage they emigrated to the United States, locating first in the city of Pittsburg, Penn., where they remained for some four or five years, Mr. Cook during that time worked as a surveyor and was also employed on keel boats. In 1856 he and his family came to Dunn County, Wisconsin, making the journey by boat for a part of the way at least, up the Mississippi and Chippewa rivers to Rumsey's Landing. Here they were met by relations and went on with them to Elk Mound, where Mr. Cook bought a claim right on 160 acres of government land in Section 34, town of Red Cedar, on which he settled. For a short time he and his family lived with their relations until he had built a log dwelling on his land, when they moved into it. The land was wild and covered, or mostly covered, with timber, and as the task of clearing it would take considerable time, he had to go to work for Knapp, Stout & Co., and continued to work for that concern for about ten years, after which he followed the butcher's trade for six years at Rusk. He then began to build up his farm and was thus occupied until 1889. In that year he turned the farm over to his sons, William and Robert, and went to the village of Rusk, where he opened a meat market which he conducted for four or five years. At the end of that time, his residence being burned, he went back to his farm, where he and his wife spent the remainder of their lives. He died Jan. 22, 1903 and his wife on Oct. 28, 1892. During his active career Mr. Cook was a prominent citizen of his town and a helpful force in a number of things relating to its welfare. He was for many years a member of the school board of his district, served as road overseer for several years and was one of the organizers of the Rusk Creamery Co., a co-operative concern which is still flourishing. He and his good wife, Sophia, were the parents of eight children: Margaret, who married J. B. Tainter and died Dec. 14, 1922; Sarah, who married Louis Knutson and died Dec. 18, 1920; Henry, a farmer in Section 5, town of Red Cedar; Sophia, now Mrs. Peter Wirth of Duluth; William, of Menomonie; Robert, who is proprietor of the home farm in Section 34, town of Red Cedar; and John and Lizzie, who died in infancy.

Robert Cook, who is engaged in operating the pioneer farm established by his parents in Section 34, town of Red Cedar, was born in this town May 14, 1864, son of Nicholad and Sophia (Schlecker) Cook. He was educated in the district school, and helped his father until 1889, when he came into possession of one-half Having now the interest of a proprietor in the land, he proceeded the home farm. to improve the place. In the same year, 1889, he was married on March 29, in the town of Red Cedar, to Mary Cook, who was born in Menomonie on April 9, 1866, daughter of Charles and Louise (Bernau) Cook, her parents being natives of For the first two years of their married life he and his wife used for Germany. their dwelling an old granary that had been built in 1866, and for a barn he had a Starting poor, his progress was slow, but by 1899 he was able to build straw shed. his present barn, of 30 x 64 feet in ground plan, which is provided with a good modern barn equipment and electrically lighted, in addition to his house and other He made improvements whenever necessary or desirable, according to buildings. his means, and brought his farm into good condition. He carries on general farming, including dairying, keeping Holstein cattle with a pure bred sire. He is also a stockholder in the Rusk Co-operative Creamery. Mr. Cook has not resided on his farm continuously, for in 1911 he decided to retire, and accordingly rented it to his son, Albert, and moved to Menomonie, where he and his wife, with some of the children, lived for three years, the children attending school. But at the end of that time, not liking city life, he bought for his son Albert a farm in the town of Spring Brook, and returned to his own farm, which he has since continued to operate with the assistance of his son, Leonard. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Cook are as Albert, born Oct. 25, 1890, now farming in the town of Spring Brock, follows: who married Martha Miller and has one child, Laverne; Bernard, born Jan. 7, 1892, who died July 7, 1895; Elsie, born Feb. 27, 1896, who is now Mrs. William Hennessey of Los Angeles, Calif., and has one child, William Eugene; Sarah, born Jan. 13, 1898, who is the wife of Robert Rossiter of Kuapp, Dunn County, and the mother of two children, Hazel and Ethel; Margaret, born Jan. 3, 1900, and Leonard, born March 22, 1902, both of whom are residing on the home farm with their parents. The family are members of St. John's Lutheran Church at Iron Creek in the town of Spring Brook.

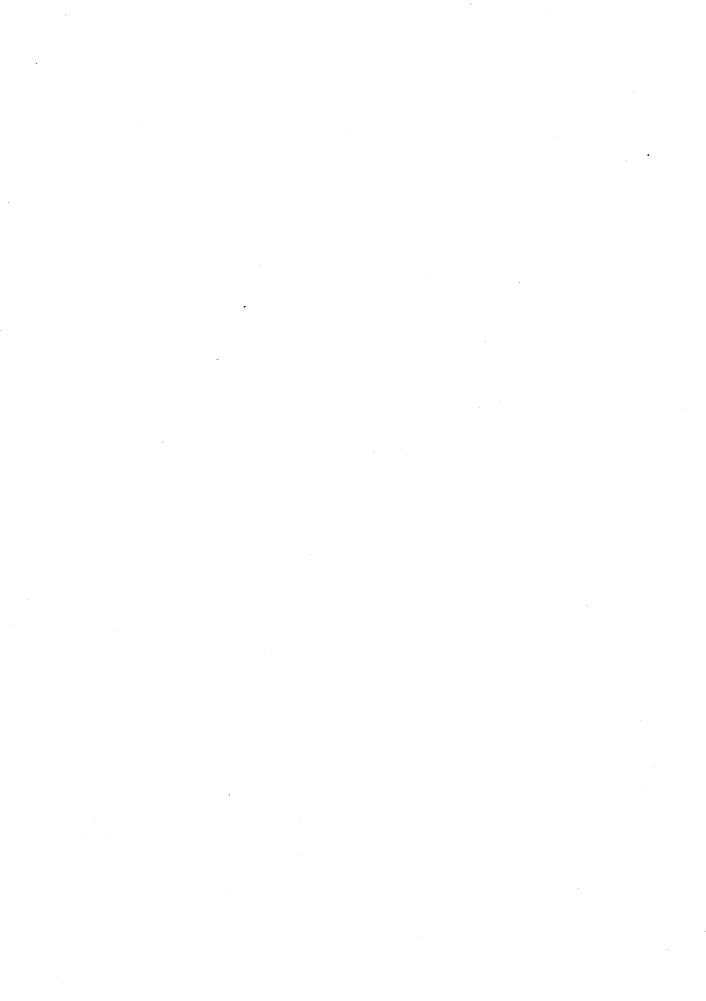

Peter Olson, who for some years conducted with success a good farm in the town of Elk Mcund, was born in Ringarekke, Norway, March 22, 1867, son of Ole Slappa and Marie Halvorson, who were natives of the same place. Coming to America in 1881, the family located in the village of Elk Mcund, where the father built a frame house. For six years he worked on the railroad section, at the end of which time he bcught a farm of 80 acres in Sections 14 and 15, town of Elk Mound, of which 25 acres had been broken. As there were no buildings, he took down his village residence in sections and moved it over to the farm, where he put it together again. He also erected a good barn and other buildings and subsequently resided here until his death on Aug. 14, 1918 at the age of about 86 years, he having been born in 1832. His wife, who was born in 1828, died May 29, 1921, in her ninety-third year. Their children were, Mary, Helen, Martha, Peter, Andrew, Hans (first), Hans (second), Andreas and two who died in infancy. Those living are Martha, Andrew and Peter. Peter Olson, who attended school in Norway and was a boy of 14 when he came to America with his parents, was confirmed in the Baerum Lutheran Church in Elk Mound. He attended normal school two winters here and grew up on the home farm, where he remained except for a winter spent in the woods in a logging camp; and as his father's assistant he helped to build up and develop the homestead, doing in fact most of the work as his father was crippled. He added to the estate by buying 40 acres more land, thus making it a farm of 120 acres, and it has a set of good buildings, including a barn of 40×52 feet in ground plan, with a half basement, and a silo of 10×32 feet. Mr. Olson, after conducting the farm until his mother's death in 1921, rented it to Earl J. Sorenson, who operated it until the spring of 1925. Mr. Olson is a stockholder in the Elk Mound Cooperative Creamery. He is again conducting his farm, while his sister Martha attends to the household duties.

J. E. Keller, proprietor of a general blacksmith and repair shop in Menomonie, who is a representative man in his line of business, was born in Sweden, March 3, 1867, son of S. A. and Martha (Erickson) Keller. The parents were natives of Sweden, in which country they both died. The subject of this sketch was educated in his native land and there grew to manhood, learning the trade of a blacksmith. It was in 1902 that he came to America, landing in New York City. Proceeding west to Bloomer, Wis., he there followed his trade until 1905, in which year he came to Menomonie. Here on May 5, he entered the employ of the Oscillating Sleigh Co., with which concern he remained until June 27, 1916, when he started in business for himself at the location now occupied by the Nelson Bros. Motor Co. In 1920 he erected his present building at 511 Crescent Street, a substantial brick structure, triangular in shape, and with ground dimensions of 2640 square feet. It is well equipped with all necessary machinery such as trip hammer, forges, lathe. two punching presses, one Y 80-ton pressure and a smaller one, shears, drill presses, shaper, miller, cut-off saw, and a complete welding and cutting apparatus, enabling him to do all kinds of repair work, as well as manufacturing on a small scale. Mr. Keller employs three men and leases out one end of his shop to a word-working He has a good office, favorably located on Crescent Street, and is doing concern. a large and increasing business, having built up a fine reputation for reliable work and honest dealing with everyone. Mr. Keller was married in Sweden, Sept. 2, 1893, to Breta Borg, who was born Jan. 25, 1874. She died June 24, 1899, leaving two children: Hilda, born Dec. 12, 1894, who attended the public schools of this city, and was later married to G. O. Ankerson, her husband being in the employ of Mr. Keller; and Algot B., born April 22, 1897, who attended the grade schools and was graduated from the high school of this city in 1917. Algot then worked for his father until May 7, 1918, when he enlisted in the United States' service. He returned home Oct. 11, 1919, and resumed work with his father, continuing in his employ until November, 1922. On June 15, 1900, Mr. Heller was married to Anna Borg, a sister of his first wife, who was born Nov. 18, 1871. Of this union five children have been born: Ruth C., born July 4, 1901, who was graduated from the Menomonie High School and Stout Institute and is now a teacher at Braham, Minn.; Erick R., born April 24, 1903, a graduate of the same educational institutions who is a director of drawing at Detroit, Mich.; George A., born Feb. 20, 1905, who was graduated from the local high school and is now assisting his father; Esther M., born March 23, 1907, now a students in the high school; and Harry E., born Sept. 22, 1913, who is a pupil in the grade school. Mr. Heller and his family have a pleasant home at 1320 Second Street West. They are members of the Norwegian Lutheran Church. His fraternal affiliations are with the Beavers, while Mrs. Heller belongs to the Beavers, the Royal Neighbors, and the Scandanavian Society of America.

Floyd C. Proper, a respected citizen of the town of Sherman, where he is conducting the old Proper farm in Section 29, was born in Crawford County, Pennsylvania, May 31, 1866, son of Peter C. and Isabelle (Rock) Proper. The father was also a native of that county, born March 31, 1838, while the mother was born at Warsaw, Ind., July 10, 1846. They were married in Crawford County, Penn., June 12, 1865, and came to Dunn County in 1875, locating in the village of Cedar Falls, where they resided for two years, Peter C. Proper working during that time for the Pritchard &

Jewett Lumber Co., both at rafting and in the company's mill. In 1877 they moved to the town of Sherman, where Mr. Proper bought 40 acres of railroad land, all of which was wild. He and his wife lived there until 1883, during which time he cleared five or six acres. They then sold out, intending to move to Richmond, Va., and Mrs. Proper and her son Floyd went there in the spring of 1883; but, not liking the place nor the general conditions there, they returned to Dunn County before Mr. Proper had started east. They then settled in Menomonie, where for ten years he held the position of watchman, during the summers, in the mill of the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company, in the winters working near Brainerd, Minn., for the Sampson Lumber Co. of Minneapolis. In 1893 he bought 40 acres of wild land on Section 29, town of Sherman, on which there stood a small frame house, into which he and his family moved that winter, and he then began the development of the farm, which he and his wife owned until 1893, when they sold it to their son Floyd, but continued to reside on it until 1898, in which year Peter C. Proper bought a tract of 80 acres adjoining the original farm and he and his wife moved on to this newly acquired property, and remained there until 1913. They then left the farm and went to live in Knapp, where Mr. Proper died Aug. 2, 1917. His wife Isabelle survived him until Aug. 5, 1920, when she, too, passed away. Of their five children, Floyd C. is now operating the home farm; Myrtle is Mrs. Melvin Young of Ashland, Mont.; Grace is the wife of Irving Chapman of Barron; Bessie is Mrs. James Byrnes of Crookston, Minn., and Mattie is Mrs. Waldimar Melsted of Winnipeg, Canada. Floyd C. Proper when he grew old enough helped his father to improve the home farm, taking part in the work of clearing, breaking and cultivating the soil, and also in the erection of the buildings. The residence is good and the other buildings fair. He is successfully engaged in general farming and dairying, milking on an average 18 cows. He also raises Poland-China hogs. For several years he was a member of the town board and he has been a member of District School board No. 5 for about 15 years, as a public official giving general satisfaction. Mr. Proper was married Nov. 4, 1908, to Mary C. Gurney, who was born near Norwalk, Conn., daughter of Andrew and Elexandria (Chemowski) Gurney. In 1907 she had come west to visit an uncle at Middle River, Minn., and there taught school for a year. It was there also that she met and married Mr. Proper. Mr. and Mrs. Proper are the parents of three children: Joy A., born Sept. 4, 1909; Izora I., born Aug. 7, 1911, and Margaret R., born June 2, 1914. The two elder daughters were graduated from the Catholic Parochial School in Menomonie and are now pupils in the West High School in Minneapolis. Margaret is attending school in District No. 5, near Mrs. Proper, who is a Catholic in religion, was one of a family of 13 her home. children, seven of whom are still living in Connecticut.

Adolph Peterson, who more than half a century ago, started a farm in the town of Dunn, which he developed, and which is now in possession of his son Robert, was born in Trondhjem, Norway, July 18, 1845. For some years as a youth, he was engaged in the fishing industry, but in 1865, at the age of about 20 years, he came to the United States to better his fortunes. Locating in Menomonie, Wis., he entered the employ of Knapp, Stout & Co., for whom he worked until 1872. It was in that year that he turned farmer, buying 80 acres in Section 19, town of In June, 1871, he married Julia Christopherson, who was born in the town Dunn. of Dunn, and they settled on the tract of wild land which he had bought. first buildings he erected were a log house and log barn, and with that beginning The he and his wife bent their energies toward building up a good farm home. It was hard pioneer work, but gradual progress was made, and Mr. Peterson continued to clear and cultivate his land and improve his buildings during the rest of his active In 1920 he retired, selling the farm to his son Robert, and he and his wife career. taking up their residence in Menomonie, where he died on Nov. 25, 1921. His wife is still living in that city. They were the parents of ten children, as follows: Mary, now Mrs. Lawrence Klingerberg of Meridean, Dunn County; Ole, of Tioga, N. D.; Albert, of Woodville, Pierce County, Wis.; Peter O., a farmer in the town of Dunn; George A., of Meromonie; Elsie, now Mrs. S. Christy of Chicago; Alice, wife of Anton Jacobson of the town of Red Ceclar, Dunn County; Walter, of Peter O. Peterson, who is successfully engaged in mixed and dairy farming in Section 25, town of Dunn, was born in this town, on his parents' farm in Section 19, on May 13, 1880, son of Adolph and Julia (Christopherson) Peterson. The parents had settled on the place some eight years before his birth, but the surroundings were still sufficiently wild to cause him to spend his early years in a pioneer atmosphere. He acquired the elements of knowledge in District School No. 7, and until he was 22 years old remained on the home farm, where he made himself useful. In 1905 and 1906 he was studying scientific agriculture on the University farm at Madison. Then he returned to Dunn County and bought a farm of 120 acres in the town of Menomonie, which he conducted for three years, at the end of that time selling it and renting the Thompson farm, on which he spent the next three years of his life. Another period of three years was spent in operating under rental the Christopher farm in the town of Menomonie. It was in 1907 that Mr. Peterson bought his present farm of 120 acres in Section 25, town of Dunn, and on which he has made several improvements. In 1922 he built a full basement barn of $34 \ge 72$ feet in ground plan, and which is installed with the James patent equipment. To furnish illumination for the barn and house he has an individual or domestic Delco electric light plant, and water is supplied to both from a 170-foot well which he has sunk, the water being raised by a windmill. Mr. Peterson's farm is well situated on the uplands of Little Elk Creek and presents visible evidence of good management and prosperity. He has a good herd of grade Holstein cattle with a pure bred sire, follows both mixed and dairy farming, and is a stockholder in the Downsville Cooperative Creamery and in the First National Bank of Menomonie. He was formerly for three years treasurer of School District No. 7 and is now serving as road commissioner of District No. 10. On Oct. 13, 1904, Mr. Peterson was united in marriage with Anna Margaret Thompson, who was bern in the town of Menomonie, Dec. 29, 1882, daughter of Ole and Bridget Thompson, her parents being early settlers in this county. Mr. and Mrs. Peterson have two children: Orella Alberta, born June 17, 1913, and Gordon Adolph, born Oct. 21, 1916. Wilson W. Mathews, now retired and living in the city of Menomonie, is the representative of a well known and highly respected family, members of which were prominent in eastern New York about the beginning of the last century. There is a record of five Mathews brothers-Charles, Andrew, Thomas, William and John -great-uncles of the subject of this sketch, who emigrated from the north of Ireland and settled first at Saratoga Springs, N. Y., and later in Schenectady, that state, where at one time all five were deacons in the Presbyterian Church. Thev were also prominent in secular affairs, being evidently men of force, character and responsibility, and the genealogical enthusiast who visits the East may find further record of them, and perhaps others of the family, in the libraries of New York and From the north of Ireland in March, 1847, came also Andrew T. and Boston. Matilda (Wilson) Mathews, parents of Wilson W., who were born and married there, and with them came James Mathews, a brother of Andrew. After spending six months in the state of New York, they came west and in 1848 settled in Waukesha County, Wisconsin, where Andrew T. took land and began farming. For 12 years he devoted himself to agricultural pursuits in that locality, and then he with his family, and his brother James, moved northwest across the state and became residents of Dunn County, Andrew taking up 160 acres in what is now the town of Colfax. It was all wild and a part heavily timbered. Though it was in the latter part of the year, they were obliged for a while to live in a tent while the men labored hard in making a clearing and building a log cabin, into which they moved as soon as the walls were up and the roof on, though it yet lacked windows It was better shelter, however, than the tent, as it was now December and door. and cold weather and snow had arrived. The cabin was completed as quickly as possible and then all were comfortable, as fuel was all around them, to be had in any quantity for the cutting. The Mathews log house, or cabin, soon became a well known stopping-place for prospectors and land seekers, who were always given a hospitable reception. Sometimes at night the house was so crowded with weary sleepers that it was hard to get in or out. In the meanwhile Mr. Mathews was proceeding with the development of a farm, and in course of time the log house was replaced by a fine frame residence and good barns and out-buildings erected. More land also was purchased from time to time until the farm included 800 acres of broad fields, pasture and timber lands, and the owner had become a prosperous, well known and influential citizen. Having thus written his name large in the annals in the county, Andrew T. Mathews passed away at a good old age on Oct. 11, 1903. He had lost his life partner some five months before, Mrs. Matilda Mathews having died on May 20, that same year. They had had four children, Sarah, John R., William James and Wilson W., all of whom survived them, though but two are now living. Sarah, born Jan. 15, 1848, and who never married, died Nov. 16, 1911. John R., born Dec. 14, 1849, is a well known attorney of Menom-William James, born April 19, 1852, died Oct. 2, 1921. Wilson W. Mathews onie. was born Nov. 9, 1861, and was a babe when he accompanied his parents to Dunn County. When older he attended common or grade school in Colfax and high school in Menomonie. He also served a good apprenticeship to agriculture on the home farm, of which he assumed the management at the age of 20 years, and under his superintendency and at his initiative, additional buildings were erected and more land added from year to year. He continued to operate that farm until 1912, in which year he rented it out and for about three years subsequently he and his wife spent most of their time in traveling through the United States, largely in the East. In 1915 Mr. Mathews purchased an acre of land on Federal Highway No. 12, known as the "Stout Road," and running from Menomonie to Eau Claire. It was a beautiful site within the city limits of Menomenie, and on it he erected a beautiful residence of the New England colonial type, but thoroughly modern in equipment. Its attractions include a fine lawn crossed by cement walks, ornamented here and there with flower beds and flanked by shrubbery. It is planned with true artistic taste and the estate as a whole is one of the show places of Dunn County. Here Mr. and Mrs. Mathews are spending their days in comfortable leisure, regarding the place as henceforth their earthly home. Aside from his agricultural activities, Mr. Mathews was the leading spirit in the organization of the Peoples State Bank of Colfax, which he has served as president since it was founded in 1916, and in other respects also he has been a power in business circles. He has also taken a useful part at times in the affairs of local government, as from the time he was 20 years old he served his town either as clerk or as chairman of the board of supervisors. In 1910-11 he was chairman of the county board. He is financially interested in various business enterprises, among them the Chicago Marine Insurance Co. in which he is a stockholder. He belongs to the Masonic order in Menomonie, and both he and his family attend the Congregational Church. Mr. Mathews was married Dec. 23, 1908, to Mary O. Mathews, who was born on Long Island, New York, Jan. 16, 1870, a daughter of John W. and Ann Elizabeth (Howell) Mathews. John W. Mathews was born in the north of Ireland, and for 60 years conducted one of the largest dry goods establishments on Long Island. He died Aug. 21, 1896. Ann Elizabeth Howell Mathews was a native of Southampton, Long Island, New York, and died Feb. 19, 1901. She was a descendent of one of the oldest and most highly respected families of Southampton, Long Island, New York. Many of her ancestors have their family coats of arms on their monuments. Her grandfather, the Rev. John Youngs, was born in England in 1598, graduated from Oxford, and was rector of the Episcopal Church at Southhold, England. It is worthy of note that both the Howell and the Mathews families were prominent in the early annals of the nation, and in the later development of the newer states, many of their representatives having accumulated wealth in the legitimate channels of trade and industry, and at times rendered efficient public service, not only in times of peace, but also when the nation has been in stress and danger. Of the six children born to Mr. and Mrs. John W. Mathews, Mary O. wife of Wilson W. Mathews, is the only one living. She belongs to several church societies and to the Woman's Club, of Menomonie, in all of which she is an active worker. She and her husband are the happy parents of one daughter, Marcia W., born in Menomonie, on May 4, 1915. James Mathews, brother of Andrew T. Mathews, came to Dunn County with the other members of the family as already related, and settled in the Colfax community. Later he moved to the town of Tainter, where he, too, became prosperous, building up one of the finest farms in the county. It contained 1,011 acres, all in one body, the soil being of the finest quality for agricultural purposes. Indeed the place became widely known and talked about, and for many years he stood in the front ranks as an influential citizen. He finally sold the farm and moved to Milwaukee, where he and his wife subsequently died.

Claus Kackman, an early settler in the town of Elk Mound, now deceased, but who for many years was a man of mark in this part of Dunn County, was born in Hanover, Germany, Jan. 9, 1841. He grew to manhood and attended school in his native land. He came to the United States in 1864, locating first at Boston, Mass., in which city, however, he remained but a short time, coming west to Red Wing, Minn. From the latter place he came in 1867 to Dunn County and began farming on 120 acres of wild land which he bought in Section 34, town of Elk Mound. Making a clearing, he put up a small frame shack, moving into it before it was finished and getting busy at once in his task of developing the land. That task, so easy to mention, but so hard to accomplish, involving many years of strenuous work, was well performed by him, and by degrees he also provided the suitable buildings for the farm. He rebuilt or added to his original dwelling, making it into a comfortable residence, and in 1902 he built a large dairy barn of 34 by 50 feet, with full basement and modern equipment. His other out-buildings were substantially constructed and designed with eye both to utility and good appearance. A few years after Mr. Kackman had begun the creation of this farm he had been united in marriage, on Jan. 1, 1872, to Emaline Gerlach, a native of Columbia County, Wis., born Sept. 7, 1851. She proved a faithful wife and loving companion, as well as an efficient helpmate, cheerfully enduring the hardships inseparable from life on a new farm and working hard for their mutual success. But time brings fateful changes, severing all human ties, and on Oct. 11, 1913, Mr. Kackman passed to his heavenly reward. He and his wife had been the parents of ten children, Rebecca, Anna, Henry, George, Mary, Minnie, Louis, Sam, William H. and Alfred, of whom Henry and George are deceased. Rebecca is Mrs. John Irving of South Park, Minn. Anna, as yet unmarried, resides at Beaver Dam, Wis. Mary, who is Mrs. William H. Gehrking of the town of Elk Mound, has five children, Lucille, Hazel, Mabel, Clarence and Norman. Minnie, wife of Robert Smith of Beaver Dam, is the mother of three children, Marvin, Bernice and Wilbur. Louis, who lives in St. Paul, married Carrie Martinson. Sam married Edna Findelson and they have one child, Dorothy. Alfred, who conducts a confectionery store and ice cream parlor in the village of Elk Mound, married Olga Holm and has one child, William H. Kackman, born on the home farm Feb. 20, 1891, as a boy at-Viola tended public school and assisted his father in the development of the homestead until reaching the age of 17 years. He then took up and learned the machinist's trade, which he followed for several years in St. Paul. On June 13, 1918, he enlisted for World War service, being attached to the tank corps. Having trained at Lafayette, Ind., and at Gettysburg, Penn., he left for overseas, June 6, 1918, and in France was transferred to the Motor Transport Corps. He was stationed at various places in succession until his return to the United States, where he landed June 11, 1919, being discharged at Camp Dodge, Iowa, June 21, with the rank of sergeant. In the following year he was in St. Paul working at his trade. Then in 1921 he established himself in the garage business at Elk Mound, but a year later sold out to H. S. Flick and returned to the home farm, which he is now operating under rental. He has built a new machine shed, made certain necessary repairs, and is engaged in general and dairying farming and also in potato raising, having in 1924 raised over 3,000 bushels of Rural New Yorks. He has a good herd of grade Guernsey cattle including a pure bred sire. He is a member of Lloyd S. Howe Post, No. 37, A. L., of Elk Mound. After her husband's death Mrs. Kack-man operated the farm with the help of her sons until she rented it to her son, William H. She still resides on it.

Henry L. Rude, proprietor of a general store and meat market at Irvington station in the town of Menomonie, was born in Eau Claire, Wis., Feb. 7, 1895, son of Olaf and Matilda (Hendrickson) Rude. As a youth he attended the grade and high schools in Eau Claire, after which he began a business career as an employee of the Eau Claire Trunk Co., during the latter part of his connection with that concern, working in the traveling bag department. In April, 1923 Mr. Rude came to Irvington and purchased his present business from J. D. Fisher, the previous He has a good trade and is meeting with success, having a good farmproprietor. ing population to rely on for patronage. He was married in the city of Menomonie, on Feb. 19, 1921, to Laura Schultz, daughter of Fred and Alvina (Voelker) Schultz, the former of whom is now deceased, the latter residing in Menomonie. Mrs. Rude was one of a family of eight children, namely: Herman, of Menomonie; Hazel, now Mrs. T. J. Anderson of St. Paul; Martha, who is Mrs. H. B. Hanson of St. Paul; Alvina, wife of H. M. Hall of Menomonie; Gustav, of Menomonie; Alma, who is now Mrs. Glenn Peisch of Eau Claire; Laura (Mrs. H. L. Rude of Irvington), and Edith, who resides with her mother in Menomonie. Mr. and Mrs. Rude are the parents of a daughter, named Mary.

William P. La Forge, a hardy pioneer of the town of Grant, who died at the age of 70 years in 1912, was born in the state of New York in 1842, and was of English On the death of his mother in that state, he accompanied his father to ancestry. Necedah, Wis., where about 1863 the father died and in that year William P. came to Cedar Falls, Dunn County, with an ox team and wagon. In that village he worked at various jobs, at one time burning charcoal for Jewett & Co. and at another hewing the timber for the dam there. In 1864 with youthful courage he entered upon the arduous task of creating a farm in the wilderness, taking a homestead of 16) acres of wild land in Section 4, town of Grant. It was about this time that he was married to Lydia M. Longdo, who, like himself, was from New York State, of French ancestry. On his land he put up a log house and log barn, splitting the shingles for the roofs with a draw-shave, after which he began the work of clearing the land, his oxen proving a very necessary help. Indians were then numerous in the locality and so was wild game of various kinds, which for a while was the only company that Mr. and Mrs. La Forge had, as they were the first settlers in this part of Dunn County. The story of pioneer hardships has often been told and is familiar to all the old settlers in this region. It need only be said here that Mr. La Forge for some time after settling on his land continued working in the village of Cedar Falls, at least for a part of the time, returing home Saturday nights on foot carrying groceries and other supplies with him, the distance being at least 24 or 25 miles. In time he succeeded in his object of building up a farm, and it was here that he passed away, as already stated, in 1912. His wife survived him a number of years, dying Dec. 4, 1923, at the age of 77. They had been blessed with seven children, of whom two. Nettie M. and Ella, are deceased. The five now living are Gertrude, George W., Edward T., Fred H. and Ida. Gertrude married Frank W. Gass of Rice Lake, Wis., and Ida married Henry Clark of Montana.

George W. La Forge, son of William P. and Lydia M. (Longdo) La Forge, was born on his parents' farm in the town of Grant, Oct. 26, 1867. As a boy he attended rural school and plenty of work was found for him on the farm as soon as he was strong enough to do it. He helped to clear and break the land, remaining at home until he was 21 years old. After that for 13 years he only did farm work during the summers, in the winters being employed in the lumber industry in the woods and on the drives. To get to the woods he used to walk from his home in the town of Grant to Bruce, Wis., (a distance of about 50 miles) without sleep and carrying a pack on his back. In 1892 he began farming for himself, buying a tract of 145 acres in Section 26, town of Sand Creek. The place was partly improved but Mr. La Forge has carried the improvements much further, having built a house, barn, granary and sheds, put up fencing, and brought the place into good condition. He does general farming, keeping grade Durham cattle, of which he now has 21 head, and raising Duroc-Jersey hogs. Mr. La Forge was married in the town of of Sand Creek, Sept. 20, 1896, to May Inspeek, daughter of John and Lizzie (Davis) Inspeek, formerly of Jackson County, Wisconsin. Her father, a Civil War soldier, is now deceased, but her mother is living. Mr. and Mrs. La Forge have had five children, one of whom, Eva, died at the age of 16 months. The other four, who are living, are: Luella, wife of Frank Meindel of Bloomer, and mother of three children, Iolein, Fern and Donald; Raymond, who married Fern Woodman lives on the home farm, and has two children, Harold and Floyd; Norma, attending school, and Bernard, at home.

Miles A. King, the proprietor of 600 acres of land in Sections 3 and 4, town of Sherman, 400 of which he has under the plow, was born on his parents' farm on Section 4, this town, July 5, 1878, son of Dwight and Elizabeth (Smith) King. Dwight King, the father, was a son of Silas and Mary Ann (Benjamin) King, who were natives of New York State. In the spring of 1857 they came west to Wisconsin and that summer resided in Adams County. In the following winter they made their home on Black River, Clark County. In the spring of 1858 they moved to their present home in Dunn County, where Silas bought 80 acres of government land in the town of Peru. This was all wild raw land, but there he began the development of a farm, starting with a set of log buildings. He also bought another 80 acres on Dushane Creek in the same town in 1863. Although his life in Dunn County was short, he made great progress and was doing well financially when he died on Sept. 16, 1864. His wife, who later married Pierce Finch, passed away in They had four children: Dwight, of Menomonie; Dever L., of the town of 1906. Peru, this county; Dezel N., of the town of Rock Creek, and Delos, who lives in Dwight King was born in New York State on Oct. 8, 1845, and came to Durand. Wisconsin in 1857. In the spring of the following year he located at old Meridean. and near that place was married on Oct. 13, 1866, to Elizabeth Smith. She was born at Driftwood, Penn., on April 28, 1851, and came to Dunn County with her parents in 1866, the year of her marriage, the family settling on a farm in the town of Dunn. Five years after their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Dwight King homesteaded 120 acres of wild land on Section 4, town of Sherman, on which Dwight King built a frame house and then began the task of clearing and developing a farm. There he and his wife resided until 1883, in which year they moved to Menomonie, where Mr. King is still living, one of the few still surviving pioneers of the fifties. Mrs. King died in Menomonie on March 18, 1917. During a part of the period between 1883 and 1904 they rented and worked the farm. They were the parents of seven children, namely: Mary, who is deceased; Milo, a prosperous farmer in the town of Menomonie; Kittie, deceased; Maude, deceased; Miles A., of the town of Sherman; Mabel, who married Knute Nelson of New York City and is now a widow; and Mildred, now deceased, who was the wife of Adam Spellitch of the town of Menomonie. Miles A. King acquired a common school education, attending school in Menomonie, where he passed through the grades. On Oct. 24, 1897, at the age of 19 years, he married Jessie M. Gibson, who was born at Knapp, Dunn County, Wis., May 30, 1880, daughter of George and Phoebe (Beson) Gibson. He and his wife immediately after their marriage went to live in Cambria, Columbia County, where they remained two years during which time he worked as a farm hand. Thev then moved to Knowles, Dodge County, where he worked for five years in lime kilns and quarries. In 1904 Mr. King came back to the home farm, which he has since operated. He bought it in 1918, at which time it contained 780 acres. He has sold 180 acres of the land and it now contains 600 acres, of which he has 400 under the plow. He has erected a good set of buildings but lives in the house that was built by his father. Engaged in general farming, he keeps grade Holstein and Guernsey cattle and raises Duroc-Jersey hogs, having pure bred sires in both his herds. He milks 40 cows and gives close attention to dairying; and in addition to the usual supply of farm machinery and tools, he has an auto truck and two passenger cars. He and his wife have worked together and achieved success through industry and frugality and mutual cooperation. They have been the parents of eight children, who were born as follows: Dale A., Oct. 11. 1902;

AUGUST COOK AND FAMILY

Gavland V., July 13, 1904; Ione E., Aug. 23, 1907; Fayne V., Aug. 27, 1908; Kenneth D., Dec. 1, 1909; Vivian V., Sept. 20, 1911; Hazel M., June 8, 1914, and Sibyl B., May 15, 1916. Vivian V. died in infancy, on March 10, 1915. The others are all at home except Ione and Fayne, who are seniors in the Menomonie High School and will graduate in the 1925 class. Mrs. King on her father's side is of English ancestry, and on her mother's of Scotch. Her father, a mason by trade, is still living and is now residing in Knapp, where her mother died on March 10, 1916. Jessie M. was their eldest child, the other two being Henry, a resident of Knapp, and Sophia, who is the wife of Charles Massey of Knapp.

August Cook, now retired and residing on a farm in the town of Red Cedar, the original part of which he purchased 50 years ago, was born in Germany, Dec. 25, 1851, son of Carl and Louise (Barnaugh) Cook. The family came to this country in 1856, and for six years thereafter remained in New York, where they had landed, Carl Cook being employed as a common laborer. But in 1862 the spirit of western emigration seized them and they came to Dunn County, Wisconsin, where Mr. Cook found employment with Knapp, Stout & Co. and worked for four years in their grist and flour mills. At that time the lumbermen were fast clearing away the forests and every year more and more land was becoming available for agricultural purposes. Some of it was being taken up by pioneers anxious to build up a permanent home, and the work of grubbing and clearing was being busily prosecuted on many favored tracts. Soon Mr. Cook felt himself impelled to join the ranks of these early farmers, and in 1866 he did so, buying a part of the land now constituting the farm of Albert Dehnhoff in Section 12, town of Red Cedar. he and his wife started to build up a home, though their lives were not sufficiently prolonged for them to see their efforts come to full fruition, as Mrs. Louise Cook died in 1878 and Carl Cook in the following year. Four of their children are now living, namely: Minnie, who is Mrs. Henry Ott of Menomonie; Mary, wife of Robert Cook of the town of Red Cedar; Albert, of Rice Lake, Barron County, and August, the subject of this memoir. August Cook was educated in the Beyer school in the town of Red Cedar and in the Menomonie city schools, which latter he attented for four years. Until 25 years old he earned his living as an ordinary laborer; but he was too ambitious to continue any longer as such. In 1874 he entered the ranks of independent farmers, buying 80 acres in Section 12, town of Red Cedar, and from that beginning he progressed step by step through hard work to a position of comparative affluence. In course of time by additional land purchases he increased the size of his farm to 320 acres and continued to operate it until 1901, with the assistance of his sons erecting substantial buildings, cultivating his land and increasing the amount and quality of his stock. Then, having rounded out half a century of life, he divided his farm between his sons August and Fred, each receiving 160 acres, and retired from active work. As a citizen of his town Mr. Cook in his earlier years rendered good public service along such lines as road building and others, thereby contributing to the further civilization and improvement of this region, and his personal character has always commanded the respect of his fellow townsmen. Mr. Cook was married in Elk Mound, July 9, 1877, to Amelia Valaska, who was born in Germany, Sept. 5, 1857, daughter of Michael and Mary (Sukow) Valaska, who were early settlers in the town of Elk Mound. Mr. and Mrs. August Cook have eight children living, namely, Albert, Amelia, August, Lillie, Robert, Fred, Ida and Velma, in regard to whom the following is a further record. Albert, born April 25, 1879, resides in the town of Spring Brook. He married Ida Wahl and has three children, Gerhart, Martin and Elmer. Amelia, born Sept. 1, 1880, is now Mrs. Albert Hagen of the town of Elk Mound and has three children, Carl, Henry and Hannah. August, born Aug. 5, 1883, is operating part of the home farm in the town of Red Cedar. Lillie, born March 5, 1885, is now Mrs. Frank Grambow of the town of Red Cedar, and her children are Wilfred, Alice, Mabel and Richard. Robert, bcrn Aug. 3, 1886, is a farmer in the town of He married Emma Lentz. Fred, bern Jan. 11, 1888, is operating the 160 acre farm he received from his father. Ida, born Jan. 25, 1890, is now Mrs. Henry Hintz of the town of Sherman, and has four children, Evelyn, Edna, Loraine and Vernon. Velma, born Dec. 6, 1900, is Mrs. Arnold Blake of the town of Red Cedar and the mother of one child, Alma.

Frank Hintzman, prominent in the business circles of Menomonie as proprietor of a first class furniture store and undertaking establishment, which he has himself built up to its present condition, was born in Germany, Nov. 17, 1866, son of Christ and Mary (Wolf) Hintzman. The parents, farmers in their native land, came to the United States in 1881, spending their first year in this country in Texas. Thev then came to Dunn County, Wisconsin, arriving in Menomonie, July 11, 1882. For the next six years Christ Hintzman was employed in the sawmills of the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company, and at the end of that time reverted to his original occupation of farming, in 1889 buying a tract of wild land in the town of Sherman, Dunn County. This property in time he made into a good farm and there he and his wife spent their latter years, Mrs. Hintzman passing away first, on June 15, 1896, and Mr. Hintzman on April 19, 1900. They had two children, William C., who is now operating the old home farm, and Frank of Menomonie. Frank Hintzman was educated chiefly in Germany but later attended district school for a while in Dunn County. For eight winters he worked in lumber camps for the Knapp, Stout & Then in 1892 he became connected with the line of enterprise in Co. Company. which he is now engaged, entering the employ of George Galloway, proprietor of a furniture and undertaking establishment, with whom he remained until 1900. On March 15, 1900, he entered into partnership with Hans Swenby, under the firm name of Hintzman & Swenby, and together they started a furniture business in the old S. B. French building on Main Street between Third and Fourth. At the end of three years Mr. Hintzman bought out his partner and subsequently continued the business alone, for five years remaining in the same location. He then moved his stock to the Heller building in the same block and there remained until July, 1914, when he moved into his present building, which is his own property, located at 432 This building measures 40 x 92 feet in ground dimensions, and is Main Street. two stories high with a full basement. Mr. Hintzman occupies the entire building, using the second floor for casket and show rooms, and carrying a large and fine stock of undertaking supplies. The considerable advance he has made in prosperity has been due to hard and persistent work carefully planned and to his having built up a good reputation for honest dealing. In 1908 he was elected county coroner, which office he held until 1918. His society affiliations are with the Knights of Pythias, the Modern Wccdmen of America and the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. He was married July 2, 1892, to Anna Feldt, who died Dec. 20, 1902, leaving three children, Mabel, Ruth and Frances. Mabel is now Mrs. Herman O. Burwitz of Menomonie and has two children, Elizabeth Ann and Marion. Frances, the wife of R. N. Sargent of Menomonie has a daughter, Anna Belle. Mr. Hintzman was married secondly July 18, 1904, to Emma Schultz. He has a fine residence at 516 Wilson Avenue, which he occupies with his wife, and also owns a residence at 1008 Tenth Street and a fine summer cottage above the Cedar Falls Dam.

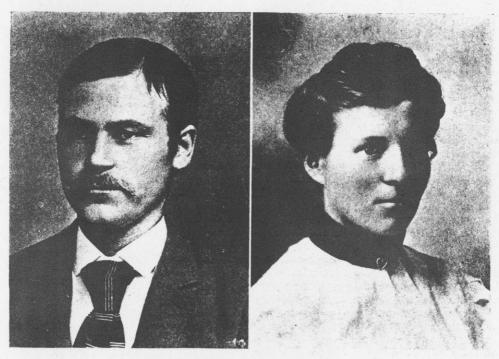

Alonzo L. Best, late proprietor of Meadowside Farm in Section 8, town of Tiffany, who may well be remembered as a representative citizen, having served four years in the State Assembly, was born at Big Springs, Adams County, Wis., Oct. 6, 1854, son of Lycurgus C. and Angeline (Smith) Best. The father, Lycurgus Best, who was born in Pennsylvania in 1836, and who came to Wisconsin with his rarents, was never a very strong man. He had, however, the benefit of a college education, which qualified him to teach school, which he did both in Adams County and later in Dunn County. In 1857 he was married at Big Springs to Angeline Smith, then a girl of about 17, who was born in Adams County, and had been one of his pupils in a school he taught there. In those days teachers received very small salaries and for some years life must have been a hard struglge with them, though doubtless Mr. Best did other work at times. In 1866 they came to Dunn County, where they could get cheap land and perhaps in time build up a farm home. The journey of 150 miles, or more, was made with a wagon and ox team, and it is said that when Mr. and Mrs. Lycurgus Best arrived in Dunn County they were very poor. In that respect they were no different from many other early settlers in the county, though Mr. Best's lack of a robust physique was a serious handicap to him, as his progress was necessarily slower than that of his stronger neighbors. But he settled bravely on a tract of wild land in Section 8, town of Tiffany, and proceded as best he could to make a farm out of it, also teaching school at times, whereby he made a few extra dollars. There he spent some 28 years, or until his life closed in 1894, when he was about 58 years old. He had made fair progress on his farm, which his wife sold after his death, moving to the village of Downing, where she passed away. Alonzo L. Best gained his education chiefly through home study being assisted by his father, as he had but little time to attend school. He made good progress, however, and at the age of 23 was teaching winter school in the town of Tiffany, and he also taught for a while in the town of New Haven at a school four miles from his home, walking back and forth each day, and besides this he attended Thus his time was fully occupied. While still a young man, to the farm chores. with an eye to the future, he bought 40 acres of wild land in Section 8, adjoining his parent's farm, which was the nucleus of the present farm of Meadowside, as he subsequently added to it by additional purchases until he had 160 acres, or a quarter section. His first house was one of logs, hewed inside and out, and with that starting-point he went ahead with the development of the place, breaking more soil each year and from time to time putting up better buildings. The best of these have been erected within recent years, and include a substantial, two-story frame house erected in 1918, and a barn of 80 x 136 x 14 feet with a full 8-foot basement and a balloon roof. This barn is provided with a complete steel equipment. Previous to the year 1894 Mr. Best bred high grade Guernsey cattle, keeping a pure bred sire, and he was the first to introduce pure bred cattle into this locality. In 1894 he began the breeding of pure bred Double Standard Shorthorned cattle, and also pure bred Poland-China hogs. Starting with five head of these cattle, he raised from 40 to 50 head each year, the best of which he sells for breeding purposes, shipping them to various states, including Wisconsin, Minnesota, North and South Dakota, Illinois, Indiana, Kansas, Kentucky and Nebraska. In politics Mr. Best was a progressive Republican and during a period of 25 years rendered continuous public service in town or school office. For 30 years he was the clerk of School District No. 3. In 1918 he was elected to the State Assembly without opposition, and, having creditably served out his term of two years, was reelected in 1920. While in the legislature he served on the educational and finance committees. His highly successful career was brought to a close in 1922, his death occurring on June 24, 1924, and depriving the community of a man who always stood for what he believed to be right and for the best interests of the people among whom he lived. He was one of the organizers of Chimney Rock Creamery and was an inflential force in business, social and political matters throughout this locality. He was fraternally affiliated with the Masonic Blue Lodge at Glenwood City and also with the Odd Fellows' lodge and Modern Woodmen camp at Downing. Alonzo L. Best was married in Counersville, on July 15, 1874, to Cora May Brewer, who was born in Jackson County, May 12, 1861, daughter of John and Hortense (Sutliff) Brewer of Connersville, who settled in the town of Tiffany in or about the year 1865. Of the children of Mr. and Mrs. Sutliff there is one other survivor, a son, John, now living in Fergus Falls, Minn. To Mr. and Mrs. Best five children were born, Edna H., Hugh R., Gertrude I., Alonzo B. and Theodore G. Edna H. died in 1911. Hugh R. is living at New Richmond, Wis. Gertrude I. is now Mrs. F. E. Ramer of River Falls, Wis. Alonzo B. was graduated from the Downing High School in 1916 and from the River Falls Normal School in 1918, after which he spent three years as a high school teacher in Washburn, Wis., and Paoli, Kansas. In 1921 he entered Wisconsin University to study law but on account of his father's poor health had to give up that intention. In June, 1917 he enlisted at Duluth for service in the war, and for 17 months subsequently was marine guard on board the U. S. S. Pittsburg, 11 months of that time being spent in French and six months in Mediterranean and Adriatic waters. He was discharged at Norfolk, Va., on Nov. 29, 1919. Theodore G.'s education included four years in the Downing High School and one year in the River Falls Normal School. Mr. Best's family also included a grandson, Harold, whom he adopted as a son, and who is now at home. The sons, Alonzo B. and Theodore G. are now operating the farm for their mother. Mr. Best was a Uniterian in religious faith, while Mrs. Best belongs to the Episcopal Church.

Jens Gottliebson, a successful general farmer in the town of Otter Creek, was born in Norway, March 30, 1868, son of Gottlieb Olson and Anna (Jensen) Olson. The parents were also natives of Norway, and were farmers by occupation. After the father's death in his native land the mother came to America and has since made her home with her son, Jens. There were 11 children in the family, three of whom died when young. Of the others, Ole, Hans, Ingeborg and Berenharda are still in Norway. Eddie, resides in Colfax, Dunn County, Wis.; Gurine is the wife of Anton Krogness of Colfax township; Randena is the wife of John Krogness of the town of Otter Creek, and Jens is the subject of this sketch. Jens Gottliebson as a boy attended school in Norway and remained in his native land until he was 26 years old, doing farm work and also at certain seasons being engaged in fishing. It was in 1894 that he emigrated to this country, first locating at Stoughton, Wis., where he remained for four years, working on farms and in a wagon shop. From there he came to Dunn County in 1898, and engaged in farming on his own account in the town of Otter Creek, buying a tract of 160 acres in Section 26. It was all wild land and covered with brush. Mr. Gottliebson commenced operations by building a small frame house and a log barn, after which he began clearing the land. He had not yet married and for about nine years kept bachelor's hall. In course of time he built a better house and a frame barn, as well as other buildings, and kept on improving his place. He had made pretty good progress on it when in the fall of 1907 he was married in Menomonie to Anna Johnson, who was born in Norway, daughter of John and Marie (Olson) Johnson. Her parents never came to America. They had 11 children, two of whom died in infancy. Of the others Anna, is Mrs. Jens Gottliebson of Dunn County, Wis. and Jaccb, Ole, Anton, Bernhardt, Agnes, Magnus, Gunda and Jonas are still in Norway. Mr. Gottliebson has made good progress on the farm since his marriage and now has 118 acres under the plow. Also at the present time he has 18 head of grade Durham cattle. He does general farming and dairying, raises Poland-China hogs and some sheep, and also cultivates tobacco, besides keeping chickens.

George O. Chrislaw, proprietor of Woodland Farm in Section 9, town of Spring Brook, was born in Dane County, Wisconsin, Dec. 6, 1882, son of John M. and The parents were natives of New York State, the Etta (La Mont) Chrislaw. mother coming of an old American family dating back to very early colonial times, as she was a descendant in the ninth generation. They were still young when they came west to Dane County, Wisconsin, where they were married and settled on a There they remained until 1909, when they came to Dunn County, buying an improved farm in the town of Tainter, which John M. Chrislaw operated until farm 1914. He then retired, sold the farm and removed to Menomonie, where he spent his last years, dying Dec. 30, 1923. His wife, who survived him, is now living with her son George O. Mr. and Mrs. John M. Chrislaw were the parents of four children: Albert M., new a farmer in the town of Oak Grove, Barron County; May, who is Ralph Hickcox of the town of Spring Brook, Dunn County; George O., the direct subject of this sketch; and Jessie, now Mrs. Harry Kent of the town of Red George O. Chrislaw acquired a district school education in Dane County Cedar and later took a short course in the agricultural department of the University of Wisconsin at Madison. Aside from the time spent in school or college, he was engaged in assisting his father to make the home farm a paying proposition, and they were thus associated together until 1914, in which year George O. bought the old Capt. Sherman Lake Farm, a tract of 190 acres in Section 9, town of Spring Brook, the name of which he has changed to Woodland Farm. He has made a great improvement in the buildings, has erected several out-buildings, remodeled and rebuilt the house, and in 1924 put up a fine barn of $36 \ge 88$ feet, with 12-foot posts, gothic roof and the latest Libby & Star barn equipment. He is engaged in general farming and dairying, keeping Holstein cattle and raising Poland-China hogs, and is one of the substantial and respected citizens of his town, interested in local improvements. Mr. Chrislaw was married March 28, 1912, in Tecumseh, Neb., to Miss Mabel Roach, the daughter of William and Susan A. (Twining) Roach; both her parents are now deceased.

Allan H. Dickson, business man and farmer, well known in most parts of Dunn County through his various activities, is a native of this county, having been born in the town of Spring Brook, Sept. 8, 1875, son of Henry and Hattie (Fuller) Dick-The father was also born in the town of Spring Brook, where he was reared and sen. lived for many years. He subsequently moved to Eau Claire, but since 1918 has made his home in Rhinelander, Wis. Allan H. Dickson was reared and educated in the town of Spring Brook and lived with his grandparents until he grew to manhood. After completing his common school studies, he took a course in the agricultural department of the University of Wisconsin and has since followed farming more or less, having owned five different farms in the towns of Spring Brook and Elk Mound, on all of which he has made valuable improvements. During the past few years he has dealt in real estate, and for several years while doing so occupied a comfortable residence which he owns in the village of Elk Mound; but having in 1922 bought the old David Lee Farm in Section 15, town of Spring, he has since made his home there. He is a stockholder in the Elk Mound Cooperative Creamery and for four years was president of the company. For two years he served as chairman of the town of Elk Mound, at the same time being a member of the county board, and after moving to the village he served as a supervisor. Since 1918 he has been a trustee of the Dunn County Fair Association, while as a member of the Masonic order he belongs to the Blue Lodge and Chapter in Menomonie. These various activities have made him a busy man and brought him into contact with many people in all parts of Dunn County, and in consequence he has a wide circle of friends and acquaintances. Mr. Dickson was married Oct. 8, 1903, in the town of Red Cedar, to Nellie Millar, who was born March 10, 1880, in that town, daughter of William and Sarah (McCormick) Millar. He and his wife are the parents of four children: Helen, born June 28, 1905; Eva, born June 10, 1909; Jean born Nov. 10, 1910, and Thomas, born March 4, 1914. The three eldest are attending the Elk Mound High School, while Thomas is a pupil in the Oakland School in District No. 7.

Luis Dietsche, proprietor of River View Farm, and engaged in general farming and dairying in the town of Sand Creek, was born in Coon Valley, Vernon County, Wis., June 19, 1862, son of Herman and Marie Dietsche. The parents were natives of Baden, Germany, who came to this country in 1862, buying in Coon Valley, Vernon County, Wis., 120 acres of land, which was mostly wild. A log house and barn stood on it and with this for a starting-point, Herman Dietsche plunged into the task of developing a farm. After continuing his improvements on the place until 1882, he and his wife came to Dunn County with their son Luis, with whom they spent their remaining years, Mr. Dietsche dying in 1909 at the age of 82, and Mrs. Dietsche in 1921 at the age of 87 years. Of their five children two, Elizabeth and Mary, died in Vernon County. The other three, Luis, Herman F. and Gusta, are living, Gusta being the wife of Charles Wax of Bloomer, Wis., and Herman F., residing in Bloomer. Luis Dietsche in his youthful days helped his father develop the family farm in Vernon County, sometimes, however, working out. At the age of 20 he came to Dunn County and bought 120 acres of land in Section 35, town of Sand Creek, later buying 40 acres more. The development of this was not started at once, however, as, on coming to Dunn County accompanied by his parents-the journey being made with a wagon and team-he at first rented a farm, and he continued to operate rented farms for several years. When he began the development of his own property, he built a small house which he later enlarged, he and his father being associated together in this work, and in time he built a barn of 34 x 64 feet, a silo, and sheds for different farm purposes, doing the carpenter and mason's work himself. He has cleared 115 acres of the land, having it now under the plow. He has made good progress in general farming and dairying, having at the present time 19 head of mixed cattle, and also raising Duroc-Jersey hogs.

For six years he has served as school treasurer. Mr. Dietsche was married in the town of Sand Creek in 1890, to Amanda Abraham, daughter of Albert and Emelia Abraham, who came from West Prussia, Germany, and were early settlers in the town of Grant, Dunn County. Both Mr. and Mrs. Abraham are now deceased, the former having passed away at the age of 95 years and the latter at that of 80. Mr. and Mrs. Dietsche have been the parents of five children, one of whom, Marie, is now deceased. The four survivors are: Theresa, wife of Otto Reisinger of Minneapolis; Harold, a farmer of Chippewa County; Martha, who is new Mrs. Leo Foster of Black River Falls, and Herman L., who is operating the home farm under rental.

George Vasey Creaser, a typical pioneer of Dunn County, now deceased, was born in England, Dec. 15, 1835, and was brought to the United States by his parents, William and Fanny Creaser, who in time located in Illinois. In 1857 his father and he bought, through a mutual friend, a Mr. Beckwith, 160 acres of land in the town of Dunn, Dunn County, the father getting the west half of the northwest quarter of Section 6, and George V. the east half of the northwest quarter of the same section. On July 10, 1859, George V. Creaser took Catherine Ellering, the girl to whom he was engaged, across the state line to Wilmot, Kenosha County, Wis., where they were married. Then they returned to Illinois, where they remained until Oct. 31, 1859, when they left for Dunn County, Wis., arriving at Dunnville on November 5. There Knapp, Stout & Co. were operating and Mr. Creaser worked for them for two years. Then he began farming cn rented land, and so continued for four years. At the end of that time he then bought 80 acres of land near the village of Downsville, where he lived for about two years, and then he moved onto his 80 acres in Section 6 that he had bought before coming to Dunn County. There was a log house on the land that he and his father had built in 1863, and into which Mr. Creaser moved with his family. He now began to develop his own farm, the work being a pioneer task that kept him busy early and late for years to come. He cleared and broke the land, also buying 60 acres more, which gave him a farm of 140 acres. By the year 1880 he had made such progress that he was able to build a good substantial frame residence, choosing, however, another location, and also erected other buildings. Still later he put up a better barn and outbuildings. There he continued to reside, engaged successfully in general agriculture until old age overtook him and he passed away in his eightieth year on April 11, 1915, a highly respected and esteemed citizen. His wife Catherine, who was born in McHenry County, Ill., in November, 1840, died on the farm Nov. 28, 1918. They were the parents of three children: Fanny A., bcrn Aug. 28, 1860, who is now Mrs. Joseph Cotts of Menomonie, and William R. and Newton G. of the town of Dunn.

William R. Creaser, a representative of one of the pioneer families of the town of Dunn, residing on the farm established by his parents 57 years ago in Section 6, was born in this town, July 23, 1867, son of George V. and Catherine (Ellering) Creaser. As a boy he attended the Creaser school, which was named after the family, and as he grew up helped his father to develop the home farm, on which he remained until 25 years of age. He then bought a grubbing machine and for eight years thereafter was engaged chiefly in grubbing and land breaking for those opening up new farms. For many years also he was interested in bee culture and honey production, which he carried on quite extensively. He also followed carpenter work, as well as farming, continuing to reside on the old home farm and in a comfortable house of his own. He also has a work shop, garage and automobile, and keeps gasoline, oils and grease for sale. He is a stockholder in the Downsville Cooperative Creamery and is fraternally affiliated with the Modern Woodmen of America. For three years formerly Mr. Creaser served as a member of the town board. He has never married.

Newton G. Creaser, proprietor of the old Creaser farm in the town of Dunn, was born on this farm May 25, 1877, son of George V. and Catherine (Ellering) Creaser. He acquired his education in the Creaser school of his neighborhood and assisted his parents, working on the home farm for his father until 1913, when he rented it, and for seven years afterwards conducted it as a renter. He then bought it and has since continued to carry on general farming and dairying. He has kept the buildings put up by his father in good repair, and has a herd of grade Holstein cattle. As a stockholder he is interested in the Downsville Co-operative Creamery. He has served as a member of the district school board and belongs to the camp of Modern Woodmen in Downsville. Mr. Creaser was married Sept. 13, 1912, to Eliza Piercy of Spring Brook, who was born in England, Sept. 12, 1880. He and his wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. They have two children: Samuel G., born Feb. 5, 1914; and Thomas W., born May 8, 1918.

George R. Topliss, one of the leading business men of the village of Eau Galle, was born in Slatington, Penn., Feb. 14, 1868, son of George and Fanny (Wade) Topliss. Both parents were natives of England, the father born at Castle Dunnington, June 1, 1841, and the mother in Ilkerton, Derbyshire, in 1837. They were married April 30, 1864, and a little over two years later, on June 24, 1866, took passage on board a vessel for the United States. After residing in Slatington, Penn., until 1869, they came west to Wisconsin and settled in Pepin County, where they remained for 20 years. At the end of that time they moved to a farm in the town of Dunn, Dunn County, and later, with his son, George R., the father started a wagon and repair shop in the village of Eau Galle; but after a few years, on account of failing health he was obliged to retire from business life. On Oct. 14, 1900, occurred the death of his wife Fanny, after which he moved to Chicago, and later to Sashkatchewan, Canada, where he made his home for a time. On Oct. 17, 1904, he married for his second wife Elizabeth Hazel of Chicago. He lived for some seven years longer, passing away at Eau Galle, on Feb. 19, 1916. He was the father of five children: George R., of Eau Galle village; Clara E., wife of C. N. Abbott of the town of Dunn; Elizabeth A., who is Mrs. George Ware of Edmonton, Canada; Sarah E., wife of Arthur Sunderlin of Downsville; and Fanny, who married Charles Gordon and is now deceased. George T. Topliss as a boy attended district school in Pepin County and did farm work there until 1882. He then came to Dunn County and settled on a 40-acre tract of land owned by his father in the town of Dunn, and there he lived a bachelor's life until his parents joined him in 1889. It was in September, 1891, that he came with them to Eau Galle and that he and his father established the wagon and repair shop. Of this George R. has been the sole proprietor since the father's retirement in 1892. For many years he also conducted an implement business, and when the automobile came into general use, he turned a part of his shop into a garage. Since 1895 he has been the owner of the community building known as Topliss Hall. Mr. Topliss has been active in many things of a public nature. He has helped to build churches and schools, has served 12 vears on the board of trustees of the Dunn County Asylum, having been president of the board since 1918, was clerk of the town of Eau Galle for seven years, chairman of the town board for two years and therefore a member of the county board, and in all these offices has shown good practical ability and been of use to his town and county. He owns some Canadian farm land and also has property in Menomonie. Fraternally he is affiliated with the Blue Lodge of Masons at Durand and with the Royal Neighbors in Eau Galle. Mr. Topliss was married Dec. 28, 1892, in the town of Dunn, to Cora M. Gardiner, who was born Dec. 2, 1871, daughter of John and Lutheria E. (Fitch) Gardiner. Her parents were natives of New Hampshire who came to Dunn County in 1856, pre-empting 160 acres of land in the town of Dunn, where Mr. Gardiner spent the remainder of his life, dying Feb. 17, 1876. He was a very active man, not only developing a very good farm, but also helping to build roads and schools and doing considerable to help new settlers as they came into the town, all of which caused him to become prominent and influential. He and his wife had three children: Guy, now in Elmwood, Pierce County, Wis.; Cora, wife of George R. Topliss of Eau Galle; and Carrie, who died at the age of five years. For a number of years after the death of her husband, Jchn Gardiner, Mrs. Gardiner, remained a widow. Then on May 10, 1888, she was united in marriage with Fenno B. Ames a son of Jason F. Ames who settled in what is now the town of Dunn in 1854. Fenno B. Ames, died Dec. 2, 1919, and since then Mrs. Ames has made her home with her daughter, Mrs. George R. Topliss of Eau Galle. Mr. and Mrs. George R. Topliss are the parents of a son, Lynn G., born Feb. 9, 1901, who is a graduate of Stout Institute at Menomonie, and is now teaching in Marinette, Wis. The family are affiliated by membership with the Methodist Episcopal Church.

Louis G. Meyer, a retired farmer and respected citizen residing in the village of Elk Mound, was born in Washington County, Wisconsin, Dec. 8, 1853, son of Ludwig and Anna Catherine (Todter) Meyer. The parents were born and spent their early years in Hanover, Germany, coming to the United States in 1848 at the time of the German revolution. When they left home they were not married, but on board the sailing vessel which brought them to this country they became man and wife. In Washington County, Wisconsin, they settled on 40 acres of timber land, building a log cabin with a dirt floor, and making their home there for ten years, during which time they made some progress as farmers. In 1858 they moved to Chippewa County, locating in the town of Sigel, but soon removing to Chippewa Falls, where they made their home for a year. They next bought 140 acres of wild land in the town of Eagle Point (now Tilden), Chippewa County and began to improve the place, Ludwig Meyer in time building up a fine farm there with an excellent set of buildings. On March 27, 1896, he suffered a bereavement in the loss of his wife, but continued to conduct the farm until his own death on March The children in the Meyer family were Herman, Louis, Anna, Otto, 28, 1915. Gustave, Adolph, Caroline, Michael and William, all of whom are living except Gustave. Louis G. Meyer remained with his parents until he was 25 years old, assisting his father to develop the homestead. In 1878 he began independent farming, buying 80 acres of wild land in the town of Auburn, Chippewa County. Having built a small frame house and straw barn on it, he made it his home for five years, during which time he made improvements on the property. He then sold out and moved to Chippewa Falls, where for ten vears he was employed in a lumber vard. He then came to Dunn County and for five years thereafter rented a farm in the town of Red Cedar. His next investment was the purchase of a farm of 160 acres in the town of Spring Brook, which was an improved piece of property. There he farmed until the fall of 1919, when he leased the place to his son, Raymond, and, retiring from active work, moved to the village of Elk Mound, where he has since resided. In the town of Spring Brook he served as school director. He is a stockholder in the Elk Mound Co-operative Creamery and one of the substantial citizens in his community, whose success has been achieved by hard work and foresight and who has made a good record for honesty and efficiency. Mr. Meyer was married March 11, 1880, to Amelia Vonderheiden, who was born in Chippewa County, Wis., April 24, 1860, and of this union six children have been born, namely, William A., Gustave R., Albert G., Alva M., Raymond W., and an infant who died unnamed. William A., born March 8, 1881, and now a rancher in Montana, married Mrs. Mary McDonald. Gustave R., born Aug. 3, 1883, who is a veterinary surgeon in Elk Mound, married Kate Bruce, and has three children, Louis, Ellery and Nancy. Albert G., born July 5, 1886, now of Idaho, married Mary Evelyn Long and has three children, Alma, Nellie, and an infant, who at the date of this writing has not yet been named. Alva M., born July 7, 1893, died in her twenty-sixth year, on Jan. 12, 1919. Raymond W., born Feb. 22, 1896, married Louise Konke and has two children, Galvin and Ethel. He and his family live on the old home farm in the town of Spring Brook. The Meyer family are members of the Evangelical Church and enjoy a high social standing.

James Longdo, a typical pioneer of Dunn County, now living practically retired in the town of Sand Creek, was born in Adams County, Wisconsin, April 5, 1854, son of William and Mary (Wakefield) Longdo. The father was from Montreal, Canada, and the mother from Ohio. Married in Indiana, they moved to Adams County, Wisconsin, in the early 50's, and there William Longdo followed his trade of carpenter and cabinet-maker until his death in 1862. They were the parents of four children, of whom James is the only one now living. The three deceased are, Lydia, who was the wife of W. P. La Forge; Ellen, who was Mrs.

Fred Andeman, and Henry. The latter was one of the defenders of the Union, enlisting at Menomonie in 1862 in a regiment of Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry, and serving three years, being in Sherman's army on its march to the sea. Some time after the death of her first husband, Mrs. Mary Longdo became the wife of Samuel La Forge and they came to Cedar Falls, Dunn County, where she kept a boarding-house while Mr. La Forge worked out. Before the close of the war they started farming in the town of Sand Creek, taking a homestead of 160 acres in Section 34, to which they journeyed slowly by wagon, leading a cow. Mr. La Forge started at once to build a log house and until he had it finished they lived and slept cut in the open air. In his task of breaking the land he was greatly assisted by his step-son James, who drove the five yoke of oxen. The creation of a farm was a matter of time and hard work but was successfully accomplished. It remained the family home, on which Mr. La Forge died March 6, 1885, and his wife, Sept. 21, 1899. Of their marriage one child was born, a daughter, Josephine, who married Lyman Dyer, a farmer in the town of Sand Creek. James Longdo was nine years old when he accompanied his mother and step-father to the town of Sand Creek. As he was given opportunity he attended rural school, helping in the work of the farm more and more every year and also working out as he was but a young lad when he went to Eau Claire, where he lived with a Mr. Culberson for whom he drove ox teams and helped to skid logs. On one occasion he walked from Augusta to the woods, the distance from the village to the camp being 35 miles. They built some board shanties with straw-covered floors and young Longdo stayed on that job for three months, earning money which he afterwards applied to the purchase of land. In fact his life as a lumberjack and river man covered a period of 15 years, during nearly all of which time he was in the employ of the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company. He continued to buy land until he had 380 acres, all wild when he bought it, but most of which he cleared, also erecting buildings and developing a good farm. Having learned the carpenter's trade when young, for 23 years he did all his own building. In 1920 Mr. Longdo sold 280 acres of his farm and moved across the road to the remaining tract of 100 acres, on which he built the nice modern house which he now occupies. He rents out the land, of which there are 55 acres broken, the balance being in fine timber and pasture. He has long been one of the best known men in the town of Sand Creek, and he formerly served on the school board of his district as treasurer. He was first married in Mauston, Juneau County, Wis., to Carrie Hoard, by whom he had one child, Roy. His first wife having died, he was married in 1885, to Ida Payne, daughter of Cornelius and Levina Payne. Her parents, who were early settlers in Mauston, subsequently went to Oregon, wherethey bought land on which they found gold, and, liking the country, they spent the balance of their lives there. Of Mr. Longdo's second marriage there have been nine children, of whom eight are living: Adrian, born Aug. 28, 1886, who died July 1, 1923; Nina, born Dec. 3, 1887; Nora, born May 22, 1889; Ruby, born June 23, 1891; Pearl, born March 2, 1893; William, born Aug. 1, 1896; Roy, born July 28, 1899; Mary, born April 17, 1902; and Hazel, born Aug. 30, 1904. Nina married Elmer Hotvedt, Nora became the wife of Malcolm McNaughton and Ruby married Carl Hotvedt. The mother, Mrs. Ida Longdo, died Jan. 29, 1910.

Alfred Cockeram, proprietor of one of the good farms in the town of Lucas, known as Corn Hill Farm, and situated in Section 13, was born on this same farm Sept. 27, 1865, son of Osmond and Ann (Rick) Cockeram. As a boy he attended the "Simon School" in the town of Lucas, and he grew to manhood on the home place, occupied in assisting his father. Thus his life was spent until the age of 34 years, at which time, his father having given him 80 acres of land just north of the parental homestead, he began cultivating it on his own account, and there he resided for several years, or until the spring of 1922, when he again took up his residence on the home farm, of which he received a share at the time of his father's death in 1917. He has resided on it since and today has a total of 275 acres in one piece in Section 13, and 40 acres in Section 28, or 315 acres in all. The farm is well stocked with Pole-Durham and Shorthorn cattle, and Mr. Cockeram is a stockholder in the New Hudson Road Creamery. He has always been a hard worker and has been a helpful man in his community in many ways. Mr. Cockeram was first married to Harriett Trig, by whom he had four children: Floyd, who was killed at the age of 13 years in a runaway accident; Grace, now Mrs. Rhinehart Latsch of Arcadia, Wis.; Lawrence, who is in San Pedro, Calif.; and Alice, who died at the age of 18 months. On Dec. 1, 1916 Mr. Cockeram married Mrs. Emil Carlson, whose maiden name was Ida Hintzman, her parents being Frank and Martha (Koehler) Hintzman, now living in North Menomonie. Mrs. Cockeram is the mother of three children, a son Clarence by her first husband, and a son and daughter, Florence and Harvey, who are the children of her second marriage with Mr. Cockeram. The family are affiliated religiously with the M. E. Church in the town of Lucas.

Wilhelm F. F. Lemke, owner of a good modern farm of 120 acres in Section 24, town of Lucas, known as Shady Home Farm, was born in Pommern, Germany, Aug. 11, 1853, son of Ferdinand and Dorothy (Brammer) Lemke. It was in 1872 that the family emigrated to the United States, landing at Castle Garden, New York, whence they came directly to Dunn County, Wisconsin, locating in Menomonie, where Ferdinand Lemke found employment with Knapp, Stout & Co. They remained there two years, after which the parents made their home with their son August, who was operating a farm in Section 1, town of Lucas. Later they returned to Menomonie and still later took up their residence with their son Wilhelm, on whose farm the father died in 1897, and the mother some 22 years later, in 1919. Of their family of six children, four daughters died in Germany, while of the two sons, August and Wilhelm, August died in 1919, leaving Wilhelm the only survivor. Wilhelm F. F. Lemke acquired his education in his native land and was 19 years old when he came to the United States with his parents and brother August. His first employment in this country was on the Moore farm for Knapp, Stout & Co., and he worked there for three seasons, being employed in the woods at lumbering during the winter months. Also, until 1883, he worked more or less in and about the mills. He then purchased his brother's farm in Section 1, town of Lucas, which he operated until 1901, making some improvements on it. Then he bought his present farm of 120 acres in Section 24, town of Lucas, which during the 20 years that he was active on it he developed into an excellent farm with good, substantial buildings and all necessary modern equipment. In 1921 he rented it to his son Arnold, but still makes his home on it. He is a stockholder in the Hudson Road Creamery. Mr. Lemke was married May 27, 1877, in the town of Red Cedar to Wilhelmina Westphal, of whom he was deprived by death on Nov. 1, 1923, after they had spent 47 years together in happy wedlock. Of the nine children born to Mr. and Mrs. Lemke, the first four, Gusta, Lena, Louis and Emil, are The cthers are: Paul, a farmer in Marathon County; Julius, who is deceased. farming in the town of Menomonie, Dunn County; William, of Chicago; Arnold, who married Olga Koolmo and operates the Lemke farm, he and his wife having one child, Jane R.; and Wilhelmina, who is now Mrs. Joseph Jesse of Menomonie. The Lemke family are members of St. Paul's Lutheran Church in Menomonie.

August Klatt, who has been a resident of Dunn County for over 40 years, and for a considerable part of that time engaged in agricultural pursuits, was born in Germany, Feb. 4, 1856. He was educated in his native land and as a young man served in the German army. It was in 1883 that he came to the United States, landing at New York, in which city he remained for six months. At the end of that time he came west to Menomonie, Wis., and entered the employ of the Knappr Stout & Co. Company as a butcher, being thus occupied until 1885. In that yeahe turned to agriculture, buying 40 acres of wild land in Section 31, town of Menom. onie, and there he developed a good farm, that is now owned by Adolph Steinke, In 1909, when he sold that farm, Mr. Klatt purchased the old J. T. Holden farm in the town of Lucas, which he operated until 1914, in which year he moved to Menomonie, buying a six-acre tract within the city limits, where he did market gardening for three years, or until 1917, when he disposed of that property and has since lived with his son William in Section 31, town of Menomonie, Mr. Klatt was married in Menomonie, Nov. 28, 1884, to Henrietta Schultz, who was born in Germany, Sept. 25, 1863, and came to the United States in 1883. Of this marriage there were two children: William, above mentioned, and Martha, who is now Mrs. William Hanson of Menomonie, and has a son, Herbert.

William J. Klatt, who is successfully engaged in agriculture and dairying in the town of Menomonie, was bern in the city of Menomonie, Sept. 22, 1885, son of August and Henrietta (Schultz) Klatt. He acquired his education in the district school and at an early age began work on the farm. Until 1913 he was associated with his father as helper, but in that year he took over the farm, which he operated for himself until 1915. He then sold and bought the Swen Grinde farm of 60 acres in Section 31, town of Menomonie, and in 1917 he enlarged the scope of his operations by buying an 80-acre tract adjoining in Section 36, of the town of Lucas. He keeps a large herd of high grade Holstein cattle with a pure bred sire, and is doing an extensive dairying business. He has put up a set of fine buildings, including a comfortable residence; a basement barn of $38 \ge 90$ feet, with the Mitchell barn equipment; a granary 16×32 feet, and a stave silo of 12×24 feet, and his place is classed among the good dairy farms of Dunn County. Mr. Klatt was married Nov. 5, 1908, in the city of Menomonie, to Anna Holtzhueter, daughter of August and Amelia (Krueger) Holtzhueter, and he and his wife are the parents of six children, who were born as follows: Arnold, Dec. 9, 1909; Edna, July 21, 1912; Alfred, April 18, 1914; Paul, Oct. 28, 1917; Freda, Nov. 28, 1919, and Walter, April 29, 1921. The family are united by membership with St. Paul's Lutheran Church of Menom-

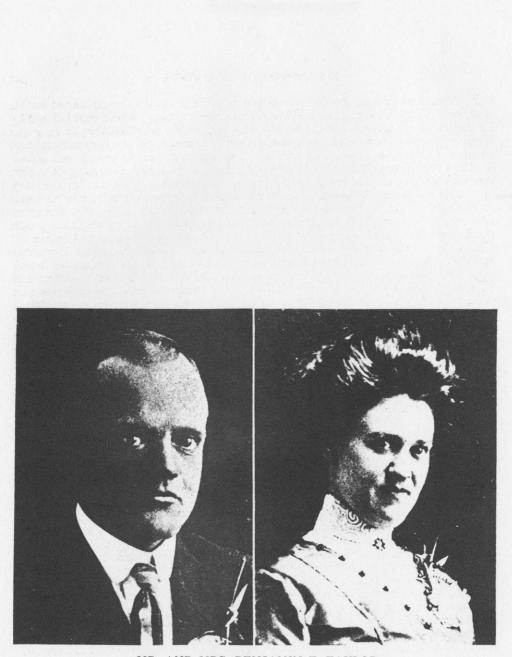

Bruno Jaeger, proprietor of the Menomonie bakery, Menomonie, was born in Austria, May 13, 1860, son of Frank and Helen (Kretschmer) Jaeger. The parents were also natives of Austria who emigrated to the United States, reaching Milwaukee, Wis., May 13, 1873, and there Frank Jaeger at different periods of his active career operated a flour mill, bakery and lumber yard. Bruno Jaeger acquired his school education partly in Austria and partly in Milwaukee, Wis. He then learned the book binder's trade, which he followed until 1883, in which year he engaged in the bakery business in partnership with his brother Oswald, the association lasting for six years. He then engaged in the same business for himself, remaining in Milwaukee until 1916. In that year he came to Menomonie and established the Menomonie Baking Co. at 319 Main Street, and he now occupies the adjoining building in addition. He has installed a good modern baking equipment. The concern manufactures as special products the Twin Loaf and Sally Ann Bread; also graham and rye loaf, buns, biscuits and pastry. Mr. Jaeger also conducts a lunch room in connection with his bakery. He is now well established and enjoys a large custom. As a citizen interested in the welfare and progress of Menomonie he joined the Commercial Club, of which he is now a member. Mr. Jaeger was married in Milwaukee, Wis., on May 15, 1886, to Laura Sauer, who after six years and a half of married life, died Dec. 2, 1892, leaving two children: Bruno, Jr. who is now in the poultry and egg business in New Jersey; and William, who is operating a bakery in St. Paul, Minn. On Sept. 4, 1893, the subject of this sketch married Emily Filter of Menomonie, of which union the children are: Erwin, of Chippewa Falls; Helen, wife of Erwin Greuel of Menomonie, and Herbert of Chippewa Falls.

Ole H. Kleven, a contractor and builder doing business at Elk Mound, was born in Norway, Feb. 22, 1881, son of Hans and Marit (Rusten) Kleven. The parents were also natives of Norway, the father being a farmer by occupation, and he is still living there though now retired; the mother is deceased. Ole Jorstad, one of the leading citizens of Ridgeland, for many years a prominent business man of the village but now retired, was born in Norway, Dec. 22, 1862, son of Hendrich and Ingeborg (Forberg) Jorstad. The father, who was a farmer, is still living in Norway, though now 90 years of age. The mother died in 1917. They had eight children, six of whom are now living, namely, Margaret, Ole, Hans, Henrietta, John and Inga. Hans resides in La Crosse and Margaret in Norway. Henrietta married a Mr. Sandquist and now lives in Kansas City. John is in Norway managing the home farm, with his sister Inga keeping house for him. The two deceased are Sophie and Marie. Sophie married a Mr. Nesterhouse of Fort Scott, Kansas, who is also now deceased. They left three children, two sons and a daughter, namely, Axel, Henry and Inga, the last mentioned being now the wife of Fred Link of the town of Dallas, Barron County. On the death of their last surviving parent these three children were brought to Ridgeland by the subject of this sketch and were reared by him and his wife. The two boys are now conducting the Jorstad General Store. Ole Jorstad was reared in Norway, where he attended school and worked on his parents' farm. In 1884, at the age of 22 years, he came to the United States, being obliged to borrow the money to pay the expenses of the journey, as his father was opposed to his coming and would not pay his transporta-

Thus Ole was $52 in debt when he landed in this Coming west, he settled first in La Crosse County, where he was hired by country. an American farmer, who paid him $15 a month. He worked on that farm in the summers for some ten years, being employed in the woods as a logger in winter and engaged on the river drives in the spring, and being a careful liver and economical, in that time he saved $5,000. In 1900 he came to Ridgeland and opened the first general store in the village, with A. L. Pangraf as partner. After running the store until 1918 when he sold out to the Farmers Store Co. Two years later he rented a store building, which he later bought, and started the boys Axel and Henry in business. He, himself, is now retired and occupies a nice modern residence which he has just completed. Aside from his own mercantile business he has interested himself on several occasions in other local enterprises. He was one of the organizers and is now vice president of the Farmers State Bank, at Ridgeland, is a stockholder in the Ridgeland Co-operative Creamery Co., and the Prairie Farm, Dallas and Ridgeland Telephone Co. He has been village treasurer since the incorporation of the village and is still serving as such. Mr. Jorstad was married in 1893 at La Crosse, Wis., to Bertina Hendrichson, daughter of Hans and Antonetta Hendrichson, the parents being natives of Norway who settled at an early day in La Crosse County, Wisconsin. The mother is still living, the father being deceased. The latter twice married. By his second wife. Antonetta, he had five children, Martin, Peter, Bertina, Charles and Mollie. Mr. and Mrs. Jorstad have the three adopted children, Axel, Henry and Inga, previously mentioned. In May, 1918, Axel was inducted into the United States service. He trained at Camp Grant, Illinois, and saw active service in the trenches overseas, subsequently returning to the United States and being discharged in 1919.

Joseph Meixner, for 40 years a respected citizen of the town of Eau Galle, was born in Austria, Feb. 9, 1863. It was in 1881 that he came to the United States, settling in Arkansaw, Pepin County, Wis. In 1884 he began farming in Dunn County, buying 80 acres of wild land in Section 32, town of Eau Galle, which he started to built up into a farm, having to make a clearing whereon to erect his first house and barn. During his early years on the place he earned money for living expenses by doing carpenter work. He had since developed his farm to good advantage and is still living on it engaged in general agriculture. He is a stockholder in the Arkansaw Cooperative Creamery. Mr. Meixner was married Nov. 11, 1884, to Catherine Pericol, who was born in Eau Galle, Oct. 26, 1865. He and his wife are the parents of seven children: Anna, who married Benjamin F. Taylor whom she survives; Matilda, who is the wife of Henry Yourell of Sashkatchewan, Canada; Minnie, now Mrs. Frank Kaufman of the town of Eau Galle; Charles, on the home farm; Ernest, conducting the home farm; George of St. Paul, and Clarence, of Maiden Rock. The members of the family are Catholic in religion.

Benjamin F. Taylor, for many years a well known and highly esteemed farmer and citizen of the town of Eau Galle, but now deceased, was born on his parents farm in the town of Eau Galle, Feb. 2, 1880, son of John and Wilhelmina (Sinz) Taylor. The father died a number of years ago and his widow subsequently became the wife of Peter Michelbook and now lives in Menomonie. Benjamin F. Taylor as a boy attended the Hall School in the town of Eau Galle and remained at home with his parents until he was 21 years of age. He then went west to the Dakotas, where he followed farming and threshing for seven years. Then returning home, he bought the home farm of 103 acres in Section 28, town of Eau Galle. To this he later added 40 acres in the town of Eau Galle, making a fine farm of 143 He continued the improvements started by his father by clearing many more acres. acres of land and repairing the buildings, or rebuilding them when needed and erecting new ones, one of the latter being a fine basement barn of 60 x 80 feet in ground Mr. Taylor continued his operations on that place until 1922, in which year plan. he sold it to Mike Weber and bought another farm of 200 acres, situated on Chase Hill in Sections 28 and 33, town of Eau Galle. He also owned a farm in the town of Menomonie and one in North Dakota. He was an exceptionally good farmer and manager, and his untimely death on July 6, 1923, was a sad blow to his wife and family and a severe shock to the community. He was a man who took a deep interest in civic and social affairs, was a member of the Catholic Church, and also of the order of Modern Woodmen of America. Mr. Taylor was married Nov. 24, 1909, to Anna Meixner, who was born March 27, 1885, daughter of Joseph and Catherine (Pericol) Meixner, who were representative farmers of the town of Eau Galle. Five children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Taylor, namely: Ethel M., Jan. 1, 1911; Harold Joseph, Jan. 20, 1915; Leonard John, Aug. 29, 1916; Vera Elizabeth, Aug. 4, 1918, and Anna Marie, July 15, 1923. After her husband's death Mrs. Taylor disposed of the farm and bought a fine brick residence in the village of Eau Galle, where she is now living.

Christ Hilson, a well known resident of Colfax who came to Dunn County nearly 30 years ago, was born in Norway and came to the United States when a young man. In May 3, 1887, he was married to Christine Hilson, and they resided for some time after their marriage in Stillwater, Minn. They then moved to Perch, Mich., where Mr. Hilson worked for two years as section foreman on the railroad. In 1895 he came with his family to Dunn County, locating on a farm in the town of Colfax. A few years later he and his wife sold the farm and moved to the village of Colfax, where for a number of years he was in the employ of the "Soo" road, and where they are both still residing. They have been the parents of eight children, namely: George E., agent for the "Soo" line at Wheeler; Nellie, now Mrs. T. B. Bronken of Klamath Falls, Ore.; Alvin C., agent for the "Soo" line at Boyceville; Selma, residing in Colfax; Gerda, engaged in teaching; Henry of Bend, Ore.; and Ingman and Norman of Colfax.

Alvin C. Hilson, agent and operator at Boyceville for the Minneapolis, St. Paul & Sault Ste. Marie Railway, commonly known as the "Soo" road, was born at Perch, Mich., April 29, 1892, son cf Christ and Christine (Hilson) Hilson. Further mention of the parents may be found under the caption of Christ Hilson. As a boy Alvin C. attended school in Colfax, after which he began to learn the art of telegraphy, in the employ of the "Soo" road, completing his knowledge of it at Colfax. He was then assigned to the station at Duluth Junction on the same line, where he remained for six months, at the end of that time being transferred to Colfax, where he was operator for two years. His next assignment was to Ironwood, Mich., where for four years he was operator and cashier. Then in the spring of 1917 he came to Boyceville as agent and operator and has since remained here, except during a period of army service. On May 25, 1918, he was inducted into the United States' service as a private in Company C, 106th Field Signal Battalion, 32d Division, and went to Camp Wheeler, Georgia, for training. In September, the same year, he went to Camp Mills, Long Island, N. Y., where he was stationed for 10 days, leaving for overseas October 7. He was landed at Brest, France, October 21, and was stationed there until the signing of the armistice on November 11, when his command was broken up and transferred to various places. It was in April, 1919 that he returned to the United States, being discharged May 10. Then, after visiting his home in Colfax he returned to Boyceville and resumed his position with the "Soo" road. While in the service he was promoted to the rank of corporal and returned home as such. He is a member of the Harmon-Harris Post No. 314, A. M., also of the lodge of Independent Order of Odd Fellows. On April 13, 1918, Mr. Hilson was married to Bertha Olson of Colfax. He and his wife are members of the Norwegian Lutheran Church. They have three children: Arvin B., born Sept. 9, 1921, Oliver C., born April 6, 1923, and Myron Kenneth, born Oct. 24, 1924.

Jesse S. Bickell, now living retired in the village of Downing after a career of 30 years as a Dunn County farmer, was born in Cass County, Indiana, Feb. 25, 1869, son of William F. and Harriet A. (Smith) Bickell. The parents were natives of Ohio who went to Indiana when young, in which latter state they were married. In Cass County they settled on a farm, where they made their home until 1877. In that year they moved to Lesueur County, Minnesota, and until 1901 were engaged in operating a farm there. Then they came to Dunn County, locating in the town of Stanton, where William F. Bickell died some seven or eight years later, on March 4, 1909. His wife Harriet, surviving him, made her home in Knapp until 1922, since which time she has resided with her daughter, Mrs. Herbert Eddy of Lesueur County, Minnesota. Mr. and Mrs. William F. Bickell were the parents of 11 children, namely: Charles, who died in infancy; Jesse S., of Downing; George O., of Lesueur County Minn.; Lyda M., now Mrs. Henry Prosser of Waseca County, Minn.; James, deceased; Norton, who lives in East Chicago, Ind.; Henry, now living in the vicinity of Mobile, Ala.; Belle, wife of H. D. Eddy of Lesueur County, Minn.; Harriet, now Mrs. Walter Blevins of Eau Claire, Wisconsin; Edmond, of Big Lake, Minnesota, and one who died in infancy unnamed. Jesse S. Bickell acquired his education in Lesueur County, Minnesota. Until 1896 he resided on the home farm with his parents, and for the next three years operated a farm of his own in the same county. This he sold in 1899 and in October, of that year, came to Dunn County, buying 80 acres of cut-over land in the town of Stanton. This he did not occupy immediately, as he was not yet in position to erect buildings, but instead rented a farm near Knapp. Subsequently he erected a complete set of buildings on his land, cleared 30 acres of the latter and broke 20, doing general farming there until 1919. He then retired, selling the place, and has since resided While living on the farm he served more or less in public office, for in Downing. some time being clerk of School District No. 6, town of Stanton; also supervisor four years and chairman of the town board several years, a member of the sheriff's claims committee of the county board, and also of other committees concerned with various branches of the county government. Since becoming a resident of the village of Downing he has served as supervisor and in April, 1924, was elected president of the village. He is also president of the school board of Downing. He owns the feed mill in Downing, which he operated for two years but now rents out, and for two years he was also in the implement business here. His fraternal society affiliations are with the Beavers and Odd Fellows. Mr. Bickell was married Dec. 3, 1896, in Lesueur County, Minnesota, to Hattie McMillen, who was born in that county, Jan. 30, 1876, daughter of William and Mary (Coughlin) McMillen. Her father was a native of Ireland and her mother of Canada, in which latter country they were married. Coming to the United States in 1871, they settled first in Ohio, but after a short time in that state moved to Lesueur County, Minn., where they engaged in farming. Mr. McMillen died Aug. 5, 1901, but Mrs. McMillen still resides on the farm in Lesueur County. They had 12 children: William J., of Lesueur Center, Minn.; John, on the home farm; Fanny, deceased; Hattie, now Mrs. Jesse S. Bickell of Downing; Maggie, wife of Guy Melius of Todd County, Minn.; George, deceased; Lizzie, who is Mrs. Milton Vail of Lesueur County; Victor, at home; Jesse, now Mrs. Ed Vail of Lesueur Center, Minn.; Serepta, who is Mrs. Charles Schindele of Mason City, Iowa;; Alba, deceased and Dallas, who is Mrs. Clarence Coughlin of Ontario, Canada. Mr. and Mrs. Bickell are the parents of two children: Clara E., born April 13, 1901, who is attending the River Falls Normal School; and Vera W., born May 20, 1907, who is a pupil in the Downing High School. The family are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Knapp, and Mrs. Bickell belongs to the Ladies' Aid Society of the church, and also to the Beaver Queens and the Rebekahs.

Clarence Eugene Owen, an energetic and successful farmer in the town of Tainter, was born in the village of Cedar Falls, Dunn County, Wis., May 4, 1874, son of Aaron A. and Hannah F. (Benjamin) Owen. He was five years old when he came to the town of Tainter with his parents, who settled on a farm here. Soon after that he began to attend rural school, and as he grew to manhood assisted his father, working on the home farm. Starting out for himself in 1891, he bought 80 acres in Section 17, town of Tainter, which tract was practically all wild land, being very slightly improved. He has cleared the entire tract bought more land until he now has 200 acres in his farm, and has erected a good nine-room house, an adequate barn, and other buildings. He has 80 acres under the plow, the balance of his land being in pasture. He is carrying on general farming and dairying, having at the present time 18 head of Holstein and Guernsey grade cattle and is also raising Duroc-Jersey hogs. He is a stockholder in the Hudson Road Creamery at Menomonie, and for 16 years has been treasurer of his school district. Mr. Owen was married March 5, 1894, in the town of Otter Creek to Mrs. Frances H. Baxter, daughter of Lemuel and Catherine (Ralph) Weaver. Her parents, who came from New York State, were early settlers in the town of Otter Creek, Dunn County, but are both now deceased. Their children were: William, now of the town of Otter Creek; Catherine, wife of Henry Synder of the same town; Lavina, wife of Ole Odegard of Hayward, Wis.; Clark, deceased; Matilda, who married Almon Baxter of Withee, Wis., and Urial, of the town of Tainter. The children of Mrs. C. E. Owen are: Macie, wife of John Johnson of the town of Tainter; Ruby, wife of Clifford Harland of the town of Tainter; Charlie, of the town of Sherman, who married Lena Schultz; and Lloyd, Ralph and Laverne, who are living on the home farm.

Aaron A. Owen, an early settler in Dunn County, who, after a long and active career in the lumbering and farming industries, is now a well known and respected citizen of the town of Tainter, residing on his own farm, was born in New York State, July 3, 1850, son of Uriah T. and Adeline (Drew) Owen. He is of New England ancestry. The father, a carpenter by trade, came to Dunn County, Wisconsin, in 1866, arriving on May 4, and locating first near Cedar Falls. Thence he went to Menomonie and entered the employ of Knapp, Stout & Co., with whom he remained for five years. At the end of that time he took up farming, buying 80 acres of land in the town of Tainter, where he made his home for some years. Then selling the farm, he went to the state of Washington, spent three years there. and then returned east as far as Lincoln, Neb., where he and his wife subsequently They had six children, of whom two are now living: Aaron, subject of this died. sketch; and Hettie, who is widow of Elwin Ames and resides at Normal, Neb. Those deceased are Eugene, William, Alice and Helen. Aaron A. Owen was reared chiefly in Menomonie, where he attended school. During one summer he worked in the dining-room for Knapp, Stout & Co., where one day 400 men were fed who had just returned from the drive. During the next summer he drove a team for Knapp, Stout & Co., and then went to Cedar Falls where he worked in the mill and also learned the carpenter's trade. After that he spent four years on his father's farm and at the end of that time in 1879, began farming for himself on 80 acres of land which he bought in the town of Tainter. While carrying on that farm he also worked at intervals at his trade of carpenter. Alert and enterprising, he was ready to seize any opportunity to try his luck in a new direction, and as hotels were as necessary in those days as now, he built one in the village of Colfax, where he spent eight years as its proprietor, finally disposing of it to J. L. Smith. In 1919 Mr. Owen bought 40 acres of land in Section 17, town of Tainter, on which he built the house that he now lives in, his son Clarence Eugene carrying on the farm. He has served as town clerk and school director. From 1902 til 1905-a period of nearly three years-he lived at Spokane, Washington. Mr. Owen was married at Cedar Falls, Dunn County, on July 3, 1873, to Hannah Frances Benjamin, daughter of Isaac and Mary Benjamin, her parents being early settlers in Wautoma, Wis. After Isaac Benjamin died, his widow married Henry Treadway, a Civil War veteran and they came to Dunn County. To Mr. and Mrs. Aaron A. Owen seven children were born, of whom six are living: Clarence Eugene, Henry, Mary, Rufus, Frances and Hiram A. Henry is employed in the hotel at Wheeler; Mary is the wife of Robert Prater and lives in Chicago; Rufus is now residing at Chisholm, Minn.; Frances is the wife of Steve Tanner of Sandersville, Ga., and Hiram A. now lives at Rice The other child in the family, Levi Cleveland, is deceased. Lake.

Frank Knopps, who was one of the first settlers in the Irvine Creek Valley in the town of Menomonie, where he developed a farm, built roads and otherwise proved his usefulness in a new community, was born in Austria and came to this country with his parents and several brothers when 12 years old. The family settled in Dunn County on the Hudson Road at a time when there were very few other settlers there. As Frank grew up he learned farming according to pioneer methods, which were crude but effective. At the outbreak of the Civil War he enlisted in Company C, 5th Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry and served until the close in 1865. Three years later, in 1868, he began farming for himself, having bought 160 acres of government land in Section 8, for $1.25 an acre. As his farm, of course, was non-productive until a portion of it, at least, had been cleared and cultivated, he had to earn living expenses in some other way, and about the only way at that time was to cut and sell cord wood. Being a remarkably strong man, Mr. Knopps was able to cut a cord of four-foot wood and haul it to Menomonie by ox team in one day. He continued to use oxen until 1876, in which year he bought a team of mules, which were used on the farm for 35 years, or until 1911. Besides helping to build roads, he assisted new settlers and cooperated with his neighbors in various ways in improving local conditions. His death, which occurred on May 24, 1899, deprived the community of a valuable man. Frank Knopps married Katherine Antiasko and they had a family of seven children, namely: Katherine, now Mrs. George Stoll of Paradise Valley, Dunn County; John, a well known farmer in the town of Menomonie; Rose, wife of Arthur Styer of the town of Menomonie; Thomas, who is in Montana; George, of Sioux City, Iowa; and Frank and Henry, both of whom died in infancy. Mrs. Katherine Knopps, the mother, died in 1907.

John Knopps, proprietor of the old Knopps farm in Section 8, town of Menomonie, was born on this farm Aug. 25, 1871, son of Frank and Katherine (Antiasko) The story of his pioneer parents has already been told on these pages. Knopps. As a boy he acquired the elements of an education in District School No. 6, and at an early age began to assist his father, for whom he worked until 1898, the year before the father's death, at which time he took over the farm and has since been engaged in operating it. He has improved it considerably by the erection of new buildings, including a large house, a barn of 40 x 132 feet in ground plan, and two silos. He has also increased its area by the purchase of an additional tract of 40 acres, so that it now contains 200 acres, of which he has 120 under cultivation. He is keeping Guernsey cattle, raises Duroc and Berkshire hogs, and is giving special attention to dairying. He is also a stockholder in the Hudson Road Creamery and the Downsville Cooperative Creamery, and is numbered among the enterprising and prosperous farmers of his town. His usefulness to the community has been proved as a public official, as he has served several years as school clerk and several years as a member of the town board of supervisors. Over 25 years ago, on Oct. 25, 1898, in the city of Mencmonie, Mr. Knopps was united in marriage with Mary Stoll, daughter of Alexander and Johanna (Obiser) Stoll. Six children have been born to them, all still residing at home, namely: Louis, March 13, 1900; Philip, June 29, 1901; Daniel, March 8, 1904; Andrew, Feb. 19, 1906; Clara, Sept. 9, 1909, and Francis, June 1, 1914. The family are members of St. Joseph's Catholic congregation in Menomonie, Mr. Knopps belonging also to the Catholic Knights of Wisconsin.

Peder Hovden, cashier of the Wheeler State Bank, was born in Hardanger. Norway, Nov. 28, 1893, son of Peder O. and Nella (Hatletvedt) Hovden. The parents, natives of Norway, are still residing there, Peder O. Hovden being interested in the paper industry. Also, with his three sons, Olav, Edward and Johannes, he owns and operates a twine factory. Peder, the subject of this sketch, attended school in his native land and also took an academic course. It was in 1910, at the age of about 17, that he came to the United States, joining an uncle, Bert O. Mygaard, in Wheeler, Wis. Here he attended English school and also took private lessons in English at Sand Creek, and for about two years during the same period he was engaged in farm work. He then entered the Minneapolis Business College, from which he was graduated with the class of 1913. After that he was employed for a short time in a real estate business in Minneapolis and subsequently did bookkeeping in that city until October, 1914. He then returned to Wheeler and entered the Wheeler State Bank as bookkeeper. Six months later he was made assistant cashier, and in October, 1915, was promoted to the position of cashier, in which he has since served with credit. He is a popular official and also takes an active and useful part in village affairs. In 1923 he was elected village treasurer and in 1924 was reelected to the same office, which he is filling at present. He is a stockholder in the Wheeler State Bank, a member of the Wheeler Commercial Club, and belongs to the Masonic lodge and chapter in Menomonie. On Oct. 7, 1916, Mr. Hovden was united in marriage with Stella Shaw of Wheeler, and he and his wife are the parents of four children, who were born as follows: Reuben, March 24, 1917; Roger, June 29, 1919; Merlin, July 7, 1921; and Jeanette, Aug. 5, 1923. The Hovden family are members of the Lutheran church.

August Holzhueter, a prominent farmer and highly respected citizen of the town of Menomonie, who has been a resident of Dunn County for 41 years, was born near Stargard, in Pommern, Germany, on May 12, 1865, son of Frederick and Fredericka (Paulzine) Holzhueter. The parents also were natives of Germany, the father born Nov. 11, 1818, and the mother April 26, 1828. Married in their native land, they operated a farm there until 1883. In that year they came to America, landing at Baltimore on July 25, and coming west directly to Jefferson County, Wisconsin, where their son William has settled in the previous year. There Frederick Holzhueter bought an improved farm of 160 acres in the town of Waterloo, on which he and his wife spent their remaining years, he dying on July 5, 1893, and she on Dec. 13, 1903. They were the parents of nine children: William O., now living retired in Watertown, Wis.; Anna, wife of William F. A. Lierman of the town of Menomonie, Dunn County; Louise, who married Herman Diedert, and died April 27, 1904; Charles, who was for years a prominent farmer in the town of Menomonie and was killed while cutting wood on Feb. 22, 1899; August, subject of this sketch; Augusta, who married August Schroeder and died June 20, 1888; Paul, who is operating the old home farm in Jefferson County; and Herman and Pauline, both of whom died in infancy. August Holzhueter attended school in his native land and was subsequently employed for 18 months in herding sheep. He then returned home and assisted his father on the parental farm until he came with his parents to America in 1883. After remaining with them in Jefferson County for about a month, he came to Menomonie, where his brother Charles was then located, and was engaged by the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company to work on their farm, where he was employed for three years. After that he worked two years on the August Bremer farm in the town of Lucas, which is now known as the Walstein farm. Returning to the Knapp-Stout farm, he was employed there for a short time, and went from there to the farm of Christian Giese, in the town of Menomonie, which is now the Albert Ponto farm. In October, 1888, he bought the farm of Frank Lostetter, comprising 66 acres in the town of Menomonie, a part of which was situated in Section 31 (Township 28 N.) and a part in Section 6 (Township 27 N.). This is the place on which he has since resided, though he has greatly increased its area, having in 1909 bought the William Lehrmann farm of 72 acres in Section 31, and in 1917 a 74 acre tract in Section 6 and 31, which gave him a farm of 212 acres. During the first three years after settling on his original tract he rented additional land. His first buildings were small and poor, his first dwelling being a small frame shanty, and the others a log barn and a shed built of poles with a straw top. He has replaced these with a fine set of modern buildings and is now proprietor of one of the best farms in this part of Dunn County. His cattle are grade Holsteins and he also raises Chester-White hogs. He is a stockholder in the new Hudson Road Creamery, of which he was also a director for 12 years, and in the line of public duty he served six years on the school board of his district and was four years pathmaster. His successful career shows plainly that he possesses in large measure those qualities of industry, patience and determination that have been the essential factors in making, not only Dunn County, but the entire Northwest, the wealthy and highly civilized region it is today. Mr. Holzhueter doubtless owes much of his success to the hearty cooperation of a good wife. He was married Feb. 2, 1889, in the city of Menomonie, to Amelia Krueger, who was born in Kannenburg, province of Pommern, Germany, Oct. 18, 1864, daughter of Ferdinand and Ernstine (Phal) Krueger. Both her parents died in Germany and in 1883 she came to America, landing in this country on April first. Until her marriage she lived with relations in Dodge County. Mr. and Mrs. Holzhueter are the parents of eight children, all living, whose record in brief is as follows. Anna, born Jan. 20, 1890, is now Mrs. William J. Klatt of the town of Menomonie. Martha, born Aug. 23, 1892, is employed in the city of Menomonie. August, born Aug. 13, 1894, who purchased from his father in 1921, what was formerly the William Lehmann farm which he is now operating, married Clara Berg. Paul, born Nov. 10, 1896, and Emma, born Sept. 4, 1898, are living with their parents on the home farm. Marie, born Oct. 5, 1900, is now Mrs. Roy Renny of Menomonie and has two children, May Belle and Richard. Herman, born Sept. 12, 1902, is living at home. Otto, born Jan. 3, 1906, is employed in the Farmers' store in Menomonie. The family are members of St. Paul's German Lutheran Church in Menomonie.

Oscar Toycen, a substantial farmer of the town of Sand Creek, and of pioneer antecedants, was born at Winchester, Winnebago County, Wis., July 27, 1863, son of Swen and Catherine Toycen. The parents were natives of Norway who came to the United States in 1849, and settling first in Fond du Lac County, Wisconsin, where they remained two years. It was at the end of that time that they moved to Winnebago County, Swen Toycen buying a small "farm," which, however, was nothing more than a tract of wild land. It was he himself who made a farm of it, starting with the usual log buildings, which he erected, and clearing and improving as he remained there, which was until 1866. He then came to Dunn County and homesteaded 160 acres of land in Section 13, town of Sand Creek, he and his family driving here in a covered wagon drawn by oxen, which ambled slowly along taking plenty of time and not trying to break any speed records. But they arrived at last and the home on wheels came to a standstill, though it remained a home until Mr. Toycen had put up a log house, when all took possession of the new dwelling, which was a red letter day in the family history. He also built a log barn with a straw roof. The house above mentioned seems to have been too small, for in two years Mr. Toycen built a larger one, and, it is to be presumed, a better one. He continued farming there until his death in 1882, honored and respected by the entire community. He had a good Civil War record, having enlisted from Winnebago County, Wisconsin, and served with Company A, 37th Wis. Vol. Infantry. His wife Catherine survived him a number of years, passing away in 1898. They were good typical pioneers, hardy, industrious, patient, and, for their times, fairly successful. Their children, ten in number, namely, Torger, Louis, Julia, Charlie, Laura, John, Josephine, Oscar, Dinah and Stephen, are all living. Julia is the widow of Ben Nelson of Washington; Laura, the wife of John Donaldson of Cameron, Wis.; Josephine, the wife of Anton Bradeson of Salem, Ore.; and Dinah the wife of Barney Dolan of Aitkin, Minn. Oscar Toycen was reared on the farm on which he now lives and as a boy attended the first school established in the Sand Creek Valley. When old enough he began helping his father, thereby becoming a practical farmer, and in time he purchased the home farm and has since been engaged in improving it. He has added 40 acres to its area and now has 200 acres, of which 100 acres are under the plow. He has built a good frame barn, silo, granary and several sheds, and is doing general farming and dairying, having 29 head of grade and pure bred Holstein cattle and raising hogs of mixed breed. He has also served as justice of the peace and taught school. He was married in 1896 in the city of Eau Claire to Rena Hogenson, who died the same year. On April 17, 1901, he was united in marriage to Ada Madison, daughter of George and Jemima Madison, her father being a descendant or relative of President James Madison. Mr. and Mrs. Madison were natives of New York State, who settled in Necedah, Wis., where their daughter Ada was born in 1871. She was one of five children, namely: Emmett, now of Colfax; William of Ironwood, Mich.; Burt, a farmer in the town of Sand Creek; Ada, now Mrs. Toycen; and Abbie, who is Mrs. Aden Knight of Rice Lake, Mr. and Mrs. Toycen are the parents of three children: Cassie, James and Wis. Anna, the last mentioned of whom is attending normal school in Menomonie.

Emil H. Radtke, one of Dunn County's progressive farmers, proprietor of Evergreen Dairy Farm, located within the limits of the village of Downing, in the town of Tiffany, was born in the town of Brussels, Door County, Wis., Sept. 11, 1885, son of Henry and Louise (Cook) Radtke. The father was a native of Germany who came to America when young, residing for several years in Milwaukee. From that city he went to Door County, where he met and married Louise Cook, and they took a homestead in that county, on which he subsequently died. His wife later married Charles Strickert of the same town and county, and both are now living there. Mr. and Mrs. Henry Radtke were the parents of four children: Emma, now Mrs. August Ullmann of Door County; Bertha, who is Mrs. Charles Antholt of Marinette County, Wis.; Ida, wife of Dr. O. E. Morin of Chicago; and Emil H., of Downing, Dunn County. Emil H. Radtke, after acquiring his education in the district schools of Door County, took up creamery work, which he followed until 1907. He then became employed on the Mt. Prairie Stock Farm in Fond du Lac County the proprietor of which was S. H. Bird, with whom he remained for three years or until the year 1900. There he became familiar with pure bred stock, and, with the ambition of operating a stock farm of his own, he came to Dunn County in April, 1910, and purchased the old Winn farm, a tract of 67 acres within the limits of Downing village, on which, however, there were no buildings to speak of except a house. This defect he has remedied in a very thorough manner, having erected a horse barn of 25 x 40 feet; a stock barn of 36 x 50 feet with both Star and Loudon equipments; two silos, one of 12 x 36 feet and the other of 10 x 30 feet; a poultry house of 12 x 24 feet, with a small brooder house, and a garage for two cars. He has also remodelled the residence and installed a Phelps light and power plant. When he began stock breeding he had six head of grade Holsteins, while today he has 11 head of pure bred Holsteins and seven head of high grade, with a pure bred sire known as Oakwood Colantha Johanna Canary, who was born Feb. 10, 1922, his sire being Dutchland Colantha Emperor, and his dam. Sir Johanna Canary De Kol Lass. He is one of the best bred animals in Dunn County. In addition Mr. Radtke is the owner of the three fine animals (cows) described below: Evergreen Segis Asia, the first pure bred cow he purchased, which is a granddaughter of King Pontiac, has raised four fine calves, and has a yearly record of 553.88 lbs. of butterfat; Irene Johanna Netherland Bessie, with a yearly record of 553 lbs. of butterfat; and Lady Kolenhurst Barbetta, with a six months record of 352.07 lbs. of butterfat. During the year 1922-23 Mr. Radtke disposed of his milk to the Northern Pacific Hospital in St. Paul, Minn. He is president of the Glenwood Testing Association, secretary and treasurer of the Northern Dunn and St. Croix Holstein Club, and has been chairman of the Dunn County Testing Association for the past three years. In addition to the cattle interests, he raises each year a large flock of pure bred White Leghorn chickens, and has also made some reputation raising Dunlap strawberries, a good canning berry, having a twoacre patch of them. These berries he sells to people who come from all parts of Dunn and St. Croix Counties to get them. For seven years he has served as a trustee of the village of Downing. He belongs to the fraternal orders of Odd Fellows and Modern Woodmen, and is chairman of the board of trustees of the Downing Union Church. Mr. Radtke was married April 6, 1910, in Glenwood City, Wis., to Blanche Cowles, daughter of George and Lucy (Samson) Cowles, and he and his wife are the parents of five children, who were born as follows: Irma L., June 11, 1911; Earl G., Oct. 5, 1913; Lawrence H., April 20, 1915; Grace B., June 13, 1917, and Hazel E., Dec. 14, 1919. To Mrs. Radtke is due a large share of credit for the successful growth and development of Evergreen Stock Farm. Her duties have been many and onerous and she has performed them with an ability and effectiveness that have left nothing to be desired. She also is a member of the Downing Union Church, belonging to the Ladies' Aid Society and to other working or social branches of the organization.

August Hitz, an early settler in the town of Lucas, who passed away many years ago, but two of whose children are now living in Dunn County, was born in Prussia, Germany, Aug. 12, 1827. For nearly 30 years he resided in his native land, his occupation after he began industrial life being that of a teamster and common laborer. In June, 1851, he was married to Caroline Paul, also a native of Prussia, who was born Jan. 5, 1825, and for six years after their marriage they continued to reside in Germany. Then in June, 1857, they emigrated to America. Taking passage for Quebec, they came directly to Wisconsin, settling in the town of Waterloo, Jefferson County, where they remained for ten years. In 1867 they came to Dunn County, traveling over land by train to La Crosse, then taking boat up the Mississippi River to Read's Landing, and up the Chippewa and Red Cedar rivers to Dunnville. When they arrived there, they disembarked, perhaps because the boat was going no farther, and walked from there to the farm of August Bremmer in the town of Lucas, where they stayed for three weeks. At the end of that time Mr. Hintz bought the William Polley farm of 80 acres in Section 1, town of Lucas. It could hardly be called a farm, however, as it was mostly covered with heavy timber, but there was a little log shack on it which served as the first dwelling of the family here. Mr. Hintz then began the work of clearing, at first burning the felled timber to get rid of it, but when the railroad came through, it presented him with a better method of disposal, as he sold four-foot wood and ties to the company. In time he developed a good farm, on which he and his wife spent the remainder of their lives, Mr. Hitz dying in November, 1892, and Mrs. Hitz in August, 1904. They were the parents of five children: August, Henry and Louise, who are now deceased; Amelia, now Mrs. Albert Hitz of Menomonie; and Herman, who is on the home farm in the town of Lucas.

Herman Hitz, a prominent farmer in the town of Lucas, operating the farm in Section 1 established by his father more than a half a century ago, was born in Prussia, Germany, Sept. 24, 1856, son of August and Caroline (Paul) Hitz. As a babe he accompanied his parents to America in the year after his birth, subsequently attended school in Jefferson County, where the family lived for ten years, and later the school of his district, now called the Lierman school, in the town of Lucas. As he grew older he helped his father to improve and cultivate the home farm, consisting of 80 acres, and so continued until he was 24 years old. He then struck our for himself, buying a 40-acre tract adjoining his parents' farm on the west, and has since always lived on it, though after his father's death he operated the home farm for his mother until she also passed away. He then took over the 80 acres of the home farm, buying the interest of his sister Amelia, who was the only other heir. He has cleared 55 acres of land and erected a good set of buildings, and is the proprietor of a well developed and productive farm. Mr. Hitz has served his town in the offices of side supervisor, assessor and treasurer, and he has also served 27 years as clerk of the Lierman school, showing integrity and efficiency in all these capacities. He was married in the city of Menomonie, on June 11, 1879, to Ernestine Born, who died on March 27, 1892. She left five small children, whom Mr. Hitz has reared to manhood and womanhood, and who are as follows: George, born Oct. 9, 1881, who is now at Sand Point, Ida.; Fred, born Aug. 7, 1882, who married Mary Wilber and lives in Menomonie; Martha, born Dec. 2, 1884, now Mrs. William Klingman of Sand Point, Ida.; Ben, born Oct. 4, 1888, residing on the home farm; and Ada, born March 18, 1892, who is the wife of William Latsch, resides on the home farm, and has a daughter, Inez, born Nov. 17, 1919.

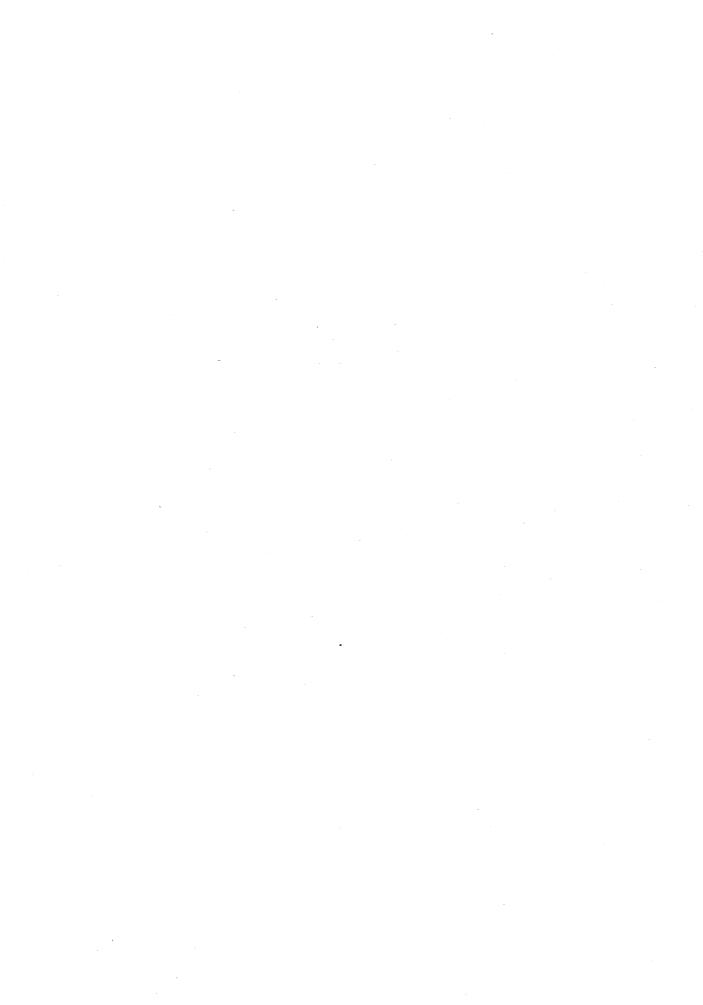

Awald Klukas, owner of a fine improved farm in the town of Elk Mound (Section 8), which he is operating to good advantage, was born in Germany, March 5, 1883, son of Frederick and Wilhelmina Klukes, natives of that country, the father born in 1840 and the mother in 1841. With them he came to the United States in 1884, the family settling at Fall Creek, Eau Claire County, Wis., but soon afterwards moving to the town of Elk Mound, Dunn County. In Section 8 they bought 80 acres of land, the tract forming a partly developed farm, but with poor buildings. Frederick Klukas at once began to improve the place. He built a good frame house with necessary out-buildings, also proceeding with the clearing of the land, and there he farmed until 1897. He then gave up that farm to his son Robert and moved across the road in the same section on to a 220-acre tract that he had bought. He built up a good farm there, with a substantial residence and other buildings, continuing to operate it until 1907, when he retired and moved to Elk Mound. Later he and his wife moved to Colfax, where they both died. Klukas on March 14, 1914, and Mrs. Wilhelmina Klukas on Jan. 6, 1916. They were the parents of seven children: Fred, who was killed in the woods near Frederick Detroit, Mich.; Bertha, now Mrs. Herman Schultz of Fall Creek, Wis.; Robert, of Colfax; Tena, deceased; Joel, residing with his brother Awald; Max, a prominent farmer in the town of Elk Mound; and Awald, subject of this sketch. Awald Klukas, who was a babe when he accompanied his parents to America, as a boy attended the rural school of his district in the town of Elk Mound. He grew to manhood, acquiring a good knowledge of agriculture from his father, working on the home farms, where he remained instead of seeking his fortune in other places. In 1907, when his father retired, he came into possession of 204 acres of the home farm, since which time he has more fully developed the land and erected additional buildings, converting it into one of the best farms in the town. In 1908 he put up a large dairy barn, of 40 x 84 feet in ground plan with a full basement, and which is provided with the Humane barn equipment of drinking cups, litter carrier and stanchions, and is finished with cement floors. He has also built a granary, milk house, wood shed, garage, a corn crib combined with grain sheds, a smoke house and a chicken house. These are all good frame buildings, except the milk house and smoke house, which are of cement block construction. Mr. Klukas has installed an acetvlene gas plant, which furnishes light for his house, barns and vard, and has also just put in a fine waterworks system with a 217-barrel cistern on the hill back of his house, the cistern being supplied from a 115-foot well drilled through solid stone except for the first seven feet. The pumping power is furnished by both a gas engine and wind mill, and from the well pipe lines are run to the house, barn and vards. Mr. Klukas is a man of energetic and progressive character and follows general and dairy farming along modern methods. He has a fine herd of Holstein cattle headed with a pure bred sire, and also raises Duroc-Jersey hogs. He is a stockholder in the Elk Mound Cooperative Creamery. On Feb. 28, 1906, Awald Klukas was married to Sophia Sonenberg, who was born in the town of Grant, Dunn County, Wis., Dec. 20, 1886, and to him and his wife the following children have been born: Herbert E., Dec. 19, 1906; Emma E., July 12, 1908; Harvey E., Feb. 18, 1910; Edwin H., Oct. 11, 1911; Lawrence V., Aug. 5, 1913; Mabel H., June 24, 1915; Violet E., July 14, 1917; Hazel E., Nov. 27, 1919; Melvin R., Oct. 1, 1921, and Luverne W., March 10, 1924. Mr. Klukas and his family are members of the Byer Settlement German Lutheran Church.

Anson Edward Richards, a well known resident of the village of Elk Mound, where for ten years he has been engaged in business as a stock buyer, was born in New York State, May 19, 1865, son of Francis and Catherine (Robeau) Richards, who were natives of that state and spent their lives there. It was there also that Anson E. spent his early years as a boy attending school, and later doing farm labor and training race horses. In 1888, at the age of 23, he came west to Green Bay, Wis., and for a year and a half thereafter he was foreman of a large livery stable there, during which time he also trained horses. In fact he followed the racing and horse training business, altogether, for a period of 20 years. After leaving Green Bay Mr. Richards went to De Pere, Wis., where he remained for a year. After that he was five years at Manitowoc and four years at Chilson, going from the latter place to the Riverside Park Farm at Berlin, Wis., where for seven years he was superintendent and trainer. Then he spent three years in a similar position at Fox Lake, Ill., and from there in 1914 came to Elk Mound, Wis., where he has since been engaged in buying and shipping cattle and hogs to the extent of about 100 cars a year. He also owns three race horses, which he enters at the local fairs during the fair season. Mr. Richards was married Dec. 16, 1887, at Massena, N. Y., to Martha Snickles. He and his wife have been the parents of three children, of whom the first born, Arthur O., is now deceased. The two survivors are Anson E. Jr., and Eva. Anson E. Jr., married Ada Hefner and they operate a small poultry farm north of Elk Mound. Eva, who is Mrs. Ned Warren, resides in Berlin, Wis., Mr. Warren being agent there for the American Railway Express. The subject of this sketch is fraternally affiliated with the Elk Mound colony of Beavers.

Eugene Wiggins, a notable pioneer of Dunn County and a resident of the town of Spring Brook, was born in Baraboo, Wis., Aug. 10, 1850, son of Henry B. and Sarah (Wiesman) Wiggins. The family is said to be of Irish origin but the paternal grandfather of Eugene, Elijah Wiggins, was born in Maine and there married Matilda Blodgett, also a native of that state. They had a family of eight children, whose names and birth dates were as follows: Lucy H., May 4, 1822; Henry B., March 15, 1824; David B., April 24, 1826; Joseph W., Jan. 10, 1828; Silas T. and Eliza W. (twins), July 21, 1831; Sarah M., Aug. 23, 1833; and Harriet C., Dec. 17, 1840. Henry B. Wiggins, born in Freedom, Maine, on the date above mentioned, in early manhood followed farming and lumbering. He came west to Wisconsin in 1844, settling near Janesville. Liking the country he soon afterwards sent for his brothers and sisters, and accordingly they came west, settling in Dane and Dodge counties, where they remained until 1853 or 1854. Then they all came to Dunn County, settling in and around Fall City, where they remained. Henry B. Wiggins, who came to Dunn County in 1853, took a land claim described as the south half of the southwest quarter of Section 19, town of Spring Brook, or close to the site of Fall City. He erected a sawmill on Mud Creek and in 1856 began custom sawing, having to take lumber in payment, which he sold to new settlers as they came in, and this mill he continued to operate until 1865 or 1866, when he sold out, moving with his family to the town of Lucas, where they spent a year. He then returned to the town of Spring Brook, buying 80 acres of land in Section 19 (now the E. H. Curtis farm), on which he spent the rest of his long life, dying Dec. 9, 1917. He had for many years been a prominent man in the town of Spring Brook, having served at an early date on the town board and for years as a member of the school board of his district. He also bought and operated one of the first threshing-machines ever used in the town of Spring Brook. He was married to Sarah Wiesman in 1849, and they were the parents of six children, namely: Eugene, the direct subject of this sketch; Adelia, who married Charles Douglas and is now deceased; Edgar, deceased; Gertrude, also deceased, who was Mrs. Duane Cummings; William, who died in infancy, and Ella, who became Mrs. E. H. Curtis. Eugene Wiggins as a boy attended school in Fall City and first became industrially useful in assisting his father. When old enough and strong enough he took up woods work, being thus occupied for about 15 years, and since then he has followed the carpenter's tradealtogether for a period of about 40 years. During most of his industrial career he has worked within a radius of 20 miles of Fall City, though he spent several summers in Western States. He was married Nov. 15, 1882, in Fall City to Etta Braford, of which union there were three children born, namely: Pearl, now Mrs. Frank Synder of Menomonie, Wis.; Freedom E., of Bloomer, Wis., and Adelbert, also of Bloomer. Mr. Wiggins is now residing with his sister, Mrs. E. H. Curtis, of Falls City. He is well known as the author of several historical articles of considerable local interest.

Elbridge H. Curtis, farmer and merchant now deceased, was born in the town of Spring Brook, Dunn County, June 29, 1864, son of Hiram and Julia (Tuttle) Curtis. The parents, who were natives of Ohio and Connecticut respectively, were pioneer settlers in this county. Elbridge after getting his schooling followed farm labor until his marriage to Ella Wiggins, which took place Oct. 2, 1888, she being the daughter of Henry B. and Sarah (Wiesman) Wiggins. After that he and his wife lived with his parents for five years, at the end of which time he bought 80 acres in Section 24 and spent some three years in farming it. He and his family then returned to the old Wiggins farm, where he made his home for the rest of his life. For nearly six years, however, he was a merchant, as in the spring of 1916 he bought the general store in Fall City and conducted it until his death, which took place on Jan. 10, 1922. He and his wife were the parents of six children, Lola, Verne, Harry, Arlo, Gladys and Gordon. Lola is now Mrs. Fayette Owen of the town of Spring Brook and has six children, Verne, Bernardine, Bernice, Evelyn, Bruce and Lynn. Verne, now operating the store in Fall City, married Alice Owen and has had two children, Hazel, now deceased, and Beulah. Harry, who is operating the home farm, has a World War military record. Arlo is a shipping clerk in the employ of the Menomonie Grocery Company. Gladys, now Mrs. John Lutzen of the town of Spring Brook. Gordon is on the home farm. The history of the Curtis and Wiggins families has a strong pioneer flavor and it may be said that the hardy virtues exhibited by the first progenitors of these families in this county have apparently been transmitted to their children and other descendants, who in general have "made good" each in his or her individual sphere.

Herman Lenke, retired farmer and assessor of the town of Red Cedar, residing at Cedar Falls, was born Dec. 25, 1856, in Pommern, Germany, son of John and Johanna (Brandenburg) Lenke. The parents were natives of the same country. the father born Jan. 12, 1819, and the mother Jan. 19, 1829. After arriving at manhood John Lenke for some time earned his living at common labor and then until 1875 followed the trade of mason. After that he and his wife lived with their children for the rest of their lives. Mr. Lenke dying in April, 1904, and Mrs. Lenke on April 1, 1918. Before taking to wife Johanna Brandenburg he had been married to Minnie Brandenberg, by whom he had three children: Ernestina, who is deceased; Bertha, deceased; and Amelia, who is Mrs. Fred Maves of Cedar Falls. By his second wife he had five children: William, who died in infancy; Herman, subject of this sketch; Augusta, who is Mrs. Frank Larstad of the town of Tainter; Albert, of Colfax, Wash.; and Frank, of Superior, Wis. Herman Lenke as a boy attended school in Germany. He came to the United States in 1872, reaching Menomonie Junction, Wis., on September 25. For three years thereafter he was employed by Fred Maves in the town of Elk Mound, and then for a year by Frank Dahms of the town of Spring Brook. After that he worked another year for Mr. Maves and subsequently nine months for Henry Isenhood of the town of Red Cedar; after that he was employed one year by Peter Seipel of the town of Red Cedar. In 1877 he began the development of a farm, buying 160 acres of wild land in Section 2, town of Red Cedar and Section 35, town of Tainter. Having built a small house of 16 x 24 feet, he entered upon the task of clearing the land. At first he was unable to give his whole time to it, for he had to work out to earn expenses, and, in fact, for 45 years he operated threshing-machines every fall, for 32 years operating his own machine. In time he cleared 85 acres of his land and put up a set of good buildings, carving on general farming until 1902, in which year he sold the place and has since lived retired in Cedar Falls village. Up to the time he disposed of his farm he was a stockholder in the Rusk Cooperative Creamery and also had stock in the Farmer's store in Rusk. Mr. Lenke has seen many years of public service. He was assessor of the town of Tainter two years, treasurer two years, and a member of the side board several years, and since 1904 he has been assessor of the town of Red Cedar, making 20 years of continuous service in that office, which is said to be the longest period any town assessor in the county has erected. For 20 years he has been connected with the Wisconsin Farmers Mutual Hail and Cylcone Insurance Co. His career has been one of activity and usefulness and he is a man well known and respected throughout the community. Mr. Lenke was married March 10, 1881 in Menomonie, Wis., to Minnie Schultz, who was born in Germany, Dec. 3, 1859, daughter of Fred and Anna (Coot) Schultz. Of this union ten children have been born, Emma, Otto, Ida, Martha, Eliza, Alice, Katie, Paul, Edna and Helen. Emma, who was born Dec. 1, 1881, is now Mrs. Jacob Kerber of Montreal, Canada, and has four children, Eugene, Norma, Edna and Raymond. Otto, born Oct. 14, 1883, who lives in Bloomer, Wis., married Agnes Downing and has five children, Wanda, Wave, Wayne, Levetta and Waldin. Ida, born Sept. 8, 1885, is now Mrs. Harold O'Brien of Rice Lake and has three children. Vera, Sarah and Ida. Martha, born Sept. 9, 1887, married Otto Walter and died Eliza, born Jan. 29, 1889, is the wife of Eugene Downer of Bloomer Jan. 13, 1920. and the mother of four children, Marie, Wave, Robert and Gilbert. Alice, born Jan. 30, 1891, is Mrs. Harry Patten of Salem, Ore., and has one child, Earl. Katie, born Oct. 16, 1892, resides at home with her parents. Paul, born Oct. 26, 1894, is now in Kentucky. Edna, born May 12, 1899, resides in Bloomer. Helen, born April 28, 1901, is the wife of Albert Smith of Cedar Falls and has had three children, Harold, Leonard and Marvin, the last mentioned of whom died in infancy. Mr. Lenke and family are members of the English Lutheran Church in the town of Tainter and enjoy a good social position in the community.

Rudolph Oberle, who, starting some 55 years ago, built up farms from wild land in the towns of Lucas and Menomonie, and thereby took his place among the developers of the agricultural resources of Dunn County, was born in Baden, Germany, and was married in his native land to Catherine Rudiger. In 1862 he emigrated with his family to the United States, landing at New York and proceeding west to La Crosse, where they remained, however, but a short time, their actual destination being Menomonie. It was probably because Mr. Oberle's funds had run out that he stopped at La Crosse, where he could find temporary work and earn When he had enough to carry him the rest of the way, he with his some money. wife and children, took passage on a steamboat up the Mississippi to Read's Landing on the west bank, opposite the mouth of the Chippewa. Read's Landing at that time was one of the busiest points on the upper river, and stages ran from it to St. Paul, Menomonie, and perhaps other places, the river being crossed by a ferry. When Mr. and Mrs. Oberle disembarked from the steamboat they found that the stage for Menomonie had left just a few hours before and that there would not be another for three days. Not wishing to wait that long, perhaps again taking funds and hotel bills into consideration, they resolved to walk the distance, which is about 37 miles in an almost straight line, and must have been 45 or 50, if not more, by the crooked and winding roads, which were by no means smooth or easy to travel. They accomplished the walk, however, and arrived very tired in Menomonie. Thev had saved hotel expenses and stage fare but worn out considerable shoe leather. Mr. Oberle readily obtained employment with Knapp, Stout & Co., and was with that concern for five years, working in their mills. His ultimate object, though, was to get on to the land, and accordingly in 1868 he rented a small farm in the town of Menomonie, on which he and his family lived until he was able to erect buildings on a tract which he had purchased in the town of Lucas. It was in 1869 that they settled on the latter place and it was their home until 1886, Mr. Oberle during the period of 17 years spent there clearing 65 acres and putting up a substantial set of buildings. Then he sold that farm and moved to Menomonie, where he and his family lived for a year or two. In 1888 he purchased 120 acres in Section 20, town of Menomonie, built a log house and barn on the tract and proceeded to build up another farm, showing that, though he was now in middle age, he felt himself equal to many years of hard work. He cleared up about 30 acres of that place, erected a set of buildings and carried on general farming there until 1913, when he deeded the place to his son, Charles. In that year he lost his wife, who passed away on August 23, but he, himself, is still living, though now nearly 90 There are very few residents in the county who have lived in it as long vears old. as he has and arrived at the same age, if, indeed, there are any others. Mr. and Mrs. Oberle were the parents of three children, namely: John, who died at the age of 13 years; Louise, who died in 1895, and Charles, concerning whom this book contains a separate record.

Charles Oberle, a general farmer and dairyman and now clerk of the town of Menomonie, was born in this town April 7, 1869, son of Rudolph and Catherine (Rudiger) Oberle. He acquired his education in the district school and also in the public schools of the city of Menomonie. For 17 years he lived with his parents on a farm in the town of Lucas, and after they moved to Menomonie he went to work as clerk in the hardware store of E. A. Benjamin & Co., being thus employed in 1887, 1888 and 1889. Then the family moved to an undeveloped farm in the town of Menomonie and he was again engaged in agricultural pursuits. In 1913 he took over the home farm in Section 20, on a deed from his father, and has since made some improvements on it, having rebuilt the house and erected new buildings. He is successfully carrying on general farming and dairying, keeping Jersey cattle, some of which are high grade and some pure bred. His place is electrically lighted, the power being derived from the Wolbert Light & Power Co.'s lines. Mr. Oberle has at various times shown a commendable spirit of enterprise and public service. He was one of the organizers of the new Hudson Road Creamery in 1906 and has since been its secretary and manager. For many years he was treasurer of School District No. 4; he was town treasurer from 1896 to 1904 and has been town clerk since 1940 with the exception of five years from 1915 to 1920. Charles Oberle was married in the city of Menomonie, Oct. 31, 1895, to Clara Krieser, daughter of John A. and Margaret (Sprengling) Kreiser. He and his wife are the parents of two children: Carlos, born Jan. 14, 1900; and Albert G., born July 30, 1901. The family are members of St. Joseph's Catholic congregation of Menomonie, and

Mr. Oberle is a charter member of the Catholic Knights of Menomonie.

John Albert Kreiser, an early resident in Menomonie, was born in Milbach, Germany, Dec. 12, 1829. He grew to manhood in his native land and saw active service in the Germany army in 1848 and 1852. On getting out of the army in the year last mentioned he came to the United States, settling in Missouri. There he was living when the Civil War broke and in 1861 he joined the 12th Missouri Infantry. In the following year, on March 6, he took part in the battle of Pea Ridge in northern Arkansas, a battle that secured Missouri to the North and completed the pushing back of the Confederates along the whole western portion The military coat he wore on that occasion is still carefully preserved of their line. in the family and is perforated by two bullet holes. A year later ill health enabled him to secure a discharge from the army, and he went to Minneapolis, where he had a brother living, with whom he stayed for a while. He then walked to Stillwater in search of work, but not finding any there and hearing of the great lumber activities at Menomonie he walked all the way to that city. This was in the year At Menomonie he obtained a job as gardener for John H. Knapp, and held 1864 that position for ten years. He then gave it up in order to go into business for himself, having bought a ten-acre tract of land adjoining the city on the south, where he subsequently followed market gardening for many years. In 1892 he had a severe attack of the "grip," which permanently effected his health, and he died May 18, 1896. The local lodge of Sons of Hermann, of which he was a member, attended his funeral, which was conducted by the Rev. Mr. White of the Congregational church. Mr. Kreiser was married in Menomonie in 1865 to Margaret Sprengling, a domestic in the employ of the Knapp family. They were the parents of five children: Clara, now Mrs. Charles Oberle of the town of Menomonie; Mary, who is Mrs. James Shaw of Minneapolis; George S. and Anna, who live in Menomonie, and Ella, who is Mrs. W. H. Lindsay of St. Paul.

George S. Kreiser, who is connected with the Menomonie post office as city carrier, was born in Menomonie, Nov. 1, 1867, son of John Albert and Margaret (Sprengling) Kreiser. He was educated in the grade and high schools of Menomonie and as a youth helped his father in the latter's market garden work, also teaching rural school for four terms. In 1900 he began market gardening on his own account and did a fine business. In 1904 Mr. Kreiser passed the civil service examination for city mail carrier, receiving the highest mark among 11 contestants. He is now rounding out his twentieth year in this occupation, and is a well known and popular carrier whose services are appreciated by his superiors in the office. He travels about ten miles each day and serves between 300 and 400 homes. He belongs to several fraternal societies, including the Odd Fellows, Rebekahs and Knights of Pythias, and is a member of the Congregational church. Mr. Kreiser was married July 3, 1900, to Myrtle Smith, who was born in the town of Dunn, this county, July 6, 1881, daughter of Marion and Sophia (Wycoss) Smith, her parents being early settlers in Dunn County. Her father is still living but her mother died in 1903. Mr. and Mrs. Kreiser have a fine home at No. 812 Sixth Street, which Mr. Kreiser bought in 1914. Mrs. Kreiser, besides being a member of the Congregational church, is an active social worker, belonging to the Woman's Club, also to the Rebekahs and Pythian Sisters.

Henry Luer, a retired farmer residing in the village of Ridgeland, where he is a well known and respected citizen, was born in Germany, May 26, 1863, son of William and Catherine (Hilmer) Luer. The parents spent their lives in their native land, Germany, the father in his younger days being a foreman of road construction, and later a road patrolman, having also the task of taking care of the apple trees in his road section. They had five children, four of whom died in childhood, the only survivor being Henry. When the latter was 15 years old his mother died and his father subsequently married Dorothy Schroeder, by whom he had two children, Herman and Doris. Henry Luer was reared in Germany, and as a boy and youth attended public school in the day time and a private school in the evenings, his education being well looked after. He remained at home until nearly 20, having learned the mason's trade at which he was employed until he came to the United States in 1882. Settling immediately in Dunn County, Wisconsin, he worked one summer for Christ Luer, and then entered the employ of Knapp, Stout & Co. Company, working for them two summers on the Washburn farm and in the woods in winter. He then went to Barronett, in Barron County, where for two years he worked for the Barronett Lumber Company, in their mills in summer and in the woods in winter. It was at the end of that time that he began farming on his own account, buying 120 acres of land in Section 21, town of Wilson. This was railroad land and was wild and covered with small timber. Needing lumber for building, he hauled a load from Dallas, piled it up and went back for more. On his return with the second load, on account of the thickness of the woods he could not find the pile and had to drive about through the trees searching for a considerable time before he did so. He built a frame house and log barn and began to clear his farm, a task in which he was occupied for many years. During the early part of that period he did most of his trading at McPherson, a little hamlet or settlement existing in those days near the site of the present village of Wheeler. In 1900 his residence burned down, and he then built a new frame house and good barn, besides other buildings. While engaged in general farming dairying he kept grade Holstein cattle, having a herd of 25, with a pure bred sire. In March, 1917, he retired and took up his residence in Ridgeland, where he bought a comfortable residence. the same time he sold the farm to his sons, Arthur and Harry, who are now conduct-At ing it, doing general farming and dairying, and keeping pure bred and high grade Jersey cattle, besides raising Duroc-Jersey hogs. They have 130 acres of the land under the plow. Mr. Luer is a stockholder in the Ridgeland Cooperative Creamery, the Ridgeland State Bank, and the Prairie Farm, Ridgeland & Dallas Telephone Company. He served three years as supervisor on the Wilson town board and was a member of the school board of his district for many years. In February, 1924, he was appointed president of Ridgeland village, and in the following April was elected to that office, which he now holds. In whatever he has done he has made a good record and shown himself a man of ability. Mr. Luer was first married in the town of Wilson in 1890 to Martha Miller, daughter of Daniel and Caroline Miller, her parents, natives of Germany and both deceased, having been early settlers in Barron County, Wisconsin. The fruit of this marriage was five children, three of whom are now living, namely: Arthur and Harry, who are operating the home farm as proprietors, and Elmer, now a student in Northwestern College at Water-Mrs. Martha Luer died in 1913, and on Sept. 25, 1916, Mr. Luer married Mrs. Pauline Lackner, daughter of Frank and Theresa Haenel, her parents being natives of Bavaria, Germany who came to this country, settling in Chicago, where Mr. Haenel died. Mrs. Haenel, now 84 years of age, makes her home with her daughter, Mrs. Luer in Ridgeland.

H. J. Sherman, known for 23 years by hundreds of the inhabitants of Dunn County as a rural letter carrier, but who retired from that service in the summer of 1923, on a pension, was born at Silver Creek, town of Hanover, Chatauqua County, N. Y., June 12, 1858, son of Moses Levi and Rebecca M. (Darling) Sherman. parents, also natives of New York State, came west in 1876, locating first at Lake Geneva, Wis., whence in 1882 they moved to Eau Claire. There Moses L. Sherman, who was a veteran of the Civil War, died about two years later. His wife, who survived him about 30 years, died in Ladysmith, Wis. H. J. Sherman acquired a public school education in Chautauqua County, N. Y., and was a youth of 18 when he came with his parents to Wisconsin. He began industrial life in the butcher's store of Flanders Bros. at Deleno, Wis., and was thus engaged for three years. In the spring of 1880 he came to Dunn County and during the following summer was engaged in "running the river." The next winter he worked for the lumber company as butcher in their slaughter house, killing for the camps that winter 1,124 head of cattle. The following winter he worked for Hall & Dan at Knapp. He then went to work for the Daniel Shaw Lumber Co. at Eau Claire, for a year running the engine in their flour mill. Then returning to Dunn County he began farming in the town of Sherman, an occupation which he followed until 1899, in which year he went back to Eau Claire and for a short time was again in the employ of the Daniel Shaw Lumber Co., running their dynamo. On Oct. 15, 1900, Mr. Sherman received his appointment as rural mail carrier, attached to the Menomonie post office, and at once moved his family to this city. As already stated, he continued in that service for 23 years, or until June 12, 1923, when, having reached the age of 65, he was released in accordance with government rules and placed on the pension roll. He had seen the rural mail service grow to one of the largest public departments of the United States, and had watched other carriers use everything from a cicycle, a horse and cart, a span of horses with a buggy, and finally an automobile. He, himself, traveled 25 miles a day, 310 days a year, or a total distance To accommodate at one time all the letters he has carried would of 117,450 miles. require a mail box 264 feet square and 60 feet high. During the first eight and a half years of his service he traveled on Route 2, then for 12 years on Route 7, and for the balance of the time on Route 1. Two of the horses which he used are still sound and able to go. One of them walked through sand, dust and mud for 12 years and the other for 15. When Mr. Sherman started in the mail service his salary was $500 a year and out of that he had to care for his bicycle or horse or whatever vehicle or motive power he had. At the time of his retirement he was receiving $1,800 yearly and his pension is larger than his first yearly salary. А farewell banquet was tendered him by the local postal service, at which he was presented with a rocking-chair with the good wishes of the employees and all present. While residing in the town of Sherman on his farm Mr. Sherman served on the board of supervisors and also as constable and justice of the peace. He was married Dec. 5, 1880, to Carrie Shafer, who was born in Adams County, Wis., March 16, 1863, and who for 43 years was his helpmate and loving companion. She passed waay They had five children, all of whom are now living, namely: Zerpha, June 7, 1924. born Aug. 25, 1882; Dorsey Raymond, born March 9, 1885; Flossie, born Sept. 19, 1887; Kittie, born Sept. 19, 1889, and Phillip C., born Sept. 27, 1900. All these children are married. Zerpha is the wife of F. E. Wieman, postmaster at Washburn, Wis., and has three children, Dwight J., Marshall J. and Esther. Dorsey Raymond, now on a ranch at Gardner, Mont., married Emma Harmon and has two children, Harmon J. and Leonard. Flossie, wife of H. L. Hart, a carpenter of Venice, Calif., has three children, Odetta, Doris and Don. Kittie is the wife of E. C. Comstock, a vocational instructor in the public schools of Stoughten, and has two children, Robert P. and Sherman S. Phillip C. is now foreman in the Racine Rubber Works at Racine, Wis. He married Minnie Dase. Thus it will be seen that Mr. and Mrs. Sherman have at the time of this writing ten grandchildren who are of the fourth generation of the family in Wisconsin. The religious affiliations of the family are with the Baptist Church, while Mr. Sherman is connected fraternally with the Knights of Pythias and the Modern Woodmen of America.

Ole Tweiten, who was a resident of Dunn County for 37 years, and a well known and highly respected citizen of the town of Elk Mound, was born in Norway, May 19, 1852, son of Chester and Grace (Teisberg) Tweiten. The parents spent their lives in Norway, where they finally passed away. They had eight children, namely, Alsak, Ernst, Ole (first), Ole(second, and the subject of this sketch), Ole (third), Egal, Hage and Margaret. Of these, Egal, the only surviving member of the family, is living in Norway. Ole Tweiten (second), with whom this biography is directly concerned, was given a very good education. He spent the first 28 years of his life in his native land, and then in 1888 came to the United States and to Dunn County, Wisconsin, with the object of farming. He first settled in the town of Sand Creek, but after remaining there a year removed to that of Elk Mound, taking a homestead of 160 acres of wild land in Section 10. There was a small log house on the tract, in which Mr. Tweiten made his home for eight or nine years. He taught rural school in different parts of Dunn County, after he had earned a few dollars he began the work of clearing up his farm, using an ox team for his draught work, which he replaced later with horses. He and his family had to endure many hardships in early days but they passed through that period in time and for the rest of their lives were happy and prosperous. Mr. Tweiten died on his farm on May 19, 1917, to the deep regret of a large circle of friends and acquaintances who knew him for a good farmer and a bright and intelligent man whose conversation was interesting and whose personality was agreeable. Mr. Tweiten was married in Norway, April 12, 1877, to Gunhild Sending, who was born in that country Sept. 20, 1852, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ole Sending. Her parents both died in Norway. Their children were: Margaret, Knute and Samuel, all living in Norway; Gunhild (Mrs. Ole Tweiten), and Tom Olson. The last mentioned came to America at the age of 17 and settled in Michigan, where he spent the rest of his life. Mr. and Mrs. Ole Tweiten were the parents of seven children, as follows: Ole, born Nov. 11, 1877, residing at home; Grace, born Aug. 2, 1880, now Mrs. William Abbott of Chicago and the mother of four children, Gladys, Hazel, Beatrice and Olaf, the last mentioned, however, having died in infancy; Bertha, born June 26, 1883, residing in Chicago; Chester, born April 7, 1886; Alba, born Feb. 19, 1889; and Helga and Olga (twins), born June 13, 1892, of whom Helga is Mrs. Herman Jacobson of the town of Red Cedar, her sister Olga residing with her. Since Mr. Tweiten's death the farm has been operated by the mother with the assistance of her two sons Ole and Chester.

Louis Heller, now living retired at North Menomonie after a long and active career in several occupations, but chiefly in farming, was born in Pommern, Germany, Oct. 7, 1846. At the age of 15 he started to learn the miller's trade, at which he was subsequently employed in his native land until he was 21. Then in 1867 he came to the United States and directly to Menomonie, Wis. It took him two weeks to make the journey by train from New York to Milwaukee, and a week longer to reach Menomonie, as he traveled from Milwaukee to Menomonie partly by stage and partly on foot. On arriving here he at once found employment with Knapp, Stout & Co., in their flour mill, where he worked for two years. At the end of that time he was transferred to Rice Lake, where he put up a mill for the company. He also built the first hotel in Rice Lake, besides a number of houses and barns for Knapp, Stout & Co. While in Rice Lake he bought 160 acres of land, which he sold, after making some improvements on it, to W. Heller, manager there for Knapp, Stout & Co. In 1871 he returned to Menomonie and here followed the carpenter's trade. In August, 1873, Mr. Heller was united in marriage with Emilie Kurtz, like himself a native of Germany, and in December, 1874, they left for a visit to their native land, returning in the following spring, when he again took up carpenter work. Soon afterwards, however, he bought a farm near Knapp, where he and his family made their home for eight years, and while residing there he built a flour and grist mill at Teegarden for Thomas Teegarden. He then bought some timber land on Wilson Creek, near North Menomonie, built a dam on the creek and for eight years used the water power to operate a saw and grist mill. The business grew until the water power finally proved insufficient to operate the mill, and he then changed to steam power, which he used for seven years. At the end of that time he sold the mill and moved it to Wyoming for the purchaser, again taking up farming, at which he was occupied until 1918, when he retired and took up his residence in North Menomonie. Mr. and Mrs. Louis Heller have been the parents of five children, one of whom, Robert H., is now a farmer in Section 6, town of Menomonie. The other four, Otto, Ida, Anna and Albert, are deceased.

Robert H. Heller, an active and successful farmer of the town of Menomonie, proprietor of Wilson Creek Dairy and Stock Farm, was born in this town, July 14, 1875, son of Louis and Amelia (Kurtz) Heller. He worked for and with his father until 1899, in which year he purchased the old Peters farm in Section 15, town of Menomonie, which he operated for seven years. In 1907 he bought the old John Steuben place in Section 16, and set to work to improve it, which task he accomplished very thoroughly and it is now a highly improved farm. He has erected a set of fine buildings, including a good modern residence; a barn of 36×120 feet with a 14-inch brick basement and Louden equipment; and a two-stall garage. His buildings are lighted with power from the Weston Electric Light Plant. He has also a well equipped workshop, where he does all his own mechanical and repair work, and among his other equipment he has a threshing-machine, a silo filler, sawmill and feed grinder. His herd of high grade and pure bred Holstein cattle numbers about 40 head, and in his dairy business he uses a milking machine with a milking strain of 25 head. He is also a stockholder in the Hudson Road Creamery and has attained a prominent place among the farmers of the town of Menomonie, for two years serving as supervisor on the town board. On Oct. 21, 1897, Mr. Heller was married in the city of Menomonie to Anna Jacks, who was born in Germany, Oct. 14, 1872, and came to this country in 1896. He and his wife have had six children: Louis H. and Otto, who are farmers in the town of Menomonie; Paul, deceased; William and Anna, at home, and Amelia, deceased. Mr. Heller and the surviving members of his family are members of the German Lutheran Church in Menomonie.

Amund Torgerson, one of the early settlers on Elk Creek and a pioneer of Meridean, who died on Aug. 6, 1914, was a member of a remarkable family, well known throughout southern Dunn County, and was looked upon as one of the leading citizens of his locality. He was born at Ronningslaaen in North Froen, Gudbrands-dalen, Norway, Feb. 17, 1839, and was therefore 75 years, five months and 17 dyas old at the time of his death. With his parents and two brothers, Ole and Ever, he came to Meridean, Dunn County, in the early part of June, 1858. His brother Torger had settled at Meridean two years before, being one of the earliest settlers there. In 1864 Mr. Torgerson moved from Meridean to Elk Creek, where he settled on the farm upon which he died. He bought a quarter section at that time and later added considerably to his holdings. On July 18, 1866, he was married to Kari Thorud. Had he lived two years longer, they would have been able to celebrate their golden wedding. Mr. Torgerson was an early member and continuous worker in the affairs of Froen congregation of the Norwegian Lutheran Church and was widely known for his interest in all matters affecting the welfare of his community. In October, 1913, he suffered a paralytic stroke. He recovered his strength to some extent and was up for a time, but in January he took to his bed and never rose again. The end came on the date above mentioned, which was Thursday. Services were held Monday noon at the house and at 1:00 o'clock in the church at Elk Creek. The funeral was largely attended. Mr. Torgerson left a widow, an adopted son, Ole Clementson, and three brothers, Ole of Elk Creek, and Torger and Ever of Meridean. Mrs. Amund Torgerson survived her husband until April 26, 1924 (Staurday), when she passed away at the home of her fosterson, Ole Clementson, at Little Elk Creek, old age being given as the cause of her death. She had suffered a stroke of paralysis in January and had subsequently been confined to her bed. She was 85 years old. Kari Thorud was born in Osterdalen, Norway, Aug. 29, 1838, and came with her parents to this country about ten years later, settling in Adams County. A few years later the family moved to Little Elk Creek, where Mrs. Torgerson made her home. The funeral was conducted at the Little Elk Creek Church at 12:30 on Wednesday, May 2, the Rev. E. C. Haavik officiating, and burial was made in the church cemetery. Six nephews of the deceased acted as pall bearers.

Ole Clementson, a prominent farmer in the town of Red Cedar, was born in Norway, Feb. 13, 1866. He was about a year old when he came to America with his parents, who died while he was still an infant. He was then adopted by Mr. and Mrs. Amund Torgerson. When old enough he attended district school in the town of Red Cedar and later high school in Menomonie, subsequently remaining at home with his foster parents. In 1914 Mr. Torgerson deeded the farm to him for his faithful services. He is a good practical farmer, one who advocates the raising of pure bred stock, and he has a herd of fine Holstein cattle, 23 of which are pure bred. He is an original member of the Downsville Cooperative Creamery Co., and has some public service to his credit, having been for four years formerly a member of the town board of supervisors. Mr. Clementson was married in the town of Red Cedar, Dec. 7, 1901, to Christine Sandvig, who was born in that town Aug. 25, 1878, daughter of Olof and Mary (Engbretson) Sandvig. Seven children are the fruit of this union, namely: Clarice, born Aug. 29, 1902, who was graduated from the Menomonie High School and the La Crosse Business College, and is now employed in the office of the county judge as register of probate; Nora, born Jan. 13, 1904, a graduate of the Menomonie High School and Dunn County Normal School, and who is now a teacher in this county; Orvil, born Feb. 12, 1907, and Dagny, born Dec. 4, 1908, both of whom are attending high school in Menomonie; Vernon, born June 16, 1911; Evelyn, born April 19, 1915; and Orin, born Jan. 15, 1917. The three last mentioned are attending the grade school. The Clementson family are religiously affiliated with the Lutheran Church at Elk Creek.

Charles Kittleson, proprietor of an old pioneer farm in Section 14, town of Menomonie, on which he is residing, though no longer active in agricultural pursuits, is a native of Dunn County, having been born in the town of Red Cedar. October 28, 1858. His parents, Dosten and Margaret (Anderson) Kittleson, were natives of Norway who came to the United States in 1853, the voyage in a sailingvessel taking 14 weeks. After landing they came west to Winnebago County, Wisconsin, where they remained until the fall of 1858, when they came to Dunn County, and soon afterwards their son Charles was born. That winter they spent with relatives in the town of Red Cedar, after which the father bought the 160 acres of land in Section 14 which constitutes the farm of the subject of this sketch, and, erecting a set of log buildings, began to develop the place. There he died on Aug. 7, 1870, after some 10 or 11 years of hard work on it. His wife, who survived him many years, continued the improvements with the aid of her sons, until she, herself, finally passed away on Aug. 23, 1903. The children in the family were: Holver, now deceased; Andrew, who lives in Marshall County, Minnesota; Charles, one the home farm; Gunde, deceased; Thomas, of Barnes County, North Dakota; John, a farmer in the town of Menomonie; Nellie, wife of John Haugen of Marshall County, Minn., and Thern, who died in infancy. Charles Kittleson acquired his education in the school of District No. 8, town of Menomonie, and as he grew up became initiated into the various branches of farm work. Before he was 18 the management of the farm devolved upon him, his elder brothers having left home, and in 1896 he sold 80 acres of the land. He continued to operate the place both before and after his mother's death and has always remained on it, except for time spent in making several trips to the Pacific coast, and was active in farm work until 1923. He then rented the land, reserving, however, the house, where since his mother's death he has lived alone.

Clarence H. Stoddard, a resident of the village of Downing, was born in the village of Greenbush, Sheboygan County, Wis., Aug. 16, 1861, son of Jonathan and Phoebe S. (Carter) Stoddard. The father was a native of the United States and spent his life as a farmer; the mother was born in Canada. It was in 1878 that they came to Dunn County, Mr. Stoddard buying 80 acres of land on the site of the present village of Downing, which he developed into a good farm, making a specialty of raising pure bred cattle. He died on the farm Feb. 12, 1891, and his wife Phoebe in 1898. They were the parents of eight children: Anna, who married Charles Coleman, of Sheboygan, and is now deceased; Jane A., deceased; Hardin, deceased; Silas G., deceased; Mina, who married Rev. Moses Ally, a Methodist minister, and is now deceased; Evelyn, wife of Rev. T. Walter Cole, a Congregational minister who was stationed at West Salem, La Crosse County, Wis., but died March 27, 1925; George F., deceased, and Clarence H., of Downing. Three of the sons served in the Civil War; that is, all except Clarence. Clarence H. Stoddard had but meager educational opportunities, as he had to help his father at an early age. He remained on the farm until 1892, in which year he began to learn band saw filing with the Downing Manufacturing Company at Downing, Wis., and he subsequently followed that trade up to 1917 in Wisconsin and Minnesota, spending the last nine years of that time at Princeton, Minn., where he also operated a farm. He was married Dec. 28, 1884, to Lenora M. Blood, daughter of Charles Freeman and Rachel A. (Sturm) Blood of Downing. She was born in Stark County, Illinois, Oct. 23, 1861, and came with her parents to Downing, Wis., in 1878, and, having acquired a good education, for several years taught school in Dunn and St. Croix In July, 1897, Mr. Stoddard came with his family to Downing where they counties. have since resided, and own a comfortable home. Since 1917 he has followed farming and he also has the care of the Downing public school. He is a member of Tiffany camp No. 40, I. O. O. F. He was reared a Methodist, but he and his wife worship with the community congregation in Downing.

Jay L. Smith, proprietor and manager of the Colfax Hotel in the village of Colfax, was born in Bronson, Mich., Aug. 23, 1864, son of George W. and Eliza Smith. He attended school in Illinois and Wisconsin, including the city of Madison, and then took up the study of telegraphy, residing at home until 1879. After a short attendance in the Madison school, he went to Morrisonville, Dane County, Wis, and did farm labor until 1882. He then went to De Forest, where he finished learning telegraphy in the C. M. & St. Paul Railway office, and on Jan. 1, 1883, took up the duties of agent and operator. On June 1, the same year, he took charge of a grain elevator in De Forest for Hans Grinde. He remained in that place for three years and four months, holding both positions, after which he was agent and operator for the same railroad for a while at Madison, and later at Portage on the Watertown branch. In July, 1887, he was appointed agent at Burke, Wis., where he remained two years, after which he held a similar position at Kilbourn City for a year and a half. Then for the next seven years he was with the Milwaukee, Lake Shore & Western Railway at Hortonville, Manitowoc, Oostburg and Port Washington. At the end of that time he gave up operating for a while and for four years was brakeman for the same road. In 1897 he became agent for the "Soo" railway at Colfax and for 14 years subsequently remained in that position. Then for a short time he was in business for himself as proprietor of a fruit and ice cream parlor, and for the next four years was with the E. C. Best Potato & Produce Co. Then in 1915 he purchased the Colfax Hotel, a good brick structure with 24 guest rooms, which he has since conducted with good success. Mr. Smith is a popular host and in going into the hotel business evidently found a line of enterprise to which he is well adapted. He has advanced far in Masonry, being a member of the Lodge and Chapter in Menomonie, the Commandery and Consistory at Eau Claire, and the Mystic Shrine at Milwaukee. He also belongs to the Beavers and the Modern Woodmen of America. He was married at West Salem, Wis., July 26, 1887, to Jennie Hewett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James C. Hewitt, and he and his wife have been the parents of two sons: William, who is baggageman at the Colfax station, and Edward L., who died in 1912 at the age of 20 years.

Jacob Houss, an early settler in the town of Menomonie, who passed away some 20 years ago, was born in Germany, March 11, 1835. He grew to manhood in his native land and in 1865 came to the United States, locating in Menomonie, where he was married in the same year to Augusta Pitzrick, who was born in Germany, Sept. 23, 1852. They took a homestead of 158 acres in Section 2, town of Menomonie, Mr. Houss building a log shack on the east branch of Wilson's Creek, a few miles northwest of the present Houss home. For several years thereafter he worked on the spring drives for the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company to earn the necessary expenses of himself and family, gradually clearing his land as he had opportunity All this was done under pioneer conditions and he and his wife and children had to endure cold and hunger and all the hardships suffered by the early settlers of this county. By 1885 conditions had improved considerably and he had made such progress that he was able to erect a set of building on Highway No. 25, he and his wife taking up their residence in the house and making it their home for the remainder of their lives. He was the first to depart, passing away on Aug. 8, 1904, and his wife followed him less than ten years later, on April 16, 1910. They were the parents of 12 children: Lizzie, now Mrs. Louis Finder of the town of Lucas; Lena, now Mrs. George Halley of Itasca, Wis.; George C., a farmer in Section 2, town of Menomonie; Ida, who is Mrs. William Blake of the town of Sherman; Mary, who is Mrs. William Kmarth of Iron River, Wis.; Fred and William, residing in the town of Menomonie; Anna, wife of Otto Burke of the town of Dunn; Henry, of Eau Claire; and Minnie, wife of Frank Robush of the town of Sherman. The other two died in infancy.

George C. Houss, a representative farmer of the town of Menomonie, was born in this town, Sept. 10, 1874, son of Jacob and Augusta (Pitzrick) Houss. He was • brought up on the parental farm, which his parents settled on in 1865, and as he grew to manhood assisted his father in clearing the land and improving the homestead, also for several years working for the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company as a lumberjack. After his father's death in August, 1904, he took charge of the farm and operated it for his mother, and since her death ten years later he has conducted it on his own account, following the same general lines laid down by his father, except that he has gone more extensively into dairying. He is a stockholder in the Hudson Road Creamery and in the Rusk Creamery. He has also during his active career rendered some public service, for one year as supervisor and for three years as pathmaster. Mr. Houss was married at Prairie Farm, Barron County, Wis., April 26, 1915, to Elsie Kurschner, who was born in the town of Prairie Farm, that county, April 27, 1896, daughter of Valentine and Minnie (Maline) Kurschner. The parents were natives of Germany who came to this country when young, Mr. Kurschner finding employment for some years with the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company. Later he and his wife took a homestead in the town of Prairie Farm, and in course of time developed it into a good farm. He died Jan. 4, 1908, being survived by his wife, who is still living on the farm, which is now operated by their son The children in the Kurschner family were: John, now a farmer in Barron Otto. County; Lena, wife of John Wirth of Barron County; Mary, wife of Peter Miller of Barron County; Fred, also residing in that county; Otto, operating the home farm; Katie, who is Mrs. Allen Swanson of Ording, Wash.; Louis of Barron County; Elsie, wife of George C. Houss; and Lizzie, who died in infancy. Mr. and Mrs. Geo. C. Houss are the parents of three children: Gladys, born Oct. 10, 1916; Fern, born July 28, 1918, and Francis, born March 23, 1921. The family are members of the German Lutheran Church at North Menomonie.

Chauncey A. Lockwood, a pioneer of the town of Sherman, now deceased, was born in Chemung County, New York, March 18, 1829, son of Edwin and Sarah (Penoyer) Lockwood. The father was born in the state of Connecticut, Dec. 10, 1803, and the mother in New Canaan, Conn., on Dec. 20, 1800. They were married in Connecticut on Jan. 19, 1826. In 1829 they moved to New York State, in 1838 from there to Illinois, and in 1848 to Wisconsin, settling in Fond du Lac County, where they remained for ten years. Then in 1858 they came to Dunn County and for the next ten years made their home in the town of Peru, in 1868 taking up their residence in Menomonie. There Mrs. Lockwood died April 29, 1888, after which Mr. Lockwood made his home with his son, Chauncy A., until his death Dec. 4, 1894. Chauncey A. Lockwood as a boy acquired a common school education. He accompanied his parents to Wisconsin and was subsequently engaged in farming. On Jan. 1, 1852, he was married to Augusta Moore of Fond du Lac County. She died, leaving three children: George M., now of Fond du Lac; Ida, wife of G. A. Bowen of Fond du Lac, and F. B., of Minneapolis. In 1867 Mr. Lockwood homesteaded 160 acres of wild land on Section 9, town of Sherman, which he subsequently cleared and developed, putting up a set of buildings that were fairly good for that time, but now showing signs of age. On March 31, 1862, Mr. Lockwood enlisted for Civil War service, becoming a member of Company H, 14th Wisconsin Volunteers, with which he fought through the remainder of the war, receiving his discharge on April 5, 1865. It was not until 1871 that he went to live on his homestead, and he thereafter operated it until 1918, when he retired and subsequently made his home with his son Fred, who had bought 40 acres of the homestead farm. He died May 1, 1920. On Oct. 17, 1875, Mr. Lockwood had married for his second wife Susan Adams of the town of Sherman, Dunn County, who was born near Dayton, Ohio, July 9, 1853, daughter of William and Ann (Nogle) Adams. Her father, born in England in 1813, died in Dunn County, Aug. 28, 1893. The mother, born in England in 1815, died Oct. 6, 1895. They were married in England in 1839 and two of their children were born there. It was in 1845 that they came to the United States and at an early date settled at Cedar Falls, Dunn County, Wis. They were among the first pioneers of the town of Sherman, having to cut their way through the woods to get to their land and beginning the development of a farm practically without capital. A log house was their early dwelling and oxen their first draught animals on the farm, as was the case with most of the other early settlers. 'Mr. Lockwood by his second wife, Susan, had seven children: Fred A., born Dec. 21, 1876, who has been already mentioned; Grace A., born Dec. 29, 1879, wife of J. L. Hoover of the town of Sherman; William E., born July 24, 1881, residing in Faith, N. D.; Harry J., born Jan. 14, 1884, now of La Crosse, Wis.; Bert N., born Dec. 10, 1886, of the town of Stanton; Elmer S., born May 23, 1890, who lives in the town of Tiffany, Dunn County; and Cora May, born Dec. 15, 1891, who is Mrs. Fred Lindsley of the town of Sherman. The farm that Mr. Lockwood established, except the 40 acres of it sold to the son Fred, is still held by the family. Mr. Lockwood was a highly respected citizen of his town and he and his wife popular among their neighbors. He was generous to a fault and always ready to render assistance to those in need. Before he died he said in regard to his sons: "I determined to raise my boys to be good men, and good citizens; I've done it and am now ready to lay down my labors." He was a Republican in politics and affiliated with the M. E. Church, though not a member.

Fred A. Lockwood, proprietor of a farm of 80 acres in Section 9, town of Sherman, was born in this town of Dec. 21, 1876, son of Chauncey and Susan (Adams) Lockwood. He acquired his education in the rural school and worked on the home farm until arriving at the age of 21 years. He then went to work in a mill at Cedar Falls for the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company and was thus occupied for two summers. Then for two seasons he was engaged in threshing in North Dakota and after that was employed for two seasons in mills at Stillwater, Minn. In 1910 he obtained a position of "orderly" in the Stillwater City Hospital, being employed there until the fall of 1917, when he resigned it and returned to Dunn County. Before that, in 1903, he had bought 40 acres of his parents' farm in Section 9 and he now erected a small frame house on this tract and began farming on his own account. Subsequently he bought an additional tract of 80 acres adjoining on the east, but later sold 40 acres of that, leaving him with 80 acres, which is the present size of his farm. He has made some improvements on it, and as he has never married, his mother, since his father's death in May, 1920, has kept house for him. Energetic and a good manager, he has made progress and his character and record have made him well known and respected in the town of Sherman and the vicinity. In politics he is nominally a Republican but exercises his independent judgment at election, voting for the man of his choice without reference to party lines.

George A. Haag, who owns and operates the Elk Creek Farm in Section 1, town of Spring Brook, was born in the town of Sigel, Chippewa County, Wis., March 14, 1869, son of John and Anna (Webert) Haag. The parents were natives of Germany, the father of Wittenberg and the mother of Hessen, and both came to America when young. In 1863 John Haag, at the age of 19 years, enlisted in Company B, 26th Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry and subsequently served until the close of the war, on receiving his discharge from the army locating in Milwaukee, from which place, however, he soon came to Chippewa County, taking the train from Mil-waukee to Sparta, from the latter place walking to Chippewa Falls, and then following the Yellow River to what is now the town of Sigel, where he settled on a piece of wild land, which he ultimately developed into a good farm, residing on it until his death, which took place May 17, 1918. He was for many years one of the prominent citizens of his town and served at various times in school and town office. Since his death his wife Anna, to whom he was married in 1867, has made her home in Cadott, Wis., with her son, John. The children of Mr. and Mrs. John Haag, 12 in number, were: George A., of the town of Spring Brook; Louis C., of Eau Claire; John N., of Cadott; Henry, who died in 1916; Mary, now Mrs. Fred Buschendorf of the town of Elk Mound; Anna, wife of Wesley Becker of Greeley, Colorado; Arthur F., a physician in Chicago; Edward G., of Monona, Iowa; Benjamin, of Eau Claire. Wis.; William, who died at the age of 21 years and two who died in infancy. George A. Haag acquired a district school education in Chippewa County and as he grew up assisted his parents by working on the home farm. In 1890 he came to Dunn County locating on his present farm of 160 acres in Section 1, town of Spring Brook, which he has developed according to modern methods, having also put up a set of new buildings, which are electrically lighted, power being obtained from the Elk Mound branch of the Northern States Power Company. He is successfully carrying on general farming and dairying, keeping grade Guernsey cattle with a pure bred sire. Mr. Haag was married Nov. 19, 1896, in Elk Mound, to Mary Buschendorf, who was born in the town of Elk Mound, Jan. 6, 1870, daughter of William and Katherine (Sipple) Buschendorf. Mr. and Mrs. Haag are the parents of four children: Cora, born Feb. 23, 1898; Verona, Nov. 28, 1899; Sylvester E. P., July 10, 1901, and Irene, Oct. 1, 1904. The family are affiliated by membership with the United Evangelical Church in Elk Mound.

Frank P. Skillings, proprietor of Echo Mound Farm in Section 24, town of Dunn, was born in the state of Maine, Oct. 27, 1858, son of Henry H. and Jennie (Parker) Skillings, who were also natives of that eastern state. They came west in 1862, settling on a farm in Winona County, Minn., where both died in the following year. Frank P., still an infant, went to live with his aunt, Mrs. Malcolm McIntyre of Winona County, residing with her until he was 12 years old. Then in 1870 he came to Dunn County, Wisconsin, finding employment on the farm of Thomas McCauley at or near Dunnville. There he remained for seven years, during which time he became a good practical farmer. Ambitious to be his own master, he took the first step toward agricultural proprietorship in 1877, when he bought 40 acres of wild land in Section 24, town of Dunn. He was not yet ready, however, to begin the development of his place, but instead went to work for the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company, in whose employ he remained for about three years earning wages by working in the woods, in the mills and on the river drives. In 1880 he built a small shanty on his land, got married in December of that year and began the development of a farm. He was then about 22 years old, strong and full of ambition, and the better fitted, therefore, for the hard work that lay before him. There were plenty of stumps on his land, which had to be removed, and which was one of the hardest tasks the pioneer had to perform, to say nothing of the breaking of the virgin soil, its cultivation, and the erection of adequate buildings. Moreover, he could not keep continuously at it, as he had to earn money for living expenses until his farm became productive, so for several years he worked at intervals in When he was able to do so, he gave up outside work and dethe stone quarries. voted his whole attention to his farm, making more rapid progress. From time to time he bought other land until he had 182 acres, and replaced his original buildings with others more modern in size, style and construction. Thus he built up his farm as it is at present, a very good piece of agricultural property, and kept in Though times have not always been prosperous, he has on excellent condition. the whole been successful and is today regarded as one of the substantial and well to do farmers of his town. He is a stockholder in the Chippewa Valley Elevator Co. at Durand. Mr. Skillings' marriage, already casually alluded to, took place on Dec. 2, 1880, and united him with Lizzie Gobel, who was born in a log house in the town of Dunn, this county, on Nov. 18, 1862, daughter of John and Catherine (Bine) Gobel. Her parents, who were born, reared and married in Germany, came to America in 1846, residing for a while in Cleveland, Ohio, and then coming to Dunn County, Wisconsin, and settling in Eau Galle. There, however, they remained only for a short time, at the end of which they moved to Dunnville, where Mr. Gobel worked for Mr. Colburn in the lumber business. In 1861 he and his family moved on to land in the Chippewa bottoms in the town of Dunn, where he built the log house in which his daughter Lizzie was born. In 1864 he bought and took up his residence on a 40-acre tract of land on Dunn Prairie, where he died in 1867. His wife Catherine survived him for some years, passing away at the age Mr. and Mrs. Frank P. Skillings have been the parents of five children, of 72. one of whom, Frank, died in infancy. The others are Cora, Kate, Jennie and George. Cora, born Feb. 15, 1882, is now Mrs. Andrew Waller of Prairie du Chien, Wis., and is the mother of ten children, namely, Edna, Melvin, Frank, Genevieve, George, Milo, Elmer, Adeline, Ruth and Robert, the two last mentioned being Kate, born March 14, 1884, is the wife of John Waller of Menomonie and twins. has two children, Mildred and Milton. Jennie, born Aug. 22, 1886, is Mrs. Henry Kraft of the town of Dunn and has three children, Valma, Idell and Paul. George, born Feb. 22, 1890, is now engaged in conducting the home farm. On June 25, 1924, he was married to Orpha Marie Sumter. The family are connected religiously with the Baptist Church and Mrs. Skillings belongs to the Royal Neighbors of America.

Melvin O. Nelson, a substantial farmer in the town of Sand Creek, who for many years has been more or less prominent in public affairs in town and county, was born in this town on Sept. 9, 1878, son of John and Carrie Nelson, the parents being natives of Norway. John Nelson when a young man settled in Eau Claire where for some time he held a position in a sawmill as foreman of the night shift, and in 1867 he bought a house there. In the early 70's he became a pioneer farmer in the town of Sand Creek, Dunn County, buying 160 acres of wild land in Section 24, and later he bought 40 additional acres in Section 14. The log house which he built on the land is still standing. His barn also was a log building with a straw roof, and on beginning operations and for a few years afterwards he used oxen in breaking his land and for other draught purposes, afterwards changing to horses. He carried on general farming and in time broke 135 acres of his farm, on which he died at the age of 67 years. His wife, Carrie, who survived him, is still living, having now attained the advanced age of 82 years. She was his second wife, his first having died in Eau Claire. It was to that place that in early days they hauled their grain The children in the family (by the second wife) were Charles, and other produce. Henry, Melvin and Joseph. Charles is now living at Stevens, Minn.; Henry is manager of the Cooperative Store at Sand Creek, and Joseph is in Saskatchewan, Melvin O. Nelson was reared on the home farm where he now lives and Canada. as a boy attended rural school. Later he spent four years in Minnesota, but with that exception continued to work on his parents' farm, which he bought on the death of his father. He has improved the place by the erection of a round barn and other buildings and is engaged in general farming and dairying, having at present 35 head of grade Holstein cattle. He also raises Chester-White and Duroc-Jersey hogs. Mr. Nelson is a stockholder in the Co-operative Store of Sand Creek and the Farmers' warehouse at New Auburn village, and a stockholder in the New Richmond Packing Plant and the Farmer's Telephone Company of Prairie Farm. For nine years he was a member of the town board of supervisors and for four terms served as chairman of the board, and by virtue of that office also as a member of the county board. He has been a member of the school board ten years and is now serving as president of Sand Creek village. He was married in Sand Creek, April 30, 1905, to Ina Aves Spaulding, who was born at Reedsburg, Wis., daughter of Pulford and Corilla (Stilleck) Spaulding, whose other children were Arthur, Ormund, Ernest and Mary, the last mentioned being now Mrs. Jesse Heffel of Reeds-burg, Wis. Mrs. Corilla Spaulding having died, Mr. Spaulding married for his second wife, Edna Thayer, with whom he is now living in Sauk County. The children of this second union are Ruth, Alva, Mildred, Hazel, Hollis and Ervin. Hollis is deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Nelson are the parents of four sons, Lyle, Orville, Kenneth and Rodney. Lyle is employed in the Farmers' store, Orville helps on the farm and the two others are attending school.

Otto E. Skamser, a prosperous business man of Boyceville, now proprietor of the Skamser Hotel, and having an interest in other local enterprises, was born in Norway, April 6, 1868, son of Erick and Bertha Skamser. The family came to the United States in July, 1868, landing at New York and proceeding west to Eau Claire, Wis., where for three years Erick Skamser was engaged in sawmill work. In 1872 he came with his family to Dunn County, settling in the town of Sand Creek, of which he was a resident until his death in 1876. After the loss of her husband Mrs. Skamser returned to Eau Claire, where she spent her remaining years. They had ten children, of whom seven—Sever, Louis, Christ, Edward, George, Lena and Thomas—are now deceased. The three survivors are: Erick, formerly a hotel man but now living retired in Eau Claire; Otto E., of Boyceville; and Thay, who married Christian Yaner and lives in Los Angeles, Calif. Otto E. Skamser after attending school in Eau Claire, acquired some mercantile experience working as clerk in a dry goods store and boot and shoe store. He then spent two years in the lumber industry, working in the woods and on the drives on the small streams in northern Wisconsin. After that for a while he followed various occupations in Wisconsin and Minnesota. In the spring of 1896 he came to Boyceville, Wis., on a trout fishing expedition, and the village, people and general surroundings made so favorable an impression on him that he resolved to make his home here. Accordingly in 1897 he rented the old hotel in the village, which he conducted until July 4, 1899, when it burned down, furnishing a grand illumination and a fair amount of excitement, in addition to that caused by the celebration of Independence Day. Mr. Skamser continued in the same business however, erecting a suitable building at the corner of Main and Center streets, which was composed of two portions; a main building of two and a half stories and 30 x 50 feet in ground dimensions, and a lean-to of 16 x 50 feet, containing altogether 15 rooms, and he also had a livery barn. This place he conducted successfully for over 18 years until it, too, was destroyed by fire, on Jan. 6, 1918, the building and contents being a In 1922 Mr. Skamser built his present hotel, 34 x 38 feet in size, with a total loss. lean-to of 12 x 24 feet; the second floor containing six good rooms installed with hot and cold water faucets and wash bowls. He is a stockholder in the Boyceville Telephone Co. and in the Bank of Boyceville and owns seven acres of land within the village limits. Fraternally he is affiliated with the Woodmen of the World. He was married Jan. 20, 1898, in Boyceville, to Mary Krug, daughter of Charles and Anna Krug, both her parents, however, being now deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Skamser are the parents of four children: Thay, now Mrs. Arthur Larson of Boyceville, who has one child, Theolyn; Charlotte, who is a graduate of the Eau Claire Normal School, now living at home; Viola, a pupil in the Boyceville High School, and Doris, who is attending the grade school in the village.

Ole Anderson, a pioneer farmer in the town of Weston, who passed away some 28 years ago, but some of whose children are still living in this part of Dunn County, was a native of Norway who came to the United States when 11 years of age. He grew to manhood in Dane County, later going to Chippewa Falls, where he remained for a short time. He then came to Dunn County and entered the employ of Carson & Rand at Eau Galle, being thus engaged for several years, working in the shingle mill during the summer months and in the woods during the winter. In 1862 Mr. Anderson started his career as a pioneer farmer, buying 80 acres of wild land in Sections 24 and 25, town of Weston, which he started to improve by the erection of a set of log buildings. These he later replaced by a better set, though of the same type. His early progress was slow, as for a few years he had to keep on working for the lumber company to earn money for himself and family to live on. But in time he was able to give his whole attention to his farm, to which he added another 40 acres, continuing to operate it until his death on July 13, 1896. He married Madeline Lemon, who survived him a number of years, dying June 8, 1915. They were highly respected people, and for many years Mr. Anderson served in public office, both as supervisor and as a member of the school board of District No. 4, also generously donating an acre of land as a site for the school. He and his wife had six children. Uriah Henry, now a farmer in the town of Weston; Mary, who is Mrs. Frank Metcalf of the same town; Hattie, now Mrs. Anthony Decker residing in Weston village; Arilla, wife of Charles Bracker of the town of Weston; Emma, who married Fred Everett and lives in Detroit, Mich.; and Elizabeth, who also lives in Detroit, being the wife of Roy Morris.

Uriah Henry Anderson, a well-to-do and prominent farmer of the town of Weston, whose farm is in Section 24, was born in the town of Eau Galle, Dunn County, Wis., April 2, 1861, son of Ole and Madeline (Lemon) Anderson. He was a babe when his parents took land in the town of Weston and began to buld up a farm. When old enough he began to attend District School No. 4, where he acquired his elementary education, subsequently becoming a pupil in the high school at Menomonie, where he pursued higher studies for a short time, in the vacation periods assisting his father on the home farm. For several years thereafter he taught rural school during the winter months. On Oct. 30, 1888, he was married in the town of

Weston to Martha Denning, who was born Feb. 20, 1871, at Mt. Cory, Hancock County, Ohio, daughter of Robert and Susan (Brown) Denning, who had settled in Dunn County and the town of Weston in 1863. After his marriage Mr. Anderson purchased 60 acres of his father's farm, renting the remainder, which he later bought, and still later he bought an additional tract of 100 acres just east of the old homestead, on which he now lives. He has erected a fine barn and improved the outbuildings generally, and is carrying on farming and dairying in a practical manner and with good results. Mr. Anderson is a stockholder in the Downsville Cooperative Creamery, the Waterman-Erhart Co. of Menomonie and the Clear Oil Co. of Menomonie. He is fraternally affiliated with the Modern Woodmen of America and the Beavers. He and his wife are the parents of six children, whose record in brief are as follows: Gladys, born March 29, 1891, was graduated from the Dunn County Normal School and taught school a short time. She is now the wife of Charles Owen of Fall City and has seven children, Clare, Myrtle, Fern, Leonard, Vera, Russell and Marcene L. Reuben, born Feb. 15, 1893, was graduated from the Menomonie High School and later from the pharmacy department of Minnesota University. He is now a druggist in Minneapolis. He married Esther Cairney and has a son named Stewart F. Hazel, born April 23, 1899, was graduated from the Dunn County Normal School and was a teacher for several years. She is now residing at home. Irma, born Aug. 28, 1902, was also graduated from the Dunn County Normal School and for four years taught in District School No. 4; she is now attending the River Falls Normal. Earl M., born Dec. 17, 1906, is assisting his father on the home farm. Velma, born May 6, 1910, is now attending high school in Menomonie. The Anderson family are members of Lower Weston M. E. Church.

John Cowan, a well known pioneer of Dunn County, now living retired in Menomonie, was born in Hemmingford, province of Quebec, Canada, May 15, 1848, son of Thomas and Sarah (Lamberton) Cowan. The parents were natives of Belfast, Ireland, who emigrated to Canada when young and were there subsequently married. They spent their lives in agriculture, remaining on the farm on which they were married until their death. Thomas Cowan passed away first, in 1872, Mrs. Sarah Cowan surviving her husband until 1902. John Cowan acquired his educa-tion partly in Canada and partly in the United States, coming to the latter country in 1866 at the age of about 18 years. Having located in the town of Eau Galle, Dunn County, Wis., he became connected with the lumbering business and so remained until 1877, in which year he began the life of a pioneer farmer by purchasing 160 acres of wild land in section 28, town of Sherman. There was a squatter's shanty on the place, in which Mr. Cowan and his wife took up their quarters-for he was married that year-and then began the daily grind and routine of pioneer farm work, than which there is probably nothing more laborious. He was destined to spend 28 years on that place, 28 of the most active years of his life, during which time he experienced both joy and sorrow, developing his farm into a fine piece of agriculture property, losing his first wife and one of his children-a grown-up daughter-and contracting a second marriage. The original squatter's shanty gave place after a while to a good substantial frame house, and off to one side stood an equally substantial frame barn of 30 x 48 feet, with 16-foot posts, here and there being other necessary buildings. His fields were well tilled and he followed diversified farming with good success. In 1906, 13 years after his second marriage, Mr. Cowan bought another farm, in the town of Menomonie and not far from the city, and, subsequently selling his first place, resided on the second until 1920, when he sold it and retired, buying his present residence at No. 1018 Eleventh Avenue, Menomonie, which he has since occupied. While a resident of the town of Sherman he served for several years on the town board and was for 21 years a director of School District No. 4. He was also agent for the Farmers Mutual Insurance Company of Dunn County for 28 years. He has been a member of the Blue Lodge of the Masonic order since 1870, also belongs to the M. W. A., and is a stockholder in the Hudson Road Creamery and the Dunn County Agricultural Society. Since coming to the states in 1866, Mr. Cowan and wife have made 12 different trips back to their old home in Canada to visit their relatives and old friends, the last trip being made in 1923. Mr. Cowan was first married Oct. 22, 1877, to Mary F. Smith, who, after over 14 years of married life, died June 11, 1892. She left four children, Anna, Lottie, Elizabeth and Matie, of whom the following is a brief record. Anna, who became the wife of Thomas Monroe, is now a widow, and is the mother of three children, John, Francis and Catherine. After her husband's death she followed nursing until her own health failed. She then went to St. Paul and, as a less strenuous occupation, took up laboratory work in which she later graduated. She is now employed in Milwaukee Hospital, at Milwaukee. Lottie, who is now Mrs. Amos Erickson, resides at Bend, Oregon. Elizabeth, became a trained nurse but died at the age of 23 years. Matie is the wife of William Leonard of St. Paul. Mr. Leonard being shipping clerk for the Armour Packing Co.; they have one child, William N. Mr. Cowan was married secondly, Sept. 12, 1893, to Anna Jane Gowdy, who was born in Providence, R. I., April 18, 1848. Of this marriage there have been no children. Mr. and Mrs. Cowan are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church; also of the local chapter of the Eastern Star.

Richard A. Dreyer, M. D., of Wheeler, was born at Portage, in Portage County, Wis., July 2, 1887, son of Henry C. and Ida (Erdmer) Dreyer, who are now residents of Milwaukee. He was graduated from the high school at Janesville, Wis., in 1905, from the school of pharmacy at Marquette University in 1909, and from the medical school of the same university in 1913. Beginning the practice of his profession in Milwaukee, he remained there for about a year and then, on May 8, he came to Wheeler, having purchased the medical practice of Dr. J. J. Curtin. He was accompanied by his wife, as, just a few weeks previously, on April 4, 1914, he had been united in marriage at Waukegan, Ill., to Celia Moser. Except for a year's service in the army during the war, Dr. Dreyer has since remained here, and has not only gained a high standing in his profession, both as physician and surgeon, but has also become a very popular citizen, having identified himself closely with the interests of the village and county, and been ever ready to aid in any movement for the public good. Since coming to Wheeler he has served as health officer of the town of Hay River, and since 1919 he has been surgeon for the "Soo" line. He is a member of the Dunn and Pepin County Medical Society, of the Wisconsin State Medical Society, of the American Medical Association, of which he is also a Fellow, and of the Wheeler Commercial Club. Dr. Dreyer's army record is briefly as follows: In 1917 received commission as first lieutenant, and on April 1, 1918, was called to service; was stationed three weeks at Camp Pike, left for overseas in July, 1918, and was landed at Liverpool, England, a few days later going on to La Havre, France, with the 346th Machine Gun Battalion; performed medical service on the front line; before the fighting at Metz did transport service as ship surgeon, but when the armistice was signed was with his battalion in France. He started on his journey home April 1, 1919, and was discharged at Camp Dix on April 10, returning at once to Wheeler. He and his wife are the parents of a daughter, Ruth Dorothy, who for two years was a student in St. Catherine's College, St. Paul, and is now a student in the Menomonie High School. The family attend the Evangelical Church.

James Adams Decker, a well known resident of Menomonie, who saw service in the Civil War, was in government employment for some years after the war, later had a long experience in banking and other lines of business, and for a number of years has been retired, was born in Monticello, N. Y., March 29, 1840, son of Ahial and Sarah J. (Boyd) Decker. He was educated in the public schools of Monticello and in the academy in the same place, and at the age of 15 years started teaching school, an occupation that he followed until 1862. On Aug. 15, that year, he enlisted for service in the Civil War, becoming a member of Company E. Fifth N. Y. Heavy Artillery, as a private. Placed on detached duty, he was private secretary to Gen. Lew Wallace and so remained until the close of the war, being discharged June 12, 1865. He then became clerk to the paymaster stationed at Annapolis engaged in paying off those Union soldiers which the victory of the North had released from southern prisons. After being there one month they were transferred to Washington and when their work in that city had been completed Mr. Decker was placed in the soldiers' claims department. His work in the war department was continued until 1868, and he then became assistant examiner in the patent office, having been appointed to that position after passing a competitive examination, there being four vacancies and 25 applications. In the war period he had heard President Lincoln deliver his famous Gettysburg speech. In 1870 Mr. Decker resigned as assistant examiner in the patent office and went to Campbell Hall, Orange County, N. Y., where he entered into the mercantile business with his brother Benjamin F., the partnership lasting for seven years when it was dis-In 1878 he went abroad and in the following year located in Menomonie, solved. Wis., becoming cashier of the Bank of Menomonie on its incorporation in 1879. In that position he served until Jan. 2, 1883. When the name of the institution was changed and the First National Bank founded. Mr. Decker became cashier of it, which position, however, he resigned in May, 1883. In the fall of the same year he went to Baldwin, St. Croix County, Wis., and organized the State Bank of Baldwin, subsequently serving as cashier and manager of it until 1899. He then returned to Menomonie and, taking offices in the First National Bank building engaged in the real estate and loan business. In the latter business he continued there for 22 years, in the spring of 1922 giving up his offices. Although he is 84 years old he is still very active. He is a member of William Evans Post No. 58, G. A. R. Mr. Decker was married Oct. 22, 1879, in Orange County, N. Y., to Fannie Masters Howell, who was born at Florida, that county, Aug. 17, 1852, daughter of Asa and Jane (Jessup) Howell, her parents being prominent farmers. Mr. and Mrs. Decker are members of the Congregational church; Mrs. Decker being also a charter member of the Daughters of the American Revolution, the local Woman's Relief Corps, and the Woman's Club. Their children are: M. Howell, now residing in New York City in the employ of the Western Electric Co.; Della H., wife of Fred G. Pettibone of Minneapolis; and Fannie M., who is the wife of Erwin A. Quilling of Menomonie and has three children, Elizabeth A., James D. and Joan, the two latter being twins.

Hans T. Anderson, a respected citizen of the town of Sand Creek, who has had a successful career in agriculture and other occupations, was born in Telemarken, Norway, April 1, 1854, son of Torstin and Cjerste (Hanson) Anderson, the father being a farmer by occupation. The emigration of the family to America took place in 1861, landing being made at Quebec, whence they came west, crossing into the states and from some landing on the Mississippi River, probably near Galena, taking a steam boat up the river to Read's Landing opposite the mouth of the Chippewa. There Torstin Anderson left his family while he came on to Dunnville, Dunn County, walking most of the way. He was looking for a place to settle on and bought 40 acres in the Little Elk Creek Valley. Having done so, he engaged Christ Kittleson, who had an ox team and wagon, to go with him to Read's Landing and get his family, and they all journeyed back together by that primitive mode of The land Mr. Anderson had bought was wild and without buildings and the travel. family lived with Mr. Kittleson until he had built a log house. After making some improvements on that farm he sold it and bought an 80-acre place east of his original land, this new purchase including some old buildings. He and his family lived there Then he sold that place also a while and he cleared and broke some of the land. and moved to the town of Sand Creek taking a homestead of 160 acres on Upper Pine Creek. This tract was unimproved, so Mr. Anderson once more had to begin at the beginning and work hard and endure hardship, but his previous work had borne fruit and he now had a larger farm. He erected the necessary log buildings, he and his sons making their own shingles, and he and his wife spent their last years on that place, which in time they converted into a comfortable home. There were 11 children in the family, of whom six are now living: Hans T., Halvor, Ole, Bet-sey, Olena and Christina. Betsey, married Arthur Ramser of Rock Island, Ill.; Olene, became the wife of Louis Anderson of Grand View, Wis., and Christine the wife of Louis Larson of Spooner, Wis. Of the other children three died in infancy and Andrew and John are also deceased. Hans T. Anderson accompanied his parents in their several migrations, helped his father on the home farm, or farms, and at times worked out. Having learned the blacksmith's trade from his father, he conducted a shop in the village of Sand Creek for a while, also having one on his farm. During another period he conducted a grocery store in Boyceville, but sold out in 1909 and moved to Trego, in Washburn County, where he bought a farm and conducted a jewelry store, but later he sold out there and returned to Sand Creek. In 1911 he sold his farm here, but the purchaser not being able to make the payments due, he took it back and still owns it, it being also his place of residence. He also owns some house property in Chetek, Barron County. At times he has rendered some public service. having been a member of the town board and also of the district school board. Mr. Anderson was first married in Dunn County in 1876, to Tena Peterson, by whom he had 12 children, those living being Clara, Anna, Selma, Belitta, Pearl, Gule and Henry. The mother, Mrs. Tena Anderson, having died in 1911, Mr. Anderson married in 1917, Mrs. Dell Williams, a widow. She died in 1919 and in 1920 he married Mrs. Helen Swenson, the widow of Thomas Swenson. By Mr. Swenson she had nine children: Anna, Rena, Helen, Mandus, Sam, John, Christ, Ingvold and Henry, of whom John is now deceased.

Sam S. Hoveland, who after a successful career of many years in agriculture, is now living retired in the town of Sand Creek, was born in Telemarken, Norway, July 23, 1859. His parents, Sam and Torgan (Loftus) Hoveland, were natives of the same country, the father being a farmer by occupation. It was in 1865 that they emigrated to the United States, settling first in Goodhue County, Minn., where the remained for a year and a half. They then came to Dunn County, taking a homestead of 160 acres in Section 23, town of Sand Creek, a tract of which there was some jack pine timber. To reach the place they hired a man to drive them in a covered wagon, and he must have driven slowly, as they led their cow all the way. Until the father had built a log house they resided with Ever Olson. He also built a log barn with a slab roof. For 14 years Sam Hoveland spent the winters logging in the woods and the summers working in sawmills, having little time himself to give to his farm, which was looked after by his wife and the elder sons. He used to walk from his farm to Eau Claire every Sunday and return on the following Saturday, carrying groceries and other supplies with him, and at one time he carried 100 pounds of flour on his back from Bloomer. He and his family cleared the land, using oxen for the first five years and after that horses, both in breaking for himself and for others, and he continued to work on and improve his farm until his death in 1884. His wife survived him many years, passing away in 1917. They were the parents of a large family numbering 14 children, of whom 11 are now living namely, Sam S., Ole, Theodore, John, George, Sewell, Oscar, Martin, Anna, Gertrude and Rena. One child died in infancy unnamed and the other two deceased are Will and Albert. Anna is now the wife of Charles Kitchman of Eau Claire; Rena married A. A. Anderson of Colfax, and Gertrude is the wife of Thomas Peterson of Rice Lake. Sam S. Hoveland was seven years old when his parents settled on their pioneer farm in the town of Sand Creek. He was at the age when most children enter upon their educational career, but as there was no school then in the neighborhood, he had to pick up knowledge the best way he could as he grew older. At the age of 16 he began working in logging camps and spent seven winters that way, being paid $16 per month when he started. In the spring he took part in the log drive on the rivers, and in the summer worked in the sawmills, becoming familiar with every phase of the lumbering industry. He also did railroad construc-After the death of his father in 1884 he conducted the farm for his tion work. mother for two years, after which he spent seven years as superintendent of the farm of Ole Noer, a farm of 200 acres in Section 11, town of Sand Creek, which he bought at the end of that time, also buying 80 acres in Section 21. On this place he carried on general farming on his own account for 27 years, also for 24 years operated a threshing-machine, and with T. S. Peterson ran a sawmill. In 1920 he sold his farms, and he and his wife resided with their unmarried son, Herman, who bought the 80-acre place, Mrs. Hoveland doing the housekeeping. On March 17, 1925, they retired to the village of Sand Creek and purchased a nice comfortable home. At one time Mr. Hoveland used to keep Durham cattle and Percheron horses, but the present herd on the farm is composed of Brown Swiss cattle. He served several years as a member of the town board of Sand Creek and also as a member of the school board. Sam S. Hoveland was married in Sand Creek in 1882, to Minda Halverson, daughter of Halvor and Olea Halvorson, who came from Norway to the United States in 1864, settling at Beloit, Wis., whence they later moved to Barron County, where they took a homestead. Mr. Halverson is now dead, but Mrs. Halverson survives. Mr. and Mrs. Hoveland have had seven children: Sewell Arthur, born Dec. 6, 1884; Elvin, born Oct. 16, 1886; Ona Theresa, born April 13, 1888; Herman, born April 14, 1890; Carl Oscar and Hildor Torphin (twins), born Sept. 27, 1892; and Albert, born Dec. 6, 1893, who died Nov. 25, 1918. Of these, Arthur and Elvin are now in Saskatchewan, Canada; Ona Theresa is cashier in the Farmers' store at Chetek, Barron County; Hildor Torphin was inducted into the United States service in 1918, becoming a member of Company F, 11th Infantry, "Black Hawk Division," and was killed in action Oct. 17, 1918.

Ole M. Vennes, who in his day performed a worthy part in helping to built up the agricultural resources of the town of Hay River, and who has recently passed away, was born in Minnesota, Oct. 16, 1864, son of Andrew and Anna Vennes. The parents were natives of Norway, in which country they were married, and there two children were born to them, Leona and Annie. But the prospects for self advancement in their native land were poor; in time their thoughts turned to America, the land of opportunity, and they resolved to emigrate. Not having the means to pay the cost of the journey for all the family, Andrew Vennes said goodbye to his wife and children and came to this country alone, looking forward to a reunion with the loved ones in the not distant future. He settled first in Minnesota, finding employment, but though he was industrious and economical, it was two years before he could send his wife money enough to enable her and the children to join him. The happy reunion took place in 1866, in Minnesota, where Andrew Vennes was then working, and where they continued to reside until 1868, when they came to Menomonie. In the following year Mr. Vennes began the life of a pioneer farmer, homesteading 160 acres of wild land in Section 2, town of Hay River. The situation was somewhat isolated, as the nearest trading-points were Prairie Farm in Barron County, and Menomonie, the former some 11 or 12 miles distant, and the latter-the larger village-21 miles. But in those days the settlers on the farms went to town only occasionally, perhaps at long intervals, and when they did go would lay in a supply of provisions and other necessaries to last them a long time. As money was scarce, considerable planning had to be done and strict economy practiced to make both ends meet; but conditions improved with time, highways and railroads were built, the horse and buggy, or good farm wagon, took the place of the old lumbering ox cart, the squeaking of which could sometimes be heard for a mile, and the home was provided, not only with necessities, but also with some reasonable comforts. But much hard work had to be done before all this was accomplished, and of this work Mr. and Mrs. Vennes had their share. To describe in detail the process of transforming the raw land into a flourishing and profitable farm would only be to repeat an oft-told story which may be found on many pages of this volume. Mr. Vennes' experience was similar to that of most of the other early settlers, and he and his family endured much the same privations. Mrs. Vennes died on the farm in 1886 and Mr. Vennes in the following year, leaving its further development to their son, Ole M. Of the two children who were born to them in Norway, Leona and Annie, Leona is deceased; Annie, born Feb. 14, 1851, is now Mrs. Ole Swanson of Prairie Farm. They had also two other daughters, born in the town of Hay River, namely, Jane and Lettie, both of whom are de-

Vennes, who ceased, and they had also a son who died before his mother. was the only son of his parents, was a child of four years when his parents moved to Dunn County, and about five when they settled on their homestead in the town of Hay River, where he grew to manhood. Being obliged at a very early age to help his father, he had practically no schooling, but developed into a strong, hardy and self-reliant man. He was about 23 years old when, through the father's death, the farm came into his hands, and he proceeded to carry on the work of improvement, in which he spent some 20 years or more. This work was very thoroughly done, and, in addition to the clearing and planting of many acres, he erected a good set of buildings, put up necessary fences, kept good stock, and showed himself in all respects a good practical farmer of the modern type, and the Vennes farm is today a valuable piece of agricultural property. Mr. Vennes continued his labors on the farm until January, 1920, when, owing to failing health, he left his son Alfred on it and moved with his family to Menomonie, where he passed away on April 1, 1920. He was a man well liked and respected, inclined politically to the principles of the Democratic party, and for ten years he served efficiently as clerk of School District No. 2. Ole M. Vennes married Lucy F. James, who was born in the town of Hay River, Dunn County, Wis., Nov. 29, 1869, daughter of Joseph and Anna (Jenks) James. Her parents were natives of Michigan, in which state they were married. Early in the year 1864 they came to Menomonie, Wis., resided there subsequently for one year, and then took the homestead of 160 acres in the town of Hay River on which their daughter, Lucy F., was born, and where they, themselves, spent the rest of their lives, Mr. James dying Dec. 18, 1906, and Mrs. James on Oct. 20, 1913. To Mr. and Mrs. Ole M. Vennes 11 children were born, namely, Harvey L., Florence M., Viola A., Ethel M., Alfred, Leon A., Louise A., Agnes E., Lucy F., Ralph B. and Grant R., whose further record in brief is as follows. Harvey L., born July 3, 1886, grew up a promising boy to the age of almost 12 years, when he was accidentally drowned on July 1, 1898, being buried on his twelfth birthday, which, instead of being an occasion of rejoicing and congratulations, was one of gloom and sadness in the family and neighborhood. Florence M., born Jan. 26, 1889, acquired a good education, being graduated from the Menomonie High School and from the Dunn County Normal School, and she subsequently taught rural school for several years. She is now the wife of Howard Bowker of Cohasset, Minn. Viola A., born July 4, 1892, was also graduated from the Dunn County Normal School, and taught rural school for a while. She married Albert Fortney and is now residing in the village of Wheeler, Dunn County. Ethel M., born July 15, 1894, had the same education as Viola. She is the wife of Herman Anderson of the town of Sheridan, whose parents were early settlers in that part of Dunn County. Alfred, born Sept. 5, 1896, is now the proprietor of the old Vennes homestead and is further mentioned in this volume. Leon A., born March 22, 1899, after passing through the grades, was graduated from the Dunn County Agricultural School. After this country became involved in the war with Germany he entered military service, becoming a member of the Students' Army Training Corps of Wisconsin University and was mustered out Dec. 14, 1918. He then entered River Falls State Normal School, from which he was graduated in 1920. For two years subsequently he was a teacher of agriculture and athletics; then in 1923 he became a student of agricultural economics in the Ames Agricultural College at Ames, Iowa, to graduate in March, 1925. Louise A., born June 3, 1901, was graduated from the Menomonie High School and Dunn County Normal School and has been a teacher for the last six years, during the last four of which she has taught in the Boyceville public school. Agnes E., born Oct. 16, 1904, is also a graduate of the Dunn County Normal School and is now teaching rural school. Lucy F., born Feb. 11, 1907, is a graduate of the Menomonie High School and the Dunn County Normal School. Ralph B., born Sept. 14, 1910, is attending the Menomonie High School, and Grant R., born March 30, 1913, is a pupil in the grade school. The above shows that Mr. and Mrs. Vennes were careful to give all their surviving children the benefit of a good education, though at the cost of considerable self sacrifice, and it is gratifying to note that the children are proving themselves worthy of their parents by making good use of their opportunities. It marks also the great improvement in local conditions since Mr. Vennes had to forfeit such educational opportunities as existed in this county when he was a boy in order to help his parents; yet in spite of that handicap he achieved something worthy of record and gave to his children that which he could not obtain for himself. When he moved to Menomonie he bought a comfortable residence and four lots at No. 1020 13th Street, where Mrs. Vennes is still living. While on the farm the family attended the Evangelical Lutheran Church in Wheeler, but now attend church in Menomonie. It remains yet to speak of the children in the James family, that of Mrs. Vennes' parents. There were 13 in number, as follows: William, who is deceased; Elmer, now of Hayward, Sawyer County, Wis.; Wesley, of Boyceville, Dunn County; Eunice, who is Mrs. Elmer Morley of Shell Lake, Wis.; Elizabeth, who married Edward Reed of Colorado, but is now deceased; Lucy F., widow of Ole M. Vennes; Louis, of Duluth, Minn.; George, deceased; Effie, now Mrs. Winnifred Sabin of Hayward, Wis.; Eva (twin sister of Effie), who is Mrs. Frank Fallis of Burnette County, Wis.; Andy, of Duluth; Anna (twin sister of Andy), who was the first wife of Frank Fallis, but is now deceased; and Martin, who died in infancy. It may be said of this family also that they proved themselves worthy men and women, esteemed and respected in their respective communities.

Alfred J. Vennes, proprietor of the old Vennes farm in Section 2, town of Hay River, was born in Hayward, Wis., Sept. 5, 1896, son of Ole M. and Lucy (James) Vennes. As a boy he passed through the grades in rural school and subsequently took a two years course in the agricultural school at Menomonie. Brought up on the home farm, the origin of which is told elsewhere on these pages, he aided largely in its development, becoming its manager after his father's death and buying it from his mother in August, 1920. Of its 160 acres he now has 100 under cultivation and has a good set of frame buildings with the addition of a cement silo. He is engaged in general farming, giving close attention to dairying, for which purpose he keeps grade Holstein cattle, having a pure bred sire at the head. He is a stockholder in the Big Beaver Cheese and Butter Co., and for six years served as its secretary and is now serving his third year as town clerk. In these various positions he has shown himself a capable man of business and one to be trusted. Mr. Vennes has a good army record for World War service. He was mustered in at Chippewa Falls, June 14, 1917, and was sent first to Camp Douglas, Wis.; then in September to Camp McArthur at Waco, Texas, and in January, 1918, to Camp Merritt, N. J.; embarked for France, Feb. 1; landed in Liverpool, Feb. 16; after resting at Camp Winneldown near Manchester, England, he crossed the channel from a southern English port and was landed at Havre, France. He was then a member of Company C, 107th Ammunition Train Corps, which was included in the 32d Division, his duties being those of a driver. On June 7 he left Havre, driving a truck across country to Alsace, and on July 15 was on his way to Chateau Thierry, following along that front to Fismes, and on Aug. 20 going on to Juvigny, where he was stationed until Sept. 4. Thence he went to the Argonne, where he was when the armistice was declared. After that he accompanied the army of occupation to Coblenz, Germany, where he remained until April, 1919. On May 1, 1919, he embarked at Brest for home, landed in New York on May 13 and was mustered out on May 29 at Camp Grant, Illinois. On Sept. 1, 1920, Alfred J. Vennes was united in marriage with Laura Anderson, who was born on a farm in the town of Sheridan, Dunn County, Wis., Nov. 19, 1895, daughter of John A. and Augusta (Christenson) Anderson. Her parents were natives of Norway, the father born Oct. 13, 1855, and the mother Sept. 15, 1857. They were married at Prairie Farm in December, 1878, after which they settled on the farm in the town of Sheridan, this county, on which their daughter Laura was born. After an active career as farmers for many years, they passed away, Mr. Anderson on July 11, 1911, and Mrs. Anderson Their children were: Gena, who died in infancy; Gena (second), on Dec. 26, 1912. now Mrs. Peter Christenson of Prairie Farm, Barron County; Edwin O., of Prairie Farm; Alvena, who became the wife of F. of Prairie Farm; Herman C., who is on the home farm in the town of Sheridan; Clara, wife of I. Opoien of Danvers, Minn., and Laura, wife of Alfred J. Vennes. Mrs. Vennes was graduated from the Dunn County Training School and the River Falls State Normal School. She subsequently taught rural schools in Dunn County for two years and was a teacher for two years in the state graded schools of Prairie Farm and for two years in the public schools of Wausau, Wis. Mr. and Mrs. Vennes are the parents of one child, Jack Anderson, who was born June 12, 1923.

Ole Madsen, one of the long established merchants in the city of Menomonie, having been engaged in the jewelry business here for 27 years, was born in Askevold, Sondfjord, Bergen Stift, Norway, Oct. 23, 1869. He is a son of Mads Michaelson Thorshaven Ask and Lene Jensdatter Ask, also natives of Norway, the father born in 1842 and the mother in 1840, who were married July 13, 1868. The father is still living in Norway, having attained the venerable age of 83 years, while the mother has been but a few years deceased, having passed away in 1921. Ole Madsen was christened Peder Olai and was educated in the public school and church of his parish. He subsequently took courses in drawing and wood carving and in watch making. In seeking a wider field of opportunity, he came to the United States and a few days after landing bought a ticket to Menomonie, Wis., where he arrived June 2, 1889. Here he remained, however, a few days, going on to Prairie Farm, Barron County, where for two years he lived with an uncle. After arriving in this country he had shortened his name to its present form. In 1891 he went to Nelson, Nuckolls County, Nebr., where until 1894 he worked in a jewelry store. In 1894 he returned to Wisconsin and until March, 1898, was employed in a jewelry Thence he came to Menomonie and established his store at Black River Falls. present business at No. 301, Main Street. Here he has a finely equipped establishment, carrying a full line of choice jewelry, carefully selected with eye to the demands of local trade, and including besides ordinary jewelry, silverware, cut glassware, and other articles usually carried in first class establishments of the kind. In his repair department he employs an expert watchmaker. On Dec. 31, 1916, Mr Madsen passed the state board examination for optomery, having previously taken up and studied the science, and now has an optical department in connection with his other business. Mr. Madsen is recognized as one of Menomonie's successful business men and as a reliable and useful citizen, interested in everything that pertains to the good of the community in which he lives, whether of a moral or material character. To every movement along such lines he has given his active support. Mr. Madsen was united in marriage at Black River Falls, Wis., on June 26, 1901, to Karen Guldbrandsdatter Amblie, who was born at Ringsaker, Hedemarken, Norway, Feb. 7, 1877, daughter of Guldbrand Olson Amblie and Elizabeth Nelsdatter Bukalsrud Amblie. The father was born at Ness Hedemarken, Norway, Dec. 1, 1818, and died in that country Sept. 4, 1877. The mother, born at Ness Hedemarken, Norway, April 4, 1837, came with her children in 1880 to the United States and settled at Black River Falls; she died in Menomonie, Feb. 4, 1904. Mr. and Mrs. Madsen are the parents of one child, Ove A., who was born Feb. 1, 1912 and is now attending public school. The family have a pleasant home at No. 1020 Seventh Street. Religiously they are affiliated with the Norwegian Lutheran Church.

Henry Cook, one of the best known farmers in the town of Red Cedar, having resided on his present farm in Section 5 for nearly 40 years, was born in Pennsylvania, April 2, 1854, son of Nicholas and Sophia (Schlecker) Cook. He accompanied his parents to Dunn County in 1858 and was reared on their farm in Section 34, town of Red Cedar, where he remained until he was 31 years old. During a number of years of that period he worked in winter for Knapp, Stout & Co. in the woods and also carried mail. In July, 1881, he bought 109 acres in Section 5, town of Red Cedar, which tract is a part of his present farm, he having added to it in 1900 20 acres situated in the town of Spring Brook, making a total of 129 acres, and he settled on the land and began to improve it, in 1883 putting up a log house with the view to a future home, and this place in fact forms a part of his present residence. On Nov. 25, 1885, Mr. Cook was married in Menomonie to Mary Beyer, who was born in the town of Red Cedar, April 28, 1869, daughter of William and Augusta (Beyer) Beyer. With his wife's assistance, and later with that of his children, Mr. Cook had developed his farm and brought it up to modern requirements. He is a good general farmer, has provided himself with adequate buildings and equipment, and keeps good grade Holstein cattle and other stock. He and his wife have been the parents of 13 children, 11 of whom are now living, the full list being as follows: Martha, born Nov. 18, 1886, is now Mrs. Ernest Schroeder of the town of Red Cedar and has four children, Richard, Laville, Verna and Idell. William, born June 10, 1890, who married Bertha Hagen, lives in Menomonie, and has three children, Helen, Ralph and Wilbert; Robert, born July 24, 1893, who married Meda Schroeder, resides in Menomonie and has two children, Madeline and Geraldine; Nicholas, born June 1, 1896, and now residing on the home farm; Louis, born Sept. 23, 1897, who married Myrtle Beguhn, resides with his wife's parents and has two children, Dorothy and Harold; Henry, born Oct. 19, 1899, who married Martha Boerner and resides in Dubuque, Iowa; Arthur, born Aug. 18, 1902, residing at home; Mabel, born July 30, 1904, residing at home; Alice, born May 15, 1906, now Mrs. Arthur Harms of Dubuque, Iowa, who has one child, James; Merwyn, born May 13, 1909; Irene, born Aug. 19, 1910, and Carl and Anna, who are deceased. The son Nicholas has a military record. He was drafted into the army May 28, 1918, from Menomonie, being assigned to the infantry. After training at Camp Johnston, Florida, he sailed in August for France and saw service there, remaining until March 11, 1919. He was discharged April 16, 1919. The Cook family are members of St. Paul's Lutheran Church in Menomonie.

William Beyer, an early settler in the town of Red Cedar, was a native of Germany, who married Augusta Beyer, and emigrated to this country. It seems that they stopped for a while in Watertown, Wisconsin. At least they came to Dunn County from that place in a covered wagon drawn by oxen, being the first arrivals in what was subsequently known as Beyer's Settlement in the northeast part of the town of Red Cedar. Securing a tract of wild land, they began to develop a There were then many Indians in the county and much wild game, and the farm. development of a farm meant an immense amount of hard work extending over a period of many years. Mr. Beyer worked on his place until 1874, in which year he moved to the village of Rusk, where he and his wife conducted a hotel for some 13 years, at the end of which time they moved back to the farm and spent the remaining years of their lives there, Mr. Beyer dying in December, 1902, and Mrs. Beyer in September, 1921. They had 13 children, of whom seven are living, namely: Emma, wife of Herman Tietz of Eau Claire; Mary, wife of Henry Cook of the town of Red Cedar; Frank, who lives at Port Williams, Canada; Ludwig, of Buchanan, N. D.; Robert, of St. Paul; Charlotte, who is Mrs. Albert Whinnery of Eau Claire; and Fred, who lives in Minneapolis. Those deceased are William, Anna, Charles, Bertha, Amelia and Ida.

Benjamin Seth Laberee, a well known and respected farmer of Section 14, town of Tiffany, was born on a farm in Juneau County, Wisconsin, Aug. 3, 1865, son of Peter and Sarah (Higbee) Laberee. Both parents were American born, the father being of Swedish and French ancestry and the mother's ancestry being English and German. They became acquainted in Juneau County, where they were married and settled on a farm seven miles from Necedah. It is interesting to note that they died in the same house in which they were married, Peter Laberee in 1894 and Mrs. Sarah Laberee in 1904. Their children were: Nettie, who now resides at Lemonware, Wis.; George, who is in Portland, Ore.; Myron, deceased; Meade, who lives on Iron Range in the northern part of Minnesota; Miles, of Black River Falls, Wis.; Ada, now Mrs. William Ganther who lives near the old Laberee farm; and Benjamin Seth, of the town of Tiffany, Dunn County. Benjamin Seth Laberee was educated in the rural school near his parents' farm in Juneau County. After residing on the home farm until he was 20 years old, he began an independent career, buying a farm of 90 acres in the neighborhood. This was an old improved farm but badly run down. During the 17 years in which he lived on it he brought it into much better condition. On April 1, 1912, he sold it and came to Dunn

County, buying the farm he is now living on and operating. Its area is 80 acres and it was partly improved when he took it, the buildings being fair. Owing to his improvements, they are now good. He has 38 acres under the plow, the balance being in pasture and timber, and he is doing general farming and dairying, keeping good grade native cattle and milking from 10 to 12 cows. The farm is three miles north of Boyceville, which place is a convenient market for him. While residing in Juneau County Mr. Laberee served as school treasurer for three terms. He was married Dec. 25, 1890, to Martha Worden, who was born in Juneau County, Oct. 2, 1869, daughter of Devellen and Caroline (Ellis) Worden. Mr. and Mrs. Laberee are the parents of three children, Carrie D., Cora V. and Hallie W. Carrie D., who was born Nov. 1, 1893, is now Mrs. Philip Rogers of the town of Hay River, Dunn County, and has one child, Charlotte. Cora V., born June 8, 1900, after passing through the usual eight grades of the common school, took a two-year course in the Boyceville High School, and is now living on the home farm with her parents. Her birthday was the 100th anniversary of that of her great grandmother. Hallie W., born Jan. 18, 1902, had the same education as that of Cora V., subsequently taking a course in auto-mechanics in the Sweeney Auto School in Kansas City, Mo. He is now on the home farm, assisting his father. One other former member of the family must be mentioned, Frank Kruschke, a nephew of Mrs. Laberee, who was born July 26, 1898, and was reared by Mr. and Mrs. Laberee from the age of two years. On Oct. 23, 1918, he was drafted for service in the World War, and, being sent to Camp Shelby for training, died there from pneumonia, following the "flu," on Nov. 7, 1918. His body was brought home and buried at Downing with military honors under the auspices of the Legion Post of Menomonie. Mr. and Mrs. Laberee have been members since 1907 of the Beaver colony at Necedah, and they and their children are members of the M. E. Church at Boyceville.

John Downs, now passed away, but whose faithful and efficient work for many years for Knapp, Stout & Co., had made his name well remembered in lumber circles, was born in Nova Scotia, May 30, 1825. He acquired a public school education and then became connected with the lumber industry in Canada, in which he advanced from one position to another, being employed at different times as scaler, estimator and foreman of camps. It was in 1873 that he came to Dunn County, Wisconsin, locating at Cedar Falls, which place was his home for two years. In 1875 he came to Menomonie and entered the employ of Knapp, Stout & Co., which concern on June 1, 1878, took the corporate title of The Knapp, Stout & Co. Company. In the position of foreman he proved himself a valuable man having charge of camps, also running the river on drives, and having charge of dams on the Red Cedar, Hay River and Rice Lake, and he was thus employed by the same company for 36 years, a long and honorable period of service which terminated on his retirement in 1911. Soon after coming to Menomonie he had purchased a house at 1502 Seventh Street, which was the first one built in the Codington addition to the city, and here he made his home until his death, which occurred April 21, 1914. Mr. Downs was married at Campbetton, Province of Quebec, Canada, Oct. 12, 1846, to Jane Calder, who was born in Glasgow, Scotland, Nov. 28, 1826, and 50 years later, on Oct. 12, 1896, they celebrated their golden wedding, a happy and joyous event. It was more than six years after that, that the bond uniting them was broken by the death of Mrs. Downs on Jan. 3, 1903. This was a severe blow to her husband and his outlook on life was saddened and would have been altogether deprived of interest but for his children, who did all they could to make up for the loss of the wife and mother. Of these children there was a large family, numbering 12, though three had passed away before the mother. The full list includes the names of Mary Jane, Elizabeth, Thomas, George, John, William, Sarah A., Anna, Max, Robert, Donald, and Anna Belle. Mary Jane, born Aug. 17, 1847, is now Mrs. John Beihofer of Glencoe, Minn., and the mother of eight children, Eva, Harvey, Sadie, John, Mabel, William, Violet and Mary. Elizabeth, born June 11, 1849, became the wife of Charles Ripenbark and died in February, 1877, leaving three children, Harvey, Mary and George. Thomas, born July 15, 1851, who never came to the United States, remaining in Canada, married and has two children. George, born June 11, 1853, died in 1880. John, born July 14, 1855, now living in New Auburn, Wis., married Blanche Ripenbark and is the father of five children, Bert, William, Mary, Grace and Alfred. William, born June 5, 1857, now of Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, married Florence Wing and has four children, Della, Ethel, Alice and Calestia. Sarah A., born June 19, 1859, first married Dougal McComb by whom she had three children, Effa, Mildred and Floyd. She married for her second husband Ernest Drowley of Menomonie and they reside at 420 12th Mrs. Drowley is active socially, being a member of the Royal Neighbors Avenue. and the Woman's Relief Corps. Anna, born June 18, 1861, died Dec. 6, 1872. Max, born July 18, 1863 and now of Prairie Farm, Barron County, Wis., married Stella Sprague and has six children, Grace, Edna, Wallace, Pearl, Bernice and Edith. Robert, born Feb. 14, 1867, is single. Donald, born March 17, 1869, who is residing in Eau Claire, married Lena Evenson and has two children, Lawrence Änna Belle, born Oct. 22, 1872, after being graduated from the Meand Ruth. nomonie High School, took the necessary training for the profession of nurse, which she has since followed. She is now city nurse of Menomonie, having held that position for the last five years and proved herself thoroughly capable and reliable. She is a member of the Woman's Club of Menomonie, which is affiliated with the National Federated Club, and belongs also to the Beaver Queens and the Rebekahs. Religiously she is affiliated with the Congregational Church.

Gabriel O. Tilleson, a well known farmer and respected citizen of the town of Menomonie, was born in the town of Elk Mound, Dunn County, Wis., June 23, 1878, son of Ole and Louise (Ludvigsen) Tilleson. He acquired a district school education in his native town and lived and worked for the first 20 years of his life on the home farm with his parents, learning all the practical business of agriculture. After that he worked for others at ordinary farm labor, usually in the vicinity of his home, and thus spent some 12 years. In 1906 he rented a farm in the town of Grant, which he operated until 1910. Then he started in for himself, buying an 80-acre farm in Section 17 of the town of Tiffany, which he operated until 1920. Selling it in that year, he purchased his present farm of 126 acres in Section 15, town of Menomonie, known as the old Bird Farm, and here he is successfully carrying on general farming and dairying, having a herd of grade Guernseys with a pure bred sire. He is a director of the school board of his district. Mr. Tilleson was married March 10, 1900, in Elk Mound, to Gunde Stang, daughter of Hans and Helen (Westby) Stang, and four children have been born to them, namely: Irene, now Mrs. Adolph Thompson of Eau Claire, who has two children, Ione and Eugene: Orrin, who is one the home farm; Edna, a graduate of the Dunn County Normal School, now teaching in Caryville, and Leona, who is a pupil in the grade school. Mr. Tilleson and his family are members of Our Saviour's Lutheran Church at Menomonie. They are good representative people of the agricultural class whose work is contributing to the wealth and prosperity of the county.

John Halvorson, a retired farmer residing in the town of Menomonie, who has spent many years of his life in Dunn County as lumberman and farmer, was born in Norway, Nov. 21, 1852, son of Halvor Johanason and his wife, Gunhild (Johnson) The parents died in Norway, their native land. John Halvorson was Iohanason. there educated in the common schools and did farm labor until he came to the United States in 1872. Landing at New York, he came directly to Menomonie, Dunn County, where he obtained employment in the brick yards. Afterwards he worked for a while as a mason's tender and in 1873 he went to work on the Knapp, Stout & Co.'s farm, remaining there one year. He then went to Eau Claire, which place was his home or headquarters for five years, spending his winters in the woods at lumbering and the rest of the year in the sawmills. Then returning to Menomonie, he worked three years, or until 1881 for the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company. By this time, having been industrious and careful, he had saved a little money and was ready to get married and begin home life. To obtain his bride he returned to Norway, where on Dec. 18, 1881, he was united in marriage with Bergit Olson Hovda who was born in that country Jan. 31, 1854. In 1882 Mr. Halvorson returned to America with his wife and they went to live on a farm of 80 acres in Section 13, town of Menomonie, which he had previously purchased. There he put up a small frame house and a barn constructed of poles, with a straw roof, intended for temporary use only, as he later built a log barn. During the first three winters he spent on the place he worked in the woods, leaving his wife at home to care for what little stock they had. Those were years of hard work and much privation, and so were others that followed, but gradual progress toward better times was made and Mr. Halvorson's farm was increasing in value. Occasionally he purchased additional land and from time to time the erection of a new building gave evidence of his advancing prosperity. To him and his wife Bergit three sons have been born, one of whom died in infancy. The other two, Ole and Herman, in time were of material assistance to them. Thus the years rolled by until 1916, by which time Mr. Halvorson had a farm of 320 acres with a good set of buildings. He was 64 years old or in his 64th year, while his wife was 60 and they felt it was time for them to retire from active work and turn the farm over to their sons. He accordingly divided it, selling the north half to Herman and the south half to Ole. In 1918 he remodeled and partly rebuilt a dwelling-house which stood just south of the old home, turning it into a comfortable residence in which he and his wife now live, with plenty to live on and abundant leisure to compensate for their many years of hard toil and early strivings. They and their sons are members of the Evangelical Lutheran Church at Little Elk Creek.

Ole Halvorson, an active and successful farmer of the town of Menomonie, chairman of his town board and a member of the county board, was born on his parents' farm in this town, a part of which he now owns, on March 14, 1885. The story of his parents, John and Bergit Halvorson, has already been told, and it is only necessary to bear in mind that to all intents and purposes they were pioneers, and that the youth of the subject of this sketch was passed amid pioneer scenes and pioneer conditions of life. One of those conditions was hard work to the limit of one's capacity, which Ole and his brother Herman came to realize when they were old enough. As boys they attended the district school and then as they grew older their father found them work enough on the farm to keep them out of mis-Though they did not then realize it, they were working for themselves, as chief. they did for years afterwards when helping their father to develop the home place; for the time came, in the spring of 1916, when their parents retired, and the farm being divided into north and south halves. Ole bought the south portion, of 160 acres, his brother taking the other half. He has since continued work on his own account as a general farmer and dairyman, keeping grade Holstein cattle. He has proved himself to be progressive, having made a number of improvements on his These include the erection of a hog house, grain shed, machine shed, and a place. tile silo of 12 x 36 feet; also the installation of a water system for the whole place and a modern equipment for the barn. Mr. Halvorson's character as a man of intelligence and capacity was recognized some years ago and his fellow citizens elected him to the office of supervisor, in which he served in 1918 and 1919. His record being satisfactory, he was elected chairman of the town board in 1920, which made him a member of the county board, and as such he is still serving. In 1920 he was a member of the highway and public property committee, in 1922 on the tresaurer's and clerk's accounts committee, and in 1923 on the auditing and finance committee. For several years also he was treasurer of School District No. 8. Ole Halvorson was married, Dec. 31, 1917, in the town of Red Cedar, to Mabel L. Klingenberg, who was born in Menomonie, Wis., March 13, 1899, daughter of Lawrence and Mary (Peterson) Klingenberg, who are now residents of Meridean, this county. Halvorsons are members of the Evangelical Lutheran Church of Little Elk Creek, The Mr. Halvorson being secretary for the congregation and Mrs. Halvorson an active member of the Ladies' Aid Society. They are the parents of three children, who were born as follows: Mildred B., Dec. 20, 1918; John L., Dec. 19, 1920, and Minda O., Sept. 29, 1923.

Samuel Schmid, proprietor of a farm of 240 acres in the town of Stanton, which he has built up during more than 30 years of steady industry, was born in Switzerland, Aug. 16, 1860, son of Christian and Susannah (Trochrel) Schmid. In his native land, after he left schook he became a common laborer, and so continued until the spring of 1884, when he came to the United States. He first located in Ohio, but remained there but a short time, soon coming farther west to Monticello, Green County, Wis. There he found employment in a cheese factory and learned the trade of cheese making. A year later he returned to Switzerland and was married there on March 17, 1886, to Sophia Steiner, who was born Jan. 27, 1870, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Steiner. As soon as he had secured his bride Mr. Schmid brought her to America with him, returning to Monticello, Wis., where he spent eight years in all, following his trade there for seven years. In March, 1893, he came with his family to Dunn County and bought 160 acres of land on Section 15. town of Stanton. There was a small clearing with a small house on it that was hardly more than a shanty. Three weeks after he and his family moved in the house burned down and Mr. Schmid then built another on a different part of his farm and went on clearing his land. The second house burned just 14 years after it had been erected and the family were again left homeless, but in the same season Mr. Schmid erected the present house, a good two-story frame dwelling. From time to time he has put up other buildings, including a machine shed, granary and a good frame barn. He has also bought other land and now has 240 acres with 150 under the plow, the balance being in timber and pasture. His operating equipment is good and he follows general farming and dairying successfully, having a herd of grade Holstein cattle. The Schmid farm lies about half way between Boyceville and Knapp, it being four miles to either place. On Feb. 11, 1925, Mr. Schmid suffered a bereavement in the death of his wife. They had been the parents of 11 children, all now living, who were born as follows: Fred S., Feb. 6, 1888; Edward, April 18, 1889; Lena E., July 1, 1891; John P., Dec. 26, 1892; Emma J., May 9, 1894; Herman T., Aug. 19, 1896; Gertrude M., April 19, 1898; Gottleib R., June 10, 1901; Meta M., Feb. 7, 1904; Reynold R., Aug. 11, 1908, and Hubert V., Sept. 20, 1912. Fred S., who is unmarried, lives on the home farm. For 20 seasons he has engaged in threshing, and for 13 worked for one man. He owns his own outfit, which he bought in 1917. Edward, who lives in Knapp, is proprietor of the Knapp garage and salesman of Ford cars in his section. Lena E. is the wife of Joseph Miller of Bruce, Wis. John P. is residing in Bemidji, Minn. Emma J. is the wife of Victor Long of Susanville, Calif. Herman T., unmarried, and on the home farm, is part owner with his brother Fred in another threshing-machine. Gertrude is the wife of Ray McGee of Knapp. Gottleib R. is associated with his brother Edward in the garage and auto business in Knapp. Metta M., Reinhold R. and Hubert V. are on the home farm with their parents. Herman, John and Edward have military records for World War service. Herman entered the service in 1918, and left for Camp Grant, Ill., on July 28. From there he went to Camp Mills, L. I.; embarked for overseas Sept. 8, 1918; landed in Liverpool, Sept. 20, and was conveyed to France, reaching Cherbourg and going thence to Bordeaux. He was first in the 86th Infantry Division, being later transferred to a machine gun battery of the 28th Division. He saw active service the month preceeding the armistice and remained in France until the spring of 1919, when he embarked at St. Nazaire for the United States and was landed at New York, April 29, 1919. He was discharged soon after at Camp Grant. John, who went into the army with Herman, was in the 311th Company, 86th Division of Engineers, and was not transferred. He went overseas and returned home in July, 1919. Edward was inducted into the service Sept. 19, 1917, and trained at Camp Grant, being attached to the 341st Infantry; Nov. 16, 1917, was transferred to Camp Pike, Ark., and joined the 345th Infantry as second class musician; at Camp Pike was mustered into the 312nd Depot Brigade, and later was first alto player in the headquarters band. He was returned to Camp Grant Feb. 16, 1919, being discharged on the following day. Four of the sons of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Schmid-Fred, Herman, Reynold and Hubert—have purchased 130 acres of the home farm, including the residence and other buildings, and are now carrying on dairying and general farming, their sister, Meta M., keeping house for them. Peter Steiner, father of Mrs. Sophia Schmid, died in Switzerland in December. 1885, and his widow with seven children came to this country and settled in Green County, Wisconsin, and is now living at Monticello, that county, with a daughter, Mrs. Thos. Duerst.

Samuel Nelson, engaged in general farming and dairying on the old Nelson homestead on Section 12, town of Sand Creek, was born on this farm Feb. 20, 1877, son of Samon and Johanna (Thompson) Nelson. The parents were natives of Telemarken, Norway, where the father learned the carpenter's trade, which he followed there as a journeyman. While the American Civil War was in progress he came with his family to this country, locating for a while at Portage, Wisconsin, whence he subsequently moved to Eau Claire, where he followed his trade, doing considerable work in the building of sawmills. He then became an early settler in the town of Sand Creek, Dunn County, homesteading 160 acres of wild land in Section 12, the farm on which the subject of this sketch is now living. At that time it was covered with timber and brush, and to reach it he and his family made the journey from Eau Claire with an ox team. On arriving here they made their home for a short time with the family of Tom Thompson until Mr. Nelson had built a log house into which they moved. He also built a log barn with a straw roof and then began the task of developing his farm, using oxen in the work of clearing and breaking the soil. His mastery of the carpenter's trade came in useful, as he was not only able to construct neat and substantial buildings for himself but also for many of the new settlers who were coming in, the money thus earned supporting the household until his farm became productive. He also built the church at Sand Creek. With the help of his sons he carried on general farming until he died in the year 1911. His wife had passed away several years before, in 1907. They were the parents of seven children: Theodore, Henry, Louis, Samuel, Emma, Anna and Martin. Theodore is manager of the Farmers' Store at Sand Creek; Henry resides in Duluth; Louis in North Dakota; Emma married Robert Smollett of Duluth; Alma married Ol: Stenrud of Duluth, and Martin is dead. Samuel Nelson was reared on the home farm and attended school in Sand Creek. After having worked many years on the farm and helped to develop it, he bought it from his father and has made further improvements since. He remodeled and enlarged the house and erected a number of buildings, including a barn of 36 x 74 feet with a full basement and a granary. He carries on general farming and dairying, keeping mixed Holstein and Durham cattle and is a good practical man in his branch of industry. Mr. Nelson was married in Sand Creek in 1903 to Gena Thompson, daughter of Tollef and Tora Thompson, who were early settlers in Dunn County and residents of the town of Wilson. Mr. Thompson died in 1923 but Mrs. Thompson is still living on the home Mr. and Mrs. Nelson have two children, Selma and Martin, the former farm. attending high school and the latter common school.

Victor B. Lewis, of Boyceville, farmer, business man and public official, has for many years been one of the active factors in the development of Dunn County, and is still a "live wire" in the community in which he lives. He was born in Mc-Kean County, Pennsylvania, May 30, 1868, son of Joseph and Marian (Gary) The parents, natives of New York State, were married in Pennsylvania, Lewis. and came to Dunn County, Wisconsin, in 1871, Joseph Lewis having only five dollars in cash when he reached Menomonie. He took a homestead of 160 acres in what is now the town of Hay River, but which was then in the town of Sherman, and there he erected a shanty in which he and his wife made their early home. It was necessary, of course, for him to work in the woods during the fall and winter months, in order to live, and they made a few extra cents or dollars by picking blueberries, which they sold. It was by living on plain food and taking advantage of every opportunity to earn a dollar, or even a quarter, that the pioneer settlers were able to struggle through the early years of privation after first settling on their land. Those who survived the hardships, in time reaped a full reward, and among them were Mr. and Mrs. Lewis, who became prominent in the town, Mr. Lewis helping other settlers as they came into the community, also taking an active part in building roads and schools. In 1893 he rented the farm to his son Victor and came to Boyceville, where he put up a building and established a meat market and grocery store, which he conducted for 12 years. He went into the retail business for a time, but soon retired and spent the balance of his life in Boyceville, where he passed away in September, 1911. The last few years of his life were spent without the companionship of his faithful and loving wife, who had preceeded him to the land beyond the grave in February, 1906. They had been the parents of four children: Belle, now Mrs. Wales Tubbs of Sidney, Mont.; Victor B., of Boyceville; Frank, of Warwick, Mont.; and George, who died at the age of eight years. Victor B. Lewis acquired his education in district schools in the town of Hay River. Instead of seeking his fortune in other localities after he became of age, he remained at home, and at the age of 25 took over the home farm, which he continued until 1901. He then bought 140 acres of land in Sections 26 and 35, town of Tiffany, the tract being within the village limits of Boyceville. Some of this land he sold for village lots, but purchased more, so that today, in spite of his sales, he has 190 acres in one piece, which tract is known as "the old Mose Brown farm," after a former owner. Here he is carrying on general farming and dairying, having a herd of 33 high grade and pure bred Guernsey cattle. He also helped to organize the Boyceville Cooperative Creamery, serving as its treasurer for one year and as a director two years, and he is still a stockholder. He was one of the organizers of the Boyceville Telephone Co., of which he is a stockholder and in addition he owns stock in the Bank of Boyceville. Mr. Lewis, as already intimated, has been more or less active in public life. He served as supervisor in the town of Tiffany, was school treasurer for 20 years, and was a member of the building committee during the construction of two schoolhouses in Boyceville. He was also for 15 years chairman of the town board of Tiffany, during that time, therefore being a member of the county board, and of the latter he was vice chairman in 1923, and a member of the equalizing committee in 1922. He is fraternally affiliated with the Mystic Workers and the Odd Fellows, having passed all the chairs in the latter order. On Nov. 19, 1894, Mr. Lewis was united in marriage in Haystown, Dunn County, with Mary Wall, who was born in Hancock, Minn., March 7, 1880, daughter of John and Mary (McQuinn) Wall. Her parents were brought west when young, and Mr. Wall, who became a stone mason, followed that trade in Chippewa Falls, until his death on May 3, 1906. His wife, who survived him, is now living in Glenwood City, Wis. The children in the Wall family were: James, now in Kansas; Margaret, deceased; Mary, wife of Victor B. Lewis; Anna, who is Mrs. Ray Weston of Ladysmith, Wis.; Isabelle, wife of Earl Harkins of Glenwood City; Katherine, a teacher in Reeder, N. D.; Charlotte, who married Fry Herbert and is now in China; Edward, deceased; and Herbert, of Minneapolis. Mr. and Mrs. Victor B. Lewis Edward, deceased; and Herbert, of Millineapons. Mil. and Mils. Victor D. Lewis have ten children, whose dates of birth were as follows: Gertrude, Nov. 15, 1895; Ida, Dec. 17, 1897; James, Oct. 27, 1899; Hazel, Dec. 12, 1901; Katheryn, Nov. 4, 1903; George, April 16, 1906; Edna, Sept. 17, 1909; Gladys. Oct. 29, 1911; Muriel, April 27, 1915, and Gwenith, Feb. 3, 1917. The five last mentioned are all residing at home with their parents. Gertrude, is now Mrs. David Billington of Fairview, Mont., and has three children, Doris, Lola and Virginia. Ida, is the wife of William Smith of St. Paul, and has one child, Calvin. James, who works for his father, married Essie Emerson, and has three children, June, Sanford and Victor. The Lewis family attend the Methodist Episcopal Church.

Frederick W. Wyss, a progressive farmer and dairyman in the town of Stanton, was born in Canton Bern, Switzerland, Feb. 19, 1872, son of Nicholas and Mary (Genne) Wyss. The parents, neither of whom ever came to this country, are now deceased. They had five sons and five daughters, of which family those now living are: Frederick W., subject of this sketch; John, who is in Ohio; Jacob, of Green County, Wis.; Gottfried, also in Green County; and Bertha, who is now Mrs. Zumbron of Massillon, Ohio. Frederick W. Wyss in his native land learned the trade of cheesemaker, and after coming to America in 1884 found employment at it in Canton, Ohio, where he remained for three years. In 1895 he came to Wisconsin, locating at Mt. Horeb, Dane County, where he obtained a position in a cheese factory. His stay there was short, however, for in the spring of 1896 he came to Wheeler, Dunn County, and was cheese maker there until 1900. After that for a year he held a similar position with the Annis Cheese Co. at Boyceville. His next move was to Tramway in the town of Sherman, where he entered the employ of the Tramway Cheese Co. and was with them for years. At the end of that time he came to the town of Stanton and bought a 60-acre farm on Section 24. The land was pretty well cleared and on it were some old log buildings. Mr. Wyss increased the size of his farm by purchasing 136 acres adjoining it on the east. That was wild land but he has since cleared a considerable part of it. In 1905 he erected a good frame barn on the 60 acres in Stanton, this barn having a full basement built of stone for the accommodation of stock. In 1914 he erected a good stave silo, and in 1922 a ten-room, two-story, modern frame house with hot air furnace. He has installed an individual gas plant which furnishes light for house and barn; also The farm is well stocked with good grade and pure bred Holstein water works. cattle, with a pure bred sire at the head of the herd. Mr Wyss does general farming, giving special attention to dairying. For several years he served on the school board of District No. 2. He was married May 8, 1901, to Frieda Schutz, who was born in Switzerland, Sept. 23, 1882, daughter of Fred and Susan (Goblen) Schutz of the town of Stanton. She was a babe of six months when she came to America and to Dunn County with her parents, who settled in the town of Stanton. are now deceased, the father having died in October, 1921, and the mother in Janu-They ary, 1892. Mr. and Mrs. Wyss have become the parents of 11 children, all living and all residing at home. They were born as follows: Edward F., May 19, 1902; Alfred T., Dec. 10, 1903; Harry F., Jan. 14, 1905; John W., Nov. 20, 1907; Fred N., Nov. 10, 1909; Reinhardt A., June 1, 1912; Huldah S., July 1, 1914; Carl W., April 6, 1916; Adelia R., March 14, 1918; Loren W., March 28, 1920, and Margaret F., March 21, 1922. The family are members of the Annis Creek Congregation of the Menomonie German Lutheran Church. Politically Mr. Wyss is a Republican.

Hans H. Hovland, a prominent citizen of the town of Hay River, where he is engaged in farming, was born in Sogn, Norway, June 9, 1860, son of Hans D. Hovland and his wife Martha, whose maiden name was Hanson. Both parents died in their native land. Hans H. as a youth attended common school and subsequently took a two-year normal course. After residing with his parents until 1880, he went in that year to Bergen, where for five years he was employed as clerk for a ship chandler. He then returned home and the next two years of his life were spent in military training in accordance with the requirements of the Norwegian government. In the fall of 1887 he came to the United States, locating after a while in Flandreau, S. D., where he had an uncle living named Peter Hanson. He arrived there on Feb. 2, 1888, and a few days later entered the employ of John J. Akers, the owner of a large farm, for whom he worked until the fall of 1892. He then made a trip to Norway, where on Jan. 24, 1893, he was united in marriage with Eliza O. Jacobson, who was born in Bergen, March 7, 1865. She, like himself, had been an employee in the ship chandler's store in Bergen, and it was there that he had first met her and become engaged to her before he came to America. A little more than two months after their marriage he brought her to this country and they settled on a farm near Frankfort, in Morgan County, Tenn., on which they made a small payment, intending to purchase it. But at the end of three years they gave it up, moving in 1896 to the vicinity of Flandreau, S. D., where for one year Mr. Hovland taught Norwegian school, and for two years worked out. In 1899 he rented a farm of 160 acres, which he operated until 1904, and for the next ten years, to 1914, he conducted a large farm of 320 acres. In the spring of 1914, Mr. Hovland found himself in good enough financial condition to purchase a farm, and coming to Dunn County, Wisconsin, he bought one of 80 acres on Section 10, town of Hay River. There were 35 acres improved, but the only building was a frame house, which he has since improved, converting it into his present comfortable residence. He has also erected a good barn, granary, machine shed and other buildings, all of frame construction. He does general farming and dairying, keeping grade Shorthorn cattle, and has a good operating equipment. The farm is situated seven miles northwest of the village of Wheeler, but he has a nearer source of supplies in the "Big Beaver Store," kept by Andy Baxter and which is just north of his place. Mr. Hovland is a stockholder in the Big Beaver Cream and Butter Through industry and frugality he has accumulated a fair competence Association. and could retire if he cared to, but still enjoys work and prefers to be active a while longer. In politics he is nominally a Democrat but exercises freedom in voting for the man of his choice. His wife Eliza died in South Dakota on Sept. 24, 1908, on the birth of her son Edward, and after they had lived together for 15 years or more in wedded happiness and mutual cooperation in the building up of their Their children were as follows: Olaf C., who died March 25, 1905; Marhome. garet, born Oct. 17, 1893; Hans H., born Oct. 27, 1895, was drafted for the World War on July 23, 1918, and sent to Camp Grant for training, where he was taken sick. Being discharged and sent home on July 23, 1919, he died in a hospital at Chippewa on Feb. 11, 1920. Christina, the fourth child, was born April 2, 1896. Alvina, born Nov. 28, 1899, is a graduate of the Dunn County Normal School in the class of 1919, and taught three years in rural schools and two in grade schools in Dunn County. She is now Mrs. Paul Goodell of Wheeler. Lillie, the next child, was born Nov. 22, 1900. She and her sister Christina are housekeepers for their father. Christian, was born Feb. 4, 1903; Henry, Sept. 20, 1904; Clara, March 23, 1906, and Edward, as already mentioned, on Sept. 24, 1908. Clara died May 4, 1921. With the exception of Edward, who is in Moody County, South Dakota, and the three deceased, Mr. Hovland has all his children with him. The daughter Margaret, for most of the time since the family came to Dunn County, has been clerk for A. Baxter in the Big Beaver Store.

Ralph W. Loomis, who during an active career of many years was connected with several lines of industry, including farming, was born in the town of Hubbard, Dodge County, Wis., on Oct. 15, 1855, son of Richard E. and Irene (Whitney) Loomis. Both parents were born in Rutland, Vt., the father, who was of English ancestry, in 1815, and the mother in 1818. The latter's ancestors were Scotch, and it is said that one of them was a member of the Plymouth Colony, having come to this country in the Mayflower in 1620. Richard E. Loomis and Irene Whitney were married in Vermont, and settled in Dodge County, Wisconsin, before the breaking out of the Civil War and at a time when there was only a log cabin and a tavern on the site of the present city of Milwaukee. Mr. Loomis was the first white man to ford the Rock River at Hustisford-the first at least of whom there is any record. He and his family were living in Dodge County when the war They were probably poor, as he enlisted at once, entering a Wisconsin broke out. infantry regiment, with which he went to Island No. 10 in the Mississippi River. While there he became nearly blind and was released from service and sent to Milwaukee for treatment. On his evesight being restored, he reenlisted, and being assigned to the Seventh Wisconsin Battery, served till the close of the war. He had expected that during his absence from home his wife and children would be looked after by the neighbors, as he had the latters' assurance to that effect, but they failed to keep their promise and his family were at times in sore straits, Mrs. Loomis after the end of the first year being thrown entirely upon her own resources, the children not being able to help on account of their being too young. She was obliged to work very hard, spinning yarn, sometimes all night, with an old fashioned spinning-wheel, or doing any honest work that would bring in a dollar, or even a few cents. For days and even weeks she and her children lived on shorts and bran without any other food, but though often hungry they managed to survive. Those were much harder times than people in recent years have had to go through; and in many cases the head of the family never came back from the war, or came back a cripple or otherwise impaired in health. Richard E. Loomis came back, however, and things improved a little after his return. It was not long after that, when Ralph W. was 11 years old, that the family moved to Missouri, driving there in two wagons and taking six weeks in which to make the trip. They remained there but one year united, as at the end of that time Mr. Loomis, who was engaged in selling a patent-right washer, left his family there and returned to Wisconsin. At the end of six years his family returned to Wisconsin also, driving with one team and taking two months to make the trip. This was about 1873, and from that time until 1881 they lived at Appleton, Wisconsin. They then came to Dunn County taking land in the town of Sherman, where both parents subsequently died. Their eldest child, a son, Charles, who was old enough at the time of the war to enter the army, enlisted and spent three years in the service, at the end of which time he died and was buried in Memphis, Tenn. The other children were: George, deceased; Mary, wife of John Hawthorne of Cheyenne, Okla.; Menette, wife of Frank Tanner, also of Cheyenne, Okla.; Ralph W., the direct subject of this sketch; Myron, of Spring Valley, Pierce County; and Chester, who is deceased. Ralph W. Loomis had but limited school opportunities. For seven years he resided at Chillicothe. Mo., and then at the age of 21 left home, but he continued to help his parents for a year longer. On returing to Wisconsin he located at Appleton, but in 1876 came to Dunn County. In the summers he was engaged in clearing land and farming, but for 21 winters he followed logging, being in partnership up to 1890 with John Hawthorne, and locally for several seasons with Abe C. McDougal, who was prominent in this industry during the eighties. His logging operations were extensive, along Hay River in Dunn County, and in other sections in this part of the state when the pine was in its prime. One tract of land that he cleared was 80 acres in the town of Hay River, that he had bought in 1883, and on which he erected a good set of frame buildings. In the spring of 1888 he went to Glenwood City, St. Croix County, and entered the employ of the Glenwood Mill Co., as a saw filer. In 1890 he bought of the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company, 190 acres of timber land in Section 16, town of Sherman, and 160 acres adjoining the Harrington estate, on which latter he made his home, building a log house for a first dwelling, and logging the timber off the Knapp-Stout tract of 190 acres and selling it back to them to pay for his land. He bought 80 acres of his farm under the plow and in 1910 built a good eight-room brick house. While living on this place he was engaged from 1894 to 1896 in the wholesale fruit business. In 1915 he sold out and, going to Downsville, opened a general merchandise store, which he conducted for four and a half years. In 1918 he bought the Ed Peterson place, an improved farm of 80 acres on Section 29, town of Sherman. This was a well improved place, with a good frame house, a tile silo and other buildings on it, located on State Highway No. 79, half way between Menomonie and Boyceville. Moving to this place after selling his Downsville store, Mr. Loomis cultivated it for the rest of his life, clearing 15 additional acres, and keeping grade Holstein cattle with a pure bred sire. had a good equipment and followed general farming and dairying successfully until his death, which took place June 24, 1925. His health had not been good for a year, but he seemed to be regaining it when an attack of pneumonia unexpectedly ended his life. Mr. Loomis was first married on July 3, 1884, to Mary Brewster, who was born in Olmsted County, Minnesota, in 1856, and who was for 11 years a school teacher in Dunn County, Wisconsin. They were married in the Hotel Nicolet, Minneapolis, Minn., and lived in happy wedlock for over 11 years when Mrs. Mary Loomis died, in September, 1895. She had borne him three children: Charles, now of St. Paul, Minn.; Harold B., a salesman residing in Menomonie, and Brewster, who is deceased. Charles, who enlisted for World War service, trained at various camps, but owing to an attack of the "flu," from which he nearly died, he did not go over seas with his regiment, though he was promoted to the rank of sergeant in the Tank Corps, and was in New Jersey ready to leave when the armistice was signed. Harold B. was married July 1, 1919, to Faith Clark of Menomonie and they have one child, Harold B., Jr. On April 13, 1898, Mr. Loomis married, secondly, Evelyn Burret, who was born Nov. 13, 1876, in Trempealeau, Wis., in Trempealeau County on the Mississippi River, daughter of William H. and Emeline (Decker) Burrett. The children of this second marriage were: Gladys L., born Sept. 18, 1900; and Florence I., born Aug. 29, 1903. The former, Gladys, was married in October, 1921, to Raymond Hosford, who was born in Menomonie, where he was reared. After this country entered into the World War, he enlisted on April 18, 1917-only 12 days after the United States declared war on Germanybecoming a member in the local company, Co. H, 32nd Regt., W. N. G. He was sent to Superior for training, and from there to Camp McArthur at Waco, Texas, as a member of the 28th Inf., 32nd Division. He was transferred to Co. I, 29th Inf., First Division, and went overseas in February, 1918, after his arrival being immediately sent into the trenches. At Cantigny on June 19 he received 14 schrapnell wounds and was subsequently discharged as 50 per cent disabled. In 1923 the government sent him to California University, where he studied two years. He is now a student at Corvallis College, Oregon, where he will graduate with the class of 1926. Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Hosford have two children, Ray, Jr., and Robert. Florence I. Loomis, born Aug. 29, 1903, is a graduate of the Boyceville High School with the class of 1920, and of the Dunn County, Normal School, class of 1922. She is now a teacher in the Dunn County rural schools. Mr. Loomis is a Blue Lodge Mason and a member of Menomonie Temple No. 64. The family worship with the First Congregationsl Church of Menomonie.

George W. Appleby, a general farmer and dairvman of Section 14, town of Tiffany, was born on a farm in Juneau County, June 1, 1869, son of Zelotus and Julia (Goodrich) Appleby. As a boy he attended common school in Juneau County, and lived with his parents until arriving at the age of 21 years. Then, in 1890, he went to Tower on the Mesabi Iron Range in north Minnesota, where for nearly six years he was employed as a cook for the Howe Lumber Co. On his return to Dunn County he bought 122 acres of improved land in the town of New Haven, which he farmed for a while, subsequently renting it out. Then in 1897 he bought 80 acres on Section 14, town of Tiffany, which was unimproved land and without buildings. The development of this place gave him his chance for self advancement, and he applied himself to the work, building a good frame house for a dwelling, for he had at that time been married several years. In 1909 he built a good frame barn and in addition has put up other substantial buildings, having now a good set. He has also 45 acres of his land under cultivation and is following general farming and dairying with good results, the farm being well stocked with grade cattle of mixed breeds. The marriage of Mr. Appleby, to which casual reference has been made took place July 3, 1895, uniting him with Jessie G. Bodette, who was born on a farm in the town of Tiffany on April 22, 1875, daughter of Peter and Josephine (Orcott) Bodette. He and his wife have been the parents of two children: Beatrice T., born Jan. 19, 1903, and Cecil St. Claire, born Oct. 24, 1897, the latter of whom died April 22, 1900. Beatrice T., who was graduated from the Boyceville High School with the class of 1921, was subsequently a student for three years at Hamline College at St. Paul, Minn., and was graduated in 1925 from the University of Minnesota. Mr. Appleby and his wife and daughter are members of the Boyceville M. E. Church and enjoy a high social standing in this part of Dunn County. Mr. Appleby is politically a Democrat, but uses his own judgment when casting his ballot, disregarding party ties if he deems it advisable to do so.

Zelotus Appleby, a former resident of the town of Tiffany, who started what is now a good farm in Section 23, but who passed away many years ago, leaving children to finish or carry forward his work, was born in Allegany County New York, Oct. 17, 1823. In 1840 he came west with his parents, who settled at Bloomingdale. Ill., about 40 miles west of Chicago, where the father of Zelotus for many years kept a tavern. Zelotus Appleby was first married to Fidelia Goodrich, of Delaware County, New York, by whom he had one child, Helen, now Mrs. James Daniels of To his second wife, Julia Goodrich, who was a sister of his first, St. Paul. Minn. he was married in Illinois in 1849, and soon afterwards they moved to Marquette They next settled in County, Wisconsin, where they remained for two years. Juneau County, Wisconsin, and until 1879 were engaged in farming there. In that year they came to Dunn County, Mr. Appleby buying 80 acres of wild land in Section 23, town of Tiffany, from The Knapp, Stout & Co. Company. In addition to being unbroken, the tract was destitute of buildings, so the task before him-he being then about 56 years old—was that of a pioneer, in which he could hardly have expected to succeed without the assistance of his sons, two or three of whom were old enough to be of use. In fact his life lasted but a few years longer, as he died on the farm Oct. 22, 1884. His wife Julia survived him over 12 years, passing away on May 20, 1897. With the help of his children he had managed to develop some • 30 acres of the land, and had erected a log house and barn, which were his first buildings. Had he been a younger man and his life been longer spared he would doubtless have accomplished more, but the work he was unable to complete has since carried forward by others. The children of Zelotus and Julia Appleby were ten in number, namely, Emma R., Adella, Charles E., Levi H., Fred Z., Cora L., Clara L., Minnie, George W. and Eddie, the last mentioned of whom died in infancy. The record of the others is briefly as follows: Emma R., born in Marquette County, Wis., Jan. 10, 1851, is now Mrs. F. S. Clark of Gilroy, Calif. Adella, born in Juneau County, in 1853, married F. H. Whelock and died in 1883. Charles E., born Nov. 15, 1856, is residing in the village of Boyceville, as also is Levi H., who was born July 6, 1859. Fred Z., born in Juneau County, Aug. 30, 1861, is now farming the old homestead and additional land in Sections 23 and 14, town of Tiffany. Cora L., born Jan. 4, 1864, is now Mrs. William Clough of Boyceville. Clara L., born May 21, 1868, is now Mrs. Joseph Bodette of Boyceville. George W., born June 1, 1870, is an active farmer in Section 14, town of Tiffany. Thus it is seen that most members of this family have remained in the county and have done good work in one way or another, adding to its high standard of citizenship.

Fred Z. Appleby, a representative citizen of the town of Tiffany, successfully engaged in agriculture on a farm of 120 acres in Sections 23 and 14, was born on a farm near Necedah, Juneau County, Wis., Aug. 30, 1861, son of Zelotus and Julia (Goodrich) Appleby. He acquired a common school education, and as he was 18 years old when his parents moved to the town of Tiffany,he was able to help his father improve the family farm in Section 23. In 1883 he went to South Dakota, and near Ipswich, that state, homesteaded 160 acres of unbroken land, which he subsequently proved up, returning to Dunn County, Wisconsin, in 1889. In the previous year, 1888, he had bought from The Knapp, Stout & Co. Company 80 acres of unimproved land in Section 26, town of Tiffany, which property he held until 1898, when he sold it, in the same year buying the interests of his father's other heirs to the old farm in Section 23. This he has since been engaged in operating, and in addition he farms an adjoining tract which he bought in 1893 after The latter event occurred on Nov. 30, 1892, uniting him with Adie his marriage. C. Bodette, who was born on a farm in Vernon County, Wisconsin, April 6, 1870, daughter of Peter and Josephine (Orcott) Bodette, and who, when a babe had accompanied her parents to Eau Claire and in 1871 to Dunn County, where they settled on a farm on Section 14, town of Tiffany. While erecting the necessary buildings on his 40-acre purchase Mr. Appleby and his young wife resided on his parents' farm and then moved to the 40-acre tract, where they made their home until In that year he built a good frame house on the home farm of 80 acres, he 1901. and his family moving into it, and it has been his home ever since. Thelma J., who was graduated from the Boyceville High School with the class of 1923, is now a student at Hamline College, St. Paul, Minn., while Louis B. is a pupil in the Boyceville High School.

Julian A. Burch, a former member of the legal profession who was some years engaged in agricultural pursuits in the town of Tiffany, was born on a farm in Winnebago County, Illinois, Sept. 9, 1854, son of Levi B. and Irene (Briggs) Burch. The father was a native of Canada, while the mother was born in the United States of French ancestry. They were the parents of six children, Clarence, Randolph, Florence, Julian A., Albert and Laura, all of whom are now deceased, including the subject of this sketch, who was the only one to leave issue. Julian A. Burch acquired his elementary education in a district school near his parents' farm in Illinois, after which he attended a seminary at Mt. Morris, Ill., and the Northwestern University at Evanston, in the same state. Having subsequently read law in the office of Shepard & Marston, at Cambridge, Ill., he was admitted to the bar and, going to Friend, Nebr., began the practice of his profession there. Subsequently, however, he returned to Illinois, where he taught school for eight or ten years. In the meanwhile he was married, on Sept. 5, 1893, at Kingston, Ill., to Elizabeth J. Burzell, daughter of John and Mary (Thornton) Burzell. Her father, a native of Canada, and her mother of New York State, met and were married in Illinois, settling on a farm there, where she was born Dec. 23, 1874. In 1896 Mr. Burch was admitted to the bar of Cook County, Ill., and opened an office in Chicago, where he was engaged in practice until 1905. He then moved to Lombard, Ill., where he entered into the real estate business, and was thus engaged up to 1909. In that year, owing to ill health, he came to Dunn County and took up the occupation of farming, buying a farm of 120 acres in Section 7, town of Tiffany. A few acres had been improved and there was a poor set of buildings. Mr. Burch, during the few years of life that remained to him, improved the place, stocked it with grade cattle, and carried on general farming and dairying. He was prevented from doing more by death, which came to him on Nov. 23, 1913. His wife subsequently continued to operate it, with the aid of her sons, Albert R., and Clarence E., who built a good frame house, a tile silo, and made further improvements, conducting the farm along the same general lines as their father. Albert R., was born Sept. 27, 1895, left the farm in 1922 and is now a rural mail carrier residing in Boyceville, where he owns a good residence. In the war with Germany, he was inducted into the U. S. army, Sept. 17, 1917, becoming a member of the 173d Headquarters Brigade, 87th Division, and was made orderly sergeant. He trained at Camp Pike, Ark., Camp Grant, Ill., and Camp Dix, N. J., and went overseas in August, 1918, returning to the United States in January, 1919, and being discharged at Camp Grant on Feb. 12, 1919. He was married to Isadore Sutliff, daughter of Francis C. and Bertha (O'Flannigan) Sutliff, and they have one child, Julian M. Clarence E., who is still operating the home farm in the town of Tiffany, was born in Chicago, Ill., Feb. 19, 1903. He married Marie Schneider of the town of Hay River, Dunn County. The two other children in the family are Irene M. and Vernon L. Irene M., born May 3, 1904, in Chicago, Ill., was graduated from the Downing High School with the class of 1922, and subsequently followed a two years' teacher's course at the River Falls Normal School. She is now Mrs. Roy Kess of Rochester, Mich. Vernon L., born in the town of Tiffany, Dunn County, is a grade student in the Boyceville school. Julian A. Burch was active in Free Masonry for a number of years, and was a staunch Republican in politics. He attended and helped to support the M. E. Church in Downing, of which the rest of the family became members. In the spring of 1923 Mrs. Elizabeth J. Burch left the farm and took up her residence in Boyceville.

Edwin C. Jacobs, proprietor of Elk Lake farm in the town of Spring Brook, and whose reputation as a leader in scientific farming and dairying is widely spread, was born at North New Portland, Somerset County, Maine, on Dec. 13, 1856, son of William and Emily (Wyman) Jacobs. It was in 1862 that the family came west, settling in Hudson, St. Croix County, Wis. Later they moved to New Richmond in the same County, where until 1868 William Jacobs was engaged in farming and lumbering. They then went to Diamond Bluff, Pierce County, where they remained until 1874. In that year the family came to Dunn County, settling in the town of Spring Brook, where Mr. and Mrs. William Jacobs spent their latter Edwin C. Jacobs attended school in New Richmond, also at Diamond vears. Bluff, Pierce County, and the high school in Eau Claire. He became industrially active as an associate with his father after coming to Dunn County and they bought 250 acres of land in Sections 8 and 9, town of Spring Brook, near Elk Lake, which property they together, and later Edwin C. alone, developed into the present Elk Lake Farm. For 20 years Mr. Jacobs was connected with the University of Wisconsin in farm institute work throughout the state and became recognized as an authority on soil improvement, dairying and other important branches of agriculture, putting into his work all the thought, energy and enthusiasm demanded by it and accomplishing marked results. He has made a reputation in the raising of pure bred Jersey cattle and is a prominent member of the Dunn County Jersey Breeders' Association. He is also a stockholder and president of the Elk Mound Co-operative Creamery. Averse to self-advertisement, he is better known through his deeds than through his words but the former speak with a loud enough voice to all who are interested in the advance of agricultural science. Mr. Jacobs was first married April 2, 1890, to Jennie Bush, who died Oct. 51, 1901. On June 20, 1912, he married Jennie Brackett, daughter of Abraham and Grace (Dempster) Brackett. He and his wife enjoy a high social position and are members of the Dunn County Old Settlers Association.

Abraham Brackett, an early settler in the town of Spring Brook, who is still living, was born in the province of Quebec, Canada, July 21, 1844, son of Daniel and Mary (Connell) Brackett. The father was a native of Portland, Maine, while the mother, born in Ireland, was brought at the age of 13 years to New Brunswick, Canada, in which province she was later married to Mr. Brackett. There they made their home until 1872, in which year they came to live with their son Abraham in Dunn County, Wisconsin, and with him they spent the remainder of their lives. They were the parents of a truly patriarchal family of 20 children, three of whom died in infancy, the others being James, Davenport, Nancy, Daniel W., Elijah, Solomon, Thomas, Joan, Jane, George, Mary, Abraham, Josiah, William, Ellen, John and Mary Jane. Abraham Brackett as a boy attended school in New Brunswick, where he subsequently learned the blacksmith's trade, following it there, or at least in Canada, until 1862. He then came to Eau Claire, Wisconsin, and for the next three years was employed as blacksmith at Jim Falls, Chippewa County, by the French-Leonard Co., a lumber firm. At the end of that time he returned to Canada, but after remaining there for three years he came back to Wisconsin, bringing his parents with him, and it was at that time-about 1868-that he began the career of a Dunn County farmer, buying 160 acres of wild land in the town of Spring Brook, north of Amy. His object was to establish a home for the family; but his brothers not wanting to stay there, and his sisters marrying, he proceeded to develop the place as a home for himself, his parents living with him, as already This work he did gradually but very thoroughly, clearing in time a large stated. part of the land and erecting a fine set of buildings. During the 28 years that he was thus occupied he spent many winters in the woods for different lumber companies, doing all the iron work and horseshoeing. In 1900 he disposed of the farm and took up his residence in the village of Elk Mound, for several years being interested in the Farmers Store Company. Since 1915 he has made his home with his daughter, Mrs. E. C. Jacobs of Elk Lake Farm, Waneka. Although now 80 years old he is still quite active and works about the farm every day, taking an interest in the work. In 1871 Mr. Brackett was married to Grace Dempster, who died Oct. 3, 1882. Five children were born to them, namely: Daniel W., of Grand View, Wash.; Jennie M., now Mrs. E. C. Jacobs; James G., of Elk Mound; Saul, who was drowned at Holcombe, Chippewa County, Wis., in 1906, and George, who died in infancy.

Frederick J. Diedrich, in former years a well known citizen of Menomonie, for many years in the harness business, and who was a veteran of the Civil War, was born in Germany, Aug. 19, 1839. When seven years old he came to the United States with his parents, who for some reason, as many other immigrants did in those days, took passage for New Orleans instead of for New York, Boston or Baltimore. They arrived in the gay and picturesque Southern port, then one of the principal seats of the old regime, with its semi-tropical trees and plants, and where practically every man, woman or child you met possessing the least drop of negro blood was a slave, on New Year's Day, 1847. But whatever may have been the fascinations or interest of the place, they did not linger, but came up the river as far as St. Louis, and, not being able to get any further, as the river was frozen, they remained there until spring, when they completed their journey to Ft. Madison, Iowa. In that place Frederick J. Diedrich made his home for 15 years and while living there he learned the harness maker's trade, which he followed for many years.

During the first call for volunteers in the Civil War he enlisted at Burlington, Iowa, in April, 1861, and for three years and two months thereafter he was in active service, though being captured on one occasion, he spent some weeks in a rebel After the war he returned to Ft. Madison and resumed his trade. prison. There he met Martin Wilson of Menomonie, who had come to Ft. Madison to visit his uncle, Thomas Hale. Mr. Wilson remarked that he was looking for a good harness maker to come to Menomonie to live. Mr. Hale then told him of young Diedrich, who at that time was employed in St. Louis, but who happened to be home on a visit. The two got together, and while Mr. Diedrich at the time preferred to go back to St. Louis, he was persuaded to change his plans and go to Menomonie. Here he arrived in 1865 from Ft. Madison, but saw a very different Menomonie from the city of today. The west side of the river was then mostly pine forest, and this side was chiefly covered with brush, and Indians used to camp at times on the bank of the river and sell blueberries to the white inhabitants. From that time on Mr. Diedrich was a part of the great development that gradually took place, and in time he became proud of the city of his adoption and of the fact that he had spent nearly half a century within its borders. It was in 1866, the year after his arrival here, that he opened his first harness shop; but after six months he moved to a building at what is now the corner of Third and Crescent Streets. About 1878 he built a frame structure on Main Street where the present Diedrich shop is located. At this place he was for six years in partnership with his twin brother, Henry, who is well remembered by some of the older residents of the city, but who returned to Ft. Madison. The building was a large, two-story, frame structure, and was sold to Dahl & Ingebritt, who fitted it up as a hotel and conducted it as It was later destroyed by fire. Meanwhile Mr. Diedrich worked for T. J. such. Bryan for four years, and then ran a shop for Andrew Johnson for a year or two. He then became city marshall, which office he held for six years. Then, after teaming and farming for about two years, he went into business for himself in a small building standing on a part of the site occupied at present by the Kraft Mercantile Company, and in that location he remained for four or five years. He then moved into the Adolph Peterson building, a two-story brick structure which had been erected on the site of the burned hotel, and which was the last place that he occupied for business purposes. He retired in April, 1911, after more than 45 years of an active and successful business life, and the next few years-the only years left to him-were spent in rest and quiet with his family or with his comrades and friends. On Saturday night of Jan. 9, 1915, death called him very suddenly. He had entered the headquarters of William Evans Post, G. A. R., in his usual health, had spoken a cheery good evening to the early arrivals there, passed into the cloak room, where he hung up his wraps, and then re-entered the post room. He had hardly done so when, without warning, he fell to the floor, and before a physician could be summoned he was dead. Less than five minutes elapsed between his collapse and his death. His passing caused a shock to many in the community, including first and foremost the members of his family. Mr. Diedrich was married Sept. 25, 1866, in Ft. Madison, Iowa, to Elizabeth Soechtig, and five daughters and one son were born to them. One of the daughters died several years before her father, while the children who survived him, together with the mother were the son Henry, who is conducting the harness shop on Main Street, and the daughters, Mrs. C. A. Pinkepank and Mrs. R. W. Cronk of Menomonie, Mrs. L. O. Tilleson of Eau Claire and Mrs. H. A. Hallum of Seattle, Wash.

John W. Macauley, a well known lawyer and respected citizen of Menomonie, formerly county judge, was born in Menomonie, Wis., March 2, 1871, son of Robert and Cora (Olson) Macauley. He was graduated from the Menomonie High School with the class of 1887 and then entered the Minnesota State University, which he attended until 1890. In 1894 he was graduated from the law department of Wisconsin State University, and has since practiced law in Menomonie. From April, 1898, to Jan. 11, 1899, he served in the Spanish-American War. He was district attorney of Dunn County from 1902 to 1911, and county judge from 1913 to 1917, resigning the latter position to enter into World War service, in which he was engaged from Aug. 27, 1917, to Aug. 2, 1919. He served overseas, the greater part of the time at Headquarters, S. O. S. Mr. Macauley married Adalin M. Wright, Pueblo, Colo., and he and his wife are the parents of a son, Robert H., born March 27, 1913.

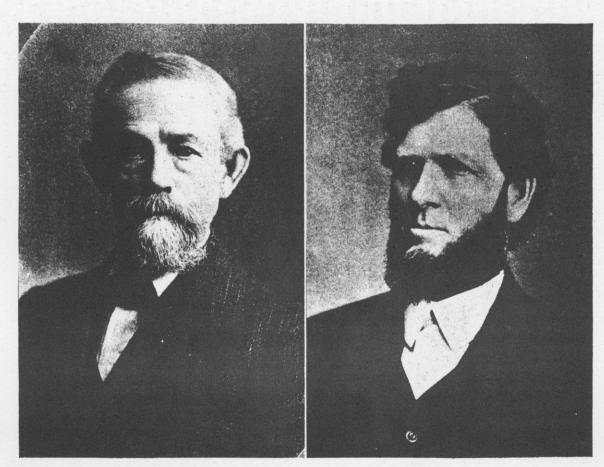

Ernest Dickman, a pioneer business man of North Menomonie, who has been a general merchant there for 33 years, was born in Germany, June 12, 1863. He was reared and educated in his native land and in 1880 came to the United States as a youth of 17 years. From New York, at which port he landed, he came direct to Menomonie, and here for six years he worked in the mills of the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company. During the next two years he worked for the Drowley & Kelly After that he went into the mercantile business and has since conducted Brick Co. a store in North Menomonie, dealing in groceries, dry goods, flour, feed and light In 1891 he erected his present building on Tainter Street. Mr. Dickhardware. man was married in Menomonie, on April 17, 1889, to Mary Recoski, and four children were born to brighten and perfect their home life. These are: Elsa, now Mrs. Carl Kausrud of Toronto, Canada; Adela, who is Mrs. H. Molner of Chippewa Falls, Wis.; Edwin, of Riverside, Calif., who is an architectural draftsman; and Esther, who is assisting her father in the store. Mr. Dickman and his family are members of the German Lutheran Church.

Albert Traxler, an early settler in Section 8, town of Menomonie, was born in Germany, where he grew to manhood and was married. About 1846, with his wife Theresa, he emigrated to the United States, locating first in Milwaukee, where he remained for two years. In 1848 he came with his family to Dunn County and, being a carpenter by trade, was employed by Knapp, Stout & Co. to built several of their sawmills. Altogether he remained in the employ of that concern for 15 In 1862 he squatted on a piece of land on the Hudson Road, where Mrs. years. Traxler died the same year. He and his children remained there two years. Then in 1865 he homesteaded an 80-acre tract in Section 8, town of Menomonie, on which he put up some log buildings, which in time he replaced with others of more modern There he resided until 1884, in which year he sold the place to Winterstructure. bottom & Holm, who established there the brickyard and was operated under the name of the Tramway Brick Co. At the same time he retired from farming and took up his residence in the town of Menomonie, where he died a few years later, in January, 1888. He and his wife were the parents of five children: Mary, now Mrs. William Synder of Menomonie; John, a farmer in the town of Menomonie; Mark and Anton, who are deceased, and Nicholas, a well known farmer in Section 4, town of Menomonie.

Nick Traxler, proprietor of Lonesome Pine Farm in Section 4, town of Menomonie, and one of the leading citizens of that town, was born within its limits on June 29, 1862, son of Albert and Theresa Traxler. His parents, elsewhere mentioned, were immigrants from Germany, the father being at that time in the employ of Knapp, Stout & Co. as a carpenter. The mother of Nick died not long after his birth and in the following year Albert Traxler made a temporary home for himself and children on a piece of land on the Hudson Road, over which for two years he exercised a squatter's rights. Then in 1865 he homesteaded an 80-acre tract in Section 8, town of Menomonie, at the locality now called Tramway, and it was there that Nick subsequently attended school. A little later he entered the employ of the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company, for whom he worked in the mills, pineries and on the river, at intervals, for 14 years. Then, his father in 1884 having retired from farming and sold the home place to the firm who started on it the Tramway brickyards, Nick went to work for the brick concern, and was occupied for a number of years. In 1894 he settled on the land which constitutes his present farm in Sections 4 and 5, town of Menomonie, an 80-acre tract on which he erected log buildings. It was the beginning of a new era in his life, for he not only at that. time began an independent career, working for himself instead of for others, but he also began his own domestic life, having been united in marriage on July 13, that year, in the city of Menomonie, to Alice Skulley. Her parents were Joseph and Anna (Wise) Skulley of St. Paul, in which city for many years Joseph Skulley was proprietor of a hardware store, and where the daughter Alice was born on July 20, 1874. Thus 30 years ago Mr. and Mrs. Both her parents are now deceased. Traxler settled down to build up a home and they have well performed their respective parts. Industrious and thrifty they made gradual progress and in time the original log buildings were replaced by good frame ones, the cultivated area of the land increased and the place presented a well kept and prosperous appearance. Mr. Traxler has followed general farming and dairying, and today has a good herd of grade Holstein cattle, with 50 acres of his land cleared. He is a stockholder in the New Hudson Road Creamery and in the Waterman & Erhart Co.'s store at As early as 1903 he was marked by his fellow townsmen as a man Menomonie. capable of exercising a useful part in the direction of local government affairs, and was accordingly elected supervisor, serving as such for two terms. Then he went a step farther, becoming chairman of the town board and thereby automatically a member of the county board, in which important position he served for eight consecutive years. After that he was out for a year, then, being again elected to the office, served two years. An interval of five years then elapsed without his being politically active, after which he was again elected chairman of the town board and served three years up to 1922. During the last three years of his service it was through his efforts that the route of Highway No. 12 was changed. Mr. and Mrs. Traxler have had nine children, of whom they have lost but one, the record being as follows: Joseph Paul, born July 21, 1895; now residing in Michigan City, Ind.; Sadie, born April 21, 1897, who is the wife of Wayne Reed of Waukesha, Wis., and has one child, Raymond; Anna S., born June 19, 1899; now Mrs. Paul Hilemanowski of Minneapolis, and the mother of a son, Donald; Dorothy E., born July 13, 1901, who is Mrs. Robert Steies of Wolf Point, Mont.; Edward, born Feb. 14, 1904, at home; Philip, born April 30, 1906, who died Nov. 24, 1908; Nicholas, born Nov. 10, 1908; Harry, born June 1, 1911, and Alice, born Dec. 7, 1914. The family are members of St. Joseph's Catholic congregation at Menomonie and Mr. Traxler has membership in the Beavers' Reserve Fund Fraternity.

Ernest W. Scott, proprietor of Scottlands, one of the finest farms in Dunn County, situated in Section 8, town of Spring Brook, was born near Willow River Falls in St. Croix County, Wis., Oct. 2, 1867, son of Hiram Walter and Elsie Watts (Dresser) Scott. Hiram Walter Scott, the father, was born at Oak Hill, New Brunswick, May 19, 1826, and resided in his native province until 1851, when he came west to Hudson, Wis. While in New Brunswick he was engaged in lumbering with his father, but after locating at Hudson, Wis., he took up farming. He was first married Nov. 9, 1856, to Mary L. Ferris, who died in 1862. It was in 1863 that he married Elsie Watts Dresser. He moved to Menomonie with his family in 1872, finding employment with Knapp, Stout & Co., in looking up timber land and as foreman in logging camps. He took an interest in civic affairs and was one of the first aldermen when Menomonie became a city. He also served several years as road commissioner. His death took place on Jan. 8, 1904, he being survived by his wife, who died in July, 1907. There children were: Theresa, who is now living in Irvington, Ala.; Hattie, wife of B. H. Scott of the same place, and Ernest W., subject of this sketch. Ernest W. was but three years old when he became an inhabitant of Dunn County, his parents settling in Menomonie, where he was reared and attended school. In 1884 he went to Chicago and took up railroading, subsequently spending nearly seven years in the employ of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad, on the Chicago Division, working successively as fireman and engineer, with residence at Aurora. In March, 1897, he gave up that occupation and entered into farming, taking the William H. Landon farm in the town of Spring Brook—a farm of 280 acres in Section 8, which he has since developed to its present fine condition. He has cleared and broken 100 acres and erected a fine set of buildings. His barn, measuring 36 x 130 feet in ground plan, is provided with the Louden barn equipment; he has two large silos, a hog house, a machine shed of 32×64 feet and two stories high, with other out-buildings and a fine residence. Mr. Scott is extensively engaged in the dairy business, keeping high grade and pure bred Guernsey cattle, and also raising Poland-China hogs. He is a member of the Dunn County Guernsey Breeders' Association and is known all over the county as one of its most progressive and up-to-date farmers. A Free Mason, he belongs to the Blue Lodge in Menomonie. Mr. Scott was married Nov. 27, 1895, to Jessie Landon, daughter of William H. and Mary (Davenport) Landon, and of this union six children have been born, Marjory, Lawrence W., Helen, Catherine, Jean H. and Dorothy. Majory is now Mrs. C. S. Caldwell of St. Paul; Lawrence W. is associated with his father in the work of the farm; Helen is assistant superintendent of dormitories at Northfield College; Catherine is at home; Jean H. is a school teacher at Elmwood, Wis.; and Dorothy is attending the Elk Mound High School. Mr. Scott and his family are affiliated religiously with the Congregational Church in Menomonie.

William H. Landon, who passed away some 12 years ago, was in his day one of the best known citizens in Dunn County, as he served 14 years as county clerk, at various times held other offices, and was prominent in several other respects. He was born in Connecticut, Jan. 22, 1831, there spent his early years, and when a young man went to Herkimer County, New York. He came to Wisconsin in 1854. settling in Jefferson County, where he seems to have remained for about four years. In 1858 he came to Menomenie, Dunn County, making the journeyprobably by train-to Dubuque, then up the Mississippi by steamboat to Read's Landing, and by keel boat up the Chippewa and Red Cedar rivers to Dunnville. whence he walked to Menomonie. During his first winter here he made a living by hunting and trapping and in the following summer worked for Ort Remington on the latter's farm on Elk Creek. After three or four years he took a farm at Waneka in the town of Spring Brook, which he operated until 1877, moving in that year to Menomonie, as he had been elected county clerk in 1875, and his frequent reelections to that office show that he was both well known to the people of the county and performed his duties in an efficient manner. After his 14 years of service in that office he took charge of the affairs of the Farmers' Mutual Fire Insurance Company and he remained with the company up to a year before his death, which occurred Sept. 23, 1914. As poor commissioner and as a member of the school board he also rendered good service, and he was a member of the commission that reassessed the real estate of St. Croix County. He kept up his interest in his farm until his last years. One useful act that Mr. Landon performed was the setting out of the trees in the court house park, and his care of them until they were big enough to need little further attention. He did this in spite of some ridicule when he started, as people thought they would not grow there. In fact Mr. Landon during the greater part of his life in Dunn County was an eminently useful citizen and was widely recognized as such and his name deserves a prominent place in the county's annals. Mr. Landon was married in 1866, to Mary Davenport, who died many years before him, passing away in September, 1883. They were the parents of four children: Laura, now Mrs. Laura E. Jones, and a resident of Los Angeles, Calif.; Jessie, wife of E. W. Scott of the town of Spring Brook; Galen, of Duluth, Minn.; and Mabel, who married Warren Jones and resided at Alix. Ark.

Chester B. Thatcher, farmer and stock breeder, and also proprietor of a sawmill, box factory and lumber yard at Graytown in Section 5, town of New Haven, was born in Juneau County, Wisconsin, July 8, 1866, son of William and Lauretta (Salsbury) Thatcher. The parents were natives of Ohio who were married at Elroy, Juneau County, Wis., in 1864 or 1865 and engaged in farming in that county. The father was of old Pennsylvania Quaker stock and was expelled from membership in the Friends' (or Quaker) organization on account of his marrying a woman who did not belong to it. She was from old New England stock, through her mother being descended from one of the Pilgrims who landed at Plymouth in the Mayflower in 1820, while her genealogy on the paternal side ran back some 200 years. Mr. and Mrs. William Thatcher in 1869 moved from Juneau County, Wisconsin, to Palo Alto County, Iowa, where they took a homestead, residing there until 1876, when they returned to Wisconsin and settled in St. Croix County, where the father died in 1902. During the last two years of the Civil War he was a soldier in the armies of the Union, as a member of Company G, 37th Wisconsin Volunteers, serving at Gettysburg, in front of Richmond, and in other battles. Entering the army as a private, he ultimately rose to the rank of lieutenant. He was wounded in the service and never enjoyed perfect health afterwards. His wife is still living and now resides with her son Charles, at Minot, N. D. The other children in the family (in addition to Chester and Charles) were Clarence, now of Glenwood, Minn., and Edna, who is Mrs. J. Kavanaugh of Shelby, Mont. Chester B. Thatcher attended common school in St. Croix County, and was subsequently a student for one year in the college at Valparaiso, Ind. At the age of 15 years he had already entered the ranks of industry, driving an ox team in the woods in St. Croix County, and he has been connected with the lumber business more or less ever since. For several years he was a foreman in the mills during the summers, and in the woods during the winters, for the Willow River Lumber Co. of New Richmond, Wis. Early in 1900, which was about two and a half years after his marriage, he came to the village of Graytown in the town of New Haven, Dunn County, and erected a sawmill, which he has since continued to operate, in some years cutting as much as a million feet of lumber. In 1918 he built the box factory he is now operating, manufacturing all kinds of wooden boxes to order, and since 1920 he has also conducted a lumber yard, handling in connection with it all kinds of building materials. In addition to these lines of business Mr. Thatcher conducts a large farm, making a specialty of breeding pure Guernsey cattle, of which he now has 30 head, including some 13 to 15 milch cows. At the National Dairy Show held in Milwaukee in 1924 he was awarded a blue ribbon for his exhibit of a grade Guernsey cow. He has erected a good set of farm buildings and has a complete and up-to-date operating equipment. The farm is situated in Section 5. In politics Mr. Thatcher is a Democrat but is not always bound by party ties, using his individual judgment with respect to the candidate he votes for. While living in St. Croix County he was a member of the county board, and at various times he has held school office. He has given the same careful attention to public duties as to his private business and has earned the reputation of a useful and reliable citizen. Mr. Thatcher's marriage occurred Sept. 8, 1897, uniting him with Millie B., daughter of George and Christina Fouks of St. Croix County, where she was born in January, 1876. She died Feb. 12, 1916, having been the mother of four children: Esther, born in February, 1899, who died at the age of two years; Lester, born June 15, 1900; Helen, born Dec. 12, 1902; and Margaret E., born Jan. 15, 1909. Lester is now in business with his Helen, who was graduated from the New Richmond High School with father. the Class of 1919, and also went through a two-year course at the River Falls Normal School, is a public school teacher in Hastings, Minn. Margaret is a pupil in the Central High School, in St. Paul.

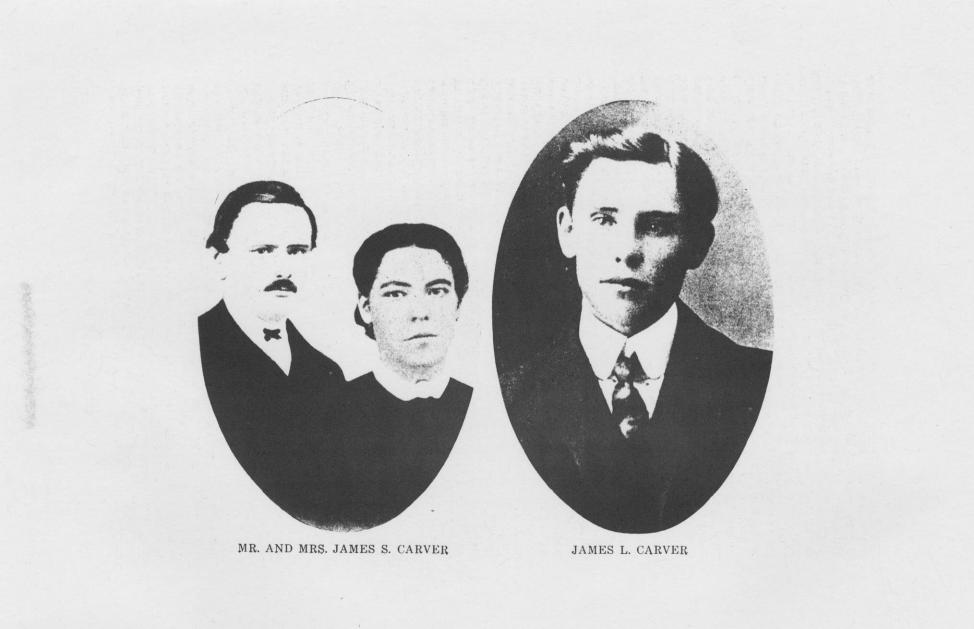

Fred Wege, who has a long and creditable record as a Dunn County farmer, though now retired, was born in Hanover, Germany, July 21, 1862, son of Henry W. and Mary (Hesemeir) Wege. As a boy he attended school in his native land and when of suitable age was confirmed in the Lutheran church. It was in 1881, at the age of 19, that he came to the United States and to Dunn County, Wisconsin, locating at Elk Mound. For the next 17 years he worked on farms during the summers and at logging in the woods during the winters. The year 1896 saw the end of his life of bachelorhood, for he was married on March 24th, to Minnie Ausman, who was born in the town of Spring Brook, Dunn County, May 23, 1864, daughter of Henry and Martha (Sipple) Ausman, her parents being pioneer settlers in this region. At the same time he began his career as an independent farmer, buying 80 acres of land in Section 24, town of Elk Mound, and 80 acres just across the line in Chippewa County. Some of the land had been broken but there were no build-Mr. Wege erected a comfortable dwelling and he and his wife took possesings. sion of it. In the years that followed he built up a fine farm, one of the best in the town. After he had made considerable progress on it he bought another 80-acre tract in Chippewa County, which gave him 240-acres, and he carried on farming very successfully until 1918. In that year he sold the farm to his son-in-law, Alvin G. Meyer, and he then bought another, in Section 24, and across the road from his original farm. It was an improved piece of property, but had poor buildings. He conducted that farm for several years, and in 1924 had his barn destroyed by fire; but on the whole he was very successful. In the fall of 1924 Mr. Wege gave up farming, passing the task on to his son-in-law, Mr. Meyer, who is operating the 80-acre farm in addition to the farm of 240 acres. Mr. and Mrs. Wege were the parents of three children, one of whom, Della M., born June 24, 1897, is now Mrs. Alvin G. Meyer. Mr. and Mrs. Meyer own the old home farm of 240 acres, which they have named Cedar Crest Farm. They are prominent among the younger element in the town of Elk Mound. On June 4, 1923 they lost their barn which was struck by lightning and totally destroyed, but they have erected a fine new one, 36 x 100 feet in ground plan, with full basement, and which is fully equipped with modern conveniences for handling the stock, including home water and light The cattle on the farm are choice specimens of the Red Pole breed. Mr. and Mrs. Alvin G. Meyer are the parents of two children: Eleanor Della, bern July 6, 1920, and Luverne Alvin, born Oct. 28, 1922. The other children of Mr. and Mrs. Wege were Clayton, born June 15, 1899, and died Feb. 28, 1903, and Alvin, born July 12, 1901, and died Oct. 19, 1909.

William F. Scharlau, who was for more than 30 years a well known farmer and highly respected citizen in the town of Elk Mound, and whose sterling qualities of patience and industry, backed by those of his wife, resulted in the development of an excellent farm, carved out of the wilderness, was born in the state of New York, Feb. 2, 1860, son of Carl and Minnie (Bernau) Scharlau. The family came west in 1864, locating in Menomonie, Wis., where for a few years Carl Scharlau worked for Knapp, Stout & Co. At the end of that period he bought a farm in the town of Red Cedar, on which he and his wife spent the remainder of their lives engaged in William F. Scharlau as a boy attended rural school in the town of Red Cedar and remained on the home farm until 18 years of age. He then went into the woods for the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company and was in the employ of that well known lumber concern until 1890. It was while he was thus engaged that he was married June 22, 1882, to Bertha Dehnhoff, who was born in Bradenberg, Germany, Sept. 22, 1860, and had come to the United States and to Menomonie, Wis., in 1880. In 1890 Mr. Scharlau left the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company and went to work as a brick moulder in the Kelly Brick Yards at Menomonie, remaining thus employed until 1898. Thus far he had been engaged in manual labor for others but he realized that the chances for self advancement along those lines were but poor and that the wise thing to do was to get on to the land and carve out a home for himself and family. He now took the first steps in that direction, buying 40 acres of wild land in Section 5, and 80 acres in Section 31, town of Colfax. There were no buildings and their erection was one of Mr. Scharlau's first tasks. Making a clearing on the 40-acre tract, he built a log house and a board shed covered with straw, the latter to be used as a barn. Thus he started in as a pioneer, his wife assisting him in most of the hard work, such as pulling stumps and breaking the land. Careful management had to be exercised but yearly progress was made in one direction or another until their united efforts culminated in a fine farm homestead of which they had reason to be proud. In 1910 they built the good frame residence of eight rooms, now occupied; and in 1917 erected a large dairy barn of 36 x 56 feet in ground plan, with a full basement equipped with steel stanchions, and in addition to these buildings they put up a machine shed, chicken house, corn crib, garage and other useful buildings. In 1919 Mr. Scharlau purchased an additional tract of 80 acres in Section 5, thus increasing the area of the farm to 200 acres. At the time of his death, which occurred Sept. 30, 1921, he had between 70 and 80 acre cleared. His life work was well performed and as a husband and ather he was mourned by his family and as a man and citizen his loss was regretted by the entire community. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Scharlau are Robert, Anna, Paul, Alfred, Arthur, Hattie, William, Walter and Gecrge. Robert, born March 9, 1884, is on the home farm. Anna, born Sept. 20, 1885, is now Mrs. Albert Laustad of the town of Tainter and has two children, Norman and Walter.

Paul, born Feb. 25, 1888, who is a farmer in the town of Elk Mound, married Helen Hagen, and has four children, Edwin, Ruth, Herbert and Helen. Alfred, born Jan. 20, 1890, and also a farmer in the town of Elk Mound, married Alice Zuelke and has one child, Gerhart. Arthur, born Oct. 18, 1892, who is a farmer in the town of Iron Creek, married Laura Holbein and has two children, Ethel and Arthur. Hattie, born Jan. 22, 1895, is residing on the home farm with her mother and the other children—three brothers—namely: William, born Dec. 24, 1896; Walter, born March 26, 1899, and George, born April 1, 1904, the last mentioned conducting the farm. The religious faith of the family is that of the Lutheran Church.

James S. Carver, a worthy pioneer of Dunn County, and for many years one of the best known and most respected citizens of the town of New Haven, but now deceased, was born in Marietta, Ohio, Dec. 13, 1844, son of Israel S. and Marv (Beardsley) Carver. The Civil War breaking out soon after he had attained his sixteenth birthday, he enlisted as a private in Company E, Virginia Mounted Volunteers, being enrolled on Feb. 21, 1862, for three years' service. On March 4. 1864, he was discharged at Wheeling, W. Va., for reenlistment in one of the veteran organizations that were then being formed, and which he entered at once. (March 8, 1864), becoming a member of Company E, First West Virginia Volunteer Cavalry. He was honorably discharged at Wheeling on July 8, 1866, a year and several months after the conclusion of the war. He then went to Chillicothe, Mo., where he became acquainted with Elizabeth Whistler, to whom he was married on Dec. 23, 1867. She was born at Bourbon, Ind., in Feb. 18, 1844, daughter of Andrew and Delilah (Crevaston) Whistler, and had gone to Chillicothe when young. In 1874 Mr. Carver and wife decided to move to Dunn County Wisconsin, where Mrs. Carver's parents were already located on a place a mile east of Connersville. Mrs. Carver, with her three children, started in the fall, leaving her husband behind for a while to wind up his business affairs. These children were: Celesta E., born Nov. 15, 1868; Emma L., born Dec. 2, 1870, who is now Mrs. Dan Clark of Hutel, Burnett County, Wis., and Ida M., born Jan. 1, 1872, now Mrs. Martin Paulson of Chetek. The eldest was scarcely six years old at the time of the removal. Mrs. Carver's brother John accompanied the party, the journey being made in an emigrant wagon drawn by horses. The Carvers made their home with the Whistlers until Mr. Carver arrived in 1875. He drove here with a wagon and team, which he soon afterwards traded to Obed French for the latter's interest in a 160-acre homestead on Section 10, town of New Haven, the place being three and a half miles north of The only clearing was a small patch of ground for garden purposes, Connersville. which Mr. Carver made use of for the site of the small frame house which he erected. There being as yet no roads, driving was rough and transportation difficult, supplies having to be brought from Menomonie. After settling his family on the farm, Mr. Carver had to seek outside employment, since it would be years before the farm could support them, and in winter work could always be found at logging in the woods; at other times Mr. Carver took any job he could get. While he was away from home, which was most of the time, his wife did what she could to improve the homestead, besides caring for her children. They passed through great hardships but survived them, and in time developed 25 acres of the farm. Other children were born to them on the farm, namely: Mary B., on March 7, 1875; Lottie L., April 26, 1878; Dora E., April 2, 1880; James L., on October 28, 1883; and Mamie D., on May 23, 1886. Lottie is now deceased, Dora E. is Mrs. David Profit of Cloverton, Minn., and James L. is the present owner of the home farm. On Feb. 6, 1890, James S. Carver died at the age of but 45 years, leaving his wife with six daughters and one son. The eldest child was 22 years old, the youngest four, while the only son was only seven. For the next few years the farm had to be rented out, and from the small rent received and what the mother was able to earn, the family lived, though very frugally, and the children were even allowed to attend school and gain some education. The two youngest, James L. and Mamie D., were put through the high school at Glenwood City, James graduating in 1904 and Marie in 1906. Both taught rural school, James for four and Mamie for three years, the latter in St. Croix and Douglass counties. In 1906 or 1907 the family moved back to the farm, the mother and children taking up again the task of its development. James L., now a young man of 23, became the responsible head of the family, the daughters Mary and Mamie, also proving very helpful. The mother died on May 24, 1924, but before that a better house had been built and a fair set of buildings. In 1921 a modern barn of 36 x 100 x 14 feet, on a full stone basement, had been erected, cement floors put in, and also steel stanchions and other patent equipment. The farm, which lies about ten miles north of Boyceville, is well stocked with mixed grade cattle, the family milking from 40 to 50 cows. The home farm is owned by James L., who also owns 130 acres on Sections 9 and 10, while Mary and Mamie own 70 acres on Section 10, the land adjoining the home farm. The whole is operated as one farm, the three mentioned pooling their interests and efforts. James is a member of the English Lutheran Church, the other members of the family attending the Methodist Episcopal Church, though not members. The family history is useful as showing what can be accomplished by united effort in spite of adverse circumstances.

Robert Lausted, Sr., now deceased, was one of the hardy pioneers of Dunn County who helped to lay the foundations of its present wealth and prosperity, and to whom the present generation owes a debt of gratitude. He was born in Germany and was there educated. It was shortly after the breaking out of the Civil War that he came to America, and for a year after his arrival he remained in New York, where he found work; but the wages he received amcunted to only five dollars a month. At the end of that time he came west to Dunn County, Wisconsin, where the lumber industry was active, and where he entered the employ of Knapp, Stout & Co., for whom he worked several years, sometimes in the woods, at other times in the mills, and also as teamster. When he left their employ he began farming, buying 120 acres of wild land in Section 35, town of Tainter, to which he later added other tracts, including one of 80 acres, another of 40 acres of timber land, and another of 20 acres of hay land, in the town of Elk Mound. All of this, like his original tract, was wild and covered with brush in addition to the timber mentioned. Erecting a small house and log barn, he began the task of building up a farm, in which, after many years of hard work he succeeded, in time bringing 160 acres under the plow and having a fine house, barn and other buildings. Here he carried on general farming and stock raising until his death in 1917. His wife Bertha, to whom he was married in Dunn County, was born in Germany, and, like himself, came to this country when young. They were unacquainted in Germany, meeting each other for the first time in Dunn County, Wisconsin. She survived him scme years, passing away in the spring of 1924. They had been the parents of 11 children, ten of whom are now living, namely, Eliza, Otto, Robert, Emma, Martha, Ida, Edward, Sadie, Sam and Florence. The one deceased is Clara, who was the wife of George Webert. Emma is now Mrs. Will Webert of the town of Elk Mound; Ida is the wife of George Synder of Augusta, Wis.; and Sadie the wife of Albert Huber of the town of Tainter. Martha is Mrs. Ed. Giese of Menomonie. Before the father died he bought 320 acres of land in Section 26, which he gave to his sons, Robert and Edward; and Sam has carried on the home farm, of which he is now the owner.

Lloyd H. Van Slyke, M. D., practicing his profession in the village of Knapp, was born in Benson, Swift County, Minn., Feb. 21, 1892, son of John P. and Ida (Olson) Van Slyke, both parents being natives of that state. The father died in December, 1922, being survived by the mother, who is now living in Minneapolis. Lloyd H. as a youth attended grade and high school in Benson, being graduated from the latter with the class of 1910. He then entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons in Chicago, being graduated M. D. there in 1916. Then for one year he was interne in the Fairview Hospital in Minneapolis, after which he began the regular practice of his profession at Tioga, N. D. There he remained until March, 1918, at which time he entered the United States' service, becoming a member of the 58th Regiment, 4th Division, with the rank of lieutenant. Sent to Fort Riley, Kansas, he trained there until May, and then took the first step on the way to Europe, proceeding to Camp Merritt, N. J. From Hoboken, N. J., on May 25, 1918, he sailed for overseas, being landed at Liverpool, England, whence he went by way of London and Southampton to La Havre, France. where he spent two days. Thence he set out for the front, passing through Lizy-sur-Ourcq and going on to Chateau Thierry, St. Mihiel, the Argonne Forest and then to the Metz front. After hostilities had ceased with the signing of the armistice, he was with the army of occupation at Vallendar, Germany, where he was held until May, 1919. He then returned home with the 88th Division to Camp Dodge, being discharged on July 26, that year. From camp he went to Minneapolis, from which city he came to Knapp in September, 1919. Here he entered into partnership with Dr. E. O. McCarty, with whom he was professionally associated until June 7, 1921, when he bought Dr. McCarthy's interest and has since practiced alone, having patients both in the village and surrounding country, and his practice has grown to respectable proportions. He is local surgeon for the Omaha railroad, and has a high standing as a citizen. He is a member of the Masonic lodge at Knapp and the chapter and commandary at Menomonie, the Knights of Pythias and the Menomonie Country Club. Dr. Van Slyke was married July 19, 1917, to Reta McPhee of Toronto, Canada, and he and his wife are the parents of one child, Mary Helen.

Andrew Hageseth, who was a farmer for many years in the town of Dunn, beginning operations here half a century ago, was born in Land, Norway, April 19, 1847. He came to the United States and to Wisconsin about 1869, settling in Menomonie, where he resided for about three years. He then bought 80 acres of wild land in Section 19, town of Dunn, built a small frame shanty on it and moved in with his wife, he having been married in November, 1872, to Sarah Frederickson. She was born at Valders, Norway, June 21, 1847, and came to America in 1871, settling in Menomonie, Wis. Mr. Hageseth with his wife's assistance began to built up a farm home. The path they had to travel was rough and called for endurance as well as unremitting industry, but they pushed forward and every year saw them a little better off than they were the year before, with more acres cleared and planted, while every once in a while a new and better building was put up, the visible sign of increasing prosperity. In 1898 Mr. Hageseth built a good house to replace the old frame shanty, but his career was not far from its close, for he died on May 2, 1900. His wife survived him 20 years and 24 days, passing away May 26, 1922, nearly 50 years after her wedding day. They were the parents of nine children, one of whom, named Tillie, died in infancy. The others were Ole, Julianna, Christ, Andrew, Samuel, Tillie (second), Otto and Frank, of whom the following is a further record. Ole, born March 28, 1874, now owns and conducts the home farm. Julianna, born Dec. 20, 1875, has always resided on the home farm and is keeping house for her brother, Ole. Christ, born Nov. 28, 1879, is a farmer at Reeder, N. D., and is single. Andrew, born March 25, 1882, also lives at Reeder, N. D. He married Belle Roe, of Mapleton, Minn., who died July 9, 1915, without issue. Samuel, born Sept. 7, 1884, and residing in the town of Dunn, married Nellie Thompson of Hersey, St. Crcix County, and has one son, Robert S. Tillie (second), born Jan. 26, 1888, is now Mrs. Herman Halvorson of Menomonie. Otto, twin brother of Tillie, was one of those young men whose lives were sacrificed on the altar of their country in the World War, though he did not die in battle. He entered the service July 23, 1918, at Menomonie, becoming a member of Company B, 136th Gun Battalion; trained at Camp Grant, Illinois, and in September, 1918, went overseas to France. There he was taken sick in the trenches while serving at the front and died Oct. 26, 1918. His body was returned to his native land in 1921, and buried with suitable honors in the Elk Creek Cemetery. Frank, born Sept. 16, 1891, in the town of Spring Brook, married Alice Oyhus of Hersey, Wis. She died Sept. 14, 1922, leaving one child, Orelle Frances, who resides on the Hageseth farm with her uncle Ole and Aunt Julianna. The family belong religiously to the Elk Creek Lutheran Church.

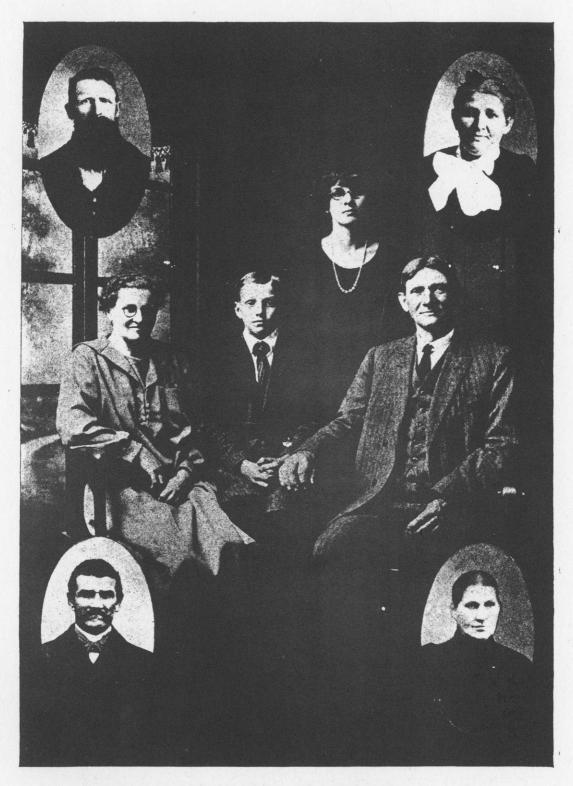

Ole Hageseth, a well known and respected farmer in the town of Dunn, was born on his present farm in Section 19, on March 28, 1874, son of Andrew and Sarah (Frederickson) Hageseth. He acquired his education in the district school, which he attended for a few years when a boy, and grew up on the home farm, helping his father as soon as he was old enough to be of use, both in clearing and developing the land and in the erection of buildings. He always remained on the home farm except for three winters spent in the logging woods, 1896-97 and 1898. In 1900, after the death of his father, he purchased the interests of the other heirs and became sole owner of the farm. It is now a fine piece of agricultural property, conveniently and pleasantly situated in Section 19, and including 80 acres of land. Since beccming proprietor Mr. Hageseth has continued to improve the farm, among his additions to the buildings being a garage, hen house, corn crib and hog house, and a fine barn erected in 1910 and measuring $34 \ge 70$ feet with basement, it being installed with the James stanchions. He has also repaired the house and built on to it a fine summer kitchen. Mr. Hageseth has been a stockholder in the Downsville Cooperative Creamery since its organization. He believes in diversified and dairy farming and has a fine herd of Guernsey grade stock, headed by a pure bred sire. His hogs are of the Poland-China breed. He has never married, his sister Julianna keeping house for him. They are members of the Elk Creek Lutheran Church.

Ludwig Dragseth, carpenter, contractor and cabinet-maker, of Menomonie, was born in Mildalen, Norway, Feb. 18, 1872, son of Johan and Mary Dragseth, the latter of whom died in Norway in 1881, the former being still living and now 80 years old. Ludwig Dragseth attended public school in his native land and for a few years followed farming. He then learned the trade of carpenter and cabinetmaker and was engaged in it there until 1902, when he came to America with his family, locating at once in Menomonie, Dunn County. For ten years he worked as a carpenter for the well known contractor, J. S. Govin, was later for three years in the employ of Sever Olson and for shorter periods worked for other contractors. In 1918 he was at Barksdale in Bayfield County, Wis., and then returned to Menomonie and worked a year for Contractor Rudolph Jaeger. He is now in business for himself as a contracting carpenter, and at his home at 1220 Third Street, which he purchased in 1914, he has a shop in which he does all kinds of cabinet work and repairing. He is a member of the carpenters' union and has the reputation not only of being a good workman but also a square man of business. Mr. Dragseth was married in Norway in May, 1899, to Mary Sneen, who was born at Mildalen, Norway, Oct. 14, 1870, daughter of John and Anna Sneen. Her parents came to America in 1886, locating in Menomonie, and Mr. Sneen was from that time on in the employ of the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company, until they retired from business, working in the mill in summer and in the woods in winter. After the company closed down their plant and business here in 1901, he worked at Drummond, Bayfield County, Wis., until old age caused him to retire. He now lives with Mr. Dragseth, the subject of this sketch, his wife having died in July, 1920. Mr. and Mrs. Dragseth are the parents of a son, John L., born Oct. 11, 1900. He was graduated from the high school and then entered Stout Institute, where he took a two years' course, after which he taught school one year at Waterville, Minn. Then re-entering the Stout Institute, he completed the other two years of the course. being graduated with the degree of B. A. in June, 1923. He is now a director of manual training at Dubuque, Iowa. The Dragseth family are affiliated religiously

William Krueger, an industrious. practical and successful farmer of Section 16, town of Grant, was born in Germany. Jan. 6, 1873, son of August and Julia (Lueck) Krueger. The father was a shepherd by occupation, but having little prospect of ever gaining a compentency in his native land. he emigrated with his family in 1883 to the United States, and, coming to Dunn Ccunty, Wisconsin, took a farm of 80 acres in Section 9, town of Grant. Seven acres of the land had been broken, but it seems there were no buildings, as about the first thing he did was to build a log house and a straw barn, after which he began the harder work of clearing the land. The nearest trading points were Menomonie and Chippewa Falls, and it took two days to make the round trip with an ox team to and from either place. To those places he took his grain, bringing back supplies. There were still a number of Indians in the neighborhood, but they were not unfriendly and caused the family no trouble. Mr. and Mrs. August Krueger spent the remainder of their lives on that farm, where she died in 1915 and he in 1923, after a long and industrious career. They had ten children, two of whom died in infancy, the others still William, subject of this memoir: Amelia, Emma, Paul, Louise, living, are: William, subject of this memoir: Amelia, Emma, Paul, Louise, Ewald, Herman and Emil. Amelia is the wife of George Ferguson of Chippewa Falls; Emma is Mrs. George Cooper of Twin Falls, and Louise keeps house for her brother Herman. William Krueger spent his youthful days on the home farm, attending school until 15 years old. He then went into the logging camps to take charge of horses and work in the kitchens. Later he spent a summer in North Dakota and another summer in railroading on the "Soo" Line. The next two years of his life were spent in the iron mines at Virginia, Minn., after which he returned to the town of Grant, Dunn County, Wis., and did farm labor for a year. At the end of that time he began farming for himself, buying 160 acres of land in Section 16, some cf it being broken. Also there were several small shacks on the place. Immediately he began his improvements and the place soon began to assume a better appearance. The erection of buildings became a part of his necessary work, and in 1903 he built two hog houses, in 1904 a chicken house, in 1907 a granary, and in 1910 a barn 36 x 74 feet, with a full basement and modern equipment. In 1912 he built a machine shed 22 x 60 feet in ground plan, in 1914 an ice-house and woodshed, and in 1915, as a crowning achievement, he put up a good frame house of nine rooms, with running water, and hot water heat, and gas-lighted. Mr. Krueger now has 120 acres of his farm under cultivation and is carrying on farming and dairying with a good equipment of machinery. His herd of grade Shorthorn cattle numbers 24 head, and he also raises Shropshire sheep and Chester-White hogs. At one time he rendered the town service in the office of pathmaster. Mr. Krueger was married in Bloomer, Wis., April 11, 1899, to Anna Zellmer, who was born Feb. 3, 1881, daughter of Samuel and Wilhelmina (Kitzman) Zellmer, both now living in Germany. He and his wife have had six children, two of whom died in infancy. Two of the others are also now deceased, namely, Arthur The two living are Emma, who was born Dec. 29, 1907, and Richard, and Elsie. born June 11, 1914, both of whom are residing at home. The family affiliate religiously with the Lutheran Church.

Gabriel Ludvigson, a well known resident of the village of Elk Mound, who has a long and creditable record as farmer, public official, and a member of the postal service, was born at Waupun, Fond du Lac County, Wis., June 3, 1859. His parents, Hans and Helle (Johnson) Ludvigson, were both born in Norway, the father in Christiania, in June, 1819, and the mother at Frogner, March 10, 1817. After their marriage in their native land they came to the United States in 1853, and for eight years resided in Waupun, Wis. Then in 1861 they came to Dunn County, settling in the town of Elk Mound, and being accompanied by Louis Johnson, a brother of Mrs. Ludvigson. Mr. Ludvigson and Mr. Johnson each pre-empted 160 acres of land in Section 28, and together they bought 40 acres more, thus owning jointly 360 acres. Mr. Johnson, however, soon after enlisting for service in the Civil War and being killed in battle, Mr. Ludvigson took over the 160 acres that Mr. Johnson had pre-empted and turned over his own pre-emption claim to his son John, and also took over Mr. Johnson's 40-acre tract, which proceedings gave him a farm of 200 acres, or, rather, a tract of land that size, as it was all wild. In time he made a very fine farm of it, however, commencing with log buildings and gradually making improvements. Thus the rest of his life was oc-cupied, a period of some 19 years, as he died March 20, 1880. His wife Helle survived him until Nov. 13, 1887. They had been the parents of eight children: John, of Chetek, Barron County, where he is well known as a fisherman and guide; Louise, who married O. G. Tilleson but is now deceased; Johanna, who became the wife of A. H. Johnson, but is now a widow residing in Menomonie; Christian, deceased; Mary, wife of A. O. Strand of Menomonie; Ludvig, deceased; and Gabriel and Martin, both of Elk Mound village. Gabriel Ludvigson as a boy attended public school in Elk Mound and later in Menomonie. For the most part his youth was spent on the home farm assisting his father, except for six years, during which he was in the employ of the A. H. Johnson Mercantile Co. of Menomonie. After the father's death in 1880 he took up the management of the farm for his mother and was thus engaged until her death in 1887. In the spring of the following year he purchased the farm and set to work on a series of improvements calculated to make it a model of its kind. He erected a fine farm residence, a large dairy barn of 36 by 70 feet in ground plan, a cement-block silo of 16 x 30 feet, and all other necessary and desirable out-buildings, including a granary, corn crib, hog house, chicken house and garage. He also developed many more acres of land, the total result showing in what is now widely known and admired as "Oakland Farm, Registered," a piece of property in which he took a justifiable pride as being to a large extent due to his owns plans and labor. He also achieved some triumphs as a stock breeder. One of his heifer calves, known and registered as "Annie Moore's Pride of Oakland, No. 165,131," took several different prizes, including firsts, seconds and sweepstakes. She is still on the farm. In 1910 Mr. Ludvigson sold 80 acres of the farm to his son Charles and moved to the village of Elk Mound, where he has since made his home. On June 17, 1907, he had been appointed rural mail carrier on Route No. 4 and had driven this route while living on the farm and he has since continued to do so-a period of 18 years counting to June, 1925, during which he covered a total distance of 112,950 miles. For 43,316 miles of that distance he drove his white mare, Dolly, whose picture, with his own, was shown in November, 1917 in local print. With reference to her it was stated that up to September, that year, she had been on the job nine years and three months without any vacation, and was still nimble though 18 years old. She was then retired from service for a well earned rest. Mr. Ludvigson's route is 28 miles long. In 1919 Mr. Ludvigson bought back the farm from his son and moved back on to it, he and his wife residing there until the spring of 1924, when they again took up their residence in Elk Mound village, where they have a nice bungalow home. Mr. Ludvigson helped to organize the creamery in Elk Mound, and his service in public office includes ten years as town treasurer and ten years as chairman of the town board, he during the latter period being also a member of the county board. His own home life was begun 45 years ago, when he was married in 1880, to Mary L. Whitney, who was born in the town of Spring Brook, this county, June 16, 1859, daughter of James R. and Charlotte (Curtis) Whitney. Of this marriage 11 children have been born, namely: Charles, Nov. 20, 1880; Emma, Oct. 17, 1882; Johanna, Jan. 15, 1885; Lottie, May 10, 1886; James, June 22, 1888; Louis, Sept. 29, 1890; Grace, Jan. 31, 1893; Earl, Dec. 11, 1895; Laura, Oct. 6, 1897; George, Sept. 21, 1900, and John, Oct. 10, 1906. Of these Johanna died in her twelfth year, on Oct. 31, 1896, and James died in his fifteenth year on Sept. 13, 1902. The record of the others is briefly as follows: Charles, who lives in Barron County, married Bernice Stahlman and has eight children, James, Guy, La Rue, Gwendolin, Howard, Helen, Dean and Mary. Emma, who became the wife of Thomas Benson, died Sept. 9, 1923, leaving five children, Leone, Morris, Clara, Donald and Doris. Lottie is Mrs. Louis Stahlbusch of the town of Elk Mound and has five children, Marion James, Harold, Jeanette and Eleanor. Louis, now conducting the home farm, married Julia Erickson and has three children, Arthur, Geraldine and Roger. Grace, who is the wife of Leslie Hanson of Amherst, Wis., is the mother of four children, June, Genevieve, Eva Rae and Robert J. Earl enlisted, May 10, 1917, at Eau Claire in the Trubell Cavalry. He trained at Camp Douglas, Wis., and Camp Waco, Texas. On March 14, 1918, he was honorably discharged on account of heart trouble and returned home. He died Dec. 27, 1918. Laura is now Mrs. Harry Dahlstrom of Elk Mound. George was graduated from the Elk Mound High School and from the Eau Claire State Normal School in the class of 1923. He is now principal of schools at Deerbrook, Wis. On Jan. 3, 1918, he enlisted for service in the U.S. navy. He trained at Great Lakes, later at Hampton, Va. and in September, 1918, went overseas on the steamer Utah, being landed at Brest, The vessel on which he was did service on the coasts of France, England France. and Ireland. He returned to the United States on Dec. 25, 1918, and was discharged in January, 1919. John is now a senior in the Elk Mound High School.

Mr. and Mrs. Ludvigson attend the Evangelical church in Elk Mound village, the former being also a member of the Modern Woodmen camp and the latter of that of the Royal Neighbors. They are popular socially, having a wide circle of friends and acquaintances.

James R. Whitney, a pioneer of Dunn County now deceased, was born in Rochester, N. Y., March 14, 1832. It was in 1857, at the age of 25, that he came to Dunn County, Wisconsin, settling on land in the town of Spring Brook. In the following year, 1858, on September 25th, he was married to Charlotte Curtis and together in time they built up a comfortable farm home. During the most active period of his life Mr. Whitney also followed the trade of carpenter, which he had learned in the East, in later years confining his activities to farming, and to performing the duties of certain official positions to which he was elected from time to time, including that of town assessor. His war service covered the period from Sept. 3, 1864 to June 20, 1865, and as a private in Company K, Fifth Wis. Vol. Inf., he took part in the siege of Petersburg and also in the action at Sailor's Creek just before Lee's surrender at Appomattox. Many years after the war, on July 21, 1894, he became a member of William Evans' Post G. A. R. He attained the advanced age of 91 years, dying April 10, 1923. His wife Charlotte was born in Ohio, Oct. 1, 1842. Five children were born to them: Mary L., now Mrs. Gabriel Ludvigson; Frank, who died March 1, 1924; George, who died July 18, 1884; Fred S., who died Feb. 24, 1922, and Edwin of the town of Spring Brook.

William F. A. Lierman, who is engaged in farming in Section 31, town of Menomonie, has spent many active years in the two industries which have had most to do with the development and civilization of Dunn County, lumbering and farming. He was born in Jorssbenz, province of Pommern, Germany, Aug. 8, 1855, and grew to manhood in his native land, where he was engaged in farm labor until arriving at the age of 23 years. Then in 1883 he came to the United States, landing at Baltimore, whence he came west to the town of Waterloo, Jefferson County, Wis. There, however, he remained but a short time, having Menomonie as his ultimate destination, which place he reached soon afterwards. Here he entered the employ of The Knapp, Stout & Co. Company with whom he remained subsequently for nearly 20 years, or until the company ceased operations in this locality. During the first seven winters he worked in the woods, and at other times in and about the mills, the last few years as foreman in the rafting shop. It was in April, 1903 that Mr. Lierman turned from lumbering to farming, buying 80 acres of land in Section 8, town of Red Cedar, which place, however, he kept for only three years, at the end of that time selling it to his son Otto, and at the same time he purchased his present farm of 38 acres in Section 31, town of Menomonie. This is a small farm but well improved, Mr. Lierman having erected some new buildings and put the remaining old ones into good condition. He is a stockholder in the Hudson Road Creamery. Mr. Lierman was married Oct. 14, 1881, before he left his native land, to Anna Holzhueter, who was born in Germany, Aug. 5, 1859, daughter of Frederick and Fredericka (Paulzine) Lierman. He and his wife have had eight children, five of whom died in infancy. The three living are: Otto, born Jan. 16, 1885; Louise, born March 19, 1887; and Carl, born Oct. 23, 1895. Otto married Mary Eckert, who died April 12, 1924, leaving five children, Martin, Agnes, Milton, Grace and Esther. Louise, who is now Mrs. Edward Steinke of the town of Weston, has one Carl is working on the home farm. Mr. Lierman and family are child, Herbert. members of St. Paul's Lutheran Church in Menomonie.

Ernest B. Blanchard, proprietor of the old Blanchard farm in the town of Sherman, a farm that was started by his parents in the 60's, was born at Madison, Wis., March 19, 1854. His parents were Henry A. and Sarah J. (Emery) Blanchard, both natives of Massachusetts, and who were married at Worcester, that state. They came to Wisconsin in the early 50's and at Madison Henry A. Blanchard engaged in business as a boot and shoe merchant. What caused them to exchange the comforts of a comparatively civilized community for the wilds of Dunn County we are not told; it may be that Mr. Blanchard suffered business reverses, but, in any case, about the year 1861, they came here, first locating at Cedar Falls. They remained there but a short time, however, Mr. Blanchard soon homesteading 160 acres of wild land in Section 28, town of Sherman. It seems they had little in the way of effects to carry with them, but what they had was more than they could carry in their arms. They had no wagon, but they did have a rude cance of the type known as a dugout, being made from a pine log, and this they made supply the place of a wagon by loading their effects into it, and hitching to it a team of old oxen, which they had managed to procure and which dragged it over the ground to their new home, Mr. Blanchard having to chop out trees and brush in many places so they could make their way. It was truly a pioneer expedition and it required courage thus to cut themselves off from other human society, live hard and poorly for years and in case of sickness be practically out of reach of medical aid. As there were no buildings on the place, Mr. Blanchard built a small cabin as a temporary home, which he later replaced by a log house, and still later by a frame house, which proved a very comfortable dwelling and is the one now used by his son Ernest and family. He also erected other necessary buildings and made progress with the clearing of the land and its cultivation. During the early years they had to fetch their supplies from Cedar Falls or Menomonie, their farm being about eight miles from either place. They became prominent and highly respected members of the community and Mr. Blanchard for years served the town of Sherman as its treasurer. They were Protestants, Mr. Blanchard having been reared in the faith of the Baptist church and Mrs. Blanchard in that of the Methodist. His political creed was that cf the Republican party. The first to pass away was Mrs. Blanchard, in September, 1900. She was some years younger than her husband, who died in March, 1912, at the age of 93 years, having been born on March 11, They were the parents of two children, Ernest B. and Edith, the latter being 1819. now the wife of Charles Sedgwick of Barron County, Wisconsin. Ernest B. Blanchard acquired his elementary education in the district school, was subsequently graduated from the Menomonie High School and in 1873 from Beloit College. He then took a position with Helm & Hulbert, lumbermen of Clear Lake, Wis., as bookkeeper, also having to act as time keeper in their mill and as clerk in their store. He worked for them a year and five months, allowing his wages to accumulate; but this proved unfortunate, as the company failed and he had to take a note for the amount due him, which note proved worthless. Thus he practically had to make a new start in life, so he went to Rusk to learn telegraphy and act as station agent for the West Wisconsin Railway Company, now the "Omaha." He remained there but a short time, but in September, 1877, he returned and resumed his posi-tion there, remaining until the summer of 1880. Then he went to St. Paul, Minn., and entered the employ of the Gt. Northern Railway in the woodworking department of their shops. In the spring of 1885 they sent him to Glendive, Mont., to work as a switchman in the yards; then he was advanced to the train service and gradually worked his way up to the position of passenger conducter. In 1897 he returned to St. Paul, and took a position with the Swift Packing Co. of South St. Paul as "straw foreman," and he was there until Jan. 8, 1904, when he came back to the home farm in the town of Sherman, Dunn County, which he has since been engaged in operating. Mr. Blanchard was married at Webster City, Iowa, on Sept. 30, 1902, to Elizabeth Gardner, who was born in Franklin County, Nebr., May 6, 1878, daughter of William F. and Margaret (Sheffield) Gardner. He and his wife are the parents of two children: Margaret D., born Dec. 20, 1904, who is now Mrs. Leighton Ford of Ft. Snelling, Minn., and Irene, born Aug. 2, 1917. The family are affiliated religiously with the Baptist Church in Menomonie. Mr. Blanchard is a member of St. Paul Lodge No. 2, I. O. O. F. and is politically a Republican.

Olaf Sandvig, a former resident of the town of Red Cedar, in his day well known and respected, was born in Norway, Aug. 18, 1849. He was educated in his native land and came to America in 1870, locating first in Meridean, Dunn County, Wis., where he worked two years for the Meridean Lumber Co., in their mills during the summer months and in the woods in winter. In 1872 he came to the town of Red Cedar and bought 40 acres of wild land from Ole Torgerson, in Section 8, where he erected a log house, and proceeded to make a home and farm. Later he bought another 40-acre tract in Section 7, just across the road on the west, and on this latter, in 1902 he erected a modern set of buildings. Here he followed diversified farming until 1912, when he retired from active life, though he continued to reside on the farm until his death on Feb. 6, 1915. Himself one of the first settlers in this community, Mr. Sandvig assisted new settlers as they came in, also helped to build roads and in various ways cooperated with his fellow townsmen to improve local conditions. He endured all the hardships the pioneer had to go through but achieved success through patient and persistent industry. In so doing he was ably seconded by his good wife. She was born in Norway, Nov. 26, 1839, her maiden name being Mary Engbretson. It was in 1871 that she came to America, locating in Red Wing, Minn., where she remained for a year. Then she came to Menomonie, where she resided until her marriage. The issue of that marriage was five children: Christ O., now of Menomonie; Jeanetta, who is Mrs. Alfred Isaacson of the town of Menomonie; Christine, wife of Ole Clementson of the town of Red Cedar; Engbret, at home; and Elizabeth, who is Mrs. Carl Sockness. Mrs. Sandvig continued to live on the home farm until her death Aug. 11, 1924. It is now owned and operated by her son Engbret J., who was born on the farm Nov. 7, 1880, acquired his education in District School No. 4, and has always remained at home. He took over the farm in 1912 and has continued operations along the lines that his father followed, keeping grade Holstein cattle. He is a stockholder in the Downsville Cooperative Creamery, and both he and his mother are members of the Elk Creek Lutheran Church.

Henry Shellhouse, a pioneer of the town of Red Cedar, long since passed away, was born in Germany and came to this country with his parents in the late 40's, the family first locating in Warren County, Pennsylvania. There he grew up and in course of time was married to Dorothy Sipple, who, like himself, had been brought to America in the late 40's by her parents. In 1859 Mr. and Mrs. Henry Shellhouse came west to Dunn County, Wisconsin, making the latter part of their journey up the Mississippi River to Read's Landing, and then up the Chippewa to Rumsey's Landing, this county, where they were met by their parents, who had arrived in the previous year. Securing 80 acres of wild land in Section 5, town of Red Cedar, Henry Shellhouse built a log shack for the first dwelling of himself and wife on the land, and then sought and found employment with Knapp, Stout & Co., for whom he worked two years. After that he gave his entire time to clearing his land and building up a farm, continuing his labors until his death in 1884. His wife survived him over 30 years, passing away in the spring of 1915. Their children were: John (first), who died in infancy; John (second), now a prosperous farmer in the town of Red Cedar; Kate, who married Gottfreid Krueger and is now a widow residing in Menomonie; Peter, deceased; Lizzie, of Menomonie; Anna, deceased; Lena and Mary, both residing in Menomonie, and Emma, deceased.

John Shellhouse, proprietor of Elm Grove Farm in Section 27, town of Red Cedar, was born in Pittsfield, Warren County, Penn., Nov. 8, 1853, son of Henry and Dorothy (Sipple) Shellhouse. He is of the third generation in this county, his grandparents of both sides having arrived here in the latter 50's. He was brought up on his parents' farm in Section 25, town of Red Cedar and remained at home until 1887, when, at the age of 34 years, he began farming for himself, buying 120 acres of land in Section 27, in the same town. This land forms a part of his present farm, but he added 160 acres to it, so that it now contains 280 acres. He built it up into a fine piece of agricultural property, and was actively engaged on it until 1918, in which year he turned the active work over to his sons, but still acts as manager. It is well stocked with high grade Guernsey cattle, including 12 animals of pure breed. Mr. Shellhouse is a stockholder in the Rusk Cooperative Mr. Shellhouse was married in the town of Spring Brook, Nov. 18, Creamery. 1888, to Martha Kothlaw, who was born in Watertown, Wis., Sept. 5, 1858, daughter of Fred and Mary (Seitz) Kothlaw. After nearly 40 years of married life as a faithful wife and helpmate and a wise and kind mother, she passed away on March 21, 1923. Eight children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Shellhouse, namely: Henry,

HISTORY OF DUNN COUNTY

Aug. 24, 1889, now in Chicago; George, March 4, 1891, at home; John, Dec. 7, 1893, at home; Anna, June 14, 1895, now a teacher at Gilbert, Minn.; Reuben, Jan. 10, 1897, who is on the home farm; Alma, March 10, 1899, now a teacher at Gilbert, Minn.; Lawrence, June 17, 1901, on the home farm; and Clarence, Feb. 24, 1903, also with his father on the home farm. All the children have been given a good education. The family are members of the First Evangelical Church at Menomonie.

Nicholas Jeatran, proprietor of the Broadway Cafe, in the city of Menomonie, was born in Greece, Dec. 22, 1886, son of Dionysios and Lefko (Papasperu) Jeatran. As a boy he attended school in his native land, being graduated from the high school at the age of 17 years. Then in the spring of 1903 he came to the United States and for a short time after his arrival lived in Chicago. From the big city he went to Chicago Heights, where he was employed by the Hamilton Piano Co. for two His next move was to Steger, Ill., where until December, 1911, he worked years. for the Steger Piano Co. In the following spring he came to Menomonie, Wis., with Henry G. Johnson, who became superintendent for the Segestrom Piano Co., Mr. Jeatran obtaining the position of foreman, which he retained until September, It was in that year that he entered into business for himself, buying the 1915 Olympia Confectionary store at 210 Main Street, which he greatly improved, remodeling the interior and replacing the old fixtures with others of more modern style and greater utility. The money he thus spent returned to him many times over, it becoming one of the best equipped candy stores of its size in the state. This place in July, 1924, he turned over to his brothers, Pete and Ted. In Sept., 1919, Mr. Jeatran leased the Broadway Cafe, and after installing the most modern cafe fixtures, he opened up for business there on Feb. 14, 1920 and has since built up a good trade. He has taken rank among the substantial business men of the sity and has proved himself willing to do his part in forwarding the general interests of the community. In July, 1924, after turning over his confectionary store to his brothers he put a full line of confectionary and home-made candies in his cafe; he also installed a full equipment of machinery for the manufacture of ice cream. He is a member of the Commercial Club, Rotary Club, Country Club and the K. of P. Lodge and the D. O. K. K. In 1919 he brought his parents to Menomonie, and also his two brothers, giving to each of the latter a quarter interest in his business. Mr. Jeatran was married Oct. 25, 1912, in Chicago, to Demetra Peta, and he and his wife are the parents of two children, Sophia and Thea. The family home is a fine residence at No. 1000 Wilson Avenue.

Herman H. Forster, president of the Forster & Sons Foundry Co., Inc., of Menomonie, is a man who has gone far with very limited opportunities and, as the result of hard work, determination, and natural ability, now finds himself at the head of an important industry. He was born in Prussia, Germany, April 22, 1848, son of Henry and Maria (Reisner) Forster, the parents also being natives of Prussia. They came to the United States in 1852, locating at Menomonee Falls, Waukesha County, Wis., where they followed farming for the remainder of their lives. Herman H. attended school for but two weeks in his life, having to begin work on the farm at an early age, but in those two weeks he showed his capability and made an acquaintance with reading, writing and figures that he subsequently improved. After remaining at home until he was 19 years old he went to Chippewa Falls, where he learned the trades of carpenter and builder, which he followed in Chippewa County for about five years and later in Dunn County for 12 years. He then turned his attention to pattern and model making in which line of work he spent several years, thus gradually working up to his present business, which he established in For five years it was conducted under the firm name of Forster & Son, 1894. which was then changed to the Aetna Engine Works. On Jan. 1, 1922, the concern was incorporated as the Forster Foundry Co., with Herman H. Forster as president; Samuel H. Forster as vice president and manager, and George B. Forster as secretary and treasurer. A further account of the business and plant may be found in Chapter XIV of this volume. The biographical interest lies chiefly in Mr. Forster's personality, which surmounted such early difficulties to reach a mark which many men of college education have failed to attain. In this sense Mr. Forster is both self made and well made, and occupies a commanding position in the business and social world. He was married Oct. 18, 1872, to Caroline Schmidt, born in Westphalen, Germany, July 24, 1853. They have seen a family grow up around them consisting of ten children all but one of whom are now living, and that one-a daughter-grew up, married, and attained the age of 40 years before death called her. The record in brief is as follows: Hattie, born Oct. 10, 1873, is now the wife of Adolph Neuser of Seattle, Wash., and the mother of two children, Charles and Gertrude. William H., born Aug. 12, 1875, and now residing in Dallas, Texas, married Annabelle Gasaway. Lulu, born Oct. 7, 1878, is the one who has passed away. She married Edward Woods, and died Feb. 14, 1919, leaving two children. Hubert and Ethel. Samuel H., born April 6, 1880, and who is now vice president of the Forster Foundry Co., married Hannah Blake and they reside in Menomonie. Amelia E., born Aug. 24, 1882, is now Mrs. Wilfred Dumont of Madison, Wis., and the mother of one child, Dorothy. Caroline M. J., born Oct. 31, 1884, is the wife of William G. Atkins of Madison and has one child, William. Esther G. E., born March 20, 1887, is Mrs. Irving D. Fisher of Menomonie. Edna J., born March 22, 1890, is the wife of George F. Jockim and the mother of a daughter, Mary Jane. Florence R. L., born July 18, 1892, is the wife of Edward Hall of Minneapolis. George B., born March 9, 1896, is secretary and treasurer of the Forster Foundry Co., as already mentioned. He married Clara Flatten and has one child, Luverne. Mr. Forster and his family are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

William Edgar Van Brunt, who has been established for some ten or 11 years in the village of Colfax as a stock buyer, and is a prominent citizen of this place, was born in the town of Maxwell, Buffalo County, Wis., July 30, 1862, son of C. C. and Zillah (Van Gelter) Van Brunt. The father was a native of New York State and the mother of New Jersey. They were married in the East and came west in 1857, settling at once in Buffalo County, Wisconsin, where they resided until 1897. Their subsequent home was in Durand, Wis., where the father died Feb. 22, 1912, and the mother on July 30, the same year. They had but two children. Charles and William. Charles, who lives in Durand, married Olive J. Wingt, and they have been the parents of seven children, namely, Edward, Zillah, Annabelle, Philip (deceased), Cyrus, Richard and Grace. William Edgar Van Brunt acquired the elements of knowledge in a district school in Buffalo County, and was a pupil for one year in the River Falls Normal School. Leaving home in September, 1884, he came to Dunn County and bought an improved 200-acre farm in Section 36, town of Sand Creek, which he conducted subsequently for 17 years. He then rented it out and moved to the village of Sand Creek, where he made his home for nine years, during which time he was engaged in buying stock. It was in 1913 that he came to Colfax, where he has continued in the same business up to the present time. He is a stockholder in the Peoples State Bank of Colfax and in the Farmers' store at Bloomer. He was one of the organizers of the Colfax Shipping Association, and since 1918 has been its manager. In 1923 this Association shipped 108 carloads of stock from Colfax. Mr. Van Brunt has also taken a prominent part in the affairs of local government. For 16 years he was chairman of the town board of Sand Creek, and therefore a member of the county board, besides serving four years as school clerk of his district. He also served three years as supervisor of Colfax. His fraternal affiliations are with the Modern Woodmen of America. On Jan. 1, 1884 Mr. Van Brunt was married, at North Branch, Buffalo County, Wis., to Phoebe Winget, who was born July 19, 1865, daughter of Levi and Phoebe (Rox) Her father was a native of Ohio and her mother of New York State. Winget. Married in the East, they came west to Wisconsin in 1865, settling near North Branch, where Mrs. Phoebe Winget died in 1868. Mr. Winget subsequently married Rebecca Fave, and they resided on his farm at North Branch until 1888, when they moved to Dunn County, buying a small farm or tract of land near Knapp, which place was their home for the remainder of their lives. There Mrs. Winget died in 1909 and Mr. Winget in 1918. He had six children, five of whom were by his first wife, namely: Sarah, who married a Mr. Snyder and is now a widow residing at Knapp; Olive, wife of Charles Van Brunt of Durand; Charles, of Durand; Otto, deceased; Phoebe, now Mrs. William E. Van Brunt, and Andrew, who lives in California. The children of Mr. and Mrs. William E. Van Brunt are also six in number, and are as follows: Edna M., born May 11, 1887, married Robert Pecore of Barron County, Wis., and has two children, Hazel and Curtis. Addie, born Sept. 8, 1889, is the wife of Daniel O'Brien of Milwaukee and has three children, Vernon, Ellen and Catherine. Fannie, born July 12, 1895, and who married Glenn Madison, died Jan. 16, 1918. Russell, born July 1, 1899, died July 13, 1903. Roy, born Feb. 15, 1903, is now a student in Lawrence College, at Appleton, Wis. Alta was born Feb. 17, 1908, and is still residing at home.

Soren Jacobson, one of those hardy developers of the soil, who, though not pioneers of Dunn County in the sense of having been among its earliest settlers, deserve the name for having gone through similar experiences in helping to transform the wilderness into a region of fruitful farms, was a native of Denmark, where he grew to manhood and married Louise Kaibel. For some years after his marriage he remained in Denmark, but, seeing no prospect of ever gaining a competence there, he and his wife at last resolved to emigrate to America, which they did in 1882, settling at Diamond Bluff, Pierce County, Wis., where they remained for about a year and a half. At the end of that time they came to Dunn County, and bought a tract of wild land in Section 21, town of Dunn, where they set to work to build up a home and farm. A space had to be cleared on which to build a log house, and then came years of strenuous labor which only the strong could stand, and they only under the stimulus of hope for a better future and the joy of possession. Patience and hard work in time gained for them the coveted prize, and they found themselves the owners of a fine and well improved farm, both as to land and build-After a 30 years' residence on the place, Mr. Jacobson passed away on Oct. 6, 1912, his wife survived him less than two years, dying Sept. 22, 1914. They were the parents of four children: Jacob C., now manager for the La Pointe Lumber Co. at Rusk; Andrew, who owns and operates the home farm; Mary, who is Mrs. Jacob J. Emmet of Menomonie, and Anna, wife of J. B. Jensen of Downsville.

Andrew Jacobson, a prosperous farmer and respected citizen of the town of Dunn, was born in Denmark, June 14, 1870, son of Soren and Louise (Kaibel) Jacobson. He attended school in his native land and also in the town of Dunn after he had accompanied his parents to this country in 1882. As a youth growing stronger every year, he became more and more useful to his father on the farm and did his part in breaking and developing the land and in other pioneer work. Thus was his path in life plainly marked out for him and he has since followed where it As time went on his father, growing old, turned greater responsibilities over to led. him until he became the manager of the farm. As such he worked to bring it up to modern requirements and all the present buildings were erected by him. In October, 1904, he became owner of the property, the land including $137\frac{1}{4}$ acres. Since then he has remodeled his house and barn and put up a silo and several other buildings, showing a spirit of modern enterprise that has brought him a suitable reward. The rich soil, responding to the labor bestowed upon it, has yielded bountiful crops, and in situation, appearance and capability of development the farm is one of the most desirable in the town of Dunn. Mr. Jacobson is engaged in general agriculture along modern lines. He has a good herd of cattle, leaning toward the Guernsey strain, and he is a stockholder in the Downsville Cooperative Creamery. He is now serving as clerk of School District No. 2, is fraternally affiliated with the Modern Woodmen of America, and is secretary of the Varney Creek Lutheran Congregation. Mr. Jacobson was married July 28, 1902, to Anna Madson, who was born in Pierce County, Wis., July 28, 1882. He and his wife are the parents of three children: Georgia Andrea, born Feb. 27, 1905; Julius Christian, born June 25, 1910, and Gerald Hansal, born Aug. 14, 1912.

William Schutte, Sr., Fourteen years have passed away since local journals recorded the passing of the honored citizen whose name begins this memoir. The story of his life, then sketched in obituary form, was, in its larger outlines, well known to every resident of Menomonie old enough and intelligent enough to feel a personal interest in local history. There were few who did not know him, either personally or by reputation, and by all who knew him he was regarded as what he was-one of the main pillars of the commercial edifice of this community, and a man beloved by many and respected by all. To have won such a position, having started with no greater initial advantages than those possessed by the average immigrant from foreign shores, gives evidence of a character composed of high manly qualities, and a moral fibre capable of resisting the temptations that have wrecked many a bright and promising career. William Schutte was born in Prussia, Germany, Jan. 24, 1841, and came to this country in 1853 as a boy of 12 years. After a two years' residence in Kane County, Illinois, he moved to Dunn County, Wis., where he made his home for the rest of his life. His first employment here was on a farm east of Menomonie. In his work for others he showed that steadiness of application and whole-hearted devotion to the task at hand that won their confidence and paved the way for his advancement to positions of greater responsibility. In 1865 he became manager of the Moore farm of 2,500 acres for Knapp, Stout & Co., and so remained for four years. It was in 1869 that he deserted the agriculture field for the more congenial one of city business life, forming a partnership with Fred Ursinus which was continued until 1873. He then became associated with Albert Quilling and the firm of Schutte & Quilling was formed, beginning operations in a small way in the mercantile and banking business, but gradually and steadily increasing the volume of their transactions until the concern was numbered among the largest and most important in the county. This result was accomplished by constant and unswerving attention to every detail by Mr. Schutte and his partner, coupled with an unvarying integrity that inspired confidence and assured credit whenever needed. Mr. Schutte's business career extended over a period of nearly 40 years, giving him a wide acquaintance in this part of the state, and wherever he became known his personal character proved an asset to his firm. But at last his health began to fail, and he knew that he must soon relinquish active business life and entrust the exacting work of the store and office to others. The large business which he had been so largely instrumental in building was accordingly changed from a partnership to a corporation, Mr. Schutte feeling that by this change the value of his labor would be best preserved and the work continued without a break after his retirement and death. It was two years later when the Toward the end of January, 1909, the disease from which he suffered end came. took a critical turn, and at 1:30 o'clock on Saturday morning, Feb. 27th, of that year, he passed away at his home in Menomonie. It was one of the events that mark the history of a community, the turning of a page in the book of life. Hundreds of friends and acquaintances, including the members of his family, paid him the last honors, and there now remains of William Schutte, Sr., but the memory and the work. A part of that work, not hitherto mentioned, was that concerned with public affairs, in which he always took a deep interest. He served his ward as alderman and was twice elected mayor of Mencmonie, in 1882 and 1883. He was at one time president of the Dunn County Old Settlers' Association, an organization in which he tcok great pride, for it had to do with Dunn County and the friends he knew best. When the Mencmonie Advancement Association was formed he was elected president. As already intimated, Mr. Schutte loved Dunn County and was ever ready to voice its praise. He called it the best county in the state and nation, and he was thoroughly sincere in his statement. No place was dearer to him than the spot that had been his home for so many years, in fact for all the best part of his life. William Schutte was married at Iron Creek, in the town of Spring Brook, Dunn County, Wis., on Sept. 15, 1861, to Mary Reinecke, who was born in Prussia, Germany, Dec. 21, 1842, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joachim Reincke. The mother having died in Germany, the father with two sons, Christ and John, and three daughters, Dora, Caroline and Mary, emigrated to America in the fall of 1858, coming to Dunn County, Wisconsin. Of the members of this family it may be said that Christ and John are both deceased; Dora married Fred Beguhn; and Caroline became the wife of Fred Wasser and is now living in Tacoma, Wash. Mary, as already stated, became the wife of William Schutte. This union was a happy one and lasted for over 47 years, or until Mr. Schutte's death. She survived him until April 16, 1921, when she passed away at her home in Menomonie, aged 78 years, three months and 25 days. Mr. and Mrs. William Schutte had four children: William, Jr., now a well known resident of Menomonie; Ida, who is the wife of Anton Pieper of Menomonie, Wis.; and a son, Karl, and an infant daughter who died many years ago. Mrs. Schutte, like her husband, was an interested member of the Dunn County Old Settlers' Association, which they joined early, and she was also a faithful and honored member of St. Paul's Evangelical Lutheran Church.

John J. Roen, well known in the industrial circles of the city of Menomonie, and who is also active in church matters, was born in Norway, Oct. 25, 1869, son of Hans and Marit (Roen) Roen. The family, coming to the United States in 1882, located at once in Menomonie, Hans Roen entering the employ of The Knapp, Stout & Co. Company, in which he remained for several years. bought an improved farm in the town of Mrnomonie and took up agricultural work, conducting it until 1903, when he sold it, he and his wife retiring from active work and resuming their residence in Menomonie. He died in 1914, having survived his wife, who passed away in 1903. They had a good sized family of 11 children, four of whom died in infancy in their native land, seven accompanying their parents to America. Of these seven, however, three died within a month after their arrival in this country, two of black diphtheria and one of pneumonia. The seven were: Johan H., now living in Menomonie; Peter, deceased; John J., of Menomonie; Hans, of Menomonie; and Lars, Beret and Ingeborg, who are deceased. John J. Roen was 12 years old when he arrived in this country, and in the local schools he acquired a knowledge of English. He was still quite young when he started work for The Knapp, Stout & Co. Company. After remaining for some time in their employ he went into business as a photographer and was thus occupied for three years, during one year of which time he was in partnership with J. E. In 1890 he went to Duluth, Minn., and in that city learned the carpenter's trade, which he followed there for three years. He then returned to Menomonie, where he has since followed the same trade. For seven years he was with J. S. Govin and for the past 15 years has been in the employ of J. S. Bunker, one of the leading contractors of Menomonie, and he is recognized as a skillful and practical carpenter in all branches of the trade. In 1906 he built his own residence at 1314 Second Street West. He is a member of the carpenters' union, also of the orders of Beavers, the Modern Woodmen of America and the Odd Fellows. He was for 14 years a member of the Menomonie Fire Department, for several years of that time being assistant foreman of Hook and Ladder Company No. 2. A member also of the Norwegian Lutheran Church, he is an active worker in it and superintendent of the Sunday school. Mr. Roen was married Jan. 21, 1890, to Anna Hugdahl, who was born in Norway, Jan. 4, 1866. He and his wife have had nine children, namely: Helmer, Rudolph, Ida, Arthur, Ida B., Mabel, Jennie, Alma and Esther, of whom the first Ida, born April 28, 1895, died Sept. 14, 1898. The record of the others is briefly as follows: Helmer, born in Duluth, Minn., May 18, 1891, is now a druggist in Eau Claire. He married Eva Johnson and has two children, Lawrence and John. Rudolph, born in Duluth, Feb. 28, 1893, and who is a resident of Menomonie, married Elizabeth Mickelbook and has had three children, Arline, Ruth (deceased) and Howard. Arthur, born July 25, 1897, is now a student in the Stout Institute. He has a World War military record. Ida B., born Jan. 24, 1900, is living at home. Mabel, born May 31, 1902, and Jennie, born July 15, 1904, are telephone operators. Alma, born Nov. 7, 1906, is a pupil in the high school, and Esther, born March 9, 1911, is attending the grade school. The surviving children all give promise of a useful manhood or womanhood.

Hans Johnson, who owns and operates a 96-acre farm in Section 21, town of Grant, on which he has lived for many years, was born in Molselvin, in the northern part of Norway, Jan. 8, 1860, son of John and his wife, whose maiden name was Hannah Hanson. The father was a farm laborer and also at times a fisherman. He died in Norway and his wife later married Carl Anderson and in 1872 came to the United States and to Dunn County, Wisconsin, she and her husband taking a farm in the town of Grant, where they were engaged in farming until he died. She is still living there. By her second husband, Mr. Anderson, she had six children, of whom there are three now living: Herman, of Oregon; and Barentina and Caroline on the home farm. Another son, Anton, is dead, as also is a daughter, Bertha, who was the wife of Ingvald Balsted of Barron, Wis. Hans Johnson spent the first 12 years of his life in his native land, where he attended school, and then came to America with his mother, step-father, and other members of the family. He lived at home on the Anderson farm, which he helped to cultivate, until he was 20 years old, after which for some years he worked during the summers in a foundry in Eau Claire, and during the winters in the woods. In 1893 Mr. Johnson moved on to 80 acres of land in Section 21, town of Grant, that he had previously bought and began farming. A few acres of it had been broken but there were no buildings, and he therefore built a frame house and barn, and later bought 80 acres more land, which gave him a farm of 160 acres, but having since sold 64 acres, he has 96 left, with 75 under the plow, the balance being in oak timber and pasture. He carries on general farming and dairying, having 30 head of Durham and Holstein cattle, with a pure bred sire, and raises Poland-China hogs. In 1922 his barn and some out-buildings were destroyed by a cyclone, but he has rebuilt them, and has improved or rebuilt practically all his other buildings. He has shown himself energetic and enterprising, and what he has got he has made himself, with the assistance of his good wife. Mr. Johnson was married in the town of Grant, July 20, 1890, to Carrie G. Halvorson, who was born Sept. 26, 1865, daughter of Jens and Ingeborg (Tangan) Halvorson, the parents being natives of Norwav and early settlers in Dunn County, where both died. Mr. and Mrs. Johnson have been the parents of eight children, of whom those living are: Inga J., Hazel A., Helmer C., Nora M., Anton C., Clara A. and Hartvig W. Inga J. is the wife of Ole Foss of the town of Grant, and has four children, Kamit, Thelma, Orville J. and Christie A. The one deceased is Hartvig. The family are affiliated religiously with the Lutheran Church.

Louis S. Larson, a representative farmer of the town of Elk Mound, was born in Frederickstad, Norway, Feb. 16, 1868. His parents were Anton and Helen. (Simonson) Larson, who are both now deceased. Louis S. attended school in his native land and remained there until he was 16 years old. Then in 1884 he came to the United States and to Eau Claire, Wisconsin. Entering the ranks of workers in the lumber industry, for 13 years he was employed in the mills during the summers and in logging camps during the winters. At the end of that period he found employment in the paper-mill at Eau Claire and for 23 years subsequently remained so. Then in 1920 he began farming in Dunn County, on an 80 acre farm in Section 14, town of Elk Mound formerly owned by Anders Hanson, his father-in-law. Since taking hold of this place he has made decided improvements on it, having built a basement barn of 34 x 50 feet with patent equipment; also a machine-shed and chicken house, shingled the residence, put foundations under the woodshed and granary, and refenced the farm, which is known as Hillside View Farm, and is a fine piece of property. Mr. Larson married Emma Hanson, who was born in Elk Mound, Dunn County, July 18, 1874, the only child of Anders and Anna Hanson. He and his wife are the parents of three children: Alvin Adolph, born March 31, 1894; Agnes Helen, Dec. 10, 1896, and Marget Louise, Sept. 23, 1900. Alvin Adolph for several years has been recording clerk at the state prison at Waupon. In February, 1921, he was united in marriage with Eva Kortz. Agnes Helen is now Mrs. B. L. Shaw of Eau Claire, her husband being a fireman on the "Omaha" Railroad. She is the mother of two children, Margaret Constance and Elaine Junita. Marget Louise is the wife of Fred Haberberg, an auto mechanic in Minneapolis.

Anders Hanson, an early settler in the town of Elk Mound, who passed away not long ago, was born in Norway, Nov. 19, 1845. It was in the year 1867 that he came to the United States and to Dunn County, Wisconsin, settling in the town of Elk Mound and taking a homestead of 40 acres in Section 14. This he proved up clearing and breaking the land, and after he had got it into a pretty fair state of development, he bought 40 acres adjoining, and in time had a good 80-acre farm. He was married Dec. 22, 1873, to Mrs. Anna Sorenson, widow of Engebreth Sorenson, at which time he took charge of the farm left to her by her first husband in Section 14, which he conducted until 1893. He and his wife then moved to his own farm, where they lived many years, she dying there on Nov. 10, 1919, at the venerable age of 92 years, having been born on Nov. 5, 1827. He survived her several years, dying Jan. 25, 1922. There was one child of their marriage, Emma, now Mrs. Louis S. Larson, who is the owner of the farm in Section 14, on which she and her husband reside. It is worthy of repetition here, though elsewhere told in this volume, that when Mrs. Anders Hanson, then Mrs. Engebreth Sorenson, came in 1859 from Minnesota to Dunn County, Wisconsin, and the town of Elk Mound, she walked all the way driving a cow and calf before her and carrying a nine months old baby in her arms. Such were the tasks which sometimes had to be undertaken by pioneer women and as a rule like the mark there is the start.

by pioneer women, and, as a rule, like the men, they were found equal to them. Fred W. Bushendorf, one of the sturdy practical farmers who have built up the agricultural interests of the town of Elk Mound, was born on the farm on which he now lives, on June 21, 1862, son of William and Catherine (Sipple) Bushendorf. The parents were natives of Germany, the father born March 13, 1833, and the mother March 26, 1836. They came to America when young and were married in Pennsylvania. In 1860 they came to Dunn County, Wisconsin, and took 160 acres of government land in Section 36, town of Elk Mound, the land being wild and covered with heavy brush, in which at times deer roved in considerable numbers. Mr. Bushendorf made a clearing, erected log buildings and began the development of a farm, clearing, grubbing and breaking the land. His work was interrupted for a while toward the latter part of the Civil War period when he was drafted for military service, serving in Company E, Third Wisconsin Infantry until the close of the war. He then returned home and resumed work on his farm, of which in time he cleared and broke 140 acres. He also replaced the log cabin with a fine brick residence and bought 15 acres more land, continuing his improvements by building an addition to the house. Until 1888 he carried on general farming and then retired, and subsequently they made their home in the said addition to the residence, where William Bushendorf died May 8, 1922. His wife is still living. They were the parents of ten children: Martha, now Mrs. William Primm of Eau Claire; Henry of the town of Wheaton, Chippewa County; Fred W., subject of this sketch; Caroline, who is Mrs. George Scheibe of Eau Claire; Katie, deceased; Mary, now Mrs. George Haag of the town of Spring Brook; Emma, who is Mrs. Martin Werner of the town of Union, Eau Claire County; Amanda, now Mrs. Louis Haag of Eau Claire; John, of the town of Union, Eau Claire County, and Robert of the town of Wheaton Chippewa County. Fred W. Bushendorf as a boy attended district school and subsequently continued to live with his parents and help his father on the home farm. In 1888 he bought it and has since given his whole attention to its improvement, with such good success that it is now one of the best farms in the town of Elk Mound. In 1901 Mr. Bushendorf built a barn of 44 by 80 feet, with full basement, cement floor and mangers, supplied with patent stanchions and drinking cups, and electrically lighted. The farm is conveniently situated and is stocked with grade Holstein cattle, the herd containing a pure bred sire, and with Poland-China hogs, in addition to poultry. Mr. Bushendorf is a stockholder in the cooperative creamery at Elk Mound. He was married Dec. 27, 1897, to Mary Haag, who was born at Cadott, Wis., Jan. 3, 1875. He and his wife have been the parents of seven children: William, born Sept. 26, 1899, now on the home farm; Melvina, born March 21, 1901, now Mrs. Edward Goetz of the town of Spring Brook; Colista, born Dec. 24, 1902, who is living on the home farm; Ezra, born Oct. 2, 1905, whose earthly span of life was little over a week, as he died October 10; Gladys, born July 21, 1908, who died March 27, 1909; Stanley, born March 10, 1910; and Alice, born March 17, 1912. The family attend the Methodist Episcopal Church, Mr. Bushendorf being a member of the board of trustees of the Spring Brook congregation.

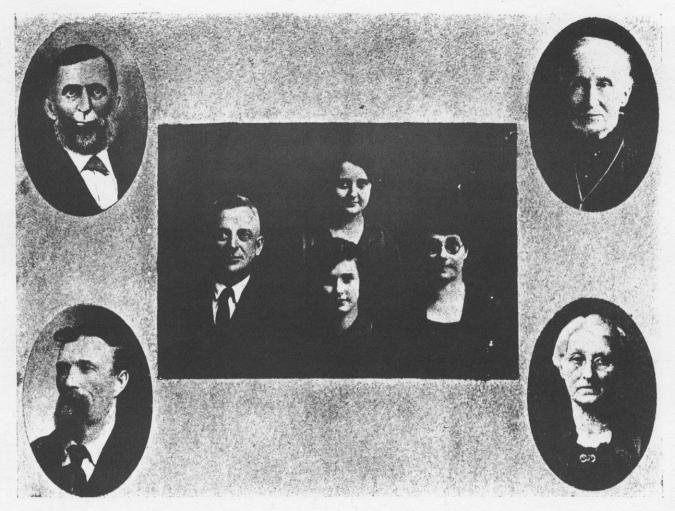

James Austin, a veteran merchant of Knapp, Dunn County, but who is now deceased, was born in Caintown, Ontario, Canada, July 15, 1840. On Nov. 11, 1880, he was united in marriage with Sarah E. Lee, and in the same year came with his wife to St. Croix County, and bought property southwest of the village of Wilson, where they remained for a year. It was then that they came to Knapp, Dunn County, which had been first settled about ten years before, and purchased a meat market, which he conducted for two years, at the end of that time seiling out to P. L. Decker. In the meanwhile he had acquired some timber in the vicinity of Knapp, and began logging it, an occupation that kept him employed for some In 1888 he moved with his family to North St. Paul, Minn., where for eight vears. months he was engaged in the meat business, after which he and they returned to Knapp, where they remained until the fall of 1889. Their next move was to Glenwood City, St. Croix County, Wis., where Mr. Austin bought a mercantile business, which he conducted for three years. Then he again returned to Knapp, opening a store in the I. O. O. F. building, where he remained until 1907, in which year he remained until 1907, in which year he purchased from the Hall Estate, Inc., the building in which he had his store for the last eight or nine years of his life. His death occurred on April 28, 1916. Mr. Austin was a successful merchant and a highly respected citizen. He was a charter member of John H. Knapp Lodge No. 238, F. & A. M., of Knapp, having transferred his membership here from Canada, where he had joined the order in 1871. Since 1887, he had also been a member of the lodge of Modern Woodmen of America. Mr. Austin was survived by his wife and his daughter Laura, now Mrs. M. H. Schlosser, of Knapp, with whom Mrs. Austin resides.

Matthew H. Schlosser, postmaster of Knapp, Dunn County, was born in Eau Claire, Wis., Dec. 18, 1889, son of Mathew and Gerhardine (Radensleben) He acquired his education in Eau Claire, attending the grade and high Schlosser. schools, and also the Union Business College. Among the studies to which he devoted close attention was telegraphy, and in 1908 he accepted a position with the Omaha railroad at Truman, Minn. and various other places. After being employed for about nine months, he became agent at Radisson, Wis., and subsequently did relief work in various places. On Sept. 22, 1909, he came to Knapp as agent for the same road, and continued as such until July, 1911, when he became manager of the James Austin store in Knapp, having in the previous month (on June 17) been united in marriage with Laura Austin, daughter of James and Sarah (Lee) Austin. He held that position until Mr. Austin's death in 1916. In Minneapolis, on June 14, 1917, he entered the United States service, being assigned to the 22d Field Battalion. He was later transferred to the 309th Field Signal Battalion and sent to Camp Zachary Taylor at Louisville, Ky., where he remained until March, 1918. From there he went to Camp Vail, N. J., and was there assigned to the radio intelligence service, T. P. S. After going overseas he attended the radio signal school at Langres, France, and was then sent to the front for listening service. He saw action in the St. Mihiel and Argonne drives, and after the armistice was transferred to the 12th Service Company, being engaged in telephone and telegraph service in Luxemburg and Germany, for six months. He returned to the United States, June 9, 1919, and was discharged on the sixteenth of the same month at Camp Lee, Virginia. On his return home Mr. Schlosser entered the service of the Knapp Telephone Company as manager and "trouble man," and held that position until he was appointed postmaster of Knapp on Dec. 22, 1921. He received his commission Jan. 27, 1922. He has served as a member of the village council and was clerk of the school board before being appointed postmaster. A member of the Masonic order, he belongs to the blue lodge in Knapp and to the chapter in Menomonie, and is also a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, belonging to the Knapp lodge. He and his wife are the parents of one child, Matthew A., who was born Aug. 19, 1913.

Harvey M. Steves, now living retired in Menomonie after an agricultural career of some 58 years or more, chiefly in Dunn County, was born in Louisville in the town of Dunn, this county, April 7, 1858, son of Henry and Caroline (Thatcher) Steves, who are elsewhere mentioned in this volume. He was educated in the district school in Dunn County, also attending public school in Eau Claire, and was engaged in assisting his father on the home farm until he was 24 years old. 1882 he went to South Dakota, where he bought a quarter section of land. on which he made some improvements, selling it three years after its purchase. Then in 1885 he returned to Dunn County and hought 80 acres of partly improved land in the town of Red Cedar, which place was destined to be his home for over 30 years, for he there followed diversified farming until 1916, in the meanwhile continuing to improve the place, which, when he was ready to retire, which he did in that year, was a very good farm. On his retirement he sold it and, moving to Menomonie, bought a nice residence in bungalow style of architecture at No. 1810 Sixth Street, where he has since made his home. Although Mr. Steves never served in town or other office, he took a keen interest in governmental affairs and always before an election worked hard for the success of those whom he regarded as the best candidates, and his intelligent judgment and personal efforts in political matters were fully appreciated by his fellow townsmen. Mr. Steves was first married on Christmas Day of the year 1882, at Ringwood, a village in McHenry County, Illinois, some 55 miles northwest of Chicago, his bride being Miss Jennie Vasey, daughter of John and Ann Vasey. The parents, natives of England, were early settlers in Ringwood, Ill., but have both passed away. Their daughter Jennie, the first Mrs. Harvey M. Steves, has followed them to the other world, having died in 1913. She had borne her husband five children: Glenn H., now of San Francisco; Earl E. J., of Fremont, Nebr.; Roy, who is working in Menomonie, Wis.; and Verne D. and Harold M., both of whom reside near San Francisco. On Dec. 19, 1919, Mr. Steves was married at Louisville, Dunn County, Wis., to Mrs. Hattie Smith, widow of George W. Smith of this county. She was born in New York State, Feb. 22, 1861, daughter of Thomas and Eliza (Ryder) Lawrence, who were natives of that state and who came west in 1861 directly to Dunn County, or as directly as they could, probably by train to Galena, Ill., and then up the Mississippi and Chippewa rivers by boat, as they landed at Dunnville, settling, however, at Downsville, where Mrs. Steves' mother died some 20 years later, in April, 1881. Mr. Lawrence subsequently remarried and spent the remainder of his life in Eau Claire. Their daughter Hattie acquired an education in the Downsville school, and on Aug. 22, 1880, became the bride of George W. Smith, who for a number of years followed the trade of saw filer in the mills, subsequently becoming a farmer. After a wedded life of 33 years, he died Oct. 22, 1913, having been the father of two children: Cora, now deceased, and Eula, who is the wife of Dr. C. F. Kyle of Menomonie. Of Mr. Steves' second union there are no children.

Oscar Nichols, a well known and respected citizen of the town of Red Cedar, where for many years-though not continuously-he has been successfully engaged in agricultural pursuits, was born March 12, 1870, on the farm he is now operating, son of Henry and Diantha (Owen) Nichols. The parents were natives of New York, where they were reared and married, coming west to Wisconsin in 1864, and settling in Dunn County. For about two years Henry Nichols worked in the mill at Cedar Falls and then in 1866 he bought 130 acres of wild land in Sections 4 and 9, town of Red Cedar, built on it a small frame house and barn, and started to build up a farm. Nineteen years later, in 1885, his labors were terminated by his death, after which his wife continued to operate the farm with the aid of her sons until 1891, when she rented it tc her son Öscar, who later purchased it. Mrs. Diantha Nichols died July 2, 1917. She and her husband were the parents of seven children, three of whom are now living, namely: Sarah, now Mrs. William Merritt of Spokane, Wash.; Oscar, of the town of Red Cedar; and Charles, of St. Paul. Those deceased are William J., Jessie, Bert and Marion. Oscar Nichols acquired a district school education. When old enough he began to help his parents and each succeeding year found him more useful on the farm. After his father's death he operated it for his mother until 1891. On June 13, 1892, he was married, in Menomonie, to Anna E. Horner, who was born Oct. 12, 1874, daughter of Hiram and Sarah (Jarvis) Horner. From 1891 until 1902 Oscar Nichols operated the Nichols farm for himself under rental. Then, in 1902 he bought it, but before doing so went in that year to Colfax, where for the next three and a half years he operated the Colfax Hotel. After that for about two and a half years he and Mrs. Nichols traveled through several of the western states, he working at various occupations during that time. Then in 1908 they returned to the farm, on which they have since resided, having been actively engaged in its improvement and operation, except that for the last few years Mr. Nichols has rented out the land, having put up a second set of buildings on it for the use of his tenant. His own buildings are modern, with modern equipment, including electric light and running water. He is now patrolman on County Trunk Line B (No. 15), and is also overseer of town and county road work. He is a stockholder in the Rusk Cooperative Creamery and has served as a director of the school board of his district since 1920. His activities have conduced to his own interest and to the benefit of the community in which he lives. Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Nichols have become the parents of three children, the first of whom, Marion, born Nov. 3, 1906, died three days later, on November 6. The two surviving children are: Irma, born March 9, 1909, and Marjorie, born May 16, 1911. The family are affiliated with the Baptist Church in Rusk.

Hiram Horner, father of Mrs. Oscar Nichols, was a native of Montreal, Canada, and came to the States with his parents when 11 years old, the family settling in Juneau County. It was there that Hiram when he grew up was married to Sarah Jarvis, who was born in Wisconsin. In 1880 they came to Dunn County and rented the farm now owned by H. L. Barnhart, operating it for a year. For two years after that Mr. Horner operated the Rusk farm under rental, and at the end of that time went to work in the mills of the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company at Cedar Falls, remaining thus occupied until they finally closed down in the fall of 1900. He then moved to Bay Port, South Stillwater, where he spent the remainder of his life, dying Dec. 1, 1915. His wife, who survived him, is still residing there. Their children were as follows: Anna E., now Mrs. Oscar Nichols; William, deceased; George O., of Bay Port; Lottie, deceased; Hazel, who is Mrs. Theo. Rickers of Minneapolis; and Sadie, now deceased.

Christian O. Sandvig, a member of the grocery firm of Micheels & Sandvig, Menomonie, was born in Norway, Oct. 31, 1862, son of Ole and Mary (Engebretson) Gilbertson. The father having died in Norway, in 1871 his widow with her son Christian O. came to the United States, locating first at Red Wing, Minn., where they remained about nine months. In the spring of 1872 they came to Dunn County, Wisconsin, where Mrs. Gilbertson married again, becoming the wife of Oluf Sandvig. They settled in the town of Red Cedar, where they remained until Mr. Sandvig's death in February, 1915. Mrs. Sandvig, passed away Aug. 11, 1924. Christian O. Sandvig, who assumed his step-father's surname, first attended school in Norway, and later in the town of Peru, Dunn County, Wis. In 1881 at the age of 19 he came to Menomonie, starting his career here as a clerk in the general store of Fred Urnisus, with whom he remained for three years. For the next 12 years he was employed in the dry goods and clothing department of A. H. Johnson. In 1898 Mr. Sandvig and W. F. Micheels formed a co-partnership and have since conducted business together. From 1898 to 1918 they operated a general store, but since 1918 they have confined themselves to the grocery business. Their store is located at 620 Main Street. Mr. Sandvig was married Sept. 6, 1899 at Elk Mound, Dunn County, Wis., to Mary D. Robbe, daughter of Gunder and Maren (Nelson) Robbe; both her parents are now deceased. To Mr. and Mrs. Sandvig five children have been born: Clarence G., now of Milwaukee; Arthur M., clerk in the Menomonie post office; and George L., Mabel L. and James H. The family are members of Our Saviour's Lutheran Church.

William H. Lake, a representative citizen and practical farmer of the town of Hay River, was born in Ogle County, Illinois, April 24, 1871, son of John C. and Huldah (Hauseknecht) Lake. The parents were farmers and for 13 years after the birth of their son William they remained in Ogle County. In 1884 they moved to Dunn County and settled in the town of Hay River, near Wheeler, where they resided for four years. At the end of that time they bought 80 acres of land in Sections 27 and 28, of which 20 acres had been broken, and, as another improvement, a small log house had been erected. Here they followed agriculture until Mr. Lake's death and here Mrs. Huldah Lake still resides. Willian H. Lake had but a very limited education, as being the eldest son of his parents, his father relied on him for assistance as soon as he was old enough to be of use. At the age of 16 he began working and for eight years thereafter his earnings were applied to the support of the family. He was 24 when he actually started out in the world for himself. For eight years he was employed in the lumber industry, both in the woods and in mills; and for 12 seasons after he left home he followed threshing in the harvest fields of North Dakota. On Nov. 10, 1902, he was united in marriage with Julia M. Engelbret, daughter of Jacob and Karen (Knutsen) Engelbret. Her parents were natives of Norway who came to this country in the latter 70's, settling in Pierce County, Wisconsin, and as those were pioneer days in that locality, Mr. Engelbret had to carry supplies on his back from Hudson, a distance of 20 miles. They are now living in Hudson, retired. In the winter after his marriage William H. Lake returned to Dunn County, Wisconsin, and in the spring of 1903 bought 80 acres in Sections 27 and 28, town of Hay River, a tract of land that adjoined his old home on the south. There was a small clearing on it and in the clearing an old log house. He subsequently doubled the size of his farm by buying a second "80", and now has 90 acres under the plow, the balance being in pasture and timber. He has erected a set of good frame buildings, including a house, barn, machine shed and granary combined, a corn crib, a combined garage and woodshed, a poultry house and a cement-block silo. He has a good operating equipment and the farm is well stocked The soil is good, and Wheeler, three miles to the southeast, with cattle and hogs. and Boyceville, five miles to the southwest, are convenient markets. At the present time Mr. Lake milks about 16 cows. As a part of his equipment is a good five-passenger auto car. He served on his school board for a few years and in politics is not bound by party ties. Mr. and Mrs. Lake are the parents of four children: Fay, born Aug. 31, 1903; Edward E., born Oct. 10, 1908; George P., born Jan. 31, 1913, and Alice F., born Nov. 16, 1916. Fay is now the wife of Ernest Huff of Boyceville, and the mother of three children, Morris, Viola and Loraine. All these children have had, or are being given, good educational opportunities.

Ernest F. Drowley, now living retired in the city of Menomonie, of which he has been a resident for over 30 years, was born in Jefferson County, Wisconsin, March 28, 1857, son of William A. and Clarissa (Hopkins) Drowley. The father was a native of England who came to America with his mother when 12 years old, his father having died when William was very young. Clarissa Hopkins, whom William subsequently married in Milwaukee, was a native of New York State. They settled on a farm in Jefferson County, later moving to Juneau County, where they remained until 1866, in which year they migrated to Dunn County by ox team. There they bought a tract of Fox River land which was all wild, and had no buildings on it. So they lived in a small log cabin three-quarters of a mile distant until Mr. Drowley had built a log house on his own property. From these initial steps they advanced gradually in the development of a good farm, which remained the family home until the death of the mother, Mrs. Clarissa Drowley, who passed away Jan. 5, 1892. William Drowley then sold the farm and took up his residence in Menomonie, where he lived retired until his death on Feb. 1, 1911. There were four children in the family: William A., who died July 14, 1911; Nellie E., who died in 1875; George B., who died in 1909; and Ernest F., of Menomonie, the only survivor. It is worthy of note that William A. Drowley, above mentioned, in association with John and Frank Kelly, started the first brickyard in Menomonie. Ernest F. Drowley as a boy attended district school in Juneau and Dunn counties and subsequently worked with his father in improving the home farm, where he remained until 1892. He then came to Menomonie, in which city he followed the painter's trade for 30 years, or until the fall of 1923, since which time he has been retired. Mr. Drowley was married Nov. 8, 1902, in St. Paul, Minn., to Mrs. Clarissa Allen, who in maidenhood was Clarissa Hall. Their married life lasted little more than 15 years, as she passed away Feb. 5, 1918. On March 19, 1924 Mr Drowley took for his second wife Mrs. Sarah Mc Comb, who in maidenhood was Miss Sarah Downs. Mr. and Mrs. Drowley have a very pleasant bungalow home at 420 12th Avenue.

Levern G. Ketchpaw, clerk of the village of Knapp, was born at Elkhorn. Walworth County, Wis., April 26, 1868, son of Grove A. and Josephine (Comstock) Ketchpaw. His ancestors on the paternal side are said to be English. and those on the maternal side originally German, but later Welsh, as the line of descent on the latter has been traced to a German baron living in 1447, who went to England and. doubtless for martial or other services rendered, was by the English sovereign granted land in Wales. Some generations later Nathan Comstock came to America and settled in Connecticut, thus starting the American branch of the family. Grove A. Ketchpaw and Josephine Comstock, parents of the subject of this sketch, were married in Elkhorn, Wis., Dec. 25, 1866. The former was a harness-maker by trade and so remained for a number of years, but subsequently became manager for the Stever & Abbott Manufacturing Co., of Chicago, a wagon manufacturing concern, spending 14 years in their employ, during which time his residence, and that of his family, was in Chicago. In 1896 they left that city and moved to Lauderdale, Walworth County, Wis., where Mr. Ketchpaw farmed and kept a summer resort on the lake. After some eight years or so spent there, he and his family came to Dunn County in 1904 and bought the Fred Gross farm in Section 31, town of Stanton, the place being two miles west of Knapp. It contained 100 acres. and he operated it up to 1915, in which year he rented it out, though he continued to reside there until 1920. He died May 27, 1924, having survived his wife, who had passed away over ten years before, on Nov. 5, 1913. Levern G. Ketchpaw was 12 years old when the family left Walworth County. He had attended school pretty steadily and was grounded in the rudiments of knowledge, but at six years of age had received a serious injury in the head from a pitchfork. From the age of 12 to that of 16 he lived in Racine and then went to Chicago. In 1889 he was engaged in the cigar and confectionary business on Ashland Avenue, but after two years sold out, becoming collector fcr the Stever & Abbott Manufacturing Co., a position in which he remained for five years, during which time he collected large sums for them. At Lauderdale, Wis., he conducted a billiard parlor and for four years raised garden truck, selling it to the resorts and to summer tourists or campers, and also raised poultry, disposing of it in the same manner. In the town of Stanton he served as town clerk for 14 years and also for a number of years as its health officer. Since October, 1921, he has held the office of village clerk of Knapp, having been a resident of the village since 1920. He is a member of Ridgely Lodge No. 64, I. O. O. F. at Knapp, and is a member and the treasurer of the Baptist Church here. He has never married.

William Blume is one of the elderly residents of Menomonie who is enjoying a period of leisure in the city after having done his share of active work as a pioneer farmer in Dunn County. He was born in Germany, Aug. 20, 1849, son of Christ and Dorothy (Kahl) Blume. The family came to America in 1854-70 years agoand located first in Milwaukee, where they remained until they had become somewhat familiar with their surroundings. They then moved to Buffalo County, this state, taking a farm there which they operated until 1864, when they came to Dunn County. Here they took a homestead of 80 acres in the town of Red Cedar, to which Christ Blume later added 160 acres of railroad land adjoining, which gave That farm he improved and cultivated, but later sold it and him a 240-acre farm. This also was bought one of 120 acres on Sherburne Prairie, in the same town. wild land needing development and Christ Blume and his family remained there for many years. Finally he retired and he and his wife moved to Menomonie, where he built a house, which, however, they occupied for but a short time, as they soon moved to Ashland and took up their residence with their son Charles, who was a merchant there. Still later they returned to Menomonie and made their home with their son William, the subject of this sketch. Both were old when they died, Christ Blume passing away at the age of 83 years and his wife at that of 80. Their family consisted of four sons, Fred, William, Charles and Henry, all of whom are now living. William Blume, like most boys living on the primitive farms of 50 or 60 years ago, had very limited educational opportunities but was unrestrained so far as his industrial activities were concerned. After accompanying his parents to Dunn County he helped his father to clear and develop the wild land of the farms he successively bought, and until he was 21 years old he remained on the home place. Then for a few months he worked for Knapp, Stout & Co., after which for three years he operated a rented farm in the town of Red Cedar. Having thus made a start as an independent farmer, he strengthened his position by purchasing 160 acres of wild land on Sherburne Prairie in the town of Red Cedar. As there were no buildings on it, he first put up a log barn and began the construction of a brick house. into which he and his wife moved as soon as it was completed. This was the beginning of a very successful agricultural career lasting over 30 years, during which time Mr. Blume accomplished work that not only assured his own prosperity and fortune but formed an integral factor in the general development of the county along agricultural lines. One of the first important buildings he erected was a good frame barn, 40 x 60 feet in size, and from time to time he put up other good buildings as they were needed, besides breaking and developing the land. He also increased the area of his farm, buying 60 acres of hay land, and on this place, now containing 220 acres, he followed general farming and dairying with profitable results until 1904. Then selling the farm to his son-in-law, August Handorf, he moved to Menomonie, purchasing a residence on Main Street, which he occupied until 1914, when he bought his present house at No. 819 Seventh Street, which is a good modern residence. Mr. Blume was married in 1870, to Helen Schmidt, born in Germany, Feb. 17, 1847, who came to America when 20 years old. To Mr. and Mrs. Blume six children have been born, Bertha, Hulda, Emma, Clara, Ida and Jeanette. Bertha married August Handorf and she and her husband conduct a hotel and confectionary establishment at Brill, Barron County, Wis. They have four children, Harry, Gladys, Elmer and Alice. Hulda is the wife of H. R. Moore, a railroad engineer living in Ashland, and has one son, Sidney. Emma married William Purkess, who is a student in the Palmer Chiropractic School at Davenport. They have one child, Helen, who is a graduate of the same school and now Lowa engaged in practice. Clara is now Mrs. "Ed" Neiser, she and her husband conducting a meat market in Eau Claire. They have three children, Richard, Loraine Ida, who married Orval Gram, died in 1918, leaving two children, and Ruth. Dorothy and Kenneth. Jeanette is a stenographer in New York City. The family are affiliated religiously with the German Methodist Episcopal Church.

Martinius O. Christofferson, an active farmer, dairyman and stockraiser of the town of Colfax, and for several terms, a member of the Dunn County board of supervisors, was born in the town of Ettrick, Trempealeau County, Wis., May 11, 1872. His parents, Ole and Martha Christofferson, were Norwegians who came to the United States in the early 60's. Coming west by rail to a point on the Missisippi River, they took a steamboat up the river to La Crosse. Though Ole Christofferson was a shoemaker by trade, he did not linger in the town but pushed on to Trempealeau County, where he took a homestead of 145 acres, and built a log house and barn. Thus started as pioneer farmers, he and his wife worked hard for success, which was at last attained, but not until after many years of hard work. In the early days he used oxen when breaking in his land and the family experienced the usual hardships of those who seek to tame the forces of nature. When prosperity came he added to his comforts, erecting new buildings and making his place one of the attractive farms of his township. He is still living on it but his wife has passed They had three children, Martinius, Christ and Regina, the last mentioned awav. of whom is the wife of Harold Rude, a farmer near Blair, Trempealeau County. Martinius as a youth helped his parents to improve the home farm, in the meanwhile obtaining a district school education. He remained there until 28 years old, at which time he went to North Dakota, where he farmed for five years. Two years after that he returned to Wisconsin and bought a 220-acre farm in Section 33, town of Colfax. Dunn County. The property was improved and in good condition, except the barn, and one of his first acts, therefore, was to build a new one, 32 x 64 feet in size, adding a concrete silo. This is the place he is now operating, having 130 acres under the plow. He has 20 head of grade Holstein cattle and a drove of Poland-China hogs. During the 19 years that he has resided here he has become well acquainted with most of the people and has been closely identified-for some years, at least-with the affairs of local government. He has served as clerk of the school board of his district, and in 1918 he was elected chairman of the town of Colfax board of supervisors, an office to which he was reelected each year until 1925, when he was succeeded by Ingraham Iserelson, Mr. Christofferson having declined to serve longer. As it is an office that carries with it membership on the county board, it was required on his part considerable knowledge of county affairs and involved a certain amount of responsibility. Mr. Christofferson is one of the directors of the Colfax Cooperative Creamery. His religious affiliations are with the Norwegian Lutheran Church. He was married in Trempealeau County, Wis., Dec. 27, 1899, to Helga Mesingstad, daughter of Andrew and Olevia Mesingstad. After a married life of less than ten years she died in 1909. She had been the mother of six children, one of whom, Harold, is deceased. Those living are Oliver, Morris, Marie, Helen and Alvin. Marie is the wife of Sidney Sorenson of Detroit. Mich. In November, 1912, Mr. Christofferson married Gena Jacobson, daughter of Jacob and Beret Jacobson, and of this union one child has been born, whose name is Oscar. Mrs. Christofferson's father is living but her mother has passed away. Jacob C. Jacobson, manager for the La Pointe Lumber Co., at Rusk, Dunn County, was born in Denmark, March 22, 1867, son of Soren and Elsie (Anderson) Jacobson. The mother died in Denmark and Jacob Sorenson subsequently married Louise Kaible and in 1882 they came to America, landing at New York and coming on directly to Diamond Bluff, Pierce County, Wis., where they remained for a year and a half. At the end of that time they came to Dunn County, buying a tract of wild land in Section 21, of the town of Dunn, which they proceeded to Their first dwelling here was a small and hastily constructed convert into a farm. log house, and thus they began as all the pioneers did, going through the same hard experiences, but through industry, steadied by patience and illuminated by hope, gradually advancing to a more prosperous condition until they found themselves the owners of a fine, well improved farm, with good modern buildings. There Soren Jacobson died in October, 1912, and his wife Louise, surviving him less than two years, in September, 1914. Mr. Jacobson's children were as follows: Jacob C., subject of this sketch; Andrew, who now owns and operates the old home farm in the town of Dunn; Mary, who is Mrs. J. J. Emmett of Menomonie; and Anna, who is Mrs. J. B. Jensen of Downsville. Jacobson C. Jacobson was educated in Denmark and accompanied his father and step-mother to the United States in 1882. He was then a boy of 15 and consequently, as he was the eldest son, and there was so much to be done, had to make himself useful as his father's assistant on the farm. This he did for a year only, however, as money was needed by the family, and he therefore entered the employ of the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company and worked one year for them at Downsville in Dunn County. After that he learned the plasterer's trade, which he followed for four years. In 1894, at the age of 27, he began farming at Cedar Falls in the town of Red Cedar. It was in this year that he married, his bride being Della Blank, daughter of Edward and Pricilla (Tibbetts) Blank, and the date of their wedding, July 24, 1894. Mr. and Mrs. Jacobson remained on the farm at Cedar Falls until 1903, in which year he sold it and until April, 1915, was engaged in operating the farm of his wife's parents. He then came to Rusk, and here in the fall of 1916 he became manager of the yards and office of the La Pointe Lumber Company. For five years Mr. Jacobson served creditably as a supervisor in the town of Red Cedar, and he is now rendering other public service as treasurer of School District No. 1. He and his wife are the parents of two children: Myrtle, who is now Mrs. Otto Anderson, Jr., and the mother of a daughter, Norma; and Nellie, who resides at home with her parents. Mrs. Jacobson's father is now deceased, but her mother is still living and is now residing at Long Beach, California.

Lafayette Gordon, a well known and respected resident of Menomonie, was born at Argos, Marshall County, Ind., Aug. 4, 1872, son of Daniel and Martha (Lowry) Gordon. The parents were natives of Indiana who were married shortly after the close of the Civil War, in which Daniel Gordon served as a member of Co. D, 23d Ind. Vol. Inf., having enlisted in 1861. They resided for a number of years in Marshall County and then, in 1880, left Indiana for Pierce County, Wisconsin, where they made their home for two years. Their next removal was to Dunn County and for several years Daniel Gordon rented and operated farms in the town of Lucas. He then bought a 40-acre tract of land which by 1908 he had developed into a farm. In 1908 he sold that and purchased 40 acres in the town of Maple Grove, Barron County, where he farmed for two years. In 1910 he retired and moved to the village of Hillsdale, Barron County, where he died Dec. 28, 1915, and his wife on Oct. 22, 1922. They were the parents of 14 children: Arthur, of Daniel County, Mont.; Lafayette, of Menomonie; Charles, who died in Detroit in 1920; Mabel, now Mrs. John Stark of St. Paul; Mary, Mrs. O'Connell, is now a widow and resides in St. Paul; Ida, wife of J. C. Werlich of Minneapolis; Harry, of Heron Lake, Minn.; Zola, now Mrs. John Heckinger of Chicago; Margaret, who is Mrs. E. Schneider of Lodi, Wis.; Cora, now Mrs. W. Crawley of Portland, Ore.: Edna, wife of Ray Kokley of St. Paul; and Jasper, a son, and Lydia, who died in infancy, unnamed. Lafayette Gordon when a youth attended school in Marshall County, Indiana, and in Pierce and Dunn counties, Wisconsin. At the age of 17 years he entered the employ of the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company and for four years worked in the woods and in sawmills. In 1893 he went to work in the Alexander brick yards near Menomonie and was thus employed for two years, the next three years being spent as a basket maker in the employ of the Coffen Box & Lumber Co. at Irvington. In 1901 he established a general store at Liddy's Corners in the town of Weston, and as the place was not on a railroad, he had to haul his goods from There he carried on business for three years, also being postmaster. Downsville. He then sold out there and went to Weston Mills, where he opened a store which he conducted until the fall of 1913, also having the post office. In the fall of the year last mentioned Mr. Gordon sold his store and bought a farm of 274 acres in the town of Dunn, three miles west of Downsville, the property being partly improved. He rented this place and came to Menomonie, where he has since made his home. In 1917 he and Liddy brothers, opened an auto repair and exchange place known as "The Auto Mart," which they operated until 1919, in which year Mr. Gordon sold his interest in it. Since that time he has given his entire attention to his farm, continuing, however, to reside in Menomonie. He is making a high class dairy farm of it and has it well stocked with high grade Guernsey cattle. His house in the city, which is located on the corner of Eighth Street and Wilson Avenue, and which he bought in 1921, was formerly the J. A. Decker residence. Mr. Gordon was married in Eau Galle, Dunn County, Wis., on Jan. 25, 1898, to Margaret Liddy, daughter of John and Mary (Styer) Liddy. Mr. and Mrs. Gordon are members of St. Joseph's Catholic Church, Mr. Gordon also belonging to the Royal Neighbors, Beavers and Knights of Columbus.

Cyrenius Baldwin, a pioneer farmer and one of the earliest merchants in Colfax, who passed away over 30 years ago, was born and reared in the state of Ohio. In early manhood he married Phoebe Vares, who also was born and reared in that state, and they came west and settled in Waukesha County, Wisconsin, where they remained for some years. In 1859 Cyrenius Baldwin, accompanied by James Mathews, left Waukesha County for Dunn County, traveling over-land to Prairie du Chien and embarking on a Mississippi River boat journeyed up that river and the Chippewa to Rumsey's Landing. There they met Charles Boles, who brought them to the site of the present village of Colfax. Mr. Baldwin bought one half of Section 17, in what is now the town of Colfax, while Mr. Mathews bought a quarter of the same section and a quarter of one-quarter of Section 8, later a quarter section being bought for A. T. Mathews, a brother of James. Having made these land purchases, or those for themselves, Mr. Baldwin and James Mathews returned to Waukesha County, where they remained until 1864. In that year Mr. Baldwin brought his family to Dunn County, consisting of his wife and two children. They came in a wagon drawn by a span of horses and also brought a span of two-year colts with them. It was in the month of October, 1864, when they arrived. Mr.

Baldwin had bought his land for the purpose of raising sheep, and in that same month his son Daniel C., with Albert Hinckly, left Waukesha with 121 head of sheep, which they drove as far as Oconomowoc, from there transferred them by train to Sparta, and drove them from Sparta to Dunn County, following trails, as there were no roads. They arrived at the J. E. Mathews home Oct. 20, 1864, This venture in sheep raising proved unsuccessful, as on after a trip of 20 days. May 20, 1865, Mr. Baldwin's entire flock perished in a prairie fire. They were high grade animals worth from $10 to $50 apiece and wool was then selling for one dollar per pound. After this misfortune Mr. Baldwin gave up the idea of raising sheep, and opened a general store on the site now occupied by Colfax village, he being the second merchant here. His store was located just north of where the Community building now stands. He operated it for quite a number of years. His wife survived him and finally passed away on May 16, 1916. They were the parents of four children, all born in Waukesha County, namely, Daniel C., Ellen, Etyelda and Arden, of whom Ellen became the wife of James Lowery All, however, are now deceased.

Daniel C. Baldwin, who improved the farm in Section 17, town of Colfax, which had been started by his father in 1865, was born at Eagle Waukesha County, July 12, 1845, son of Cyrenius and Phoebe (Vares) Baldwin. He came to Dunn County with his parents and was subsequently associated with his father until the latter's death in May, 1892. His share of the estate was 120 acres just west of the village of Colfax, and he proceeded to build up this farm, from time to time adding to the land until it finally contained 340 acres and had a substantial set of buildings, besides being well improved in other respects. There he carried on general farming until his death on Sept. 29, 1919. Mr. Baldwin was married Jan. 21, 1869, at Waukesha, Wis., to Hanna Allen Foster, who was born at York, Livingston County, N. Y., Aug. 5, 1845, fourth child of William and Sarah Foster. With her parents she had moved to Mukwonago, Waukesha County, Wis., when but six years of age. In January, 1919 Mr. and Mrs. Baldwin celebrated their Golden Wedding. A few weeks later, at her home in West Colfax, she passed away, deeply mourned by a wide circle of friends and relations. She was a graduate of Eagle High School and a woman of exceptionally bright intellect. She was one of the "live wires" for all that was great and good. At an early age she had united with the Scotch Covenanted Presbyterian Church at Vernon, Waukesha County, but after coming to Colfax she gave her support to the Methodist Church. Her husband, as already seen, survived her little more than seven months, and thus passed from earth two of the best known and most thoroughly respected pioneers of Colfax and the vicinity. They had one child, Mabel, born March 5, 1871, and also gave a home to two children not their own. The daughter Mabel, was the second white child born in Colfax. She was educated in the Colfax school and the Oshkosh Normal School, after which she taught in rural schools for a year, and in the Colfax school for four years, and it was she who, with Miss Clara Smith, graded the latter school. On March 15, 1900, she was united in marriage with George W. Emmerton.

George W. Emmerton, who operates an oil station in the village of Colfax, and lives on a farm in the town of that name, was born in Cook's Valley, Chippewa County, Wis., Oct. 20, 1873, son of Thomas and Sarah (Roberts) Emmerton. The father was born in London, England, October 9, 1836, and came to America when a young man, settling in Goodrich, Ontario, where on Feb. 13, 1860, he married Sarah Roberts. It was in the following May that he and his wife located on afarm in Cook's Valley, Chippewa County, Wis. There he became noted, not only as a successful farmer himself, but as a worker for the agricultural interests and state, being one of the organizers of the Wisconsin branch of the American Society of Equity, of which he was for several years president, and afterwards president emeritus. He was a man of strong personality, genial and entertaining, one whom it was a pleasure to meet and whose fame spread not only all over this state but into distant states as well, so that he was nationally known. He was a community builder and a man who performed many good deeds and left his memory enshrined in the hearts of many of his fellow citizens. He died Feb. 8, 1917, and his wife on Feb. 11, 1907. They were the parents of six children: Ellen, now Mrs. Earl Bates of Chippewa Falls; Caroline, who lives with her brother, Charles J.; Alfred J., of Montana; William H., of California; Charles J., who operates the old home farm in the town of Auburn, Chippewa County; and George W. of Colfax. George W. Emmerton remained at home until his marriage to Mabel Baldwin on March 15, He then came to Colfax and until 1922, was engaged in the coal, dray and 1900. ice business, also operating a contracting business. It was in 1922 that he established the Emmerton oil business, building a public station here, which he is still conducting, though in the same year he and his wife closed up their home in the village and went to live on the Baldwin farm, which was the birthplace of Mrs. They are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, Mrs. Emmer-Emmerton. ton being also a member of the Woman's Club, which she has served as secretary They have three children: William B., born May 9, 1902, now a and president. student in the River Falls Normal School; Edna M., born Sept. 18, 1907, a pupil in the Colfax High School; and Daniel T., born Feb. 14, 1912, who is attending the grade school.

Torval Christopherson, proprietor of a well stocked dairy farm in Section 27, town of Elk Mound, a trustee of the village of that name, also a town supervisor and a member of the county board, and better known to his friends as "Tom" Christopherson, was born on this farm May 2, 1865. The parents were Christian and Sophie (Thoreson) Christopherson, born in Ringerike, Norway, the father on Sept. 24, 1828, and the mother on March 15, 1827. Both came to the United States in 1852, while yet single, locating in Waupun, Fond du Lac County, Wis., where they were married May 12, 1854. In June, 1860, they set out with a wagon and ox team for the town of Elk Mound, Dunn County, bringing a few useful articles with them, together with some cows. In the party were several other families, namely, those of Martin Howe, Ludwig Tilleson and Lars Anderson, and they all journeyed together, doubtless with bright anticipations of future success and The present story, however, concerns the fortunes only of Mr. Chrisprosperity. topherson and his family. He was in possession of a land warrant, purchased for $150, that entitled him to select any piece of government land of 160 acres in the town of Elk Mound not already taken, which gave him an extensive choice, for as yet there were but few settlers here. He selected as his homestead the northeast quarter of Section 27, land that is now within the corporation limits of the village of Elk Mound. Naturally at that time it was all wild land, and after he had made a clearing and built a log house and barns, he got busy with his oxen clearing the The events of past and present are linked together in an unbroken chain and land. to the thoughtful mind by-gone scenes and figures show a close relationship with the present. There are those now living who can recall such pioneer scenes in Dunn County as the starting of the Christopherson farm, the little log buildings, the figure of the pioneer himself trudging behind the sluggish oxen as they marked the furrows in the rough and heavy soil, with perhaps the additional figure of the equally busy housewife as she prepared the frugal meal, looked after the little ones, or perhaps went forth to help her husband in the fields or forest. Wherever the pioneer cabin was located, with whatever advantages of soil or weather, the keynote of success was work, and this Mr. Christopherson realized and acted in accord No rolling-stone or shirker, he stuck to his job day by day, month by therewith. month and year by year, and, with the assistance of his busy and faithful wife, made sure if gradual progress. Thus they lived their lives until the time came when their journey nearly finished, they could look back and rejoice in their achievements. To enter into all the details of their progress is unneccessary; the pioneer manner of life is known to many in the county from their own experience or that of their parents-the gradual conquest of the soil, with each year a little less of brush and timber and a little more of grain-sowed fields, a new barn or corn crib, or an addition to the house until modern buildings were gradually evolved; the increase of stock, building of fences, and sowing, reaping, threshing, and gathering and marketing of The ox in time yielded place to the horse, and the Christopherson farm was crops.

a modern farm and Mr. and Mrs. Christopherson modern and thoroughly up-todate farmers when, in 1897, they rented the place to their son Torval and rested from their hard labor. But Mrs. Christopherson's sands of life were already run-ning out, and on Jan. 13, 1899, she passed to the Great Beyond, leaving husband and children bereaved indeed. Several years later, on Aug. 23, 1903, he followed her to the grave. They had done their work well and fairly won a place on the roll of honor of Dunn County's hardy and successful pioneers. Of the six children, Johanna, the first born, died in infancy, and Thomas, the second, at the age of five years. The other children, who all survived, are: Lena, now Mrs. Martin Olson, of Prairie Farm, Barron County; Carl, now treasurer of the town of Elk Mound, and a prominent farmer; Torval, the direct subject of this sketch; and John L., now proprietor of a grocery store in Eau Claire. Torval Christopherson acquired an education in the public schools of Elk Mound and began to assist his father on the home farm as soon as he was old enough. There he remained until 1890, in which year he changed his occupation, going with his brother-in-law, Martin Olson, to Eau Claire, where for about six years they were in partnership in a mercantile business. In 1896 he returned home and in the following year rented the home farm from his parents, as already mentioned, it having the original area of 160 acres. After operating it under rental until 1903 he bought it and since then he sold about 30 acres in small tracts or lots, having 147 acres left. In 1907 the barn and several out-buildings burned down, by which disaster he sustained quite a loss, but he at once rebuilt the smaller buildings, and in 1909 he erected a fine large cattle barn of $34 \ge 62$ feet, with full basement and provided with patent stanchions and individual drinking cups. In the same year he erected a cement-block silo of 12 x 35 feet, and now has another one under construction. His place is very conveniently situated the house being but half a mile from the main business street of Elk Mound village, and the farm as a whole is well representative of the agricultural progress to be found in this part of Dunn County. Mr. Christopherson is one of the most prominent citizens of both Elk Mound village and town, and as such he has been called on more than once to perform public service. He was one of the village trustees for several years, in 1923 he was appointed village trustee to fill out the unexpired term of Mr. Dunham, and at the spring election of 1924 was elected to the same office, by virtue of the same being also a member of the county board. He was married Aug. 10, 1895, to Eline Marie Tondel, who was born in Norway, Jan. 28, 1868, daughter of Lawrence Hawkinson and wife, the latter's name in maidenhood being Junette Olson. Both parents died in Norway, and their daughter Eline Marie came to America in 1892, locating in Eau Claire, Wis., where she was married to Mr. Christopherson. The four children who have been born to them are: Stella, May 20, 1896; Cornelia, Aug. 25, 1897; Myrtle, Dec. 14, 1898, and Arnold T., Feb. 3, 1903. Stella is now Mrs. Louis Dahl, her husband being a carpenter and contractor in Elk Mound, and they have three children, Layton R., Orrin T. and Allen L. Cornelia, who took a course in the Menomonie Training School, was later graduated from the Eau Claire State Normal School, and is now a successful teacher. Myrtle A. is assistant supervisor at the Eau Claire Central Telephone Exchange, and Arnold T. is helping his father on the home farm. The religious affiliations of the family are with the Lutheran Church.

John E. Sorenson, owner of Hillside Guernsey Farm, Registered, was born on this farm March 12, 1871, son of Anders and Karen (Anderson) Sorenson. The parents were natives of Ringerekke, Norway, the father born Sept. 19, 1833, and the mother Feb. 5, 1841. Married in Norway, they came with six children to America in 1869, settling on 80 acres of wild land on Section 14, town of Elk Mound, Dunn County, Wis. There were no buildings on the place, so Anders Sorenson built some of logs and thus began the career of a pioneer farmer, which, however, in his case, lasted but ten years, as he died Oct. 1, 1880. His wife survived him not quite 15 years, passing away on July 31, 1895. They were the parents of a large family of 12 children, namely: Sam, who married Carrie Howe and died Dec. 23, 1919, leaving his wife and six children; Maren, who married John Howe and died in 1908; Gilbrand, who died Dec. 7, 1880; Lizzie, who became Mrs. Andrew 1 .

Tanberg and died in September, 1923; Corine, deceased, who married Carl Christopherson; Annetta, now Mrs. John Bedahl of Cloquet, Minn.; John E., subject of this sketch; Nels, of the town of Elk Mound; Albert, of St. Paul; Andreas, who died Oct. 30, 1874; Oswald, who died in 1920; and Amanda, now Mrs. Adolph Edwardson of Stanley, Wis. John E. Sorenson was educated in rural school district No. 3, and remained at home with his parents until he was 15 years old. From that time until 1904, a period of eight years, he worked out for others. His next move was to buy the home farm, which had been reduced in area to 40 acres and to begin the task of building it up. He remodeled the house making it into a neat and comfortable residence. In 1914 he built a thoroughly modern barn of 34 by 46 feet in ground plan, providing it with the Libby barn equipment. In 1917 he put up a stone silo of 10 x 38 feet, a large machine shed, a granary, chicken house, cement-block milk house and cement-block garage besides other out-buildings; and to his land he has added 10 acres in Section 14 and 40 acres in Section 13. About 75 acres of the total area are now in a state of cultivation. He has shown good judgment in the arrangement of his buildings, which stand some distance back from the highway and enough of an incline to make the most of their appearance, all well painted and in fine condition. Mr. Sorenson has a good herd of Guernsey cattle, headed by a pure bred sire; he also raises Poland-China hogs. He is a stockholder in the Elk Mound Cooperative Creamery. On Dec. 9, 1903 John E. Sorenson was united in marriage with Martha Nelson, who was born in Elk Mound village, daughter of Tille and Anna (Tilleson) Nelson, further mention of whom may be found in the biography of Ludvig E. Nelson. Mr. and Mrs. Sorenson are members of the Barum Lutheran Church. They have an adopted child, Grace, who was born Oct. 10, 1910.

Richard F. Breitengross, a prominent business man of Wheeler, of which village he is the president, was born in Fond du Lac, Wis., Jan. 5, 1872, son of Richard and Matilda (Zimmerman) Breitengross. The parents were natives of Germany, the father being a merchant. He died in Fond du Lac in March, 1918, and his wife in March, 1920. The subject of this sketch was educated in the public and private schools of Fond du Lac, after which he learned the blacksmith's trade, which he followed for three years. After that he became a telegraph operator, and was thus occupied for 11 years, working in various places. He came to Dunn County in 1891, locating in Wheeler as operator for the Wisconsin Central Railroad, now the "Soo" line and continued as such for four years, after which he spent two years in Califor-In 1903 he returned to Wheeler and engaged in the general mercantile businia. ness, he and his brother A. H. Breitengross erecting a fine store building of 46 x 80 feet with a good basement. In 1914 Richard F. sold his interests in the concern and since then has been engaged in the buying and selling of farm seed, buying from the farmers in the fall and selling to the wholesale markets, also selling to the farmers He is also engaged in the handling of Dodge and Chevrolet auto cars, in spring. and has just completed a fine garage of 60 x 65 feet, constructed of matt-face tile. It contains a sales room and accessories room and storage and repair departments, Mr. Brietengross is vice president of the Wheeler State also having an oil stand. Bank, a stockholder in and manager of the Wheeler Telephone Co., and a member of the Wheeler Commercial Club. He is fond of hunting and fishing and has helped to restock various trout streams. Mr. Breitengross was married Aug. 24, 1910, to Nellie Erickson, who was born at Cedar Falls, Dunn County, Wis., July 21, 1876, daughter of Haldo and Bertha (Larson) Erickson. Her parents were natives of Norway who came to America at an early day, and in 1866 settled in Downsville, this county, where Mr. Erickson was employed in the mill for nine months. The family then moved to Cedar Falls, where he entered the employ of Knapp, Stout & Co. (later the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company) as edger in their mill, being thus occupied until it was finally closed down in the fall of 1900. After that he lived practically retired until his death in 1914. His wife, Mrs. Bertha Erickson, died in 1889. Mr. and Mrs. Richard F. Breitengross are the parents of one child, Amy H., who was born July 31, 1913, and who is now attending public school in Wheeler. Mr. and Mrs. Breitengross are members of the Evangelical Church, the latter also belonging to the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. They are people whose work and influence are active factors in the moral and material advancement of the community.

Henry Paff, for many years a respected citizen and successful farmer in the town of Elk Mound, but now deceased, was born in Waukesha County, Wisconsin, Dec. 2, He was reared and educated there and remained until the early 70's, when 1850. he came to Elk Mound, Dunn County, and for a short time did farm labor here. Having resolved to stav, he bought 160 acre of wild land in Section 24, town of Elk Mound and began the development of a farm, an arduous task, but which in time he successfully accomplished. He was a stockholder in the Elk Mound Cooperative Creamery, and was a man of progressive and reliable character, much esteemed by his neighbors, his death, which occurred April 3, 1903, being regarded as a distinct loss to the community. Hnery Paff was married Dec. 18, 1876, in Spring Brook, to Lucinda Goetz, who was born in Eau Claire, Wis., Aug. 13, 1861, daughter of Adam and Helen (Doering) Goetz. To Mr. and Mrs. Henry Paff were born 12 children, namely: Mary, now Mrs. Charles Orth of Eau Claire County, and the mother of three children, Hazel, Harry and Ona; Lena (first), Emma and Lena (second), all three of whom died in infancy; Fred, a well known farmer in the town of Spring Brook; Amelia, now residing in St. Paul; Laura, wife of Ed Webert of the town of Elk Mound and the mother of seven children, Angeline, James, Rachel, Virginia, Lloyd, Marie and Norma; Elsie, at home; Louis, of Ft. Dodge, Iowa; Adeline, wife of Rev. Fred Stillwell of Chicago and the mother of one child. Ruth M.; Arthur, professor of science in the high school at Bloomer, Wis., and Henrietta, now deceased. Adam and Helen (Doering) Goetz, the parents of Mrs. Henry Paff, were natives of Germany who came to the United States about 1858, settling first in Eau Claire, Wis., where they lived for ten years, and then coming to Dunn County and buying a tract of wild land in Section 1, town of Spring Brook, which Mr. Goetz gradually developed into a good farm. The children in the Goetz family were as follows: Mary, now deceased, who was the wife of Fred Volendorf; Lucinda, who became the wife of Henry Paff and is now a widow residing with her daughter, Mrs. Charles Orth of Eau Claire County; Henry and Louis, deceased; Lena, deceased, who was the wife of Jacob Paff, and Catherine, who died in infancy.

Fred H. Paff, who is engaged in agricultural pursuits in Section 3 East, town of Spring Brook, was born in the town of Elk Mound, Dunn County, Wis., July 18, 1883, son of Henry and Lucinda (Goetz) Paff. He was educated in the district school and when old enough began to help his father on the home farm, which, after the father's death in April, 1903, he operated for his mother one year. After that he worked out for a year, and during the next six years operated the home farm, renting it from his mother. In 1911 he purchased the old Frank Mickelbrook farm in Section 3, town of Spring Brook, a farm of 88 acres. He has rebuilt the house, erected a new garage, chicken house and a fine barn, with brick basement, 36 x 64 feet in ground plan, provided with the Star equipment and electrically lighted. He is engaged in general farming and dairying, keeping Guernsey cattle, his herd being headed by a pure bred sire. He is also a stockholder in the Elk Mound Cooperative Creamery. Fred Paff was married March 4, 1905, to Mary Mickelbrook, daughter of Nicholas and Margaret (Schrantz) Mickelbrook. After almost 19 years of happy wedlock, he was deprived of her by death on March 1, 1924. She was a high minded woman, a splendid wife and fine neighbor, whose passing was greatly deplored. Mr. Paff's mother subsequently kept house for him until his second marriage on April 8, 1925, to Miss Jessie Hanson, the daughter of Nels and Marie (Christopherson) Hanson.

Alfred J. Olson, a prominent farmer in the town of Hay River, who has a good record of hard work and worthy achievement, which have given him a high standing in the community, was born in Eau Claire County, Wis., Aug. 21, 1882, son of Ingelbert M. and Christine (Rasmussen) Olson. Both parents were of Norwegian birth, the father having been born in one of the coast towns of Norway, and the mother in Christiania, the country's capital. Ingelbert M. Olson for 12 years was a deep sea sailor, having come to this country at the age of 18. After leaving the seafaring life he came west to Chicago, and it was in that city that he met and married Christine Rasmussen, who had come to this country at the age of 17 or 18. There they resided until 1880, Mr. Olson following the carpenter's trade. He and his family were there at the time of the great fire in October, 1871, which destroyed the greater part of the city, making thousands of families homeless so that they had to camp out on the prairie in tents, or whatever shelter they could contrive. During the rebuilding period which followed, there was a great demand for carpenters and Mr. Olson had all he could do. But he had an ambition to be something more than a wage earner liable to be thrown out of work at any time by a strike, by a slackness in the building trade, or when he got too old to compete with younger men; so, his wife being agreeable to the proposition, in 1880 he came to Eau Claire County, Wisconsin, and bought some farm land in the town of Ludington, on which he erected buildings, and began the work of development, but as at first the farm did not yield a living for the family, he found it necessary for several summers to work at his trade in Chicago, leaving his family on the farm. There his wife died in 1893. He survived her until November, 1912, when he died at the home of a son Ernest in the town of Ludington. They had seven children: Roger, who died in Texas; Margaret, now a teacher in the public schools of Minnesota; Clara, wife of Edward Hoag of Voorhies, Iowa; Florence, wife of Ardel Craig of Longville; Lily, wife of Alonzo Lowman of the town of Ludington, Eau Claire County; Alfred J., subject of this sketch; and Ernest, a resident in South Dakota. Ernest, who was in the U. S. regular army when this country entered into the war with Germany, served 27 months in France as a member of the Fifth U. S. Artillery. Alfred J. Olson acquired his education in rural schools. At the age of 18 he began to make his own way in the world and for some years did various kinds of ordinary labor. On June 18, 1908, he married Zella H. McPherson, who was born in the town of Hay River, Aug. 30, 1889, daughter of Alexander and Minnie (Hayes) McPherson. She had had good school advantages and had taught public school for several years. After marrying, Mr. Olson took a rented farm in Thompson Valley, Eau Claire County, and there he remained for about five years engaged in agriculture. Then on Oct. 20, 1913, he came with his family to Dunn County settling on his present farm, then containing 140 acres, on Section 22, town of Hay River, which he had bought from his father-in-law. There was a fair set of frame buildings on the place, and with an ordinary equipment Mr. Olson began the work on improvement, which he has continued up to the present time. He has enlarged the barn, built two cement silos, each of about 80 tons capacity, and has added a tract of land to the farm, increasing its area to 160 acres. He is doing general farming and dairying, having a fine herd of Holstein-Freisian cattle and all the machinery and equipment essential to a progressive farmer of modern type. Nominally a Republican in politics, he uses his judgment in casting his vote, considering the personal merits of the candidates rather than the demands of party managers. That he stands high among his fellow citizens is shown by the fact that he has served his town several terms as a member of the "side board," and at the present time is chairman of the board and therefore a member of the county board, and he is interested in whatever concerns the welfare of the general community. He has also served several years as clerk of School District No. 5. Mr. and Mrs. Olson are the parents of three children, all sons: Denver A., born March 8, 1909; Loren K., born Feb. 28, 1914; and Robert (Bobbie), born April 8, 1923. Denver A., who finished the grade school course at the age of 13 and has since been an interested student in the Menomonie Agricultural School. Loren K. is still in the grades of the district school and expects to enter the agricultural school when he has finished them.

Christopher Thompson, at an early day one of the leading citizens of the town of Weston, of which he was a pioneer, and who was better known to his friends as "Kiff Thompson," was born in Hemingford, province of Quebec, Canada, Aug. 28, 1842, son of Christopher and Isabella (Cuscaden) Thompson. The father, of Scotch ancestry, was born in the province of Quebec, Dec. 13, 1810, and the mother, also of Scotch ancestry, was born in the town of Ballyweel, County Donegal, Ireland, April 22, 1812. They were married in Quebec Province, Jan. 10, 1834. In 1849 they came to the states and took up their residence in Chickopee, Massachusetts. In the spring of 1854 they went back to Canada, but that same fall came with other families to Wisconsin and settled at Waubeek in Pepin County, where they purchased a farm on which the last years of their life were spent, Mr. Thompson dying Jan. 19, 1863, and Mrs. Thompson, March 4, 1866. They were the parents of six children: Amelia Jane, born Dec. 6, 1834, who died Feb. 6, 1852; Eleanor Jemima, born Sept. 26, 1836, who was married Jan. 26, 1856, to Thomas B. Gardner, and died Dec. 29, 1919; Katherine L., born Jan. 20, 1839, who married A. B. Kenyon on Oct. 7, 1863, and after his death George Kirk, and who died in December, 1922; Lavina A., born Feb. 16, 1841, who married Martin Page, Oct. 5, 1869, and now resides in Eau Claire, Wis.; Christopher, born Aug. 28, 1842, subject of this sketch; and Isabella, born June 19, 1846, who was married Nov. 15, 1866, to William McGilton and now resides in Waubeek. Christopher Thompson, Jr. (or "Kiff"), acquired an elementary education in district schools in Pepin County and subsequently attended the academy at Durand. At the time of his father's death, being 20 years old and the only son, it devolved upon him to be the man of the family and care for the farm, which for some time he did. Later, however, he became active in the lumber industry, working in the woods as a scaler in winter, and going on the drives in spring with lumber fleets, sometimes as far south as St. Louis. In the summer months he bought produce throughout the country for city markets. - It. was on Nov. 28, 1872, that he was married in the town of Eau Galle to Sarah J. Fishbyrne, who was born in Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Oct. 11, 1853, daughter of Alexander and Mary (Harding) Fishbyrne. In the spring of 1873 he moved with his bride to a farm he had purchased in 1871 in the town of Weston, Dunn County, where he resided for the remainder of his life, passing away Aug. 27, 1897, at the family home. Mrs. Thompson is still living and resides in Washington, D. C. Mr. and Mrs. Thompson were charter members of the Grange, organized at Eau Galle about 1875. Mr. Thompson was much interested in education and organized the school district of his neighborhood; afterwards he served for much of the time on the school board. He was also assessor of his town for one year and for a number of years served as justice of the peace. To Mr. and Mrs. Christopher Thompson six children were born: Mary F., June 12, 1875; Christopher T., April 16, 1877; Nellie I., April 26, 1879; Victor E., Aug. 19, 1881; Esther K., March 15, 1885; and Lila K., May 1, 1890. In regard to these children the following individual data is available. Mary F. is now principal of schools at Zion, Ill. Christopher T. has always remained on the home farm, which he is now operating. He married Margaret Williams, and has had three children, Nellie, Christopher and Owen; the last mentioned died in childhood. Nellie I. is now Mrs. Allan D. Rolfe of Powers, Ore., and the mother of four children, Durward, Harry, Lawrence and Kenneth. Victor E. is a manual training teacher in the state normal school at Stevens Point, Wis. He married Florence Warner and has three children, Herbert, Arthur and Kenneth. Esther K. is now living in Washington, D. C., being employed in the government department of agriculture as junior economic analyst. Lila K. also holds a government position, being assistant agricultural economist in the department of agriculture. Alexander Fishbyrne, father of Mrs Christopher Thompson, was a native of Dublin, Ireland, where in 1846 he married Mary Harding, who was also a native of that city. They came to the United States the same year, landing at New York, in which city Mr. Fishbyrne died in 1853. His wife, with her three children, continued her residence there, or in nearby towns, until 1856, when, accompanied by them and her sister, Essie Ann Harding, she came to Wisconsin, taking up her residence in Mondovi, Buffalo County, which place was her home until her marriage on Jan. 16, 1857, to Charles Billings. Her home as his wife was in Durand. Mr. Billings then owned most of the land on which that city now stands, which he platted and sold as lots. Later they moved to a location south of Durand, where they resided until 1861. In that year they came to the town of Weston, Dunn County, Mr. Billings building two sawmills on Knight's Creek, one in Section 35 and the other in Section 36, which mills he operated until 1867. He then sold out and settled on a farm in the town of Eau Galle, where he died Oct. 16, 1872.

After his death Mrs. Billings continued to reside on the farm until her youngest daughter, Essie, was married in 1883. After that she made her home with her children, sometimes with one and sometimes with another, until her death on March 3, 1900, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Thompson. By her first husband, Alexander Fishbyrne, she had three children, Mary A., William A. and Sarah J. Mary A. was born June 22, 1850, and died Sept. 7, 1871. William A., born Jan. 14, 1852, who married Eliza Wolcott, died May 2, 1916; his wife survived him about eight years, dying June 3, 1924. Sarah J., born Oct. 11, 1853, married Christopher Thompson, as already mentioned. The children of Mrs. Thompson's mother by her second husband, Charles Billings, were: Charles F. and Essie C. Charles F., who was born Feb. 7, 1858, married Emma Holmes, Sept. 16, 1891, and they reside at Lake City, Florida. Essie C., born Oct. 5, 1862, was married Aug. 14, 1883, to Harry H. Gardner and resides at Long Beach, Calif.

Louis L. Thompson, a resident of the village of Elmwood, who was for a number of years a farmer in the town of Eau Galle, where he is well known, was born in that town, June 3, 1867, son of Hiram C. and Ellen L. (Lamphere) Thompson. The father was a native of Canada and the mother of the state of Illinois. Young when they came to Dunn County, they grew up here and were married in the town of Weston, after which they began farming in Section 30, town of Eau Galle, on a 72acre tract of wild land, on which Hiram C. Thompson put up buildings and fences and was engaged in farming there until 1876. He then sold that place and bought 160 acres in Section 3, which was a tract of heavily timbered land. With the aid of his sons he cleared it all and in time built up a fine farm, residing on it until 1907, or for a period of about 31 years. He then turned it over to his son John, and, retiring from active work, took up his residence in Elmwood, where he died in May, 1922. His wife Ellen, died in 1913. They were the parents of six children: Charles, who is a patrolman in the town of Lucas; Louis L., of Elmwood; Frederick Adelbert; John, of Pepin County; Milton G., of the town of Weston, Dunn County, and Paul, who died in infancy. Louis L. Thompson acquired a district school education in the town of Eau Galle and was reared on his parents' farm, remaining at home until he was 22 years. He then began farming on his own account, buying 40 acres of land in the town of Waterville, Pepin County, of which he cleared a part, farming there until December, 1901. He then sold the place and returned to the old home in Section 3, town of Eau Galle, Dunn County. Soon after this he bought a farm of 88 acres in Section 3, town of Eau Galle, which he built up into fine condition, erecting a good frame house, barn and out-buildings, and clearing, breaking and fencing the land. There he farmed until the fall of 1916, in which year he rented the place and came to the village of Elmwood, where his daughters could have better educational opportunities. He owns a good house and four lots, besides still owning his farm, which is now renting. He has rendered public service as a director and clerk of the school board of his district in Pepin County. Fraternally he is affiliated with the Modern Woodmen lodge at Eau Galle. Louis L. Thompson was married May 12, 1889, to Mary Furnia, who was born in Franklin County, New York, Nov. 1, 1868, daughter of Nelson and Esther (Bashaw) Furnia. The family came west in 1870, settling in Pepin County, Wisconsin, where the parents engaged in farming. The father died in July, 1900, and the mother in December, 1906. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Louis L. Thompson are Isabelle Libbie, Ellen Lydia, Ethel Maria, Mary Leone and Alice Rose. Isabelle Libbie, who was born Aug. 22, 1890, was graduated from the Eau Galle grade and the Dunn County Normal schools, and also attended summer school in South Dakota. For several seasons she followed the cccupation of a teacher, becoming assistant school principal at White, S. D. She is now the wife of S. E. Peters, a farmer of Astoria, S. D., and has one child, Burnham. Ellen Lydia, born March 19, 1893, who was educated in the public schools at Arkansaw, Pepin County, Wis., is now the wife of Louis Moritz of the town of Weston. She has a daughter named Gladys. Ethel Maria, born May 22, 1900, is now Mrs. Louis Fuhrman of Eau Galle. She has two children, Muriel and Marvel. Mary Leone, born April 17, 1902, is the wife of Renold Labs of Eau Galle. Alice Rose, born Feb. 10, 1907, died July 17, 1911. The Thompson family are affiliated religiously with the Methodist Episcopal Church.

Walter Crocker, M. D., a noted pioneer of Dunn County, still remembered by some of the oldest residents, was born in Augusta, Oneida County, N. Y., Sept. 5, When young he moved to Amherst, Ohio, and later in Madison, Lake 1808. County, that state—a little village on the shore of Lake Erie—he was married, in April, 1829, to Mary G. Curtiss. After their marriage they resided for a while in Jackson, Miss., where he practiced dentistry. Later, having received a medical degree in 1845, he began practice as a physician in Meadville, Penn. In 1854 he came farther west, spending two years in Illinois and Iowa, and in 1856 coming to Dunn County, Wisconsin, and locating at Dunnville, which was then the county Here he established his home and not only followed his profession but engaged seat. to some extent in farming. Doctors were few and far between in those days in this wild country and their duties were often arduous and dangerous. They had to drive many miles over the roughest roads in the severest weather and occasionally treat cases of such deadly and infectious diseases as diphtheria, smallpox and scarlet or typhus fever, when there was little that the doctor could do to effect a cure and when he, himself, ran a considerable risk. Moreover, the people were poor, and his recompense was very uncertain; often he received none at all. Yet Dr. Crocker did the best he could and never shrank from his duty, bringing hope, comfort, and often relief to many homes. He was the first physician in the valley; his territory extended as far as Chippewa Falls and Menomonie, and all through the pineries and logging camps, and for nearly 25 years, in summer or winter, his buggy or sleigh was a familiar object on the roads throughout this region. In April, 1879 he and his good wife celebrated their Golden Wedding. It was the practical culmination of a long and active career, for in the following year, 1880, the good Doctor passed from this life, greatly missed and mourned by hundreds of his patients and friends. His wife died when 85 years old.

George C. and Walter Curtiss are proprietors of Cedar Park Farm in Section 23, town of Dunn (Government Township 26 N, Range 13 W.); George C., was born March 11, 1855, and Walter, Aug. 18, 1849. They are sons of Charles Solomon and Jane (McCracken) Curtis. The father was born in Ohio. March 3, 1813, and the mother at Gettysburg, Penn., July 21, 1821, her birthplace 42 years later becoming the scene of one of the greatest and most decisive battles in the Civil War. Thev were married at Meadville, Penn., and in 1856 came west to Dunnville, then the county seat of Dunn County, Wisconsin. Here for two years he conducted the Colburn Hotel, situated on the east side of the river. When in 1858 Pepin County was cut off from Dunn and the county seat changed to Menomonie, Dunnville lost its importance, and also any prospect it might have had of becoming a large place, and Charles S. Curtiss moved with his family to Iowa, where he conducted a stage route between Tipton and Wilton Junction. In 1861 he disposed of that route and, returning to Wisconsin, engaged in the hotel business in Durand, where he remained until 1864. He then returned to Dunn County and engaged in farming with his brother-in-law, Dr. Walter Crocker, but after spending two years in that occupation here, he moved again, this time to Cleveland, Ohio, where he spent two years. In 1858 he again returned to Wisconsin and from that time until 1871 was engaged in conducting a drug store in Durand. Selling out in the latter year he resumed farming with Dr. Crocker in the town of Dunn, Dunn County. Not long afterwards, on Nov. 22, 1872, he died. His wife Jane survived him 39 years, passing away Dec. 21, 1911. Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Curtiss were the parents of six children: Emma, born April 16, 1844, who survives her husband, Jedediah Shaw, and resides at Hastings, N. Y.; Mary, born Oct. 15, 1846, who became the wife of Joseph Meyers and died at St. Paul in 1914; Walter, born Aug. 18, 1849, who is single and is a co-partner in farming with his brother, George C.; Jennie, born Dec. 25, 1852, who married Peter E. Elting and died at Eau Claire, May 5, 1916; George C., born March 11, 1855; and Ellen, born June 20, 1858, who is housekeeper for her brothers, George and Walter. George C. and Walter Curtiss acquired a good public school education, which George supplemented by taking a business course in the Dixon Business College at Dixon, Ill. He also studied medicine for a year at the Medical College at the University of Wooster at Cleveland, Ohio. He was only a babe when he accompanied his parents to Dunn County, Wisconsin, in 1856, but his advent here made him one of the early settlers or pioneers of the county, an honor which he did not then appreciate. He accompanied them also in their migrations from place to place, settling permanently in 1871 in the town of Dunn, this county, on the Dr. Crocker farm in Section 23. On the death of the Doctor in 1880, George C., with his brother Walter, purchased the farm, containing then 200 acres, and they have since continued to operate it in partnership, their business association having continued for 44 years. They have improved the place in various ways, having rebuilt the house and barns, and by the purchase of additional land, having enlarged the area of the farm to $408\frac{3}{4}$ acres. Always interested in good stock, they have wasted no time on inferior animals, but are breeding good Durham cattle, Oxford Down sheep and Poland-China hogs. Both have rendered some public service. George C. was for several years a member of the town board, and served 18 years on the school board. He was also for 20 years a director of the Farmers' Mutual Insurance Co.; while Walter has also served as clerk of the school board. Walter Curtiss when a young man learned the jeweller's trade at Elgin, Ill., where he remained for a number of years. Thence he went to Eau Claire, Wis., where until 1880 he had charge of a jewelry store for A. P. Wilder. He then came to Dunn County and engaged in farming with his brother George C. The Curtiss family stands high in the community, the sister Ellen being a member and active supporter of the Baptist Church in Menomonie.

MR. AND MRS. COURTLAND B. BIRD

Courtland B. Bird, owner of a considerable farm in the town of Otter Creek. but now living retired, was born at Moundville, Marquette County, Wis., March 1, 1854, son of Nathaniel B. and Mary Ann (Cooper) Bird. The parents came to Wisconsin from New York State, locating at Fort Winnebago in 1847. After a residence there of about one year, they moved to Portage County, and thence in 1855 to Eau Claire. In 1860 they moved to Dunn County, making the journey in a wagon drawn by oxen and bringing a drove of stock with them. Ön arriving here they took a homestead in the town of Peru, where they started a farm, Nathaniel Bird the first year cutting brush for stock feed, as his land was unimproved. In 1864 he took a homestead of 80 acres in Section 18, town of Menomonie and also bought 80 acres adjoining, making a farm of 160 acres. He and his wife spent the remainder of their lives on this farm, he dying Dec. 11, 1893, and she on Feb. 27. 1899. Their children were: Phoebe Ann and Mary Jane (twins), born Oct. 24, 1835; Lucretia E., born Oct. 29, 1837; Adeline, born Oct. 24, 1839; Serepta, born Oct. 21, 1841; William Henry C., born Aug. 27, 1843; Henry, born Aug. 17, 1845; David Cooper, born May 9, 1848; George Washington, born Aug. 11, 1851; Courtland B., born March 1, 1854; and Austin D., born May 15, 1856. Courtland B. Bird acquired his education partly in Dunn County and partly in the city of Eau In early manhood he went to Dakota and homesteaded 160 acres of govern-Claire. ment land, on which he lived for seven years. At the end of that time he returned to Dunn County, Wis., and bought the farm of his father-in-law, G. K. Irvine, in Section 15, town of Menomonie. Later he sold that farm and bought another, near Wheeler. Subsequent to that he bought 520 acres in Sections 14-15, town of Otter Creek, and he has now 65 acres of this wild land under cultivation, the remainder being in pasture. In the fall of 1923 Mr. Bird sold 160 acres to his grandson Ralph, so his own property now contains 360 acres. He is carrying on general farming, stock raising and dairying. He is a man who has well preserved his faculties up to his present age of 70 years and can recall the days of long ago when the lumber industry was the chief enterprise flourishing here and agriculture was in its primitive stage. He himself followed logging and lumbering, and many times helped to drive logs down the river. He also worked on the construction of the "Soo" railroad. For many years he served as chairman of his town board and for several years was chairman of the county board, thus taking a prominent and active part in the direction of the affairs of the county. He was married 60 years ago, on Aug. 1. 1874, to Mary Ellen Irvine, daughter of G. K. and Fannie A. (Cowles) Irvine of Fort Madison, Iowa. Five children were the fruit of this marriage, namely, Bert C., Grace, William J., Jessie L. and Minnie, all of whom are now living. Bert C., who married Ivie Irvine, resides in the town of Otter Creek. He and his wife have five children, Gladys, Grace, Mary, Elbridge and Harry. Grace married Theodore Decker and they live at Rockford, Wash. Their children are Thelma. William J., who resides in the town of Sherman, Dunn County, Leona and Luella. Wis., married Iva Shafer and they have five children, Fred, Florence, Dean, Raymond and Kenneth. Jessie L., now Mrs. John W. Sherwood of the town of Grant, has had two children, Maud and Mabel, the latter of whom died in infancy. Minnie is the wife of George B. Gregerson of the town of Wilson and has two children, Esther and Ellen. Mr. Bird's farm is now conducted by his grandson, Ralph Bird. Mr. Bird has a cottage on Lake Chetek, where he spends his summers and during the winters he travels. In the winter of 1924-25 he and his wife took the Ozark Mountain trip by auto, being gone for five months.

Frank C. Irvine, a former resident of Dunn County, for whom Irvington was named, was born at Fort Madison, Iowa, Oct. 25, 1853, son of George K. and Fanny (Cole) Irvine. The father was a native of Pennsylvania and the mother of the state of Maine. They were married in Pennsylvania and resided for some time in Bradford County, that state, coming west to Iowa with Capt. William Wilson (later of the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company). In 1854, when the subject of this sketch was a year old, the family came to Dunn County, Wisconsin, settling in the locality new known as Irvington, but then called Bullard Creek. There until 1882 George K. Irvine was engaged in the operation of a sawmill, after which he settled on a farm of about 150 acres one mile to the south. In time he acquired about 500 acres of farm and timber land, in the town of Menomonie. He died on his farm there on March 20, 1901. Before his death his wife had gone to Dakota with her youngest daughter, when the latter married, but later went to live with her eldest daughter in Birmingham, Ala. She died some 10 or 12 years ago. The children of Mr. and Mrs. George K. Irvine were as follows: Maria, now deceased, who married George F. Burton of Birmingham, Ala., and had three children, George, Milly and Florence; Phoebe, wife of N. E. Tuttle of Neswa, Minn., whose children are Edith, Robert, Clara, Lulu, George and Ernest; Ellen, now Mrs. C. B. Bird of Wheeler, Wis., who has five children, Bert C., Grace, William J., Jessie L. and Minnie; Frank Carlton, subject of this sketch; Guy, deceased, who married Luna Curtis of Menomonie and had five children, Fanny, John, Elbridge, Susan and Bernadetta; Susan, who married Charles Hevener of Menomonie, both being now deceased, having died in Oregon, and whose children were Ray, Florence and Marion; Katie, a twin sister of Frank C., who died at the age of 12 years about 1864; and Abraham, who died in the same year as Katie when four years old. Frank C. Irvine received his early instruction from his sister, as there was no school at or near Irvington until 1872. He attended grammar and high school in Menomonie, however, and then became his father's assistant in the sawmill (a water mill), so continuing until 1882, when the father having settled on his farm, and the milling business being in Frank C.'s hands, the latter bought a steam mill situated on the creek, about 80 rods south of the water mill, and this steam mill he operated until In that year the Coffin Box & Lumber Co. began operations at Irvington 1890 and our subject went to work for them as superintendent, remaining in that position there until 1907, when the company ceased operations at Irvington and Mr. Irvine subsequently and until 1909 was in their employ at Midway, Twin Cities. After that until 1917 he worked independently as a mechanical engineer, doing general jobbing work, including the installation of machinery in mills. Since 1917 he has held the position of mechanical engineer with the J. L. Owens Co. of Minneapolis, manufacturers of agricultural machinery. Mr. Irvine was married March 4, 1876, in Menomonie, Wis., to Ida P. George, who was born June 28, 1858, daughter of Reuben F. and Eliza W. (Wiggins) George, her father being a native of North Carolina and her mother of Freedom, Maine. The latter, born July 31, 1831, came to Columbia County, Wisconsin, and was married to Mr. George (her first husband) on May 17, 1849. Their children were Ella, May, Charles and Ida, of whom Ella is now deceased. It was in 1858 that Mr. and Mrs. Reuben F. George settled in Fall City, Dunn County. Wis. In October, 1865, she married her second husband, Lewis Hughes, and they had a son, Frank, besides one or two children who died Mr. and Mrs. Frank C. Irvine have been the parents of eight children, voung. namely, Mabel, Royal J., Lewis C., May, Bessie M., Bernice V., Hazel L. and Elsie F., in regard to whom the following data is available: Mabel, born Sept. 11, 1876. married W. D. Adams of Menomonie, where they now live, and has three children, Grace, Ethel and Roy. Royal J., born Sept. 7, 1879, died at the age of 19 years. Lewis C., born March 10, 1881, died when nine years old. May, born May 11, 1884, married R. K. Welch of Minneapolis and has one child, Virginia. Bessie M., born Aug. 28, 1889, married A. W. Lowell of Minneapolis and has one child, Jean-Bernice V., born July 19, 1891, died unmarried on Jan. 1, 1919. Hazel L., ette. born Oct. 6, 1895, married Charles C. Clark of Minneapolis; no children. Elsie F. born Feb. 6, 1899, is now Mrs. L. G. Steinmetz of Minneapolis and has two childdren, Gloria F. and Jack L. Mr. Irvine has always been a Republican in politics and when residing in Dunn County served as school clerk. His fraternal affiliations are with the Modern Woodmen. Mrs. Lrvine is a member of the Presbyterian Church

Burton F. Blodgett, proprietor of a good farm of 236 acres in the town of Tiffany, was born in the city of Menomonie, Wis., Feb. 8, 1879, son of Roswell P. and Julia E. (Rowe) Blodgett. The father was born in Wisconsin, Jan. 11, 1852, and was married to Julia E. Howe in Iowa on Thanksgiving Day, 1874. It was in 1878 that they came to Menomonie, Wis., where for some time Roswell P. Blodgett worked in the mills. In 1884 he moved with his family to the town of Tiffany, where he took 160 acres of wild land in Section 12 and began the development of a farm. There he lived for about 24 years, during which time he developed 50 acres of the land and erected a good set of buildings. In 1908 he sold that place and bought a wild tract of 200 acres on Section 13, in the same town, on which he resided long enough to make some considerable improvements, but finally he sold it and moved to Oregon, where he died. His wife Julia, who was born in the state of New York, Nov. 25, 1853, is still living, being a resident of Salem, Ore. Their children, seven in number, were: Anna, now Mrs. Edward Simmons of Salem, Ore.; Sarah, who is Mrs. Henry Peterson of Salem, Ore.; Burton F., subject of this sketch; Samuel, deceased; Grace, deceased; Ira L., of Portland, Ore.; and Ida, Samuel, Grace and Ida all fell victims to diphtheria in the year 1891, a deceased. pathetic end to three promising young lives. Burton F. Blodgett was a child of about five years when he accompanied his parents to the land on which they settled n the town of Tiffany, where his environment was similar to that which confronted the pioneer settlers of this county, except that much of the pine timber had been cut by the lumbermen and large stretches of unpicturesque stump land were to be seen in various directions. He acquired the elements of knowledge in District School No. 4, and subsequently becoming his father's assistant, remained with his parents until the age of 23 years, from 1902 to 1906 renting and operating the home farm in Section 12. During this latter period, on Dec. 13, 1903, he was married to Josephine M. Kellogg, who was born near Prairie Farm, Barron County, Dec. 4, 1886, daughter of Elmer E. and Etta M. (Forward) Kellogg. Her parents were farmers who subsequently, about 1911, moved to the town of Tiffany, Dunn County, where they were living at the time of Josephine's marriage. It was in 1901 that Mr. Blodgett bought and settled on his present farm of 236 acres, situated in Sections 11, 13 and 14, town of Tiffany. He has 160 acres under cultivation, and has a good set of buildings, the barn with steel equipment, and has good watering facili-He has made good progress in general farming and dairying, keeping grade ties. cattle which he is breeding up to the Holstein-Frisian type, and in the village of Boyceville, three miles to the north, he has a convenient market and source of At election time he votes for the man rather than with any particular supplies. Mr. and Mrs. Blodgett have been the parents of eight children, who were party. born as follows: Glen H., Sept. 20, 1904; Percy E., Oct. 20, 1905; Elmer R., Aug. 30, 1907; Harvey M., Jan. 13, 1909; Elva I., Feb. 5, 1910; Roswell P., Jan. 23, 1911; Raymond L., May 6, 1914; and Pearl B., March 16, 1920. The first born, Glenn H., was drowned on May 30, 1920, when in his sixteenth year. Elmer E. Kellogg, father of Mrs. B. F. Blodgett, was born in Wisconsin on Nov. 2, 1863, and her mother, in maidenhood Etta M. Forward, in New York State, Sept. 5, 1866. They were married near Prairie Farm, Wis., in 1881, and, as already stated, moved to the town of Tiffany, Dunn County, about the year 1911. Here, however, they did not remain long, but in 1912 went to Colorado, and they are now living at Siebert, that state. They had ten children: Sidney A., who is an invalid living with them in Colorado; Lionel H., residing at Haystown in the town of Tiffany; Josephine M., now Mrs. B. F. Blodgett; Herbert C. B., of Minneapolis; Rue M., who is Mrs. John Jensen of Colorado Springs, Colo.; Roland R., also living at Colorado Springs; Fay M., wife of Clarence Ashby of Denver, Colo.; Boyd, who died in infancy; Lottie B., now Mrs. Philip Mullen of Point Pearl, Colo.; and Hazel I., who is Mrs. Emmett Bell, residing in Colorado.

Albert Lentz, a well known farmer of the town of Stanton, who is conducting his farm of 160 acres in Section 13, along modern lines, was born in Pommern, Germany, Feb. 11, 1860, son of Frederick and Dorothy (Sadler) Lentz. The parents never came to America and are both now deceased, the father having died when our subject was 10 years old and the mother about 1909. Of their eight children those who came to this country were Albert, Theodore, John and Bertha, the last mentioned being now Mrs. William Radke of the state of Washington. Theodore resides in Menomonie and John in Eau Claire. Three other sons, William, August and Furn, died in Germany. Albert Lentz came to the United States alone in 1882, locating in Menomonie, Wis., where he found employment with the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company, in whose mills he worked during the summers being employed in lumber camps during the winters. After being thus occupied for ten years he went to Phillips, Wis., where he worked for one year in the mill of the John R. Davis Then in 1892 he bought 80 acres of wild land in Section 13, town of Lumber Co. Stanton. At that time there was no road leading to the property and he had to cut one through the woods over which to haul lumber for his first house, which was a small frame one. His family at that time consisted of himself, wife and three To his wife, whose maiden name was Augusta Grutt, he had been marchildren. ried on May 23, 1884. Though born in Germany, Sept. 29, 1862, she was the daughter of Charles and Mary Grutt, of the town of Sherman, Dunn County, and was two years and six months old when she came with them to Wisconsin, the family settling at Watertown, where they remained two years before coming to Dunn County. After moving on to his farm Mr. Lentz had to work that year in Phillips to earn money for current expenses. He had paid for his land in full and had but little money left, but as soon as he was able he began the work of clearing and farm development, his wife helping in the outdoor work, and together they made some progress, both being hard workers. His progress for the 32 years that have since elapsed need not be followed step by step, a brief statement of present conditions being sufficient to all those who have themselves trod in the footsteps of the To his original 80 acres he subsequently added 80 more, which gives pioneers. him his present farm of 160 acres, one half of which is under the plow, the balance being in timber and pasture. The house, having been rebuilt, is modern in all essential respects and is a comfortable dwelling provided with a hot water heating system and lighted by acetylene gas. Mr. Lentz has two large frame barns and other substantial buildings, including hay sheds, tool sheds, granary, hog house and poultry house. His principal barn has cement floors, and is provided with steel stanchions, and litter carriers, and both barns have gas illumination like the house, as well as running water. Mr. Lents keeps Guernsey cattle of good grade, and milks 30 cows, making use of a milking machine. He also raises Chester White Hogs. The farm is four miles south of the village of Boyceville and 13 miles northwest of Menomonie. Mr. Lentz also owns another farm in this vicinity, a farm of 120 acres with good frame buildings, good fences, and with 70 acres under the plow, which he bought in 1914, and which is under the management of his son, Edward. On this farm he has just completed a fine bungalow residence. Though Mr. Lentz himself, retired from the active management of his property in 1924, he

He and his party. wife have been the parents of ten children: Emma L. M., Leona A., William C. F., Agnes M. L., Stella M. M., Elsie, Robert F. A., Edward H. R., John A. H. and Mabel M., of whom the following is a further record. Emma L. M., born March 8, 1885, is now the wife of Jacob Karlen of Boyceville. Leona A., born July 6, 1887, is the wife of James Keegan of the town of Stanton. William C. F., born Dec. 26, 1889, is now a lumbering contractor in British Columbia. Agnes M. L. and Stella M. M., were twins born Feb. 11, 1893, of whom Stella died in March, 1894. Agnes, who was graduated from the Dunn County Normal School and from a business college in Boulder, Colo., was for some years a teacher of penmanship in public schools in Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota. She is now employed in a business office in Milwaukee. Elsie, born Oct. 8, 1896, is the wife of Raymond Hale of the town of Stanton. Robert F. A., born April 12, 1898, is engaged in operating the home farm. Edward H. R. and Edna C. M. (twins) were born Sept. 17, 1899; Edward is now conducting his fathers other farm in the town of Stanton, and Edna, a graduate of the Boyceville High School, is a stenographer and secretary in the office of Albert Quilling in Menomonie. John A. H., born March 1, 1902, is a telegraph operator at Harve, Mont. Mabel M., born March 3, 1904, is living on the home farm.

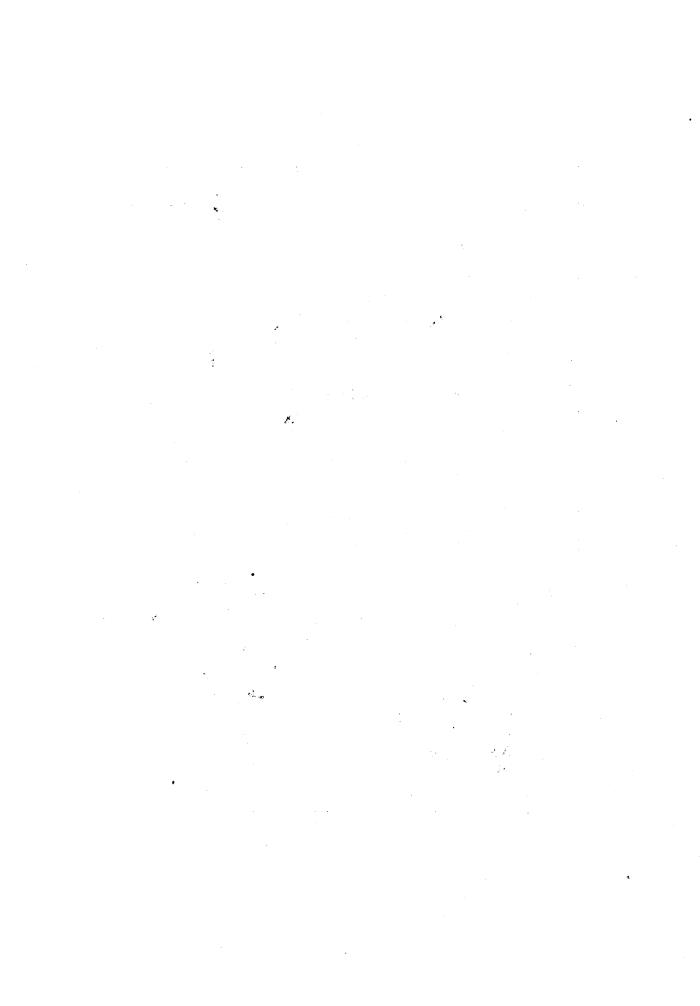

Edward O. Larson, who may be counted among the pioneers of Dunn County, and who, after aiding for many years in its agricultural development, and in other important matters, is now living retired in the village of Colfax, was born near Drammen, Norway, June 10, 1850, son of Ole and Bertha (Ellingson) Larson. On May 17, 1853, he set out with his parents for America, reached his third birthday on board the vessel, and after a voyage of ten weeks and two days, arrived at the port of Quebec. From there they took boat or vessel up the St. Lawrence River to a point where they could make railroad connection for the states and by the latter method of transportation they reached Racine, Wis. There the family remained until 1855, when they moved to Viroqua, Vernon County, Wis., and in 1859 to Coon Valley in the same county. From the latter place they came in 1863 to Dunn County, locating in Running Valley, town of Grant. Young Edward O. Larson attended school in both Vernon and Dunn counties, though intermittently and for a limited period, as he had to help his father in the work of the farm. He remained on the home place until he was 24 years old, and then started in for himself, buying a farm of 160 acres in Running Valley, which was a part of the original Running farm. A little later he bought 200 acres of adjoining wild land, on which he built a good house, into which he moved with his wife, whom he had recently married after living a bachelor for six years on his original purchase. This may be regarded as his real start in the founding of a home for himself, what he had done before being merely preliminary work. Now came years of still harder work, but it was work that brought permanent and satisfactory results. Every season more land was cleared and buildings put up as needed or as soon as he had the means. Among the latter was a fine, two-story barn of 36 x 68 feet, and the other outbuildings were all constructed in a substantial manner and with a view to future Thus Mr. Larson became one of the progressive and prosperous contingencies. farmers of Dunn County, and more than that, as will be shown. He remained on his farm until April, 1904, when he sold it and moved to the village of Colfax, where he has built a fine modern house, which he now occupies. In addition to his agricultural operations, he was for about three years engaged in lumbering on the Chippewa River with his brother Lars. At first they operated on a jobbing basis but later bought their own pine and logged for themselves. In 1879 they went to Cumberland, Barron County, where they bought timber land and a portable sawmill and operated for two years. Edward O. Larson has also cut some figure in the affairs of town and county government. For a total of 16 years, not consecutive, he was chairman of the board of supervisors of the town of Grant, and therefore a member of the county board, and he also served as school clerk for 20 years. When in 1906 the citizens were considering the question of establishing a municipal judgeship, they asked Mr. Larson if he would accept the office of judge if it were established in Colfax, and, after consideration, he said that he would. The design being put into execution, Mr. Larson was appointed municipal judge by Governor La Follette and after serving one year under the appointment, was elected for a term of four years, and then through re-election served another term of four years. He was the second municipal judge in Dunn County, and as such rendered efficient and valuable service. He is a man of a strong moral and consistently christian character, for many years a faithful member of the M. E. Church, and a doer and not merely a hearer of the Word. He is fraternally affiliated with the Modern Woodmen of America. Mr. Larson's marriage has already been briefly mentioned. It took place Feb. 18, 1874, and united him with Annie C. Running, who was born in Vernon County, Wis., June 7, 1851, daughter of Ole and Bergetta (Thompson) Running. It has resulted in six children, who were born as follows: Bertha, Dec. 19, 1874; Elvin, July 12, 1876; Emma, Jan. 24, 1878; Lydia, April 19, 1881; Elvin (second), Dec. 2, 1886, and Blanche, Jan. 16, 1894. The first Elvin died in childhood, in 1881. In regard to the surviving children a few more facts are available. Bertha is the wife of Henry Running and lives in Chicago, where Mr. Running is employed in a cold storage plant as manager of the shipping department. Emma is now Mrs. Ole Gilboa and resides with her husband in Winona, Minn., where he is engaged in mercantile business. They have four children, Borghild, Bertrand, Marjorie and Ronald. Lydia married Thomas Braaten and they reside in Colfax, where Mr. Braaten is engaged in a draying business. They have four children, Lloyd, Merle, Evelyn and Doris. Elvin (second of the name) is chief clerk for the United States Steel Co. at McDonald, Ohio. He married Marian Vogel and is the father of three children, Barbara, Edward and Elizabeth Ann. Blanche became the wife of Harry Johnson and they live in Winona, Minn., where he is engaged in mercantile business in partnership with his brother-in-law. Ole Gilboa. Mr. and Mrs. Johnson have one child, Robert. Thus the record of the Larson family is seen to be worthy of preservation in the annals of Dunn County. One more important fact, however, it remains to add. On April 18, 1924, Mr. and Mrs. Edward O. Larson celebrated their Golden Wedding at their home in the village of Colfax, keeping open house from 1:00 to 4:00 p.m. In the evening their relations and old neighbors were invited to supper, about 60 being served. Visitors appeared up to a late hour, speeches were made, and the occasion was one of rare interest and enjoyment. The happy couple, spared to enjoy an event that comes only to a few, received many congratulations, to say nothing of numerous presents and $171 in money as gifts, of which amount $160 was in gold. The occasion was also unique in the fact that they were the first couple to celebrate their Golden Wedding in this community who had grown up in it from childhood. All their children and grandchildren were present except their daughter Emma, who was sick at her home in Winona, Minn.

William Gehrking, now living retired on the fine farm in Section 36, town of Elk Mound, which he himself developed frcm its original wild and primitive condition, was born in Germany, Sept. 24, 1844. He was there educated and grew to manhood. When old enough he entered the standing army of Germany. He also served two years in the war between Germany and France. In 1872, he came to America, locating first in La Crosse, Wis., where he remained for one summer. From there he came to Elk Mound, Dunn County, and for about three years thereafter was employed on the farm of Henry Seidenberg. It was at the end of that time that he bought his first $\xi 0$ acres of wild land in Section 36, from which startingpoint he followed the path of unremitting industry to the goal of final success. From time to time he added to his landed possessions, as his means permitted, until he found himself the owner of 680 acres, some of this additional land being situated in the county of Chippewa, just across the road from his original farm. In his development of the property he showed himself to be a man of foresight and a skilful planner as well as hard worker, exercising care in the arrangement of his buildings so as to have them conveniently placed with respect to each other and with ample space between to give passage to teams, thus facilitating work without waste of time or labor. These buildings, in addition to a fine residence, include a large dairy barn of 36 x 66 feet in ground plan, with full basement; a small barn of 24 x $\overline{40}$ feet, and other out-buildings for the storage of corn, small grains, potatoes and machinery, besides a garage for his auto truck and pleasure cars. A good lawn and shade trees form an appropriate setting for the neat and commodious residence, and the whole establishment bears the aspect of a well designed and excellently kept modern farm. Mr. Gehrking followed agriculture on this place with good success until 1904, when he sold 80 acres of it to his son William H., and rented the remainder to his other sons, Fred J., Louis and George, who farmed it until 1918. The land operated by them was then made over to them as proprietors, including the home "forty," on which Mr. Cehrking lives with his son Fred J., and which cannot be alienated as long as he lives. Mr. Gehrking was married July 3, 1875, to Mary Hesemeyer, who was born in Germany, and came to this country in 1874. After living with him in happy wedlock for nearly 43 years, she passed away on March 25, 1918, having faithfully performed her duties as wife and mother. Their children, nine in number, were as follows. Henry, now deceased; John, also deceased; William H., already mentioned; Herman, deceased; George, Fred J. and Louis, already mentioned; and Sophia and Emil, who are both deceased. Mr. Gehrking was reared in the faith of the Lutheran Church, of which he is a consistent member.

Fred J. Gehrking, a practical farmer of the town of Elk Mound, member of a well known family, and at present serving as assessor of the town, was born on the farm on which he is now living, June 18, 1883, son of William and Mary (Hesemeyer) Gehrking. He acquired a public school education and grew to manhood on his parents' farm, which he helped to develop. He also attended the agricultural department of the state university at Madison, Wis., for the two terms of In 1904 he, with his brothers Louis and George, rented the home 1904 and 1905. farm and conducted it on rental until 1910, which it becaute the factor of 40. Fred J., besides being an active and capable farmer working successfully to advance himself along the road of prosperity, is also interested in welfare of the general community. He was assessor of the town of Elk Mound in 1908 and 1909. In 1918 he was again elected assessor of the town of Elk Mound, served in that office during the following two years, and, being again elected to it in 1921, is still serving. Mr. Gehrking was married June 17, 1914, to Eleanor Finlayson, who was born in the town of Washington, Eau Claire County, Dec. 31, 1892, daughter of John and Ida (Bleichrodt) Finlayson, who were prominent farmers Mr. and Mrs. Gehrking are members of the German Lutheran of that town. Church. They have a daughter, Ruth M., who was born Oct. 15, 1919.

Jacob Flick, formerly an active farmer in the town of Dunn, but now living retired in the village of Elmwood, with his son, "Tony," was born in Canton Bern, Switzerland, Nov. 15, 1848, son of John and Marguerite (Gruber) Flick. The family emigrated to America in two detachments, the father, with two sons, Henry and Robert, coming in 1868; and the mether with two other sons, Jacob and Peter, and a daughter, Marguerite, following in 1869. Settlement was made in Downsville, this county, the father and sons entering the employ of Knapp, Stout & Co., who were then operating here. But the main object of John Flick and his wife was to get onto the land and build up a home on property they could call their own, and so in 1872 he bought 80 acres in Section 16, and entered upon his career as a farmer. His work was the same that every pioneer of this county had had to do—to make a clearing, build a log cabin and barn, fell trees, grub stumps, and break and cultivate the land—all of it hard work most of which had to be continued for many years. With the assistance of his wife and children he proved equal to the task, and before Mrs. Marguerite died, on Feb. 7, 1885, good progress had been made. He survived her until Aug. 20, 1898, and then passed away, one of the grand army that built up the wealth and civilization that are Dunn County's heritage today. Into the home life of Mr. and Mrs. John Flick had come eight children, who, as they grew up, had lightened their labors and given them hope of a creditable prosperity. Of these, five are now living, the full list being as follows: John, now living retired in Durand; Fred, deceased; Rudolph, of Hudson, N. Y.; Henry, deceased; Jacob, as already mentioned, a prosperous farmer in Section 16, town of Dunn; Peter, also living in this town; and Robert and Marguerite. Jacob Flick spent the first 21 years of his life in his native land, where he acquired a good education for his class in society. He also learned the carpenter's trade, which he followed there until he came to this country in 1869. His period of employment with the firm of Knapp, Stout & Co., at Downsville lasting two years, and then he joined with his father in buving the 80 acres that constituted the original home farm. He took part in the erection of the log buildings and the clearing and development of the land, and in 1879 he showed his enterprise by purchasing a horse team, which necessitated the building of another log barn. The farm in time coming into his possession, he bought more land, increasing its area to 180 acres, and replaced the original log buildings with a good frame house and barns. Having a good eve for the shadow of coming events, he was one of the first farmers hereabouts to get into the dairy business, also advising others to do so, and he was one of the organizers and a trustee of the first creamery started in this locality, which was at Dunnville, but later on he became a stockholder in the Downsville Cooperative Creamery and is yet. In 1922 Mr. Flick practically retired, and in the fall of 1924 he rented out the farm and took up his residence with his son "Tony." Though a busy man during his active career, Mr. Flick showed public spirit by helping in the administration of local government. He was a member of the town board for many years, and also road overseer, was assessor 14 years, and clerk of Joint School District No. 4 fo 21 years. His father at an early day having planted two hill pine trees on the home place, which today are large trees, he adopted the name of Twin Pine Farm for it. both for its obvious significance and in remembrance of his father. Mr. Flick was first married in 1870, to Magdalene Michael, who was born in Switzerland, April 11, 1851, and came to America in the year of her marriage. She proved a faithful wife and good helpmate and after 26 years as such passed away on Aug. 14, 1906. She was the mother of Mr. Flick's ten children, Robert, Elizabeth, Paul, Bertha, Victor, Mildred, Helen, Alfred, Edwin and Anton, in regard to whom the following may be added. Robert, born Jan. 3, 1871, became a business man of Addie, Wash, and Elizabeth, born Feb. 16, 1872, is now Mrs. John Roth of died Dec. 17, 1924. the town of Dunn and has three children, Margaret, Ernest and Esther. Paul, born March 23, 1874, who is in the meat business at Kenyon, Minn., married Catherine Fagen and has three children, Helen, Raymond and Walter. Bertha, born Feb. 11, 1876, married Fred Dislin, a contractor in St. Paul, and is the mother of three children, Loraine, Dorothy and Gladys. Victor, born Feb. 9, 1878, and now a farmer in Alberta, Canada, married Olga Beulow, and has two children, Ruby and Irene. Mildred, born Jan. 3, 1880, who is the wife of Conrad Kraft of Menomonie. has ten children, Elizabeth, Lois, Leonard, Howard, Harold, Evelvn, Robert, Kenneth, Madaline and Margaret. Helen, born May 9, 1882, is the wife of Albert Dislin, a St. Paul contractor, and her children are Lucille and Albert Ir. Alfred. born March 3, 1884, is in the bakery business at New Rockford, N. D. He married Madaline Smallick and has five children, four daughters and one son. Edwin E., born Dec. 25, 1885, is now in Florida, where he follows the trade of a carpenter; he married and has one child, Arthur. Anton, born Feb. 10, 1888, who is a baker at Elmwood, Wis., married Edna Weber, and has four children, Dorothy, Clarice, Madlyn and Elizabeth. Mr. Flick is a member of St. Jacob's Lutheran Congregation at Downsville, of which for several years he was a trustee and the secretary.

Martin Fladoes, president of the Bank of Menomonie and who has long been one of the leading citizens of Dunn County, both as a business man and as an incumbent of public office, was born in Norway, Jan. 23, 1860, son of Sever and Ann M. (Overlie) Fladoes. The family came to the United States in 1875, arriving in Menomonie, Wis., Aug. 23, that year. For the next two years Sever Fladces, the father, was in the employ of the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company, after which he settled on a farm in the town of Menomonie which, was his home for the rest of his life. He and his wife had three children: Karen, deceased: Andrew, now a farmer in North Dakota, and Martin, of Menomonie. Martin Fladoes attended school in his native land and was 15 years old when he accompanied his parents to America. Like his father, he entered the employ of the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company, remaining with them until he was 25 years of age, working in the woods or mills, or on the drives, wherever he was most needed. At the end of his service with them he returned home and for the next nine years was engaged in operating his father's farm. In the fall of 1894, having by that time become well and favorably known throughout Dunn County, he was elected register of deeds, taking office Jan. 1, 1895. His entry into the financial world occurred in 1903, when he became connected with the First National Bank of Menomonie. There during the next two years he learned much relative to the banking business, and, his adaptability being recognized, in January, 1905, he was offered and accepted the position of cashier of the Bank of Menomonie, which he retained until 1910. Then together with L. D. Harvey and others he purchased the James H. Stout interest in the bank, Mr. Harvey becoming president and Mr. Fladoes vice president. As such the latter remained until 1922, in which year Mr. Harvey having died, Mr. Fladoes bought the controlling interest in the bank and has since held the office of president. It has always been his habit to give the best that was in him to the task at which he was engaged and to be the sort of man sought by a job rather than the man seeking it. Before he was register of deeds he held school and town offices at various times, proving himself efficient and reliable as he has done in everything else. He is a member of the Commercial Club and a blue lodge Mason. Mr. Fladoes was married in Menomonie, Jan. 16, 1886, to Anna Midtlyng, daughter of Andrew and Mary Midtylng who are now deceased. Five children, as follows, are the fruit of this marriage: Alice, now Mrs. E. N. Atwood of Malta, Mont.; Karen, who is food demonstrator for the Washburn-Crosby Milling Co. of Minneapolis; Clara, who is in charge of the girls' physical training department in the high school at Virginia, Minn.; Martin A., traveling salesman for Sivyer Steel Casting Co. in Milwaukee, and John A., the present cashier of the Bank of Menomonie. Mr. and Mrs. Fladoes and their children are members of the Norwegian Lutheran Church.

Charles Frank, Sr., a retired farmer living in the town of Weston on a fine farm which he developed from the wilderness, was born in Kaddingen, state of Hessen. Germany, son of Conrad and Katherine (Zichner) Frank. The parents, who were farmers by occupation, spent their lives in their native land. In addition to their son Charles, they had four daughters: Katherine, who died in Germany; Elizabeth, who married Carl Schaaf and is now a widow living in Germany; Mary, who is Mrs. Herman Kuesel of the town of Weston; and Bertha, who married a Mr. Geisdorf and lives in Spring Valley, Pierce County, Wis. Charles Frank, Sr., was edu-cated in his native land and worked for his father on the home farm until he came to the United States in 1870. Before doing so he took an important step, which proved a most happy one, being married on March 21, that year, to Elizabeth Beck, who was born in the same locality as himself, on Jan. 17, 1849, daughter of Casper and Mary (Jork) Beck. Both her parents died in Germany. Mr. and Mrs. Charles Frank took passage for this country on the steamer Lina, which landed them at the port of New York, whence they came west at once to Dodge County, Wisconsin. There they resided for eight years, during the first three of which Mr. Frank worked out for others, during the next five operating a rented farm. In the spring of 1878, with two other men, Herman Kuesel and Louis Naseband, he came to Menomonie, Dunn County, where the party were met by Henry Miller, who acted as guide for them to the locality where they had resolved to settle, in the western part of the town of Weston. Each bought 80 acres of heavy timber land in Section 18, being the first settlers in that part of the county, with the little hamlet of Hatchville as their nearest source of supplies. There were no roads and to reach their land they had to follow trails through the woods. Mr. Frank cut the first tree that was felled on his 80-acre tract, erected a small dwelling, and that spring by hard work cleared three acres and planted a garden, a very good beginning for so short a time. In the planting and care of the garden his wife helped materially. Their means, however, were small, and in the summer and fall Mr. Frank used to earn a few dollars by working in the harvest fields near Hammond, St. Croix County. As there was no market then for his timber, he had to burn most of it to get it out of his way, and in his clearing operations for six years he used oxen, at the end of that time buying his first team of horses. In 1889, having by that time made fair progress, Mr. Frank bought more land, consisting of an 80-acre tract in the town of Spring Lake, Pierce County, but which lay just across the road from his original place. In 1892 he erected a new house and out-buildings. Ten years later, in 1902, he gave to his son, Charles Frank, Jr., the 80-acre tract of his farm lying in Pierce County, continuing to operate the remainder until 1910. He then retired from active work, turning the farm over to his son Herman, though he has since continued to reside on it. He had built up one of the finest farms in the western part of Dunn County, surmounting all the difficulties experienced by the pioneer settlers. For many years he was also active in various matters pertaining to the general progress and welfare of his locality. He aided new settlers as they came in, helped to build the much needed roads, and was one of the organizers of the Elmwood Cooperative Creamery, in which he was a stockholder for many years. For several years he was a director on the school board of his district and for five years a member of the Weston town board. During the entire period his wife was his faithful companion and co-worker, and to her much of their mutual success is due. They have had six children, Emma, Charles, Ida, Herman, Louis and Marv, of whom they have lost but Emma, who was born Aug. 6, 1872, in Dodge County, where she died in September, 1875. The record of the others is briefly as follows. Charles, born June 22, 1874, and now a farmer in the town of Spring Lake, Pierce County, Wis., married Amelia Podoll. Ida, born March 11, 1875, married William Franka and lives in Pierce County. Herman, born Feb. 17, 1877, and now operating the old home farm, is given separate mention on these pages. Louis, born Sept. 7, 1879, married Anna Hatfield and resides in Elmwood. He and his wife are the parents of two children, Martin and Walter. Mary, born May 7, 1882, is now Mrs. Watt Werner of the town of Weston and the mother of nine children, Arthur, Edna, Helen, Frances, Clarence, Margaret, Elmer, Goldine and Robert.

Herman Frank, now operating the old Frank farm in Section 18, town of Weston, which was built up by his parents from wild land, was born in Dodge County, Wisconsin, Feb. 17, 1877. He is the son of Charles and Elizabeth Frank, whose interesting story of pioneer endeavor and achievement, has already been told. When old enough to toddle to the district school, he began to explore the mysteries of reading, writing and arithmetic, with perhaps a little geography later on; but it was not his destiny to travel much farther along the path of scholastic knowledge as he soon had to solve problems of a still more practical kind connected with the task of developing the parental farm, in which he became his father's assistant. So he remained for many years, in that time becoming a good practical farmer. In 1910, on his father's retirement, he took over the farm, to which he has added 40 acres in the same section, and he is operating it much as his father did, except that he has gone more extensively into dairying. He keeps grade Holstein cattle with a pure bred sire, and is making satisfactory progress. He was married Nov. 18, 1909. in Pierce County, to Otillia Hannack, who was born in Dodge County, Feb. 2, 1883, daughter of Albert and Johanna (Budhan) Hannack. Her parents settled in Pierce County in 1885 and there died many years after, the father on March 29, 1917, and the mother on Nov. 5, 1923. Mr. and Mrs. Herman Frank are the parents of three children: Hilda, born Feb. 12, 1913; Loraine, born Nov. 30, 1915, and Helen, born Sept. 2, 1921. The family are members of St. John's Lutheran Church at Hatchville.

John H. Holland, proprietor of a general store at Graytown, in Section 5, town of New Haven, was born in Dublin, Ireland, Nov. 1, 1865, son of William and Bendelia (Manning) Holland. The father was for a number of years a merchant in New York City-in the dry goods business-and it was there that he and his wife were married on Jan. 3, 1863, taking up their residence in Brooklyn. Shortly before the birth of their son John, they went back to Ireland on a visit, which accounts for his birth in Dublin. In May, 1866 they returned to New York and to their home in Brooklyn. There John H. was reared, in course of time being graduated from the Jefferson grade school. In 1883 he was graduated from the Eastman Business College at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., after which he returned to New York Citv and for about three years was employed in his father's store, In January, 1886, he went to work for the New York Life Insurance Co., and for some time was located at Troy, N. Y., as local agent of the company. He was there but six months when he was made assistant superintendent of the Troy agency. In November, 1886, he was promoted to the local superintendency, but soon after was sent to Minneapolis, Minn., as superintendent of that district, which position he held until October, 1888. He was then made traveling inspector for the company with the United States as his field, but early in August, 1894, he had to resign on account of ill health. Locating in Glenwood City, St. Croix County, Wis., he found employment there with the Glenwood Manufacturing Co.; but in a little over a year they closed out their business, and in October, 1895, he came to Graytown, town of New Haven, Dunn County, and entered the employ of Aaron B. Gray as With him he remained until October, 1906, when he superintendent of his farm. engaged in general mercantile business at Graytown with C. J. Hendrickson of Connersville as a partner. At the end of a year Mr. Holland bought the Connersville stock-they having operated both stores-and continued the Connersville business until April, 1909, when he resold it to Mr. Hendrickson. Then returning to Graytown, he closed up the business here and took charge of the Gray farm. In February, 1910 he bought his present store property and on June 28, the same year, started the mercantile business which ne has since conducted. In addition to this he deals more or less in real estate, owns the 40-acre tract of land on which his store and the sawmill of Chester A. Thatcher stand, and is a stockholder in the Peoples Bank of Clear Lake, Wis. Mr. Holland was married on Aug. 28, 1912, to Mrs. Emma Gray, widow of Aaron B. Gray and daughter of William and Rebecca (Chase) Colbath. She was born at Cameron, N. Y., March 20, 1859. The religious faith of Mr. and Mrs. Holland is that of the Episcopal Church. In politics Mr. Holland is a Republican. He was acting treasurer of the town of New Haven for four years, served as treasurer of the Hilton School District No. 2, for two years, was health officer for ten years, and has served a number of years as justice of the peace and notary public.

Aaron B. Gray, who passed from this life on Feb. 16, 1911. was a well known pioneer of Dunn County, whose name is preserved in that of the village of Gravtown, which was named after him. He was born at Wheeler, Steuben County, N. Y., cn Feb. 7, 1845, son of Daniel and Lydia (Wheeler) Gray. In the same place he acquired his education and resided with his parents until his marriage. That event, which occurred on June 3, 1874, united him with Emma Colbath, of Bath, N. Y., but who was born at Cameron, N. Y., March 20, 1859. In 1879 he and his wife came west to New Richmond, Wis., where they conducted a hotel for two years. This was a new experience for them as in New York State they were farmers. In the fall of 1881 they came to Dunn County, Mr. Gray buying 80 acres of land on Section 5, town of New Haven, later buying 100 acres more. Until 1893 they lived in a log house, but in that year Mr. Gray built a frame one. He was a hard worker and in time developed all of his 180 acres, building up a good farm, and being recognized throughout the northern part of the county as a successful man and a good and reliable citizen. On his father's side he was of Pennsylvania-Dutch extraction, his mother's ancestors being English. In Bath, N. Y., he was made a Free Mason and remained a member of the order to the end of his life. He showed his patriotism in the Civil War by giving four years of his life to military service as a soldier of the Union. As a private in the Forty-fifth Pennsylvania Cavalry he accompanied Sherman on his famous campaign to Atlanta and the sea, and was in many a sharp skirmish with the enemy's cavalry who hovered on the flanks and rear of the invading army. Though not actually wounded in battle, a cannon ball on one occasion passed so close to him that he afterwards suffered from the concussion, just as there are many soldiers today who have not fully recovered from the effects of shell shock in the World War. Mr. Gray was a member of the Republican party, and for four years he served the town of New Haven as its treasurer, but otherwise was not active in public affairs. He was a man highly respected and his name is well worthy of the place in the annals of the county.

Frank Duffy, one of the pioneer farmers in the town of Lucas, was born in Rome, N. Y., Jan. 19, 1840, son of Peter and Margaret (Carnes) Duffy. The father was a native of County Fermanagh, Ireland, and the mother of County Monaghan in the same country. They both came to this country when young and single and were subsequently married in Rome, N. Y., where Mr. Duffy, having learned the tailor's trade in his native land, conducted a tailor's shop for several years. In 1844 he came west to Galena, Ill., where he established himself in the grocery business, and was occupied in conducting it from that time until his death. His wife also They were the parents of seven children, of whom Ann, Bridget, died there. Elizabeth, Margaret and Thomas, are deceased. The two living are Bernard, of Dubuque, Iowa, and Frank, subject of this sketch. Frank Duffy was four years old when he accompanied his parents from Rcme, N. Y., to Galena, Ill., and it was in the latter place that he obtained his education. As soon as he was old enough he began helping his father in the store, and was thus engaged until the spring of 1862, when he came to Dunn County, Wisconsin, and, entering the employ of Knapp, Stout & Co., was engaged in running log or timber rafts on the Chippewa Then going to St. Louis, he entered the U.S. government service and was River. employed on river transports until the close of the Civil War. In 1866 he came to Menomonie and for two years thereafter worked for Knapp, Stout & Co. It was at the end of that period, or in 1868, that he began farming in the town of Lucas, buying 80 acres of timber land in Section 30, which he started to improve. In course of time he bought 120 acres more, thus increasing the size of his farm to 200 acres, of which he cleared and brought under cultivation 70 acres, also erecting a set of good buildings. After operating the farm until 1908, he turned it over to his son William E., though he still resides on it. As a citizen of his town Mr. Duffy has a good record, as he not only worked to advance his own interests, but proved himself useful to the community in many ways. He assisted new settlers as they came in, helped to establish schools and roads, and was one of the organizers of the Hatchville creamery. It was he and Michael McManus who cut the road from the Duffy farm down the hill to the Carter farm, which is now State Highway No. 116. He is now one of the oldest surviving pioneers in the town of Lucas and has a host of friends, being respected by all who know him. Mr. Duffy was married Oct. 23, 1863, in Galena, Ill., to Margaret McGuire, who was born in County Fermanagh, Ireland, June 20, 1841. She came to America with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas McGuire, who settled in Galena about 1860, where they spent the rest of their lives. After nearly 56 years of wedded life, during which she proved herself a good wife and mother, Mrs. Margaret Duffy passed away on Oct. 11, 1918. Mr. and Mrs. Duffy were the parents of five children, Thomas, Peter, Henry, Wil-Thomas is now in Peru, South America. Peter, who lives liam E. and Elizabeth. in Eau Claire, Wis., married Irene Kinney and has five children, Fay, Francis, Thomas, John and Helen, the last mentioned of whom is now Mrs. William Hill. Henry, who resides in the town of Lucas, married Ina Moore and has eight children, Harry, Gertrude, Alice, Margaret, Helen, Laurance, Mary and Robert. William E., now operating the home farm, married Pearl McMelnamin and has one daughter, Mary Margaret. Elizabeth is now Mrs. Michael Debine of Glenwood City, St. Croix County, and is the mother of three children, Anna (now Mrs. Andrew Re-The Duffy family are members of St. Joseph's Cathvioer), Frances and Esther. olic congregation in Menomonie.

Jackson P. Long, for many years a well known and respected resident of Downsville, now deceased, was born at Petersburg, Rensselaer County, N. Y., Feb. 29,

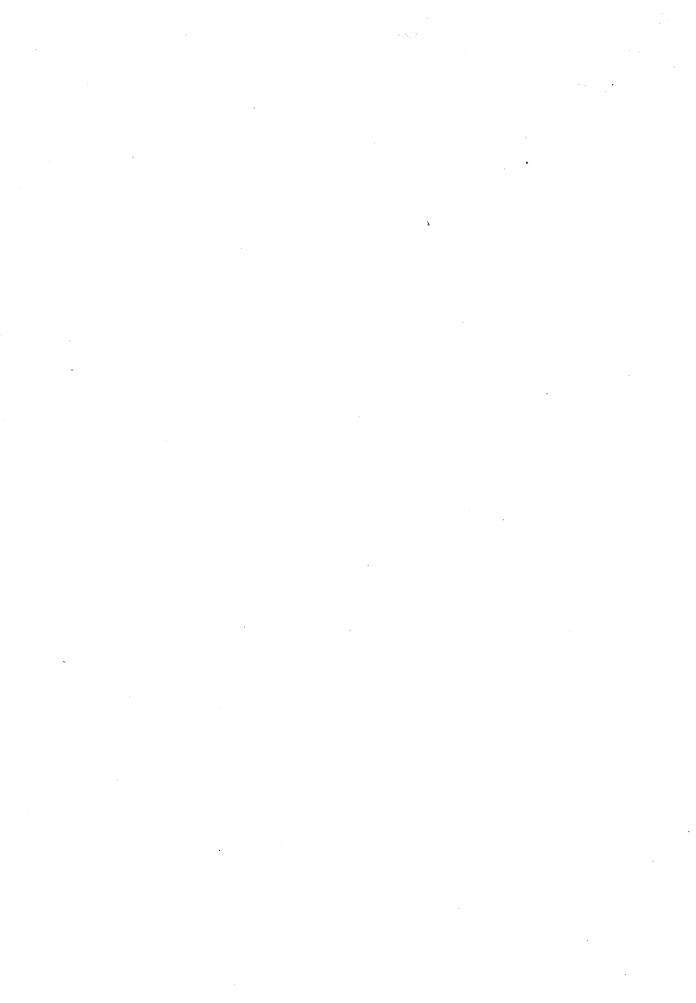

He came west in the early 30's and in November, 1861, enlisted for service 1832. in the Civil War in Company G, 15th Reg. Wis. Vol. Inf. Being wounded in the battle of Shiloh (April 6-7, 1862), he was given an honorable discharge soon after for incapacity. On Aug. 23, 1862, he was married to Annie M. Harrington, who was born in Illinois, Nov. 7, 1846. In June, 1863, they came to Dunn County, Wis., and settled half a mile south of Downsville, on the Red Cedar River, where they remained until April, 1880, when they moved to a location two miles west of Downsville in the town of Dunn, and there Mr. Long spent the remainder of his life. He was an active and useful citizen, engaged for many years in agriculture, and he also served many years in town or school office, always proving useful and efficient. His widow still resides on the farm, which is operated by their son, Clifford Y. Mr. and Mrs. Long were the parents of a large family, numbering 16 children, whose record is briefly as follows: C. Theresa, born March 11, 1864, has been a teacher for the last 44 years, during the last 20 years having followed her vocation near Vancouver, where she resides, she is also composer and author of a book of poems entitled "Night Thoughts and Day Dreams," which has had an ex-tensive sale. Alethe, born March 13, 1865, is now Mrs. H. G. Surls of Portland, Ore. Cecelia I., born April 26, 1866, died Oct. 25, the same year. Lucius A., born Jan. 8, 1867, is editor of the Hillsboro Argus of Hillsboro, Ore. Lillian H., born Aug. 10, 1868, became the wife of Henry Flemming and died Oct. 21, 1917; Emily, born Jan. 27, 1870, in Downsville, was educated in that village and subsequently taught school for three years. On July 3, 1890, she was married to William E. Fayerweather, who was born in Pepin, Wis., July 3, 1855, son of David and Eliza (Foster) Fayerweather. After their marriage they farmed in the town of Dunn until November, 1902, when they came to Downsville, which place has since been their home. During the summer months Mr. Fayerweather works for the Mississippi Improvement Co. On Dec. 12, 1910, Mrs. Fayerweather was appointed postmistress of Downsville, receiving her commission Jan. 23, 1911, and assuming her duties February 1. She moved the office to her residence, and has been postmistress ever since. Kenyon E. Long, born May 25, 1871, lives in Williston, N. D., where he is yardmaster for the Great Northern Railway. Leon L., born Oct. 27, 1872, is operating a general store in Ravalli, Mont. Paul C. Long, born Sept. 3, 1874, is a chiropractor in Prineville, Ore. Ada E. Long, born Jan. 13, 1876, died April 26, 1892. Clifford Y. Long, born Oct. 19, 1877, is operating the old home farm in the town of Dunn. Geneva Long, born March 23, 1879, is now Mrs. A. E. Erickson of Battleground, Wash. Ethel C., born Dec. 13, 1881, married Benjamin Dennison and died Nov. 12, 1911. Ruby L. Long, born Aug. 23, 1883, is now Mrs. Milo E. Daymon of Vancouver. The other two children of Mr. and Mrs. Jackson P. Long, Gerald and Albert R., both died in infancy.

John Cramer, Sr., one of the very early agriculturists of Dunn County, now living retired in Menomonie, was born in Germany, Aug. 26, 1844, son of John and Elizabeth (Weber) Cramer. The family came to America in 1851, settling in Dodge The family came to America in 1851, settling in Dodge County, Wisconsin. In 1862 they moved to Dunn County, buying 60 acres of land in the town of Red Cedar, which the parents farmed for the rest of their lives. John, the subject of this sketch, helped to develop the farm and remained with his parents until 1871, when he married and began his individual career as a farmer. The locality he selected in which to begin operations was Section 26, in the town of Red Cedar, where he bought an 80-acre tract of wild land and put up a set of log build-From this beginning he advanced by degrees through hard work from one ings. stage of prosperity to a higher until he found himself the owner of a splendid farm of 300 acres, which included the original 60 acres owned by his father. His residence was a fine modern house, equipped with an electric light plant and a home waterworks system with a vacuum vapor heating plant. The barn was one of the largest and best in Dunn County, its surface dimensions being 36 x 150 feet, and it was installed with the James equipment with running water and individual drinking-cups for the stock. In 1911 Mr. Cramer began the building up of a herd of pure bred Guernsey cattle, which today numbers 50 head, being the main asset on the farm, which, as a whole, is one of the finest in Dunn County, and is now jointly owned by himself and his son John Cramer, Jr., but is rented and operated by another son, Joseph. In 1919, after 48 years' work on the place, Mr. Cramer retired and took up his residence in the city of Menomonie, where he and his wife, who has proved a faithful companion and efficient helpmate, are passing the latter years of their lives in a well earned leisure. The marriage of Mr. and Mrs. John Cramer, Sr., took place in Dodge County, Wisconsin, Jan. 23, 1871, her maiden name being Susan Lackas. She was born in Germany, June 16, 1851, and it was in 1853, while still a babe, that she came to the United States with her parents, who settled in the county above mentioned. For more than half a century Mr. and Mrs. Cramer have traveled life's highway together, and they have proved a strong team, each doing his or her part with more than ordinary earnestness and success. Their prosperity has been well earned and it may be hoped that they have long to enjoy They have been the parents of 16 children, namely, John, Jr., Elizabeth, Eva, it. Susan, Emma, Joseph, Regina, Grace, Genevieve, Cornelius, Mary, Anna, Margaret, Jacob and Barbara (twins) and Katie. Of the nine now living, the following is a brief record. John, Jr., born Nov. 19, 1872, is mentioned in a special article which follows this. Elizabeth, born Dec. 22, 1875, is now the wife of John Hanley of Menomonie and the mother of a daughter, Eva. Eva, born Jan. 23, 1879, resides with her parents. Susan, born Jan. 21, 1886, is the wife of L. A. Govin of the town of Dunn, and has five children, James, Janette, John, Helen and Cornelius. Emma, born Dec. 22, 1887, is Mrs. Edward Becker of Colby, Wis., and has four children, Regina, Wilbur, Margaret and Lucille. Joseph, born Dec. 8, 1889, who rents and conducts the home farm, married Anna Traxler, and has one child, Joseph, Regina, born March 16, 1892, is now Sister Joan in the St. Rose Convent at Jr. La Crosse. Grace, born April 17, 1894, is living at home with her parents. Genevieve, born Oct. 22, 1895, is Mrs. Frank Breightsman of Menomonie and the mother of two children, Richard and Donald. Of those deceased, Cornelius, who was born Oct. 18, 1899, died Jan. 27, 1916; and Mary, who was born July 15, 1874, married Frank Ney, and died Dec. 22, 1919, leaving eight children, Gertrude, Frank, Helen, Leo, Leonard, Mary, Bernard and John. The others who died were Anna, Margaret, Jacob, Barbara and Katie, four of whom died of diphtheria within a period of 14 days. The family religion is that of the Catholic Church.

John Cramer, Jr., a well known resident of Menomonie, formerly associated with his father in the development of a fine farm in the town of Red Cedar, was born in that town Nov. 19, 1872, his parents being John S. and Susan (Lackas) Cramer. He was educated in the rural school of his district, and as soon as he was old enough began helping his father in the outdoor work of the farm, the original tract of which had been purchased in 1871, the year before his birth. The story of its development into the splendid piece of agricultural property which it is today has been told in the sketch of his parents' lives and need not be repeated. It is enough to say that much of that development was due to the subject of this article, who worked with his father in improving the land and erecting and equipping the buildings with all modern conveniences, including electric light and power and good waterworks. This work covered a period of many years, each year seeing a better improved, more attractive and more profitable place, the splendid result finally achieved being due to the resolute industry and persistence of father and son. They are now joint owners of the farm, which at present is rented and conducted by Joseph Cramer, a brother of John, Jr. The latter gave up farm work in 1919, and, moving to the city of Menomonie, purchased a good house at 515 13th Street, which he, his father and mother and two sisters now occupy. Since coming to the city he has been engaged in the buying and shipping of livestock. He is a stockholder in the Rusk Creamery Co. of the town of Red Cedar, also in the Clear Oil Co. of Menomonie and in the Waterman-Ehrhard Co., doing a large department store business in Menomonie. A member of the Catholic Church, he belongs also to the societies of Knights of Columbus and Catholic Knights. In this review the fact that stands out most clearly is that it is to such men and women as those to be found in the Cramer family that the advancement and prosperity of Dunn County, and of the Northwest generally, is chiefly due. It is they who have changed the face of the country from a wilderness of timber and brush, or a desolate-looking stretch of stump land left by the lumbermen, into beautiful landscapes of smiling fields, rich with waving grain and dotted with orchards and neatly painted residence or utility buildings, the outward signs of civilization and prosperity, not to mention the useful cattle and other livestock which give a homelike aspect to the places formerly inhabited by wolves, bears and deer, or by the picturesque but uncivilized Indian. Such men are the privates and officers in the army of progress and when their work is done are well entitled to rest on their laurels.

Edwin F. Larkam, in his day a well known pioneer of Dunn County, and for many years a trusted employee of the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company, was born in Voluntown, Conn., son of Lancelot and Mary (Reed) Larkham. The mother, Mary Reed in maidenhood, was a niece of John Quincy Adams, the sixth president of the United States, and her grandfather Reed was one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence. Her father, too, had served as an officer under Washington in the Revolutionary War. Thus it may be seen that the Reed family and their connections took a more or less prominent part in American history. The Larkams also were patriotic, Mr. Larkam's father, Lancelot, fought for the Union in the Civil War, and the father of Lancelot was a soldier in the War of 1812-15 with Gt. Britain. Edwin F. Larkam came west with his parents in 1852, the family settling in Illinois, where the parents spent the remainder of their lives. In 1862 Edwin came to Dunn County, Wis., settling first at Irvington on the Red Cedar River, two and a half miles south of Menomonie. He remained there but a short time, however, taking a homestead of 160 acres in Section 4, town of Menomonie, on which he built a log shack with three small rooms. At this time he had been married for eight or nine years and had a family. He proved up on his homestead, residing on it until 1870, and for the five years following he and his family made their home in Menomonie, Mr. Larkham having charge of the Knapp, Stout & Co.'s lumber Then he moved his family back to the homestead, retaining his position as yard. manager of the lumber yard and going back and forth between his place and Menomonie each day, a distance of about two miles. He remained with the Knapp-Stout people until the mills were closed down in 1900, after which he spent his entire time on his farm, where he died on June 6, 1907. During the 30 years that he was with the lumber company he employed men to clear his farm, and also for several years rented out the tillable land to different parties, and in time he put up a good set of buildings. Naturally progressive, he had good business foresight, and instead of waiting for others, would often set the example in some better way of doing things. He had the first team of horses owned in the community and hauled lumber and logs for other settlers as they came in, assisting them also in other ways. He was recognized by his employers, and by his fellow citizens generally, as being thoroughly honest and straight-forward and his word on any matter of fact was never questioned. He was the first assessor of the town of Menomonie, in fulfiling the duties of which office he had to get the Indians to guide him through the woods. Mr. Larkam's marriage, to which brief allusion has been made, took place Sept. 11, 1853, in Concord, Ill., and united him with Sarah J. Parkhurst, who was born in Plainfield, Conn., Sept. 3, 1834. They had four children: Frank and Lillian, who are now deceased; Lennie, who is now Mrs. P. S. Halleck of Columbus, Miss., and Lillian, who was married Sept. 23, 1907, to Louis Stall. Mr. and Mrs. Stall in the year of their marriage took over the Larkam estate, which they are now operating as a dairy farm and doing a considerable business. Mrs. Sarah J. Larkham lives with them, and though now 90 years of age, is still active and insists on making the bread for the household which she well knows how to do.

Ole Thorud, a worthy pioneer of Dunn County who passed away some 25 years ago, leaving the record of having created a farm from wild land in the town of Red Cedar, was born in Norway, June 24, 1824. He spent the first 25 years of his life in his native land, and then in 1849, while yet a single man, came to the United States to seek his fortune. Those were stirring times, when the superb sailing vessels of the United States, making almost as fast time as steamships, were found in every sea, when men's mind were excited by the news of the gold discoveries in California and Australia, and when in this country men with their families were pouring over the mountains from the Eastern States to seek new homes in the middle or far west, where they were laying the foundations of new commonwealths. Ole Thorud was a unit in this busy movement, making his way first to Dodge County, Wisconsin, where he found work and remained until 1857. Only three years before that date Dunn County, which then included Pepin also, had been created from Chippewa and the lumbermen were busy here, cutting down the forests and opening up the country for the settlement of farms. There were homes for all on every hand, to be obtained at small cost, save that of labor. It was in the brawny muscles and sinews of the hardy pioneers from Europe and the East that the power lay to wrest from the soil the wealth it contained and make it visible in the shape of fruitful fields, well stored barns and herds of cattle, with other stock. Mr. Thorud had all the foreigner's ambition to become a land proprietor and build up a home that he might pass on to his descendants. He also wished to provide for his parents, so in 1857, he sent for them to join him, he, himself, coming to Dunn County and securing 160 acres of government land on Little Elk Creek, Section 18, (government township 27), town of Red Cedar. There he was joined by his parents, who made the last stage of their journey with an ox team. His land being all wild, he began operations by building a log house and barn. It was the first step in pioneer progress, and from that he advanced through many years of hard work to a position where he could survey the result with satisfaction. During all but three years of that period he was aided by his faithful wife and helpmate, in maidenhood Karie Olson, who was born in Norway, Nov. 28, 1829, and whom he married in 1860. They became people of note and influence in the community, helping in various ways to advance its interests. Many a night they extended the hospitality of their little dwelling to some newly arrived settler, and many hours Mr. Thorud spent in helping to build roads and get school and church established; for all of which their lives are worthy of record. But time brought its inevitable changes and Mr. and Mrs. Thorud felt the approach of age. The labor of operating the farm they left more and more to their children, and at last on Dec. 21, 1899, Mr. Thorud passed away at the age of 75 years and six months, lacking only three days. His wife survived him a little over three years and three months, dying April 3, 1903. Their children were Thore O., Carl, Ida and Henry, of whom the first mentioned is now living on the home farm. Carl, who remained at home until 1904, then went to Alberta, Canada, where he homesteaded land, which he sold several years later, returning to Dunn County. In 1918 he went back to Canada and is now operating the pumping station at Claresholm, Alberta. Ida is now Mrs. Ole G. Berg of Claresholm, Alberta. Henry, who resided on the home farm until his death, served as a volunteer from Wisconsin in the Civil War.

Thore O. Thorud, a prominent citizen and successful farmer of Section 18, (Township 27), town of Red Cedar, was born on the farm he now owns, on Oct. 24, 1863, son of Ole and Karie (Olson) Thorud. His education was acquired in District School No. 4, and as he grew older he became his father's assistant in the task of developing the home farm. Thus his life went on for 27 years, until in 1900, the year after his father's death he received one half the home farm as his share in the property, but has since operated the entire 160 acres, the 80 not owned by himself belonging to his brother, Carl. He has improved the buildings and carried the cultivation of the land to a higher point. He is carrying on general farming and dairying, keeping grade Holstein cattle, and is a stockholder in the Downsville Cooperative Creamery. A man of public spirit, he has not hesitated, when called upon, to take a helpful part in the affairs of local government. Thus, he served two terms as assessor of the town of Red Cedar and was for three years on the board Mr. Thorud was married at Elk Creek, April 4, 1902, to Olivia of supervisors. Olson, who was born July 19, 1874, daughter of Ole Olson Grimstad and his wife Anna Torgerson Grimstad, who settled near Elk Creek about 1870. Mrs. Anna Grimstad is now dead, but Mr. Grimstad is still living and makes his home with his daughter, Mrs. Christ Lee of Red Cedar. Mr. and Mrs. Thore O. Thorud are the parents of five children: Clara, born May 5, 1904, who was graduated from the

MR. AND MRS. NILS E. NILSON AND FAMILY

Dunn County Normal School and is now a teacher in this county; Alice, born June 21, 1905, whose personal record is the same as her sister Clara's; Odin, born June 18, 1907, and Paul, born Aug. 16, 1908, residing on the home farm; and Linka, born Jan. 16, 1911, who is a pupil in the Menomonie High School and resides at home. The family are members of the Little Elk Creek Lutheran Church, of which Mr. Thorud is treasurer.

Nils E. Nilson, a retired farmer residing in Colfax, the father of a large family of American citizens who are contributing to the wealth and prosperity of their native country, the United States of America, was born in Flekkefjord, Norway, July 12, 1847, his father being Nils Tonnesjon and his mother, in maidenhood, Tonetta Laneritson. Both parents died in Norway. Nils E., after attending public school there, came in 1869 to the United States, in 1873, locating in Running Valley, Chippewa County, Wis., where he bought 120 acres of partly broken land on which was a small house and barn, and there he began farming, continuing the work of improvement and later buying 40 additional acres in the town of Colfax, a tract adjoining his original purchase. Later he built a large house and barn, with various out-buildings and for 43 years lived the life of a hard-working farmer, which resulted in time in his acquiring a competence. On this he retired in 1916, renting the farm to his sons Gustav and Alfred, and taking up his residence in the village of Colfax in a house which he built and which he still occupies. For 19 years he was clerk of his school district. To some the story of such a life may seem tame and devoid of incident; but it is not to the rolling-stones of humanity that society owes its greatest debt of gratitude, but to the men who voluntarily assume a humble role in life as factors in the ever necessary work of food production, without which the rest of the world could not exist. It is the farmer, stockman and fisherman who feed humanity, and however necessary may be the work of the miner, mechanic, builder and inventor, with that of other workers in the trades or professions, it is upon the first three mentioned that all the others depend for their daily food, and, however, monotonous may be their toil, they are the kings in the world of labor and deserve an adequate reward. Through his efforts in his own sphere of usefulness Mr. Nilson derived a good living and accumulated a fair competence so that he can now take a well earned rest and leave the management of business and other things to the ambitious members of the new and youthful generation. Among that generation are his own sons and daughters, 14 in all, while a number of grandchildren are also growing up, destined, no doubt, to take an active and useful part in solving the problems of the future. It may be well to enumerate the roll of these descendants of Mr. Nilson, adding a word or two as to their present condition and whereabouts, and also to make fitting mention of Mrs. Nilson, who for nearly half a century has been her husband's faithful friend, companion and helpmate, and a wise and loving mother to her children. Mr. Nilson was married in March, 1875, to Lena Olson, who, like himself, is a native of Norway, having been born in that country Sept. 21, 1856, and who was brought to this country about 1860, her family settling in Houston County, Minnesota, whence in 1862 they came to Chippewa County, Wisconsin. The children born of this marriage are as follows; Carl N., born May 30, 1876, now in Minneapolis, who married Tillie Bjerke and has two children, Bernice and Leroy; Karolone M., born Oct. 14, 1877, who is a resident of Chippewa Falls; Thomas A., born April 20, 1879, now living in Montana; Lyoia K., born Feb. 23, 1881, now the wife of Richard Chase, a farmer in Chippewa County, and who has had two children both of whom are now deceased; Hendri L., born Oct. 23, 1882, who married Jennie B. Jerke and resides in Minneapolis; Teoline K., born June 14, 1884, wife of Richard F. Hayes, a farmer near Thief River Falls, Minn.; Hilda E., born Feb. 17, 1886, who married Henry Olson, a farmer of Running Valley, and has three children, Mildred, Erling and Lyle; Dina G., born Feb. 15, 1888, married to A. B. Wilson of Grant Falls, Mont., and the mother of one child, Archie; Laura M., born Nov. 11, 1889, who is the wife of W. J. Brown of Minneapolis; Gustav W., born Aug. 5, 1891, living and working on the old home farm; Alfred K., born Aug. 4, 1893, also working on the old home farm, who married Caroline Hanson and has one child, Leslie Claude; Ruth, born March 7, 1895, wife of Garfield Heyerdahl of Minneapolis; Joseph G., born Jan. 17, 1897, now in Minneapolis, who married Alice Emmonson; and Esther, born Dec. 5, 1898, also a resident of Minneapolis, the wife of Elmer Anderson and the mother of two children, Loraine and Harold. The Nilson family are members individually of the Lutheran Free Church, and all are worthy members of society adding to the strength and quality of American citizenship, the results of a wise and careful upbringing.

John P. Solem, well known as a successful farmer and dairyman in the town of Spring Brook, was born in Section 2, in the southeastern part of this town, and on the farm that he now owns and operates, on Dec. 19, 1874. His parents were Joe and Helena (Ois) Solem, both natives of Norway, the father of Soknedalen and the mother of Baston. The former, Joe, came to America in the 60's and directly to Dunn County, Wis., first setting foot on the soil of this county as he disembarked from a steamboat at Rumsey's Landing. For several years he was employed at old Meridean by the lumber company then running mills there. In 1873 he was married to Mrs. Peter Nelson, whose maiden name was Helena Ois; and in February, the same year, he purchased 80 acres of land in Section 2, on the Chippewa bottoms, there being a small shack on it and a straw barn. Later he replaced these buildings with better ones, added to his land from time to time until he owned 317 acres, and built up a good farm. He and his wife were good neighbors and were popular in the community. She was the first to pass away, dying Dec. 14, 1912, while he died May 14, 1917. Their family included two children: John P., the direct subject of this sketch, and Martina, now Mrs. Ole Gordan of Minneapolis. John P. Solem as a boy attended the district school near his home, now known as the Fossbrook School. As his father's assistant he helped to develop the home farm, of which he took charge in 1912, and which came into his possession on his father's death. Even before that event he had made some important improvements, in 1914 building a fine barn 36 x 72 feet in ground plan, with 12-foot posts and full basement, and supplied with the James equipment. He keeps grade cattle of mixed breeds but having in his herd a pure bred Shorthorn sire. He also raises pure bred Wyandotte poultry. For some time he has served as a director on the local school John P. Solem was married May 21, 1904, in the town of Spring Brook, board. to Gertrude Berg, who was born in the town of Spring Brook, April 29, 1885, daughter of Andrew and Guri (Wagnild) Berg, the parents both being natives of Socknedalen, Norway. Andrew Berg after a first visit to America in the late 50's had returned to Norway and was there married to his first wife, whom he brought to this country and to Dunn County, Wis., making settlement in the town of Spring After her death he married Guri Wagnild, his present wife and the mother Brook. of Mrs. Solem, who had come to America with her parents when nine years old. Mr. Berg is still living on his farm on the Chippewa bottoms, Mrs. Berg having passed away Feb. 3, 1925. They had ten children: Andrew, now on the home farm; Ole, in Minneapolis; Gertrude, wife of John P. Solem; Betsey, who is Mrs. Joseph Sneen of the town of Spring Brook; Regnild, wife of Ed Olson of Little Elk Creek; Adolph, of Minneapolis; George of Eau Claire: Christ and Emil of Minneapolis, and Anna, at home. Mr. and Mrs. Solem are the parents of four children: Julius A., born March 23, 1905; Helen, born July 12, 1907; Gladys, born Feb. 22, 1910, and Alice, born Feb. 1, 1917. Helen is now employed by the Dumphy Boat Co. in Eau Claire, other being at home. The family belong to the United Lutheran congregation in the town of Spring Brook.

Albert E. Saxton, a retired farmer residing in the town of Spring Brook, on the farm which he started half a century ago, was born in Wayne County, New York, Jan. 10, 1848, son of Albert and Jane (Knapp) Saxton. The parents were both natives of that state, in which they spent their lives, except that the father was for many years a canal boat captain. After leaving that occupation he worked for some years as a brick molder, but finally took to farming as his last occupation. Albert E. Saxton was deprived by death of his parents when quite young and was obliged to earn his own living. As a young man he engaged in buying and shipping eggs, having his headquarters at Walcott, N. Y. In the fall of 1867 he went to Michigan, where, however, he remained only a year, coming at the end of that time to Wisconsin. The latter part of the journey was made up the Mississippi River from La Crosse to the mouth of the Chippewa, and then up the Chippewa by keel boat to what was known as French Point in the town of Spring Brook, which place he reached October 23. A few days later he went into the woods on the Eau Claire River and for several years thereafter followed the occupation of a lumberjack, his home when he was not in the woods being with the Henry Doane family in the town of Spring Brook. In 1874 Mr. Saxton, having decided to remain permanently in Dunn County, purchased 80 acres of unimproved land in Section 36, of the town of Spring Brook and here began the creation of a farm. As yet he was single, but on Dec. 16, 1877, he was united in marriage in the town of Spring Brook, to Augusta V. Doane, daughter of Sylvester and Sarah Ann (Fuller) Doane, and born in Sheboygan County, Wisconsin, Feb. 13, 1858. Mr. Saxton later added 80 acres more land to his farm in the same section, and still later bought 40 acres in Section 26. From time to time he erected buildings on his place until he had a good and complete set, and he continued his operations as a general farmer until 1914, in which year he retired from active work, his son Bert then taking charge and conducting the farm until 1923, since which time it has been operated by Bert Larrabee. Mr. Saxton also owns a 240-acre farm in Dawson County, Mont., which is operated by his son-in-law, Leon Cummings. In addition to his agricultural activities the subject of this sketch has at different times rendered service as a public official; he was town assessor for four years and for some time was a member of the school board of his district and road commissioner. He has worked hard but has been rewarded by having attained a fair competence, which his wife enjoys with him. They have now been married 47 years and have worked effectively together to build up their home, much of the credit for their mutual success being due to Mrs. Saxton. They are the parents of three children, Bert D., Lottie and Donna. Bert D., who was born June 12, 1880, is now a farmer in the town of Spring Brook. He married Hannah Vermilyea and they have two children, Luda and Russell, the former of whom, Luda, is now the wife of Ray Cummings and has two children, Iona and Orvil. Lottie, born May 22, 1885 became the wife of Garfield Tubbs, but died in early womanhood, on June 13, 1910, the mother of two children, Belvia and Norma. Donna, born June 13, 1889, is now Mrs. Leon Currmings of Richie, Mont., and the mother of two children, Saxton and Evelyn.

Sylvester Doane, a pioneer of Dunn County, was a native of Vermont, born Nov. 9, 1808. His wife, in maidenhood Sarah Ann Fuller, to whom he was married Oct. 13, 1831, was born in the same state Aug. 8, 1813. In 1855 they came west to Wisconsin, settling first in Sheboygan County, whence in 1858 they came to Dunn County, the family then consisting of Mr. and Mrs. Doane and nine children most of whom were grown up. They made their home on a farm in the town of Spring Brook, which had been purchased by one of the sons, Lafayette. There Mrs. Sarah Ann Doane died on May 18, 1888, being survived little more than a year by her husband, who followed her to the grave on May 30, 1889. They were representative pioneers of the Northwest, trying to advance their fortunes through hard toil and the endurance of many discomforts, and bringing up a family the members of which in general have emulated their parents' virtues and proved good citizens; several, however, have passed away. The eldest, William H., who was born July 15, 1833, was married July 4, 1857, to Isabelle Dow; he died May 15, 1898. Juliette, the second born, the date of whose nativity was Feb. 15, 1835, was married Jan. 1, 1859, to Charles D. Williams, and died Oct. 26, 1913. Fayette S., born March 18, 1837, married Betsy Burton of Sheboygan County. He was 21 years old when he came to Dunn County and he purchased the land for the family home in Sections 25 and 26, town of Spring Brook, residing on it himself until his death in his eightieth year on Nov. 29, 1917. In the troublesome days of the Civil War period he went into the army and was one of those who marched with Sherman to the sea. His wife Betsy survived him a few years, dying July 4, 1923. Mary Etta, the fourth child, was born Sept. 5, 1839, and was married Feb. 1, 1858, to William K. West; she died April 21, 1917. Celia, the next child, born Sept. 1, 1841, was married July 26, 1859, to August Bemis and died Jan. 20, 1921. Frances A., the sixth child and fourth daughter, born Aug. 31, 1844, was married Jan. 1, 1862, to Alexander Gunter; she is still living, being now a resident of Sand Point, Ida. Emma E., born Oct. 13, 1846, was married Nov. 23, 1862, to William L. Hines, and died Jan. 23, 1919. Martha A., born Nov. 4, 1854, who was married Sept. 17, 1870, to James S. Burnett, and is now living in Ewing, Nebr. Augusta V., the youngest child, born Feb. 13, 1858, and now Mrs. Albert E. Saxton of the town of Spring Brook, Dunn County, acquired her elementary education in the district school in this town, and subsequently attended the Menomonie High School. At the early age of 15 years she began teaching rural school in Dunn County and was thus occupied until her marriage.

Charles P. Weber, proprietor of Weber Valley Farm in Section 14, town of Eau Galle, was born on this farm, and in the same house in which he now lives, on Jan. 4, 1876, son of Peter and Julia (Kleinschmidt) Weber. The parents were natives of Germany who came to America when young and single, and were married in Elgin, Ill. In the late 50's they came to Dunn County, Wisconsin, settling in the town of Eau Galle, in that part of it that came to be known as the Weber Settlement, the valley in which it was situated being also known as Weber Valley in honor of the family. There were five brothers and a sister who came at the same time, all of whom settled in that locality, namely: Nicklaus, Peter, Bernard, Jake, John and Mary. Peter Weber took a government claim of 80 acres in Section 14. It was a wild tract covered with heavy timber and he had to make a clearing in which to build a log house and stable, after which he began to clear the land. It was the hardest kind of pioneer work and took years to accomplish, but he was finally successful and in time built a frame house and some other small buildings to take the place of his original log structures. Though unpretentious, they marked a great advance over early conditions. He also enlarged his farm by purchasing 25 acres more land, and continued to farm his place until his death on Aug. 14, 1908. He had survived his wife about two and a half years, she having passed away on Feb. 2, 1906. Their children were: Edward, deceased; Rosa, now Mrs. Charles Schoenfield; Adeline, who became the wife of Edward Dowling and resides in Minneapolis; Mary, now Mrs. Peter Seipel of Minneapolis, and Charles P., of the town of Eau Galle, Dunn County. Peter Weber, the father, qualified as a Civil War veteran, enlisting from Eau Galle and serving for a year and a half during the latter part of the war. He took part in the Grand Review at Washington after the surrender of Lee and Johns-Charles P. Weber acquired his education in the rural schools, the first one ton. he attended being built of logs. He grew to manhood on his parents' farm, which he himself helped to clear and develop, and which he rented and conducted on his own account for several years before his father's death. After that event he bought the interests of the other heirs to the property and it became his own. As proprietor he erected all the buildings that are now on it, except the house. The barn, built in 1919, is a model one and the finest in the valley. It has a full basement, measures 34 x 86 feet, is equipped with the James stanchions and stalls and the Simplex drinking cups, and is supplied also with litter carriers, hay fork and tracks and flowing water from a large cistern reservoir which has been recently installed. Mr. Weber takes a justifiable pride in the fine condition of his place, due to his own wise planning and hard work. He aims to keep abreast of the most modern methods in agriculture, provided they have been tested and proved to be sound, and he is getting good results. He is engaged in mixed farming and dairving, keeping grade Guernsey cattle with a pure bred sire in the herd. About 80 acres of his 105 are cleared and under cultivation, and, as one branch of his activities, he owns an engine and corn shredding machine, which he has operated for 22 falls, doing work for others as well as himself, and he is also a share holder in a threshing machine which he has helped to operate, having done this for 14 years. Were it possible to compare a photograph of Weber Valley Farm of today with one showing what it was when Peter Weber built his log cabin on it over 70 years ago, the contrast would be one to excite wonder and admiration, representing the difference between primitive nature and the highest result obtainable through the art and labor of man. A considerable part of this work has been done by Charles P. Weber

Charles P. Weber was married May 22, 1901, to Ida Kelm, who was born in the town of Eau Galle, Sept. 30, 1885, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Kelm. The children of this marriage are: Peter Ö., born March 18, 1902; Clarence and Elmer (twins), born July 14, 1903, who died respectively on October 7 and 8, the same year; Louise J., born July 1, 1905; Earl C., born July 14, 1907, and Carl W., born Feb. 9, 1911.

Alfred E. Boe, one of the early settlers of the village of Weston, where he now keeps the only store, was born in Norway, Dec. 10, 1875, son of Peter and Minnie (Danielson) Boe. The parents, also natives of Norway, came to America in 1882, set*ling near Baldwin, in St. Croix County, Wis., where Peter Boe followed farming until his death in 1916. His wife, who still survives him, has continued her residence on the farm, which is now operated by her sons. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Boe were as follows: Alfred E., the subject of this sketch; Mathilda, now Mrs. Nicholas Anderson of Baldwin, Wis.; Hilda, who is Mrs. Charles Olson of Baldwin; Marie, who is Mrs. Victor Patnaube of St. Paul; Anna, deceased; Freda, at home; Amanda, deceased; Lillian, now Mrs. Swovland of Strasburg, N. D.; Minnie, who is Mrs. S. Heglund of Minneapolis; Elart, a farmer in the town of Menomonie, Dunn County; Arthur, who operates the home farm, in St. Croix County; and Walter of Minneapolis. Alfred E. Boe, who was seven years old when he came to this country with his parents, attended grade schools in St. Croix County, and subsequently learned the art of telegraphy, becoming an operator on the Omaha railroad. He remained with that road until May, 1902, at which time he came to Weston as the first operator on the Chicago & Northwestern, and so continued until 1914. He then moved to an 80-acre farm which he had bought in the town of Weston, which, however, was at that time rather a tract of wild land, which he proceeded to develop into a farm, putting up a set of good buildings and clearing some of the land, and he was there engaged in general agriculture, including dairying, until 1921. He then rented his farm to a tenant and purchased the stock of general marchandise of W. H. Biles of Weston, since which time he has been proprietor of the only store in that village. Mr. Boe was the first postmaster of Weston, being first appointed in 1902, and holding the office, which was located in the depot, for two years. After returning to the village from his farm, and entering the mercantile business, he was again appointed postmaster and has since served as such, having the office in his store. He is also manager of the Elmwood Lumber & Grain Co. business here, and since 1914 has been agent for the Fidelity Phoenix, Hartford and St. Paul Fire & Marine Insurance Companies. He is a stockholder in the Downsville Cooperative Creamery. As he built the second frame dwelling in the village, he may be classed as one of its pioneer settlers, as he has also been one of the most active forces in its advancement. His fraternal society affiliations are with the Masonic order, and identify him as a member of the Blue Lodge in Spring Valley, and the Royal Arch and Eastern Star chapters in Menomonie. Mr. Boe was married, in Downing, Wis., Aug. 22, 1899, to Maude Hooker, daughter of Jackson H. and Margaret (Hughes) Hooker. He and his wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Weston, Mrs. Boe also belonging to the Eastern Star chapter in Menomonie.

Jackson H. Hooker, who died in Weston, Dunn County, Wis., on March 29, 1915, was born in Bradford, McKean County, Penn., May 27, 1834. When three years old he accompanied his parents to Manchester, Iowa, where he spent some subsequent years, at the age of 16 starting out to make his own way in the world by learning the carpenter's trade, which he followed in Wisconsin, until 1864. In 1862, he married Margaret Hughes, who was born in Chillicothe, Ohio, Dec. 14, 1846, and who at the age of 12 years went with her parents to Amboy, Wis., and from there to Brookville, in which latter place she completed her schooling. For one year before her marriage to Mr. Hooker she was engaged in teaching school. In 1864 Mr. Hooker moved with his family to El Paso in Pierce County, Wis., and for five years was engaged in operating a sawmill for Thomas McGee. In 1869 he came to Dunn County, locating at Tyrone in the town of Peru, where he spent four years operating a wagon shop for Hamilton Hubbard. At the end of that time he purchased a farm one mile south of Tyrone, and for the next 19 years of his life was engaged in agriculture. After that he spent ten years working in the wagon shop of Charles Fisher of Downing. His next move was to Weston, where he died in 1915, as above recorded. His wife Margaret survived him over eight years, passing away on Sept. 12, 1923. They had two children: a son, William, who died at the age of 24 years, and a daughter, Maude, who is now the wife of Alfred E. Boe of Weston.

Carl Severson, proprietor of Glenn View Farm in Section 28, town of Dunn, was born in this farm, Sept. 12, 1875, son of Henry and Ingeborg (Knudsdatter) Severson. The parents were natives of Soknedalen, Norway, the father born Sept. 8, 1828, and the mother Sept. 28, 1848. They came to the United States in 1868, settling in Dunn County, Wisconsin, in the village of Downsville, where Henry Severson went to work for Knapp, Stout & Co. After being in their employ for six months, he took his first step toward building up a permanent home, buying 80 acres of wild land in Section 28, town of Dunn. There was a poor log house on the place, into which Mr. Severson moved his family, but for six months longer he continued in the employ of Knapp, Stout & Co. At the end of that time he began the pioneer work of building up a farm from the wilderness. The years that rolled by saw gradual progress made, both with respect to the clearance of the land and the erection of buildings. He enlarged and improved his original log house from time to time until he had succeeded in converting it into a neat and habitable residence, and his barns and out-buildings gave evidence of increasing prosperity. He also bought 80 more acres of land, which gave him a farm of 160 acres, which he continued to operate until 1907, when it was taken over by his sons, Carl and Olaf. On Feb. 17, 1912, Mr. Severson died, being survived by his wife, who is still living on the farm, and three of their four children. The four children were: Sophia, now Mrs. Andrew Larson of the town of Dunn; Carl, on the old home farm; Olaf (first), who died young; and Olaf G., a farmer in the town of Dunn. Carl Severson acquired his education in the district school and grew up on the home farm, which he helped his father to develop. In 1907 he and his brother Olaf bought it, and after conducting it together until 1915, Carl bought out Olaf, since which time he continued to develop it and it is today one of the finest dairy farms in the town of Dunn. He has practically rebuilt the house, in 1917 he erected a fine basement barn of 34 x 80 feet, with the James equipment, and has built a large silo and machine shed and installed a waterworks system. The farm is well fenced and shows evidence of good management. It is beautifully situated and the grounds well laid out, the buildings being placed in a picturesque glenn, reached from the main road by a short driveway. The fine lawn beautified with shrubs and flowers shows a keen appreciation of the beautiful. In the fields may be seen a fine herd of grade Holstein cattle headed by a pure bred sire, and Mr. Sever also raises hogs of the Duroc-Jersey breed. He stands high both as a farmer and as a man and citizen and has served both as treasurer and clerk of School District No. 8; also as a member of the town board, on which he is now serving in his third term. On May 28, 1904, Mr. Severson was united in marriage with Christine E. Berg, who was born Jan. 6, 1884, on the farm of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. O. C. Berg, in the town of Dunn, it being known as Sunny Slope Stock Farm. To Mr. and Mrs. Severson four children have been born, namely: Helmer I., Jan. 27, 1906; Alvin O., Aug. 12, 1908; Elvina C., Oct. 16, 1909, and Clara F., May 17, 1912. The family are members of the Elk Creek Lutheran Church.

Olaf G. Severson, a good practical farmer operating in the town of Dunn, was born on his parents' farm in Section 28, this town, Feb. 15, 1884, son of Henry and Ingeborg (Knudsdatter) Severson. His education was acquired in District School No. 8, and subsequently becoming his father's assistant on the home farm he continued so until the father deeded the farm to him and his brother Carl in 1907. Together they conducted it until 1915. when Olaf G. sold his interest therein to Carl and went to live with his wife's parents in the town of Menomonie, having been married in 1912, to Louise Johnson, who was born March 14, 1884. For a number of years thereafter he followed the carpenter's trade, but on July 23, 1923, he bought his present farm of 120 acres, an improved piece of property, in Section 19, town of Dunn, where he is now engaged in dairying and mixed farming. He and his wife are the parents of a daughter, Irene Clara, who was born June 25, 1913. The family are affiliated by membership with the Elk Creek Lutheran Church.

Elvin J. Stoner, general farmer, dairyman and cattle raiser of the town of Tiffany, was born in the town of Linden, Iowa County, Wis., March 19, 1882, son of John and Ann (Perrigren) Stoner. The father was born in Hancock County, Pennsylvania, in 1837, and after growing to manhood became a miner. His wife Ann was born in Wales, in 1837, and came to this country at the age of 16 years with her parents, who came west to Wisconsin, settling in Iowa County. To the same state and county came John Stoner to work in the lead mines and there he and Ann Perrigen met and were married. After the breaking out of the Civil War he went into the army, becoming a member of Company E, 11th Wisconsin Regiment and serving four years. Though neither killed nor wounded he came home broken in health from the hardships he had to endure. He and his wife finally settled on the farm in Iowa County on which the subject of this sketch was born. Elvin I. Stoner had but little schooling and grew up on his parents' farm, assisting his father after he was old enough. On October 8, 1902, he was married at Mineral Point, Iowa County, Wis., to Elsie Stacey, who was born at Mifflin, Iowa County, Wis., on June 12, 1885, daughter of James and Grace (Bullon) Stacey. For a while after his marriage Mr. Stoner continued to work for his father on the home farm, which he later rented for three years, and altogether he rented farms in Iowa County for eight years. In 1912 the family came to Dunn County and in that year the subject of this sketch bought a partly improved farm of 160 acres in Section 7, of the There was a fair frame house on the place but a poor log barn. town of Tiffanv. The house he has made to serve his purpose, as he has improved it, but the barn being inadequate, he has built a new one of large proportions, 100 x 34 x 14 feet with an 8-foot tile basement, and of modern style, having a full steel equipment. Another building erected by him is a combined granary and machine shed, measuring 84 x 26 x 10 feet, and he has also put up a good tile silo having a capacity of His farm is about three and a half miles from Downing, the same dis-130 tons. tance from Glenwood City and six and a half miles from Boyceville, so he has three good markets, all at a reasonable distance. From 55 to 60 acres of his land are under cultivation. His cattle are Herefords crossed with Shorthorns, having a pure bred Shorthorn bull in his herd. For three years Mr. Stoner served as school director of District No. 3. He and his wife have been the parents of three children: Zelda, born July 4, 1903, who is employed in St. Paul, Minn.; Parley, born Nov. 28, 1906, who died in infancy; Alice, born July 19, 1907, and Harley, born April 30, 1914, the two latter naturally living with their parents on the home farm. Mr. Stoner and his family attend the M. E. Church in Downing, which they help to support, though not members.

Edgar W. Bow, a well known and respected resident of the town of Dunn, owner of Cedar Hedge Farm in Section 34, but now retired from active work, was born in Clinton County, New York, Sept. 26, 1848, son of John and Susan (Begor) Bow. The parents were natives of the same county, where they spent their lives from early manhood and womanhood as farmers. Edgar W. Bow as a boy attended district school in the town of Ellenberg, Clinton County, N. Y. He remained at home with his parents until 1878, when, at the age of 30 years, he came west to St. Croix County, Wisconsin, locating at Wilson Station, where he remained for eight years in the employ of the Western Wisconsin Manufacturing Co. He then bought a farm of 120 acres in the town of Weston, Dunn County, which he operated until 1894. He then sold it and bought a tract of 190 acres in Section 34, town of Dunn, which was mostly wild, only about 25 acres having been broken. A house and a few sheds had been erected, and, with this for a starting-point, Mr. Bow proceeded to build up the excellent farm which he now owns, and of which 160 acres are under the plow. He erected a fine dairy barn of 36 x 62 feet in ground plan, with basement, and he also put up all the out-buildings now in use. He also planted around the farm a cedar hedge, whence it derives the name it bears. It is nicely located on State Trunk Highway No. 25 and is but a short drive from several important community centers, including the cities of Menomonie and Durand. After following general farming on this place with good success until 1915, Mr. Bow on July 14th, that year, rented it to his son, Roy W., and moved across the road into a nice little bungalow, which stands on another part of the farm, and in which he now resides. He is a stockholder in the Eau Galle Telephone Co., the Farmer's Equity Exchange and the New Richmond Packing Plant. Formerly for several years he served as clerk of Waubeek School District No. 2. On March 27, 1879, Mr. Bow was united in marriage with Caroline C. Fitch, who was born at Norfolk, St. Lawrence County, N. Y., May 10, 1848, and who came to Wisconsin with her parents, Lyman and Clarissa (Smith) Fitch, in 1854, the family settling in the town of Eau Galle, Dunn County, where they arrived on November 8. The trip had been made up the St. Lawrence River to the Canadian shore opposite Niagara Falls, thence by train to Chicago and across northern Illinois to the Mississippi thence up the great river to Read's Landing, and from there by keel boat up the Chippewa and Eau Galle Rivers to Eau Galle. There they lived until a home in the town of Dunn was built, to which place they moved by ox team in 1856. The little daughter Caroline, who was six year old when she arrived in Dunn County, attended school in Eau Galle and Menomonie, finishing her school work in Eau Galle. She began teaching at an early age and continued in that profession for nearly 20 years, teaching for a while in the public school at Wilson for some time after her marriage. After 40 years of happy wedlock, Mrs. Bow passed away Aug. 20, 1919, at the age of 71 years, three months and 11 days. Her health had been gradually failing for several years, but it was not until Sunday evening, Aug. 17, that she was taken seriously ill. She left, besides her immediate family, two sisters, Mrs. F. B. Ames of Waubeek, and Mrs. John Percey of Durand, besides other relatives and many friends. To Mr. and Mrs. Edgar W. Bow four children were born: E. Lyman, friends. at Wilson, Nov. 16, 1883; Roy W., at Wilson, June 18, 1886; Max F., in the town of Weston, Dunn County, March 4, 1890, and Emma, in the town of Weston, on Sept. 8, 1887. Emma died on Sept. 8, 1895, aged just eight years, and Max F. is residing on the home farm with his father. E. Lyman acquired a good education, after completing his elementary studies attending the Dunn County Normal School, the Valley City (N. D.) Normal School and the University of Minnesota. For some years up to 1919 he was engaged in teaching. Then for four years he was a traveling salesman for the St. Paul Equity Exchange. He is now a graduate from the Palmer School of Chiropractic at Davenport, Iowa. He was married Feb. 12. 1914, to Pearl Wilson of Durand, Wis., and he and his wife are the parents of one child, Vivian, who was born May 7, 1917. Roy W. Bow attended the Dunn County Normal School for two years, after which he took a homestead on the Rosebud Reservation in South Dakota. Having proved it up and sold it, he returned home and entered the agricultural department of Wisconsin University, being graduated with the class of 1915. From that time until 1919, he managed the home farm, then rented it from his father, and has since been engaged in operating it. He was married June 2, 1910, to Bertha Haggen of Devil's Lake, N. D., who was born June 24, 1889. They have three children: Everett, born Sept. 26, 1914; Fern, born Jan. 28, 1917, and Ruth, born Oct. 6, 1919.

Edward H. Hartung, proprietor of Hillcrest Farm, containing 200 acres in Section 11, town of Eau Galle, was born at Arkansaw, town of Waterville, Pepin County, Sept. 9, 1888, son of William and Ernestina (Bates) Hartung. William Hartung, the father, was born in Hessen Nassau, Germany, Aug. 23, 1856, son of Conrad and Magdaline (Feuster) Hartung. Conrad died in Germany and his wife subsequently coming to America, finally passed away near Arkansaw, Pepin County, Wis. They had nine children, Adam, Eliza, Karl, Mary, Frances, Chrisensia, Jacob and Jacob, second, of whom the only survivors are William and Karl. William Hartung attended common school to the age of 13, at 15 began to learn the mason's trade, and at 22 entered the German army, in which he served three years. At 25 (in 1881) he came to America, first finding employment in a piano factory in Brooklyn, N. Y., where he worked for two years, four of his sisters being employed in the same factory. In October, 1883, he came to Wisconsin, locating on an 80acre farm three miles northwest of Arkansaw, Pepin County. There was a small frame house on the tract and 15 acres of the land had been cleared. In the following year-on May 5, 1884-William Hartung was married at Eau Galle, to Ernestina Bates, who was born in Germany, March 25, 1858, daughter of Andrew and Margaret (Noll) Bates. She had come to this country alone shortly before he did, also stopping for a while in Brooklyn. She was one of 16 children, of whom in addition to herself, there are four others now living-Frieda, Edward, Frances and Maryin Germany. Mr. and Mrs. William Hartung remained on the Pepin County farm until 1913, by which time they had 120 acres developed and a good set of buildings. It was then that they sold out and moved to Eau Galle, where they own a six-acre tract of land just outside the village limits, having a fine brick house and other good buildings. They take a great interest in the success of their children, who are settled all around them. Their family numbers seven, namely: Lena, Mary, Arthur, Edward H., August, Rosa, Emma and Frederick. Lena, born May 5, 1885, is now Mrs. Leo Schlosser of Waubeek, Pepin County, her children are, Clarence, Ethel, Shirley and Paul. Mary, born June 20, 1886, is Mrs. Louis Schlosser of Waubeek and has five children, Lucy, Margaret, Arthur, Ralph and Edward, born Sept. 9, 1888, is a prosperous farmer in Eau Galle and Catherine. has four children, Floyd, Margaret, Carl and James. August, born Oct. 26, 1890, is a farmer in Pepin County and has five children, of whom we have the names of Frances, Esther and Kenneth. Rosa, born Jan. 1893, is now Mrs. Harry Bates of the town of Eau Galle and has had five children, Joseph, Rosanna. Carl, Lawrence and Frederick, the last mentioned being now deceased. Emma, born March 23, 1896, is Mrs. Frank Spindler of the town of Durand and her children are Marion, William and one other. Mr. and Mrs. William Hartung are Catholics in religion. Edward H. Hartung acquired his education in the district school and remained at home assisting his father on the home farm until he was 20 years old. Then for four years he was in the employ of John Keeler of Eau Galle as a carpenter. In 1910 he bought his present farm of 200 acres in Section 11, town of Eau Galle, known as the old Conrad Hofacker farm. It was badly run down and in order to build it up property Mr. Hartung had to tear down a number of the old buildings, replacing them with new ones. In fact, he has built an entire new set of out-buildings, and has remodeled the residence, putting in a hot-air furnace and hot and cold running water, having a pressure tank and soft water cistern. He has also cemented the barn basement and installed the Olson patent barn equipment and drinking-cups. Another of his additions to the place is a cement silo of 12 x 41 feet inside dimensions. Mr. Hartung has also broken and developed several more acres of the land, has brushed many acres for pasturage and completely fenced the In the spring of 1925, he laid cement walks around the house and also farm. fenced his lawn and planted shrubbery and flowers, which has greatly beautified He keeps Guernsey cattle, having a pure bred sire, and at the present the place. time has a herd of 106 pure bred Poland-China hogs. Thus in the last 14 years he has accomplished some notable results and Hillcrest Farm has taken its place among the best in the southwestern part of the county. Mr. Hartung practices both di-versified farming and dairying. He is a member of the Catholic Church and of the Catholic Knights of Wisconsin. Mr. Hartung was married Nov. 15, 1910, to Maude Elizabeth Weinzirl, who was born in the town of Eau Galle, Dunn County, May 22, 1892, daughter of Henry and Clara (Lechler) Weinzirl, prominent farmers in the town of Eau Galle. Henry Weinzirl was born on the farm on which he and his wife are now living, the latter having been born at Wabasha, Minn. Mrs. Hartung is a granddaughter, on the paternal side, of Adolph and Elizabeth (Send) Weinzirl, natives of Germany who came to America when young and were married at Wabasha, Minn. They came to Eau Galle in 1854, their family being one of the first to settle in this vicinity. Adolph Weinzirl was a millwright by trade and helped to build the mills at Eau Galle, Downsville, Menomonie, Eau Claire and Chippewa Falls. To Mr. and Mrs. Hartung four children have been born: Floyd Edwin, Feb. 2, 1913; Margaret Marie, Sept. 19, 1916; Carl Louis, Nov. 8, 1918, and James August, April 18, 1923.

Ole Torgerson, Sr., an early settler in Dunn County, and one of the pioneers of the Little Elk Creek district, was born in North From, Gudbrandsdalen, Norway, Dec. 24, 1835. He came to America in 1858. When the Civil War broke out he enlisted in Company B, Sixth Wisconsin Volunteers, which company became a part of the famous Iron Brigade. He served most of the time under Brigadier-General Edward S. Bragg in the Army of the Potomac and participated in the battles of Mine Run, the Wilderness, Laurel Hill, Spottsylvania, Jericho Ford Cold Harbor, Petersburg, Weldon Railroad and Hatcher's Run. He was taken prisoner by the Confederates March 31, 1865, at Gravel Run, Va. During the last year of the war he was promoted to corporal, in which capacity he served until the war was over. After receiving an honorable discharge on May 12, 1865, he returned home and became one of the pioneers on Little Elk Creek, Dunn County, settling on the farm which is now owned by his son, Ole Torgerson, Jr., in the town of Red Cedar. He lived on this farm until his death on June 7, 1918. On April 23, 1870, Mr. Torgerson was married to Lisabet Sandvig, who was born in Old Gudbrandsdalen, Norway, May 24, 1847. She came to America in the year 1868, being three months on the ocean in a sailing vessel. She came west to Read's Landing on the Mississippi River, and from there by steamboat up the Chippewa to Meridean, where a brother of Mr. Torgerson, Torger Olson, and his wife Kari, resided, and they received and cared for her, as also for other new arrivals from Norway. Her subsequent marriage to Mr. Torgerson has been already mentioned. With him she shared the hardships of pioneer life on Elk Creek and proved a loving and faithful wife, good mother and hospitable neighbor. She died on the home farm Nov. 30, 1920, when in her seventy-fourth year. Mr. and Mrs. Ole Torgerson, Sr., had a family of eight children, five of whom survive. They are: Ole Torgerson, Jr., living on the old home farm in the town of Red Cedar; Edward of Highland Farm, town of Red Cedar; Johanna (Mrs. Andrew Boland), who lives at No. 1215 Eighth Street, Menomonie; Ellen (Mrs. Lars Njus), of Pennock, Minn., and Josie (Mrs. Christ Larson), of the town of Dunn.

Ole T. Torgerson, Jr., a prominent farmer of the town of Red Cedar, and a member of the town board, was born on the farm he now owns and operates, on May 7, 1872, son of Ole, Sr., and Lisabet (Sandvig) Torgerson. He was educated in the district school and remained at home with his parents, assisting his father in clearing and developing the farm, a tract of 120 acres in Sections 7 and 8. In 1912, six years before his father's death, he took it over and has since bent his energies towards its improvement with good results. He is a stockholder in the Downsville Cooperative Creamery and one of the leading farmers in his town, having worked for its interests in various ways. For many years he has held the office of supervisor and is still serving in that capacity. Mr. Torgerson was married Nov. 30, 1911, in Red Cedar to Anna Otterson, who was born March 9, 1886. Mrs. Torgerson died Dec. 24, 1923, leaving two children: Norman, born Sept. 9, 1912, and Vivian, born May 21, 1917. The family are members of the Lutheran Church at Elk Creek.

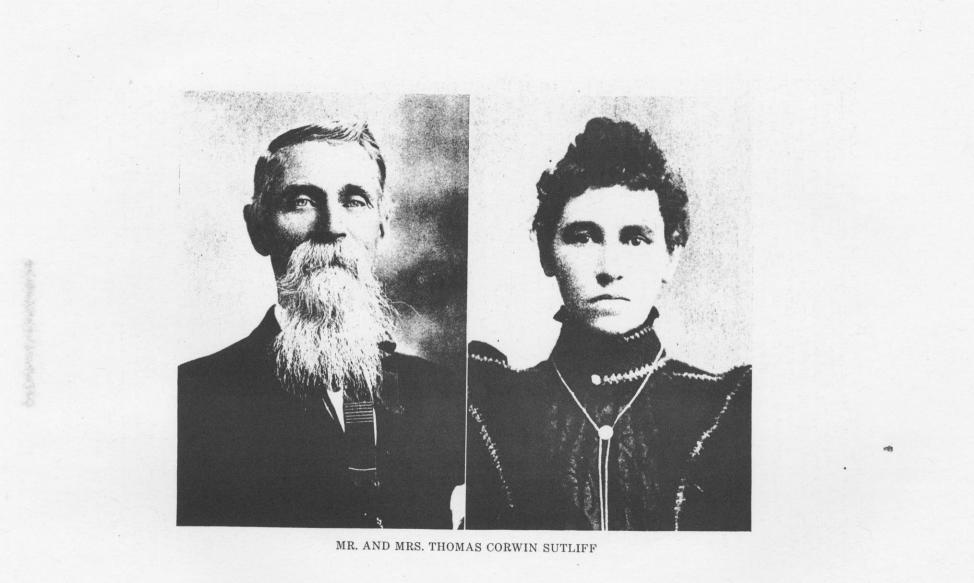

John Flick, a pioneer of Dunn County who had a long career in this county as lumber worker and farmer and who is still living, was born in Brienz, Switzerland, Feb. 3, 1838, son of John and Margareta (Gauber) Flick. After remaining in his native land until reaching the age of 14 years, he came in 1856 to the United States, locating at Dubuque, Iowa, where he remained for about ten months. From there he went to La Crosse, where he spent a month, then coming on to Menomonie.

which place was his home for some seven or eight years thereafter. During that time he was in the employ of Knapp, Stout & Co., working in different branches of the lumber business, sometimes in the woods, at other times in the mills or on the river drives. During the same period also, on March 28, 1863, he was married to Magdalene Kienholz, who was bern in Switzerland in June, 1839, and who, like himself, had come to America in 1856. In the spring of 1865 Mr. Flick moved to Downsville, where he continued to work for Knapp, Stout & Co. (later known as the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company) until 1884. That well known lumber company who had been active many years in Dunn County and the vicinity were then drawing near to the end of their operations here, as the timber was becoming exhausted, and they continued but a few years longer in the cousty. Mr. Flick did not wait for them to fell their last tree. He had some years before, in 1875, bought 160 acres of land in Section 23, town of Dunn, a tract that was partly developed, and he now moved on to it and continued the improvements, repairing the old buildings. and carrying on general farming. He also increased the size of his farm by buying another 160 acres. After residing there until 1910 he sold the place, and, having been a widower for some nine years or more, went to live with his daughter, Mrs. Tim Manor on the Manor farm in the town of Dunn. In the spring of 1919 Mr. and Mrs. Manor sold their farm and moved to Durand, he accompanying them, and he is now living with them in that city. During his active career he was supervisor one year of the town of Dunn, and he served many years also as clerk and treasurer of his school district. Mrs. Magdalene Flick died on Sept. 16, 1900, after 27 years of happy wedded life, during which she proved herself a good wife She had borne her husband 11 children, all of whom are now living and mother. but one, William, the first born, having died at the age of 58 years. The others are: Mary, now Mrs. Caesar Flick of the town of Dunn; Mattie, wife of Tim Manor of Durand; Clara, who is Mrs. Frank Thines of Durand; Jake, of Sashkatchewan, Canada; Arnold, who is on the home farm in the town of Dunn; Louis, in Arizona; Margaret, now Mrs. William McNaughton of the town of Dunn; Edward and Elmer, also on the home farm, and Gertrude, now Mrs. Joseph Thines of the town of Dunn. The family are affiliated religiously with the Methodist Episcopal Church.

Joseph Thines, an active and successful farmer of the town of Dunn, was born on his father's farm in this town on Dec. 15, 1859. His parents were Charles and Louisa (Heindel) Thines, both born in Germany, the father on Dec. 29, 1823, and the mother on April 28, 1826. They came to the United States when young, were married in Trenton, N. J. and came to Dunn County, Wisconsin, in 1858. Settling in the town of Dunn, they bought 160 acres of land, all of which was wild except. nine acres that had been broken. Mr. Thines built a frame house and log barns and began the improvement of the place. He and his wife were genuine pioneers. of this county, settling in the midst of a wilderness isolated from civilization, many miles away from a railroad, or even a public road, unless it were one of the crudest construction, and with many years of hard work and privation to pass through ere they could hope to enjoy the fruit of their labors and self denial in the possession of a good farm and a few years of comfortable existence. But these were the sacrifices it was essential to make in the great work of building up the Northwest, and were made by many. Mr. and Mrs. Thines realized their ambition, making progress year by year, putting up a good set of buildings to replace the original makeshift structures, and also increasing the size of their farm by the purchase of an additional tract of 100 acres. Mr. Thines continued to operate his farm until his death, which occurred Dec. 18, 1896, his wife, who survived him over seven years, dying May 10, 1903. They were the parents of seven children: Charles, now residing in Necedah, Wis.; Henry, of Ashland, Wis.; Joseph, subject of this sketch; Louisa, who is Mrs. Jacob Gasteyer of the town of Eau Galle, Dunn County; Caroline, who is the wife of Peter Gasteyer of the town of Eau Galle; Frank, of Durand, Wis.; and Kate, who is now Mrs. Edward Kyle of the town of Dunn. Joseph Thines as a boy attended the school of District No. 2, known as the Waubeek school, and as he grew older began to help his father on the farm, thus becoming an active factor in its development. He was 40 years old when in the year 1900 he began farming for himself on land in Section 28, which he had received as a gift from his father before the latter's death. Later he acquired other land and now has 126 acres, 100 of which are in his farm proper, and 26 on the Chippewa bottoms. In 1902 he built his present residence and a fine basement barn of 36 x 56 feet, and he has also put up a set of good out-buildings. He has continued to develop his land following general and diversified farming with good results. He is also a man who takes a helpful interest in things that concern the welfare of the general community and for two years served as a member of the town board. Mr. Thines was married April 18, 1900, to Gertrude Flick, who was born in the town of Dunn, March 9, 1876, daughter of John and Magdalene Kuenholtz, her parents being natives of Switzerland and early settlers in the town of Dunn. The children of this union are: Ruby E., born May 6, 1909, and Dorothy M., born July 28, 1915. Thomas Corwin Sutliff, now living retired at Cedar Falls, Dunn County, was born at Columbus, Penn., July 2, 1847, son of Norman and Anna (Brown) Sutliff. The father, Norman Sutliff, was born in the same locality, or near Columbus, in the year 1800, the year in which Thomas Jefferson was chosen president of the United States, and only 18 years after this country had achieved its independence. Sometime after attaining manhood he left his home in Warren County, which is one of the northwest counties of the Keystone State, adjoining the southwestern corner of the state of New York, and went to the little village of Shenango, in Mercer County, Penn., which borders on the Ohio line. What he did there is not stated nor how long he remained, but in 1833 he returned to the neighborhood of h_{3} old home, settling on a farm about half a mile from Columbus. It must have been about this time that he married, and he certainly remained there for a number of years, as all his children—12 in number—were born there. In the war with Mexico (1846-1848) he served under the immediate command of General Dearborn, in the army commanded by General Winfield Scott, which ended the war by taking the City of Mexico. He must have been a man of some education, as he afterwards practiced law and was also a civil engineer. It was in 1852 that he heard the call of the West and settled in Fond du Lac County, Wisconsin, thence going to Jackson County, where he remained until 1865. Then coming to Dunn County, he settled in what is now the town of Tiffany, where he spent his remaining years, passing away on June 4, 1884. His wife Anna, died in Pennsylvania at the age of 55 years. Their 12 children were, Lydia B., Lorenzo D., Laura Elnora, William B., Lucy A., Warren, Helen, Omer H., Eliza A., Hortense, Llewellyn L. and Thomas Corwin. Thomas Corwin Sutliff was two years old when his mother died. At the age of five years he accompanied his eldest sister to Dodge County, where he attended school. From there they moved to Jackson County, where he remained until he His next removal was to Fond du Lac County, where he had further was eleven. schooling, after which he returned with his father to Jackson County, where he remained until 1865. As soon as he was old enough he took a homestead of 160 acres in what is now the town of Tiffany, on which he built a log house and barn, besides other buildings, and began its improvement. Later he bought more land until he had 465 acres. Subsequently he traded that place for a farm of 142 acres in the town of Red Cedar, where he farmed until 1905. He then sold that farm to his son Francis, but for some time thereafter continued to live in one of the houses on it. His next active enterprise was to purchase 40 acres in the town of New Haven, to which he later added 20 acres more. He resided on that place until 1911, when he sold it and rented a house at Connersville, where he remained until the spring of 1912. After that he spent some time in travel, visiting Minnesota and the Dakotas, and also the state of Georgia. In the fall of 1913 he returned to the village of Cedar Falls, where he is now living, and where he resided for a while in the busy lumbering days when he worked in the mills. He was first married March 8, 1874, at Eau Claire, Wis., to Angelia Bishop, like himself a native of Pennsylvania, born at Port Allegheny, in McKean County, about 70 miles east of Columbus. the early home of her husband. She died May 29, 1912, leaving two children, Francis Corwin and Vera M. Francis Corwin, born May 21, 1876, is now a prosperous farmer in the town of Tiffany. He married Bertha Flanigan and they have six children, Isadore, Harvey L., Donald, Lila M., Nellie R. and Nancy E. Vera M., born Sept. 17, 1879, is now Mrs. Reuben West of Downing and the mother of four children, Clifford, Giles, Ethel and Marjory. Mr. Sutliff was married secondly on Oct. 20, 1913, to Mrs. Ellen C. Plemon, whose inaiden name was Ellen C. Burke, and who was born in Hemmingford, Canada East, Jan. 27, 1848, daughter of James and Mary (Bailey) Burke. Her parents, who were natives of England, are now deceased. Mrs. Sutliff came to the United States in 1875, locating in Chicago, where she was first married on Dec. 27, 1877, to Levi O. Plemon. Coming to Dunn County, Wis., they settled at Cedar Falls, where Mr. Plemon conducted a hotel and store, also serving 12 years as postmaster. In addition to this he owned and operated a farm. His death occurred Sept. 10, 1908. His only children were by a previous wife, whose maiden name was Mary Prouty. These were Isadore, Belle and Morris, the last mentioned of whom is now deceased. Isadore resides in California and Belle in Dubuque, Iowa.

Francis Corwin Sutliff, a respected resident of Section 4, town of Tiffany, who has a long and creditable record in the two industries that have had most to do with the development and civilization of Dunn County-lumbering and farming-was born in Eau Claire, Wis., May 21, 1876, son of Thomas Corwin and Angelia (Bishop) Francis Corwin Sutliff acquired his education in the common schools and Sutliff. until the age of 17 or 18 years remained at home with his parents. When he was but 15 he drove a team of horses and yoke of oxen for his father on a "tow-hill," thus saving him the expense of hiring a man for the work. When he cut loose from the old home he worked as a farm hand for others during the summers and in winters followed the lumber camps, and his connection with the lumber industry extended over many years. Indeed as late as the winters of 1921-22 and 1922-23 he drove a team in a lumber camp at Winter, Sawyer County, Wis. He has, however, spent most of his life in the town of Tiffany. About 1911 he bought a partly improved farm of 160 acres in Section 4, this town, about six miles northwest of Boyceville. The principal buildings were a fair frame house and barn. To this he has since added a tract of 188 acres adjoining, this tract also being partly improved. After operating it until 1914, he moved to Connersville, but in the spring of 1916 returned to his farm, which in the meanwhile he had rented out. In 1919 he again rented out the farm and moved to Boyceville, where he spent three years, returning for the second time to his farm in the spring of 1923, which he operated with hired help, his family having remained in the village. They returned to the farm, in the spring of 1924 and are now living there. Mr. Sutliff has about 120 acres of his farm under the plow, the balance being in timber and pasture. He has a good herd of Shorthorn, Durham and Guernsey cattle, numbering about 50 head, with a pure bred sire of the Durham breed, and he is milking 23 cows. His farm is well kept and in good condition. Mr. Sutliff was married July 21, 1901, at Glenwood, Wis., to Bertha A. O'Flannigan of the town of Dallas, Barron County, she having been born on the farm of her parents, Darwin and Nancy O'Flannigan, in that town, Jan. 20, 1880. Mr. and Mrs. Sutliff are the parents of six children, all living, namely: Isadore, Harvey L., Donald D., Lila M., Nellie R. and Nancy E. Isadore, who was born at Cedar Falls, Dunn County, on Sept. 21, 1903, is now the wife of Albert R. Burch of Boyceville, who is a carrier on a rural postal route out of that village. She has one child, Julian, born Jan. 29, 1923. Harvey L., born Jan. 23, 1905, also at Cedar Falls, is with his parents on the home farm, as also are the other children, Donald D., born April 25, 1909; Lila M., born Feb. 9, 1914; Nellie R., born June 2, 1918, and Nancy E., born June 8, 1922.

Theodore Johnson, who for many years has been well established in the village of Wheeler as a contractor and builder, and is a highly respected citizen, was born in Fillmore County, Minnesota, Feb. 6, 1874, son of Lars and Marit (Roen) Johnson. The parents were natives of Ncrway who came to America in 1871, locating in that county and state. In 1876 they came with their children to Dunn County, Wisconsin, taking a homestead of 160 acres in the town of Otter Creek, which was then but thinly settled. His own land was cut over, but was otherwise wild and obstructed by numerous stumps, the removal of which found him much strenuous employment throughout a number of years. With patience and industry he worked his way onward, clearing and breaking his land, erecting a house and barns, and in time had a very good farm, and was numbered among the prosperous agriculturists of his town. He died Jan. 7, 1913, being survived by his wife, who now resides just north of Wheeler with her sons, the farm being operated by Leonard Shaw. Theodore Johnson grew up on the home farm, attending the district school, when old enough assisting his father to develop the place. At the age of 26 he took up carpenter work in the village of Wheeler and applied himself to master the trade in all its branches, which he did, becoming widely known as a reliable workman. After a period during which he worked for others, he started in business for himself as a contractor, and as such has made a good reputation. He has erected many of the best residences in Wheeler and the adjacent territory, and also quite a number of business blocks or public buildings. Among the residences in his own dwelling, a very attractive looking house of cement-block construction. He has been active in local movements for the public welfare, being a member of the Wheeler Commercial Club, and in addition to his residence in Wheeler he owns a piece of good farm land in the town of Otter Creek. Mr. Johnson was married June 22, 1909, to Anna McPherson, who was born Aug. 22, 1886, daughter of Alex and Minnie (Hays) McPherson. He and his wife are the parents of four children, who were born as follows: Ruby, Oct. 19, 1911; Thelma, Aug. 11, 1913; Phyllis, Feb. 26, 1915, and Clyde, May 6, 1921. Mr. and Mrs. Johnson are members of Grace Evangelical Church of Wheeler.

William Ponto, a prominent young farmer in Section 32, town of Menomonie, was born on the farm that he is now operating, on Nov. 4, 1892, son of Julius and Caroline (Tetzloff) Ponto. His father and mother came to America with their respective parents when young, the father of Julius Ponto taking a homestead in Section 6, town of Menomonie, Dunn County, Wis., and it was there that Julius was reared and educated. After remaining at home until his marriage, he purchased the old Tetzloff farm in Section 32, which he built up and improved, operating it until 1913, when he retired. Since then he has resided in the city of Menomonie. Mr. and Mrs. Julius Ponto were the parents of three children: William, subject of this sketch; Otto, who died at the age of eight years; and Mabel, who is now Mrs. August Neubauer of the town of Weston. William Ponto acquired his education in District School No. 5, and subsequently worked for his father until he took over the home farm in the fall of 1913, since which time he has operated it successfully on his own account. He is a stockholder in the Downsville Cooperative Creamery. William Ponto was married in Menomonie, Nov. 4, 1913, to Louise Holtzhueter, who was born April 7, 1893, in the town of Menomonie, daughter of Charles and Minnie (Groff) Holtzhueter. Her father died a number of years ago, and her mother subsequently married William Krueger, who is also now deceased, Mrs. Krueger residing in the city of Menomonie. The children in the family of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Holtzhueter were Louise, now Mrs. William Ponto, and Bertha, who is now Mrs. Paul Kueneke of Menomonie. Mr. and Mrs. Ponto are members of the Freedom Lutheran Church of Menomonie. They have two children, namely: Velma, born March 3, 1917, and Gerald, born Oct. 14, 1922.

Knute Jacobson, an early settler in Dunn County, and for many years a well known farmer in the town of Red Cedar, was born in Norway, March 26, 1825. He grew to manhood in his native land and was married there April 6, 1857, to to Randi Dahl, who was born June 27, 1831. In 1865 they emigrated to the United States and came west to Dunn County, Wisconsin. Mr. Jacobson, who had learned the trade of blacksmith in his native land, for two years was employed as such by Knapp, Stout & Co., and could have remained with them longer, had he wanted to continue at his trade. But he was ambitious to own a little section of the soil and found a homestead, and his wife sharing in this ambition, in spite of the hard work and privation it entailed upon them both. In 1867 he purchased 160 acres in Section 18, town of Red Cedar, the place being known as the Iven Nelson farm. On it he erected a set of buildings of log construction and began the work of clearing his land. The hardships of pioneer life have been often told, but those who endured it courageously and patiently, pressing forward with persistent industry, in course of time, unless death first claimed them, reaped their reward. That reward was won by Mr. and Mrs. Jacobson, for in time they found themselves the owners of a fine farm of 280 acres, Mr. Jacobson having purchased an additional tract of 120 acres. This he cultivated with profitable results, aided by his five sons, and continued to do so until 1904, when he turned it over to them. His life was drawing near to its close, however, for on May 16, 1906, he passed away. His wife survived him a number of years, dying March 24, 1920. They were people highly regarded by all who knew them, fcr they were honest, kind and hospitable and helpful to new settlers. Their home was often in the early days the scene of innocent enjoyment, and Grandma Jacobson will long be remembered for the many good deeds she They were the parents of the children whose record follows: Jacob, now did. conducting a truck farm at Hagerman, New Mexico; Hans, who is also at Hagerman, N. M.; Christ, who resides with his brother Anton, in Section 18, town of Red Cedar; Herman, a farmer in the town of Red Cedar; John, who died in infancy; Anton, to be further mentioned; Clara, now deceased, who married Anton Dahl, and was the mother of two children, Randi and Clara; Thora, who is Mrs. O. J. Myers of Moorehead, Minn., and has eight children, Norman, Ralph, Mabel, Oliver, Levina, Julia, Helen and Alice; and Julia, who is the wife of Jens Jensen of Knapp Hill, Dunn County.

Anton Jacobson, proprietor of Kolenhurst Farm, in Section 18, town of Red Cedar, was born on this farm on April 29, 1875, son of Knute and Randi (Dahl) Jacobson. It was here that he was reared and grew to manhood, assisting his father to develop the place. In 1904 the five brothers took over the home farm and subsequently operated it together until 1909, in which year Anton and Herman bought the interests of the others, and were partners in its operation until 1917. Then Anton purchased Herman's interest and title, except to 85 acres, taking over the rest, with the stock and machinery. In 1904 the Jacobson Brothers decided to go into pure bred stock and accordingly purchased seven Holstein heifers, and Today Anton has a herd of 55 head, all pure bred, which in 1909 bought five more. he has raised himself, and 31 of the cows are producing milk. He is now one of the largest cattle breeders in Dunn County, and is a member of the state and national Holstein-Freisian Association. He is also a stockholder in and member of the Dunn County Fair Association. He has been usefully active in public affairs, serving several years as supervisor and also as clerk of School District No. 4. As a stockholder in and director of the Downsville creamery he has promoted the interests of that important cooperative concern, and he also holds stock in the Waterman-Erhardt Mercantile Co. in Menomonie. Always progressive, he has rebuilt his barn, erected numerous other buildings on his place, and in 1917 built a fine residence of 12 rooms, which is one of the handsomest and best in Dunn County, having complete modern fittings. His energy and enterprise have gained for him a reputation that extends all over the county. Mr. Jacobson was married Sept. 26, 1906, in the Little Elk Creek Lutheran Church to Alice Peterson, daughter of Adolph and Julia (Christopherson) Peterson. To him and his wife five children have been born, as follows: Ruth Claudia, June 20, 1907; Lucille A., April 19, 1909; Russell A., Jan. 19, 1912; Elsie E., Jan. 22, 1914; and Anton, Jr., Oct. 12, 1922. The two eldest are attending high school in Menomonie. Mr. Jacobson and his family are members of the Little Elk Creek Church.

William Fesenmaier, a progressive farmer of the town of Eau Galle, whose farm of 160 acres situated in Section 5, is the old parental homestead on which he lived as a boy, was born in Cumberland, Md., April 22, 1875. His parents were Joseph and Elizabeth (Wolf) Fesenmaier, the father a native of Germany and the mother of the state of Maryland. They were married in Cumberland, that state, where Joseph Fesenmaier was for some years employed in the iron works. It was in the year 1878, that they came to Dunn County, Wisconsin, Mr. Fesenmaier buying 80 acres of partly improved land on Morton Hill. On the tract stood an old log shack, which immediately became their home, and then the development of a farm began, a long, hard task, the more so that when he began Mr. Fesenmaier had neither tools nor machinery and very little stock. Thus he was handicapped in the race but plodded along as best he could, making gradual progress, and in time getting the machinery, stock, and all other things needed. This long and difficult task was patiently and successfully performed. In 1897 he built a fine nine-room house of brick veneer construction; in 1906 a basement barn of 36 x 66 feet, and in 1907 Other buildings were also put up from time to time when his means pera silo. mitted. He also bought 40 acres more land, thus increasing the area of his farm to 120 acres, and he continued to operate his farm more and more successfully, passing gradually from pioneer to modern methods, until 1913. He then retired, renting the farm to his son, and buying a house in the village of Elmwood where he made his home until his death on Nov. 24, 1918. He was survived by his wife, who still resides in Elmwood. Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Fesenmaier were the parents of ten children, namely: Joseph, now of Seattle, Wash.; Martha, now Mrs. Jacob Weber of Martinsberg, Mo.; Frances, widow of Nicholas Weber, of Elmwood; Anna, now Mrs. Edward Shannon of Eau Galle; William, now proprietor of the old home farm; Nora, who lives with her mother; Agnes, wife of Ralph Ryder of Richmond, Va.; Henry, of San Bonita, Texas; Theresa, now Mrs. John Boehrer of Durand, Wis.; and Matie, who is Mrs. Tony Schuler of Elmwood. William Fesenmaier acquired his education in the Morton Hill district school and grew to manhood on the home farm, where he has always remained, except for about a year and a half, 1896-1897, when he worked out for others. In 1913, when his father retired, he took over the management of the farm, conducting it on rental until 1920, in which year he bought it. Previous to this he had bought 40 acres of land adjoining the home farm, thus increasing the size of his farm to 160 acres. He has also made a number of improvements on the place, having remodeled the interior of the residence, built a milk house, re-roofed the barn, added a porch to the house and refenced the farm, which is now one of the best on Morton Hill. Mr. Fesenmaier is following general farming and dairying and is grading up a fine herd of Holstein cattle with a pure bred sire. He also keeps Poland-China hogs. He has served as a member of the school board of District No. 4, and is now serving as treasurer. He is fraternally a member of the Modern Woodmen of America. He was married March 11, 1905, to Emma Sperger, who was born in Pierce County, Wis., Oct. 6, The issue of this marriage is six children, who were born as follows: Everett, 1884. April 11, 1906; Raymond C., Jan. 16, 1908; Marion M., Jan. 30, 1915; Andrew J., May 15, 1917; Theresa M., Dec. 31, 1919, and Bernadine M., Feb. 8, 1921. The family are members of the Catholic church, worshipping with the Elmwood congregation.

Joseph Bates, who for many years was engaged in agriculture in the town of Eau Galle, building up a fine farm from a very poor or ordinary place, was born in Germany, Jan. 9, 1862. He was educated in his native land and was 18 years old when he came alone to the United States and to the state of Wisconsin. For 14 vears he worked at Shell Lake for the Shell Lake Lumber Co., that is, he worked in their mill there in summer, but in the winter he worked in the woods. In 1894 he came to Dunn County and began farming here, buying an improved farm of 80 acres in the town of Weston, where he remained for eight years. He then sold out there and bought 130 acres in Sections 14 and 21, town of Eau Galle. The buildings on the place were very poor, but since then he has replaced all of them with new ones except the house, which he has remodeled and converted into a fine country residence. In 1908 he built a large basement barn, 34 x 66 feet, and also erected a fine Natco tile silo of $12 \ge 32$ feet. Among the other buildings he put up were a hog house, corn crib and wagon shed, and he became one of the successful farmers of his town, with one of the best farms. After being thus actively engaged until 1921 he rented the farm to his son Harry, and retired taking up his residence in the village of Elmwood, Pierce County, where he is now living with his wife in a fine house he purchased there. Mr. Bates was married April 28, 1889, to Catherine Reitz, who was born in the town of Eau Galle, Jan. 10, 1871. He and his wife are the parents of two children, Frances, born Feb. 17, 1890, and Harry, born Nov. 15, 1895. the mother of five children, Margaret, Agnes, Arthur, Raymond and Romanis. Harry, now conducting the home farm, was married June 6, 1918, to Rose Hartung and has four children, Joseph, Rosanna Carl and Lawrence. Mr. Bates and his family are Catholics in religion, belonging to the Sacred Heart Congregation at Elmwood.

Joseph Brunner, a well known and prosperous farmer of the town of Eau Galle, was born in Austria, Aug. 26, 1883, son of Frank and Josephine Brunner. The parents are also natives of Austria and are still living there. Joseph attended the public schools of his native land and remained there until 1901, when he came to America and to the state of Wisconsin, residing in Pepin County, where he attended district school for a while to learn English. Later he took up agricultural work. In 1905, when 21 years old, he came to Dunn County and for two years thereafter resided on a farm near Eau Galle village. Then in 1907 he bought his present farm of 90 acres in Section 9, Eau Galle, a partly improved property, having on it a house and a few other buildings, all of rather poor quality. He has partly rebuilt the house, making it into a good one; has erected a fine barn of 34 x 60 feet with a full basement and installed with the James equipment; also a corn crib, granary, chicken house, wood shed and machine house. He has also opened up several acres of new land, and is following mixed farming and dairying with good results, having a herd of grade Holstein cattle with a pure bred sire. He served as road overseer for one year. Mr. Brunner was married Sept. 5, 1905, to Hannah Fedie, who was born in the town of Lima, Pepin County, April 9, 1887. The children of this union are: Thomas, born Nov. 30, 1906; Mary J., born Nov. 13, 1911, and Catherine A., born July 5, 1917. The Brunner family are members of St. Henry's Catholic Congregation of Eau Galle, Mr. Brunner being also a member of the Knights of Columbus.

George J. Hellum, of Menomonie, an active worker among those who handle the meat supply for the population of Dunn County, was born in Modum, Norway, May 9, 1875, son of John and Boelit (Hendrickson) Hellum. The mother died in Norway, and in 1908 the father came to the United States, proceeding directly to Menomonie, Wis. After his arrival in Dunn County he bought a farm in the town of New Haven, which he operated until 1914. After that he made his home with his son until his death on May 4, 1916. George J. Hellum attended public school in Norway and was about 18 years old when he came to this country, landing on Coming west to Menomonie, he found employment at different June 16, 1893. times at various kinds of work. He was agent for 141/2 years for Burkhardt & Son; for the last two years he has followed the butcher's trade. He has bought a comfortable residence at No. 1608 Broadway. Alexander Hosford, now living retired in Menomonie after a business career of many years, during 23 of which he was connected with the First National Bank of this city, was born April 30, 1851, near Kongsberg, Norway, son of Ole and Ingeborg (Buserud) Hosford. After attending school in his native land, he entered industrial life, and was employed as a filer in the government gun shop at Kongsberg, when he made up his mind to emigrate to America. He speedily put his purpose into effect, and in June, 1871, landed at Quebec. Canada, whence he came directly to Milwaukee, Wis., and from there to Stevens Point. At the latter place he remained two years, during which time for the most part he was engaged in driving logs and running lumber down the Wisconsin River, in the winter being employed in camps. In 1874 Mr. Hosford went to Chippewa Falls, where for several years he worked in the sawmills and in the woods. Later he became a lumber scaler on the Chippewa River and its tributaries, and still later took a position as bookkeeper for the Chippewa Lumber & Boom Co., in their main office at Chippewa In 1881 Mr. Hosford tried another change of occupation, locating on a farm Falls. near Chetek, Barron County, but he remained there for but two years, at the end of that time entering the employ as clerk and bookkeeper of S. W. Briggs, who was proprietor of a general store in Chetek. In the fall of 1885 he resigned that position and went to Downing, Dunn County, to take the position of bookkeeper for the Downing Manufacturing Co. In the following spring he was elected assistant secretary and general manager for the concern and so remained until the fall of 1888, when he was elected county clerk of Dunn County. The latter position he held for ten years. In 1899 Mr. Hosford was elected chairman of the county board and served one year. In 1895 he established a dry goods store in Menomonie in the building now occupied by the Anderson Drug Company, and put his brotherin-law, L. H. Foss, in to manage it. The latter did so until 1900, when Mr. Hosford closed out the business. Mr. Hosford's long career as a banker began on Jan. 21, 1901, when he accepted the position of first assistant cashier in the First National Bank in Menomonie. He served in it until Jan. 1, 1924, at which time he retired from active business life. For the last 20 years he has been a director of the bank. Besides establishing a good business record, Mr. Hosford rendered some valuable public service. He was for six years a member of the Menomonie Police Commission, and for many years a trustee, and also secretary and bookkeeper of the Dunn County Asylum. He has advanced far in Masonry, belonging to the Menomonie Blue Lodge No. 164, of which he was treasurer for many years; Menomonie Chapter No. 53, R. A. M., of which he is past high priest; Menomonie Commandery No. 47, K. T., of which he is past commander; and Eau Claire Consistory of the Scottish Rite, in which he holds the office of orator. Mr. Hosford was married March 25, 1881, in Chippewa Falls, Wis., to Mary Foss, who was born Aug. 21, 1860, daughter of Hellick O. and Torgun (Toetensdatter-Haugen) Foss. He and his wife have been the parents of ten children, Olive, Harris T., Ada, William, Victor A., Myrtle J., Edwin L., William H., Raymond and P. Lloyd. Of these, five are living and five deceased, the further record being as follows: Olive, born Jan. 25, 1882, died May Harris T., born Nov. 3, 1883, now proprietor of a peach orchard in Shasta 7, 1884. County, California, married Flora Galbraith and has one child, Elmer. Ada, born Sept. 28, 1885, was graduated from the Menomonie High School with the class of 1903. She then took one year at the Milwaukee Downer (1904) at Milwaukee, and subsequently entered Leland Stanford Junior University at Palo Alto, Calif., from which she was graduated in 1907 with the degree gf Bachelor of Arts, also receiving Phi-Beta-Kappa. She subsequently took one half year of post-graduate work in the University of California at Berkeley, and one year at Stanford, receiving the Master of Arts degree, after which she taught one year in the high school at Arroyo Grande, San Luis Obispo County, California. In 1917 she received a diploma from the Gregg school in Chicago. She enlisted on June 17, 1918, in Chicago, as first class yeoman, U. S. N. R. F.; served in pay office, Navy Depart-ment personel, at Washington, D. C., until July 31, 1919; was released from active duty with rating of chief yeoman U. S. N. R. F. She is now holding the position of assistant cashier and manager of the savings department of the First National Bank of Menomonie, Wis. William H. (first), born May 3, 1887, died March 29, 1904. Victor A. and Myrtle J. (twins) were born April 27, 1890. On June 5, 1917, Victor enlisted in the navy at San Francisco. He trained at San Pedro, Calif., and at Pelham Bay, N. Y., and was subsequently assigned convoy duty as gunner's mate, 3. C., on the cruiser Frederick. After making 22 trips across the ocean, he was discharged at Hampton Roads, Va., Jan. 14, 1919. He is now proprietor of Edwin L., born Sept. 17, 1892, died May 3, 1894. William H. (second), born Dec. 19, 1895, enlisted for war service as private in Company H, Third Infantry, W. N. G., on Aug. 4, 1917, and trained with the company at Camp Douglas, Wis., and at Waco, Tex. In Texas the regiment was reorganized and Company H (the Ludington Guard) became Company H, of the 128th Infantry, 32d Division, and as such went overseas in February, 1918. Two weeks later, in France, William was transferred to Company I, 28th Infantry, First Division. He was killed in the battle of Soissons, July 18 to 24, 1918, but his body was never recovered. Hosford-Chase Post, America Legion, at Menomonie, was named in his honor, and in that of Jchn Carleton Chase. Raymond, born March 8, 1897, has also a notable war record. He entered the U. S. service on April 19, 1917, as first class private, trained at Camp Douglas and at Waco, Tex. In France he was transferred to Company I, 28th Infantry, First Division. After the battle of Cantigny, June 9, 1918, he received 14 wounds in his body and was subsequently confined to hospitals in France for several months. He was sent back to the United States in the fall of 1918 and for seven months was confined in American hospitals, being discharged April 29, 1919. He is now attending the Oregon Agricultural College at Corvallis, Ore. He married Gladys Loomis and they have two children, Raymond W. and Robert Bruce. P. Lloyd, born June 18, 1901, died Nov. 1, 1905. Mr. and Mrs. Hosford are members of Our Saviour's Lutheran Church.

Ashley Judson Adams, an early settler in the town of Lucas, now deceased, was born in Pennsylvania, Sept. 15, 1849, son of John B. and Lydia (Cleveland) Adams. The parents were natives of that state, where they remained until 1858, in which year they moved west to Iowa. There they remained until 1872, when they came to Dunn County, Wisconsin, and took land in the town of Lucas, where they spent the remainder of their lives in farming. Their son, Ashley Judson, grew to manhood in Iowa, and in Riceville, Mitchell County, that state, he was married on Sept. 15, 1872, to Mary Elizabeth Jester. She was born in Logansport, Ind., July 4, 1848, and had accompanied her parents to Iowa when six years old. Mr. Adams remained in Iowa until 1874, when, accompanied by the wife he came to Dunn County, Wisconsin, and bought 80 acres of wild land near his father's farm in Section 17, town of Lucas. Until he had time to build a house on it he and his wife resided with his parents. He then began the development of a farm, having to meet and overcome all obstacles due to a pioneer environment; but having the necessary courage, patience and industry, and his wife, moreover, proving a worthy helpmate, he in time succeeded in his object. He also proved himself a useful citizen and good neighbor, helping to build roads, promote schools, and assist new settlers as they His death, which occurred on Feb. 2, 1916, was an event deeply mourned came in. throughout the community. His wife, who survived him, is still living. Mr. and Mrs. Adams were the parents of cne child, Rena Mabelle, who was born May 12, 1874. She acquired her elementary education in the district school near her home in the town of Lucas, subsequently attended the Menomonie High School, and was graduated from the River Falls Normal School in 1900. From that time until 1922 she was engaged in teaching rural and high schools in several states-Minnesota, Wisconsin, North Dakota and Montana. She then gave up teaching in order to look after the home farm and take care of her aged mother. In May, 1924, she was appointed clerk of the town of Lucas to fill a vacancy, the clerk elected having declined to serve. Miss and Mrs. Adams attend the M. E. Church in the town of Lucas.

Ben Bjornson, now living retired in the village of Colfax, who has been a resident of Dunn County for 58 years, during which long period he has seen wonderful and beneficial changes, some of which he helped to bring about, was born in Valders, Norway, May 5, 1848, son of Bjorn Iverson and his wife, whose maiden name was Bertha Thempson. He attended school in his native land, where he remained until he was 18 years of age, at which time, in 1866, he came to America, landing at Quebec after a five weeks' trip on a sailing vessel. Crossing into the States, he went as far west as Decorah, Iowa, where he remained until the fall of that year, when he came to Dunn County, Wisconsin. Here he found the logging and lumber business in full swing and at once became a worker in the ranks of those who were engaged in felling the forests and clearing the ground for subsequent settlers. He was employed in the woods in winter and on the log drives in spring and also for two years worked in the store and post office at Colfax. Thus a number of years went by, during which time he married and children came to enlarge the home circle. In 1886 he took up agriculture, buying a partly improved farm of 160 acres from Eli Evenson, and which was situated in the town of Grant. His first work on the place was to build a log house 14 x 14 feet in dimensions, with a board leanto of 11x12 feet, after which he began the task of breaking and developing the land. For a few years he and his family experienced a number of hardships and had to go without most of the comforts of life, finding it hard even to procure necessaries, but they survived that trying period, and Mr. Bjornson enlarged and improved his farm, buying an addition 80-acre tract, which increased its area to 240 acres; also enlarging the house and erecting various outbuildings, including a fine barn, while the land was brought to a high state of cultivation. There he and his wife resided for 30 years, or until 1916, in which year he rented the place to his son Edwin J. and retired from active work, taking up his residence in the village of Colfax, where he bought a nice residence. Here he and Mrs. Bjornson are enjoying a period of rest and leisure which they have well earned, leaving the active business of life to be carried on by the younger generation, whose task is less hard than was that of their parents. During his active years, or for over 20 at least, Mr. Bjornson devoted a part of his time to public service, for, as one of the most prominent men in his town, he was called upon at frequent intervals to serve in public office. Thus he was supervisor, chairman of his town board, and therefore a member of the county board, school treasurer, and many times a juryman. To all these duties he devoted himself to his best ability and was recognized as a highly useful and progressive citizen. His marriage, already briefly referred to, took place on Nov. 9, 1877, and united him with Albertina O. Wick, who was born at Wick, Norway, Sept. 10, 1859, daughter of Jacob O. Wick and Petronella Nelson. She accompanied her parents to the United States in 1874, they settling on a farm in Chippewa County, where in time both passed away. Mr. and Mrs. Bjornson have had four children, all now living, namely: Mary B., born June 11, 1879; Emma R., born Feb. 11, 1882; Edwin J., born Nov. 12, 1883, and Alba B., born Feb. 14, 1888. Mary B. is now Mrs. Jacob Strom of Colfax. Emma R. married Andrew D. Daniels, a farmer in the town of Grant, Dunn County, and has three children, Erling, Dalmor and Shelma. Edwin J., who is now operating the old home farm in the town of Grant, married Alba Anderson. Alba B. was graduated from the normal school in Menomonie and for a while was engaged in teaching, making a good record. She married Martin Iverson, who is now engaged in the hardware business at Tonasket, Wash., and has two children, Benjamin and Dorothy. Mr. and Mrs. Ben Bjornson are members of the Norwegian Lutheran Church, in which Mr. Bjornson was active for many years, serving as trustee. Mrs. Bjornson is a member of the Ladies Aid The family record is one deserving a place in the annals of the county. Society.

Karl E. Anderson, proprietor of Anderson's Drug Store, located at the corner of Second and Main streets, Menomonie, was born at River Falls, Pierce County, Wis., Sept. 20, 1883, son of Otto G. and Emily (Dodge) Anderson. He was three years old when he came to Menomonie with his parents, and when older he attended grade and high school, being graduated from the latter with the class of 1903. He then became a student in the University of Illinois and later entered the Chicago College of Pharmacy, from which he was graduated with the class of 1907, being registered in the state of Wisconsin, Idaho, Montana and Mississippi. After a little practical experience doing relief work in several Chicago stores, Mr. Anderson went in the fall of 1907 to Roberts, St. Croix County, where he conducted a store until 1910. He then went to Glasgow, Mont., in which place also he conducted a store, though after a short time he sold out there, going to Hattiesburg, Miss., where he was proprietor of a store until 1913. He then returned to Menomonie, Wis., and on August 1 purchased the Tonnar drug store, which he is now conducting under his own name, handling drugs, stationery, school and office supplies. He is one of the prominent business men of the city, also active in civic and social work and is known and respected as a useful and representative citizen. He is a thirtysecond degree Mason, and also belongs to the Knights of Pythias, the D. O. K. K., and the Menomonie Commercial Club. Mr. Anderson was married Oct. 15, 1908 in Hattiesburg, Miss., to Grace Morford, who was born Feb. 26, 1886, daughter of William H. and Francine (Shipman) Morford. To Mr. and Mrs. Anderson two children have been born: Dorothy J., Feb. 6, 1912; and Emily F., Feb. 16, 1916. The family are members of the Episcopal Church.

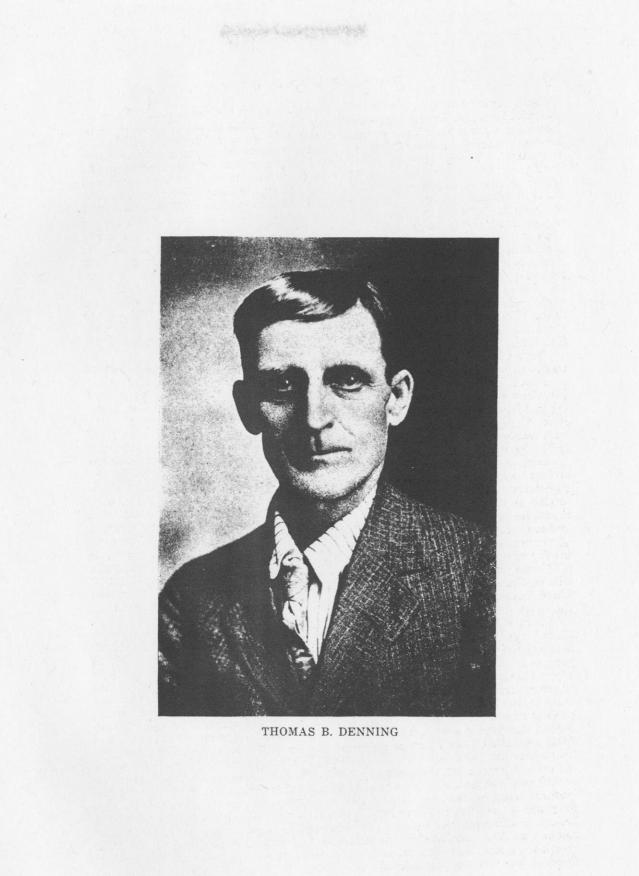

Edwin Anderson, a member of the agricultural fraternity whose fertile farm with its waving fields of grain and browsing cattle may be seen in Section 5, of the town of Colfax, was born on a farm in Section 2, of this town, April 4, 1880, son of Andrew and Anna (Halvorson) Anderson. The parents came fron the northern part of Norway, where the father followed fishing in the summer and cut timber in winter, also running lumber rafts on the rivers. It was in 1861 that they came to the United States, settling in Dunn County after a short residence in La Crosse. Taking a homestead of wild land in Section 2, they went to work to convert it into a farm, their first house on it being built of logs, as were all, or nearly all, the dwellings of the early settlers. Though primitive and lighted only by small windows, they gave good protection from the weather when well constructed. Oxen were used for breaking the land, but Andrew often used his own legs in bringing supplies from Eau Claire, a distance of nearly 25 miles, arriving home with a sack of flour or other provisions on his back. Nothing was wasted, as everything needful was too hard to procure without great exertion. But such a life compelled habits of thrift. and thrift and labor led in time to prosperity. They had been the parents of 11 children, of whom those now living are Anton, Halvor, Albert, Edwin, Clara and Those deceased are Peter (a twin brother of Halvor), Mary, Anton Caroline. (first), Eddie and Clara (first). Caroline is the wife of Ole O. Peterson and Clara (second) is the wife of Fred J. Smith of Colfax. Edwin Anderson was reared on the home farm and was educated in the district school. After working on the home farm until he was 20 years old, he started in for himself, buying 80 acres in Section 3, town of Colfax. He cleared some of the land, then sold the farm, on which was a small house and log barn. He cleared that land and built an 8-room frame house of 26×28 feet and other buildings. Then he sold 40 acres of the land and bought 70 acres of bottom land in Section 6 and 7, and at the present time has 100 acres under the plow. He is doing general farming and dairying, keeping 35 head of Durham cattle, and raising Poland-China hogs. His farm is well equipped with modern machinery, including a Rumley tractor, and he also operates a threshing-machine, having done threshing for himself and others for the last five years. Mr. Anderson was married in 1909, at Colfax, to Mary Sundem, daughter of Tom and Anna Sundem, who were early settlers in this locality, the mother now living but the father deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Anderson have four children, Ella, Adolph, Mayme and Belva, all living on the farm with their parents. The family are members of the Norwegian Lutheran Church.

Ole G. Bjerkness, a retired farmer residing in Section 15, town of Grant, was born in Norway, Sept. 19, 1860, son of Gunder and Mary Bjerkness. The parents were farming people who came with their family to the United States in 1882, settling in Dunn County, Wisconsin, and for many years thereafter making their home with their son Ole G., who later bought a farm in the town of Grant. The mother died in 1908 and the father in 1910. Of the five children in the family, two, Martin and Sophia, are deceased. The three living are Ole G., Sever A. and Rudolph, of whom Sever A. is a mail carrier and Rudolph is a farmer in the town of Grant. Ole G. Bjerkness as a boy attended school in Norway and subsequently did farm work and logging there. When he came to America in 1882 he was about 22 years old and ambitious to be his own master. For about eight years he worked in the woods in winter and on farms in summer, and then in 1890 he started in for himself, buying 120 acres of railroad land in Section 23, town of Grant. The tract was wild land and Mr. Bjerkness had to do pioneer work on it. He built a frame house and a straw barn, later replacing the latter by a frame structure, and, clearing his land, carried on general farming, making gradual progress, sometimes faster or sometimes slower, according to the good or bad seasons he experienced; and he continued to do so until 1910, when he rented the farm out. In 1920 he sold it and has since made his home with his brother Rudolph. He has never married. Rudolph Bjerkness was born in Norway in 1870 and came to America with the other members of the family in 1882. For a while he attended school here and also worked When he grew big and strong enough he worked in the woods during on the farm. the winters, being employed on farms during the summers. He began farming for himself in 1910, buying 80 acres of wild land in Section 18, town of Grant. This he has cleared and has also built a frame house, barn and other buildings. He carries on general farming and dairying, keeping 17 head of Holstein cattle. He was married in 1908 in Colfax to Helga Lee, daughter of Andrew and Martha Lee. Eight children have been born of this union, two of whom, Harry and Helmer, are The living are Alpha, Glenn, Martha, Olaf, Reuben and Helen. Ole G. dead. Bjerkness is a member of the Holden congregation of the Norwegian Lutheran Church in the town of Grant.

Robert Denning, one of the early settlers and developers of the town of Weston, was born in Pennsylvania and after attaining manhood was married in Ohio to Susan Brown, a native of Nova Scotia. They began housekeeping near Mt. Cory, Ohio, from which place they came in 1871 to Dunn County, Wis., arriving in Menomonie, April 15, that year. Mr. Denning bought land from the Fox River Company in Section 13, town of Weston, the tract being wild and covered with heavy timber, and there were no roads and but few settlers. Mr. Denning built a log dwelling and began clearing his place that winter. In the harvest season he went west to work on farms and earn money on which to support his family, and as he found time and opportunity he proceeded with the development of his He was an active and useful man in the community, helping new own farm. settlers as they came in, and he served for several years as a member of the town board, helping to decide on the building of roads and schools. His death occurred on the farm, Jan. 21, 1895; his wife died Oct. 7, 1905. They had seven children, all of whom now living, namely: Simeon, a farmer in the town of Weston; Phineas, an invalid who resides with his sister, Mrs. Anderson; Thomas B., a farmer in the town of Weston; Lenora, who is the wife of Frank Knopps of McAllen, Texas; Martha, wife of Uriah Anderson of the town of Weston, Dunn County; Hulda, now Mrs. Lloyd Taplin of Unity, Clark County; and Susan, who is Mrs. Walter Rogers cf the town of Dunn.

Thomas B. Denning, proprietor and owner of Spring Grove Stock farm in Section 13, town of Weston, was born at Mt. Cory, Ohio, June 28, 1866 son of Robert and Susan (Brown)Denning. In 1871, a child about five years old, he accompanied his parents to the town of Weston, Dunn County, Wis., where they took land in Section 13, and began farming. The place was practically covered with heavy timber and the surrounding country for the most part unimproved, there being but few settlers there at that time. Neither were there any roads, so young Denning grew up under pioneer conditions and had to help his father on the farm at an early age. He attended the district school, however, and so acquired the rudiments of knowledge. After the father's death, which occurred January, 1895, he operated the farm for his mother until her death on Oct. 7, 1905. Having then bought the interests of the other heirs, he has since continued to operate it. During his active career as an independent farmer he put up some additional buildings and made many other improvements, so that the farm is now one of the best in the county. He also developed a good herd of pure bred Holstein cattle. Starting with two pure bred heifers, he increased his herd to 34, the number it now contains. He has many blue ribbons which he won at different fairs with his cattle and hogs, and in 1921 he took the sweepstakes with seven head of cattle at the Inter-County fair held at Durand, the counties represented being Dunn, Pepin and St. Croix. He served at different times on the school board and in all the town offices, and while a member of the county board did good service on the road and bridge committe and the board of equalization. Mr. Denning was also one of the organizers of the Downsville Co-operative Creamery Co., of which he has been president since 1910, and he is also a director in the Downsville Telephone Co. and the Farmers Mutual Insurance Co. of Menomonie. His fraternal society affiliations are with the Modern Woodmen of America and the order of Beavers. Mr. Denning was first married Dec. 25, 1889, to Agnes Guinard, who died in February, 1898. By her he had three children, Hulda, Myrtle and Alma, all of whom are now deceased. On March 22, 1899, Mr. Denning married Hannah Neubauer, daughter of Charles and Eureka (Pieper) Neubauer. Of this second union there are nine children, Beulah, Robert, Alfred, Clarence, Florence, Elsie, Jennie, Vada and Ruby. Beulah is now Mrs. Ben Thompson of Kenosha, Wis.; Robert operates a farm in Weston, and the younger children live with their parents. The family are members of the German

William Carson, one of the most notable pioneers of Dunn County, was of Scotch ancestry, born at Iverness, Lower Canada, on Oct. 5, 1819. At a very early age he was left alone in the world owing to the death of his parents, and when just entering his teens he began making his own way in the world. Some three years before attaining his majority he came to the United States and for about a year lived in Cambridge, Mass., where he had an uncle. From Cambridge he moved on to southern Illinois, where he tarried for a time, then went to St. Louis, Mo., in which city resided a brother of his. There he remained for a year, at the end of which time he came north by way of Prairie du Chien, reaching Eau Claire, Wis., about 1838. Here he filed a claim on a tract of land that afterward became, and is now, the site of North Eau Claire. He had held this claim but little more than a year when he sold it at a handsome profit. It was on or near this tract of land that he did his first lumbering. He cut the logs in the winter and in the following spring floated them down the Chippewa and Mississippi rivers to where he sold The money earned in these employments, together with the profit derived from the sale of his claim, gave him his start on the road to success and fortune. Even as a boy William Carson seemed endowed with keen faculties and a determination to succeed in the financial world, and so, carefully watching every opportunity for advancement, he moved on with a full and settled conviction that led to the glad fruition of his hopes. In 1840 young Carson located at Eau Galle in Dunn County, and soon became associated in partnership with Capt. George Wales, and Henry Eaton, the partners acquiring large timber interests in that section. They built and operated a sawmill with a daily capacity of ten thousand feet, which was a large mill for those days. Young Carson had become a member of the firms by acquiring the interests of Thomas Savage and the business was carried on for some time thereafter under the style of Carson, Eaton and Wales. In 1884 Capt. Wales disposed of his interest, the firm then became Carson, Eaton and Rand. Later Mr. Eaton sold his interest to Mr. Carson and Mr. Rand and moved to Winona, Minn., and engaged in the wholesale lumber business. From that time on the firm became known as Carson and Rand. By 1874 their soft wood timber had been exhausted to the extent that the sawmill could no longer be operated at a profit, so it was discontinued as a pine mill. That same year Mr. Carson transferred his. active lumber operations to Eau Claire. At Eau Claire Mr. Carson became the manager of the Valley Lumber Co., in which he and Mr. Rand held large interests and of which Mr. Carson had been made president and treasurer. Though Mr. Carson had large investments in other enterprises and held many important official positions in the lumber industry, it is probable that his official connection with the Valley Lumber Co., marked him more prominently than any other. exception of ten years' residence in St. Paul, Minn., Mr. Carson resided in Eau Claire from 1874 to the time of his death on Jan. 4, 1898. He was a heavy stockholder in the Eau Claire National Bank and its vice president. He was not only interested in several of the largest lumber companies of this state, but also in the Rand Lumber Co. and the Burlington Lumber Co., both of Burlington, Iowa, and also in the Carson-Rand Co. in Keokuk, Ia. He was looked upon as one of the representative lumbermen of the state. William Carson was not an ordinary pioneer, as this brief sketch of his life has already shown. He was essentially a leader and his personal progressiveness typified the American spirit. He was also deeply interested in every enterprise that made for the betterment of his state or the community in which he lived. It was he who brought the first horse into the Chippewa Valley, it was he who sowed the first wheat in the valley, and he who built the first house in it with plastered walls. He maintained all his life a high standard of personal conduct and character, and his career may well serve as an example for the enterprising youth of today. In politics he was always a Democrat, and active in all political campaigns except the Free Silver Campaign of 1896, in which, as a believer in sound money, he declined to support his party. On two occasions he consented to run for congressman from his district, making a campaign the first time but not the second, but he was defeated on each occasion. Such was this remarkable pioneer, for many years one of Dunn County's foremost citizens, and worthy to be remembered for generations to come as one of the builders of the great state of Wisconsin. William Carson married Mary Edmunds Smith of Prairie du Chien Wis., who was born May 5, 1828, and died Nov. 25, 1887. To them were born five daughters, three of whom are now living, and a son, William, residing in Burlington, Iowa. The latter has successfully managed his father's business since the latter's death and is a prominent figure in the lumber industry.

James D. Millar, proprietor of Bonniekeek Farm (registered) in the town of Red Cedar, and who is a member of the state assembly besides holding various other offices of a business or political character, was born in the city of Eau Claire, Wis., Jan. 8, 1869, son of William and Sarah Jane (McCormick) Millar. His genealogy has been traced back to his great grandfather on the paternal side, William Miller, a farmer of Ayr, a shire or county in the western lowlands of Scotland. This William was a Presbyterian of the strict Scottish type, a man of high and rigid principles, with which his daily life corresponded. His wife in maidenhood was Mary Brown, of an old Scotch family. They reared a family of five sons and one daughter, namely: William, Jr., John, David, James, Robert and Margaret. Of these, John became a scholar, and, obtaining a government position in Australia, later became a successful merchant in Sydney, that country. James, who became an architect in stone, died at a comparatively early age. Robert, Margaret and William, Jr., also died in Scotland. Of the last mentioned it is said that he was a giant in strength. David Millar, son of William, Sr., and grandfather of the subject of this sketch, was a scientific agriculturist and manager of a large estate owned by members of the nobility. In course of time he emigrated to the United States, resided for a year in Lockport, N. Y., and then came west to Waukesha County, Wisconsin, where he farmed for several years. In 1857 he came to Dunn County and farmed in what is now the town of Red Cedar. In a period when drinking was a common habit, he was always strictly sober, and was, besides, a man of social attractions and a good story teller, as now well remembered by some of the surviving "old-timers." In the years shortly previous to the Civil War when the slavery question was dividing society into two strongly antagonistic parties, he was a strong abolitionist and not afraid to declare his sentiments. He saw the triumph of his principles, as he lived for eight years after the war, dying in 1873 at the age of 69 years. David Millar was married in Ireland to Margaret Riley, a native of that country and a Presbyterian in religion. She was a woman of energy and ambition, and after coming to the United States she indentified herself with the interests of her adopted country-of the northern part of it at least-sharing her husband's anti-slavery and anti-secession sentiments. Two of her sons took part in the war, and the death of James in that titantic struggle was one of the indirect causes of her death, which took place in December, 1868, when she was 53 years old. The children of Mr. and Mrs. David Millar were Mary A., William, James, Margaret, Robert, Jane, Elizabeth and David, Jr. Mary A., now deceased, became the wife of John Borland. Margaret, who became Mrs. Duncan McLennan is deceased, and Elizabeth is Mrs. Edward Bement. William Millar, son of David and Margaret, and father of the subject of this sketch, was born near Dublin, Ireland, Oct. 5, 1839. In his native land he attended a select school and after coming to this country was a pupil in the La Crosse High School. As a youth he worked on the farm, but at the age of 19 years entered the employ of Dole, Ingram & Kennedy, lumber manufacturers of Eau Claire, being first engaged to help in rafting lumber, but shortly afterwards becoming a pilot, and as such he piloted rafts and steamboats on the Chippewa and Mississippi rivers for 16 years. He was very successful in this occupation and during all the time he was engaged in it had but one raft broken when under his care. After piloting for a few years he engaged in logging operations during the winters, doing contract work, chiefly for the Ingram-Kennedy Company and the reorganized Empire Lumber Co. As a woodsman in the lumber industry William Millar gained very thorough experience, enjoyed the confidence of his employers and the respect of the men who worked under him, and by the former was given a financial interest in the logging part of their business. The first money that he earned in the lumber business he invested in a quarter section of government land in the town of Red Cedar, Dunn County, and he later added to it until he owned 400 acres of as good farming land as was to be found in the county. This he worked on scientific principles, putting in modern improvements to keep abreast of the times, and he really developed an excellent farm and was one of the prominent figures in the agricultural business in Dunn County, being actively interested also in matters pertaining to live stock breeding. In 1885 he assisted in the organization of the Dunn County Agricultural Society and was elected its first president, an office that he held for several years. In 1886 he was elected to the legislature, largely through the support of his many friends in the lumber industry, and through his work in connection with the Agricultural Society, which made him acquainted with most of the farmers in the county. It was while he was engaged in the lumber industry that he acquired the art of managing men, which later proved useful to him on the farm and in public life. While an assemblyman he served on the road and bridge committee, and being subsequently elected to the Senate, served the first session as a member of the committee on military affairs, and afterwards on the committee on roads and bridges. His public record was a good one and highly pleasing to his constituents. By his wife Sarah Jane, whose parents, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin McCormick, were early settlers in Dunn County, he had eight children: James D., John H., Maude, Mary, Cornelia, Nellie, William and Marguerite. William Millar, Sr., died Feb. 5, 1913, being survived by his wife, They were fully representative of the best class of pioneers who who is still living. laid the foundations of civilization in this county. James D. Millar, the direct subject of this sketch, after acquiring his elementary education, pursued further studies in the Menomonie High School and the River Falls State Normal School. He then taught school for a while in Dunn County and for one year near Crookston, He then went to Rice Lake, where for some years he was employed in the Minn. lumber industry by the Rice Lake Lumber Co. to thoroughly learn the general principles and methods of the lumber business, and, having done so, became a competent lumber inspector. From Rice Lake he went to New London, Waupaca County, where he kept books for the Micklejohn & Hatten Lumber Co., later acquiring an interest in the concern, with which he was associated for ten years. A temporary loss of health causing him to sell his interests there, he came to Dunn County and bought 80 acres of improved land in Section 35, town of Red Cedar, This 80-acre tract was a part of his parents' home farm, and engaged in farming. and had been pre-empted in 1857 by his grandfather, David Millar, as already narrated. He has erected on it a complete set of buildings, including a fine modern residence, with modern out-buildings and an up-to-date equipment. He is giving special attention to dairying, according to the most scientific methods, his present herd consisting of 35 registered Guernsey cattle. The farm is beautifully located on Trunk Line (Federal Highway) No. 12, and is under the direct supervision of Mr. Millar, who drives to and fro between the farm and his office in the city of Menomonie every day. As an adjunct to his direct farming operations, Mr. Millar is interested in bee culture and honey production, and has been since he was 14 years old. He has about 100 colonies of pure Italian bees, and it was he who brought the first pure Italian queen bee to Dunn County. In 1908 he was elected secretary of the Dunn County Agricultural Society, which office he has since continued to hold, having rendered faithful and efficient service. In the following year, 1909, he was made president of the Farmers Mutual Fire Insurance Co. of Dunn County, becoming its secretary in 1919, which office he is now holding. For a number of years Mr. Millar has been quite prominent in state and local politics. He has been four times elected to the Wisconsin State Assembly, first in 1911, and again in 1913, 1923 and 1925. In the 1911 session he was a member of the taxation committee that drafted the state income laws, and also served on the vacational education committee of the same session, which inaugurated the provisions for the continuation schools of the state, and the taking over of the Stout Institute by the state. In the 1913 session he was chairman of the general committee on education and held the same position in 1923. He was also a member of the committee on house rules. In the 1925 session he is serving as a member of the committee on taxation and of the committee on insurance and banking. In 1892 he joined the order of Knights of Pythias, and he has been a member of the Equitable Union since 1896. As he is still in his early fifties, it is probable that there are still many more years before him of usefulness and distinction, either in the political or some other field. Mr. Millar was married Oct. 25, 1904, to Magdalena J. Nussbaum, who was born in New London, Wis., Oct. 25, 1879. He and his wife are the parents of three children: Marshall W., born April 4, 1906; Gordon D., Aug. 27, 1907, and Donald R., Nov. 2, 1912. The two elder sons are attending the Dunn County Agricultural School, while Donald R. is a pupil in the public schools.

R. J. Flint, a resident of Menomonie for more than half a century, was for 37 years publisher of the Dunn County News, during which period he exerted a forceful influence in promoting the growth and welfare of Dunn County. Rockwell Joseph Flint, only son of Joseph Flint, Jr., and Lora A. (Fuller) Flint, was born at Williams-town, Vermont, March 23, 1842. His earliest ancestor in this country was Thomas Flint who came from Wales about 1640 and settled near Salem, Mass. Some of the descendants of Thomas Flint moved to Hampton, Conn., where Jonathan Flint, great-grandfather of R. J. Flint, was born Nov. 17, 1755. He was sergeant of a Connecticut company in the Revolutionary War and after the war the family moved to Braintree, Vt. In 1848 Joseph Flint, Jr., was engaged in the manufac-ture of wagons and sleighs at New Haven Mills, Vt., in partnership with his brother, Samuel B. Flint, and when the news of the discovery of gold in California spread like wild-fire over the country, he made the long journey to the new El Dorado in 1850 by way of the Panama route. He spent a year in the placer mines on Feather River, when his health failed, and, returning home, he died in June, 1852. Two years later the widowed mother married Samuel B. Flint and the family moved to Wisconsin in 1855. They settled on a farm in Buffalo, Marquette County, and for five years the subject of this sketch had the full measure of experience of a boy on a farm in a new country. Mr. Flint received his education in the common schools and the country printing office. He entered the office of the Wisconsin State Register in April, 1861, to serve an apprenticeship of three years in the printer's trade. But the Civil War came on and thousands of "boys in blue" were mustering on the tented field to preserve the Union. In response to the call of President Lincoln for "three hundred thousand more," Mr. Flint enlisted as a private in Company C, 23d Wisconsin Infantry for three years, or during the war. His regiment was assigned to Burbridge's Brigade, Gen. A. J. Smith's Division, Thirteenth Army Corps. He participated in Gen. Sherman's attack on Vicksburg at Chickasaw Bayou in December, 1862, and the capture of Fort Hindman at Arkansas Post, Jan. 11, 1863, where 5,000 prisoners were taken. During the siege of Vicksburg Mr. Flint was transferred to the Signal Corps and sent to the signal camp of instruction at Memphis. He was promoted to sergeant in October, 1863, and transferred to the Department of the Gulf, where he continued in active service, taking part in the Bayou Leche campaign in October, 1863. He went with the troops under General Granger to Dauphin Island in August, 1864, and from his signal station near Fort Gaines saw Farragut's fleet pass Fort Morgan in a shower of shot and shell, and witnessed the desperate naval battle in Mobile Bay with the Confederate gunboats that resulted in the capture of the famous ram Tennessee. was also present at the formal surrender of Fort Gaines and the subsequent sur-He render of Fort Morgan. Returning to New Orleans, Sergeant Flint was appointed quartermaster sergeant of the Signal Corps, Department of the Gulf, in which capacity he served until mustered out July 4, 1865, by order of the war department. The war was now over and after an absence of three years Mr. Flint again entered the State Register office and completed his apprenticeship. He formed a partnership with Edwin H. Weber in November, 1868, and bought the Prescott (Wis.) Journal. The firm of Flint & Weber published the paper until the plant was destroyed by fire in June, 1871. It was then deemed advisable for business reasons The following August they bought the Dunn County News to seek a new field. at Menomonie and the firm continued its publication for 27 years. This partner-ship was dissolved by the death of Mr. Weber in January, 1898. He had transferred his interest in the business to Mr. Flint, who remained the sole owner until November, 1901, when Fred F. Morgan was admitted to partnership under the firm name of Flint & Morgan, and in 1906 Joseph T. Flint became a member of the firm. Mr. Morgan died in February, 1908. During the same mouth Mr. Flint was appointed United States marshall by President Roosevelt. The position required his official residence at Madison, and it was deemed advisable to part with the old "family paper" with which he had been closely associated for 37 years. The News was accordingly sold to W. R. Hotchkiss, June 1, 1908 and Mr. Flint thereby was enabled to devote his entire time to the discharge of his official duties. In politics Mr. Flint is a Republican and during his long and active career has rendered good service to his party and held many positions of trust. He has often served as dele-gate to county, congressional and state conventions. He was a member of the Assembly in 1875, state senator in 1876-77, and again in 1882-83. For eight years he was chairman of the county board of supervisors and under his administration the Dunn County Asylum for the chronic insane was erected and put in successful operation. In 1889 President Harrison appointed him a member of the commission authorized to purchase a large section of the Crow Indian reservation in Montana that required the expenditure of nearly a million dollars. He was then appointed a member of the Chippewa Indian Commission at White Earth, Minn., in 1892, and served nearly two years. In 1894 he was elected mayor of Menomonie and re-elected for a second term, during which the sewerage system of the city was in-He received the appointment of United States marshal from President Rcosevelt in 1908 and was reappointed for a second term in 1912 by President Taft. In addition to his other activities, Mr. Flint for many years has been indentified with several fraternal societies. He was made a Mason in Fort Winnebago Lodge, No. 33, at Portage, Wis., receiving the master's degree Nov. 18, 1865. He affiliated with Menomonie Lodge, No. 164, June 28, 1872, of which he is still a member. received the capitular degrees in Fort Winnebago Chapter, No. 14, but demitted April 23, 1877, to become a charter member of Menomonie Chapter No. 53, of which he was the first high priest. The orders of Knighthood were conferred upon him in January, 1869, in Fort Winnebago Commandery, No. 4, of which he is still He received the cryptic degrees in 1879 in Madison Council of Royal and select Masters. Mr. Flint was elected deputy grand high priest of the Grand Chapter in 1888 and 1889 and was grand high priest in 1890. He received the degrees of the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite in Wisconsin Consistory of In all these Masonic bodies he has been an active and zealous Milwaukee in 1916. His attachment to his comrades who fought for the preservation of craftsman. the Union in the Civil War has been manifest in his loyal support of the Grant Army of the Republic and its auxilliary societies. He is affiliated with William Evans Post, No. 58, at Menomonie, of which he is a charter member and served as its first commander. Mr. Flint is one of the trustees of the Mabel Tainter Library Association, who have in charge the splendid free library at Menomonie, which was erected by the pioneer lumberman, Capt. Andrew Tainter. He is also a life member of the Wisconsin State Historical Society at Madison. Mr. Flint was united in marriage to Miss Alice Prentice at Portage, Wis., Nov. 9, 1871. She is a daughter of Dr. James Prentice and Emily (Bonney) Prentice, and was born in the surgeon's quarters of old Fort Winnebago, near Portage, on Dec. 7, 1851. Dr. Prentice was one of the pioneer physicians and surgeons of Columbia County and served in the Civil War as surgeon of the Twenty-third Wisconsin Infantry with the rank of major. Four children were born of this union, Anna Katherine, James Prentice, Fred Rockwell and Joseph Turner, all of whom are living. In this outline sketch of Mr. Flint's life much has been necessarily omitted, but enough has been given to present the picture of a busy and useful career that has covered a long stretch of years. A large part of Mr. Flint's driving force has been derived from his inborn spirit of optimism, operating along lines of progress with an abiding faith in the future, whatever present conditions might be, and with a strict adherence to high principles and an unshrinking fulfilment of personal duty.

Joseph T. Flint, secretary and treasurer of the Flint-Douglas Printing Co., and manager of the Dunn County News, was born in Menomonie, Wis., Nov. 7, 1880, son of Rockwell J. and Alice (Prentice) Flint. As a youth he attended the grade and high schools of this city and was graduated with the class of 1903 from the University of Wisconsin. For a year thereafter he was reporter and city editor for the Wisconsin State Journal at Madison. He then spent a short time in Menomonie and during the legislative session of 1905 was a member of the Wisconsin State Journal staff. Having returned once more to Menomonie, he became connected with the Dunn County News, in which in 1907 he acquired a one-third interest. In the following year, 1908, the paper was sold to W. R. Hotchkiss and Mr. Flint went to Eau Claire, Wis., where he took a position as advertising manager with the Eau Claire Leader and was thus occupied until 1913. Then, with M. C. Douglas, he purchased the Dunn County News, of which he has since been manager. In February, 1914, the Flint-Douglas Printing Co. was incorporated, Mr. Flint being elected secretary and treasurer, which he is still. He is a member of Menomonie Lodge No. 164, F. & A. M., of which he was master in 1909; of Menomonie Chapter No. 53, R. A. M.; Menomonie Commandery No. 47, K. T. and of Ed C. Gottry Lodge, No. 170, K. of P. Mr. Flint was married in Menomonie May 9, 1907, to Lucile Wilcox, daughter of John C. and Sarah W. (Heller) Wilcox, and he and his wife are the parents of two children, Joseph W. and Sara. The religious affiliations of the family are with the Unitarian Society.

Charles H. Ingraham, a prominent citizen of Menomonie, a member of the firm of Ingraham Bros. & Torrey, jewelers and opticians, was born in Lake City, Minn., April 16, 1868, son of Marcus M. and Lucinda L. (Fuller) Ingraham. As a youth he attended school in Lake City, being graduated from the high school with the class of 1887. In the same year he came to Menomonie, becoming a member of the firm of Ingraham Bros. In 1893 he took a course in optical science in the Chicago Optical School, and in the same year added that department to the business of the firm. In 1907 Mr. Ingraham went to Wausau, Wis., where he established himself in the jewelry business, which he carried on there for 16 years, during the first seven years alone, and after that-from 1914- in partnership with John In September, 1923, he sold his interest to Mr. Bushart and returned Brushart. to Menomonie, buying an interest in the old firm now operating under the name of Ingraham Bros. & Torrey, which is a well established concern and enjoys a large patronage. Mr. Ingraham has also been active in various public capacities. serving four years as alderman from the Third Ward before going to Wausau. He was also a director of the Ludington Guard Band, and it was he who suggested that name for the organization, which it took in 1888. He is a member of the Menomonie Commercial Club and of the Menomonie Country Club, and is president of the Merchants' Association. As a Mason he belongs to the Blue Lodge in Menomonie and is also a member of the Knights of Pythias and of the Modern Woodmen of America. As a business man he has achieved a marked success and in social circles he is equally well known and popular. Mr. Ingraham was married on Sept. 8, 1891, in Superior, Wis., to Naomi Bailey, daughter of Stewart J. and Mary (Catt) Bailey, and of this marriage two children have been born: Ruth and Harold G. Ruth is now Mrs. E. C. Dawley of Wausau and has two children, Beth and Stuart. Harold G. Ingraham was graduated from the Armour Institute as construction engineer, specializing in papermill construction, and is now living in Chicago. After the United States entered into the World War he entered the first officers' training camp at Ft. Sheridan, and was commissioned second lieutenant and later first lieutenant. For about a year he was engaged in training men at Camp Grant and subsequently went to France with the 86th Division. Later he was transferred to the 35th Division, holding the rank of company captain. He was discharged from the service at Camp Pike two years later.

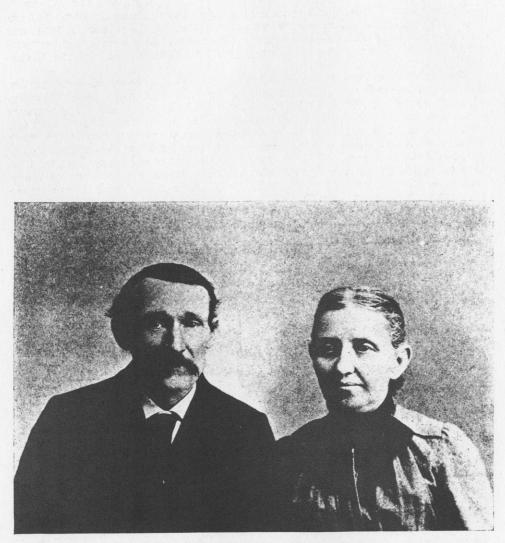

Stuart J. Bailey, who in his day was one of the best known men in Dunn County, which he twice represented in the state legislature, and who had many other claims to the respect of his fellow citizens, was born at Logansport, Ind., Feb. 13, 1838. A young man of 23 when the Civil War broke out, he entered the ranks as one of the defenders of the Union and served three years in the Ninth Illinois Volunteer With a good record as a soldier Mr. Bailey came to Dunn County, Wis-Cavalry. consin, in 1870, and subsequently made his home here, with the exception of four years that he spent at Superior. It speaks well for his force of character that he had only been here two years, or less, when he was elected to the legislature, in which he served again in 1881. He also held many positions of trust and importance, including those of city engineer and alderman. While at Superior he was president of the city council. For many years Mr. Bailey was employed by the government as a superintendent of construction of Indian school buildings in various states of the west. In this capacity he erected schools in Oklahoma, Oregon, Nevada, Montana, South Dakota, Wyoming and Arizona, embodying in his work those qualities that enriched his character and made everyone who knew him the better citizen therefor. The buildings stand as monuments to his integrity of purpose in every channel of useful effort. Although in poor health for a number of years, Mr. Bailey possessed a spirit which rose triumphant over physical limitations, and continued to live an active, useful and influential life up to within two days of his death, which took place in 1910. He passed painlessly and unconsciously to the world of rest, surrounded by his family, thus realizing a hope he had often expressed. He was an active member and worker in G. A. R. circles, also a charter member of the Old Settlers' Society. A broad-minded, public-spirited citizen, loyal to every project which meant the betterment of the municipality, he was always found on the right side of every important issue, and his passing left a void in the civil life of Menomonie that was not easy to fill. Stuart J. Bailey was married in December, 1862, to Mary Catt, who lived but a few years after the marriage. After her death he married her sister, Amanda Catt, on April 5, 1873. She survived him, together with two children of the first marriage, Harry Bailey of this city, and Naomi, now Mrs. Charles H. Ingraham of Menomonie. Of Mr. Bailey's second union three daughters were born, Pearl, Grace and Beth.

Robert Yourell, a pioneer of Dunn County, whose industrial career as lumber worker and farmer was connected largely with the development of the town of Eau Galle, where he is still living, and is still more or less active, was born in Canada just across the river from Niagara Falls, on Jan. 6, 1855, son of Edward and Margaret (Mason) Yourell. The father was a native of Dublin, Ireland, and the mother of Montreal, Canada. Married in the state of New York, they came west in 1856 to Dunn County, Wisconsin, settling in the village of Eau Galle, where Mr. Yourell found employment with the lumber firm of Carson, Eaton & Rand, later known as Carson & Rand. For seven years while in the employ of this concern he drove the same pair of mules. At the end of that period he began farming on an 80-acre tract of land in Section 34, it being the southeast quarter of the northeast quarter of that section. It had been taken up by his father-in-law, Robert Dixon. Yourell served two and a half years in the Civil War as a member of Company G, Edward 37th Regiment Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry. He was wounded at the battle of Petersburg and was for some time confined in a hospital, but recovered in time to take part in the Grand Review in Washington after the surrender of Lee and

Johnston, which brought the war to an end. After receiving an honorable discharge, Edward Yourell returned home to his farm, which he continued to operate Then selling it, he went to Cadott Falls, Chippewa County, Wis., until 1870. and there bought 320 acres of land in Section 12, Township 26 N, Range 14 W (town of Edson, Chippewa County), and on his land he kept a stopping-place for "tote" There he died on Oct. 20, 1878. His wife, who survived him 13 lumber teams. years and a few days, passed away on Feb. 23, 1891. They had five children: Robert, subject of this sketch; Jeanette, who married James Karns and lives in Oregon; Nina, wife of James Hennigan of Montana; Emma, now Mrs. John Davis and residing in Illinois; and Edward, who lives in Outlook, Canada. Robert Yourell, who was a babe when his parents settled in the village of Eau Galle, later attended the local school, which was then conducted in an end room of the Carson, Eaton & Rand boarding-house. He continued to live with his parents until he was 16 years old, at which time he went to work in the Robinson Mills in Eau Claire County. His activities for some nine years thereafter were connected with the lumber industry. For five years he was employed in the company's boardinghouse, as "cookie" and cook, and at times cooked in logging camps and drove "tote" teams, continuing to be thus employed until he was 25 years old. During this period for one year he drove the stage coach between Eau Claire and Chippewa. He then considered that it was time for him to strike out in an independent career that should lead to future prosperity and comfort, instead of being a wage earner all his life, and so naturally turned to farming, in which there was abundant opportunity for a strong and active youth to make his way. He had all the greater reason for doing this from the fact that in that year, on April 9, he was united in marriage with Mary Wilson. He was fortunate in receiving a present of land from his grandparents, Robert and Jeanette Dixon, which comprised 80 acres, being the east half of the northeast quarter of Section 34, town of Eau Galle. This tract had been placed in his name years before. The locality was known as" Barney Branch, and a part of the 80-acre tract was the first land cleared in the valley. Mr. Yourell's maternal grandparents, above referred to, were still living here and, it may be saidto anticipate events-that he subsequently cared for them until their death, Robert Dixon passing away on July 12, 1889, and his wife, Jeanette, several years previously, on July 18, 1884. Mr. Yourell has since continued to live on the farm except for an occasional short absence, when he resumed his old occupation of cook for a few months; also in 1923 he spent eight months at Ceylon, Sashkatchewan, Canada, on the large farm of his son, Henry. The first buildings on his own farm were erected by his grandfater, Robert Dixon, the house being a log shanty with a "scoop" roof, the out-buildings being also of primitive construction. In 1912 Mr. Yourell completed his present set of buildings, which are of modern type, substantial and commodious. He now has about 60 acres of his land cleared and developed, and occupies a recognized position in the community as a good, practical farmer and reliable citizen, his personal popularity being widespread. In spite of occasional absences, his home has been in Dunn County for 67 years, and he may be regarded, therefor, as one of the oldest pioneers now living in the county, though he is but 70 years old. For 14 years he served as road commissioner of Road District No. 3, and showed conscientious fidelity to his duties. He and his wife have been the parents of seven children, Edward C., Henry, Anna B., Myrtle, Nina and Robert W., whose respective records are, in brief, as follows. Edward C., born Feb. 27, 1881, is now manager of the large department store of the Robinson Company at Los Angeles, Calif. He was married, April 5, 1905, to Inez McLaughlin, and has four children, Dorothy, Maxina, Eugene and Axzena. Henry, born May 11, 1884, as previously mentioned, is a farmer at Ceylon, Sashkatchewan, Canada, where he owns an entire section (640) acres of land. He was married, July 12, 1910, to Tilda Meixner, and has two children, Beulah and Catherine. Anna B., born June 7, 1886, was married June 23, 1909, to William Poquette of the village of Eau Galle, and has a daughter, Maggie M., who was born Feb. 10, 1889, and who is living with her parents. Myrtle, born Jan. 5, 1893, was married June 9, 1916, to Lyman Whipp, and lives at Rock Elm, Pierce County, Wis. She is the mother of three children, Garland, Lyle and Blaine. Nina, born Dec. 8, 1895, was married Jan. 1, 1913, to Herman Weber, and lives in the town of Weston, Dunn County. She has three children, Darrell, Dorothy and Mabel. Robert W., born April 5, 1901, was married on Feb. 2, 1923, to Gladys Sand. They live in Menomonie and have one child, Loraine. The religious affiliations of the Yourell family are with the Methodist Episcopal Church.

Charles W. Dean, now living retired in the village of Irvington, a representative of one of the pioneer families of Dunn County, was born in St. Joseph County, Michigan, Dec. 7, 1848, son of Charles H. and Polly (Eaton) Dean. The paternal grandfather was a native of Wales who served in the War of 1812-15 with Gt. Britain. Charles H. Dean was born in Pennsylvania and was married to Polly Eaton in St. Joseph County, Mich., she being a native of New York State. Thev remained in that county until 1856, when they moved west to Iowa and for nine years subsequently were residents of that state. In 1865 they came to Dunn County, Wisconsin, taking a homestead of 80 acres in the town of Weston where they began improvements by the erection of log buildings. That place was their home for the remainder of their lives and in time Mr. Dean cleared 35 acres of the land and put up a set of good modern buildings. He was a very active man and also a useful one in the community, doing much to help new settlers as they came in. Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Dean had a family of eight children, of whom the following is a brief record: Olive, who became the wife of Theodore Washburn, is now a widow residing in the village of Eau Galle. Charles W., the next in order of birth, is the direct subject of this sketch. Deborah is the widow of Charles Howison and resides in the town of Weston. Elizabeth, widow of Frank Axel, resides in the state of Washington. Levi is living in the village of Irvington. Edwin is a farmer in the town of Weston, and the two youngest, Mary and Emma, are deceased. Charles W. Dean acquired his schooling in Iowa and came to Dunn County, Wisconsin, in 1864 at the age of 16 years. From Little Beaver Creek, the first place he stopped at, he went to Downsville, where he found work in the mills and was thus occupied for 13 years. In 1878 he went to Portland, Ore., but returned to Wisconsin at the end of three months. He has owned and operated three different farms in Dunn County, the last one being situated in Section 18, town of Menomonie, on to which he moved in 1899, and where he remained until 1920, since which time he has lived retired at Irvington. He has taken an active and useful part in public affairs, once serving two years as treasurer of the town of Weston, also several years as supervisor of the Menomonie town board, one year being chairman, and therefore a member of the county board; and he was treasurer of his school board for He is a stockholder in the Downsville Cooperative Creamery. several years. Mr. Dean was first married Oct. 31, 1869, in the town of Menomonie, to Dollie E. Bishop, She had been the mother of four children: William, who died who died in 1894. at the age of 20 years; Fannie, now Mrs. O. E. Steinman of the state of Washington; George, a farmer in the town of Menomonie, and Edna, who is deceased. Mr. Dean was again married, March 24, 1898, to Mrs. Francis Bird, who in maiden life was Frances Waite, daughter of Emery and Fannie (Chickering) Waite, who came to Dunn County in 1864, settling in the town of Weston, where they subsequently died. Frances Waite was first married Oct. 3, 1873, to George Bird, who died April 28, 1892. They were the parents of five children, namely: Fred M., now of Seattle, Wash.; Charles E., of the state of Washington; Mildred L., who married Bert Butler and is now a widow residing with her mother; George K., now deceased; Fannie W., now Mrs. James Abbott, Jr., of Waubeek, Dunn County.

John F. Hitz, proprietor of Maple Hill Dairy Farms, consisting of two farms, one of 143 acres in Section 31, town of Red Cedar and the other of 34 acres on 14th Avenue within the limits of the city of Menomonie, was born in Germany, Aug. 29, 1861, son of John F. and Fredericka (Asmus) Hitz. Both parents died in their native land. John F. attended school in Germany and subsequently learned the cabinet-maker's trade, which he followed there until 1881. In April, that year, he came to the United States and to Menomonie, Wis., where he followed his trade, also doing carpenter work, until 1909. Then buying an improved farm in the town of Red Cedar, he rebuilt the house, and put up a granary, wood house, machine shed and horse and cow barns, all in modern style and with modern equipment. There he farmed until 1917, when he rented the farm to his son on shares and bought the farm within the city limits above mentioned. The buildings on this place were old and in their place Mr. Hitz erected new ones, including a fine modern stucco residence, and a modern dairy barn of 30 x 40 feet in ground plan. Mr. Hitz is following dairy farming with good success, keeping Guernsey cattle with a pure bred sire at the head of the herd. He was married April 26, 1890, to Anna Beguhn, who was born in the town of Red Cedar, March 9, 1870; and of this union three children have been born: Gustav A., May 16, 1892; Erwin J., Oct. 19, 1895; and Ferdinand, May 24, 1900. Ferdinand, who resides with his parents, is conducting the home farm in the town of Red Cedar. The Hitz family are members of the German Lutheran Church.

Gustav A. Hitz, one of the brothers interested with their father in the Maple Hill Dairy Farms, was born in the city of Menomonie, May 16, 1892, son of John F. and Anna (Beguhn) Hitz. He has taken an active part in the establishment and development of the farms, one of which is located in Section 31, town of Red Cedar, and the other within the city limits of Menomonie. In August, 1917, he and his brother, Ervin, took over the original farm, which they have since operated together. In July, 1917, Gustav A. Hitz enlisted in Company H, 128th Infantry, W. N. G. He trained at Camp Douglas, Wisconsin, and at Waco, Texas, remaining at the latter place several months, and going from there to Camp Merritt, New Jersey. On May 16, 1918, he sailed for France, was subsequently landed at Brest, France, and was sent to a training sector. After being there a while he was sent to the front and was in action in the Somme sector, in the Meuse-Argonne and at St. Mihiel. After the signing of the armistice he was transferred to the headquarters company of the 33d Division, and was with the army of occupation in Germany, and, subsequently returing to the United States, was discharged at Camp Grant in August, 1919. After his return home he resumed his work on the dairy farms. In September, 1923, he was appointed captain of Company A, 128th Infantry, W. N. G., and he has done good work in building up the company, which at present is the largest in the state, having 103 members. As a member of the Reserve Corps, he held the rank of color sergeant and was commissioned lieutenant. He is a member of Hosford-Chase Post, No. 32, Am., of Menomonie.

Ervin J. Hitz, a member of the Maple Hill Dairy Farms Co., was born Oct. 19, 1895, in the city of Menomonie, son of John and Anna (Beguhn) Hitz. He was educated in the common and high schools and became a member of the dairy company above mentioned in 1916, as such being associated with his father and with his brothers Gustav and Ferdinand. In August, 1917, he became more closely associated with his brother Gustave in the management of the original home farm. He was married July 15, 1916, in the city of Menomonie, to Nettie Quilling, daughter of Otto and Augusta (Miller) Quilling. In 1920 Mr. Hitz bought a farm of 70 acres in the town of Menomonie, which he rents out.

Jacob Karlen, better known as "Jake" Karlen, proprietor of the Karlen sawmill at Boyceville, was born in Switzerland, Feb. 25, 1878, son of Jacob, Sr., and Mattie (Schutz) Karlen, the parents being Swiss by birth. In 1883, accompanied by five small children, they came to the United States, reaching Knapp, Wis., with a cash capital of five dollars. For a year thereafter they lived on the old Dahl farm, at the end of which time Jacob Karlen, Sr., took a homestead of 40 acres, one mile south of Boyceville, in the town of Stanton, erecting a small log shanty thereon, which he and his family moved into and used as a dwelling. Being a carpenter by trade, he found employment with the Hall & Dean Company in Knapp, working for them a short time, and afterwards for the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company, building logging camps, and also stores. Later he did a considerable amount of carpenter work in the village of Boyceville, helping to build the first church, the first hotel, a warehouse, and many of the dwelling-houses. In fact, during his first 12 years in Dunn County, he was thus occupied for most of the time. After that he gave his chief attention to his farm, which, owing to an • additional purchase of 120 acres, now contained 160 acres, of which in time he cleared up some 40 or 50. besides erecting a set of more modern buildings. There he resided for some 24 years, dying Sept. 9, 1907. His wife died in 1893. Their children, seven in number, were: Lizzie, now Mrs. Henry Hoeper of Neenah, Wis.; Their Rose, wife of Charles Albright, a farmer in the town of Tiffany; Etta, wife of Ernest Albright of Centralia. Wash ; Jacob, usually called Jake, who is the subject of this sketch; Fred, of Boyceville; Bertha, wife of Richard Carlson, of St. Petersburg. Florida; and Robert, of Boyceville. Jacob Karlen as a boy attended the Granger school in the town of Stanton and resided at home, first with his parents, and after his mother's death, with his father, until reaching the age of 22 years. During the next six years he was connected with the lumber industry, being employed in the woods in winter and working for the rest of the time in sawmills. In 1900, buying 80 acres of land on the Boyceville-Knapp road in the town of Stanton, he took up his residence on it and there spent the next two years. He then sold the place and came to Boyceville, where he has since operated a small sawmill, doing custom sawing, and he has averaged about 400,000 feet each season. During the harvest season he operates a threshing machine. He is one of the busy workers of the village and is respected as a useful and reliable citizen. He has some society affiliations, belonging to the Odd Fellows, Modern Woodmen of America and the Mystic Workers of the World. Mr. Karlen was married, Sept. 11, 1904, in Boyceville, to Emma Lentz, who was born March 8, 1885, daughter of Albert and Augusta Lentz, who were early settlers in the town of Stanton. Mr. and Mrs. Karlen have been the parents of three children: Leona, born Oct. 20, 1907; Herbert, born Sept. 21, 1909, and Calvin, born Sept. 12, 1912. Leona met an accidental death, July 1, 1924, being thrown from an auto in a collision.

Ole Larson, an early settler in the town of Grant, where he developed a good farm and became a well to do and prominent citizen, was born near Drammen, Norway, He grew to manhood in his native land, where he learned the trade of in 1842. carpenter and cabinet-maker. There also in 1846 he married Bertha Ellingson, who was born in the same locality as himself in 1822, and was therefore about two years older than he. In 1853 they emigrated to America, leaving their native land in a sailing vessel on May 17, and landing in Quebec, Canada, after a voyage of ten weeks and three days. From there they came to Racine, Wis., and in 1855 moved from Racine to Viroqua, where Mr. Larson established a shop and followed his trade on his own account, doing door, sash and window-frame work to order, also making coffins and other things pertaining to his line of industry. After conducting that business until 1860, he moved with his family to Coon Valley, Vernon County, where he bought 80 acres of land and farmed until 1863, when he sold out there and came to Dunn County, taking 160 acres of government land on Eighteen-Mile Creek in Running Valley, in what is now the town of Grant. Hastily putting together a frame shack, he and his family made it their home until he had time to construct a substantial log cabin. With his sons' assistance he gradually developed his farm, in time replacing the log cabin with a good frame house and building good barns and out-buildings. He also increased the area of his farm by purchasing 160 acres more, which adjoined his original tract. Still later he bought another tract of 120 acres adjoining his farm, but which was across the county line in Chippewa County. After making this last purchase he had a farm of 440 acres. By this time he had advanced considerably in prosperity and was well known in the northeastern part of the county. In time he sold 240 acres of his farm to his sons, Oscar and Martin, keeping 200 acres for himself, on which he continued to reside until 1909. In that year, being 85 years old and no longer active, he sold his farm and moved to the village of Colfax, where he lived some seven years longer, passing away in 1916. His wife died in 1914. They had been the parents of seven children: Lars O., of Minneapolis; Edward O., of Colfax; Josephine, widow of Ole O. Moen of Colfax; Carl O., also of Colfax; Oscar and Caroline, deceased; and Martin, a farmer in the town of Grant.

Carl O. Larson, one of the leading citizens of Colfax, now engaged in the milling business, and who has gained a good position in life through ability and industry, was born in Veroqua, Vernon County, Wis., Dec. 7, 1857, son of Ole and Bertha In 1863, as a child of five years, he came to Dunn County with (Ellingson) Larson. his parents, and his boyhood and early youth were spent on their farm in the town of Grant, where he acquired practical experience in pioneer farming as his father's assistant. At the age of 22 he gave up agricultural work for a while and going to Cumberland, Barron County, was employed for six years there as engineer in the sawmill of his brother, Lars O. At the end of that time he bought from this brother an improved farm of 160 acres in Sections 10 and 15, town of Grant, Dunn County, and taking up his residence on it, began making further improvements. These included the erection of a fine barn, the remodeling of the house and the construc-tion of other buildings, besides the cultivation of the land. There Mr. Larson remained for about 15 years, a busy and successful agriculturist, but finally other business projects entered his mind, and in 1910 he sold the farm and moved to the village of Colfax, buying a residence here, and also purchasing the Colfax Feed Mill and electric power plant from T. E. Thompson. For about 10 years he conducted both these enterprises, but in 1920 he sold the power plant to the Colfax Light and Power Co. He is still conducting the mill, however, with his son, Reuben O. as partner, the business going under the name of the Colfax Milling Co. In 1923 the Larsons, father and son, built a fine Kellystone filling station which supplies Standard Oil gasoline to motorists. Mr. Carl O. Larson has always shown a good citizen's interest in the welfare and progress of the community in which he lives and has been willing to do his part in enhancing it. While living on his farm in the town of Grant, he served as a member of the board of supervisors, and was thus closely connected with the affairs of local government. He was married Sept. 10, 1888, to Minnie Bergerson, who was born in Christiania, Norway, March 27, 1857, and was educated in her native land, attending public school. At the age of 15 years she came to America with an aunt, resided for a while in Grand Rapids, Wis. (now Wisconsin Rapids), and from there went to Evanston, Ill., where she found employment and earned money to enable her to attend a preparatory school and learn the English language. Mr. and Mrs. Larson are the parents of four children, Bowman, Melvin B., Wesley R. and Reuben O. Bowman, born Sept. 10, 1889, married Idabelle Alvina and lives in Spokane, Wash. He has two children, Bowman, Jr. and Marilyn Eileen. Melvin B., born June 23, 1891, is now in the dry goods busi-He married Jessie Tilleson and has two children, Janet ness at Clintonville, Wis. and Dunnan. Wesley R., born Nov. 12, 1895, is an electrician living in Colfax. He married Carrie Simeon and has one child, Raymond W. Reuben O., born Oct. 14, 1897, who is his father's partner in the milling and gas business in Colfax, married Hazel Hovre and has one child, Orville. The Larson family are connected religiously with the Methodist Episcopal Church.

Ísaac Adams, an early settler and farmer in the town of Dunn, where he lived for many years as a live factor in the agricultural improvement of the town, was a native of Scotland who came to this county about 1861. In 1866 he married Jane Cunningham, who was born in Canada and had come to Dunn County with her parents about 1860. After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Adams settled on a farm in Section 4, town of Dunn, or, rather, upon a tract of government land of 80 acres which they proceeded to convert into a farm, Mr. Adams building a log house and log barn among the trees. It was a true pioneer beginning under the most primitive conditions and there lay before them a long road to travel ere they arrived at the goal of their wishes-the possession of a comfortable home and a flourishing and productive farm. But under the stimulus of hope they pushed forward, Mr. Adams clearing his land as fast as he was able. His winters were spent at logging in the woods, whereby he earned money for the support of his family during the hardest period before the farm was sufficiently developed to yield them a living. As time passed he added 40 acres more in the town of Dunn and 40 acres in Eau Galle, making a farm of 160 acres. In the meanwhile he and his wife had children growing up, two sons and two daughters, but the eldest son and child died in boyhood, and it was the second son, Robert D., upon whom the father depended for aid as the years went by. Together they added another 80 acres to the farm, thus making a farm of 240 acres. The place was also being improved in other ways. The log buildings were giving place to good frame structures, Mr. Adams' house being the first frame dwelling in that neighborhood. In 1903, when nearly at the end of his active career, Mr. Adams built a good basement barn, with a ground plan of 34 x 60 feet. He farmed only two years longer, retiring in 1905 and taking up his residence in Downsville, where his good wife and helpmate passed away on March 21, 1908. He survived her less than a year, dying March 7, 1909. Though not distinguished above their neighbors, they belonged to that class of hard-working, law abiding people that form the backbone of any civilized community and whose work counts for more in the end than the brilliant exploits of the most erratic genius. The world may in time forget them, but their work will live on and benefit the generations yet to come. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Adams, to whom casual reference has already been made, were four in number: James, who died at the age of 13 years; Robert D., the present proprietor of the old home farm; Sarah E., now the wife of Dr. J. F. Denham of Boyceville; and Jessie, now Mrs. Jesse Howard of Red Wing, Minn.

Robert D. Adams, proprietor of a fine farm in the town of Dunn, located largely in Section 4, which he had a large share in developing from its primitive condition of wild land, was born on this farm Dec. 12, 1869, son of Isaac and Jane (Cunning-ham) Adams. The story of his parents' lives and labor has already been told. As he grew up he became more and more closely associated with his father in the development of the home place, taking the place of his elder brother James, whom death had permaturely removed, and as the years went by the father, growing old, became more and more dependant upon him. In the early years they bought cattle by the carload at the South St. Paul yards and fed and stalled them for the market, their farm being an ideal one for that purpose. After the father's retirement in 1905 Robert D. became the sold manager and on his death the proprietor. Since then he has made a number of valuable improvements on the place in the erection of new buildings and the construction of fences. He has also added 80 more acres to its area, and the farm now covers a half section of 320 acres. About 200 are under the plow, the balance being in pasture and timber. Within the last few years Mr. Adams has changed from stock farming to dairying and has a fine herd of Holstein cattle. In 1920 he rented his farm and moved to Menomonie buying his present residence at 908 Ninth Street. In 1922, however, he got rid of his renter and since that year has conducted the farm himself, keeping a foreman on it and he, himself, going back and forth between it and the city. He is one of the enterprising farmers of Dunn County whose activities have exerted a benefical influence upon agricultural and civic affairs. He is a stockholder in the Downsville Cooperative Creamery, also in the Farmers and Merchants State Bank of Downsville, in the Howard Lake State Bank of Howard Lake, Minn., and in the Heinrich Chemical Co. of Minneapolis. Robert D. Adams was married, July 26, 1896, to Lizzie Larson of Downsville. She died some 13 years later, on March 21, 1910, leaving one child, Reba, who was born Aug. 10, 1899. The later became a teacher and is now Mrs. Rudolph Steiner of Minot, N. D. On Oct. 30, 1911, Mr. Adams was married secondly to Mrs. Caroline Rogers (nee Bosse) and of this union four children have been born: Lyle, on July 23, 1913; Evelyn, Aug. 11, 1914; Harvey, Sept. 1, 1915; and Verelia, Dec. 18, 1920. Mrs. Adams, as Caroline Bosse, was first married to Charles Rogers, who died in 1909, and of that union there is a living child, Elvera, who was born Dec. 8, 1907.

Ole Noer, for a number of years engaged in mercantile business in Colfax but now deceased, was born in Norway, in 1846, and came to America with his parents at the age of 15 years. His first home in this country was at Beloit, Wis., where the family remained for a year, at the end of that time coming to Dunn County and settling on a farm on Trout Creek. In 1873 Ole Noer started a general merchandise store in the village of Sand Creek, Dunn County, and on March 25, 1875, he was married to Karen Johnson. After continuing in the mercantile business in Sand Creek until 1890 he returned to Norway, accompanied by his family and remained there for a year and a half. He then came back to the United States, locating in Eau Claire, where he conducted a store until 1899, in which year he moved to Colfax and opened a general store and drug store. In 1912 he sold the general store to O. J. Tilleson and subsequently conducted the drug store until 1917, when he sold it to his son Victor. He died on April 12, 1922, his wife having passed away in 1916. He was a member of the Lutheran Church and a worthy and reliable citizen who was respected throughout the community. He and his wife were the parents of five children: Christine, now Mrs. Dr. L. A. Larsen of Colfax; Maria, a nurse residing in Colfax; Victor, conducting the drug store formerly conducted here by his father; Ebba, who is a music teacher in Chicago; and Juul, who died in 1912 at the age of 34 years.

Lauritz A. Larsen, M. D., of Colfax, one of the best known medical men in Dunn County, and who has claims to recognition in various other respects, was born in Chicago, Ill., Nov. 10, 1864. He attended parochial school in that city until the age of 14 years, and was then sent to Luther College, Decorah, Iowa, where he was a student until the fall of 1884. He then entered the German Concordia College in Fort Wayne, Ind. In January, 1885, he returned to Luther College, from which he was graduated in the spring of 1886 with the degree of Bachelor of Arts. In the fall of the same year he entered Luther Seminary at Madison, Wis., which institution, after he had been a student there for two years, was moved to Minneapolis, and there he was graduated in 1889 with the degree of Cand. Theol. In the fall of that year he was called as professor of German and music to the Albert Lea Lutheran Academy at Albert Lea, Minn. After two years' work there he was promoted and became disciplinarian, secretary of the faculty and professor of universal history, German, grammar and chorus work in the Lutheran Normal School at Then, in the fall of 1893, he took up the study of medicine Sioux Falls, S. D. at Rush Medical College and in 1896 was graduated Doctor of Medicine, during his last two years there having been house physician to Tabitha Hospital. On May 13, 1896, he came to Colfax, where he established himself in his profession and has since remained. He was health officer of the village for several years. He has been the recipient of various honors, both within the limits of his profession and out-In 1917 he was appointed by Governor Phillip as state delegate to the side of it. National Tuberculosis Congress held at Cincinnati, Ohio. After the United States entered into the World War he joined the volunteer medical corps and was commissioned lieutenant, but was not called upon to serve away from home, as he was placed in charge of the medical department of the council of defence for Dunn and Pepin counties, and in that capacity rendered valuable and patriotic services. When the Dunn-Pepin County Medical Society was organized he became a charter member of it and during his membership served several times as its president. He is a member, and now president, of the Chippewa County Medical Society; also a member of the State Medical Society and the National Medical Association, and is local surgeon for the "Soo" Line Railway. As a physician and surgeon Dr. Larsen has made a good record and stands high among his professional brethren. Not only that, he has proved himself a useful and public spirited citizen along other lines of activity, being always willing to lend a helping hand to any practical movement for the benefit of the general community. He was a member of the first village board when Colfax was organized as a village, and also served several years on the school board. As a member of the Commercial Club, which he formerly served as president, he has worked for the material advancement of the community in promoting public improvements and encouraging new business enterprises. His musical knowledge and ability have also been turned to account, as for several years he has been leader of the Colfax band, a position for which he qualified himself to a large extent while in college, as he there acted as conductor of the Luther College Band, and the Colfax aggregation has profited materially through his He is a stockholder in the Colfax Store Company, being one of the direcservices. Dr. Larsen was married Dec. 26, 1897, to Christine Noer, daughter of Ole tors. and Karen (Johnson) Noer of Eau Claire, and he and his wife have been the parents of four children: Alf, who died at the age of three months; Erling N., born Feb. 7, 1899; Valborg, who died at the age of two years; and Lilah, born April 12, 1910, who is attending high school. Erling N., who was graduated from Luther College at Decorah, Iowa, with the class of 1922, subsequently entered the University of Wisconsin, where he was graduated with the class of 1924. He is now studying medicine at Rush Medical College, Chicago. The Larsen family are members of the Lutheran Church of America. The Doctor's record is pre-eminently one of service, and, whether ministering to the needs of suffering humanity, promoting the material interests of the village, or training the local band so as to make it a creditable musical organization capable of giving pleasure to those who hear it, he puts his whole heart into the work and seldom fails to accomplish satisfactory results.

Joseph J. Schumacher, the creator of a fine 200-acre farm in Sections 5 and 6, town of Elk Mound, known as Evergreen Lane Farm, which has taken 40 years of planning and hard labor to carve out from the wilderness, is a native of Wisconsin, having been born in Ozaukee County, April 27, 1862, son of Nichalaus and Elizabeth Schumacher. The parents were natives of Luxemburg, who settled in Ozaukee County, Wisconsin, on coming to this country in 1852. There Nichalaus Schumacher followed farming until his death in 1863; his wife Elizabeth survived him many years, dying in 1904. Their son, Joseph J., acquired a district school education and remained at home with his mother until he was 17 years old. He then spent six years in Kenosha County and in 1885 came to Dunn County, where he entered upon his career as a farmer. He began by buying 120 acres of land in Section 6, town of Elk Mound, all of which tract was wild except a few acres which had been Some time later he bought 80 acres of railroad land adjoining in Section 5, broken. which gave him a 200-acre farm. Starting with a small frame dwelling and some ordinary out-buildings, he has gradually built up from year to year until he is now the owner of a fine modern farm with 80 acres under the plow-the balance being in pasture and timber-and with substantial and well arranged buildings. The latter include a good frame dwelling, a good dairy barn 26 x 56 feet in ground plan a: 1 a fine set of out-buildings. He has a good herd of cattle, headed by a pure bred sire and is following general and dairying farming with good judgement leading to practical results. He is also a stockholder in the Colfax Produce Co. at Colfax. Mr. Schumacher was married May 21, 1895, to Mary Remel, who was born in the town of Red Cedar, Dunn County, March 11, 1873, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Casper Remel of Menomonie, who are elsewhere mentioned in this volume. Nine children have been the issue of this union, whose records in brief are as follows: Margaret, born March 24, 1896, and now Mrs. Julius Hoffman of Milwaukee, has two children, Richard and Angeline; John, born Sept. 15, 1897, is on the home farm; Casper, born April 27, 1899, died three days later, on April 30; Mamie, born March 24, 1900, is now Mrs. Joseph Tiegen of the town of Otter Creek and has one child, Loraine; Lillian, born Dec. 25, 1902, is Mrs. Edward Klukas of the town of Elk Mound, as are also the remaining children, namely: George, born Dec. 25, 1904; Theresa, born Feb. 21, 1907; Angeline, born June 9, 1911, and Frances, The Schumacher family are members of St. Joseph's Catholic born Jan. 23, 1914. Congregation in the village of Elk Mound.

Fred W. Rebb, a representative railroad man living in Menomonie, was born July 12, 1868, in Jackson County, Wisconsin, son of Nicholas and Sarah (Haas) The parents were natives of Germany who came to the United States about Rebb. 1866, locating at Black River Falls, Wis., where Nicholas Rebb became a section hand on the Omaha Railway, an occupation in which he continued for many years. Finally, as he was getting old, he ceased work and he and his good wife took up their residence in St. Paul, Minn., where they died within 11 hours of each other, Mr. Rebb on October 12, and Mrs. Rebb on Oct. 13, 1913. They had had seven children: Reka, who married Wheaton Franklin but is now deceased; John, in the employ of the Omaha Railway and a resident of Minneapolis; Fred W., subject of this sketch; Sarah, now Mrs. Frank Helbing of Black River Falls, Wis.; Elizabeth of St. Paul, Minn.; Mary of St. Paul, and Sophia, also a resident of St. Paul and the wife of Christ Bower. Fred W. Rebb as a youth attended school at Black River Falls. At the age of 17 he began work as a railroad man and for three and a half years was fireman on a switch-engine, operated by the York Iron Company at Black River Falls. In August, 1890, he became an employe of the "Omaha" railroad and worked as brakeman on the Altoona-Elroy division until October, 1893. He was then promoted to the position of conductor on that division and remained there until 1895, when he was transferred to Menomonie and assigned to the run between this city and Menomonie Junction, where he has since been employed during a period of 29 years. Thus he is well known to practically every citizen of Mencmonie who has occasion to use that line, and also to many others, and is popular with all. Mr. Rebb was married May 15, 1893, to Lottie Fox, daughter of William and Caroline (Funk) Fox, and of this union there is one child, Marv Margaret, born Aug. 25, 1905, who is a student in the Stout Institute. The family are members of the Congregational Church, Mr. Rebb being fraternally affiliated with the Knights of Pythias, Modern Woodmen of America and Independent Order of Odd Fellows. Their home is a neat residence at 1221 Broadway. William Fox. the father of Mrs. Fred W. Rebb, was born in Bavaria, Germany, in 1852, and came to the United States when he was a boy of 12 years. His first home in this country was in St. Cloud, Minn., where he resided for some years with an uncle. It was in 1871 that he married Caroline Funk, who was born in St. Louis, Mo., and they began home making in Eau Claire, Wis., where they remained until 1878. They then came to Menomonie, which city has since been their home except for two years when they were farming in South Dakota. When the world was startled by the news of gold discoveries in Alaska in 1898, Mr. Fox joined in the rush to that distant part of the United States' territory to try his fortune, but after a year's stay was obliged to return on account of ill health, and without having accumulated much wealth. In their later years he and his wife came to live with their daughter, Mrs. Fred W. Rebb, at whose home Mr. Fox passed away on Jan. 24, 1924.

Fred C. Blair, proprietor of Balsam Grove Farm in Section 36, town of Eau Galle, was born at Read's Landing, Minn., Nov. 1, 1860, son of William E. and Miami (Forrest) Blair. The parents were from eastern states, the father having been born at Franklin, Delaware County, N. Y., April 26, 1805, and the mother at Towanda, Bradford County, Penn., Aug. 20, 1820. To go somewhat farther back in the ancestry of our subject, the paternal grandfather, William E. Blair, was of Scotch-Irish blood, and a son of William Knox Blair, while his wife, whose maiden name was Anna Conna (Connor?), was two-thirds Scotch and one-third Irish. The maternal grandfather, Asa Forrest, was of French ancestry, while his wife, whose maiden name was Esther Eames, was born in England. William E. Blair and Miami Forrest were married at Athens, Bradford County, Penn., on Dec. 1, 1844. After residing in that state until 1852, they joined the tide of western emi-ternation moving to Low. gration, moving to Iowa. There they spent a few years, in 1858, moving to Read's Landing, Minn. That place, on the Mississippi River, opposite the mouth of the Chippewa, was then a very lively village, as many steamboats stopped there on their way up or down the two rivers, those coming up the great river generally landing immigrants from the East or from Europe, who had come to this territory to seek new homes in Minnesota or Wisconsin, while great lumber rafts frequently passed down on their way to St. Louis or other markets to the south. Mr. and Mrs. Blair remained there until 1863, when they, too, resolved to get a piece of land and try farming. For this purpose they came to Dunn County, taking 80 acres of wild land in Section 28, town of Eau Galle. Mr. Blair was then 58 years old, a rather advanced age at which to undertake the strenuous work of building up a farm from unimproved land, but his courage was equal to the task, and he built a log house and barns and set about it. In time he succeeded in clearing about 25 acres, keeping up the work as long as he was able, and finally passing away on Sept. 8, 1885, at the age of 80 years. His wife, though nearly 15 years younger, died before him, in November, 1882, at the age of about 65. They were the parents cf nine children: Mary, born Nov. 2, 1845, at Athens, Penn.; Lilly M., born June 11, 1847, at Athens, Penn.; Esther Ann, born Feb. 28, 1849, at Athens, Penn.; Frank Eames, born March 21, 1851, at Athens. Penn.; Susan Arvilla, born April 27, 1853, at Epworth, Dubuque County, Iowa; Angeline, born Sept. 13, 1854, at Epworth, Iowa; William E., born Dec. 18, 1857, at Epworth, Iowa; Frederick Forrest, born Nov. 1, 1860, at Read's Landing, Minn.; and Walter Omar, born Aug. 30, 1865, in the town of Eau Galle, Dunn County. Fred C. Blair, who was still an infant when his parents brought him to Dunn County, a few years later began attendance at the Chase Hill School (District No. 5), in the town of Eau Galle, where he acquired his educa-After that he helped his father, the farm work develving largely upon him tion. after the latter had got too old to be very active. On the father's death in 1885, he bought the farm and continued to improve and develop it, building a large log house, which he later sided, lathed and plastered; also a double log barn. He also bought an additional tract of land of 40 acres in Section 33, which adjoined his farm, and continued operations there until 1909. He then sold that place and bought the Copeland farm of 80 acres in Section 36, on which he erected a fine house and other good buildings, and which he has since continued to improve. This is his present place which he has called Balsam Grove Farm, and on which he has resided continuously except for a period of four years, during which he lived at Devon, Mont., moving there in April, 1914, and taking up a homestead of 320 acres, or half a section, which he "proved up." While he and his family were away his home farm in the town of Eau Galle was rented out. He is successfully engaged in Nor Plain dairy farming a herd of grand Guernsey cattle with a pure bred sire. Mr. Blair was married in Eau Claire, July 4, 1887, to Lilly May Copeland, who was born at Fall River, Wis., May 20, 1869, daughter of Leland C. and Nellie (Pease) Copeland. Of this union three children have been born: Lloyd Frederick, Jan. 1, 1890; Nellie Irma, Sept. 2, 1891; and Archie L., June 18, 1893. Lloyd Frederick, who acquired his elementary education in the Chase Hill School and subsequently took a course in the agricultural school at Menomonie, is now manager for the Eau Galle Telephone Co. He married Florence Muffle of Spokane, Wash., and has four children, Frederick O., Virginia May, Verla Lou and Vera Beth. Nellie Irma, was graduated from the normal school at Menomonie and taught school several years. On Dec. 14, 1916, she became the wife of Harry J. Bishop, who died from influenza in December, 1918, leaving her with a daughter, Sadie May. After his death Mrs. Bishop taught school at Chippewa Falls, Wis., until the fall of 1923, when she married Otto E. Egeberg, who is engaged in the milling business at Amery, Wis. Archie L., who accompanied his parents to Montana, there married Elizabeth Taylor of Devon. He had taken a land claim there and was intending to prove it up, but on Nov. 18, 1921, accidentally shot himself while taking a gun out of a wagon for the purpose of shooting rabbits. His wife, a graduate of Stevens Point Normal School, is now engaged in teaching. Mr. and Mrs. Fred C. Blair are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church at Eau Galle, of which he is a trustee. He served some years as clerk of School District No. 5. He is a member of the Modern Woodmen lodge at Eau Galle. Mrs. Blair belonging to the Royal Neighbors.

Martin H. Larson, proprietor of Golden Grain Farm, in Section 12, town of Menomonie, was born Feb. 25, 1871, in Norway, son of Hans C. and Mary (Anderson) Larson. The father came to America in 1881, locating in Menomonie, and during the first winter working for the Omaha Railway Co., who were building a spur from their main line to Cedar Falls. In 1882 he sent for his family, who joined him. From 1884 to 1890 he was employed as night watchman at the mill, and it was in 1884 also that he bought 80 acres of wild land in Section 12, town of Menomonie, on which they settled in the same year, the farm being not much over a mile from the village. Their first dwelling on this place was a small shack which they repaired to make it habitable, and which they occupied until Mr. Larson was able to put up a better residence. He continued to improve his place until his death in October, 1898, after which it was carried on by his wife with the assistance of her sons until 1902, when it was bought by her son, Martin H. Mrs. Larson passed away in February, 1910. Mr. and Mrs. Hans C. Larson had five children: Louis, now deceased; Anton, in the employ of the Carter Ice & Fuel Co.; Martin H., on the old home farm; Ole, deceased; and Christ, who is a farmer in Chippewa County, Martin H. Larson was 11 years old when he came with his mother to America. Wis. At the age of 17 he found employment in the lath mill of the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company at Cedar Falls, where he worked for six years. For the next four years he had charge of the retail lumber yard there. In November, 1897, he and his brothers Anton and Christ bought a portable sawmill and for the next ten years were engaged in custom sawing, at the end of which time Martin H. sold his interest in it, and in 1902, he bought the home farm, which he has since operated, doing general farming and dairying, and keeping grade Holstein and Guernsev cattle. He has improved the place considerably, having erected a complete set of buildings and remodeled the house. Mr. Larson besides attending to his farm, has made himself of use in town affairs, serving as assessor in 1912, and as clerk of School District in 1921, and in 1924 he was appointed weed commissioner. He belongs to the Scandanavian-American Fraternity, and he and his family are members of Our Saviour's Lutheran Church in North Menomonie. He was married in Menomonie, May 31, 1902, to Laura Peterson, who was born in Norway, Aug. 4, 1880. Seven children have been born to them, namely: Louis, born March 10, 1903, who is employed in the Armour Packing Co.'s plant in St. Paul; Oscar, born Jan. 22, 1905, who works in the Creamery at Rusk; Mabel, born Sept. 3, 1906, now attending the agricultural school in Menomonie; and William, born Nov. 2, 1910; John, Sept. 22, 1912; Clarence, June 27, 1914, and Luella, Sept. 26, 1915, who reside at home with their parents.

George H. Talmage, who has been engaged in agricultural pursuits in Dunn County for many years, having been 26 years on his present farm in Section 23, town of New Haven, was born in Linn County, Iowa, Oct. 28, 1866, son of John H. and Adelia (Brown) Talmage. The father, a native of New York State, and the mother of New England, were married in Linn County, Iowa. While the Civil War was in progress John Talmage went into the army and served three years as a private. He took part in the battles of Chickamauga, Gettysburg, the Wilderness, and others. and, escaping death, wounds and sickness, came back to his family at the end of the war, or of his term of service. In 1870 they all moved to Wisconsin, settling near Dallas in Barron County, where he pre-empted 80 acres of wild land, but after remaining there for three years, he gave it up and moved into the town of Hay River, Dunn County, where for five years he operated a farm under rental. At the end of that time he moved to Section 27, town of Hay River, where he homesteaded 160 acres of wild land and began anew. Ten years were spent on that farm, at the end of which Mr. Talmage sold out and moved to the vicinity of Ridgeland in the northern part of Dunn County. In the fall of 1892 he moved to the village of Wheeler, where he resided for a few years. He next moved to North Menomonie for a few years' residence, then resided with his son, George H., one year, after which he moved to Strawberry Point, Iowa, where he died in August, 1906. His first wife, Mrs. Adelia Talmage, died when the subject of this sketch was four years old, or about 1870-71, and he subsequently married Lydia E. Hughes. George H. Talmage was reared to manhood in the town of Hay River and acquired a common school education. After remaining on the home farm with his father until the spring of 1883, he entered the employ of an uncle, Lewellyn Brown, of the town of Sheridan, as a farm hand, and remained with him subsequently for Toward the latter part of that period he was married, Dec. 4, 1890, eight vears. to Anna M. Luehr, daughter of Henry and Anna (Schmidt) Luehr of the town of Sheridan. She was born on a farm in the town of Verona, Dane County, Wisconsin, March 2, 1870, and was one year old when her parents came to Dunn County. The father died in 1908 but the mother, Mrs. Anna Luehr, is still living in the town of Sheridan. In the fall of 1892, Mr. Talmage and wife moved to Section 24, town of Hay River, where they bought on contract the farm of his step-mother, Mrs. Lydia E. Talmage. At the end of three years, however, they gave up that farm and in the fall of 1895 moved to the town of Tainter, where they operated a rented farm until the spring of 1898. Then they made another move, this time to a farm on Section 11, town of Tiffany, which they rented, which they operated under rental for two years, their next move being to the farm on which they are now living, in Section 23, town of New Haven, and which they bought after renting it for one year. It was a farm of 156 acres situated 12 miles north of Boyceville, and 65 of its acres were improved and under cultivation. The house and barn were log buildings.

WILLIAM H. GEHRKING AND FAMILY

Mr. Talmage by purchase has added to it 40 acres adjoining, but having sold one acre for a cemetery and school site, the present area of the farm is 195 acres, of which 120 are under the plow. Mr. Talmage has erected a set of good frame buildings including a silo and has a good operating equipment. He has a herd of grade Shorthorn cattle with a pure bred sire, and has had a successful career as a general farmer and dairyman, being well known throughout the northwestern part of Dunn County. In national politics he is a Progressive Republican and has served a number of times in local office—four or five terms as assessor, one term as supervisor and one as chairman of the town board by the virtue of which latter office he became a member of the county board, and he has served School District No. 1 as director for 20 years, being now clerk of the school board. He and his wife have been the parents of ten children: John E., born Sept. 18, 1891, who is unmarried and lives on the farm with his parents; Ida E., born June 5, 1894, who is Mrs. Oscar Waalen of the town of New Haven; Ralph E., born Oct. 29, 1895, a farmer in the town of New Haven; Mildred M., born Feb. 8, 1897, now Mrs. Walter Hamann of the town of New Haven; Ernest W., born Jan. 3, 1899, on the home farm; Amelia A., born April 20, 1900, wife of Evan French of the town of New Haven; Alice L., born Aug. 28, 1902, now Mrs. Oscar Stevens of the town of Hay River; Nellie M., born Sept. 21, 1905, who is Mrs. Carl Hedlund, and two that died On July 23, 1918, Ralph E. was drafted into the United States' service, being sent to Camp Grant, where he was assigned to the 86th Division, Depot Brigade. Shortly afterwards he was sent to Camp Mill, L. I., whence he left for overseas Sept. 7, 1918, and was landed at Liverpool, Sept. 21. It was at a crisis in the war and he and some thousands with him were hurried at once to France, where they were transferred to the 28th Division. On arriving there he was sent at once to the trenches, where he spent two weeks, at the end of which time he was sent back for rest. On the morning on which he was to go back to the trenches he answered to sick call and was sent to the field hospital with bronchial pneumonia. From there he was transferred to a base hospital, where he was on November 11, when the armistice was signed. He reached New York on his return home on March 28, 1919, was discharged at Camp Grant, Ill., April 24, 1919, and arrived home April 25, 1919. The Talmage family are members of the German Lutheran congregation at Connersville.

William H. Gehrking, the present chairman of the board of supervisors of the town of Elk Mound, and, therefore, a member of the county board, was born on his parents' farm in Section 36, April 26, 1878, the parents being William and Mary (Hesemeyer) Gehrking. William H. was educated in the Elk Mound schools and grew up on the home farm, where he resided until 17 years old. For some years after that his time was spent working the the woods at logging in winter and in summer either in sawmills or at farming. It was in 1904 that he began farming on his own account, buying 80 acres of land from his father in Section 25, situated just across the road from the place where he was born. About 40 acres of this tract has been broken and partly developed, and there was a poor set of buildings on the place. Since then 20 years have elapsed, which have been years of action and achievement on the part of Mr. Gehrking, the result of which may be seen in the fine modern farm of which he is now proprietor, and of which 65 acres are now under cultivation. He has a large dairy barn of $34 \ge 60$ feet with full basement, and an equipment of litter carrier, steel stanchions, drinking cups and water system. The other out-buildings are in keeping with the barn and the house is a substantial and comfortable residence, flanked by tasteful lawns and shrubbery. The farm is well fenced and its whole appearance gives evidence of capable management, and the direction of a mind in harmony with modern and progressive ideas. Mr. Gehrking has served as supervisor for nine years. He was elected chairman of the town board for the term of 1923-24, the incumbency of that office making him also a member of the county board, and as such he is still serving. He is a stockholder in the Elk Mound Cooperative Creamery. On March 29, 1905 Mr. Gehrking was united in marriage with Mary Kackman, who was born in the town of Elk Mound, Feb. 9, 1882. He and his wife are the parents of five children, who were born as follows:

Lucille M., Feb. 20, 1908; Hazel E., June 22, 1912; Mabel E., Feb. 2, 1914; Clarence W., Sept. 28, 1916; and Norman H., born Nov. 23, 1919. Mr. and Mrs. Gehrking and family attend the Evangelical Church at Elk Mound.

August Reckin, for many years an active factor in the agricultural development of Dunn County, but now retired and a resident of Menomonie, was born in Germany, Nov. 6, 1856, son of Charles and Fredericka (Weber) Reckin. The family came to the United States in 1858, locating in Milwaukee, which city they made their home for five years. Then coming direct to Dunn County, they bought 40 acres of railroad land in Section 27, town of Eau Galle. This tract was covered with heavy timber, and the first task of Charles Reckin was to make a clearing, on which he first put up a log house and then other buildings. The house was completed on April 14, 1865, the day of which President Lincoln was assasinated. The father, assisted by his sons, August and Charles (when the latter was old enough to work) gradually cleared off the timber, grubbed out the stumps and ultimately developed a fine farm, also increasing its area by the purchase of more land. Charles Reckin, Sr., died in May, 1894, at which time the farm contained 320 acres. After that event the sons remained with their mother on the farm until Charles was married, at which time another house was built, into which he moved with his wife, also taking 160 acres of the land, the tract on which the new house stood. August continued to reside with his mother, conducting and continuing to develop the home farm, which by that time had been brought to a high state of of cultivation and was well provided with buildings, the residence being a fine eight-room brick house, 30 x 30 feet and two stories in height. The barn, provided with a full basement, measured 36 x 80 feet, and these buildings, together with the others were served by an adequate home waterworks system. Mr. Reckin's mother lived to the venerable age of 90 years and four months, passing away in 1906. August remained on that farm until 1920, when he traded it for a large farm of 300 acres in the town of Red Cedar. In December, 1921, he suffered a heavy loss from fire, when his large barn and 30 head of stock were burned, also his granary and elevator with 4,000 bushels of grain, his machine shed with machinery, with a garage. The loss amounted to 35,000, on which he had $23,000 of insurance, his actual loss, therefore, being $12,000. He remained on the farm, however, until the spring, caring for his stock as best he could, then sold the farm and retired, taking up his residence in Menomonie, where he has since made his home. Mr. Reckin has the reputation of being one of Dunn County's most reliable and useful citizens. He not only helped to develop its agricultural and dairying resources, but devoted a part of his time to the public service whenever called upon. For 15 years he was a member of the board of supervisors of the town of Eau Galle, and for many years was an efficient member of the school board of his district, serving at different times as director, treasurer and clerk, and when the new schoolhouse of District No. 2 was built he had charge of its construction and the buying of the materials. Mr. Reckin was married in April, 1886, to Matilda Schrader of Arkansaw, Pepin County, in which place she was born March 26, 1868. Of this union six children have been born, namely, Amelia, Ernest, Minnie, Irving, Esther and Mary. Amelia, who is now Mrs. Frank Schreiner of Menomonie, has one child, Cleo. Ernest, who conducts a filling station at Black River Falls, married Clara Weber and has one child, Madeline. Minnie is the wife of Earl McRoberts, a merchant in the village of Eau Galle, and has two children, Gordon and Junior. Irving, who is associated with his brother-in-law, Frank Schreiner in the operation of the Energy Filling Station above referred to, married Lola Baskin and has three children, Dorothy, Donald and Ruth. Esther, now Mrs. Archie Persons of Eau Galle, has two children, Virgil and Mary. Mary is bookkeeper at the Energy Filling Station. The Reckin family are affiliated religiously with the German Lutheran Church.

Lewis E. Root, proprietor with Oscar Hovland of an up-to-date meat market in the village of Colfax, was born in the town of York. Clark County, Wis., May 15, 1888, son of George and Emma F. (Gibson) Root. The parents were born, reared and married in Fond du Lac County, and were among the pioneer settlers of Clark County, being one of the first families to settle in the town of York. George Root died on his homestead there on March 19, 1916. His wife, who survived him, is still living there. The following children composed their family: Chloe, now Mrs. John Griffith of Oshkosh; Elwin, now operating the old family homestead in Clark County; Lewis E., of Colfax; Ross N., of Conroth; Allie, wife of Victor Baker of Wheeler, Dunn County; and Elsie, who is deceased. Lewis E. Root as a boy attended district school in Clark County and subsequently took a commercial course in the business college at Neillsville. For several years he worked at home and on other farms in Clark County, also in Green Lake County. In 1914 and 1915 he attended the dairy school of the University of Wisconsin at Madison and was there graduated in 1915. For the next two years he operated the cheese factory at Howard, Chippewa County, and from there went to Norton, Dunn County, where he built a cheese factory and house, operating the former until June 15, 1923, when he sold it to William Prange. Then coming to Colfax, he formed a partnership with Oscar Hovland, they together purchasing the old Fred Hovland meat market, which they are now conducting. It is equipped with the latest style of refrigerator, show case and counter, and cutting and slicing machines; and they have a workroom with the necessary appliances for making their own sausage links and head cheese; also a modern slaughterhouse and 45 acres of land just outside the village limits, where they do all their own killing. Mr. Root was clerk of the town of Tainter for three years and in 1920 bought a 120-acre farm in Section 13, town of Colfax, which he rents out. He was married May 20, 1920, in Colfax, to Olga Johnson, daughter of Erick and Mattie (Knutson) Johnson, both her parents being now deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Root are members of the Colfax Lutheran Church, Mrs. Root also belonging to the Ladies' Aid and other societies. They have one child, Vivian, born Jan. 29, 1922.

Oscar Hovland, an enterprising citizen of Colfax, engaged in the meat business, was born in the town of Sand Creek, Dunn County, Wis., son of Samuel S. and Torgin (Loftus) Hovland. The parents came to the United States from Norway in the late 50's, first settling in Goodhue County, Minn., where, however, they stayed but a short time, coming to Dunn County, Wis., before the Civil War. They were the fifth family to settle in the town of Sand Creek, and, naturally, had to go through pioneer experiences, suffering various hardships. Samuel S. Hovland died on the farm in 1884, and it was subsequently carried on by his widow with the assistance of her sons, until she, too, passed away in 1917. They were the parents of 13 children, namely: Samuel and Ole, now farmers in the town of Sand Creek; Theodore, a real estate dealer in Bloomer; John, also engaged in that business in Bloomer; George, a farmer in the town of Sand Creek; Albert, deceased; Oscar, of Colfax; Martin, of Glenwood City; Sewell, of Chippewa Falls; William, deceased; Anna, now Mrs. Charles Kitzman of Eau Claire; Rena, wife of A. A. Anderson of Colfax; and Gertrude, who is Mrs. Thomas Peterson of Rice Lake, Wis. Oscar Hovland was educated in the district school in the town of Sand Creek. He remained with his parents until arriving at the age of 20 years. He then became connected with the lumber industry, which he followed on the woods and on the drives for about four years. In 1902 he came to Colfax and learned the butcher's business from his brother Albert, after whose death he operated the market for the estate until it was sold in 1919 to Fred Hovland. Oscar was then employed by the Colfax Store Co. as clerk until October, 1923, when, in company with Lewis E. Root, he bought the Hovland meat market which they are now conducting with good success. Oscar Hovland was married May 14, 1909, in Running Valley, to Clara Samson, daughter of Samuel and Karen (Olson) Samson; both her parents are now deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Hovland are affiliated religiously with the Colfax Lutheran Church.

Henry Wade, engaged in diversified farming in Section 2, town of Eau Galle, was born in Green County, Wisconsin, Nov. 27, 1857, son of William and Ruth (White) Wade. The father was a native of Maryland and the mother of Ohio, it being in the latter state that they were married. It was from Ohio that they moved to Green County, Wisconsin, where they remained until 1866, when they came to Dunn County, buying 80 acres of wild land in Section 2, town of Eau Galle.

There was a small clearing on which stood a small frame shack, into which Mr. Wade moved with his family and where they made their home for a number of vears. He then improved the house by building a log addition to it. There he farmed until 1883, clearing some of the land, and then his son Henry took over the management of the farm, the parents residing on it for the rest of their lives. The death of William Wade occurred in 1890, when he was about 78 years old, having been born in 1812. His wife Ruth, who was born in 1813, died in 1897, aged about 84 years. They had two children: Rebecca, born in 1843, who died at the age of 34 years; and Henry, subject of this sketch. Henry Wade first attended school in Green County, Wisconsin and was nine years old when he came to Dun County with his parents. Here his education was continued in the public schools and he subsequently took up teaching, which profession he followed for several years in Dunn County. On Sept. 2, 1883, he was united in marriage with Kate Goercke of Fall City, this county, where she was born Nov. 13, 1862. After his marriage Mr. Wade took over the management of the home farm and continued its development, caring for his parents while they lived. He cleared several more acres and built the nice house he now occupies, as well as the barn and other buildings. In the practice of diversified farming he has made steady progress and been successful. He has also rendered some useful public service. For six years he was a director on the school board of Joint District No. 1, Eau Galle and Weston, was assessor for the town of Eau Galle one year, and for the last 15 years has been town clerk, having been repeatedly elected to that office without opposition. As a member of the Beavers' Reserve Fund, he has passed through all the chairs, for ten years served as its secretary, for seven years of that time being also treasurer. On July 11, 1913, Mr. Wade suffered a bereavement in the death of his wife. She left one child. George, born Dec. 3, 1886, who is now living in Los Angeles, Calif., where he follows the trade of carpenter. This son George married Etta Shaw and has two children, Ruth and Catherine.

Amund Bygd, a successful farmer of the town of New Haven, where he has been settled for the last 17 years, was born in Goodhue, County, Minn., March 17, 1868, son of Hans and Catherine (Bolstad) Bygd. The parents were natives of Norway who settled in Goodhue County before the Civil War, being among the earliest settlers there. They developed a good farm of 160 acres, which was one of the best in that section, and was situated near the village or hamlet of Aspelund. There both of them died at an advanced age, the mother in 1901 and the father about a year later. Amund Bygd grew to manhood on his parents' farm and as a youth attended common school, residing at home until he was 21. Then going to Dodge County, Minnesota, he bought an 80-acre farm near Kenyon. This was an old run-down farm the buildings of which were very poor. During the first two years he had a family living on the place with whom be boarded. On Sept. 6, 1891, he married Johanna Naseth, daughter of Carl and Oline Naseth, the parents being natives of Norway who settled in Goodhue County at an early day and developed a 200-acre farm there on which their daughter Johanna was born Sept. 6, 1873, the second eldest child of a family subsequently numbering 12, and of whom eight are still living. As a first dwelling for himself and wife Mr. Bygd had built a small grout cottage, which stood on the place when he got it, but in time erected a substantial set of frame buildings and brought the land into good condition. He and his family resided there until 1907, when he sold out and came to Dunn County. buying a partly improved farm on Section 24, town of New Haven. Twenty acres of it were improved but the dwelling was only a small frame shanty. On this place Mr. Bygd has erected a good set of farm buildings including a silo and has now 60 acres of the land under the plow. He has a good herd of grade Shorthorn cattle, with a pure bred sire and is successfully following general farming and dairying. At various times he has served efficiently in public office. In Dodge County, Minn., he was for several years school clerk, and he has served eight years in that capacity in his present school district, having also been town assessor for one year. He and his wife are the parents of 11 children, as follows: Helmer, born July 18, 1892, now residing at Clear Lake, Minn., where he is butter maker in the local creamery;

Carl S., born April 24, 1894, residing in Connersville, Dunn County, Wis.; Catherine O., born Feb. 23, 1896, who is Mrs. William Newbauer of St. Paul; Tilda, born Feb. 19, 1899, residing in St. Paul; Anna H., born Dec. 17, 1900, wife of Daniel McCcnaghie of Farmington. Minn.; Clara F., born June 21, 1903, residing in St. Paul; Oscar O., born Sept. 2, 1906, on the home farm with his father; Arthur J., born Aug. 5, 1909, also on the home farm; Helen J., born April 1, 1911; Lucille C., born July 19, 1913; and Leonard, born Feb. 14, 1916, the last three being also at home. The family are members of the Norwegian Lutheran Church, those at home belonging to the Aker congregation. Mr. Bygd is nominally a Republican in politics but votes for his preferred candidates whether in or out of that party's lines.

George Baskin, the second man to settle in the Hay Creek Valley in the town of Eau Galle, was born in province of Ontario, Canada, July 12, 1832. He was educated in his native place and at the age of 20 years in 1852 he came to the state, and to Wisconsin, and at once settled in Eau Galle village, where he entered the employ of Carson & Rand, remaining with them for about ten years. During that time he bought 120 acres of wild land in Section 8, town of Eau Galle, which he began to clear and develop after he had quit working for the lumber company. In 1864 he built a good frame house on his place, also log barns and other out-builddings, and homesteaded another tract of 40 acres adjoining his original land, which gave him a farm of 160 acres. On this place he followed farming until 1900, in which year he turned it over to his son, Thomas Edward; but he continued to reside on the farm, until his death on April 13, 1909. He was a man of solid worth in the community and a loving husband and kind father. George Baskin was married Oct. 26, 1864, in the village of Eau Galle, to Martha Kirk, who, like himself, was born in Canada East, but in the province of Quebec, Nov. 25, 1843. She was brought to Dunn County in 1853, when she was ten years old and at that tender age, with her mother, an aunt, a cousin and three sisters, walked from Lake Pepin to the town of Eau Galle-their father having preceeded them on the journey. From their starting-point to the village of Eau Galle, the distance was about 30 miles in a straight line, but for them it was lengthened considerably by the winding trials, to say nothing of the roughness of the ground that had to be traversed. They passed only three or four houses on the way, one of which was on the prairie, where they bunked over night. Her parents, George and Mary (Cuskaden) Kirk, settled on land in the town of Eau Galle and started farming, an occupation which they followed for the rest of their days. Mr. and Mrs. Baskin were the parents of six children, as follows: the first born, who died in infancy; Belle, now Mrs. Charles Barnes of Ladysmith, Wis.; Frederick, who died in 1916; Clara, who be-came the wife of Fred Allen and died in 1910; Thomas Edward, now proprietor of the old home farm, and Edith, who is Mrs. P. H. Doughty of Juneau, Wis.

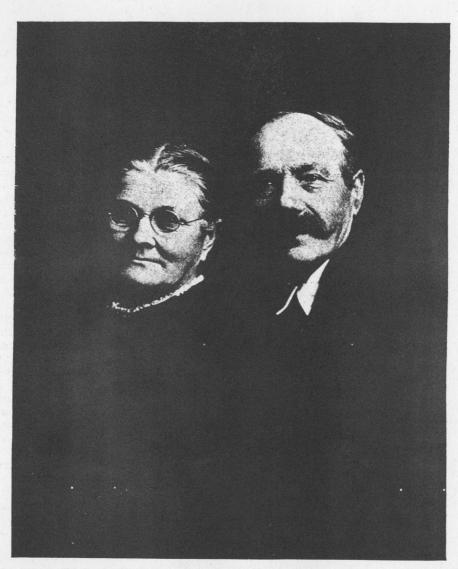

Thomas Edward Baskin, better known to his friends as "Ed Baskin," proprietor of the Hay Creek Valley Farm, registered, in Section 8, town of Eau Galle, was born on this farm, Sept. 24, 1875, son of George and Martha (Kirk) Baskin, his parents being pioneers of this town. After acquiring his education in the district school, he began helping his father to develop the home place, felling the timber, grubbing stumps and breaking the land, and he was thus occupied for a number of years. In 1900 he took over the farm, paying his father a stated sum each year, the arrangement being made with the further understanding that he should provide for both father and mother as long as they lived. These articles of agreement have been faithfully kept, and he is still providing for his mother, who lives on the farm with him, his father having died 15 years ago. Mr. Baskin has paid a good round sum for the place since taking it over, but it is an excellent farm and has been improved greatly by his self. He has erected a complete set of new buildings. In 1902 he built a fine residence of 18 x 26 feet, to which he later made two additions, one of the same dimension 18 x 26 feet and another 8x 14 feet, which gave him a house of 11 rooms. He had already, in 1901, built a fine basement barn of 28 x 80 feet, to which he subsequently made an addition of 32 by 96 feet, which increased the size of his barn to a length of 122 feet and made it L-shaped. In 1908 he built a double corn crib, with a driveway and a shed of $20 \ge 30$ feet. Then in the following year, 1909, he erected a fine machine barn of 20 x 80 feet. He has also put up a fine cement block chicken house. In the spring of 1925 he built a concrete hog house of 28 x 56 feet, with modern equipment. He has also put up several other out-buildings. The beautiful Hay Creek flows through the farm between the barn and the residence, and here the stock for years were watered, the water for the household being obtained from a cool spring. Such was the usage until 1904, in which year Mr. Baskin sunk an artesian well. In 1912 he sank two more, one to supply the barns and the other for pasture use. In addition to all these improvements, he has kept the old farm residence in repair for his mother, it standing in the same yard as his own house. He has also from time to time bought additional land until he now owns 600 acres, altogether making an unbroken tract of land except for 40 acres. Four hundred acres of the farm are in Section 8, 160 acres in Section 17, and 40 acres in Section 5. Mr. Baskin farms all of his land, about 300 acres of it being under cultivation and the balance in timber and pasture. About 140 acres of the land has been brought under cultivation by Mr. Baskin himself. The farm is lighted by illuminating gas fed from a pressure tank. Mr. Baskin is following general farming and dairving, having a fine herd of grade Holstein cattle, with a pure bred sire. As proprietor of so large a farm and in such excellent condition as to be a model of its class, and which he has to a large extent built up himself so far as modern improvements are concerned, he stands high among his fellow townsmen. He is a member of the Modern Woodmen of America, and has rendered some public service as treasurer of Joint School District No. 4, Eau Galle and Dunn. Mr. Baskin was married Sept. 10, 1901, to Lottie Stevens, who was born in the town of Peru, Sept. 12, 1880, daughter of Charles and Mary (Vradenberg) Stevens. Mr. and Mrs. Baskin have four children: Russel E., born Sept. 5, 1902; Charles Erwin, born Feb. 18, 1905; Lila May, born Aug. 1, 1908, and Frederick W., born July 7, 1918. The family are affiliated religiously with the Methodist Episcopal Church.

Charles Stevens, who was for many years one of Dunn County's substantial citizens, but who is now deceased, was born in St. Lawrence County, New York, July 12, 1855. When a small boy he moved with his parents up the St. Lawrence River, thence to Fond du Lac, Wis., and later to Buffalo County, Wisconsin, where he was educated and grew to manhood. In 1879—the year in which he was married—he settled in Red Cedar, Dunn County, and engaged in farming. In 1900 he sold the farm and moved to Eau Galle, where he spent the remainder of his life, passing away June 1, 1924. For many years he had been a faithful member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Mr. Stevens was married Jan. 5, 1879, to Mary Vradenberg, who was born in Columbia County, Wisconsin, April 9, 1855, and who resides with her daughter, Mrs. Ed Baskin. Mr. and Mrs. Stevens were the parents of four children, namely: Lottie, now Mrs. Ed Baskin of the town of Eau Galle; Glenn, of Downsville, Dunn County; Herbert, of Ogilvie, Minn.; and Ernest, of Eureka, Mont.

John H. Danielson, a well known farmer and tobacco raiser in Section 34, town of Grant, was born in Norway, July 6, 1869, son of Daniel Ericson and Pauline Eric-The father was a farmer and fisherman, and came with his family to the son United States in 1880, locating at Deer Park, St. Croix County, Wis. From there he moved to Dane County, where he lived with his sons. In 1894 John H. Danielson went to southern Texas, where he bought land and raised cotton. After 18 months time there, however, he sold out and returned to southern Wisconsin. In 1900 he located in Dunn County. Here he farmed three years on shares, after which he bought 160 acres of land in Section 32, town of Grant, at the same time also taking a homestead of 120 acres in Section 32, town of Grant. On the tract some clearing had been done and there were some buildings, though the latter were old and inadequate to his needs. Accordingly he remodeled those he had use for, and built others. There he carried on general farming for 15 years, also raising considerable quantities of tobacco. At the end of the 15 years he sold that property and with his sister Marie bought 320 acres in Sections 32 and 34, town of Grant. They built a tobacco barn, storehouse, and garage, remodeled the residence, and made other improvements, converting the place into one of the nicest farms in this region. Mr. Danielson makes a specialty of tobacco raising, being one of the largest growers in the county. He is a member and one of the directors of the Northern Wisconsin Tobacco Cooperative Association. As a dairyman he keeps Holstein and Shorthorn cattle, having at present 20 head, and he also raises sheep and high grade Poland-China hogs. Mr. Danielson's mother died in 1891, the father surviving her until 1914, when he, too, passed away. They had eight children, seven of whom are now living, namely: Signal, wife of Thomas Orvold of Chippewa Falls; Ole, of Norton, Wis.; Detlof J., of the town of Colfax; Andrew, of Chippewa Falls; Peter, of Edgerton, Wis.; John H. and Marie, the latter being the housekeeper for herself and brother. She was born in Norway, in 1872, and was eight years old when she came to this country with her parents. Mr. Danielson and his sister are members of the Holden Congregation of the Norwegian Lutheran Church of the town of Elk Mound.

John Schutz, Sr., proprietor of a good farm in Section 11, town of Stanton, three miles south of the village of Boyceville, was born in Switzerland, June 3, 1858, son of Jacob and Johanna (Karlin) Schutz. The parents never came to America but died in their native land. John, who remained with them until he was 25 years old, was educated in the common school. It was in 1884 that he emigrated, landing in New York, April 12. He had so little money that he had to borrow some to pay his railroad fare from New York to Knapp. When he arrived in Dunn County the West Wisconsin Railway was in process of construction between Downing and Colfax and he obtained work on it. After that he worked two years for The Knapp, Stout & Co. Company. Industrious and economical, he saved his money with the intention of getting on to the land and building up a rural home. It was in 1892 that he took this important step, buying 80 acres of wild land on Section 11, in the town of Stanton, and early in the same year, on January 24, he was united in marriage with Rosina Gobeli, whom he had known, and to whom he had plighted his troth, in Switzerland. She was born in that country, Oct. 21, 1862, daughter of Peter and Katherine Gobeli, and came to the United States alone in the fall of 1891. Mr. Schutz's land was heavily timbered and he had to clear a spot to build. Since then with the assistance of his wife he has developed a good farm, and together they have reared a fair sized family. The farm is provided with a good set of frame buildings and an adequate equipment of tools and machinery. It is now managed and operated by a son, August, Mr. and Mrs. Schutz taking life more easily now than in their younger days when they were engaged in building up their fortunes. Their children are John, Matilda, Rosalie, Wilhelmina, August, Katherine and Ernest. John, the first born, is now a farmer in the town of Stanton. Matilda is the wife of Charles Carlson of the town of Tiffany. Rosalie, who married Halvor Landsverk of Towner, N. D., is now a widow residing with her Witholming married Charles Malacher and residen with her bard in parents. Wilhelmina married Charles Molsahn and resides with her husband in Chicago. August, who, as already mentioned, is operating the home farm, married Lena Karlin of Thorpe, Clark County, Wis. Katherine is Mrs. Indermuhle of the town of Stanton. Ernest, a laborer living at home, is unmarried. Mr. Schutz served three years on the town board and nine years on the school board of District No. 5. The family are members of the German Lutheran Congregation in Boyceville. In the spring of 1925 Mr. Shutz built a modern bungalow next to the old home in which the son, August resides.

Charles Neubauer, now deceased, who during his active career developed a farm from wild land in the town of Menomonie, was born in Pommern, Germany, Feb. 26, 1855. He was educated in his native land, where, on July 22, 1877, he was united in marriage with Fredericka Pieper, who was born in Pommern, March 4, 1856, daughter of Christian and Wilhelmina (Fick) Pieper. Both her parents died in Germany. In 1881 Mr. Neubauer emigrated with his family to the United States, landing at New York and coming west to Neenah, Wis., where they remained for five and a half years. They then came to Menomonie, residing two and a half years in the city, during which time Mr. Neubauer worked in the sawmills of the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company. In the fall of 1889 he began farming, buying 140 acres of timber land in Section 24, town of Menomonie, of which tract only four acres had been cleared. There was a log shanty on the place, however, in which he and his family lived for several years. Like other pioneers Mr. Neubauer had to make a slow start, being obliged to work for others to support himself and family, but he found time at intervals to log off the timber from his own place, which he sold to the Coffin Box & Lumber Co. at Irvington, thus clearing about 80 acres of He also in time erected a good and substantial set of buildings and carried his land. on general farming there until 1916. He then sold the farm to his son Charles, and took up his residence in Irvington, where he spent the rest of his life, dying Feb. 12, 1919. His wife still resides there. Mr. and Mrs. Charles Neubauer were the parents of 13 children, namely, Ferdinand, William, Anna, Alemia, Emma, Charles, Mary, Edith, Bertha, August, Albert, Minnie and Elizabeth, of whom the following is a further record. Ferdinand, who was born July 25, 1878, married Clara Singerhouse and is farming near Downsville, Dunn County. William, born March 29, 1880, and who married Jessie Klosch, died in 1923. Anna, born March 9, 1881, is now Mrs. Thomas B. Denning of Menomonie. Amelia, born Nov. 9, 1883, is the wife of Henry Hall of Menomonie. Emma, born Oct. 7, 1884, is Mrs. L. O. Brooks of Vestport, N. D. Charles, born Oct. 1, 1885, is now a farmer near Downsville. Mary, born Sept. 28, 1886, died on Sept. 28, 1906, (her birthday), at the age of 20 years. Edith, born Jan. 30, 1890, became the wife of Martin Gackly, and died May 1, 1914; she left a son Myrlin. Bertha, born Feb. 20, 1891, is now Mrs. Edward Werner of the town of Weston, Dunn County. August, born Feb. 2, 1893, is a farmer in the town of Weston. Albert, a twin brother of August, entered the U.S. army July 6, 1918, and was killed in France, Oct. 16, 1918. Minnie, born April 11, 1894, died May 12, 1923; she was Mrs. William Voelker and the mother of two children, Morris and Lucille, who live with their grandmother Neubauer. Elizabeth, born June 9, 1896, is now Mrs. Joseph Werner of Weston Village. Thus eight of the 13 children of Mr. and Mrs. Neubauer are now living and are well performing their respective parts in the upbuilding of the communities in which they reside.

Otto Draeger, Sr., in former years a farmer in the town of Sherman, but now deceased, was born in Germany, Sept. 24, 1840. In his native land he attended common school, and also received military training there, in accordance with the national law, and was ranked as orderly sergeant. About 1870 he came to the United States, arriving in Chicago with but five dollars in his pocket. As he worked there for two years, he must have been there at the time of the great fire, which occurred in October, 1871. When he left Chicago he went to Jefferson County, Wisconsin, where on June 25, 1875, he married Augusta Sebaska, whose parents were farmers. In the following year he came with his wife to Menomonie and entered the employ of Knapp, Stout & Co. With that concern, which became The Knapp, Stout & Co. Company in 1878, he remained for two or three years, at the end of which time he began farming for himself in the town of Sherman, buying 80 acres of land in Section 28. Only seven acres of this tract had been cleared, and the buildings were old and constructed of logs. Such as it was, however, it served him for a start in his new occupation. In time he bought more land until he had 136 acres, of which he cleared about 75. He also erected a good set of frame buildings, and his work in the improvement of this place entitles him to be classed among those who helped to build up the agricultural resources of the county. He died on the farm on Jan. 27, 1911. He had been a widower for a year and four months, his wife having passed away on Sept. 19, 1909. They had six children: Emma, now Mrs. Nelson Le Claire of St. Paul, Minn.; Otto, Jr., the present owner of the old home farm; Gusta, who died in infancy; Martha, who is Mrs. Charles Mewers of St. Paul; Lena, wife of William Hanke of St. Paul, and Frederick, who is a prosperous farmer in the town of Sherman. Mr. Draeger and family were members of the German Lutheran Church in Menomonie. In politics he was at one time a Democrat but became a Republican after the election of Grover Cleveland to the presidency.

Otto Draeger, Jr., proprietor of the old Draeger farm in Section 28, town of Sherman, was born in Menomonie, Wis., Feb. 11, 1881, son of Otto and Augusta (Sebaska) Draeger. As a boy he attended rural school and also studied for two years in a German school. His life up to the present time, with the exception of his first year of infancy, has been spent on the farm he now owns and cultivates, of which he came into possession on his father's death. He had helped his father to improve it and he has since continued its development. There are 136 acres of land, a good set of frame buildings, and an adequate operating equipment. Mr. Draeger carries on general farming successfully, giving close attention to dairying, and his farm is well stocked with good grade cattle. He has served as a member of his district school board and pclitically is a Republican. He was married June 30, 1912, to Emma Woinowski of the town of Menomonie, who was born on a farm in that town, June 11, 1888, daughter of Carl Jacob and Anna (Haneberg) Woinowski. He and his wife are the parents of three children: Eileen, born July 22, 1918; Grant C., March 12, 1920; and Leo M., June 14, 1921. The family are affiliated religiously with the German Lutheran Congregation in Menomonie.

Carl J. Woinowski, now living retired in the town of Sherman, was born in West Prussia, Germany, April 27, 1849, son of Wilhelm and Caroline (Frost) Woinowski. In his native land he attended school up to the age of 14 and afterwards followed farm work there. On Dec. 17, 1871, he was united in marriage with Anna Haneberg, who was born June 6, 1849, daughter of Jacob and Marie Haneberg. In 1879 Mr. Woinowski came with his family to the United States. His destination was Menomonie, Wis., but being short of funds on landing, he had to borrow $50 to get farther than New York. On arriving in Menomonie he found work with The Knapp, Stout & Co. Company and was with them for five years. Then in 1884 he bought 80 acres of wild land in the town of Menomonie, where North Menomonie now stands. The tract was one of wild bush land and the Woinowski family was the second to locate there. Mr. Woinowski built a good hewn log house and a log barn and began to clear and cultivate the land. In 1890 he traded that farm for one of 180 acres in the town of Sherman, on which were some old log build-On this place he erected a good set of frame buildings and resided there for ings. 16 years, at the end of that time selling the place and moving back to North Menomonie. He and his wife worked hard and had their reward in the attainment of prosperity. On Nov. 1, 1924, Mrs. Woinowski died at the age of 75 years at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Otto Draeger in the town of Sherman, and since her death Mr. Woinowski has resided with the same daughter and his son-in-law, Mr. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Woinowski, ten in number, were as Draeger. follows: Gustav, who is deceased; Charles, of Everett, Wash.; Theresa, deceased, who was Mrs. Max Besch of Everett, Wash.; Herman, of Chicago; Otto, of Dallas, Texas; Rudolph, deceased; Adolph, of Kenosha, Wis.; George, deceased; Emma, who is Mrs. Otto Draeger of the town of Sherman; and Emil of Menomonie. family are members of the German Lutheran Church. Mr. Woinowski has always The been a Republican in politics.

Arnt Mitlyng, proprietor of one of the finest farms in the town of Lucas, which town he served as assessor for 20 years, was born in Norway, Feb. 1, 1854, son of Andres and Matret Mitlyng, the mother's maiden name also having been Mitlyng. After his wife's death, which occurred in 1887, Andres Mitlyng came to the United States and spent his remaining years residing with his children. These children were: Arnt, the subject of this sketch; Holver, who built up a farm on the Hudson Road, which he operated until his death in 1922; Anna, who is Mrs. Martin Fladoes of Menomonie; Sarah, who is Mrs. Ole Walseth of Menomonie; Louis, deceased, and John, of North Menomonie. Arnt Mitlyng acquired a common school education in Norway, where he subsequently did railroad work and also worked in the woods at lumbering. In 1877, at the age of 23, he came to America direct to Menomonie, to which place his brothers and sisters had preceeded him, and obtained employment of the T. B. Wilson farm. Afterwards he spent about seven years working in sawmills and was also for one summer in Minneapolis, but returned to Dunn County again and during the following two years was employed in the Kelly brick yard at Menomonie. On Nov. 13, 1886, he was married at North Menomonie, to Mary Oas, who was born in Norway, Jan. 17, 1866, daughter of Knute and Mary (Lackley) Oas. The father had come to America in 1882, being followed by the rest of the family in 1884, and they lived in and about Menomonie for some time. To glance ahead a little, it may be said that they later moved to Barron County, near Rice Lake, where they operated a farm until the death of Mr. Oas on May 26, 1909, Mrs. Oas dying a number of years later, on Sept. 24, 1922. Early in 1887, or not long after his marriage, Mr. Mitlyng began to look around for a good farm home, but not satisfied with anything he saw that was procurable, he decided to begin at the beginning and build one up himself. Accordingly he bought 80 acres of wild land in Sections 26 and 35 of the town of Lucas and erected a set of log buildings, which was the beginning of his present farm. Making improvements as he was able, he advanced steadily along the road of success and prosperity, he and his family living in the little log house until 1906, when they moved into a fine frame one which he had erected. From time to time he has put up other buildings, including a fine barn, and silo, and has added 80 acres more to his farm. He has about 70 acres cleared and today has one of the best developed farms in the town of Lucas, well stocked with grade Holstein cattle. Mr. Mitlyng is a stockholder in the new Hudson Road Creamery. He has efficiently served the town of Lucas three years as supervisor and served his twentieth year as town assessor in 1924. Mr. and Mrs. Mitlyng are the parents of five children, as follows: Axel, born Sept. 18, 1887, is assisting his father on the home farm. Carl, born April 15, 1889, and who is a farmer in the town of Lucas, married Julia Husby, and has three children, Carlton, Ruth and Arnt J. Marie, born Jan. 3, 1894, is residing in Minneapolis, Ida, born Aug. 17, 1896, is attending the University of Minnesota. Louis, Minn. born Jan. 8, 1901, is at home. The family are members of the Norwegian Lutheran Church in Menomonie.

Rufus Schöber, a well known farmer of the town of Eau Galle, who has made a good record along agricultural lines, was born in Austria, April 13, 1879, son of Ferdinand and Josephine (Wole) Schöber. It was in 1880 that the family came to the United States, locating in Durand, Wisconsin, and for two years thereafter living on a farm in the town of Waterville, Pepin County. In 1882 they came to Dunn County, settling in the town of Eau Galle, where for two years Ferdinand Schober worked for The Knapp, Stout & Co. Company. He then bought a farm of 80 acres in Section 34, which he operated until May 14, 1902, after which his son Rufus took it, the parents moving back to the town of Waterville, Pepin County, where they spent the remainder of their lives in agricultural pursuits. Mrs. Schober passed away first, on June 7, 1916. Mr. Schöber dying July 28, 1917. They were the parents of nine children, of whom six are now living, namely: Rufus, subject of this sketch; Matt, of the town of Eau Galle; John, who lives in Pierce County; August, of the town of Waterville, Pepin County; Bertha, who is now Mrs. Joseph Baier of Eau Galle and Frances G., now Mrs. Frederick Krause of Pierce County, Wis. Rufus Schöber acquired a district school education in the town of Eau Galle, and remained on the home farm assisting his father until 1902. He then took over the 120 acres of the farm on Section 34, which he operated until 1910, when he sold it and bought his present farm of 140 acres in Sections 17 and 18, town of EauGalle. It was a partly improved place but had a poor set of buildings. Mr. Schöber has greatly improved the property by the erection of a new set of buildings. In 1923 he built a fine full basement barn of 34 x 80 feet in ground plan, and furnished with the Olson equipment; and he has also remodeled the house, fenced the entire farm and brought his land into an excellent state of cultivation. He has a good herd of grade Guernsey cattle, with a full bred sire at the head, and also raises Poland-China hogs. The place bears the name of Sunnyside Guernsey Farm, and is pleasantly situated on a broad, level plateau on the summit of the ridge. It bears all the marks of good management and prosperity and is a picturesque spot among the many rural beauties of this part of Dunn County. Mr. Schöber was for seven years a director of Joint School District No. 7. He was married May 5, 1902, to Mrs. Catherine Weber, whose maiden name was Catherine Hofacker, and whose first husband, William Weber, died Oct. 7, 1898, leaving one child, Lucy Isabelle, who was born Aug. 17, 1897. Her father was a native of Kurhessen, Germany, her mother being born at Fort Madison, Iowa, U. S. A. They were married in Eau Galle, Wis., and engaged in farming in this town, where Mrs. Hofacker died on March 4, 1904. In 1907 Conrad Hofacker rented his farm to his son Charles A., and made a trip to Germany, visiting his old On his return to this country he sold the farm and went to reside in Durand, home. where he remained for two years. The next two years he spent in Pierce County, after which he returned to Durand, and later took up his residence in the village of Eau Galle, where he died Sept. 8, 1917. He had married for his second wife, in 1910, Genevieve Pomasol, who survives him and is now a resident of Eau Claire. The children of Mr. Hofacker by his first wife, Wilhelmina, were: Alois, now of Pierce County, Wis.; Joseph A., also of Pierce County; Mary, who is now Mrs. Herman Reitz of Eau Galle; Anna E., wife of John F. Pitman of Waterville, Pepin County, Wis.; Charles A., of Eau Galle; Josephine, who married Alfred De Marce of Waterville and died March 1, 1912, and Catherine, who, as already stated, first married William Weber and is now the wife of Rufus Schöber, subject of this sketch.

Clifford F. Clark, D. D. S., who has successfully practiced his profession in Menomonie for 22 years, was born in the town of Rock Creek, Dunn County, Feb. 3, 1878, son of Jared and Eliza J. (Thompson) Clark. The father, born in Fond du Lac, Wis., came to Dunn County with his parents in 1858, the family settling in the town of Rock Creek among the pioneer farmers there. In 1888 Jared Clark moved to Louisville in the town of Dunn, where he continued in agriculture until 1908, when he sold his farm there and bought a small place in the town of Weston, where he made his home until January, 1920. He then moved to Menomonie, where he died in the following month of February. His wife is still living and now resides with her son, Clifford. There were four children in the family: Clinton W., now of Spokane, Wash.; Clifford F., subject of this sketch; Forest, who is a farmer in the town of Lucas, and Fred, who is farming near Boyceville, Dunn County. Clifford F. Clark acquiring his general education entered the Chicago Dental College, where he pursued the prescribed ccurse of study, being graduated with the class of 1902. In the same year he opened offices in the First National Bank building, Menomonie, where he has since been located. He has built up a good practice, stands high in professional circles and belongs to various societies, including the local, state and American dental societies, the G. V. Blank Dental Club of St. Paul, the Menomonie Rotary Club, and, as a thirty-second degree Mason, to the lodge, chapter, commandery, consistory and shrine of the order. Dr. Clark was married June 30, 1903, in Plattville, Wis., to Grace Wilson, daughter of John H. and Martha O. Wilson. Mrs. Clark's father is now deceased but her mother is living and resides with Mrs. Clark. Dr. and Mrs. Clark are the parents of three children: Jared, born July 7, 1907, and Janet, born Jan. 8, 1909, both of whom are attending high school; and Mary, born Aug. 22, 1918. The family are affiliated with the Congregational Church, of which Mrs. Clark and Janet Clark are members, both being active workers in the church.

Henry Jessel, now deceased, who had a long and creditable record in the agricultural and dairying industry, was born in Mecklenburg-Schwerin, Germany, April 30, 1852, son of Henry J. and Sophia (Schultz) Jessel, the parents also being natives of Germany. The family came to the United States in 1858, landing in New York and at once coming west to Chicago, in which city they remained for a short time. Then they moved to Whitewater, Walworth County, Wis., where Henry J. Jessel for two years and a half worked as a common laborer. They were evidently economical, for at the end of that time Mr. Jessel bought a farm in Monroe County, to which the family moved and where they lived for 17 years. He then traded that farm for one in the town of Clifton in the same county, which he owned for nine years or until 1884, the farm, however, being managed by his son Henry, as by that time Henry J. Jessel was advanced in years and was no longer able to do On May 7, 1884, the family made another change of location, moving hard work. to Dunn County and buying a farm of 160 acres in Section 2 of the town of Spring It was a farm that had been improved to some extent, though the buildings Brook. There he did general farming for many years, his parents residing with him until their death. Gradually he gave more and more attention to dairying, keeping high grade Guernsey cattle with a pure bred sire and conducting the farm successfully until he sold it in the spring of 1915 to his son Louis, and retired, taking up his residence in the village of Elk Mound, where he passed away Nov. 25, 1924. For many years Mr. Jessel was one of the prominent citizens of his town and was active in the affairs of local government. He was supervisor for 15 years, and chairman of the town board for three years, which latter office gave him a seat on the county board and made him one of the factors in county government, as, besides casting his vote on all matters that came up for consideration, he served on a number of important committees. He also served for one year as treasurer of School District No. 5, in the town of Spring Brook. After his retirement, he was still interested in all public questions and in seeing them correctly solved for the welfare of the present and future generations. Mr. Jessel was married May 29, 1877, in the town of Kildare, Juneau County, Wis., to Ernestina Hintzman, who was born in Watertown, Wis., Dec. 18, 1855, daughter of William and Anna (Koplin) Hintzman. Her parents, now deceased, were natives of Germany who came to this country in 1854, first settling in Watertown, Wis., and later moving to Juneau County, where they made their home subsequently until death. Mr. and Mrs. Jessel were the parents of six children, Elinora, Minnie L., Emma, Lora, Louis H., and Irwin, whose further record, in brief, is as follows. Elinora, born March 28, 1878, is now Mrs. Edward Ausman of Elk Mound, Dunn County. Minnie L., born March 28, 1881, became the wife of Emil S. Gregorson and died in June, 1918, leaving two children, Frederick and Helen. Emma, born Sept. 11, 1884, is living at home with her parents. Lora, born April 14, 1887, is the wife of Frank Livingston of Wolf Point, Mont., and has two children, John and Robert. Louis H., born June 24, 1891, and who is now operating the old home farm, as its owner, married Ida Witcher, and has two children, Beatrice and Merton. Irwin, born Sept. 28, 1894, who lives in Elk Mound, married Mabel Benson and has two children, Lois and Dale. Mr. Jessel was affiliated religiously with the Evangelical Trinity Church of Elk Mound, to which the family belong.

William A. Smith, the present sheriff of Dunn County, was born in Menomonie, Wis., Aug. 25, 1885, son of Henry D. and Anna E. (Gebert) Smith. The father was born on a farm in Sheboygan County, Wisconsin. His father (paternal grandfather of William A.) having died, the mother remarried and the family moved to Clark County, Wisconsin. In 1876 Henry D. Smith came to Dunn County and located on the Chippewa Bottoms. It was in the year 1881 that he married Anna E. Gebert of the town of Menomonie, and a year later he and his wife moved to the city of Menomonie. Later they moved to Grassland in the town of Red Cedar, Mr. D. Smith finding employment with Peter Wilson. Two years later he entered the employ of Eliza Wilson on a farm in the town of Spring Brook, and for her he worked for ten years. He then moved to Menomonie, occupying a house on Ninth Street, where he spent his last years. In 1904 he suffered a paralytic shock, but it was not until Sept. 10, 1921, that he finally passed away. In politics he was a Republican and he and his wife were members of the German Lutheran Church. Mrs. Anna E. Smith is still living and resides with her daughter Mrs. Milton Swant of Menomonie. Mr. and Mrs. Henry D. Smith were the parents of five children, namely: Emma E., born July 8, 1883, now Mrs. Milton Swant of Menomonie; William A., born as already mentioned, Aug. 25, 1885; Louise, born Nov. 26, 1889, who is now Mrs. A. Hennesy of Alhambra, Calif. Allen L. born Nov. 19. 1894. now a resident of Springfield, Ill.; and Grace G., born June 10, 1899, who died May 28, 1903. William A. Smith in his youth passed through the eight grades of the common school, after which he learned the trade of painting and paperhanging, which he followed until 1924, when he was elected to the office of sheriff He entered upon the duties of that office on Jan. 1, 1925, taking up his residence in the county jail, though he owns a good home at No. 1320 Ninth Street, Menomonie. Politically he has always been a Republican. For 13 years he was a member of Company H (The Ludington Guard), and at one time served as second lieutenant. His election to the office of sheriff proves him to be a man well and favorably known throughout Dunn County, and his friends have confidence in his ability to make a good record as a county official. William A. Smith was married, April 5, 1913, to Olga C. Olson, daughter of Charles and Carrie Olson of Menomonie. Her parents, natives of Norway, for years conducted a hotel in Menomonie, but both are now deceased, the father having passed away in 1900 and the mother in 1922. They had a family of four children: Olga C., now Mrs. William A. Smith; Inga, wife of Henry Lang of Menomonie; Clarence of Seattle, Wash.; and Martha, also residing in Seattle, Wash. Mr. and Mrs. William A. Smith have been the parents of three children. Emily Grace, born Oct. 28, 1914; Helen C., born March 12, 1917, and Mary F., born Jan. 15, 1918. The last mentioned died June 11, 1919. Mrs. Smith, who was graduated from the Dunn County Normal School, taught rural school for a year in Dunn County.

August Zitelman, a resident of Menomonie for many years engaged in railroad work. was born in Pommern, Germany, Aug. 31, 1863, son of John F. and Louise (Swant) Zitelman. The mother having died in Germany, the father married again and in 1882 came to America, landing at New York, August 6, after a voyage lasting six weeks, the delay having been caused by the breaking of a shaft. The family came direct to Menomonie, Wis., where John F. Zitelman went to work for the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company, in whose employ he remained for the rest of his life, or for as long as he was able to work. He died June 7, 1897. There were two children in the family: August and William F., both now living in Menomonie: August Zitelman attended school in Germany and was a youth of 19 when he came to the United States. In his native land he had served a partial apprenticeship to the trade of blacksmith, which he finished in the employ of the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company, for whom he worked ten months, and he subsequently followed that trade until 1887. November 27, that year, he entered the employ of the Omaha Railway Company at Altoona, Wis., as engine wiper, remaining there for one year. He then returned to Menomonie and went to work as fireman on the "stub" line connecting this city with Menomonie Junction. Later he operated the pumping stations between Hudson and Woodville and ran the crusher engine at Wilson. From 1894 to 1897 he was engineer of the pile driver during the summer months, working between St. Paul and Elroy and on the Northern and Western divisions. On June 7, 1897, he was ordered to Hudson to work on the pile driver between that place and Northline, and while the crew were returning after dinner from Hudson to Northline, they had a bad wreck and six members of the crew, which were all except himself, were killed. He had one of his legs broken in two places his nose broken, his body badly skinned, and he was also badly bruised in various places. On the same day his father died, but he knew nothing of the latter's death for several days afterwards. Since he recovered from the accident he has been fireman on the "stub" train running between Menomonie and the Junction. Mr. Zitelman was married July 1, 1885, in Menomonie, Wis., to Louise Ebert, daughter of Christ and Dorothy Ebert; both her parents are now deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Zitelman are the parents of three children, Henry T., Agnes M. and Clarence W. Henry T., who is a director of manual training in the north side high school of Minneapolis, married Dorothy Bryne and they have three children, Onetta, Lois and Stanley. Agnes M., is now Mrs. Joy Hanson of Menomonie and has one child, Marion. Clarence W. is time keeper for the Wisconsin-Minnesota Light and Power Company. The Zitelmans have a good family home at 1102 Tenth Street, Menomonie. They are members of the German M. E. Church and Mr. Zitelman is a blue lodge and chapter Mason.

Oliver Thompson, a farmer in Section 10, town of Menomonie, was born in this town Sept. 10, 1866, son of Ole and Berget (Strandrud) Thompson. The parents were natives of Norway who came to the United States in 1860, residing for a while near Muskego, Waukesha County, Wis., whence they came to Dunn County in 1861, taking land in Section 11, town of Menomonie, which they developed into a In 1884 they sold that place and bought 120 acres in Sections 10 and 11, farm. where they built up another farm. That was their last earthly home, as Ole Thompson died there in December, 1898, and his wife 20 years later, in 1918. Though a farmer during a large period of his life, his original trade was that of carpenter, and he worked at it occasionally both in his own neighborhood and in the city of Menomonie. He was prominent among his neighbors and for several years served on the town board of supervisors. Mr. and Mrs. Ole Thompson were the parents of 13 children, as follows: James, deceased, Bessie, now Mrs. Frank Gray, residing in Idaho; Anton, a farmer in the town of Menomonie; Knute and Oliver, residing on the old home farm; Theodore, a farmer in the town of Menomonie: Benjamin, in Idaho Helen and Bertha, deceased; Simon, now in Idaho; Anna, wife of Pete Peterson of the town of Dunn; and Tony and William, who died in infancy. Oliver Thompson as a boy attended District School No. 5, in the town of Menom-When older he became connected with the lumber industry, working in the onie. woods for several years. Later he made several trips to the Pacific coast. After his father's death in 1898 he returned home and with his twin brother Knute has since been engaged in operating the home farm, they taking care of their mother unti her death. Neither of them has ever married.

Peter Olson, proprietor of a good farm in the town of Tainter, was born in Norway in 1854, son of Ole and Ingeburg Olson. The parents were farmers until Ole Olson died. His wife, surviving him, passed away in the year 1900. Peter Olson was reared in his native land, where he attended school, afterwards working out In 1882 he came to the United States to better his fortune, settling for three years. first at Whitehall in Trempealeau County, Wis. For two years he worked on farms in that vicinity; then came to Dunn County and worked on farms here. In 1900 he started in for himself, buying 160 acres of land in Section 2, town of Tainter, of which ten acres was broken. His time since then has been spent in improving this property, including the clearing of the land and the erection of substantial and convenient buildings. He now has 120 acres under the plow, the balance being in pasture. He has $\overline{23}$ head of grade cattle and is carrying on general farming and dairying with good results. Mr. Olson was married in Norway in 1881, to Mattie Bergh, daughter of Gilbert and Gunda Bergh, and her parents, both natives of that country, are now deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Peter Olson have had 11 children, of whom nine are now living, namely, Palmer, Ole, Mary, Helmer, Louise, Dora, Melvin, Nickoli and Eleanor. Mary is the wife of H. Erickson of the town of Otter Creek; Louise the wife of Fred Evenson of Hudson, and Dora the wife of Charles Evenson of Hudson. Nickoli enlisted for service in the World War and trained in Mississippi but was not called out of this country. The two deceased are Peter and Levi.

Harrison Dodge, a pioneer farmer of Dunn County, now passed away, but who in his day was well known and as widely respected, was born in the state of Maine, Oct. 21, 1816. He grew to manhood in his native state and there married Martha Webb, who was born in Maine, Jan. 9, 1820. In 1856 they came west to Rock County, Wis., and from there to Dunn County in 1859. In the town of Spring Brook Mr. Dodge bought 360 acres of government land, the tract being all wild except that on one of the "eighties" which constituted it, a squatter named Ritter had erected a shanty and was living there with his wife. Not wishing to disturb them, Mr. Dodge let them remain for a while; but a little later a man named Archie Dickson came along looking for a piece of land to settle on, and Mr. Dodge, wanting some good neighbors, sold him the 'eighty." The Ritters were obliged to move and Mr. Dickson remained on that place for many years, in fact until he was an old man, when he moved to Platte, S. D. When Mr. Dodge began to develop his farm he began at the beginning, building a primitive log house and barn and in time gradually increasing the number and improving the quality of his buildings. In the early days there was an abundance of game in the vicinity, including bear, deer and tim-His improvement of the land kept pace with that in his buildings, or, ber wolves. rather, preceded it, and his well cultivated, well fenced fields presented the pleasing picture of many broad acres of waving grain. It was in the year 1863 that he replaced his original log dwelling with a good frame house, which was an important event in his life. The rough timber was hauled from Menomonie, and the window frames and doors were made on Mr. Dodge's place; Warren Potter and Woodbury Grover, contractors, built the house. Thus Mr. Dodge advanced in prosperity, working hard for success and being ably assisted by his faithful, loving and highly efficient wife. He named the place Lyndale Stock Farm and as such it was known There Mr. Dodge passed away on Feb. 22, 1902, and his wife Jan. 19, far and wide. 1897. Mr. and Mrs. Dodge had a large family, numbering in all ten children, only two of whom, however, are now living. They were as follows: Abbie, born April 27, 1840; Alvin, May 6, 1843; Sylvania, Feb. 15, 1845; Alfonse, Feb. 2, 1847; Charlotte, Oct. 4, 1849; Artemus, April 27, 1851; Lorenzo, Feb. 4, 1854; Augustus, Sept. 7, 1856; Eliza, June 9, 1858, and Jackson, Oct. 27, 1862. The two survivors are the two youngest, Eliza and Jackson, the former of whom married Frank Webster and is now a widow residing in Menomonie.

Jackson Dodge, for many years proprietor of Lyndale Stock Farm, an estate founded by his father in the town of Spring Brook some 45 years ago, was born on the property mentioned, Oct. 27, 1862. His parents were Harrison and Martha (Webb) Dodge. He acquired his elementary education in a rural school and also attended school in Menomonie for a short period. He always remained at home, helping his parents to develop the home farm and his personal work was a large factor in its improvement. In the early days that work was sufficiently strenuous, being nearly all done by hand, but it became easier with the introduction of machinery, though even then at the end of each day Mr. Dodge knew he had been working. In 1896 he took over the management of the farm, then consisting of 280 acres, and in 1902 at the time of his father's death he became its owner as willed by the father. He continued to improve it, devoting considerable attention to dairving, as that branch of farming was growing in importance and proving more renumerative. He kept shorthorn cattle with a full blooded sire in his herd, and soon became one of the most prominent dairy farmers in his part of the county. He also cleared additional land and erected a full basement barn of 36 x 72 feet, and put running water into the barn and house. Besides attending to his personal interests he served for six years as treasurer of his school district. In 1921 Mr. Dodge, feeling that the time was drawing near when it would be advisable for him to retire from active work, bought an attractive and comfortable house in the city of Menomonie. at No. 1103 Sixth Street, and in 1924 he turned the farm over to his son Andrew J., who is now conducting it, having changed the breed of stock from Shorthorn to Brown Swiss cattle, and took up his abode in the city in the house mentioned, where he and his wife have since made their home. Mr. Dodge was married Jan. 11, 1891, to Climena Stephens, who was born in the town of Spring Brook, Dunn County, April 14, 1871, daughter of Andrew and Harriet (Beeman) Stephens. Mr. and Mrs. Dodge are the parents of six children, Bertha, Hazel D., Andrew J., Elden, James and Ruth, of whom the following is a brief record. Bertha, who was born Nov. 9, 1891, is now Mrs. Emil Jensen, her husband being one of the leading young farmers of the county and a breeder of Brown Swiss cattle. Their farm is in the town of Spring Brook, and was originally started by Mrs. Dodge's grandfather, John Stephens. Mr. and Mrs. Jensen have two children, Raymond and Mildred. Hazel D., born Dec. 1, 1892, is now Mrs. Richard R. Carryl of New York City and the mother of two children, Marion and Kathleen. Andrew J. is, as already stated, conducting the Lyndale Stock Farm established by his grandfather and subsequently carried on and improved by his father. He married Lillian Fregein and has a son, Leonard. Elden, born Nov. 27, 1903, is a graduate of the Dunn County Agricultural College and resides at home with his parents. James, born June 27, 1906, is a student in the Dunn County Agricultural College and resides at home. Ruth, born July 24, 1909, is also a student in the Dunn County Agricultural College The family are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

John Stephens.-Nearly 70 years ago, or, to speak more accurately, in the year 1856, a heavy wagon or cart, drawn by a team of stolid oxen, might have been seen winding its lumbering way through the timber and brush that then covered most of the present town of Spring Brook, until, a suitable location being found, a halt was called and the newly arrived settlers proceeded to make themselves at home in the wilderness, or rather to establish the foundations of a future home that in course of time was to be one of the best and most desirable in that locality. These pioneer settlers were. John Stephens and his family, from Illinois. John Stephens was an Englishman, having been born on a farm known as the "Polmagan Farm," in the parish of St. Winnow, Cornwall, England, May 20, 1800. On July 19, 1823, he married Mary Harding, daughter of William and Mary (Ead) Harding, and they became the parents of 11 children. It was nearly 26 years from the date of the parents' marriage when they decided to seek a home in America, and on April 3, 1849, the family of 13 persons took passage for America on board of a small sailing vessel called the "Adelaide," and started on the voyage across the Atlantic. Six weeks later they landed at Quebec, Canada, but they spent practically no time there, coming at once to the States and stopping at Ashtabula, Ohio, where they remained until the fall of the year. They then packed up their belongings, boarded a steamboat on Lake Erie and came by way of the Great Lakes to a port in Illinoisperhaps Waukegan—and then after a journey overland of 40 or 50 miles, they found themselves in McHenry County, that state. They bought land at Chemung, near Harvard Junction and remained there until 1856, when they came to Dunn County, as already described. Mr. Stephens' land in the town of Spring Brook consisted of 240 acres and its development involved the inevitable hard work, privations, and slow progress of the average pioneer. But progress was made, nevertheless, the signs of civilization multiplied, and in the Stephens family comfort and, to a moderate extent, even wealth, took the place of poverty and hardship. In later years the place was generally known as the William Stephens Farm, owing to its being then owned and operated by Mr. Stevens' son William. John Stephens, the pioneer, died May 14, 1880, his wife having passed away less than five years previously, on Aug. 13, 1875. Of their children it is well to make particular mention of their son Andrew, who became the father of Mrs. Jackson Dodge. Andrew Stephens was born at Bridge End, near Lostwithiel, Cornwall, England, on July 24, 1845, and so was a very young child when he accompanied his parents to America. He was about 11 when he arrived in Dunn County, Wisconsin. Here he grew to manhood on his parents' farm, which he helped to improve. He was married April 25, 1869 to Harriet Beeman, her father, the Rev. Daniel Beeman, a Methodist Episcopal clergyman, performing the ceremony, and for many years thereafter they enjoyed life as successful farmers in the town of Spring Brook. They had four children: Climena, born April 14, 1871, now the wife of Jackson Dodge (familiarly known as Jack Dodge) of Menomonie; Rose, born March 9, 1874, who died Dec. 21, the same year; John Wesley, born Nov. 1, 1879, who died Oct. 17, 1881; and Ruth L., born Nov. 11, 1882, now the wife of William Miller of the town of Red Cedar, Dunn County. Mrs. Harriet Stephens, the mother, died Sept. 27, 1887, and on May 23, 1892, Mr. Stephens married for his second wife Isabelle Squires, who died Sept. 12, 1919.

William Stephens, a son of the John Stephens mentioned in the preceeding biography. was born on the "Polmagan Farm" in the parish of St. Winnow, Cornwall, England, July 9, 1841. He accompanied his parents to America in 1849, landing with them at Quebec, thence coming west to Ashtabula, Ohio, and in the fall of that year settling in McHenry County, Illinois, where they remained until they came to Dunn County in 1856. On July 1, 1877 William Stephens married

MR. AND MRS. SYDNEY DODGE

Emma Sleppy of Randolph, Dcdge County, Wis. In time he became the owner of 120 acres of the original Stephens farm in the town of Spring Brook, which he had helped to create, and there he carried on agriculture until his death on Feb. 3, 1922. He was a man of solid worth, one who took and active part in promoting the best moral, social and educational interests of the county, and for many years was a member and firm supporter of the M. E. Church. His wife Emma passed away before him, on July 1, 1915. They had been the parents of four children: Grace, who died in infancy; Anna Elizabeth, born Sept. 5, 1879, who married John K, Young and died March 24, 1898; Lily Sophia, born July 5, 1889, who married William Tubbs and is now a widow residing in Downsville; and William H., born May 28, 1893, now of Tarrytown, N. Y.

Christian Johnson, founder and proprietor of the Concrete Silo Manufacturing Co. of Wheeler, was born in Fillmore County, Minn., Sept. 29, 1872, son of Lars and Marit (Roen) Johnson. He was brought to Dunn County in 1876 by his parents, who located on a farm in the town of Otter Creek. There he attended district school and helped his parents until 29 years old, when he began agricultural operations on his own account, buying a farm of 80 acres in the same town. After farming the place for four years he sold it and, buying property in Wheeler, established his present business in the manufacture of cement blocks, which he has since conducted very successfully. Mr. Johnson was married Dec. 19, 1902, to Iva Marion Dodge, daughter of Sidney W. and Ella (Darling) Dodge. He and his wife are members of the Evangelical Church.

Sydney W. Dodge, a retired farmer, and a veteran of the Civil War, was born in Herkimer County, New York, July 13, 1843. At the age of four years he accompanied his parents to Big Brook, Ill., they later moving to Wisconsin and settling near Lake Geneva. There he attended school for a while, but had to move with them to a farm near Delevan, and it was in the vicinity of the latter place that he completed his schooling. He was not yet 18 when the Civil War broke out and thousands of patriotic youths enlisted to defend the Union. Among them was Sydney W. Dodge, who on April 13, 1861, enlisted to serve three years, becoming a member of Commpany F, Fourth Regiment Wis. Vol. Inf., this command being later transferred to the cavalry branch of the service. At the expiration of his term of service he reenlisted for three years more in the same company and regiment, and served until mustered out in June, 1866. Mr. Dodge saw some real fighting during his soldier days and was wounded five times, on four of those occasions at Port Hudson and once while on scout duty, and spent some time in St. Charles Hospital at New Orleans. After receiving his discharge, he returned home and engaged in farming for himself in the town of Sherman, Dunn County, taking a homestead of 80 acres of timber land. In attempting to transform that considerable tract of tall trees thrusting their roots deep down into the soil, into a fertile farm showing fields of grain and open pastures, Mr. Dodge was confronting a harder task than that of fighting rebels, but he attacked it and stayed there eight years, at the end of which time he had a set of log buildings and had cleared about 10 acres. He then sold the place and moved to a farm of 80 acres in the town of Hay River. Α little later he sold 40 acres of that to the Minnesota Brick Co., and still later disposed of the remaining 40. Then buying 80 acres of railroad land in the town of Otter Creek, he farmed it until 1907, in which year he sold his farm and bought his present home in the village of Wheeler. He was a member of the school board of his district for three years and for an equal length of time served as road commis-For many years he has been a member of the G. A. R. It was in May, sioner. 1863, while Mr. Dodge was home on a furlough, that he was united in marriage with Ella Darling, with whom he lived in happy wedlock for 60 years, he death occurring Oct. 4, 1923. They became the parents of five children, Irene, Cora, Maude, Earl and Marion. Irene and Cora are deceased. Maude is now Mrs. John Coombs of Intake, Mont., Mr. Coombs, being a section foreman on the Northern Pacific railway; they have two children of their own and an adopted son, named Paul. Earl, a section foreman on the "Soo" road, residing at Stanley, Wis, married Bertha Andress and they have a son, Ralph. Marion is the wife of Christian Johnson of Wheeler, cement block manufacturer, and Mr. and Mrs. Johnson reside with Mr. Dodge. The family attend the Evangelical Church.

George W. La Pointe, Jr., president of the La Pointe Lumber Co., and secretarh and manager of the O. and N. Lumber Co. of Menomonie, was born in Detroit, Mich., Aug. 5, 1873, son of George W. and Jennie (Wilson) La Pointe. The father was born in Monroe, Mich., and the mother at Fort Madison, Iowa. The latter came to Menomonie when a small child with her parents, her father being Capt. William Wilson, one of the earliest settlers here and one of the original members of the concern later known as The Knapp, Stout & Co. Company. It was while George W. La Pointe, Sr., was on a leave of absence from the army and visiting his home at Monroe, Mich., that he became acquainted with Miss Wilson, who was attending a ladies' seminary there. They were married in Menomonie, Wis. George W. La Point, Sr., who served in the Civil War with the rank of colonel, after the war held a government position in the custom-house at Detroit. In 1874 he moved to Wilson, St. Croix County, Wis., to engage in the lumber business. After finishing his timber cut in that vicinity, he entered the mercantile and real estate field and was thus occupied for many years. He and his wife are now living retired in the village of Wilson, St. Croix County. They are the parents of two children: George W., Jr., of Menomonie, and William, who succeeded to his father's business at Wilson. George W. La Pointe, Jr., was graduated from Shattuck Military School at Faribault, Minn., with the class of 1893, and from Cornell University in 1897, as a law student. Though admitted to the bar, he has never practiced law, having confined his attention to the logging and lumbering business. Up to 1911 he operated several small mills, and then, having bought out the Wilson-Weaver Lumber Co., he changed the name of the concern to the La Pointe Lumber Co. He holds the office of president and is engaged in the retail lumber business. In 1915 he founded the O. & N. Lumber Co., which is composed of the John S. Owen Lumber Co., the Northwestern Lumber Co., and himself, and this concern operates a chain of 35 yards scattered throughout Dunn and adjoining counties. Mr. La Pointe served this main company in the capacity of secretary and general manager. He is and has been for years a strong and active factor in the material progress of Menomonie and the surrounding territory. He is a member of the Commercial Club and Rotary Club, and also of the Menomonie Country and Golf Club. He was married July 1, 1916, in Chicago, to Irene Walker of Duluth, daughter of Frank and Eleanor (Kelly) Walker.

Charles J. Owen, deputy sheriff of Dunn County, residing in North Menomonie, was born in Farmington, Tioga County, Penn., Sept. 5, 1860, son of Isaac B. and Julia A. (Marks) Owen. The father was native of New York State and the mother While living in Pennsylvania Isaac B. Owen followed farming. of Pennsylvania. In 1872, he brought his family to Dunn County, Wis., locating at Cedar Falls, in the town of Red Cedar, where he engaged in general contracting and building and was thus occupied in that locality up to 1878. He then moved to Minneapolis and later in Spokane, Wash., where he continued in the building business until he was 80 years old. He died at the age of 84. His wife Julia died in Dunn County in 1874, when only 33 years of age and is buried at Cedar Falls. Charles J. Owen attended public school in Pennsylvania and also at Cedar Falls, Dunn County, Wis. He remained with his parents, and after his mother's death, with his father, until the latter left Dunn County. He then entered the mills to learn the trade of sawyer, at first learning to saw shingles and later running band and rotary saws on general work. He was with the Cedar Falls Manufacturing Co. and for several years with the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company, remaining with the latter company until they closed out their business. After that he worked for other companies in a similar position until 1905. In that year he changed his occupation, going to New Richmond, Wis., where he was proprietor of the National Hotel for one year and later for eight years of the Central Hotel. In 1913 he returned to Menomonie, where he has since resided. While living in the town of Red Cedar, Mr. Owen in 1896-97 was a member of the town board. He was deputy sheriff in 1919-20, was then elected sheriff to serve in 1921-22, and being again appointed deputy, is now serving in that office. He is also supervisor from the first ward of North Menomonie and by virtue of that office is a member of the county board and helps to shape the policies of local government. Fraternally he is affiliated with the Odd Fellows and the Knights of Pythias. Mr. Owen was married Oct. 17, 1881, to Roxy Lenora Hawley of Menomonie, who, after 32 years of married life, during which she discharged her full duties as wife and mother, died Nov. 30, 1913. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Owen, seven in number, have been as follows: Harry N., now of St. Paul, Minn., who married Mary Quinlan and is the father of four children, Alice, Harriet, Howard and Lloyd; Mark, who died at the age of 11 months; George, of Eau Claire, Wis., who married Louis La Marsh; Nellie L., who married E. D. Wells and resides at Carlisle, Mont., has six children, Eva, Geraldine, Charles, Grenfall, Lemuel and Loraine; William R., who now lives in Denver, Colo., married Gladys Stratton of New Auburn, Wis., and has three children, Harry, June and John; Charles Lemuel, who was killed in France in the Great World War; and Beatrice Loraine, who is a student in the Menomonie High School. The family residence is at No. 14 Railroad Avenue and their church is the Methodist Episcopal. The personal record of Charles Lemuel Owen, including war service, is as follows: He was born at Cedar Falls, Dunn County, July 19, 1897. From 1905 to 1913 he attended school in New Richmond, residing with his parents, and he was one of the first boy scouts to enroll in that city. He subsequently lived at New Auburn and in 1914 again took up his home in Dunn County, at North Menomonie. In 1916 he enlisted for military service in Company H, and during the summer of that year served on the Mexican border. Early in 1917 after the United States entered the World War, and when his company was stationed at Superior, Wis., he was promoted to the rank of corporal, was subsequently stationed at Waco, Texas, and served in France as a member of Company H, 128th Inf., 32d Division. He was killed in action Oct. 20, 1918. In 1921 his father brought his remains back to America and he was buried with military honors in Cedar Falls cemetery.

Gottfried F. Stobb, a member of the "retired" colony in Menomonie, whose active career was spent in agriculture in Dunn County, was born in West Prussia, Germany, March 30, 1858, son of Gottfried and Minnie (Gerbginsky) Stobb. The parents came to America with their family in 1873, settling first in the city of Guelph, Ontario, Canada, where they remained for three years and a half. In 1877 they came to the States, locating in the town of Menomonie, Dunn County, where they bought 40 acres of wild timber land and began the life of pioneer farmers. This they did by making a clearing and building a log house, and with the help of his wife and children Mr. Stobb made fair progress. Later he added another 40 acres which adjoined his original property, and there he continued his agricultural operations until his death in 1887. His wife survived him until 1916, when she passed away at the venerable age of 92 years and 20 days. They were the parents of seven children, namely: Caroline, now Mrs. Fred Oferofsky of the town of Stanton, Dunn County; Minnie, who died in 1915; Mary, who, having married Anton Nier, went west with him, where she and four children were drowned; Charles, of Minneapolis; Gottfried of North Menomonie; Fred, who was accidentally shot, thereby losing his life; and August, who resides at Snohomish, Wash. Gottfried F. Stobb first attended school in Germany. He accompanied his parents to Canada and to Dunn County, Wisconsin, and helped to develop their farm in the town of Menomonie, working on it until he was 22 years old. He then began his own agricultural career, buying a tract of 80 acres of wild land in the town of Sherman, this county, on which he built a house and barns, with other necessary buildings, and where he was engaged in farming until 1885, in which year his wife died. They had been married on Nov. 29, 1879, her maiden name being Fredericka Mr. Stobb, being left with three young children, sold his farm and went Suckow. back to the parental homestead, which he conducted until his father's death in 1887, when he became its owner. There he continued in general farming until 1911, when he sold that place and bought a fine farm of 160 acres in the town of Elk Mound. This was partly improved, having a good house and set of buildings on it. Mr. Stobb took his mother to it and subsequently cared for her until her death in 1916.

In the following year he sold that farm to his son and retired from active work, taking up his residence in the city in a good house he had previously purchased. Mr. Stobb's children by his first wife, already referred to, were: Lena, now Mrs. Edward Krueger of Eau Claire, Wis.; William, who also lives in Eau Claire; and Tilda, who is the wife of Emil Peter of North Menomonie. Mr. Stobb was married secondly on April 17, 1887, to Minnie Finder, and they have had four children, who are as follows: Amelia, wife of George Hornberger of the town of Red Cedar, Dunn County; Emma, who is Mrs. William Rose of the town of Elk Mound; Arthur, who is the present owner of his father's last farm, and who married Olga Frogner; and Annie, who is Mrs. George Lemke of Menomonie. The Stobb's record deserves preservation as that of one of the hardy builders up of the agricultural interests of the county. He also served his town at one time as path master and was an influential citizen in most local affairs. He and his wife, who has proved a good helpmate to him, are now taking their ease to compensate for their many years of arduous toil.

Maurice J. Birge, proprietor of an excellent drug store in Elk Mound, which he has conducted successfully for the last nine years, was born in the town of Wilson, Dunn County, Wis., June 20, 1888, son of Gunder and Martha Birge. The parents, natives of Norway, after coming to the United States, settled first in La Crosse County, Wis. In 1874 they came to Dunn County, locating in the town of Wilson, where they remained until 1898. They then moved to Eau Claire, where they spent their last years, both being now deceased. The education of the subject of this sketch was begun in the public schools of Eau Claire, after which he took an academic course in Gale College at Galesville, Wis. With this educational foundation he entered the Minnesota Institute of Pharmacy in Minneapolis, from which he was graduated with the class of 1912, being registered in South Dakota, Iowa and Wisconsin. Then until April, 1915, he worked in different drug stores in Minnesota, South Dakota, Iowa and Nebraska. In the month and year last mentioned he came to Elk Mound, Wis., and purchased the drug business of William Nussbaum, which he has since conducted, carrying a complete line of drugs, together with a select assortment of stationary, kodaks and smokers' supplies. His store is one that adds weight and impressiveness to the business interests of the village, and in addition to his activities in this direction, Mr. Birge has always shown himself ready to lend a helping hand in promoting the general interests of the community. He is a member of the local colony of Beavers, which he is now serving as secretary. Mr. Birge was married in Ettrick, Trempealeau County, Wis., on June 29, 1916, to Anna Peterson, daughter of Iver and Mary (Nelson) Peterson. Her mother resides in Ettrick, the father being deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Birge are the parents of two children: Marjorie Anna, born July 15, 1919, and Mary Jenis, born June 8, 1922.

Albert H. Larsen, an enterprising and successful farmer of the town of Stanton, proprietor of Pleasant Knoll Dairy Farm, Registered, was born in this town, April 30, 1888, son of Hans and Olena (Larson) Larsen. He acquired his education in the common school at Knapp, which he left at the age of 17 to take up the sterner duties of life. After helping his parents on the home farm until 1910, he and his brother, Fred W., rented it and operated it together until the spring of 1912. Then until the fall of 1914 Albert H. operated it alone under rental, after which he bought the west 80 acres, which was cleared but had no buildings on it. These he supplied, putting up a good set of modern frame construction. In addition to the house and barn he has a machine shed, poultry house, milk house, hog house, garage, woodshed, corn crib, silo and granary. He is engaged in general farming and dairying, keeping good grade and pure bred Guernsey cattle, with a pure bred sire. He also raises Chester-White hogs. The farm buildings are lighted by an acetylene gas plant, and the barn has a cement floor and is provided with steel stanchions. Mr. Larsen has now between 45 and 50 acres under cultivation and milks usually about 12 cows. His farm lies just outside the village of Knapp, to the northeast. Since 1918 he has served as treasurer of the town of Stanton. He is politically a Republican but in local elections considers the man before the party. Mr. Larsen was married Dec. 28, 1911, to Olive M. Clack, daughter of Henry and Lena (Beemis) Clack of the town of Sherman, her parents having been early settlers in Dunn County. She was born on their farm in that town Dec. 11, 1889, and was graduated with the class of 1908 from the tenth grade of the Knapp school. After a two years' course in the River Falls Normal School she staught school two years in Joint District No. 8 of the town of Sherman and Tainter. Mr. and Mrs. Larsen are members and active workers in the Baptist Church at Knapp. They have one child, Margaret Elaine, who was born Jan. 3, 1922.

Destin J. Cummings, who for 21 years was an active farmer in the town of Dunn, but is now living retired in the city of Menomonie in a comfortable residence which he earned in his years of toil, was born in Sheboygan County, Wisconsin, April 25, 1850, son of Örin and Katherine (Coleman) Cummings. The parents were natives of New York, who came west in the early 40's, locating first in Sheboygan County, Wis., where they remained until May, 1858, when they came to Dunn County. Here they located at Forest Center in the town of Spring Brook, the place being named by Mrs. Cummings. Orin Cummings purchased 107 acres on the banks of the Chippewa River. Having been slightly disabled not long before, he was unable to do hard work on his property, consequently the bulk of it fell to the lot of his sons, the eldest of whom was Destin J. The mother passed away in 1866, leaving a family of four small children, and thereafter the only daughter, Anna, did the housework for the family until her marriage. The father died The children of Mr. and Mrs. Orin Cummings were: Destin J.; June 4, 1892. Anna, who is now Mrs. Charles Powers of Owen, Wis.; Leander, of Sidney, Mont.; and Eugene, who is a farmer in the town of Spring Brook, Dunn County. Destin J. Cummings acquired what little schooling he had in the district schools, and remained on the home farm until 25 years of age. From that time until 1883 he operated rented farms and then purchased 80 acres in the town of Dunn, which was a tract There, undismayed by the prospect of hard work before him, of wild stump land. he proceeded to make a home. When he left the farm in 1904 he had 50 acres cleared and a complete set of buildings on it, the whole constituting a desirable piece of agricultural property. After retiring he rented it for a few years and then sold it, and since 1904 he has lived in Menomonie in the comfortable residence already mentioned at 302 Twelfth Avenue. Mr. Cummings was married April 25, 1875, at Louisville, Dunn County, to Lucy Yoder, who was born in Elkhart County, Indiana, May 11, 1857, daughter of John and Caroline (Keck) Yoder. Her parents came to Dunn County in 1883, settling in the town of Tainter, where they took a homestead and proved up, but instead of continuing to farm the place, sold it and went east. Later they returned to Dunn County and for several years farmed at Forest Center, in the town of Spring Brook, subsequently spending their last years in Mr. and Mrs. Cummings have been the parents of two children: Menomonie. Charles V., born Feb. 14, 1876, and Ida, born Sept. 13, 1878. Charles V. remained at home with his parents until the breaking out of the Spanish-American war, when he enlisted and died while in the service. Ida is now the wife of Louis St. Louis of Menomonie, and has had three children, of whom the first born, Laura May, is Her two surviving children are Lyle Luverne and Sibyl. Mr. and Mrs. deceased. Cummings are members of the Old Settlers' Association of Dunn County and are widely known and highly esteemed.

Peter A. Weber, proprietor of Oak Valley Farm in Section 15, town of Weston, was born in the town of Eau Galle, Dunn County, Wis., Dec. 24, 1870, son of Bernard and Legartha (Lathler) Weber. The parents came to this country from Germany when young and were married in Wisconsin in the 60's, locating in the town of Eau Galle, Dunn County, in what was known as the Weber settlement. There they continued to reside until Mrs. Weber's death in 1881. In the year following that event Mr. Weber moved to the town of Weston, buying of "Jack" Carson the old Lemon farm of 160 acres in Section 15, which he operated up to within a few years of his death. He died Sept. 30, 1899. He and his wife were the parents of four children, Peter A., Mary, Lena and Kate. Mary, who married Levi Everett lives in Pepin County. Lena and Kate are both deceased. Peter A. Weber as a boy attended school in the towns of Eau Galle and Weston and remained with his parents, taking over the home farm a short time before his father's death. He has added 240 acres to it and now owns 400 acres. He has also erected a complete set of new buildings, including a barn of 36 x 96 feet in ground plan, a fine eightroom house, and a silo measuring 14 x 42 feet. He used a Delco lighting system for illumination and his farm is now one of the best in the town of Weston. His cattle are Guernseys, including a pure bred sire, and he is a stockholder in the Downsville Creamery. He has served as a member of the District school board and as trustee of the village of Weston, and is fraternally affiliated with the Beavers. Mr. Weber was married Nov. 26, 1890, to Mary E. Bates, who was born in the town of Weston, Dec. 28, 1873, daughter of Charles and Josephine (Haag) Bates. To Mr. and Mrs. Weber have been born seven children, as follows: Charles, Feb. 25, 1897; Elizabeth, June 25, 1899; Anna J., July 7, 1901; William, Aug. 23, 1903; Ida, Nov. 26, 1905; John L., Feb. 11, 1908; and Clarence A., April 28, 1910. Charles, who owns and operates his farm in the town of Weston, residing in Section 10, married Emma Wolfe, and has one child, Bernard, born March 21, 1924. Elizabeth, who is Mrs. Amandus Krueger of Weston village, has two children, Dorothy M., born June 20, 1920, and Arthur J., March 25, 1922. Anna J. is now Mrs. Oscar Weber of the town of Eau Galle and the mother of one child, James C., born March 2, 1922. The other children of Mr. and Mrs. Peter A. Weber reside with them on the home farm.

Sam Dahl, a well known pioneer of Dunn County, still living on his farm in the town of Elk Mound, was born in Christiania, Norway, Feb. 2, 1838, son of Solie Elefson and wife, the latter's maiden name being Guri Johanson. Both parents died in Norway, their native land. Sam Dahl was educated in the Lutheran school and confirmed in the Lutheran church of his parish and remained in his native land until the year 1857. Then, at the age of 19 years, he came to the United States, settling first in Chicago, and, except in winter, following the life of a sailor on the lakes. One year, however, he spent in La Crosse, but subsequently resumed a sailor's life and spent three more seasons at it. He then became connected with the lumber industry, running lumber rafts from Reads' Landing down the Mississippi River to St. Louis, but later held a stationary position as watchman in the lumber yards of Knapp, Stout & Co. at Read's Landing. After being thus occupied for three years, he came to Dunn County, Wis., and engaged in agricultural pursuits in the town of Elk Mound, but later selling that farm, he bought land on Poplar Creek, in the town of Grant, where he farmed for several years, developing the property, which he subsequently gave to his children. Then returning to the town of Elk Mound, he bought a farm of 105 acres in Sections 8 and 9, on which he erected a good set of buildings, conducting it until 1920, when he rented it to his son, Delbert. While living in the town of Grant he served for some years as constable and as a member of the town board. He owns and occupies a nice bungalow residence in Colfax, where he has other viilage property. Mr. Dahl was married, April 28, 1866, to Marn Olena Anderson, who was born in Norway, April 3, 1848. He and his wife became the parents of seven children: Stena, Henry, Sam and George (twins), Ida, Alfred and Delbert, of whom the four first mentioned are now deceased. Ida is the wife of Martin Christianson of Eau Claire and the mother of three children, Mabel, Melvin and Luella. Alfred, elsewhere mentioned, is a prominent farmer in the town of Elk Mound, and Delbert, who is unmarried, is living on the home farm.

Alfred S. Dahl, a thriving farmer in the town of Elk Mound, was born in this town Jan. 3, 1879, son of Sam and Marn Olena (Anderson) Dahl. His education was acquired in the rural schools and he grew to manhood on his parent's farm, acquiring a good practical knowledge of agriculture while helping his father. At the age of 16 he began working out at intervals and he continued to divide his time between the home farm and that of others until Oct. 7, 1904, when he entered into agricultural operations on his own account on a rented farm in the town of Sand Creek, which he conducted for two years. Then moving to Chippewa County, he rented a farm in the town of New Auburn, making his home there for a year and On Feb. 28, 1908, he bought the farm he is now operating in Section 2, a half. town of Elk Mound, Dunn County, on which at the time there were only a few poor buildings, including an old log house. This investment had good results, brought about, however, through his own exertions supported by those of his wife. He has shown a progressive spirit, constantly improving his place until it is now as good and as up-to-date a farm as any of its size in the eastern part of the county. The full-basement barn measures 36 x 64 feet in ground plan; there is a stave silo $12 \ge 28\frac{1}{2}$ feet; a machine shed of 16 x 28 feet; a granary 14 x 22 feet; also a corn crib and several other out-buildings. He plans to erect in the spring of 1925 a nice semi-bungalow residence of modern type, installed with a heating plant so as to provide for hot and cold running water. He has broken and developed several more acres of his land and is carrying on general farming and dairying successfully, keeping Brown Swiss grade cattle, with a full bred sire in the herd, and also raising Duroc-Jersey hogs. On Oct. 1, 1902, Alfred S. Dahl was united in marriage with Lucy Tietz, who was born in the town of Sand Creek on Aug. 30, 1881, daughter of Henry and Minnie (Lamberg) Tietz, the latter of whom is still living in that town, Henry Tietz having died Jan. 22, 1916. Mr. and Mrs. Dahl are the parents of one child, Edward A., who was born at Bloomer, Wis., Oct. 7, 1903.

Edward A. Dahl, one of the younger farmers in the town of Elk Mound, born, as elsewhere stated, on Oct. 7, 1903, acquired his elementary education in District School No. 3, and was graduated from the Colfax High School with the class of 1923. He then took a summer course in the state normal school at Eau Claire, and during the winter of 1923-24 taught school in Johnson County, Wyoming. Since then he has been assisting his father on the home farm in Section 2, town of Elk Mound. A young man of sound, steady principles, a lover of books, and with a good educational equipment, his ambition to succeed in the world and be helpful to others while advancing his personal interests, seems likely to be realized.

Peter Bodette, an early settler in the town of Tiffany, who passed away more than a quarter of a century ago after establishing a good farm, was born in Lower Canada, Jan. 30, 1819, of French parentage. In 1833, when Peter was a boy of 14, the family came to the States, settling in Vermont, where the parents spent the remainder of their lives, the father dying in 1897. The date of the mother's death is not known. After remaining at home until 1837, Peter returned to Canada and after that looked out for himself. In 1840 he married Louise Mellette of New Hampshire, who, however, lived but a few years after her marriage, leaving him with two children, Peter and Mary, the first born of whom, Peter, served in the Civil War and died in 1863. About 1837 Mr. Bodette was married in New Hampshire to his second wife, whose maiden name was Josephine Orcutt. In 1857 he came to Wisconsin, settling with his family in the town of Vernon, near Waukesha. The family included his daughter Mary, by his first wife, who was subsequently married in Waukesha to Henry Wells, and who died in 1918. In 1861 the Civil War broke out and in August, 1862, Mr. Bodette enlisted for service in Company B, 28th Wisconsin Infantry. He served with credit for three years, being mustered out in Texas, on Aug. 24, 1865, when he returned home to Waukesha. It was in April, 1870, that he came to Dunn County, taking a homestead on Section 14, town of Tiffany, which consisted merely of a tract of wild land of 160 acres. He was now 48 years old, but still strong and vigorous, and he set to work to build up a farm. He still had 30 years life before him, though he did not need to work that long, for he had sons who were growing up and were able to help him. By 1892 he had 280 acres, with 100 improved, a good set of buildings, and plenty of good stock, and had attained a position as one of the successful and substantial farmers of his town. His death took place on the home farm on June 29, 1897, when he was in his seventyninth year. His wife Josephine survived him many years, dying in the village of Boyceville on Feb. 7, 1921. In politics Mr. Bodette was a Democrat, though not active beyond casting his vote. He was born a member of the Catholic Church but in later years his religions consisted not in dogma or the profession of any particular creed, but in following the Golden Rule and doing onto others as he would have others do onto him. He was a man highly esteemed and his passing was a distinct loss to the community in which he lived. Of his 13 children, those now living are the following: George, of Boyceville; Jack, of Knapp; Joseph, of Boyceville; Betsy, who is now Mrs. Benjamin Aken of Minneapolis; Peter, of Boyceville; Adelbert, of Boyceville; Addie, now Mrs. F. Z. Appleby of the town of Tiffany; Charles, of Boyceville; Maggie, who is Mrs. Cland Sheplor of Mason City, Iowa; Jessie G., who is Mrs. George W. Appleby of the town of Tiffany, and Wallace, residing in Boyceville.

Charles F. Smith, proprietor of Silver Leaf Stock Farm in Section 17, town of Eau Galle, was born in the town of Burnett, Dodge County, Aug. 8, 1866, son of Ira J. and Harriet A. (Lawrence) Smith. The father was a native of Rutland, Vt., born April 19, 1838, son of John and Caroline (Taylor) Smith, John Smith having been born in Massachusetts in 1914. He, John, died in Oneida County, Wisconsin, in 1902. He was a son of Thomas Smith and the latter a son of Israel Smith, both of whom fought for American freedom in the Revolutionary War, Israel at Bunker Hill. John and Caroline (Taylor) Smith were the parents of seven children, four of whom died in infancy. Of the others, Edward T. lives in Oregon, George W. at Tomahawk, Lincoln County, Wis., and Ira J., father of the subject of this sketch, is now deceased. Ira J. Smith spent ten years in his native state and then came westward with his father, settling in Dodge County, Wisconsin, where he remained until he was 29 years old. He acquired his education in the schools of Vermont and Wisconsin. He started out in life for himself at the age of 20 and in 1868 left Dodge County and came to this section. He was a stock raiser on a large scale, breeding large numbers of hogs and sheep. A Republican in politics, he served as chairman of his town for seven years; for 22 years he was one of the county poor commissioners, and he also served as president of the Highland Telephone Co. He was a man of good attainments and equally of good character one who would scorn to stoop to a mean act. Mr. Smith was married in 1861, to Harriet A. daughter of Daniel and Mary Lawrence. She was born in Winooski, Vt., in 1835, and died in 1898. Mr. and Mrs. Ira J. Smith were the parents of seven children, Irene H., Ira E., George E., Charles F., Willis H., John L. and Maude J. Ira E. lives in Oneida County, Wis.; George E. and John L. are prominent farmers in Pierce County; Willis H., born in 1867, died in 1881; Maude J. married W. L. Smith and lives in Eau Galle, Dunn County. Charles F. Smith was educated in a log schoolhouse near Farm Hill in Pierce County and remained at home with his parents until he was 21 years old. The winter of 1887-88 he spent in the woods employed in the lumber industry. In 1892 he entered the employ of the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha Railway Co. as a painter. At the end of ten years he was made foreman of the road painting crew, which position he held for seven years. He then resigned and, coming to Dunn County, settled on a tract of 40acres which forms a part of his present farm and which he had previously purchased. It was cut-over land but otherwise unimproved. Mr. Smith began the development of his place by erecting a small frame house and a log barn and then gave his attention to clearing and breaking the land. Later he bought 40 acres more which gave him a farm of 120 acres, all in Section 17. He now has 85 acres developed and is successfully engaged in general farming and dairying, keeping grade Guernsey cattle with a pure bred sire; he also has 50 head of "O. I. C." swine and raises grade Belgium horses. Silver Leaf Farm in located in a picturesque location on Baker Ridge, overlooking what is called the Missouri Valley, which extends east and west through the town of Eau Galle. The farm is a well managed and well cared for piece of property presenting a wonderful contract to the aspect. of the place when Mr. Smith first took hold of it. The comfortable frame residence large barn and other substantial buildings, combined with the pleasant perspective of field and pasture make the farm an ideal rural home. For seven years Mr. Smith served as clerk of Joint School District No. 7. He was married March 14, to Mina E. Hoyt, who was born at Ellenburg, N. Y., March 15, 1870, and who before her marriage was an efficient teacher in the Dunn County schools. Four children have been born to them: Gwendolyn F. and Gladys R. (twins), born

Nov. 3, 1899; Carol F., born Nov. 2, 1904, and Robert G., born May 1, 1908. The two twins, Gwendolyn and Gladys, both attended rural schools and were graduated from the Elmwood High School. They then entered the River Falls Normal School and were graduated from the rural department class of 1919, since which time they have both followed teaching, Gwendolyn being a teacher in the St. Croix, Buffalo and Dunn County field, and Gladys having taught in Dunn and Pierce counties. Carol F. was graduated from the Elmwood high school in the class of 1921, and from the normal department of the River Falls Normal School in the class of 1922, and is now engaged in teaching. Robert G., is taking a three years' agricultural course in the Elmwood High School and is his father's assistant on the farm. He is interested in athletics and plays on the football and basketball teams.

Fred W. Larsen, an enterprising farmer in the town of Stanton, was born in this town June 21, 1882, son of Hans and Olena (Larson) Larsen, whose history as pioneer settlers in this town is narrated in this volume. The parental farm being situated close to the village of Knapp, almost adjoining it on the northeast, he as a boy attended school in the village. He grew up on the farm helping his parents when he was old enough and contributing in no small measure to the improvement. In 1910 he and his brother Albert H. began to conduct the home farm together, which they did for two years. In 1912 Fred W. moved onto his present farm of 80 acres in Section 26, town of Stanton, which he had previously bought, and which adjoins the old home farm on the east. Forty acres of the land had been cleared but there were no buildings on it. Mr. Larsen has erected a good set of modern buildings, and he and his wife took up their residence on the place as soon as he had built the house, which is of modern construction and attractive appearance. Mr. Larsen's barn measures 32 x 70 feet, and is provided with a full basement with cement floors, and with the Lowden barn equipment. Among his other buildings are machine sheds, a corn crib and poultry house, all well adapted to their respective purposes. He has installed a waterworks system furnishing running water to both house and barns, and also an acetylene gas plant to light his house, barns and yard. Engaged in general farming and dairying, he has a good herd of grade Guernsey cattle with a pure bred sire at the head, while 60 acres of his land are under the plow. Numbered among the successful farmers of the county, he has also rendered some public service. He formerly served the town of Stanton three years in the office of supervisor, and, having declined further service at that time, was off the board for two years, but recently he has been again elected and is now serving his fourth term. Mr. Larsen was married Oct. 25, 1916, to Evelyn Hanson of Elk Mound, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Hanson. He and his wife are the parents of three children: Alton, born Feb. 21, 1918; Dorothy, born June 10, 1920; and Myrna, born Dec. 31, 1923. The family are members of the Baptist church at Knapp.

Hans Larsen, who as a pioneer of the town of Stanton became a factor in the agricultural development of Dunn County, was born in Lolland, Denmark, Jan. 1, 1852, son of Lars and Anna Hansen. When quite young he lost both his parents, the father dying when Hans was an infant and the mother when he was nine years He was taken care of by relatives and acquired a common school education. At the age of 18 he emigrated to the United States, locating first near Waukesha, Wis., and from there going to Michigan, where he worked in sawmills and as a logger in the woods. In 1880 he returned to Wisconsin and located in Roberts, St. Croix County, for two years thereafter working as a farm hand. It was there that he met Olena Larson, to whom he was married in Knapp, Dunn County. She was born near Christiania, Norway, Sept. 29, 1849, daughter of Lars and Ingeborg (Peterson) Larson, and when Mr. Larsen met her she was employed in the home of the farmer for whom he was working. Her father had died when she was four years old and her mother when she was 27, and it was after the latter's death that she came to the United States and to St. Croix County, Wisconsin. In the fall of 1880, a few months after his marriage, Mr. Larsen bought from a homesteader 160 acres of land on Section 26, town of Stanton, Dunn County. It had been heavily covere 1 with pine timber, which had been cut off, and in place of the timber there was a heavy growth of brush. He and his young wife drove to the place with an ox team, having difficulty in getting to it in their wagon, on account of the numerous big stumps and the thickness of the brush. There were some deserted log buildings on the place which had previously formed part of the lumber camp, and which were not fit to live in; but in one of them they made their temporary abode. The situation was one which had confronted many a pioneer, but which excites a never-failing interest in the thoughtful student of the history and growth of this country and the development of its people; for it was just such situations that developed character and produced the sturdy population of the Northwest of today. In fact none but the strong and sturdy could endure the hardships inseparable from life on a pioneer farm in a country that had been previously timbered; for the labor of extracting the numerous stumps of great trees (called "grubbing" by the early settlers), cutting out the brush and breaking the land was not a task to be performed by the weak or lazy. It was the hardest of work from sunrise to sunset, and for the most part the pioneer settlers got up and went to bed with the birds, hard toil filling every daylight hour except the brief time taken for meals. Those meals at times were scanty, for the nearest store was perhaps 14 to 18 miles away and the walking or driving difficult on account of the lack of roads, and carrying supplies on the back for such a distance, fording streams and forcing one's way through the heavy brush, was as hard work as grubbing or land breaking. Usually the settlers laid in all the supplies they could when they had the opportunity, as they could afford to waste but little time traveling to and from the village. But supplies cost money and when Mr. and Mrs. Larsen started they had very little. They had had to make a small payment on their land, and with what was left they bought a few of the most necessary articles, such as flour, salt, etc., but it was not long before their supplies were exhausted and they found themselves without funds, besides being in debt. Mr. Larsen worked out at times, however, and earned a few dollars and by practicing extreme frugality they survived the hardships and made gradual progress. For two years they occupied the poor log dwelling they had first moved into and then Mr. Larsen built a small frame house to which they transferred their portable belongings. The day on which they occupied this new dwelling was one of those red letter days which in the life of a pioneer marked a certain definite stage of progress, and was a joyous one accordingly. It gave them heart and courage for further effort and in time other red letter days came, marking the erection of a new barn or granary, or the sowing of another newly broken tract of land. Oxen were the draught animals used for the first two years, after which a team of horses was obtained. Without sketching every step of their progress, it may be said that the small frame house above mentioned was the family home until 1905, in which year Mr. Larsen built a two-story frame house, and in 1903 a good frame barn was erected, and later other useful and necessary buildings, among them being a They were now long past the pioneer stage and were prosperous modern silo. farmers, with many acres under cultivation, a comfortable home, good farm buildings and an adequate supply of modern machinery and tools. Close by was the village of Knapp, affording a good market and convenient place of supplies. Mr. Larsen was not blessed with a long life, as he died before he was 59, on Oct. 27, 1910; but it is not the number of years a man lives, but what he does, that counts, and his life had been well employed, for, aided by his devoted wife and help-mate, he had successfully founded a home and created a spot of rural beauty and productiveness out of what had been an unattractive section of the dreary wilderness, an achievement worthy of remembrance. After his death his wife remained on the farm until January, 1920, when she moved to the village of Knapp, where she is now residing in a comfortable dwelling which is her own property. But she still recalls as the most joyous part of her life the early days of labor and trial, when she and her husband, both young and strong, were inspired by hope and courage, and their children were growing up around them. Of these children there were seven, three sons and four daughters, some of whom has passed away. The eldest, Margaret, born Dec. 30, 1880, is now Mrs. H. Gaustad of Woodville, St. Croix County, Wis.

Fred W., born June 21, 1882, is proprietor of a farm in the town of Stanton, adjointhe old homestead; Elizabeth, born May 14, 1884, was for many years her mother's companion, but died May 14, 1924; Emma, the third child, born Feb. 1, 1886, died in her seventeenth vear, on Nov. 8, 1902; Albert H., born April 30, 1888, is a farmer on part of the old home farm; Martha, born April 7, 1891, died in infancy; Joseph M., born June 15, 1892, died at Colorado Springs, Colo., on March 21, 1917. Thus Mrs. Larsen has been bereaved of four of her seven children over whose young lives she watched with all a tender mother's care; but, as the poet Tennyson said, ' ' Tis better to have loved and lost than never to have loved at all," and she can look forward with glad hope to meeting husband and children again in the land beyond the grave. After Mr. Larsen's death Mrs. Larsen joined the Baptist Church in Knapp, of which all her children became members, and which she still attends. Mr. Larsen left behind him the precious heritage of a good name. He was a good husband and father and highly esteemed by his fellow townsmen, being honorable in all his dealings. Politically he was a Republican, and for some years he was a member of the Knapp village school board. Thus one by one the pioneers pass on, but their deeds live after them, and generations must come and go ere they be forgotten.

Anton Anderson, now living retired in the city of Menomonie, was born in Norway, July 8, 1852, son of Andrew and Marti (Monson) Anderson, who were farmers on a small scale. He was educated in a parochial school in his native land, and received the rite of confirmation in the Lutheran church. Before he had reached his fifteenth birthday, a young friend of his named Olson, who had gone to America, returned to Norway on a visit. When about to return to America this friend persuaded Anton to come with him, lending him the money to pay for his transportation. Accordingly he came, the two youths landing at Quebec after a voyage of four and a half months in a sailing vessel. From the Canadian port they came west to Milwaukee in company. In the summer of 1867 Anton arrived in Janesville, Wis., a youth of 15 unable to speak or understand the English language. After a month in that place he found employment as a farm hand with a man named Pat McGinnis, whose farm was situated at or near Orfordville, a village not farm from Janesville. Mr. McGinnis paid him $12.50 per month that summer and fall, but during the following winter he worked for the same man for his board, lodging and washing. In the spring of 1868 he again began earning wages of $12.50 On Aug. 15, that year, he left Mr. McGinnis' employ and started for per month. Dunn County, from Orfordville journeying to Prairie du Chien by rail, thence to Read's Landing, Minn., by boat, and from Wabasha, Minn., to Menomonie, Wis., by stage, the latter destination being reached Sept. 1, 1868. The next morning he entered the employ of Knapp, Stout & Co. at wages of $16.00 per month. That winter (1868-69) he was one of the employes in "Bill" Young's camp on the Iolly River. The life in the woods suited him, and as he proved useful in the blacksmith and repair shop, he was allowed to work there much of the time. After four and a half years in the service of Knapp, Stout & Co., he entered the employ of Siver Siverson of Menomonie, who conducted a blacksmith shop and an agricultural machinery depot at the corner of Eagle and Second Street West. When, four or five years later, Mr. Siverson was elected sheriff, Mr. Anderson purchased his business, which he conducted for about six months, when the place, together with his residence was burned down, he losing nearly everything he had. This was a serious setback, but with the courage and energy of youth he rebuilt, continuing the business until 1883, when he sold it back to Mr. Siverson, and went on the road selling agricultural machinery. In this manner he was occupied until the spring of 1924, when he retired, but was persuaded by his employers to renew his relations with them in order to close up a lot of unfinished business. This he did by the spring of 1925, when he finally resigned and is now, after 43 years' service on the road, enjoying a well earned leisure at home, having a comfortable residence at No. 1214 Main Street. For nearly the whole period of his career as a traveling salesman he was employed by one firm, selling machinery in every state in the Union and in Canada, and in the winter of 1890-91 he made a trip to the Sandwich (Hawaiian)

Islands in the interests of his company. Through energy and ability he rose to a high position from that of an ordinary salesman, and for the last 21 years of his business career he was manager of the company's branch house at Peoria, Ill. He acquired fair competence and is now in easy circumstances. Mr. Anderson was married Oct. 17, 1877, to Kari Peterson of Menomonie, daughter of Peter and Marti Peterson. She was born in Norway, Jan. 9, 1855, and came to America in 1875. Her parents never came to this country, but lived and died in their native To Mr. and Mrs. Anderson five children were born: Helen Mathia, now land. deceased; Pauline Marie, wife of Dr. James McKahan of Warsaw, Wis.; Alma C., deceased; Aloysius L., of Menomonie; and Carl A., of Warsau, Wis. The family are of the Norwegian Lutheran faith and members of Our Saviour's congregation of Menomonie. After Mr. Anderson had been in this country four years, he sent for his parents, who came with their three other children—Mary, Mickel and John to Menomonie. He bought a good 80-acre farm for them in St. Croix County, with good buildings and operating equipment, and always looked after his parents as long as they lived. The father died on the St. Croix farm at the age of 60 years, and the mother at Mr. Anderson's home in Menomonie in 1914. The daughter, Mary, who married Charles Nelson of Rice Lake, is now deceased, as also is John. Mickel is engaged in the meat business in Minneapolis.

Thorvald H. Solberg, a substantial farmer and respected citizen in the town of New Haven, proprietor of Greenview Farm, was born in Ringerike, Norway, May 18, 1875, son of Helge and Maren (Olson) Solberg. The family arrived in Dunn County, Wis., from Norway in April, 1881, settling in Menomonie; but they remained there until Helge Solberg had had time to find a suitable piece on which to begin farming. He secured 80 acres of land on Section 3, town of New Haven, which was a wild tract without buildings and in course of time he made a good farm out of it, and after being engaged in its improvement for many years, he died there on June 13, 1904. His wife Maren passed away a few years later, on Nov. 3, 1919, at the home of her son, Thorvald. Thorvald H. Solberg in his boyhood acquired a common school education and remained on the home farm until he was 17 years old, at which time he began working out and at the same time helping his pare its by giving them a part of his earnings, which he continued to do until he was 29. Within a month after his twenty-ninth birthday, or on June 7, 1904, he was united in marriage with Carrie Hilsen, who was born in Modum, Norway, April 14, 1880, and had come with her parents to Dunn County, Wisconsin, when but two years old, the family settling in the town of New Haven. Some years before his marriage, or in 1895, Thorvald H. Solberg had prepared for that event by purchasing a piece of land, consisting of 80 acres on Section 3, town of New Haven. It was all wild except for a small clearing which had been made in which to build a house, though no house had been built nor any other buildings. Mr. Solberg put up a dwelling into which he and his wife moved, and during the years which have since elapsed he has added other buildings until he now has a very complete set, all of frame construction and in good condition. He follows general farming and dairying, having a herd of good grade cattle and milking from 15 to 18 cows, while 30 acres of his land are under the plow. He and his family have resided on this farm except from 1906 to 1908, when they lived in Minneapolis, where Mr. Solberg was employed as a motorman on the street car line; their return to the farm was on July 1, 1908. Mr. Solberg stands high as a citizen in the town of New Haven, which he has served as assessor, and also as a member of the town board, being at the present time chairman of the town board and county board. He has also for 15 years been clerk of School District No. 1. In politics he is nominally a Republican. He and his wife have been the parents of five children: Herbert O., born Aug. 6, 1905, who is now on the home farm helping his father; O. Kenneth, born April 2, 1907, also on the home farm; Irene M., born April 26, 1909; Evelyn C., born April 13, 1913, who died Dec. 12, 1913, and Elbert N., born Aug. 1, 1915, who died July 9, 1921. Mr. Solberg and his family attend the Norwegian Lutheran Church, and occupy a good social position in the town in which they reside.

of Weston, but is now deceased, was born in England, where he spent the first 11 He then came to the United States with an uncle, Steve Palmer, years of his life. who settled in Ohio, in which state Henry G. resided for ten years. Then at the age of 21 he came to Dunn County, finding work in the sawmill at Rumsey's Landing After that he worked for a while in a sawmill at Mud Creek, near Elk Mound, and then returned to Ohio. But he was soon back in Dunn County again and he then began farming, buying 80 acres of wild land in Section 34 and 35, town of Lucas, where he lived a bachelor's life for three years. He then sold that land and traded a team of oxen that he had for the old Briggs farm in the town of Menomonie. which place he kept only a short time, on selling it buying 80 acres in Section 15, town of Weston, on which latter tract he built a log house, and, having married, proceeded to build up a home. For the first few years he worked for the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company, being from home six days a week and returning each Saturday night to spend his Sundays with his wife and family. On these occasions he came loaded with provisions packed on his back to support the family during the following week, and his weekly return, as might be surmized, was always a joyful occasion, the Saturday night supper being an event of good cheer. In time he bought an additional tract of 80 acres in Section 16, and also owned a house and four lots in Weston village. He spent the rest of his days on his farm, cultivating and improving it until 1905, when he turned the management of the place over to his son, William J., though he continued to reside on it until his death on Feb. 3, 1920. Henry G. Ballard was married Jan. 1, 1874, to Isabelle Decker, who survived him a little over three years, dying March 19, 1974, to Isabelle Decker, who survived hill a little over three years, dying March 19, 1923. Their children were five in number, namely: Charles, born Oct. 2, 1874, now residing in the village of Weston; An-thony, born Aug. 1, 1876, who is a farmer near the village; William J., operating a part of the home farm; "Baby" (a daughter), born March 15, 1886, who died in infancy; and Edna H., born Nov. 5, 1892, who died Dec. 11, 1902. William J. Ballard, proprietor of Big Spring Farm, in Sections 15 and 16, town of Weston was born on this farm May 21, 1884, son of Henry G. and Isabelle of Weston, was born on this farm May 21, 1884, son of Henry G. and Isabelle (Decker) Ballard. The story of its early development by his father has already been told. William J. as a boy attended district school in the town of Weston and resided on the home farm, helping his father to improve and cultivate it when he was old enough. He was 21 years old when he took over its managementship in 1905, and from that time until his father's death he operated it on shares. Then when the father died he received 80 acres which the latter had deeded to him and which constitutes his present farm. He is successfully carrying on general farming and dairving, and has further improved the place by erecting a new barn in 1922, measuring 34 x 60 feet in ground plan. He is a stockholder in the Peoples State Bank at Elmwood. Mr. Ballard was married, Dec. 10, 1920, to Mrs. Sina Brensdel, who in maiden life was Sin Kjetland, having been born in Norway July 18, 1875, daughter of Andres and Trina (Instefjord) Kjetland. Both her parents died in Norway and she came to the United States in 1899, spending several years in South Dakota. In 1912 she came to reside at Forest Center in Dunn County and in 1915 moved to Weston. She was first married to John Brensdel in 1896, and of that marriage there are two children born: Ole, now deceased; and Anton, who married Vernice Owens. He operates a garage in Fall City, Dunn County, and has one child, June Marie.

Philip L. Fuhlrott, an industrious and successful farmer in the town of Dunn, was born in this town, on his parents' farm in Section 26, which now forms a part of his own, on June 7, 1865. His parents were Louis P. and Charlotte (Grepe) Fuhlrott, the father born at Worbiss, Prussia, Jan. 16, 1830, and the mother at Brutenbach in Saxony, Germany, on June 5, 1835. They came to the United States when young people and single, and were married in the then existing village of Dunnville, on June 3, 1859, Louis P. Fuhlrott having arrived in the county in 1852, and having been for several years employed as a raftsman, and in other capacities, by Knapp, Stout & Co. In 1859, the year of his marriage, Mr. Fuhlrott began his career as a farmer, buying 40 acres of land on the Chippewa bottoms in the town of Dunn. It was an unfortunate choice, for two years later the high water flooded his place and drove him out, and he then bought 120 acres in Section 27. As the tract set back a little from the main road, he bought an additional two-acre strip, which enabled him to make a driveway to the road. The land was all wild and it took him many years to clear and break it and put up the buildings which stook on the place at the time of his death on Sept. 22, 1909. His son Philip had been the manager of the place for some years before that. Mr. and Mrs. Louis P. Fuhlrott had five children: Anna, born April 15, 1860, who died Aug. 30, 1876; Edward, born April 11, 1862, now residing with his brother Philip; Philip, born June 7, 1865, owner of the old home farm; Ida, born Aug. 22, 1866, who lives in Durand; and Augusta, who died Aug. 12, 1871, aged nine months and 21 days. Mrs. Charlotte Fuhlrott, the mother, died Jan. 25, 1899. Philip L. Fuhlrott as a boy attended the Waubeek District School and grew up on the home farm, which he helped to clear and develop, and, as already mentioned, in time he became its manager. After his father's death in 1909, he received a part of the farm as his share of the inheritance and then bought out the interests of the other heirs. By several purchases of other land he has since increased its area to 227 acres, and in 1914 he built a good basement barn of 36 x 72 feet, installing in it the Michaels patent equipment. He successfully follows diversified farming and dairying and is a patron of the Downsville creamery. He has never married, and he and his brother Edward live together on the farm, employing a housekeeper.

Robert A. Retz, for many years owner and operator of a good farm in Section 17, town of Hay River, but now engaged in the automobile business in Boyceville, was born on a farm in this town, two and a half miles northeast or Boyceville, on March 16, 1881, son of William and Anna (Mueller) Retz. The parents were natives of Pommern, Germany, who came to America, the father as a widower and the mother as a widow, for each had been married to different partners in their native land. By his first wife, William Retz had a son, William, Jr., who is now deceased, and by her first husband Anna Mueller had a daughter, Minnie, now deceased, who was the wife of Gottlieb Spellman of the town of Hay River, Dunn The parents of our subject, who had both settled in Dunn County, were County. married in Menomonie in 1868, and lived there for a few years. Then they began farming, homesteading a tract of wild land on Sections 19 and 30, town of Hay River, on which William Retz built a small frame house. He spent the rest of his life in developing the farm and died there April 5, 1883. Mr. and Mrs. William Retz had a family of six children, namely: Minnie, Herman, Charlie, Frank, Anna and Robert A. Herman is a farmer in the town of Sheridan. Charlie was a farmer in Dunn County. Frank is a farmer in the town of Hay River. Anna is the wife of Aug. Peshow of the town of Hay River. After the father's death Mrs. Retz with the help of her children carried on the farm, by purchase increasing its area to 384 acres and its cleared and cultivated area in due proportion, Robert A. being manager for his mother from 1903 until the time of her death on Oct. 8, 1919. He then bought out the other heirs and became sole owner. While operating it for his mother he made substantial improvements on the house and other buildings, and in 1920 he erected a modern farm barn, with a full basement with cement floors and steel equipment. He also had a good stave silo, hog house, machine sheds, and all necessary machinery. He had 100 acres of his land under the plow, had a herd of grade Holstein cattle with a full bred sire, and raised Chester-White and Duroc-Jersey hogs. On Jan. 9, 1925, Mr. Retz rented his farm and engaged in the automobile business in Boyceville, buying the Chevrolet garage, and formed what is now the Dahl & Retz garage, where he and his partner are doing a nice business. They handle the Chevrolet automobiles and do a general garage business, having a well equipped shop for general repair work. Mr. Retz has always been a hard worker and whatever measure of success he has achieved has been well earned. It was on July 2, 1908, that Mr. Retz was united in marriage with Elizabeth Schultz, who was born at Ashland, Maryland, Sept. 28, 1883, daughter of Frederick and Bertha (Spielman) Schultz. Her father died in Maryland, and when Elizabeth was ten years old she accompanied her mother and the other members of the family to Saginaw, Mich., and soon after-in November, 1893, to the town of Wilson, Dunn County. Here Mrs. Schultz married again and two years later Elizabeth left home, and subsequently lived in several different places in this county or the vicinity until her marriage to Mr. Retz, to whom she has been a good wife and very effective helpmate. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Retz are as follows: Elsie M., Oct. 26, 1910; Mabel R., July 3, 1913; Carl H., June 10, 1915; Reuben H., April 6, 1917; Emil W., June 1, 1919; and Lawrence L., Jan. 24, 1922. The family are members of the German Lutheran congregation in Boyceville. Mr. Retz has served one term as town supervisor, and for ten years as director and treasurer of School District No. 4, and he and his family occupy a good social position.

George Trainor, one of the progressive young farmers of the town of Eau Galle, was born in the town of Weston, Dunn County, Wis., Dec. 3, 1902, son of Thomas and Lettie (McCarthy) Trainor, who are prominent farmers of that town. He acquired his elementary education in the district school, then attended public school for one year in Menomonie, and afterwards was a student for one year in the Dunn County Agricultural School. He then became his father's assistant on the home farm and so continued until 1922, in which year he started for himself on his present farm of 150 acres in Section 10, town of Eau Galle. Here he is making a marked success in dairy and general farming, following the most modern methods. He has a good herd of grade Holstein cattle, with a pure bred sire at the head. He is now serving as road commissioner, to which office he was elected by his fellow townsmen. Mr. Trainor stands, as it were, on the threshold of his active career, but has already made a beginning that promises well for the future. He was married April 22, 1923, to Gladys Ölson, of Arkansaw, who was born Jan. 2, 1904. He and his wife are members of St. Henry's Catholic Congregation at Eau Galle village.

Elmer E. Harshman, a native of Dunn County who has spent nearly all his life here and is a good type of the sturdy farmer who has done so much to create the wealth and build up the civilization of the great Northwest, ofttimes with but an inadequate reward, was born in the town of Spring Brook, Nov. 14, 1861, son of Daniel and Laura Lavina (Curtiss) Harshman. Daniel Harshman was a pioneer, coming to Dunn County with his parents in the early fifties. It was in October, 1854, that he married Laura Lavina Curtiss, and in 1856 they settled on a farm on Mud Creek, near Waneka, where they remained for about four years. At the end of that time they moved to Section 1, town of Spring Brook, making their home there until 1865, in which year they again moved, this time to a location near the Palmer school in the town of Lucas, where they spent three years. Then returning to the town of Spring Brook, they spent the next three years on the farm of Daniel Harshman's parents at Waneka. In 1871 they went to Fall City, settling on the farm in Section 29, that is now the property of Fred Harshman, and there they made their home until 1883. In that year Daniel Harshman went to Minewaukon, N. D., where he spent the most of his remaining years, dying in North Dakota, Oct. 26, In 1886 Mrs. Laura Harshman joined her husband and lived two years in 1905 North Dakota, returning to Wisconsin in 1888. She spent the rest of her lifeexcept part of one year that she spent in Kalispell, Mont.-with her daughter, dying Sept. 21, 1902, in Wisconsin. They were the parents of 12 children, three of whom died in infancy, the other being as follows: Eugene, born Dec. 8, 1855, who died in April, 1908; Lillie, now Mrs. H. W. Reed of Kalispell, Mont.; Sterling, who died in 1886; Elmer E., the direct subject of this sketch; Daniel, now living in the John E. Vasey home in the town of Dunn; Ora, deceased; Mary, who is Mrs. J. K. Bingham of Fargo, N. D.; Clarence, deceased; and Agnes, wife of John E. Vasey of Louisville, this county. Elmer E. Harshman acquired his education in the Wakena and Fall City schools. In 1883, when 21 years old, he signalized the attainment of his majority by going to Devil's Lake, N. D., where he took a homestead of 140 acres, which he proved up, returning to Dunn County in the following year. Then for several years he worked at farm labor in the town of Spring Brook. It was in that period of his life, or on April 19, 1885, that he was married in this town to Edith Gill, who was born in Green County, Wis., Nov. 26, 1869, daughter of George and Amelia (Reed) Gill. Her parents, who were natives respectively of the states of Ohio and New York, settled in Green County, Wisconsin, in 1868. Two years later they went to Missouri, where Mrs. Gill died in 1871, and Mr. Gill subsequently returned to Wisconsin. He died at Monroe, Green County in After continuing at farm labor for three years after his marriage, Mr. Harsh-1884 man went to North Dakota and for a year resided on his land there. He then returned to the town of Spring Brook, Dunn County, Wis., where he has lived most of the time since, though in 1902 he was engaged in operating the George Shofer farm in the town of Lucas and in the years from 1902 to 1905 inclusive he worked on the John E. Vasey farm in the town of Dunn. In 1905 Mr. Harshman settled on his present farm of 110 acres in Section 23, which he bought in 1889, and where he is engaged in general farming and dairying. He has erected all the buildings now in use on it and has made it into a good farm. He is a man of long practical experience in the two industries that have had the most to do with the development of this county-lumbering and farming, for in earlier manhood he spent 22 winters in the woods, working for jobbers. He is a member of Fall City Camp, No. 6050, M. W. A. Mr. and Mrs. Elmer E. Harshman are the parents of ten children, Dora, Helen, Lem, Charles, Mabel, Clarence, Blanche, Laura, Elmer and Hulda—in regard to whom the following data is available. Dora, born Dec. 2, 1885, was married Dec. 24, 1902, to Charles Batchelder and died Jan. 4, 1917. She was the mother of seven children, Velma, Lee, Burton, Henry, Mark, Rexford and Lillie. Helen, born June 28, 1888, was married Nov. 23, 1905, to Walter Jump and they live on a farm near Wheeler. They have eight children, Edmond, Alvin, Mabel, Hiram, Delbert, Wesley, Alice and Howard. Lem, was born May 28, 1890. He was married Aug. 12, 1909, to Florence Van Duyn and they reside with Mr. Harshman's parents. They have one child, Verne. Charles, born March 26, 1892, was married Nov. 8, 1922, to Edith Hintz, and has one child, Beatrice. They live in the town of Spring Brook. Mabel, born Sept. 13, 1894, was married Dec. 24, 1920, to Charles Batchelder, a farmer near Wheeler, and has two children, Gladys and Florence. Clarence, born July 8, 1896, was married Oct. 4, 1915, to Laura Christianson, and has four children, Hazel, Ellen, George and Claire. Blanche, born March 22, 1898, was married Nov. 18, 1919, to George Drinkwine, and is the mother of one child, Elaine. They reside near Wheeler. Laura, born July 23, 1901, was married Nov. 27, 1923, to Frank Boggs, and lives at Clarion, Iowa. Elmer, born July 2, 1904, and Hulda, born June 13, 1909, are still on the home farm. In addition to their ten children, Mr. and Mrs. Harshman have 24 grandchildren, enough altogether to make a large family party. Still better is the fact that the quality of citizenship they represent is of the highest.

Emil S. Gregerson, president of the Bank of Elk Mound, of which village he is one of the foremost citizens, was born in the city of Eau Claire, Wis., Oct. 12, 1884, son of Andrew and Ellena (Jorstad) Gregerson. The parents were born in Norway, and the father, Andrew, on growing to manhood learned the trade of machinist, which he subsequently followed for a number of years in Eau Claire. He and his wife are now living retired in Rice Lake, Barron County. Emil S. Gregerson as a boy attended school in Eau Claire, and also in Stanley, Chippewa County. It was in the latter place that he began to learn the banking business in 1903, with the Citizens State Bank, and he remained there until the latter part of that year. He then went to Cameron, Barron County, where he resided until 1904, engaged in After that he attended one term of commercial college in Minneapolis, banking. and then, returning to Stanley, became assistant cashier in the Farmers & Merchants State Bank of that place. In February, 1906, Mr. Gregerson came to Elk Mound, which he held until January, 1917, when he was elected president of the institution. As such he has proved notably competent, and it was under his supervision that the new bank building was completed in November, 1921. He was also active among those who brought about and supervised the erection of the new schoolhouse which was constructed in 1922, and since 1917 he has been president of the school board. He was the first village clerk after the incorporation of Elk Mound in 1909, and he has been village president, justice of the peace, and a member of the village board, in each of these positions rendering efficient service. A Free Mason, he belongs to the lodge and chapter in Menomonie, the commandery and consistory in Eau Claire and the Shrine in Milwaukee, as well as to the Chippewa Valley Shrine Club, and the camp of Modern Woodmen in Elk Mound. Mr. Gregerson was married in Elk Mound, Oct. 30, 1907, to Minnie L. Jessel, who died in June, 1918, leaving two children, Frederick and Helen. On Nov. 5, 1919, Mr. Gregerson married Olive L. Way, of which union there is one son, Robert. The family are members of the Evangelical Lutheran Church.

Edwin Jacob Gasteyer, who for many years was one of the leading farmers in the town of Eau Galle, but is now retired and living in Eau Galle village, was born in Woodbridge, N. J., Oct. 24, 1857, son of John Philip and Anna Mary (Weber) Gastever. Coming west with his parents, he lived with them for a while in Illinois and accompanied them in 1861 to Dunn County, Wisconsin, a little later beginning the pursuit of knowledge in the Weber school, which was the school of their district in the town of Eau Galle. At an early age, however, he had to begin work on the farm, he being the eldest son, and the next child in the family younger than himself being a sister. As time went on and his father got older, more of the work fell upon his own shoulders, and he was kept busy on the home farm until he was 28 years old. His father then bought him an 80 acre tract in Section 15, for which it was agreed that he was to pay $300, and he at once began the task of developing it. It was uphill work, especially considering the indebtedness to his father, and the fact that when he started he had but $65. Moreover the land was covered with heavy timber and only a small clearing had been previously made. But he went at it in the right spirit of industry and patience and in time he got the desired re-The timber he cut he hauled to Downsville, selling it for $8.00 per thousand sults. feet, and he resorted to various other schemes-all involving hard work-to gain As fast as the money came in it went out, mostly to pay bills, a few extra dollars. but knowing it would be that way for a few years, he was not discouraged but looked forward to the time when he should have a surplus. Whenever he was able he put up a building, until he had all that he needed. These included a frame house of 16 x 24 feet in ground plan, with 12-foot studdings; and a log barn of 26 x 30 feet, with other buildings. He also bought machinery and stock and in time found himself the owner of a good farm. After operating it until 1901, he sold it and on the same day bought an 80-acre farm in Section 14, on to which he moved with his There was a good frame house on it, with some other buildings, and he family. set to work to make a model farm out of it, a task which he accomplished very thoroughly. Known today as Shady Lawn Stock Farm, it is one of the best dairy farm; in the County, and is much larger than when he bought it. Later he purchased an adjoining tract of 80 acres; also he bought an 80-acre farm in Section 16, and another in the Hay Creek Valley, but the latter he afterwards sold. He also remodeled the house on his 160-acre farm, and in 1912, built a fine basement barn of 36 x 84 feet supplied with the Lowden equipment. In addition to this he built on his farm one of the finest hog houses in Dunn County, costing $1,500, with a Lowden equipment, with cement floors, styes and water supply; and among his other buildings is a silo measuring 12 x 36 feet. On the whole, it is doubtful if there is another farmer in the town of Eau Galle who has accomplished more or made a greater success than Mr. Gasteyer. In doing all this he was not only building for himself but for those who would come after him. Years ago he promised his three sons that if they would stay at home and be of assistance to him, when the time came for them to start out for themselves he would give each of them 80 acres of land, and this promise he redeemed, as they all proved worthy. In 1922 he retired from farming and bought a house in the village of Eau Galle, where he and his wife are now living, enjoying a period of well earned leisure. With the thoroughness that has characterized his every action in life, he has partly rebuilt this house, converting it into a good modern residence, well heated, and electrically lighted. He has also sunk a well in the cellar, 115 feet deep, with a pumping apparatus and pressure tank for the supply of running water. He is a stockholder in the Eau Galle Telephone Co., the Peoples State Bank of Elmwood, and the New Richmond Packing Plant. Formerly he rendered public service as a member of the school

Mr. Gasteyer was married Dec. 26, 1883, to Louise Thines, who was born board. at Waubeek, town of Dunn, on March 31, 1863, daughter of Charles and Louise Thines. Mr. and Mrs. Gasteyer have been the parents of eight children, Mary, Anna, Will E., John, Edwin, Clara, Emma and Lena. Mary, who was born March 7, 1884, is now the wife of August Reckin, Jr., of Eau Galle, and has two children, Vera Louise and Laverne Charles. Anna, born Sept. 1, 1886, is Mrs. Charles H. Reckin of Eau Galle and the mother of two children, Floyd C. and Vernice J. Will E., born March 1, 1887, who is a farmer in the town of Eau Galle, married Mrs. Clara Brenner, whose maiden name was Clara Zeilinger, and of this union there are three children, Lila, Rosella and Eunice. Mrs. Will E. Gasteyer is also the mother of two children by her first husband, Edward Brenner, namely, Anna Belle and John, born Nov. 16, 1888, who entered the army for service in the war Edward. with Germany, died at Jackson Barracks, New Orleans, while in training. Edwin, born June 21, 1890, and now on the home farm in Section 13, town of Eau Galle, married Louise Bauer of Waterville, Pepin County, Wis. Clara, born Nov. 22, 1891, is the wife of Roy Sands of Eau Galle and the mother of three children, Leonard, Elnora and Melvin. Emma, born March 8, 1894, and Lena, born May 23, 1896 are living at home with their parents. Mr. Gastever and his family enjoy high social position in the community.

John Phillip Gasteyer, an early settler in the town of Dunn, where he carved out a farm from the wilderness, and thus established a claim to be mentioned as one of the worthy pioneers of Dunn County, was born in Germany, whence he emigrated to the United States and was married in New Jersey to Anna Mary Weber, a native of that state. For eight years Mr. Gasteyer followed the occupation of millwright at Woodbridge, N. J., whence he moved with his family to Illinois, residing there one summer, and in 1861 coming to Dunn County, Wisconsin. Those were early days, and days of great unrest and excitement, owing to the breaking out of the Civil War and the bitterness of feeling which it engendered among neighbors and even members of the same family owing to strong differences of opinion on the questions of slavery and secession. But to a large extent Mr. Gasteyer and his family were isolated from these troubles, as they had settled in the wilderness and were busily engaged in trying to build up a farm from 80 acres of wild land in Section 13, town of Eau Galle. When they took possession of it they had to walk to it along a blazed trail from the village of Eau Galle. Mr. Gasteyer made a clearing and built a log hut with a "shake" roof; also a log stable with a straw roof. The first winter he cut some timber, which he burned, making a clearing in which to plant corn and potatoes for the use of the family. This planting he did in the spring, and not yet being provided with necessary agricultural implements he had to chop holes in the ground with an axe to receive the seed. But, little by little, he got the tools and machinery he needed and kept on improving his place until he had about The little log house in which he and his wife began housekeeping 50 acres cleared. was in time replaced by a dwelling of hewed logs, with a surface measurement of 18 x 26 feet, and he also put up a granary and other buildings and bought 80 acres At the age of 65 years he ceased active work and in 1906, he died. His more land. wife Anna Mary is also deceased. They had four children: Edwin Jacob, now living retired in Eau Galle; Lena, who is Mrs. Christ Pauley of Menomonie; Peter who owns the old home farm; and Mary, who is deceased.

Peter W. Gasteyer, a respected citizen and an enterprising and successful farmer of the town of Eau Galle, was born on the farm on which he is now living, on June 29, 1862, son of John and Anna Mary (Weber) Gasteyer. As boy, youth and man he lived on the home farm assisting his father, except for five years, during which period he was engaged in buying stock for Henry Owens; but when 40 years old he took over the home farm, which is situated in Section 13, and has since conducted it. He has, however, made extensive improvements in it, having added to its area so that he now owns 315 acres, and having also put up some excellent buildings. The latter include a fine brick residence; a large dairy barn of 36 x 94 feet in ground plan, fitted out in modern style and provided with a waterworks system; and a silo of 12 x 42 feet erected in 1917. His herd of cattle are of the Brown Swiss breed.

MR. AND MRS. HENRY CLACK

Mr. Gasteyer was married June 29, 1886, to Caroline Thines, who was born in the town of Dunn, Aug. 15, 1865. He and his wife are parents of 11 children: Anna, wife of John Arndt of the town of Dunn; Kate, who is Mrs. John Cook of Menomonie; Phillip, who married Lena Kroft and lives in Hatchville, Pierce County; Frank, at home; Caroline, who married Richard Sheldon and lives in Detroit, Mich.; Louise, now Mrs. Paul Manore and a resident of Pepin County; Christ, at home; Martha, who is Mrs. Lee Niles of Durand; and Joseph, Lucille and Vera, who are living on the home farm. Mr. Gasteyer and his family are members of the Lutheran Church.

Amherst Bemis, now deceased, who settled in Dunn County nearly 45 years ago and was a resident here for many years, was born in Mentor, Lake County, Ohio, about 25 miles northeast of the city of Cleveland, on July 8, 1838. As a boy he attended school in his native state and when a young man went to Illinois, and later to Milford, Jefferson County, Wis., where he remained until 1880. It was after he came to Wisconsin that the Civil War broke out, and in February, Tt. 1862, he tried to enlist but was rejected. In February, 1864, however, he succeeded in enlisting in Company D, 29th Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry, of which organization he was a member until he received an honorable discharge on July 4, 1865, several months after the war had ended. In was in 1880 that he came to Dunn County, Wisconsin, and for a year thereafter he operated a rented farm in the town of Sherman. Then, in 1881, he came to the village of Knapp and went to work in the planing-mill, where for four years he was a foreman. He then moved to Downing, this county, and for 11 years was foreman in the mill there. In 1896 Mr. Bemis went to Minnesota and took a homestead of 160 acres at Park Rapids, Hubbard County. There he remained for 10 years operating the farm, at the end of which time, his health failing, he gave it up and returned to Knapp, and for the remainder of his life he made his home with his daughter, Mrs. Henry Clack in the town of Sherman, Dunn County. His end was already near, however, and while on a visit to his daughter, Mrs. Grant McClure of Milaca, Minn., he passed away on Feb. 24, 1907. His remains were brought back to Dunn County and interred at Downing. He was a member of Frazier Post, No. 147, G. A. R., at Park Rapids, Minn. A brave soldier of the Union and a worthy citizen, hardworking, steady and reliable, he had many friends to mourn his loss. Mr. Bemis was married in Milford, Jefferson County, Wis., Oct. 15, 1861, to Mary M. Spitzer, who was born in that place Aug. 22, 1846, daughter of Garrett B. and Lucy Anna (Carter) Spitzer. Her parents were natives of New York State who came west in 1845, settling in Jefferson County, Wis., where they made their home for the rest of their lives. To Mr. and Mrs. Bemis five children were born: Lena, who first married Henry Clack and is now Mrs. C. F. Searle of Knapp; Mary, who is Mrs. Grant McClure of Milaca, Minn.; and Frances, Floy and Archie, who are deceased.

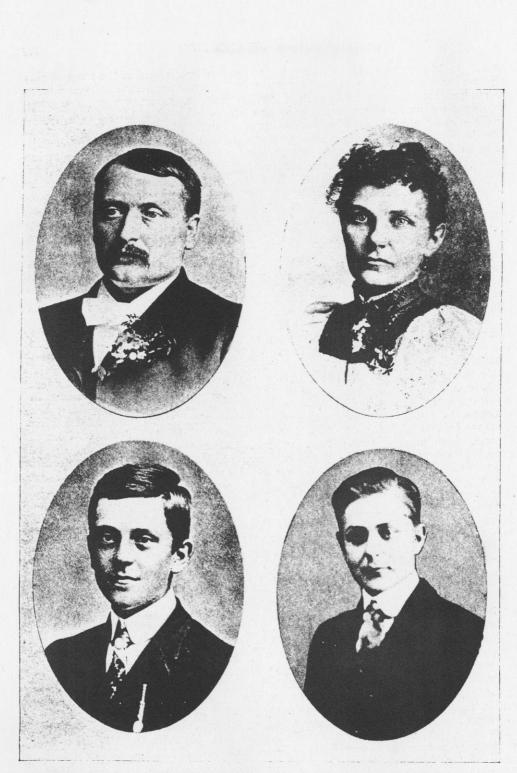

Henry Clack, a worthy pioneer of Dunn County whose death some 12 years ago left many aching hearts, was born in London, England, May 26, 1837. He was a young boy when he accompanied his parents to this country, the family settling in Detroit, Mich. He was 19 years old when he came to Dunn County, locating in the town of Red Cedar, and later in that of Sherman, where he made his subsequent home. He was twice married: first on April 1, 1861, to Lucy A. Blaine, who died July 18, 1880. By her he had six children; three of whom are now living, namely: Mrs. F. H. Barber, of North Platte, Neb.; George Clack of Sherman; and Mrs. H. Peck of Graceton, Minn. On Feb. 1, 1882, Mr. Clack was united in marriage with Lena Bemis of Knapp, daughter of Amherst and Mary M. (Spitzer) Bemis, and of this union there were two children born: Ruth E. who is now Mrs. Edwin Schmidt of the town of Sherman, and Olive, who is now Mrs. A. H. Larsen Mr. Clack's life in Dunn County covered a period of nearly 56 years, he at the end of that time being one of the oldest surviving pioneers of the county. For years he had been a member of the Dunn County Old Settlers' Society. But his life was drawing to a close and at 5 o'clock a. m. on Monday, May 13, 1912, after an illness of several months he passed away at his home in the town of Sherman, his remains being laid to rest in Evergreen cemetery. Such are the simple facts of his career and as such they were not so very different, perhaps, from those marking the lives of other pioneers of this and adjacent counties. But in his case there is more to be said. His death was the passing of a noble character, "a full and splendid life, well rounded out to over 74 years filled with good deeds, kind words and tender offices." His Christian character, kindness of heart and gentleness of manner had endeared him to everybody, and it was well said of him, that, "Were everyone to whom he did a loving service, to bring a blossom to his grave, he would sleep today beneath a wilderness of flowers." What better epitaph could any man desire? The fragrance of such a life lingers long after the bodily presence has departed and its influence is a power for good, it may be for generations yet to come. Those who knew Henry Clack will never forget him, but it is well that others should be told what manner of man he was. It is not too much to anticipate for him his Master's blessing," Well done, good and faithful servant; enter thou into the joy of thy Lord." Mrs. Lena Clack, after remaining a widow for over 11 years, was married on Nov. 17, 1921, to Charles F. Searle, and she and her husband reside in the village of Knapp, her mother Mrs. Bemis residing with them.

Julius A. Williams, an early settler in the town of Hay River, but now deceased, was born in the state of New York, March 2, 1831. After growing to manhood there, he moved with his parents to southeastern Wisconsin, the family settling on a farm near Janesville, Rock County. Being his parents' only son, he naturally became his father's assistant and right hand man on the farm. On Dec. 12, 1854, he was united in marriage with Laura Yeadon, and in 1864 they moved to Minnesota, where he enlisted in Company F, First Minnesota Volunteer Infantry, serving until the close of the war. In 1877 they came to Dunn County, Wisconsin, taking a homestead of 160 acres in Section 8, town of Hay River. This tract they proved up, Mr. Williams clearing and grubbing it, putting up a set of buildings, and farming there until 1886. He then sold that place and bought an improved farm of 160 acres in Section 14, known as the Bedell farm. There his wife died on April 30, 1903, but he continued to reside there until 1919, in which year he sold the place to his son Adelbert, and moved with his son Frank to an adjoining farm. But his life was drawing near its close, as on Dec. 27, that year, he had a stroke of apoplexy, and on Jan. 1, 1920, he passed away. He and his wife are the parents of five children, Charles H., Arthur G., Adelbert C., Frank E. and Laura Etta, the last mentioned being the wife of George W. Gunter of Menomonie.

George W. Gunter, now living in the city of Menomonie after an active acreer of 35 years or more in several successive lines of industry, was born in the town of Spring Brook, Dunn County, Wis., Dec. 10, 1864, son of Alex and Frances (Doane) Gunter. The paternal grandfather, George Gunter, at an early day owned land in the south part of Chippewa Falls—the part which at that time was known as French town. He was among the early emigrants to California, where he died, never having returned east. His widow subsequently became the wife of a Mr. Page and at one time they conducted a store on the Chippewa bottoms. She died about 1885. Alex Gunter was born in Virginia and became a farmer; he also followed the lumbering industry, both in the woods and on the drive. Until 1879 he resided in the town of Spring Brook and then moved to the village of Knapp, where he and his wife made their home until about the year 1900; from there he went to Minnesota, where he died soon after. Mrs. Frances Gunter, a native of New York State and daughter of Sylvester Doane, is now living at Sand Point, They had been the parents of nine children: Clara, who is deceased; Idaho. George W., of Menomonie; Adelbert of Mitchell, S. D.; Emma, who is Mrs. Daniel Knight of Sand Point, Ida.; Maude, wife of Fred Cook of Hope, Ida.; Ludia, who is Mrs. David Piatt of Sand Point, Ida; Bertha, residing in California, wife of William De Mars; Henry, who died in infancy, and an unnamed child who died soon after birth. George W. Gunter acquired his education in the public schools of the town of Spring Brook and the village of Knapp. After residing at home until he was 21 years old, he took up mill and factory work and was thus occupied until 1898. In that year he went west to Sand Point, Ida., where he remained for 12 years engaged in lumbering. At the end of that time he returned to Dunn County, Wisconsin, and began the clearing of a farm, buying 80 acres of brush land in the town of Hay River of which not a furrow had been plowed. He began operations by building a frame house in which he dwelt with his family while he proceeded with more extensive improvements, which included in time the erection of a full set of buildings and the clearing and developing of 70 acres of land. He also bought 40 acres of woodland in the same section and cn his place followed general farming successfully until 1920. He then rented out the farm-which he still owns- and moved to Menomonie, buying his present residence at 2202 South Broadway, with two lots, where he has since made his home. Fayette Shepherd Doane, a widely known and highly respected pioneer of Dunn County, who resided on the same farm at Fall City for 60 years, but who has passed away, was born at Pulaski, N. Y., March 18, 1837. At the age of 18 he came west with his parents to Sheboygan, Wis., where he lived three years. Then they moved to the farm at Fall City, where he spent so many years of his life, and where he died on Nov. 29, 1917, at the ripe age of 80 years. On Jan. 8, 1860, he was united in marriage with Betsey Burton, who survives him. To this union were born five children, four daughters and one son, namely: Mrs. Henry Owens and Mrs. Thomas Owens of Fall City, Mrs. Fred Goercke of Forest Center, and Charles Doane, all of whom survived him, and Eva Hughes, who died in 1910. His 19 grandchildren and 20 great-grandchildren were nearly all able to visit him in his last sickness and received a smiling welcome and a word of good advice. He left five sisters: Mrs. A. D. Bemis of Plymouth, Mrs. Frances Gunter of Sand Point, Ida., Mrs. Emma Hines of Knapp, Mrs. Martha Burnett of Ervin, Neb., and Mrs. A. E. Saxton of Forest Center; also one sister-in-law, Mrs. Isabelle Doane. One brother, Henry Doane, and two sisters, Mrs. Julia Williams and Mrs. W. K. West, preceeded him to the grave. Mr. Doane was a man greatly liked in his community, and for good reason. He was helpful to friends, charitable to the poor, hospitable to the stranger, and genial to all. He was most happy, indeed, when contributing to the happiness of others. He was a soldier in the Civil War and marched with Sherman to the sea. About two years before his death he united with the Methodist Episcopal Church. His passing left a void in the community and there are few whose memory it is most fitting to preserve.

Peder J. Mahla, who for a number of years was an active farmer in the town of Elk Mound, and one of its well known and respected citizens, but who is now deceased, was born in Trondhjem, Norway, Feb. 16, 1857. It was in 1880 at the age of about 23 that he came to the United States, reaching Eau Claire, Wis., on There he made his home until 1894, working in the mills during the sum-May 23. mers and in lumber camps during the winters. The year 1895 was an important on in his life, for it was then that he married and began the building up of his farm. His marriage, which took place Sept. 8, united him with Gina S. Sorenson, who was born in a log house in the town of Elk Mound Dec. 14, 1863, on the farm of her parents Engebreth and Anna (Larson) Sorenson. Mr. Mahla had already bought the land for his farm, consisting of 160 acres in Section 13, town of Elk Mound. There were no buildings on it except an old corn crib. He at once built a granary which he and his wife occupied for some time as a dwelling. When winter came, however, he had to go into the woods to cook in lumber camps, during which time his wife resided with her parents, such separations being a part of the hardships of those who had to do pioneer duty in developing the wild lands of this county.

In the following summer-that of 1895-Mr. Mahla built a house on his farm and continued the work of developing the soil, but had to cook in lumber camps for three more winters. After that, or from the year 1898, until his death, he gave his entire attention to his farm. He put up in time a fine set of buildings and brought his land into a good state of cultivation, becoming one of the representative farmers of the town of Elk Mound. The buildings which he erected, in addition to the house, were: a fine basement barn of 34×56 feet, a granary, wagon shed, wood shed, and a silo of 12×34 feet in size. With an eye to making the place beautiful, he laid out a good-sized lawn and planted trees and shrubbery, showing that he was a man of modern ideas. He was also a stockholder in the creamery in Elk Mound He accomplished the work he set out to do, was honored in the achievevillage. ment, and finally passed from this earthly life on Aug. 30, leaving a wife and two children to mourn his loss. Mrs. Mahla, who had been her husband's faithful companion and counsellor for 28 years, has since carried on the farm with the help of her sons. She and her husband had but three children, the first of whom, Anna Olena, born March 3, 1898, died Sept. 29, the same year, a little babe less than six months old. The other two are John E., born March 21, 1899, and Paul G., born June 17. 1904. Mrs. Mahla and her sons are carrying on general farming including dairying, keeping grade Guernsey cattle and Poland-China and Chester-White hogs. Lutherans in religious faith, they are members of what is known as the Baerum congragation, Mrs. Mahla being a member of the Ladies' Aid Society.

Louis Goetz, in former years a well known farmer in the town of Spring Brook, was born in Eau Claire, Wis., March 5, 1864, son of Adam and Helena (Daring) Goetz. The parents were natives of Germany who emigrated to the United States in 1860, coming direct to Wisconsin and settling first in Eau Claire, where they made their home for nine years. In 1869 they came to Dunn County and bought a tract of 160 acres of wild land in Section 1 (N. E.), town of Spring Brook, where they proceeded to make a home and develop a farm. There Adam Goetz passed away on Dec. 25, 1906, his death casting a gloom over the usually happy Christmas season. His wife survived him a little mcre than five years, dying March 19, 1912. They had had a fairly successful career, having attained prosperity through hard Their children, six in number, were as follows: Mary, who became the work. wife of Fred Vollendorf and is now deceased; Lucinda, who is the wife of Henry Paff of Eau Claire; Henry, deceased; Louis, deceased; Lena, who married Jacob Poff but has also passed away; and one who died in infancy. Louis Goetz, subject of this sketch (known as Louis Goetz, Jr.), was five years old when he came to Dunn County with his parents and soon began attending the old Rock School, where he acquired his education. When a little older he began assisting his parents on the home farm and took an active part in its development. Later, when his father was ready to cease active toil, he bought it and for the rest of his life operated it on his own account as a general farmer. His improvements were considerable, as he cleared a large amount of land and erected a complete and more modern set of buildings. Doubtless he would have done more, had his life been spared, but it was not his lot to reach old age, as he died Dec. 9, 1907, in his forty-third year, a man respected by his neighbors, whose early demise was regretted by all. Mr. Goetz married Eva C. Battenberg, who was born in Germany, June 25, 1865. She came to America when young and until her marriage resided at Cadott, Wis. She survived her husband a number of years, passing away on Sept. 22, 1920. Mr. and Mrs. Louis Goetz, Jr., were the parents of five children, Laura, Anna, Edwin, Wesley and George. Laura, who was born Aug. 3, 1895, is now Mrs. Louis Scholer of Zumbro Falls, Minn. and has one child, Robert. Anna, born March 13, 1897, is Mrs. Milton E. Ausman of the town of Spring Brook, Dunn County, and has two children, Irving and John. Edwin, born Dec. 9, 1899, married Melvina Buschendorf and he and his wife are now operating the old Goetz farm. Wesley, born Feb. 6, 1904, is assisting his brother Edwin. George, born Jan. 23, 1907, is also residing on the farm.

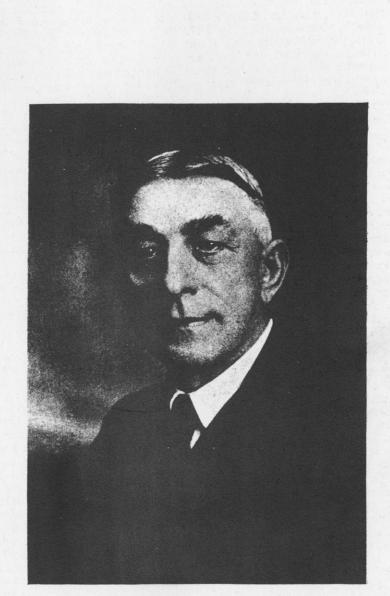

Peter P. Graven, of "The Graven-Wilcox Shoe Men," Menomonie, one of the most important mercantile concerns of the city, was born in Norway, May 1, 1857, son of Peter and Sigrid (Overby) Graven. The parents, who were farmers, came to America in 1868. Landing at New York, they came west to Wisconsin, settling at Avoca, Iowa County, which place they made their home for ten years. In 1878 they came to Dunn County, and from that time until their death resided in Downsville, Peter Graven (Sr.) being employed in the lumber yards. He died in 1901 and his wife in 1910. Their children were as follows: Thomas, who is deceased; Peter P., the subject of this sketch; and Martin and John (twins), of whom Martin is now agent for the C. M. & St. P. Railway at St. Paul, and John is a ranchman at Bonner, Mont. Peter P. Graven as a boy attended common school in Norway and subsequently in Iowa County, Wisconsin. He then worked three years in the lumber yards and mills at Downsville for the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company, after which he was transferred to Menomonie and for eight years was manager of their hardware store here. On April 16, 1891, he formed a co-partnership with J. C. Wilcox and the established the Graven-Wilcox Shoe Store. Their store building was located one door east of the present Bank of Menomonie on Main Street, and they remained there until 1896, at which time they removed to their present location, 336 Main Street. This building measures 30×90 feet in ground plan and has 2,700 square feet of floor space, including a full basement. The concern carries the best and most popular brands of shoes and operates a large repair department, equipped with the most modern machinery of the Goodyear type and employing two or three men. This co-partnership has now lasted 33 years and is one of the oldest in the state. Mr. Graven does the clerical work and Mr. Wilcox the buying, though both also work on the floor as salesmen. Mr. Graven is a member of the Rotary Club and also of the Menomonie Commercial Club and the Menomonie Improvement Association. On Oct. 13, 1887, he was married in Duluth, Minn., to Ragna Wollan, daughter of Halvor and Ingeborg Wollan. Her parents, natives of Norway, came to Menomonie, Wis., in 1882, later moving to Duluth, where the mother still resides, the father being deceased. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Wollan were as follows: Harold, who is general superintendent for the Mahoning Iron & Steel Co. at Hibbing; Ingvald, deputy auditor for St. Louis County, Minn.; Hannah, now Mrs. Torvic, a widow residing in West Duluth; and Ragna, wife of Peter P. Graven of Menomonie. Mr. and Mrs. Graven have three children, Paul, Anker and Leif. Paul is now supervisor of vocational training in Madison, Wis., and lieutenant governor of the Kiwanis Club in southern Wisconsin and Michigan. He married Emily, a grand-daughter of H. D. Fisher of Florence. Wis., and he and his wife have two children, Pauline Emily and Paul Fisher. Anker resides in Chicago, being associated with the firm of Rapp & Rapp, architects. He is a graduate of the University of Illinois. Leif, who was graduated from the dental department of Northwestern University, is now a dentist in Chicago, having offices in the Stewart building. The Graven family are members of the Norwegian Lutheran Church in Menomonie, and Mrs. Graven is a very active worker in its societies.

Charles Bates, an early settler in Dunn County, of which he was a resident for many years, engaged first in lumbering and later in farming, but who has passed away, was born in Hessen, Germany, Dec. 8, 1847, son of Joseph and Margaret (Wolf) Bates. Both parents died in Germany, which was their native land. Their son Charles was reared and educated there and subsequently learned the trade of shoemaker. In 1865 he came to the United States, landing in New York and coming direct to Chicago, where for a short time he remained, working at his trade. Then going to Menomonee, Mich., he became connected with the lumber industry, working in the woods. About 1869 or 1870 he came to Dunn County, locating in Eau Galle, where he entered the employ of Carson & Rand, who sent him into the woods as a "lumberjack," in which manner he was occupied for four years. At the end of that time, or in 1873, desirous to establish a home, as he was now married, he bought 80 acres of timber land in Section 13, town of Weston, from the Fox River Lumber Company and began to improve it. By 1886 he had broken a considerable portion of the land. He then bought other land, in Sections 22, 23 and 26, in the same town of Weston and started to build up another farm. This latter he operated until 1906, in which year he retired from farming, and, with his wife, moved to the village of Elmwood, Pierce County, where he followed the occupation of stock buyer until 1918, when he finally retired. He remained a resident of that village until his death, which took place April 27, 1924, when he was in his seventy-seventh year. During his active period Mr. Bates showed himself a useful citizen in various ways and was a prominent man in his community. For several years he was treasurer of the town of Weston and he also helped to organize the Downsville Creamery Company and build its plant. He was a Catholic in religion and a member of the Knights of Columbus. Mr. Bates was married Jan. 5, 1873, in Eau Galle, to Josephine Haag. She was born in Germany, Oct. 13, 1854, daughter of Peter and Mary (Seng) Haag, also natives of that country. They came to America and to Dunn County, Wisconsin, in 1856, settling in Eau Galle, where for six or seven years Mr. Haag followed the carpenter's trade. At the end of that time he settled with his family on land in the town of Eau Galle, and there in time built up a good farm, which is now owned by Henry Weinzel. Mr. Haag, who was born Feb. 3, 1821, died Sept. 20, 1906. His wife Mary, born Oct. 17, 1824, died March 9, 1905. Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bates were the parents of five children, namely: Mary, now Mrs. Peter A. Weber of the town of Weston; Edward and Henry, both of whom are prominent farmers in the same town; Bertha, who is Mrs. Bertha Morrison and is now living in the village of Elmwood with her mother; and Florence, who is teaching school at Ely, Minn.

Frederick Borm, proprietor of a successful lumber business in Downsville, is a man who gained his experience many years ago in the woods and mills, when the logging and lumbering industry was the most flourishing in this region. He was born at Belschwitz Thiergart, West Prussia, Germany, Aug. 1, 1864. Of his parents, the father died when Frederick was very young, but the mother, Mrs. Wilhelmina Borm, is still living, being a resident of Frystadt, West Prussia, and now 84 years old. She resided with a daughter, Anna, who is Mrs. Friedrich Stein of Frystadt. Frederick Borm as a boy attended public school in his native land. In 1883, at the age of 19, he emigrated to the United States, leaving Germany, April 11, on the steamer Rhein, and, coming directly west after landing, arrived at Menomonie, May 4. Here he found work in the sawmill of the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company, and was thus occupied for three weeks. The company then transferred him to Cedar Falls as lumber grader and in that branch of the industry he remained for six years, at the end of that time being promoted to the position of lumber salesman there. In 1890 the company sent him to Cumberland, Barron County to grade 7,000 000 feet of lumber and direct how it should be sawed. That job took him four months, at the end of which time he returned to Cedar Falls, but in the fall of that year the company transferred him to Downsville as lumber salesman and general outside superintendent, and he officiated in those capacities until the mill closed down in 1900. He remained with the company until 1904, to help on the clean-up. He then purchased the retail yard of The Knapp, Stout & Co. Company, and has since been proprietor of the same, handling lumber and general builders' supplies, such as lath, shingles, windows, doors, building paper and cement. He has built up a good business and has long been one of the substantial and leading citizens of Downsville. In 1904 he was elected secretary and manager of the Downsville Co-operative Creamery Co., which is the largest creamery in the county, and he is still serving as such, being also a stockholder in the concern. In 1917 he was elected secretary, manager and treasurer of the Downsville Telephone Co., in which position he is still serving. He has also served in various other capacities of either a business or official nature. From March, 1904 to 1916 he was secretary of the Beavers' Fraternal Reserve Fund. From 1901 to 1918 he was a member of the school board, acting as its clerk for all of that time except for three years, and in 1921 he was elected treasurer of the board and is still serving. When in 1914 a law was passed that each county in the state should have a committee on common schools, representing the county, he was elected a member of it and served as such until the law was revoked in 1919. He is a stockholder in the Farmers & Merchants Bank of Downsville and is interested more or less in farm holdings in the

He owns and occupies a fine residence on Main Street which he built in county. 1894-95. Mr. Borm was married Dec. 22, 1894, to Eva Brown, of the town of Weston, a daughter of Edwin and Adelia (Howison) Brown, and who was born Jan. 31, 1873. Her father was a native of Vermont and her mother of Canada and they were early settlers in Dunn County. After eight years of married life Mrs. Eva Borm died on May 24, 1903. She left two children, Velma Gladys, born Oct. 19, 1895, and Stanley Edwin, born Feb. 15, 1899. Velma Gladys, who was graduated from the Menomonie High School and the La Crosse Business College, subsequently worked for some time in Montana in a telegraph office and later in the office of the O. & N. Lumber Co. of Menomonie. She married C. A. Timmerman of Weston, Dunn County, Wis., and they now reside on a farm in that town. They have two children, James Edwin and Mildred Jeane. Stanley Edwin Borm was graduated from the Menomonie High School and was later a student for one year in Ripon College. During the war period he joined the students' training corps at the Stout Institute and was a member of it at the close of hostilities. He is now clerk in a general store in Downsville.

Lawrence Kearns, now deceased, but formerly a well known and respected farmer in the town of Eau Galle, was born in St. John, New Brunswick, and grew to manhood in his native province, where he married Rosanna Mansfield, who was also born in St. John. In 1868 they came to Wisconsin, settling in the town of Eau Galle, Dunn County, on 80 acres of wild and heavily wooded land, without buildings, in Section 30, on the elevation known as Chase Hill. Making a clearing, Mr. Kearns put up a log dwelling and some log barns, and then began the task of developing a farm. He had set his feet in the path marked out by the many pioneers who had come into this region before him, and he and his family had to endure the same privations and perform the same or a similar amount of hard work carried on for a period of many years. But all this they did and in due time reaped their With each passing year the appearance of the Kearns farm improved, and reward. after some years Mr. Kearns bought an additional tract of 80 acres, which gave him a farm of 160 acres. He also built a more commodious residence to replace the original log structure, and although the new one was built partly of logs, it was larger, more substantial and more commodious. There he and his wife lived until 1896, in which year he retired, rented the farm, and moved to the village of Eau Galle. Later he and his wife moved to the village of Rock Elm in Pierce County, but still later returned to the home farm, then and now owned by their son, Thomas. Here Mr. Kearns died Dec. 5, 1919, and Mrs. Kearns on Oct. 5, 1921. They were the parents of six children: William, deceased; Thomas, now operating the old home farm; Mary, who married Cornelius Glass and resides in Rock Elm, Pierce County, Wis ; and Richard, Edward and Susan, who are in California, Susan being the wife of John Schafner.

Thomas Kearns, a substantial and progressive farmer of the town of Eau Galle, was born in this town, on the farm he now owns and operates, on Aug. 15, 1869, son of Lawrence and Rosanna (Mansfield) Kearns. His parents had settled on it in the previous year, and it was still little more than a tract of wild land with several log buildings on it, in one of which the family lived. It was situated on Chase Hill in Section 30, and where he was old enough, young Thomas attended the Chase Hill District School, when he acquired the elements of an English education. Before he was through with his books he had begun an apprenticeship to farming. The work was mostly of a primitive kind, and was all hard, consisting of grubbing, clearing and breaking the land from 16 to 18 hours a day, the only restful interval coming on Sunday, when church services were attended by the family. But, as Mr. Kearns says, it was the sort of work to make men, and he grew up strong and self-reliant, as did most of the boys of his day who went through the same experience. In course of time, as the farm became more developed, the work lightened and it was not necessary to toil so laboriously for so many hours a day. In 1892 he was united in marriage with Margaret Murray, with whom he spent six happy years, when death called her and she passed away in 1898 leaving three children: Nellie, now Mrs. James McDonald; William, who died at the age of eight years; and Rosa, who became the wife of Robert Carter and resides in California. For two years after his wife's death Mr. Kearns worked out for others, the home farm being rented out to a tenant by his father, who had retired two years before. Then in 1901, Thomas bought it and in October, of the same year, he was married to Anna Apple of Morton Hill, town of Eau Galle. The home farm being now his own property and every improvement he made on it so much direct advantage to himself, he threw himself with a renewed spirit of vigor into his work, and since then has cleared and broken 15 acres more of the land, fenced the entire farm, and erected a large basement barn of 36 x 70 feet in ground plan and installed with the humane equipment, besides building a milk house and making other minor improvements which need not be specified. Thus he has gained high standing as a representative of the agricultural interests of his town. Of his second marriage seven children have been born, namely: Maggie, Ethel, Edward, Esther, Mabel, Neil and Rita Mae. The family are members of the Catholic church.

Andrew Seipel, an early settler in the town of Eau Galle, who died many years ago, was born in Germany, whence he emigrated to the United States, settling at Eau Galle, Wis. He was married at Eau Claire, Wis., to Mary M. Reid, who also was a native of Germany. In 1859 they came to Dunn County, locating in the village of Eau Galle, where at first he worked for Knapp, Stout & Co., and later for Carson & Rand, both in their mills and in the pine woods. In 1862 he bought 160 acres of wild land in Section 23, town of Eau Galle. There were no buildings on the property and no clearing, which latter Mr. Seipel made at once, after which he put up a log dwelling and stables, his family moving into the house. For several seasons, however, he continued to work for Carson & Rand. He also built a small barn and developed some of his land, following general farming. Later he sold 80 acres of his 160, but continued his residence on the other 80, which was improved, and where he made his home until his death on Nov. 15, 1873. His wife Mary, who still survives him, is a resident of Plum City, Wis., and is now 82 years old. They had four children: Henry, who owns and conducts the old home farm; Peter, who lives in Minneapolis; Charles, of Plum City, Wis., and Andrew, who died in 1905.

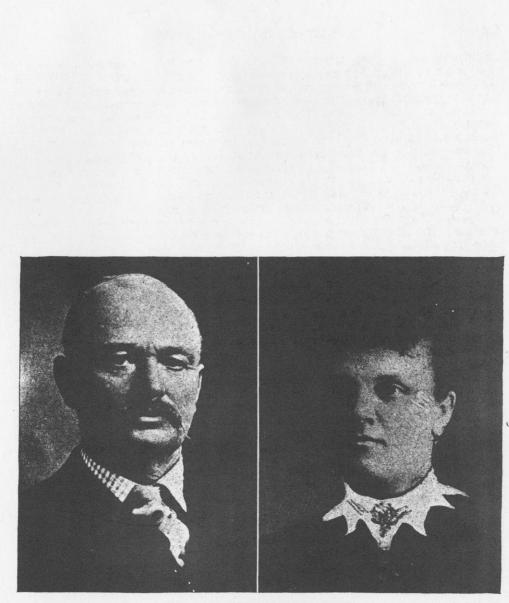

Henry Seipel, an industrious and successful farmer of Section 23, town of Eau Galle, was born on this farm Jan. 2, 1865, son of Andrew and Mary M. (Reid) Seipel. His parents had taken the land in 1862 and had made very little progress on it, owing to the father's being in the employ of Carson & Rand. The early death of the father, in 1873, when the subject of this sketch was only eight years old, made it particularly hard for the mother, he being the eldest son and child. How she got along for the next few years has not been told, but when Henry was a boy of 12 a large part-indeed, the principal part-of the hard work, fell upon him, and he became in a sense the head of the family, the one on whom his mother placed reliance, caring for and helping to rear his younger brothers. He has never forsaken the old place, but has stuck to it through all the different periods of his life, doing a man's work and improving it according to his opportunities. In time he bought the interests of his brothers in the home place and became sole owner, it being a farm of 80 acres. In 1889 he built a fine nine-room residence, and in 1905 a good basement barn of 35 x 52 feet, equipped with James stanchions. The year 1919 saw further advancement, as he then erected a tile silo of 10 x 32 feet, a fine machine shed of 29 x 42 feet with sliding doors, a corn crib and other necessary buildings. The soil of the farm is a fine clay loam, producing abundant crops, and both the Big and Little Missouri creeks pass through the farm, furnishing good drainage and a good water supply for both crops and stock. Mr. Seipel has a fine herd of grade Holstein cattle, and he and his sons are working into pure bred stock, having a pure bred sire and two pure bred heifers. He is also raising Poland-China hogs. He belongs to the Beavers' Reserve Fund, and he and his family are members of St. Henry's Catholic congregation at Eau Galle. Mr. Seipel was married in 1889, to Johanna Hilmueller of Union, Pierce County, Wis., she having been born June 19, 1870. Mr. and Mrs. Seipel are the parents of 11 children, Bertha, George, Henrietta, Clara, Anna, Henry J., Arthur B., Andrew, Richard, Ida and Clarence, concerning whom the following is a further record. Bertha, born March 6, 1890, is now the wife of Matt Schoeber of Eau Galle, and the mother of seven children, Genevieve, Raymond, Arthur, Marcella, Rosella, Lillian and Lawrence. George, born Jan. 26, 1893, has not married. Henrietta. born March 26, 1894, is now Mrs. Nick Leckler of Pierce County and has five children, Arnold, Loraine, Lyman, Lawrence and Dolores. Clara, born Jan. 8, 1896, is now Mrs. John Leckler of Eau Galle and has four children, George, Leona, Joseph and Henry. Anna, born April 17, 1898, is the wife of Ed Zimmer of Pierce County, Wis., and has three children, Cyril, Marie and Esther. Henry J. was born Oct. 8, 1899; Arthur B., Aug. 2, 1901; Andrew, July 28, 1903; Richard, July 13, 1905; Ida, April 15, 1908, and Clarence, July 29, 1910.

Ole A. Pederson, now of Colfax, who was engaged for a number of years in farming and dairying in Section 27, town of Grant, was born in the town of Colfax, Dunn County, Wis., July 31, 1864, son of Peder Anderson Oldsberg and his wife, Carrie Anderson Oldsberg. The parents of Ole were natives of Norway and farmers by occupation. The parents of Peder Anderson Oldsberg died when he was young and he was thrown upon his own resources. These were sufficient to enable him to earn a living but not to make any great advance in fortune, especially after he had been married in 1863, to Carrie Anderson. So early in the same year they emigrated to the United States, and, coming west to Wisconsin, lived for a short time in Eau Then they came to Dunn County, the husband and father finding work on the farm of Ole Berntson in the town of Colfax. After a while he homesteaded 160 acres of wild land, cut logs and with them built a log house and barn, which are still standing on the farm, now owned by T. E. Thompson. His life for years was that of a pioneer farmer, involving the clearing of land, for which during the early period he used an ox team, and as he made progress he enlarged the scope of his agricultural operations, being engaged in general farming until old age forced him to retire. He then took up his residence in Colfax village, where he died in 1919. His wife Carrie is still living, being now 82 years old. They were the parents of five children, all of whom are now living, namely: Ole A., subject of this sketch; Pauline, wife of John Jacobson of the town of Colfax; Albert, a farmer in the town of Colfax; and George and Alfred of Colfax. Ole A. Pederson was reared in the town of Colfax, this county, where he went to school. He helped his father clear and develop the home farm, and later he worked 12 winters in the woods as a lum-In 1898 he bought 160 acres of land in the town of Colfax and began berjack. farming on his own account. After remaining there for about three years, he sold that farm and moved to the Evan Thompson farm of 160 acres in Section 27. there he remained until March 1, 1925, when he moved to Colfax. farming and dairying, keeping a herd of 16 grade Holstein and Guernsey cattle. He did mixed Mr. Pederson was married on his parents' farm Dec. 30, 1897, to Gunhild Thompson, daughter of Evan and Ingeborg Thompson, her parents, now deceased, having been early settlers in Dunn County. Mr. and Mrs. Pederson have one child, Ingeborg Caroline, who is now a trained nurse in Eau Claire.

Silas Unser, who is now living practically retired on a five acre tract of land in Section 35, town of Eau Galle, was born in Germany, Feb. 14, 1851, son of John and Clara (Oberla) Unser. The family came to the United States in 1853, and after landing in this country, remained in New York for a year, at the end of that time coming west to Wisconsin. During the next 13 years they resided successively in various places in this state, in 1867 settling at Jefferson, where they were engaged in farming for four years. Then, about 1871, they moved to Pepin County, taking a farm in the town of Waterville, which was their last earthly home as John Unser died there in 1877 and his wife Clara in 1889. Silas Unser acquired his education in rural schools in Pepin County and assisted his father in farming until the latter's death. He then bought the home farm in Pepin County and operated it successfully until 1908, when he sold it and, moving to the town of Eau Galle, purchased the tract of five acres in Section 36, on which he is now living, and which is about one mile from the village of Eau Galle. For ten years, in partnership with his son, William P., he conducted a store in that village. He is cultivating his little tract of land and keeps a cow, horse and chickens, but is no longer a general farmer, and his present work simply serves to give him a little healthful exercise. While living in Pepin County Mr. Unser served two years as assessor of the town of Waterville, and for five years he was a member of the town board, besides serving for some time on the school board. He was married, Nov. 5, 1876, to Mary Notham, who was born in the state of New York, Jan. 8, 1858, and of this union two children have been born: William P., April 16, 1879, and Charles F., Sept. 16, 1882. William P., who is now engaged in the oil business at Durand, married Belle Pease and has one child, Galen. Charles F., who is a prominent farmer in the town of Eau Galle, married Nellie Pease, and they have seven children, Ethel L., Donald C., Kenneth E., Floyd F., Charles S., Dorothy B. and Catherine Marie. The family are members of the St. Henry Catholic congregation at Eau Galle.

John B. Lutz, founder of one of the prosperous business enterprises of Menomonie, known as the Menomonie Bottling Works, who passed away some years ago, was born in the state of Pennsylvania, Sept. 20, 1853, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Lutz. When young he accompanied his parents to Delphos, Ohio, where in time both died. It was there that he completed his education, after which he learned the cooper's trade, which he followed for some time in Delphos and later in Saginaw, Mich. It was from the latter place that he came in 1881, in company with several other men, to Dunn County, Wisconsin, and at Knapp he entered the employ of A. R. Hall, with whom he remained two years. He then came to Menomonie and opened a barber shop, his brother Walter, who was a barber, working for him. After carrying on that business for 12 years Mr. Lutz sold out and established the Menomonie Bottling Works, manufacturing all kinds of soft drinks, and in that business he continued until his death, which occurred Dec. 10, 1918. He was fraternally affiliated with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the Modern Woodmen of America, and was sufficiently prominent as a citizen to be elected alderman from the Second Ward. Since his death the business he established has been carried on by his widow, who has completely remodeled the factory, installed new machinery and greatly increased the trade. Mr. Lutz was married Dec. 10, 1882, to Nettie Curtis, who was born at Fall City in the town of Spring Brook, Dunn County, June 23, 1859, daughter of Almon and Lucy A. (Hatch) Curtis. Her parents, natives of Ohio, came to Dunn County in the 50's, settling in the town of Spring Brook, where they followed farming for many years. They finally retired and moved to Menomonie, where Mr. Curtis died in 1902. Mrs. Curtis passed away in 1919, at Rice Lake at the home of her daughter, Mrs. James Robbins. They were the parents of seven children, Alfred, Albert L., Emmerson A., Nettie, Lilly, Anna and Hattie. Alfred died in Bend, Ore., in 1922. Albert L., who was born April 30, 1853, is now in Port Angelus, Wash. Emmerson A., born Oct. 18, 1856, was a carpenter and while working on a building in Eau Claire in 1906 he fell and was killed. Nettie, as already mentioned, is the widow of John B. Lutz. Lilly, born July 3, 1861, is now Mrs. F. L. Wilsox of Superior, Wis. Anna and Hattie, who are twins, were born Nov. 16, 1863. Anna, who married E. J. Bates, is now a widow residing in Menomonie. She has one daughter, Hattie E., who is a graduate of the Menomonie High School and the Superior State Normal School and taught school two years in Cumberland, Barron County. Since her return to Menomonie she has been a teacher in the high school here. She is concerned in various social activities and is a member of the local chapter of the Eastern Star. Hattie is the widow of James Robbins and resides at Rice Lake, Barron County. Mr. and Mrs. Lutz had one child, Avis C., born July 8, 1888, who was graduated from the Menomonie High School with the class of 1908. She subsequently took a two years' course in the Normal College of the American Gymnastic Union at Indianapolis. and had just started to teach school when she was taken sick and died. Mrs. Lutz, who has a comfortable home at 1121 Second Street, is a member of the Unitarian Church. She belongs also to the Royal Neighbors and the Woman's Relief Corps and has a large circle of chosen friends and acquaintances.

Joseph Hofacker, of Section 6, town of Eau Galle, who during his active career of many years has done good pioneer work in the development of farm land, was born in Germany, Sept. 8, 1853, son of Jacob and Catherine (Herber) Hofacker. The mother having died in Germany on June 26, 1855, the father with his son Joseph, in 1869, came to America and to Dunn County, Wisconsin, settling in the village of Eau Galle, where Jacob Hofacker resided with a married daughter, Mrs. Mary Wolf, being unoccupied for many years. He died Dec. 18, 1891. Joseph Hofacker after arriving in Eau Galle entered the employ of Carson & Rand, and was with them for seven years, during which time he worked both in their mill and in the woods. At the end of that time he began farming, buying 80 acres of wild land in Section 11, town of Eau Galle, to which he later added 40 acres more, which gave him a farm of 120 acres. Then the hard pioneer work began, the felling of timber, grubbing of stumps and breaking of the virgin soil, besides the erection of necessary buildings. The first buildings Mr. Hofacker put up were a log house, log barn and granary. Much of the timber he cut down was burned on the spot, there being then no available market for it; it was a great waste, though unavoid-After living on that place and developing about 25 acres of the land, Mr. able. Hofacker sold it to his brother Corrad and bought 86 acres in Sections 6 and 7, town of Eau Galle, a tract that forms a part of his present farm, and which had been partly improved by its previous owner, John Engeldinger. The buildings were of log construction. Mr. Hofacker kept on steadily with his improvements, and in 1902 built a fine nine-room house of brick veneer construction. In 1909 he built a basement barn of 36 x 68 feet, with swinging stalls, and from time to time has put up other buildings. In 1909 he bought 80 acres from Jerdin and Engeldinger, which gave him a fine farm of 166 acres. He also cleared 125 acres of his land but in 1917 sold 80 acres to his son John. His cattle are of the Durham breed, while he has a pure Brown Swiss sire. His principal activities are in the line of dairy farming, and he is a stockholder in the cooperative creamery at Elmwood. For six years he served as treasurer of School District No. 4. Mr. Hofacker was married Nov. 27, 1879, to Mary Engeldinger, who was born in Dodge County, Wis., May 22, 1863, daughter of John and Mary (Holbach) Engeldinger. Her parents were natives of Belgium who came to America in 1856, settling in Woodland, Dodge County, Wis., where they were engaged in farming until 1873. They then came to Dunn County, taking 86 acres of land in Sections 6 and 7, town of Eau Galle. This was a tract of timber land with a log shanty on it and they made their home there until they sold the place to Joseph Hofacker in 1892. They then moved to Durand, where Mr. Engeldinger engaged in the implement business, being thus occupied until his death on Jan. 23, 1903. His wife still survives him, having now attained the age of 87 years. Mr. and Mrs. Hofacker are the parents of nine children, Catherine, Margaret, John, Lena, Edward, Clara, Frances, Ida and Lawrence, of whom the following is a further record: Catherine, born Jan. 30, 1881, is the wife of Nick Schwebach of Menomonie and the mother of five children, Margaret, Helen, Marie, Elizabeth and Catherine. Margaret, born July 8, 1883, who married Joseph Noll of the town of Weston and has four children, Edward, Clarence, Ida and Marie. John, born May 22, 1885, is a farmer in the town of Eau Galle, as yet unmarried. Lena, born June 24, 1887, married Tony Herman, and died March 24, 1920, leaving four children, Martin, Clarence, Esther and Janet. Edward, born Oct. 6, 1889, is residing on the home farm, unmarried. Clara, born Sept. 8, 1891, married Creed Leak and they reside in Minneapolis. Frances, born June 4, 1894, is the wife of William Stevens of Elmwood and they have three children, John, James and Edward. Ida, born Feb. 25, 1899, and Lawrence, born May 15, 1903, are unmarried and are living on the home farm. The family are Catholics in religion and belong to the Catholic congregation at Elmwood.

Eugene Wolf, a well known and representative farmer of the town of Eau Galle, having 240 acres of land, was born in Germany, Sept. 6, 1862, son of Wendlin and Mary (Carl) Wolf. Both parents died in Germany. Eugene, who was there educated, came to the United States in 1881 at the age of 19 years. When he landed at New York he was without funds and his brother Charley sent him \$40 to pay his fare to Shell Lake, Wis. He arrived at Menomonie on Nov. 12, and three days later proceeded to Shell Lake, where he went to work for the Shell Lake Lumber Co. at wages of \$20 per month. As his brother had also lent him \$20 with which to buy clothes, he started in this country \$60 in debt. After being a year in the employ of the Shell Lake Lumber Co. he became cook in their camps and his wages were then raised to \$50 a month. As cook he was employed six years both winter and summer, and subsequent to that six years more as cook during the winters only, all this time working for the same company. In 1887 he made an important change in his manner of life, buying 80 acres of land in Section 3, town of Eau Galle, Dunn County, and starting in to build up a farm. There were some old and poor buildings on the place, which he used for a number of years until he could replace them One of these was a log house, measuring $16 \ge 22$ feet, which was with better ones. the first home of the family, for he married in the following year. The steps of his progress in developing this farm were practically the same as those taken by other pioneers, and led gradually over a rough and tedious path to that haven of prosperous independence that he had in mind from the start. During that long period of toil he occasionally bought additional land until he owned 330 acres, 90 acres of which, however, he subsequently gave to his son Joseph. In 1902 he built the substantial brick residence that he and his family now occupy, and into which they moved from the original log house. He had already in the previous year built a granary, remodeled his barn, drilled a 60-foot well and put up a windmill over it. In 1912 he built a corn crib and hog house and in 1922 put up a fine tile silo of 12 imes 30 feet. During his many years of labor, while working for his own advancement and the comfort of his family, he was at the same time playing a part among those who were building up the agricultural resources of the county, a work started by the pioneers and still going on. For many years he gave his principal attention to stock raising, to which industry his farm was well adapted, the Eau Galle River running through two of his 80-acre tracts; but of late years he has been engaged in diversified farming. He has a good herd of grade Durham cattle, Oxford sheep, and raises many hogs. He has never aspired to public office but at one time served as road overseer. On May 1, 1888, Eugene Wolf was united in marriage with Lepoltine Eder, a native of Austria. She died Oct. 1, 1914. The issue of this marriage was six children, Joseph, Mary, Henry, Edward, Wendlin and Benedict. The eldest of these, Joseph, born June 7, 1890, and now a prominent farmer of the town of Eau Galle, married Christine Pischl and has four children, Robert, Annabel, Joseph and Francis, the two latter being twins. Mary, born Feb. 2, 1894, became the wife of George Fox, who died from influenza, leaving her with two children, Eugene and Adeline. She is now Mrs. Thos. Fedie of Buffalo County. Henry, born June 2, 1898, who is a patrolman in the town of Weston, married Leslie McRoberts and has one child, Everett. Edward was born Oct. 2, 1902; Wendlin, Nov. 21, 1908, and Benedict, Nov. 17, 1910. The three last mentioned are living on the home farm. Mr. Wolf and his family are members of St. Henry's Catholic congregation at Eau Galle.

William F. Fuhrman, a pioneer of the town of Eau Galle, now deceased, was born in Germany, where he married Fredericka Grunska, and in 1852, they came to the United States, settling first in Dodge County, Wisconsin, where they remained until 1861, during which period of nine years he was employed in the brick yards and at other work, and, he and his wife being thrifty and economical, managed to accumulate some property. In the year last mentioned, 1861, he traded this property for 80 acres of timber land in Section 14, town of Eau Galle, came here with his family and settled on his undeveloped farm, if it may so be called. Though lumbering operations had been going on in the town for some years, not much farming had yet been done and Mr. Fuhrman and wife were in true sense pioneers and had to do pioneer work of the hardest and most primitive kind. But they had anticipated all this and steeled their hearts and minds for the struggle in which they were finally victorious. Making a clearing and putting up a log shanty and hay shed were the first steps taken by Mr. Fuhrman, and then, with his stock consisting of but one cow and one pig, he went on building up his farm. Nothing could compensate for the labor demanded and the hardships to be endured save the healthy pleasure in work, and the triumphant feeling that Mr. and Mrs. Fuhrman enjoyed occasionally when they marked some visible sign of advancement—another acre cleared and planted, a calf or a litter of pigs born, a better building erected, or a wagon and team secured. These things encouraged them and they gradually took their place among the substantial farmers of the town. Mr. Fuhrman also increased the size of his farm, later adding 40 acres more, in Section 15, which gave it an area of 120 acres. After operating it until 1879, he turned it over to his son but continued to reside on it until his death on March 27, 1903. His wife Fredericka is also deceased. Their family consisted of nine children: Mary, now Mrs Fred Gerber of Elsworth, Wis.; William H., of the town of Eau Galle; Matilda, now Mrs. Isaiah Seipel of Eau Claire; Julius of Big Stone County, Minn.; Minnie, who married August Fuhrman and is now deceased; Charles of Big Stone County, Minn.; Paulina, now Mrs. Julia Fuhrman of Big Stone County, Minn.; Lewis of St. Paul, Minn., and Augusta who died in infancy.

William H. Fuhrman, for many years an active farmer in the town of Eau Galle, but now practically retired, was born in Dodge County, Wisconsin, Sept. 14, 1856, son of William F. and Fredericka (Grunska) Fuhrman. His parents' life story has already been told. He acquired his education in the Weber school, District No. 2, town of Eau Galle, and being the eldest son in the family, he was the first to feel the grind of hard work in helping his father improve and operate the home farm. He was, however, strong and could handle as much work in a day as practically any man, and thus he worked with and for his father until 1879, in which year he bought the farm and began working for himself. Progressive in character, he sought at once to make the place up to date and for some time was busy in remodeling and improving the buildings, mending or putting up fences, and also adding new buildings to the place, among them a new frame residence, a hay barn, a cattle and horse barn, a granary and a fine hog house with cement floors and walls. He also bought two more 80-acre tracts of land, one in Section 22 and one in Section 11. The former he developed and farmed it in conjunction with the original home property until 1909, when he sold it to his son Paul, who is now conducting it. On January, 1918, he deeded the home farm to his son, Ludwig C., who is operating it and with whom he makes his home. He still owns the 80-acre tract in Section 11. He and Peter Weber, whose lands adjoined, donated one acre to the Lutheran congregation, of which Mr. Fuhrman and family are members and a church edifice was built on the land. Mr. Fuhrman was married Oct. 30, 1881, to Ottillie Kelm, who was born in Germany, Feb. 3, 1857. She proved a loving companion and faithful helpmate, and after 41 years of wedded life, passed away, deeply mourned, on Jan. 28, 1923. She had been the mother of ten children, who were born as follows: Paul A. F., July 6, 1882; Julius E., Feb. 3, 1884; Fredericka W. L., Dec. 6, 1885; Rosetta E. M., Aug. 11, 1887; Emma, Dec. 31, 1889; Herman R. W., Sept. 5, 1891; Ludwig C., born July 15, 1893; Ida M., May 25, 1895; Anna M. B., Oct. 14, 1897, and Walter A. C., born Jan. 28, 1903, who died Feb. 6, 1913. Paul, who is own a farmer in the town of Eau Galle, married Er ma Moritz and has seven children, Laura, Helen, Esther, Clara, Gladys, Walter and Marvin. Julius, a farmer in Pierce County, married Anna Naseband and has two children, Margaret and Fredericka, who is Mrs. August Lehman of the town of Weston, has Leonard. three children, Alma, Oscar and Arnold. Rosetta is the wife of William Lehman of the town of Eau Galle and the mother of five children, Agnes, Elmer, Lloyd, Ruth and Leona. Emma, Mrs. Christ Henkel of the town of Weston, has four children, Emma, Herman, Walter and Elva. Herman, who is a merchant in Durand, married Myrtle Patnod, and they have two children, William and Harold. Ludwig C., conducting the old home farm, married Ethel Thompson and has two children, Muriel and Marvel. Ida is the wife of Herman Moritz of the town of Weston and the mother of four children, Carl, Elinor, Alfred and Vernon. Anna is unmarried and resides in the town of Weston.

Charles Norb, now living retired in Downsville, is a man who has had a long and active career in several lines of industry, has acquired a competence through hard work and steady habits and is the head of a family distinguished for the same sterling qualities. He was born in Haugeson, Norway, March 10, 1851, son ef

Elling Ellingson and Asheria Johnson Ellingson. As a boy he acquired some educa-tion in the public schools and when 13 years old went to sea with the ambition of becoming a sailor. During the next few years he visited practically all the Norwegian ports besides a number in England, Germany and Holland. At the age of 20, in 1871, he took passage in a sailing vessel bound for Quebec, Canada, arriving there after a voyage of seven weeks and two days. Thence he made his way riding in box cars on the railroad to Kandiyohi County, Minnesota, where he remained two years, being employed on the construction of the Northern Pacific railroad in that state and Dakota. In 1873 he came to Dunn County, Wis., locating in Menomonie, where, like practically all the other new comers, he went to work for the lumber firm of Knapp, Stout & Co., which after June 1, 1878, was known as the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company. It was in the capacity of cook that he entered their employ, and as such he worked in camps, on the log drives and for one summer on a steamboat on the Chippewa. Mr. Norb remained with the company until they closed their plant at Downsville in 1900. He then entered the employ of the Starr Lumber Co., working in their camps until they quit business here in 1912. In the meanwhile he had been preparing for the day when there should be no more timber to fell, having as far back as 1877 bought 40 acres of land in the town of Weston, practically all of it being wild, and through the subsequent years, while he was away cooking, and earning by that means some ready cash, his wife and sons were improving the farm. More land was also bought from time to time to increase its area until he had 220 acres, while the buildings in time included a good house and a large barn of 36 x 75 feet with a full basement and installed with patent stanchions and other modern equipment. When Mr. Norb found himself without a job so far as the lumber companies were concerned, he had no occasion to worry but took up his personal residence on his farm, which by that time was in good condition and was being successfully operated by his sons. There he lived for some seven years, doing enough light work to keep from rusting out, and then in the fall of 1919 he sold the farm and retired, taking up his residence in Downsville, where he built the first bungalow residence ever constructed here, in which he and his two surviving sons now reside. He was married in October, 1877, to Josephine Olson, who was born in Norway, in 1844, and came to the United States about 1875. settling in Downsville, Dunn County, Wis, where the rest of her life was spent, her death occurring Dec. 5, 1920. Mr. and Mrs. Norb had three children, Alex, Ole and John. Alex, born July 8, 1878, helped his brothers develop the home farm and is now retired and living with his father. Ole, born Oct. 9, 1879, is also retired and living with his father. John, born Oct. 16, 1881, like his other two brothers, helped to build up the family homestead in the town of Weston, and resided there until his death, which occurred May 20, 1913. The father and surviving sons are members of Our Saviour's Lutheran Church and are recognized as good, substantial and reliable citizens who have well earned the ease and comfort they are now enjoying.

August F. Seitz, a representative farmer of the town of Eau Galle, was born on the farm on which he now lives, April 26, 1881, son of Frank and Augusta (Krueger) The parents were natives of Germany who came to the United States in Seitz. 1871, settling in Dodge County, Wis., where they resided for seven years. In 1878 they came to Dunn County and bought 80 acres in Section 6, town of Eau Galle. This had been taken up as a homestead by a Mr. Ramsey, whose rights they bought. Some of the land had been broken and a rude log dwelling and log stable erected. Into the dwelling Mr. Seitz moved his family and then began the development of a In 1888 he bought 40 acres adjoining his original place, which gave him a farm. farm of 120 acres, and this he continued to improve and operate until his death on July 6, 1889. The mother, Mrs. Augusta Seitz, is still living and resides with her daughter, Olga, in Los Angeles, Calif. This daughter, born June 20, 1874, was the elder of the two children of this worthy couple, the other being August F., the subject of this sketch. August F. Seitz, after his father's death, cooperated with his mother in conducting the home farm and was thus engaged for several years, during which time a good frame house was built on the place, replacing the original log residence. In 1899 August F. took over the entire management of the farm, and in 1919 purchased it. In 1921 he bought another 40 acres of land thus building up the farm to an area of 160 acres, which is its size at present. He has made some valuable improvements, having built a basement barn of 36 x 76 feet in ground plan and made a number of repairs or alterations to the other buildings so as to render them adequate to the necessities of an up-to-date farm. He has also cleared and broken several acres of new land. Mr. Seitz follows diversified farming, giving particular attention to dairving, for which purpose he keeps a good herd of grade Holstein cattle with a pure bred sire. He is also successfully raising Poland-China He has served both as clerk and director of the Morton Hill District school hogs. board, in which school he got his education, and in the year 1917 he was a member of the town board. His fraternal society affiliations are with the Modern Woodmen of America at Elmwood. On Dec. 20, 1910, Mr. Seitz was united in marriage with Mary Britton of Elmwood, who was born Feb. 4, 1884. He and his wife are the parents of three children: Olga L., born Feb. 11, 1912; Freeman A., born May 21, 1916, and Robert W., born March 26, 1923. The family are affiliated religiously with the Lutheran church.

Anton Samdahl, who has been a resident of Dunn County for the last 46 years, during 22 of which he has been engaged in farming and dairying, was born in Norway, March 24, 1857, son of Bernt and Bertha (Lund) Samdahl. The parents. who were farmers, are both deceased. Anton attended school in his native land and subsequently worked on his parents' farm until 1878, in which year he emigrated to the United States. Landing at Philadelphia, he came west to Chicago and thence direct to Menomonie, which place he reached on May 7. With the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company he got work as a blacksmith and he remained with that concern for 23 years or as long as they remained in business here. After that he followed the same occupation for 15 years in the employ of the Hydraulic Brick Co. In 1909 Mr. Samdahl had bought 80 acres of land in Sections 4 and 9, town of Menomonie, and he now settled on it and began to build up a farm. In the years that have since elapsed he has made good progress, among the buildings he has erected being a fine eight-room brick house, with modern fittings; a barn of 34 x 70 feet with brick basement, and a machine shed of 22 x 50 feet. He has also cleared 40 acres of his land and as a general farmer and dairyman keeps grade Holstein cattle. Mr. Samdahl was first married, Oct. 7, 1882, to Ingo Swenson of which union two children were born: Arthur, of North Menomonie, who married Emma Halvorson and has two children, Leo and Allen; and Martin, who is residing at home with his father. Mr. Samdahl was married in Menomonie, Oct. 12, 1902, to Hannah Wolseth, who was born in Norway, March 13, 1871, daughter of John and Anna Wolseth. Her parents are now deceased. She, herself, came to this country in 1897 and for a short time resided in Menomonie. Then she went to Boston, where she spent three years after which she went back to Norway on a visit. After her return to the United States she was married to Mr. Samdahl, as above mentioned. They attend Our Saviour's Lutheran Church of Menomonie. They have one child, Earl A., now living in Bloomer, Wis.

Sever Steen, an early settler in Dunn County who added to the agricultural resources of the town of Menomonie by the development of a farm from the wilderness, was born in Tuengen, Norway, Oct. 18, 1846. His boyhood and early youth were spent in his native land, where he attended school, and he remained there until about the year 1866, when he came to the United States and traveling west to Milwaukee, came directly on to Menomonie. It was in the busy days of Knapp, Stout & Co.'s lumber operations and young Steen went to work for the concern in the pineries, remaining in their employ for two years. After that he worked for years for Knute Thompson and helped to build the present court house. The next ten years of his life were spent as a carpenter, during which period he was married. It was in 1883 that he began his career as a farmer, renting the Enor Nelson farm in the town of Menomonie, and in 1885 he settled on a tract of 80 acres in Section 11, in the same town, which he had bought a few years before. On this tract he put up a set of log buildings and began clearing the land, his wife helping in some of the hardest work, such as grubbing, and together they made gradual progress. To earn money for immediate necessities, Mr. Steen worked occasionally at his trade, and besides improving his own place, he associated himself with other active citizens in promoting the general welfare of the town, taking a prominent part in the building of roads and the establishment of schools. He was a thoroughly good neighbor, with a kind and cheery word for all and was personally popular wherever known. When he passed away in August, 1922, his death caused sorrow in many homes. Mr. Steen's marriage, of which casual mention has been made, took place in the city of Menomonie, on July 2, 1876, and united him with Christina Christopherson, who was born in Winnebago County, Wisconsin, Dec. 11, 1856. Her parents were Ole and Anna Christopherson, natives of Norway who came to America in the late 50's, settling first near Muskego, Waukesha County, this state, whence they later removed to Winnebago County. They came to Dunn County in 1862, settling on 160 acres of land in Section 12, town of Menomonie, which they spent the remainder of their lives in developing. Mr. and Mrs. Sever Steen were the parents of two children, Anna and Arthur. Anna is now Mrs. Christ Rongstad of the town of Menomonie, and has four children, Clarence, Elvina, Marcello and Charlotte. Arthur is now helping his mother to operate the home farm, which she, herself, in the early days of her married life did so much to build up, proving a most useful helpmate to her husband. Though now 68 years old, she still preserves much of her youthful vigor and is helpful both to herself and others.

James W. Frawley, in the service of the Omaha railway at Knapp, was born in Omaha, Neb., Aug. 14, 1872, son of James W. and Catherine (Costello) Frawley. The parents were both born in Milwaukee, where the father for some years was employed in the freight department of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway. He died in 1875, and the mother, Mrs. Catherine Frawley, on March 28, 1922. James W. was educated in the public schools of Milwaukee, after which he became connected with the printer's trade, which he followed in Milwaukee for three years and 11 months. It was on May 5, 1891, that he began work for the Omaha railway in the roundhouse at Altoona, Wis., as hostler's helper, and as such he worked for three months. At the end of that time he became a fireman, in which position he remained until Sept. 15, 1897, when he was made an engineer. As such he worked most of the time on runs between Altoona and Elroy, being thus engaged until Nov. 1, 1918. He was then transferred to Knapp, Dunn County, where he has since been engineer on the helper engine. He is a member of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, also of the Knights of Columbus and the Independent Order of Foresters, in religion being a Catholic. Mr. Frawley was married June 10, 1908, to Laura Casey of Knapp, daughter of John T. and Louisa (Mills) Casey. In 1922 Mr. Frawley bought his present dwelling house on West Main Street, Knapp, which he has since remodeled into a fine modern residence.

Ole K. Myran, Jr., a substantial farmer operating a good farm in Section 3, town of Sand Creek, was born in Winnebago County, Wisconsin, Dec. 4, 1855, son of Ole K., Sr. and Betsy Myran. The parents came to this country from Norway in 1841, settling first at Muskegon, Mich., where the father worked on farms. From there they came to Winnebago County, Wisconsin, where they bought a farm, which they operated until 1866. In the summer of that year, accompanied by Swen Toycen and his family, they came with an ox team and covered wagon to Dunn County, arriving July 3, and taking a homestead of 160 acres in Section 3, town of Sand Creek, they being the first settlers in the valley. The land was covered with brush and pine trunks and while the father, aided by his sons, built a log house of 14 by 24 feet, cutting the logs from the surrounding timber, the family used their wagon as their sleeping-place and dwelling. This house, which was larger than the usual pioneer cabin, soon became a stopping-place for new settlers as they came in, and it is remembered that on one night no fewer than 21 people slept in it. A log barn with a straw roof was also erected and then the father and elder sons began clearing the land, their labors in time resulting in a good farm. There Ole K Myran, Sr. died on May 7, 1907, having survived his wife. They had a large family of 14 children of whom there are seven now living: Newell, Thomas, John, Ole, Julia, Betsy and Mary. The last mentioned is the wife of L. N. Torson and Julia the wife of Oliver Olson. Three children died on board ship on the voyage to America and the others deceased are Andrew, Knute, Anna and Halvor, Andrew served as a soldier in the Civil War. Ole K. Myran, Jr., from the age of ten years was reared on his parents' farm in the town of Sand Creek. He attended district school, or such rural school as had been organized at that early date, and when not thus occupied helped his father and brothers to clear and break the land, driving the oxen or doing other light work, with harder tasks to perform as he grew older. He stayed with his parents as long as they lived and at his father's death fell heir to the farm. In 1885, when in his thirtieth year, he was married in the town of Sand Creek to Thurin K. Rollay, daughter of Knute and Gro (Halvorson) Rollay, natives of Norway, now deceased. Of this union seven children have been born, one of whom died unnamed in infancy, the survivors being Oscar, Bennie, Andrew, Bergitte, Minnie and Anna. With the help of his sons, Mr. Myran has erected all the buildings now in use on his place, they doing the work themselves, and the lumber, cement blocks and other material used being manufactured on the farm. These buildings include a full basement barn, of 36×100 feet in ground plan, the house, sheds, and a cement-block silo. The house is the original log structure enlarged and sided over so as to form a fine dwelling. It was one of the first houses built in the community and was used at times for church and confirmation services. There are 213 acre in the farm, over 100 being under the plow, and they carry on general farming, having at present 56 head of mixed grade cattle with a pure bred They raise on an average 40 head of Duroc-Jersey hogs per year. Guernsev bull. In addition to their farming operations they run a large sawmill and take contracts for logging and the sawing of lumber. The son Andrew was drafted for the World War and trained at Camp Grant, Illinois, and at Houston, Texas, but was not sent to France.

William H. Weber, a substantial farmer in the town of Eau Galle, was born on his parents' farm in Section 23, this town, on Aug. 20, 1866, son of Jacob and Mary (Tison) Weber. The father was a native of Germany, the mother being of Scotch-Irish extraction. It was in 1863 that they came to Dunn County, Wisconsin, settling in the town of Eau Galle, where Jacob Weber bought 120 acres in Section 23, a wild tract heavily covered with timber. There, having made a clearing, he built a log house and log barns and began the arduous task of developing a farm, which, in spite of his early death on March 24, 1878, he accomplished. His wife continued to reside on the farm until her death in March, 1910. They had five children: Bernard, deceased; Sarah, deceased; William H., subject of this sketch; Elizabeth, deceased; and Joseph, who formerly for 22 years conducted the Bank of Durand and is now in the coal business in that city. William H. Weber as a boy attended school in what was known as the Weber settlement. He was under 12 years of age when his father died, and for the next eight years or so he remained on the home farm, assisting his mother. Then, starting out for himself, he went to Pierce County, where for the next four years he conducted rented farms. At the end of that period he returned to the town of Eau Galle and bought a farm of 120 acres situated in Sections 24 and 13. The property was partly improved and Mr. Weber added to the improvements and was engaged in agricultural operations there for 13 years. At the end of that time he sold that farm and bought his present one in Section 32, town of Eau Galle. This contains 120 acres of good, fertile land and has been brought to a high state of cultivation by him. He has remodeled the house and installed in it a furnace for heating and a water supply. In 1915 he put up a fine silo and in the following year a large barn of 40 x 80 feet in ground plan, provided with a full basement. His herd of cattle are Guernseys and include a pure bred sire, while he has also a good pen of Poland-China hogs. Aside from his personal business, he is treasurer of Joint School District No. 1, embracing the towns of Dunn and Eau Galle in Dunn County, and the town of Waubeek in Pepin County. Mr. Weber was married March 24, 1887, to Annie Samuel, who was born in Germany, Jan. 18, 1871, and came to the United States when ten years old with her parents, Herman and Henrietta (Ditman) Samuel. Seven years later the family came to Pierce County, settling on the farm on which the parents are still living. Mr. and Mrs. Weber have been the parents of nine children, Ida, Anna, Herman, Clara, Elizabeth, Oscar, Henry, Ella and Grace, a further record of whom is as follows: Ida, born May 19, 1889, is now Mrs. Fred Schaefer of the town of Eau Galle and the mother of five children, Ethel, Clarence, Grace, Lawrence and Agnes. Anna, born March 5, 1891, is the wife of Charles Hofacker of the town of Eau Galle and the mother of three children, Raymond, Hester and Josephine. Herman, born Nov. 13, 1892, now farming in the town of Weston, married Nina Yourell and has three children, Mabel, Dorothy and Darrell. Clara, born March 16, 1895, is the wife of Ernest Reckin of Black River Falls, where he is engaged in the oil business; she has one child, Madeline. Elizabeth, born Aug. 7, 1898, now Mrs. Asa Styer of the town of Weston, has two children, Raymond and Anna. Oscar, born Sept. 11, 1899, now conducting the home farm, married Anna Weber and they have one child, James. Henry, born July 8, 1905, and Ella, born June 12, 1910, are both residing on the home farm. Grace died in infancy. The Weber family are members of the Catholic church and Mr. Weber belongs to the Catholic Knights and the Modern Woodmen of America.

William Zeilinger, proprietor of Trail's End Stock Farm in the town of Eau Galle, was born in the town of Lima, Pepin County, Feb. 7, 1884, son of John and Jane (Foster) Zeilinger. The father was a native of Austria and the mother of Wisconsin. They were married in Pepin County, this state, where they settled on a farm, conducting it until 1915. They are still residing there, though no longer engaged in active work. William Zeilinger was educated in the Foster school in the town of Lima, Pepin County. He remained at home with his parents until 22 years old. Then in 1905 he bought his present farm of 160 acres in Section 10, town of Eau Galle, which was a partly improved place, 60 acres having been broken. Here Mr. Zeilinger has built up one of the fine farms of the county. He has practically rebuilt the house and has made additions to it which have converted it into a very fine home. In 1911 he erected a large cattle barn of 36 x 60 feet, with full basement, and patent equipment, and in 1919 he installed a home waterworks, having a large well and cistern that supplies water for both house and barns, the water being pumped by a large windmill. He also built all the out-buildings, and has broken and developed 40 more acres of the land. He is successfully engaged in general dairy and stock farming, keeping a fine herd of Holstein cattle, with a pure bred sire. He also raises Poland-China hogs. In building up his present farm from what it was to what it now is, Mr. Zeilinger has achieved a notable success and placed himself in a high position among the representative farmers cf Dunn County. His farm is beautifully situated in Spring Couley of the Weber Valley, a picturesque locality presenting many attractions to the lover of nature, and just the place for an ideal country home. Aside from his personal interests Mr. Zeilinger has found time to render useful service as clerk of School District No. 3. He was married July 10, 1906, to Julia Fedie of the town of Lima, Pepin County, and who was born Feb. 8, 1889. Of this marriage four children were born as follows: Ruth Marie, Aug. 2, 1907; Fred John, Aug. 19, 1908; Edward William, July 12, 1910; and Jeanette Theresa, April 8, 1916. The family are members of St. Henry's Catholic congregation at Eau Galle.

Otto Meyer, now living retired in the village of Elk Mound is one of that army of early settlers who with brave hearts and steady hands fought and won the hard battle with nature in transforming the primitive wilderness of Dunn County into the rich and fertile agricultural region which it is today. Some of them fell during the battle, others have since passed away, while still others, like Mr. Meyer, having won the fight, have laid down their arms and are now enjoying a well earned rest, leaving the younger generation to do what still remains to be done in the neverending progress of civilization. Mr. Meyer is a native of this country, having been born in Washington County, Wisconsin, Sept. 27, 1858, son of Ludwig and Anna Catherine (Todter) Meyer. The parents were born in Hanover, Germany and spent their early years there. The failure of the German revolution of 1848, whereby the hopes of many for a more liberal form of government were blasted, and the stern measures taken by the government to punish those in revolt, caused large numbers to emigrate to foreign countries, the greater part of them coming to the There is nothing to show that Ludwig Meyer or Anna Catherine United States. Todter had taken any part in the revolution or were in any danger from the authorities, but it is evident that their minds partook of the general unrest, and that they realized that their opportunities for self advancement were practically non-existent under the despotic monarchical government of their native land, which was enacting still severer laws to hold the masses in check. They therefore said goodbye to their friends who could not, or did not want to leave the fatherland, and like thousands of others, took passage for the United States. As yet they were single, but on board the sailing vessel which brought them to this country they were united in marriage and set foot on Columbia's shores as man and wife. The Northwest was then attracting many European immigrants, and Mr. and Mrs. Ludwig Meyer, following the main tide of travel, made their way to Washington County, Wisconsin, where, not having the means to buy an improved farm, they settled on 40 acres of timber land. Making a clearing, they built a log cabin having only a dirt floor, and set to work to better their condition. There they lived for ten years, or until 1858, in whicr year they moved to Chippewa County, locating in the town of Sigel. After eight years' stay there they took up their residence in Chippewa Falls, spent a year there and then moved to the town of Eagle Point (now the town of Tilden) in Chippewa County, where Mr. Meyer bought 140 acres of land, all wild, and once more took up primitive farm work. Of this land in time he cleared and improved all but 40 acres, building up a fine farm with a splendid set of buildings. On March 27, 1896, death deprived him of his loving wife and helpmate, but he continued to live on the farm and operate it until his own death, which occurred March 28, 1915. They had nine children, Herman, Louis, Anna, Otto, Gustave, Adolph, Caroline, Michael and William, all of whom are now living save Gustave. Otto Meyer acquired his education in the schools of Chippewa County, and remained at home with his parents until he was about 24 years old. Then in 1883 he started in for himself, buying a farm of 131 acres in Section 1, town of Grant, Dunn County. Forty acres of the land had been broken and there was an old log cabin on the place in which he and his wife—for he was now married—made their home. There was also a log barn with a straw roof, and it was with this meager outfit in the way of buildings that he began the struggle with nature. Only by long-continued hard work and self denial could he and his wife attain the goal of prosperity and comfort, and they realized it and lived accordingly. During their 14 years on that place they made progress, and were much better off at the end of that period than when they had begun, having a nice house, good barns and other buildings, and the land mostly cleared and in a state of cultivation. In 1897 Mr. Meyer sold that farm and bought one in the town of Red Cedar, consisting of 120 acres of improved land, but without buildings. This defect he remedied by erecting a good dwelling, a basement barn 36 x 73 feet, and a silo, besides other necessary buildings, and having thus put the property into good shape, he rented it to his brother Louis, and bought another farm of 160 acres in the town of Red Cedar, on which he and his wife resided for three years. He then sold that one and bought one of 180 acres in the town of Elk Mound, to which he moved in 1903 and where he farmed very successfully until 1921, when he sold it to his sons Oscar and Bennie, each taking 90 acres which they are now operating. Mr. Meyer, himself, then retired and purchased the residence property in the village of Elk Mound, where he and his wife have since made their The 120-acre farm that he bought and rented in the town of Red Cedar, home. he sold in 1918 to his son-in-law, Fred Wieland. Mr. Meyer is a stockholder in the Bank of Elk Mound and in the Elk Mound Cooperative Creamery Co. During his active career he was widely known as a useful and reliable citizen, and, yielding to the requests of his fellow townsmen, at times served in public office, as road overseer in the town of Grant, Red Cedar and Elk Mound, and as assessor for one term of the town of Elk Mound. The marriage of Mr. Meyer, which took place on March 31, 1881, united him for life with Wilhelmina Harck, of the town of Wheaton, Chippewa County. They have been the parents of eight children, the youngest of whom, Emil, died in infancy. The record of the others is, briefly, as follows: Elizabeth, who married Sam Blume and resides in the town of Red Cedar, is the mother of three children, Lawrence, Esther and Ruth. Sarah, is now Mrs. Grant Miller of the town of Spring Brook. Rudolph, a farmer in the town of Elk Mound, married Mary Christianson of Knapp and has one child, Marion. Theodore married Lenora Harrison and is conducting a farm within the village limits of Elk Mound. Esther is the wife of Fred Wieland of the town of Red Cedar, and has one child, Donald. Oscar, who is a farmer in the town of Elk Mound, married Christina Hughes. Benjamin, also a farmer in the town of Elk Mound, married Hazel Miller and has one child, Robert. The religious faith of the Meyer family is that of the Evangelical Church.

Samuel Lucas, a well known pioneer of Dunn County now living retired in the village of Ridgeland, is a man who has had a long and active career, at times crowded with incident. He was born in England, June 30, 1848, son of James and Bertha (Lewis) Lucas. The father, born in Yoble, Somerset County, England, was a glove and mitten cutter and worker, who came with his family to the United States in 1861. For three years he remained in New York, then in 1864 came west to Sparta, Wis., where he worked at his trade for Hagerman & Roberts and later for the Howe Company. He next moved to Hartford, Wis., where he worked in the glove factory of Place & Wenden. After that he moved to Chicago, where he seems to have lost his life in the great fire of October, 1871, as he was never heard of afterwards. His wife, after giving up hope of ascertaining his fate, came to Dunn County, Wisconsin, and made her home with her son Samuel, until her death in 1878. They had three children, Samuel, John J. and Sarah, of whom Samuel is the only one now living. Samuel Lucas, who began to make himself useful even when only eight years old, as a youth learned the glove-making and tanning trades, which he has followed more or less for the greater part of his life, even up to 1917. He was about 13 when he came with his parents to America, and in 1867 at the age of 19 he came to Dunn County, Wisconsin, and bought 160 acres of land in what is now Section 7, town of Wilson, from the "Omaha" railroad. At that time most of the county was still a wilderness and in that locality Mr. Lucas was one of the first settlers. He walked to the place from Menomonie-a cross country walk, as there were no roads-and as soon as he arrived on his property he put up what the pioneers called a "bow house," a sort of dwelling that could be very quickly constructed, as the frame work consisted of long saplings fastened together end to end, then bent over in the form of a bow with the sharpened ends thrust into the ground, a number of these being placed at certain distance apart; then other saplings laid lengthways across the top and sides and fastened, and the whole being covered with canvas or whatever material came handiest for an outside covering. When the latter was of canvas a movable flap was provided to serve the purpose of a door, and open windows could be contrived in the same manner if desired. It might be called a somewhat superior sort of tent. Mr. Lucas had no intention of occupying it permanently, however, and did so only until he had time to build a log house. He also built a log barn with a shake roof. There was an abundance of wild game and the deer knew so little about man that they used to come right up to his house and look through the windows. For a while, whenever Mr. Lucas wanted supplies he had to walk to Menomonie and return with them on his back, but after getting a yoke of oxen and a crude sort of cart or wagon he used to drive to town, presenting as good an appearance as most of the other pioneers whom he met on the street. The distance between Menomonie and Mr. Lucas's land was not far short of 30 miles by the route he had to take, though somewhat less in a straight line, and the labor involved in carrying supplies on the back for such a distance and over a rough country, and getting across the numerous streams over which only the crudest sort of bridges had then been constructed, or perhaps when there was nothing but a ford, and to do this in all sorts of weather, shows how strong was the desire of the pioneer settlers in this region, as elsewhere, to built up a home that they might call their own and the broad acres of which, when brought under cultivation, would provide them with a livelihood, and perhaps even in course of time with a moderate degree of wealth. Mr. Lucas went through all the usual hardships and did his share of hard work. Being such an early settler in the locality, he was in some sense looked up to by those who arrived later, the more so as he was active in promoting the public interest. He helped to cut timber and open up a road, and also took a leading part in having the town of Wilson set off from that of Sherman, he suggesting the name of Wilson for it. In course of time he added to his land and has kept on doing so at intervals, being now the owner of 280 acres in Dunn County and 160 acres in Douglas County. He worked in the woods with his oxen skidding logs for Mr. Tainter and other lumbermen and in early days he used to carry the mail on his back until, chiefly through his efforts the government established a post office. He also helped to organize the first school in the town, which he canvassed in order to find the children to attend it, and he hewed the logs for the building and helped in its construction, its location being in Section 17. Progressing with the times he gradually replaced his log buildings by frame ones, adopting modern methods in his farming operations, which he carried on for half a century. Over 100 acres of the farm are now under the plow, the rest of the land (in the town of Wilson) being in pasture and timber. Mr. Lucas' herd of Jersey and Guernsey cattle u ed to number from 30 to 40 head but in his latter years on the farm he reduced the number. He also raised Duroc-Jersey hogs and at one time bred sheep extensively. In the spring of 1924 he rented out the farm and moved to the village of Ridgeland, where he bought a good residence and is now living retired. His active career was one of progress, marked by a considerable degree of public spirit and usefulness to the general community, facts recognized by his fellow townsmen. At Sparta, Wis., in 1878 he was united in marriage with Lucy Gartman, daughter of Alexander and Christina (Manney) Gartman, her parents being early settlers in Hartford, Wis., and the father a veteran of the Civil War. Mr. and Mrs. Lucas have had five children, John J., Henry, Lila, Margery and Samuel C. John J. and Henry are now farmers in Barron County. Lila is the wife of John Ferguson, station agent at Ridgeland. Marjory is a trained nurse in St. Mary's Hospital in Duluth. Samuel C., who before the war with Germany was a high school teacher, was in the U.S. transport service during the war, having entered the service at Superior, and while thus engaged visited Manilla, China and Russia, being discharged in 1919. He is now a student in the dental department of the Minnesota University at Minneapolis.

C. H. Downing, a worthy pioneer of Dunn County, who came to this region 61 vears ago, and is now living retired in Wheeler, after a long career of agricultural activity, was born in the state of Vermont, Feb. 5, 1849, son of Oliver and Sally The parents, who also were natives of the Green Mountain (Annis) Downing. State, and thoroughly conversant with its colonial and Revolutionary traditions and history, nevertheless were not insensible to the advantages of self advancement offered by the thinly settled West, and so in 1853 they said goodbye to old friends and the scenes of their childhood, and turned their faces toward the setting sun, pursuing their journey until they reached Ripon, Wis., where they halted and remained subsequently for two years, Oliver Downing following mason work and farm-Then, at the end of the time mentioned, they moved with their family to ing. Juneau County, where some years were spent, and where Mrs. Sally Downing died in 1857. About five or six years later, in 1863, when almost every newspaper contained the account of battles lost or won in the great war between the Northern and Southern states, Oliver Downing came with the surviving members of his family to Dunn County and took a homestead in the town of Stanton. He had time to do but little on it, however, as death called him in the following year. C. H. Downing, the direct subject of this memoir, who was 14 years old when he came to Dunn County, attended school for a short time in Knapp, but soon began working out. After some years had passed over his head, he engaged in farming for himself, renting a farm for several years on Rusk Prairie in the town of Red Cedar. In 1880 he took a homestead of 160 acres in the town of Otter Creek and began to improve it, the land being all wild when it came into his possession. His operations from the first were as thorough as he could afford to make them, for he built a frame house and frame barns, with some other good out-buildings, and soon had enough land broken to begin farming. There he remained until 1890, in which year he traded that farm for one on Rusk Prairie in the town of Red Cedar, and on this latter place he successfully followed agricultural pursuits for 13 years, or until 1903, when he rented his farm and moved to the village of Cedar Falls, where he and his wife made their home for 17 years. His marriage, which had occurred Oct. 11, 1868, had united him with Jane Cameron of Eau Galle, and with her at the end of the time mentioned he came to Wheeler, where Mrs. Downing lived a few years longer, passing away on Jan. 8 of the year, 1924. To her husband and the six children she left behind, as well as to numerous friends and acquaintances throughout the county, and elsewhere, it was a sad bereavement, for she was a woman of high qualities, well educated and refined, just, kind and hospitable- the sort of woman to make and keep friends and be beloved by her relations. Mr. Downing now resides in a house which he purchased when he came to the village, and he also owns his old farm in the town of Red Cedar, which he rents out. It is a fine farm cf 160 acres, the land being fertile and the buildings substantial and in good con-The six children born to Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Downing are Martha H., dition. Nellie M., Daniel O., Mary E., Milton C. and Sadie J., of whom the following is a further record. Martha H., born Sept. 30, 1869, is the wife of Arthur G. Butterfield, a merchant and one of the leading business men of Wheeler, and she and her husband reside with Mr. Downing. They have one child, Sadie, born Nov. 6, 1891, who is now the wife of T. S. Lefstad, Mr. Butterfield's partner in the mercantile business. Mr. and Mrs. Butterfield also adopted a boy, Vernoid, who resides with them. In addition to his business activities already alluded to, Mr. Butterfield is a member of the Wheeler Commercial Club, and is now serving as village assessor. Nellie M., born April 13, 1872, is the wife of T. J. Converse of Draper, Wis. Daniel O., born Jan. 30, 1874, is now living in Mt. Vernon, Wash., where he holds a govern-ment position as sealer of weights and measures. He married Grace Rork, and has Mary E., born April 9, 1876, married B. J. Benson, a hardware one child, Evelyn. merchant of McHenry, N. D., where she and her husband are now living; they have one child. Vera E Milton C., born July 18, 1878, is a farmer in the town of Otter Creek. He married Lillian Utz, and has three children, Violet, Helen and Dorothy. Sadie J., born March 10, 1882, is the wife of W. W. Rubyor of Rice Lake, Wis. The Downing family are affiliated religiously with the Presbyterian Church. In view of Mr. Downing's lack of early opportunities, he has made a very good record. Losing his mother when only eight years old, and his father when 15, he had to depend chiefly upon himself, and so learned those lessons cf industry and thrift that are so essential to material advancement, and without which even a good education may be found insufficient. He and his wife brought up a creditable family of children whose personal characters are an asset to the respective communities in which they dwell. His financial resources are ample for his needs and include those of a stockholder in the Rusk Cooperative Creamery.

Roger Furbur, who passed away some 23 years ago, but who in his day was a worthy citizen of Dunn County, was born in Shropshire, England, Aug. 28, 1833, and was there educated. He came to America in 1850, landing at New York and proceeding west to Adams County, Wis., where he farmed until 1863. He then came to Dunn County, Wis., where he farmed until 1863. He then came to Dunn County and in the town of Sherman took a homestead of 160 acres, having to cut a path from the main road to his land. The tract being all wild, he made a clearing and built a small frame house and log barns, thus beginning pioneer life. The story of life in the backwoods has been often told and need not here be repeated in detail. As everyone knows it was a life involving much hard work and often considerable privation, and it took strong men and women to live it. Mr. Fubur was was a hardworking man and he persevered until he had built up a good farm, on which he resided until March, 1893. He then sold the place and moved to the city of Menomonie, buying a residence at the corner of Fifth Street and Fifteenth Avenue. There he spent his remaining years, dying March 20, 1902, nine years after his retirement. He was married in Adams County, Wisconsin, Dec. 19, 1858. to Mary Ann Adams, who was born in Devonshire, England, July 16, 1840, and came to this country with her parents in 1845, first residing at Dayton, Ohio. From there they moved to Adams County, Wisconsin, where she met and married Mr. Furbur, whom she survived by 11 years, passing away on June 1, 1913. They were the parents of 11 children, namely, Jennie M., Ellen E., Sarah A., William H., Rosabelle, John S., Clara A., George G., Laura M., Edward A. and Martha A., in regard to all of whom the following record is available. Jennie M., born Nov. 1, 1859, married Harmon Ranney, who died March 20, 1920. She resides in Menomonie and has four children: Louella, born Aug. 11, 1877; Ella A., born March 26, 1880; Guy E., born March 9, 1884; and Orpha B., born Jan. 13, 1887. Ellen E., born July 20, 1861, died March 26, 1864. Sarah A., born July 1, 1863, died March 29, 1864. William H., born May 30, 1865, died Feb. 5, 1868. Rosabelle, born Jan. 10, 1867, is now Mrs. Carl W. Ranney of Menomonie, and has six children: Lloyd A., born Aug. 13, 1888; Myrtle M., born Jan. 31, 1891; Le Roy R., born July 7, 1893; Lois, born Jan. 18, 1896; Mary A., born Sept. 16, 1899, and Margaret, born Nov. 1, 1905. John S., born Oct. 30, 1868, and now of Starkweather, N. D., married Sarah Childs and they had five children, who were born on the following respective dates: Elliott R., Aug. 9, 1906; William A., June 5, 1908; Grant E., March 9, 1912; Marion R., April 12, 1915; and Lauramae, March 20, 1918. His wife Sarah, the mother of these children, having died in February, 1920, John S. Furbur subsequently married her sister, Delia Childs, of which union two children have been born, Jean Elizabeth, July 5, 1922, and Kenneth W., April 15, 1924. Clara A. Furbur, born Aug. 9, 1870, is now Mrs. J. M. Douglas of Superior and the mother of two children: G. Stanley, born June 27, 1890, and Blanche M., March 11, 1896. George G., born Nov. 19, 1872, now a resident of Albert Lea, Minn., first married May Hoover, by whom he had two children: Mildred M., born May 16, 189; and R. Wallace, born May 31, 1897. For his second wife he married Grace Lowd. Laura M., born Sept. 8, 1874, is now Mrs. William H. Carrington of Menomonie. She has two children: Ethel H., born Oct. 22, 1893; and Roger H., Nov. 2, 1899. Edward A., born Nov. 25, 1877, resides at Hampden, N. D. He married Grace Sisson and has one child, Roger, born Dec. 28, 1908. Martha A., born Luly 29, 1879 is now Mrs. Hans Swenby of Menomonie and has two children: born July 29, 1879, is now Mrs. Hans Swenby of Menomonie, and has two children: Esther, born Nov. 25, 1903, and Melvin, born Jan. 14, 1906. Besides the 26 grandchildren of Roger Furbur, there are at this writing 27 great grandchildren. Martin Rhude, the owner of an excellent farm known as Valley View Guernsey

Farm, situated in Section 11, town of Elk Mound, was born at Lillestrum, near Christiania, Norway, July 2, 1855, son of John Johnson and wife, the latter's maiden name being Johanna Marie Johansdatter. Both parents died in Norway. Martin was educated in the public schools of his native land, where he grew to manhood. He came to the United States in 1883, and proceeding west to Wisconsin, reached Eau Claire, July 16. There he found a job driving an ice wagon, and either from steadiness of character or because he could find no more profitable occupation, he stuck to that job for nine years and a half. It was on a date in the early part of that period, or on April 25, 1885, that he was married to Julia Ellinstad, who was born in Drammen, Norway, June 8, 1866, daughter of Ole Olson and wife, the latter's maiden name having been Helga Tinnis. She had come to this country with her mother and stepfather when two years old, her father having died in Norway and her mother having subsequently married Ole Ellingstad. They settled in Trempealeau County and both are now deceased. At the end of the nine and a half years during which Mr. Rhude gained a living and supported his family as an iceman. having been frugal and saved some money, he came to Dunn County and began a new life as a farmer, buying 240 acres of land in Section 11, town of Elk Mound. Some of it was broken but most of it was wild, and for buildings there was a poor log cabin. However, many a pioneer of Dunn County started with less. and Mr. Rhude, with that for a nucleus and starting-point proceeded to build up what is now the Valley View Guernsey Farm, a fine piece of agricultural property, beautiful in appearance, provided with a good equipment of tools and machinery and with substantial and adequate buildings. The comfortable modern residence is lighted with a home gas plant, and is suitably set off by a spacious lawn, with shade trees and shrubbery. There is a large dairy barn of 30 x 90 feet, a wagon shed 60 feet long, a granary 24 feet long, with a connecting shed of 30 feet, a hog house, chicken house, corn crib, milk house, garage, and other buildings. Water is obtained from a 93-foot driven well and is pumped by a gas-engine. Mr. Rhude's buildings are well arranged with plenty of yard space between them. He keeps pure bred and grade Guernsey cattle, with a pure bred Guernsey sire at the head. Mr. Rhude personally conducted this farm until the spring of 1924, at which time he rented it on shares to his son, John. He has built an addition to his house for the accommodation of himself and wife, John and his family occupying the original dwelling. Mr. Rhude is a member of the Big Elk Creek congregation of the Lutheran Church, and for many years has served it as a trustee. In December, 1912, he left on a trip to his old home in Norway, returning to America in April, of the following year. Mr. and Mrs. Rhude have been the parents of 10 children of whom nine are now living, the full list being as follows: John, born April, 1886, deceased; Henry, born Sept. 19, 1887, a farmer and carpenter who married Edna Anderson; George, born Aug. 18, 1889, a representative farmer of the town of Elk Mound, who married Emma Flesberg; Minnie, born Oct. 26, 1891, who is Mrs. Sigrud Johnson of the town of Wheaton, Chippewa County; John, born Dec. 31, 1895, and now conducting the home farm, who married Alice Sorenson and has one child, Nona; William, born Feb. 26, 1898, now an auto mechanic in Colfax; Louis, born Feb. 26, 1900, a bookkeeper residing in Duluth; Albert, born Aug. 10, 1902, a carpenter by occupation, as yet single; Ella, born March 19, 1905, and Juel, born Nov. 27, 1910, residing at home.

Nels Tilleson, who is successfully engaged in general farming and dairying in Section 9, town of Red Cedar, was born in the town of Elk Mound, Dunn County, Wis., July 28, 1873, son of Arne and Betsy (Anderson) Tilleson. He was reared in his native town, where as a boy he attended school, and until he was 16 years old he remained at home with his parents. He then went to Menomonie, where for three years he was employed in the butcher shop of A. O. Strand. After that for a while he worked on farms in the town of Red Cedar and for six years subsequently operated the farm of F. R. Ross at Rusk. In 1905 Mr. Tilleson began his career as an independent farmer, buying his present farm of 110 acres in Section 9, town of Red Cedar. Fifty acres of this place, on which tract the buildings are situated, were formerly the farm of Geo. D. Owens. Mr. Tilleson has shown himself a modern farmer, keeping pace with modern methods. He has greatly improved his buildings, and is giving special attention to dairy work, keeping Holstein cattle of high grade, with a pure bred sire. He is also a stockholder in the Rusk Cooperative Creamery and store. Mr. Tilleson was married in Menomonie, Nov. 26, 1898, to Edith Owen, who was born in the town of Red Cedar, Oct. 14, 1871, in the house in which she now lives, daughter of George D. and Caroline (Kent) Owen. To this union one son was born, Jay E., on Oct. 16, 1900, who is living on the home farm with his parents.

George D. Owen, an early settler in Dunn County, and for many years a highly esteemed resident of the town of Red Cedar, was born in Steuben County, New York, Aug. 30, 1830, son of Ambroise and Betsy (Wright) Owen, both parents being natives of the same state, and farmers by occupation. After the father's death the mother came west and spent the remainder of her life with her son, George. After her death the latter worked on farms and in sawmills for three years. On Nov. 24, 1852, he was united in marriage with Helen Cornell of Pennsylvania, but she died less than three years afterwards, in July, 1855, and for the two years following his bereavement he worked in the pineries. After that he went to Rock County, Wisconsin, where he remained until 1859, when he came to Dunn County. For a year after his arrival here he lived on Section 6, engaged in farming. He then bought a tract of 50 acres in Section 9, the same town, where he engaged in farming and bee culture, occupations in which he continued for the remainder of his life, a period of 38 years, his death occurring in May, 1898. Mr. Owen was married Nov. 29, 1857, to Caroline Kent, who was born in Canada, near Niagara Falls, Aug. 4, 1840, and who came to Wisconsin with her parents when six years of age, the family settling in Rock County, where they remained until 1856. They then became pioneers of Dunn County, from that time until their death living in the town of Red Cedar. Mrs. Helen Owen is still living, being now 84 years of age. She resides with her daughters, Mrs. Tilleson and Ethel. She and her husband were the parents of seven other children, all of whom are now deceased, namely: Cora, Jessie, Walter, Birdie, William, Jay and Ambroise.

Andrew O. Lien, a well known and respected resident of Menomonie, engaged in business as contractor, real estate dealer, and auctioneer, with offices at 2508 Broadway, was born at Tynset, Norway, on Feb. 2, 1876. His parents were Ole K. and Kari (Tuveng) Lien, who owned and conducted a farm, on which both of them died, the mother in 1910 and the father on Aug. 18, 1924, at the advanced age of 88 years. They had eight children: Ole O., now residing in Oregon; Knute, of the town of Sherman, Dunn County; Charlie, of Oregon; John, who died Dec. 12, 1920; Andrew O., of Menomonie; Simon, who owns and conducts the home farm at Tynset, Norway; Sarah, now Mrs. Paul Sommerfeldt of West Allis, Wis., and Kari, who is now Mrs. Torval Lien of Minneapolis. Andrew O. Lien attended public school in Norway and also completed a course at a military academy there. He then learned the carpenter's trade, which he followed, including contracting, until 1900. In that year he came to America and directly to Dunn County, locating at Wheeler, where he was engaged in carpentry and contracting for nine years. He then engaged in the real estate business at Wheeler, also having an office in Menomonie. Since coming to this country Dunn County has always been his home except for short intervals, when he was in St. Paul or at West Allis, Wis. In 1924 he bought his present residence, including two acres of land, at No. 2508 Broadway. While his chief business is that of real estate, he also does some auctioneering, besides contracting and building. He has always taken a deep interest in the develop-ment and prosperity of Dunn County, and while at Wheeler he served three years as treasurer of the Wheeler schools, also as banker for several years of the Woodmen's lodge of which he is a member. Mr. Lien was married on May 24, 1904, to Julia Sahlie of Wheeler, a daughter of Andrew L. and Kari (Johnson) Sahlia. Of this union there are five children: Oliver A., born July 14, 1905, who is a student in the Berry Business College at Minneapolis; Sylvia R., born May 29, 1909, now a pupil in the Menomonie High School; Victor C. and Vincent C. (twins), born Aug. 5, 1913; and Arnold J., born Dec. 2, 1920. Mr. Lien and his family are members of the Norwegian Lutheran Church.

William Hoffman, engaged in farming in Section 13, town of Sheridan, was born in this town Jan. 18, 1881, son of William and Mary (Efert) Hoffman, who were natives of Germany. The father was a baker by trade and conducted a bakery in Germany before coming to the United States. His first settlement in this country was in Minnesota, whence he came after a while to Dunn County, Wisconsin. His wife Mary whom he married in the town of Sheridan, was a widow at the time. On coming to the United States she settled in the town of Sheridan, where she had a homestead consisting of wild land with log buildings, on which she and her second husband, Mr. Hoffman, made their home. But through some unfortunate speculations on his part, they lost the place. He then homesteaded 40 acres in the town of Wilson, which he set to work to improve, and where he and his wife both spent the rest of their lives, she passing away in March, 1918, and he in February, 1919. They had been the parents of four sons, William, August, Reinhardt and George, and Mrs. Hoffman by her first husband, Jacob Kieser, had a daughter, Augusta, now the wife of Amund Holton of the town of Sheridan. William Hoffman was reared in the town of Sheridan, where he attended school. He helped his parents on the home farm until he was 21 and after that worked out for others until 1906. In that year he began farming for himself, buying from the railroad 120 acres of wild land in Section 13, town of Sheridan, the tract being covered with brush. Mr. Hoffman built a small frame house on it, which he has since enlarged and improved; he has also cleared a quantity of land, having 60 acres under the plow. He is successfully engaged in general farming and dairying, having 24 head of mixed grade cattle. For 28 falls he has followed threshing, now conducting an outfit of his own. Mr. Hoffman was married at Sand Creek, in 1906, to Mary Olson, daughter of William and Nellie Olson. Her parents came to Dunn County from Trempealeau County at an early date and are both now deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Hoffman have three children, Edward, Willard and Harry.

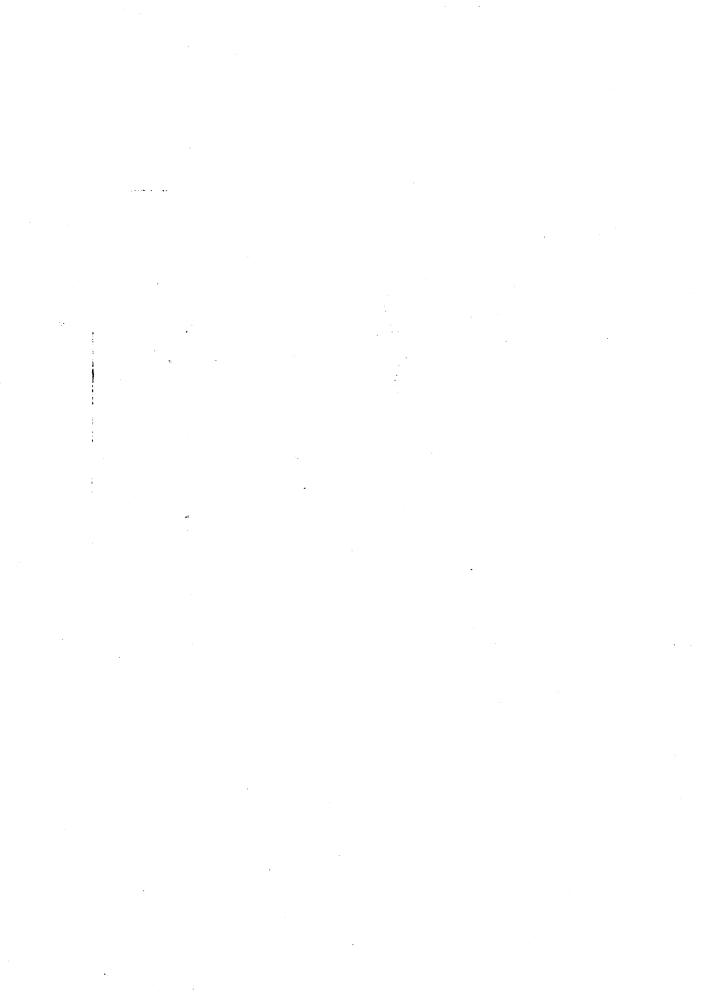

Gustav Oie, president of the First National Bank of Boyceville, was born in Madison, Minn., March 15, 1887. He acquired his education in the grade and high schools of that place, completing courses in banking, which line of business activity he subsequently followed up to November, 1923, in various cities in Minnesota. In that month he came to Boyceville, purchasing a controlling interest in the First National Bank of this place, and becoming its president, which position he has since filled to the benefit of the institution and the best interests of the general public. He has identified himself closely with local interests, taking an active part in village affairs and has gained a high business and social standing. His fraternal society affiliations are with the Boyceville lodge of Odd Fellows and the Elks lodge in St. Paul. Mr. Oie is fond of automobiling and other outdoor sports and his local popularity is now well established. Mr. Oie was united in marriage, May 17, 1924, to Minnie Setter of Boyceville, who is cashier of the First National Bank of which her husband is president; this position she has held since the bank was organized.

Michael Meyer, a retired farmer well known and respected in the village of Elk Mound, where he has resided for some five years after a successful career in agriculture, was born in the town of Tilden, Chippewa Coynty, Wis., April 17, 1867, son of Ludwig and Anna Meyer. He was educated in the rural school of his neighborhood and grew up on the home farm assisting his parents in operating it until he was 22 years old, at which time he bought it. It contained 140 acres of land and he continued the improvements on the place, erecting a barn 36×100 feet, with full basement and patent equipment. He installed an individual gas plant for lighting purposes, and added to his holdings until he has 210 acres of land. While residing there he served 22 years as director on the school board and for one year a supervisor on the town board. In 1919 Mr. Meyer sold the farm and retired, taking up his residence in the village of Elk Mound, where he bought a nice house with an acre of land. He has served one term as a member of the board of trustees of this village. He is a stockholder in the Litnum-Bronze Co. of Menomonie. Mr. Meyer was married March 15, 1889, to Lena John of Chippewa County, who was born near Clintonville, Wis., July 8, 1868. He and his wife are the parents of seven children, Edward, Alvin G., George, Ella, Gilbert, Raymond and Clarence. Edward, now a farmer in Chippewa County, married Anna Hansen and has two children, Melvin and Edward. Alvin G., a prominent farmer in the town of Elk Mound, married Della Wege and has two children, Eleanor and Luverne. George, a telegrapher and ticket agent, married Dina Nelson and has one child, Ione. Ella is at home at Elk Mound. Gilbert is a student at the River Falls State Normal School. Raymond is a pupil in the Elk Mound High School and Clarence is at home with his parents and attending school.

Joshua Crosby, in his day a well known pioneer farmer of the town of Sherman, but now deceased, was born in Illinois, Nov. 4, 1837. Of his early life for the first 24 years there is no data at hand, but in the summer of 1861 he came to Dunn County and on Sept. 1st, that year, pre-empted 160 acres of wild land in Section 21, town of Sherman, the government certificate for which was signed by U. S. Grant, president, and I. V. Burrett, secretary. He enlisted for Civil War service but was rejected because of physical disability. On Oct. 28, 1862, he married Amanda Hopkins, of Juneau County, Wis. After her death he married for his second wife Luella A. Newell, who was born in Sauk County, Wisconsin, March 23, 1856, daughter of Homer and Rosanna V (Alma) Newell. She came with her parents to Dunn County in 1867, they settling in the town of Sherman. Mr. Crosby cleared and developed his farm, erecting a fair set of frame buildings, though his first dwelling on it was a small log house. There were no reads when he took possession of the place and he had to cut his way through wood and brush from Menomonie, or from Cedar Falls. There was a small oak tree standing near where he built his first log house, that he noticed, and was about to cut it down to make a hand spike, but changed his mind and let it remain, and it is now a large tree. In early days he used oxen, as most of the pioneer settlers did, there being few horses until a later period. He spent the remainder of his life on this place, engaged in its improvement, and died March 5, 1915, a successful farmer and a man well known respected by a wide circle of friends and acquaintances. He was the father of 15 children, eight by his first wife and seven by his second, whose records in brief are The children by the first wife, Mrs. Amanda Crosby: Seth O., now in as follows. Portal, N. D.; Carl V., of Columbus, Mont.; Clarence P., deceased; Lee, who is Mrs. Harry Wieman of Washburn, Wis.; Ruth, who married Dwight Shafer of Virginia and is now deceased; Grace, who is Mrs. William Gladden of Dendron, Va.; and Louis and Mark, who are deceased. The children by the second wife, wife, Mrs. Luella A. Crosby, were: Harley O., born Dec. 13, 1886, and now living in the town of Hay River; Lewie, born Oct. 2, 1888, now of the town of Sheridan, Dunn County; Howard J., born June 14, 1892, a farmer in the town of Sherman; Homer, born June 14, 1892, who lives in the town of Oakland, Burnett County, Wisconsin, Homer being a twin brother of Howard; Oris, born Aug. 18, 1893, on the old home farm; Dick, born Oct. 28, 1895, unmarried, and now owner of the home farm; and Neil N., born Nov. 1, 1898, who was graduated from the Dunn Normal School with the class of 1918, and taught rural schools two years in Adams County, two years in Dunn County, and a year in Burnett County. Neil N., also is unmarried.

James G. Brackett, a prominent business man of Elk Mound, manager for the Elk Mound Elevator Co., in which concern he is a stockholder, was born in the town of Spring Brook, Dunn County, Wis., Oct. 23, 1880, son of Abraham and Grace (Dempster) Brackett. The settlement of the family in the town of Spring Brook occurred in the late 60's when they came here from Canada, Mr. and Mrs. Abraham Brackett being natives of the Dominion. James G. Brackett was educated in the little brick schoolhouse of his home district in the town of Spring Brook, and at Lampher's business college in Eau Claire. He then entered the office of the Drummond Packing Co. at Eau Claire, where he was employed until the breaking out of the Spanish-American war in 1898. Having enlisted in Company E, Third Regiment of Volunteer Infantry, he subsequently performed military service in Porto Rico, being discharged in January, 1899. He then returned to Eau Claire and for the next two years was employed in the lumber industry, working both in the woods and on the drives. It was in 1902 that Mr. Brackett came to Elk Mound and engaged in the implement and agricultural machinery business, in which he continued for 18 years, or until 1920. The Elk Mound Elevator Co. being formed in that year, he became interested in it as a stockholder and was made its manager, in which position he has since continued, and as such is widely known. He is also a stockholder in the Bank of Elk Mound and in the Elk Mound Hall Co. He has identified himself closely with public affairs, for three years he served as president of the village of Elk Mound, was a member of its board of trustees for several years, and was clerk of the school board for six years. He is a member of the Elk Mound Commercial Club and for some time has been chief of the local fire department. His other society affiliations are with the Masonic lodge at Eau Claire; the Modern Woodmen camp in Elk Mound, of which he has been clerk for several years; the camp of Spanish-American War veterans at Eau Claire, and the Elk Mound Rod and Gun Club. Mr. Brackett was married, Oct. 9, 1902, to Lillian Close of Chippewa Falls, of which union two children have been born, Max and Richard. Max, who was born March 31, 1904, is a graduate of the Elk Mound High School, and is now a student in the electrical engineering course of the Wisconsin State University. Richard, born Nov. 17, 1905, was also graduated from the local high school and is now a student in the agricultural department of the Wisconsin State University, where in 1924 he won the state heavyweight wrestling championship at the state uni-He has the distinction of having played right tackle on the All America versity. football team of 1923.

John Rudolph Link, Sr., one of the oldest living pioneers of Dunn County, now retired and residing in Menomonie, was born in Germany, Nov. 1, 1832. In his native land he received a good schooling and grew to manhood, remaining there until 1854, when, having attained his majority, he began the battle of life for himself in a new environment, emigrating to the United States. Locating first in New York State, he later went from there to Pennsylvania, and from the latter state to New Jersey. Some three years were thus spent in the East and then, in the spring of 1857, young Link made another radical departure, following the star of empire to Wisconsin and locating in Menomonie, where he found great activity For four years he worked in the mill of Knapp, Stout & Co., and in lumbering. then, giving up mill work, took to farming, buying 80 acres of wild land in the town of Spring Brook. Having made a clearing, he built a log shack-later replaced by a log house-and began the task of developing a farm, which was a hard one, as it involved considerable grubbing. The work of improvement went on, however, as fast as Mr. Link could push it, and in time his neighbors marked the appearance of a neat and substantial frame house, as well as good barns and other out-buildings, all visible evidences of his increasing prosperity, and also of his determined and persistent industry. Moreover, not satisfied with his original 80 acres, he soon began enlarging his farm, buying 80 acres of railroad land, and later adding two more 80-acre tracts, which gave him a farm of 320 acres all told. There his activities were carried on for 46 years-not far short of half a century-at the end of which period he retired, and, moving to the city of Menomonie, bought a good residence at No. 920 Sixth Avenue, which he still occupies. As one of the builders of Dunn County along agricultural lines, his fame is secure, and he will doubtless be remembered many years hence as one of its notable pioneers. It is 67 years ago since Mr. Link began domestic life on his own account, he having been married on Dec. 22, 1856, to Julia Fredericka Hurley, who, born in Germany, Oct. 1, 1838, came to America in 1854, locating in New Jersey. For 43 years she proved her-self a faithful and loving wife, helpmate and mother, and her death in 1899 was the cause of sore grief to him and to their eight children, all of whom are now living. These children are as follows: Pauline J., born March 20, 1858, who married Christ Martinson, and, now a widow, resides with her father; John, born May 16, 1860, who resides in Menomonie; Frederick, born Sept. 6, 1862, now living in Minneapolis; Christian, born Jan. 16, 1865, now of Monong, Wis ; Catherine Fredericka, born March 11, 1867, who is the wife of Bert Elliott of Stevens Point, Wis.; Louis H., born June 24, 1869, and now residing in Minneapolis; Lydia Carolina, born Oct. 8, 1871, now Mrs. James Patterson of Great Falls, Mont.; and Rudolph Carl, born Jan. 4, 1874, who is living in the town of Dunn. John Rudolph Link was married secondly to Mrs. Magdalena Gardner, who in maidenhood was Magdalena She died Jan. 13, 1917. For 16 years Mr. Link has been a resident of Coom. Menomonie and during that time has made many city friends. He is affiliated with the Evangelical Church and stands for all those things which constitute the moral backbone and social strength of a community-law and order, education and religion.

Christ Martinson, who spent nearly 20 profitable years as a Dunn County farmer, and several subsequent years as a resident of Menomonie until death called him from earthly scenes, was born in Nordfenmarken, Norway, June 24, 1855. It was in the year 1865, as a boy of ten, that he came to the United States with his parents, who settled in the town of Wheaton. Chippewa County, Wis. The family was soon broken up, however, as the father died in Colby, Clark County, in 1868, and immediately after his death his wife moved to Canby, Minn., where she passed away many years later, in 1887. Christ Martinson, in March, 1884, bought a lot in Elk Mound, Dunn County, Wis., and built a house on it. In August, of the same year, he moved to the village of Knapp, this county, and at that time became section foreman on the Omaha railroad, a position that he held until August, 1888. He then moved to Superior, where he held a similar position in the employ of the same railway company until April, 1893. It was then that Mr. Martinson began his career as an agriculturist, returning to Dunn County and taking a farm • - of 80 acres in the town of Spring Brook. There he was engaged in farming until Nov. 27, 1912, when he retired and took up his residence in Menomonie, in which city he died in May, 1916. He was a member of the Masonic order and a stockholder in the Masonic Temple of Menomonie. Mr. Martinson was married Sept. 21, 1879, to Pauline Juliana Link, daughter of John R. and Julia F. (Hurley) Link. Of this marriage one son was born, Jacob C., on March 28, 1884, who later married Matilda Weisner. He and his wife, who reside in St. Paul, have three children, Harold, Elmira and Ralfa.

Herman C. Anderson, a well known farmer of the town of Sheridan, residing in Section 23, comes of a family long known in this and neighboring towns. He was born here Jan. 9, 1890, son of John Albert and Augusta (Christenson) Anderson, the parents being natives of Norway. John A. Anderson was but 11 years old when he came to Dunn County. When a little older he worked on farms and later in the woods and cn river drives for Knapp, Stout & Co. Like many others of the early lumbermen in this region, he realized that lumbering could not go on forever here, that the timber would some day be exhausted, and that in any case he could not work at so hard a business when old; so when he saw a good opportunity, he secured a homestead-120 acres in Section 23, town of Sheridan. This was a wild tract, and his first house and barn were log structures. Later he bought 80 acres more land, which made him the owner of 200 acres. This was the farm which he spent many years in clearing and improving and which is now owned by his son, Herman. He was town clerk for 15 years and school clerk for 28 years and was recognized as a successful farmer and usful citizen. He died July 11, 1911, being survived by his wife until Dec. 26, 1912. They had eight children, six of whom are now living, namely: Gena (second), wife of Peter Christenson; Edwin of Prairie Farm, Barron County; Josephine, wife of Herman Anderson of Prairie Farm; Clara, wife of Ingebret Opoien residing in Minnesota; Laura, wife of Alfred Venness of the town of Hay River, Dunn County, and Herman C., subject of this sketch. The two deceased are Alvina, who was the wife of William Jungck, and an infant, Gena (first). Herman C. Anderson, who was reared on the home farm, as a boy attended rural school, subsequently becoming his father's assistant. After the death of his last surviving parent, he became owner of the farm, which he has continued to improve, having built a good frame barn, two silos and other buildings. His place is well provided with modern machinery, including a tractor and an electric lighting system. As a general farmer and dairyman, he has been successful. He has 20 head of grade Holstein cattle and also raises hogs to advantage. He has served as town treasurer for three years and as clerk of School District No. 2. Mr. Anderson was married July 28, 1921, to Ethel Venness, daughter of Ole and Lucy Venness, who settled in Dunn County many years ago. Mr. Venness has passed away but Mrs. Venness is still living, being a resident of Menomonie. Mr. and Mrs. Herman C. Anderson have two children, Ardith and Keith.

Norman A. Ovitt, a former resident of the town of Spring Brook, who deserves mention as the creator of a good farm, was born near the city of Albany, N. Y., June 8, 1836. He was reared and educated in that locality and there spent the first 25 years of his life. In 1861, after the war had begun, he enlisted in Company E, 22d N. Y. Vol. Inf. and served two years and three months in the Army of the Potomac. After receiving his discharge he spent a short time in Minnesota, coming from that state to Dunn County, Wis., in 1863 and buying a homestead right on 160 acres in Section 15, town of Spring Brook. There was a set of rather poor buildings on the south "80," but he took up his residence in the house, making his home there for several years. Then he sold the south 80-acre tract and moved to the north "80," and later he bought an addition 40-acre tract on the south before he sold it, and in time he cleared and broke 80 acres of the total remaining area of 120 acres, besides putting up a substantial set of buildings. In 1896 he met with a heavy loss, his buildings being destroyed by fire, but, on the whole, he prospered and was a man well liked in the community as a good neighbor, always willing to oblige a friend, even to the extent of making personal sacrifices. He died on his farm, July 12, 1906, another worthy pioneer gone to join the great majority. It was on Aug. 4, 1868, a few years after he had started the development of his farm, that Mr. Ovitt was united in marriage with Mrs. Phoebe Mars. She was born in the state of Ohio, Sept. 24, 1844, daughter of Nelson and Mary Ann (Houghton) Curtis, and had been first married on Jan. 1, 1860, to James Mars, who died in September, 1866, and by him she had three sons: Samuel, now superintendent of the Eau Claire County poor farm; James, a farmer in the town of Spring Brook, Dunn County, and George, who is deceased. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Norman A. Ovitt eight in number, were: Lovica, now Mrs. Bert Warner of Chicago; Elizabeth, wife of Charles Knott of Nelma, Forest County, Wis.; Earl A., who is operating the home farm; Jennie, deceased, who was the wife of Fred Grover; Horis, deceased; Pearl, on the home farm; and Rosebelle and a babe, who died in infancy.

Earl A. Ovitt, was born on the farm that he now owns and operates, in Section 15 E., town of Spring Brook, on Feb. 18, 1873. As a boy he attended the Lee school and learned agriculture on the home farm, assisting his father. At the time of the latter's death in 1906 he took over the farm and has since continued to operate it on the same lines as his father did, except that he gives more attention to dairying. He has a fine herd of Grade Guernsey cattle with a pure bred sire, and he has made some important improvements on the place, having in 1923 put up a fine barn of 36 x 96 feet, in ground plan supplied with the Louden barn equipment; he has also installed the J. B. Colt's gas lighting system on the farm. His mother, still enjoying good health, though 80 years old, resides with him. He is a member Oakland school board, and is fraternally a M. W. A of Elk Mound Camp No. 5952.

George H. Drake, owner of Lone Pine Farm in Section 29, town of Eau Galle, which he is operating successfully, was born on this farm Feb. 9, 1894, son of Albert B. and Mary (Throne) Drake. The father was born in Massachusetts, Oct. 20, 1851, son of Henry and Mary (White) Drake, who settled in Dunn County, Wisconsin, when he was a child of eight years, taking a farm on which they spent the remainder of their lives. Albert B. Drake was educated in the rural schools and grew up on the home farm. For many years he worked for the lumber concern of Carson & Rand, of Eau Galle, both in the woods and in the mills. In time, however, he turned to farming, buying 120 acres of land in Section 29, town of Eau Galle. A small clearing had been made in which stood a small frame house and several straw sheds, and there were also some log buildings on the tract; but aside from this, it was wild. Mr. Drake at once began to clear the land and for a number of years thereafter was kept busy in that occupation. In time he bought a 30-acre tract adjoining his place, which gave him a farm of 150 acres. He then built a fine frame house, with good cattle and horse barns and other necessary or useful buildings, and was here engaged in general farming until his death on May 10, 1922. He had become one of the prominent men of his town and had served for several years on the town board. Albert B. Drake was married to Mary Throne at Eau Galle on March 16, 1892. She was born at Jefferson, Wis., Nov. 15, 1856, daughter of James and Roselaine (Curtiss) Throne, her father being a native of Ireland and her mother of Jefferson, Wis. They were early settlers in Pepin County, where both passed away. Mrs. Drake, who survives her husband, is still residing on the home farm. George H. Drake, who acquired his education in the Eau Galle school, has always remained on this farm, which he helped his father to develop, and for a few years prior to the latter's death he had the full management of it, taking it over in 1921, when he bought out his sister's interests. He is carrying on general and dairy farming, keeping a herd of grade Holstein cattle with a pure bred sire at the head. He also has a good drove of Poland-China hogs. His farm is well kept and attractive in appearance, there being good lawns about the house and the grounds being further beautified with shrubs, flowers and trees. About 90 acres of the farm are under cultivation, and about 15 more acres are cleared. Mr. Drake is a member of the M. E. Church, also of the Modern Woodmen of America and the Masonic lodge at Durand.

Jens B. Jensen, formerly active in agricultural work but now assistant highway commissioner of Dunn County, was born in Denmark, May 25, 1874, son of Jorgen -B. and Johanna (Jessen) Jensen. The parents, natives of Denmark, came to America in 1901, settling in Dunn County, Wisconsin, where Jorgen B. Jensen died Mrs. Johanna Jensen now resides with her daughter Marie, who March 6, 1902. is Mrs. George Mattison of Spring Valley, Pierce County. The children in the family, nine in number, were as follows: Hans H., now a farmer in the town of Weston, Dunn County; Jens B., subject of this sketch; Fred, a ranchman in Valley County, Montana; Carl, a ranchman in Sheridan County, Montana; Jesse, who is deceased; John of St. Paul, Minn.; Marion, of St. Paul; Marie, who is Mrs. George Mattisen of Spring Valley, Pierce County and Mattie, who is deceased. Jens P. Jensen spent his youth up to the age of 18 years in his native land, where he attended school. It was in 1892 that he came to the United States-directly to Dunn County, Wis-and for the next six years he was engaged in farm labor here. In 1894, with a view to engaging in agriculture on his own account, he bought 40 acres of wild land in Section 28, town of Dunn, and in 1896 another tract of 40 acres. On the 80 thus obtained he took up his residence in 1898 in a log house and set to work to improve the place. There he remained for 22 years, at the end of which time he had 60 acres of the land cleared and had a good set of modern buildings on it. Then in the fall of that year he sold the farm and has since made his home in the village of Downsville. In 1921 he was appointed assistant highway commissioner, to which office he was re-appointed in 1922, 1923 and 1924. While living in the town of Dunn Mr. Jensen served seven years on the town board, during two years of the time as chairman. He also served one year as chairman of the road committee and was a member of the general claims committee. He was also a member for 15 years of the school board of District No. 2, of the towns of Dunn, Eau Galle and Weston. He is a stockholder in the Farmers and Merchants State Bank of Downsville, and in the Downsville Cooperative Creamery. While he is fraternally affiliated with the Downsville Camp of Modern Woodmen of America. Mr. Jensen was married June 25, 1898, in the town of Dunn, to Juliana Jacobson, daughter of Sorn and Elsie Jacobson, both her parents being now deceased. To Mr. and Mrs. Jensen five children have been born: Jesse, Feb. 7, 1900, who was graduated from the Eau Claire Normal School and is now principal of the high school in Altoona, Wis.; Elsie, born Aug. 10, 1901, a graduate of the Dunn County Normal School and now teaching in Westby, Mont.; Jennie, born Dec. 8, 1903, also a graduate of the Dunn County Normal School and teaching near Knapp, who married Fred Kunz, June 15, 1925, and began home-making in Downsville; Eva, born Nov. 22, 1906, now .. student in the Dunn County Normal School; and Harry, born Dec. 14, 1908, who is attending high school in Altoona. The Jensen family are members of the Dunn-Seston Congregation of the Danish-Norwegian Lutheran Church.

Otto F. Burck, a well known farmer of the town of Dunn, who is making good progress in the development of his business, was born in this town July 17, 1889, son of Jacob and Caroline (Shafer) Burck. The parents were natives of Germany who came to America in 1869, locating in this town and county. For some years the father worked for Knapp, Stout & Co., after which he bought 80 acres of land in Section 33, town of Dunn, (government township 27). This was all wild and the task of its development was a long and arduous one, but Mr. Burck put up the necessary buildings and began work, assisted by his wife and children, and after many years a good farm was developed. He remained active until 1910, in which year he retired, passing the farm over to his son Otto. He and his wife are still living. Their children, five in number, are: William, residing in the town of Menomonie; Herman, of Minneapolis; Mary, of Eldorado, Kansas; Fred, of Oel-wein, Iowa, and Otto F., on the home farm. Otto F. Burck acquired his education in the district school and as he grew to manhood assisted his father in the hard work of grubbing and clearing the parental farm. Strong as he was for his age, he found it very trying, but it developed his muscle and will power and developed habits of patience and steady industry, without which little can be accomplished. In 1910 he took over the home farm of 80 acres, and in the following year bought the 80 acre tract adjoining on the south, which gave him a farm of 160 acres, one mile long and a quarter of a mile wide. It is a good piece of agricultural property, nicely situated on State Trunk Highway No. 51. Mr. Burck is carrying on diversified farming and stock raising with good success. He is a stockholder in the Cooperative Creamery at Downsville and in the Heinrich Medical Co. of Minneapolis. In 1912, Mr. Burck was married to Anna Houss, who was born in the town of Menomonie, Dunn County, March 1, 1888, daughter of Jacob and Augusta (Petrich) Houss, her parents, now deceased, having settled in Dunn County many years ago. Mr. and Mrs. Burck are the parents of six children, who were born as follows: Kenneth, Feb. 18, 1913; Loretta, June 6, 1914; Maves, Jan. 27, 1916; Erma, Feb. 23, 1919; Otto Jr., Dec. 22, 1920, and Dewayne, in April, 1923. The family are members of St. Jacob's Lutheran Congregation at Downsville.

Samuel Sherwood, a worthy representative of the farming industry in the town of Otter Creek, was born in the city of Utica, N. Y., Sept. 13, 1851, son of George and Betsy Sherwood. The parents were also natives of New York State, who came to Wisconsin in 1854, buying a farm in Green Lake County, where George Sherwood, the father, died a few years later, in 1858. His widow subsequently married Hiram H. Haines, a Civil War veteran with whom she moved to Winnebago, in Faribault County, Minn., where they were living in the summer of 1862, when the Sioux Indian uprising and massacres had most of the white settlers terrified in all parts of the state. In 1863 they came to Dunn County, Wisconsin, buying a farm on Trout Creek, town of Grant, but this they later sold and instead bought one near Cardott Falls in Chippewa County, where she subsequently died. There were seven children in the Sherwood family, where she subsequently dred. There were seven children in the Sherwood family, only two of whom are now living, namely, Samuel and Fanny, the latter being now the wife of Eugene Woodbury of Plover, Wis. Those deceased are Jacob, David, Clyneer, Jane and Sarah. Samuel Sherwood, who accompanied his mother and step-father to Minnesota, remained with her, both there and later until her death at Cadott Falls, Chippewa County. He then came back to Dunn County and rented a farm on Popple Creek. town of Grant, which he operated for four years. At the end of that time he bought 240 acres of land in Section 13, town of Otter Creek, the tract being covered with brush and stumps, or "grubs," as they were usually called by the pioneers. Build-ing a small shanty for a dwelling he started to clear the land and since then he has built up his present farm, now having 100 acres under the plow, a good frame house, barn, silo and other substantial buildings. He is doing general farming and dairying, at the present time keeping 25 head of grade Durham cattle, and having a pure bred sire in the herd. He also raises Poland-China hogs to good advantage. Aside from his direct business interests Mr. Sherwood has taken part more or less in the affairs of local government, having served at different times as town supervisor. assessor, and as a director on the school board. He was married in the town of Grant, July 23, 1881, to Ida Krause, daughter of Ludwig and Louise Krause, and of this union eight children have been born, of whom five are now living, namely, Wesley, Gordon, Lola, Florence and Ora. Lola is the wife of Allen Howe of Barron, Wis., Florence the wife of Lysle Wickery of St. James, Minn., and Ora the wife of Earl Williams of Midway, the locality lying halfway between St. Paul and Minneapolis. The three who died were Albert, Hazel and Ella.

George M. Hovlid, proprietor of an old and firmly established mercantile business in North Menomonie, was born in Gudbrandsdalen, Norway, Dec. 12, 1868, son of Martin and Anna (Jorgenson) Hovlid. The parents never came to this country but died in Norway, their native land. The children in the family were seven in number, namely: Ole M., deceased; Matt, a farmer in the town of Menomonie, Dunn County; George M., of North Menomonie; Johannes of Longmont, Colo.; and Mary, Anna and Ole, Jr., who reside in Norway. George M. Hovlid after attending school in Norway, learned the shoemaker's trade, which he followed for two years there. In 1888, being then in his twentieth year, he resolved to seek his fortune in the United States, and accordingly took passage for this county, landing at New York and coming directly from that port to Menomonie, Wis. Here during the next three years he was variously employed, working a short time for the Winterbottom Brick Co., two winters for the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company, and following painting during the summer months. In the spring of 1891 he entered the employ of Graven & Wilcox and for the next four years had charge of their shoe repairing department. In the spring of 1895 Mr. Hovlid bought a half interest in the shoe store of Samuel Running in North Menomonie and two years later purchased Mr. Running's interest. In the fall of 1897 he moved his business to his present location at 235 Tainter Street, and in November, that year, he was appointed postmaster of North Menomonie, which office he held until it was discontinued 11 years later. In course of time Mr. Hovlid enlarged and diversified his business, adding a grocery department, and later departments of dry goods and light hardware, and he now has a fine and well stocked general store and enjoys an extensive patronage. He is also a stockholder and director of the First National Bank of Menomonie. At various times he has also taken an active and helpful part in public affairs. He was alderman from the first ward for two years, represented it on the county board for three years, and was school commissioner three years and for 12 years was an interested and useful member of the Menomonie Fire Department. During the participation of this country in the World War he did good service as a member of the Dunn County draft board. He is fraternally affiliated with the Modern Woodmen of America. In short for many years Mr. Hovlid has been what is popularly termed a "live wire," and his record is one in which his fellow citizens can take a jusifiable pride. Mr Hovlid was married in Menomonie, Oct. 15, 1892, to Matilda Nelson, who was born at Prairie Farm, Barron County, Wis., April 1, 1873, daughter of John A. and Christine (Ward) Her parents were natives of Sweden who came to the United States about Nelson. 1860, first settling in Chicago and later at Red Wing, Minn. Thence they came to Menomonie, where they remained two years, and from here went to Prairie Farm, where they spent the remainder of their lives in agriculture. They had a family of even children: Louise, now Mrs. Ben Kipp of Dallas, Wis.; Sophia, wife of Ed vin Olson of Minneapolis; Matilda, wife of Geo. M. Hovlid; Andrew, of Prairie Farm; John A., also of Prairie Farm; and Joseph and Emma, who are deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Hovlid have been the parents of five children, Elvera, Leonard M., Myrna L., George M. and Elda, of whom the following is a brief record. Elvera, born Aug. 12, 1894, was graduated from the River Falls Normal School and is now Mrs. R. A. Forsythe of New Richmond, Wis. She has a son whose name is Robert Ames. Leonard M., born July 24, 1896, was graduated from the Sout Institute and later received the degree of bachelor of science frcm the University of Wisconsin. He is now a director of manual training in Milwaukee. Myrna L., born March 1, 1902, is a graduate of the Stout Institute and is now a teacher of domestic science at Ironwood, Mich. George M. and Elda are both deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Hovlid are members of and active workers in the Norwegian Lutheran Church in North Menomonie.

Lars L. Ronneberg, the founder of Ronneberg Farm in Section 1, town of Elk Mound, is a man with an interesting record, illustrating the value of determination, industry and self-help. He was born in Hoff, Jarlsberg, Norway, April 26, 1868, son of Lars and Maren Ronneberg. Both parents died in Norway, the father on April 11, 1895, and the mother in January, 1883. They had 12 children, namely, Erick, Ellen, Ingeborg, Maren, Louise, Edd, Lena, Ole, Sophia, Lars L., Hans and John. Of these, Erick, Ellen, Ingeborg, Maren, Edd, Ole, Hans and John are now deceased. Louise is Mrs. Ole Korby, residing in Norway, Lena, who came to America and married Martin Westrud, lives in Dunham, Minn., and Sophia, who lives in Norway, is the wife of Axel Anderson. Lars L. Ronneberg was educated in a Lutheran parochial school and confirmed in the Lutheran church of his native At the age of 16 years he went to sea and for several years thereafter parish. followed the life of a sailor, during which, while on a fishing vessel, he visited the principal ports of Europe, including some of Scotland and England. He also twice sailed around Iceland while on a seal hunting voyage. On his twentieth birthday—April 26, 1888—he landed at the port of New York, where he said farewell to the sea, having resolved to spend the rest of his days on land, where, whatever work he might turn his hands to would certainly be no harder and would probably be accompanied by less risk. Coming west to the state of Iowa, he spent, however, but a short time there, soon locating in Eau Claire, Wis., then a busy lumber town, which place was his home or headquarters for seven years, a period the winters of which he spent in the woods and the summers in the lumber yards. In 1895 Mr. Ronneberg started on a new career, one in which he has made a striking record-the career of a farmer. Like many lumber workers who changed their occupation in like manner, he began with raw cr wild land, 80 acres of which he purchased in Section 1, town of Elk Mound, Dunn County. It was mostly covered with brush and there were no buildings. Making a clearing, he built a small frame house, which forms a part of his present residence, and with that for a beginning entered upon the task of creating what is now widely known as the Ronneberg Farm, one of the model dairy farms of Dunn County. To this he had to go through the usual pioneer routine of clearing and breaking the land and bringing it into a state of cultivation, and also of erecting new buildings from time to time as he needed them. All this involved hard work, for which, however, he was prepared, and he has gained his reward in the results of his work. Some of his most important improvements have been made within the last 12 years or so. In 1912 he erected his present barn of 32 x 80 feet, with half basement, and supplied with drinking cups and other patent equipment. In 1914 he remodeled and rebuilt the house, putting in a full basement and installing a good furnace, so that he has hot and cold running water, and with a bath room. He has installed in addition an acetylene gas lighting plant, and has just completed a home waterworks system, the main feature of which is a large cement cistern, situated back on a side hill. His most important out-buildings, aside from the barn, are a machine shed, granary, chicken house, wood shed and garage, and a fine cement-block silo of 12 x 30 feet for ensilage. These buildings are all substantially constructed, neat in appearance, and conveniently arranged with respect to location, being a suitable distance from the house, the latter standing on an elevation amid a sparsely planted grove of beautiful shade trees, the picturesque surroundings being increased by a wide sweeping lawn. Beauty and utility go hand in hand on this place and present ample evidence of practical ability and good taste. Dairy farming is his principal business and in that connection he keeps a good herd of grade Holstein cattle headed by a pure bred sire. He also specializes in fancy potatoes, for which he receives top prices, and for several years has supplied the State Normal School at Eau Claire with this staple product. He is a stockholder in the Elk Mound Cooperative Creamery and in the Mason shoe factory at Chippewa Falls. As a director of the school board of his district he has rendered useful service. Mr. Ronneberg was married May 11, 1895, to Minnie E. Anderson, who was born in the town of Wheaton, Chippewa County, Sept. 1, 1868, daughter of Lars and Gretha (Paulson) Anderson. Mrs. Ronneberg has proved a good wife and mother and an efficient helpmate to her husband, especially in the management of the household and in all matters pertaining to the beautifying of their home. They have had two children: Harriet G., born March 29, 1896, and Gertrude L., born July 19, 1899. Harriet G., who attended the Colfax High School and Eau Claire Normal School and was also graduated from the Oak Grove Ladies' Seminary at Fargo, N. D., is now successfully engaged in teaching. Gertrude L., who was graduated from the Dunn County Agricultural School. and for several years taught parochial school, in 1924 took courses at the Augsburg Seminary in Minneapolis, where she was graduated. She is now residing at home with her parents.

Lars Anderson, now deceased, who was one of the earliest settlers in the Big Elk Creek country, in the town of Wheaton, Chippewa County, was born in Barum, near Christiania, Norway, Aug. 31, 1825, son of Andrew Nielson and Mari Paulson. Reared a Lutheran, he was educated and confirmed respectively in the church of his parish and was there married (in the Tannums church at Christiania) on March 28, 1853, to Gretha Paulson, who was born Sept. 13, 1830, daughter of Paul Arneson and Christina Martens. A few weeks after their marriage, or on April 20, 1853, Mr. and Mrs. Lars Anderson left Christiania for the United States, being landed at New York, June 7, after a voyage of six weeks. Coming directly west to Waupun,

HISTORY OF DUNN COUNTY

Fond du Lac County, Wis., they remained there for about three years coming from there to Eau Claire in 1856. On the west side of the Chippewa River they built a shanty, which they occupied that winter, in the spring of 1857 moving to Pleasant Valley; but not being able to secure title to land in the latter locality, Mr. Anderson, with his brother Jens, took up government land in the town of Wheaton, where in time they owned several hundred acres, some of which they secured as homesteads. After the Civil War broke out Jens entered the army, and, being lucky enought to return home again, was soon afterwards married. He and his brother then divided the land and Lars proceeded to build up a good farm. Being an active and progressive man, he was successful in worldly affairs and became a citizen of high repute, active and prominent in civil and church affairs. He was the treasurer of Big Elk Creek Lutheran Congregation from the time of its organization until his death, when his son was elected to succeed him. Consequently that office has always been The date of his death was Feb. 27, 1898, and he passed away on held in the family. the farm which he had carved out from the wilderness, and on which the original log house and barns that he built are still standing, presenting a striking contract with the present buildings. They are still in use as granaries or for other purposes. At the time they were built there was only one house between Mr. Anderson's place and Eau Claire. Mrs. Gretha Anderson died Jan. 7, 1903, having survived her husband less than five years. They were the parents of ten children, Carl N., Caroline M., Anna P., Marie, Minnie (first), Albert L., Minnie E., Matilda B., Harold T. and Julius A. Of these but three are now living: Marie, who is Mrs. John Anderson of the town of Wheaton; Minnie E., who is Mrs. Lars L. Ronneberg of the town of Elk Mound, Dunn County, and Harold T., unmarried, who resides on the old home farm.

William Flug, Sr., a well known farmer of Section 29, town of Wilson, was born in Germany, Dec. 17, 1851, son of William and Elizabeth (Steinfeldt) Flug. The father for 31 years was a worker in iron mines and he followed the same occupation in Pennsylvania after coming with his family to the United States in 1853. In 1863 he came to Wisconsin, buying 320 acres of land in Chippewa County, where he was engaged in farming for a number of years. Finally he disposed of his farm and went to Superior and later to St. Paul, in which city he died. His first wife, the mother of William, died in Pennsylvania and his second in St. Paul. William, the direct subject of this sketch, was 12 years old when he came with the family to Chippewa County. From boyhood until he was 27 years old he helped his father to improve and cultivate the land. Then in 1878 he came to Dunn County and homesteaded 160 acres of land in Section 28, town of Wilson. It was all wild and he started improvements by buildings a log barn and granary and a house that was partly of log and partly of frame construction. Then he began the harder task of clearing and breaking the land, in common with most of the other settlers using ox teams, which were better adapted to rough pioneer farming than horses. He was helped in this work by his sons and carried on general farming and dairying and from time to time bought additional land, giving his three sons 80 acres each. He later bought 80 acres in Section 29, which he improved, and it is here that he is now living as a bachelor doing general farming and dairying as formerly. Mr. Flug was married at Chippewa Falls, in 1876, to Bertha Bunkhardt, of Germany, of which union six children were born, namely: William F. C., Anna, Carl F., Herman A., Otto and Henry, of whom the two last mentioned were twins and died in infancy. Anna, who married August Hartwig of St. Croix County, is now a widow. William F. C. lives on his farm of 120 acre, 80 acres of it being a part of the old homestead in Section 28, and is doing general farming and dairying. Herman and Carl A. are similarly occupied on their farms of 120 acres each in this town. Mrs. Bertha Flug, who was born in Germany, Jan. 6, 1850, now makes her home with her son Herman. Mr. Flug served the town of Wilson one year in the office of supervisor and was road commissioner for nine years. Although 73 years of age Mr. Flug still operates his 80 acre farm without hired help, besides doing his own housekeeping.

Peder Jensen, a representative farmer of the town of Dunn, whose farm, the product of many years' industry, now covers half a section of land, was born in Denmark, Jan. 30, 1861, son of Jens Jepson and Marguerite Nelson Brodsgaard, who both died in that country. Peder as a boy attended school there and subsequently became familiar with agricultural work, which he followed until 1884. In that year, at the age of 23, he came to the United States with the object of bettering his condition. Landing in this country on May 23, he came west to Pierce County, Wisconsin, locating at Diamond Bluff, where he was employed on the He helped that year in the harvest fields there and during railroad for a short time. the threshing season worked in Minnesota. Then on November 15 he came to Dunn County and secured employment for the winter cutting cord wood on the farm of Soren Jacobson. The next year he worked for Ed Blank on a farm. In 1885 he started in on his own account, buying 120 acres of land in Section 21, town of Dunn, of which about two and a half acres were cleared. Building a log house and a log barn, he began the arduous task of developing a farm. It was dull work without a helpmate, and seemingly to little purpose; so in the winter of 1886-87 young Jensen took another important step in his life, going to Denmark, where on March 11, 1887, he married Pauline Emelia Sorensen, who was born Dec. 20, 1862. Soon after his marriage he brought his bride to America and they began home making in the primitive log cabin, in which they lived for many years thereafter. Mr. Jensen worked hard early and late in grubbing and breaking his wild land and made The general round of drudgery was monotonous, both for himgradual progress. self and his wife, but from time to time there would come a red letter day into their lives, some special event making it one to be remembered. A few of these days marked the birth of children, but others saw a marked advance in their worldly circumstances and the progress they were making. Thus, in 1893, Mr. Jensen added another 40 acres to his farm, which enlarged it to the size of a quarter section. In 1896 came another happy day when he completed the building of a large cattle In 1903 he purchased a 160-acre tract adjoining him (across the road) on barn. the north in the town of Menomonie, which increased the size of his farm to 320 acres, or a half section; but before this, in 1901, he had replaced his original log dwelling with a beautiful brick residence of 13 rooms, a sign that he was past the struggling and difficult period of his career and had now reached solid ground and an assured position among the well to do farmers of his town. The building of a silo followed in 1911 and in 1912 a fine horse barn was erected. Besides these Mr. Jensen has from time to time put up other buildings, whenever needed, among which may be mentioned a granary, a wagon or machine shop and a garage. At the present time he has 175 acres of his land under the plow, the remainder of his farm being in pasture and timber, and he is operating it with marked success and with the same good management that he has always shown, aided by his wife. He long since attained prominence in the community, being always ready to do his. part when called on for the general welfare. He is a stockholder in the Downsville Cooperative Creamery, in the Farmers & Merchants State Bank at Downsville, and in the New Richmond Packing House. Some years ago he was instrumental in the organization of a creamery at Irvington, becoming one of its board of directors and also serving as its manager. He and his wife are the parents of six children, Jens, Mathilda, Soren, Emil, Matie Marie and Martin. Jens, who was born April 12, 1888, is now a farmer in the town of Lucas. Mathilda, born Sept. 14, 1892, who was graduated from the Dunn County Normal and the Dunn County Agricultural Schools, is now a successful teacher. Soren, born Oct. 10, 1894, is a representative farmer of Killiher, Minn. Emil, born Dec. 31, 1896, is helping his father on the home farm. Matie Marie, born Aug. 30, 1899, is the wife of Harold Hanson, a farmer in the town of Elk Mound, and has two children, Pauline and Elmer Harland. Martin, born Aug. 6, 1902, is residing at home. Mr. Jensen and his family are members of the Varney Creek Lutheran Church, he being vice president of the congregation and also clerk of the parochial school. His record is one that shows the value of patient and long continued effort with a worthy object in view.

Oliver W. Nesseth, one of the active business men of the village of Eau Galle, was born in Menomonie, Wis., March 26, 1883, son of Ole and Annette (Everson)

He was educated in the public schools of Menomonie and at the age of Nesseth. 14 entered into mercantile employment as clerk in the dry goods store of C. A. Clark. Later he was clerk in the clothing department of the A. H. Johnson Company. and afterwards worked for his father, who was head of the Nesseth Grocery Company. On March 24, 1906, O. W. Nesseth came to Eau Galle to take the position of manager of the Farmers' store, and he was thus occupied until August 8. Then for eight or nine months he traveled on the road for Latch & Son of Winona. Minn. but in May, 1909, returned to Eau Galle and established himself here in the general mercantile business, which he conducted for nearly 14 years, or until April 23, 1923. when he sold out to E. J. Nelson. Since then he has been engaged in the insurance He owns property in the village and is also interested in farm property business. with the Fuller Brothers. Mr. Nesseth was married Aug. 11, 1908, in Eau Galle, to Ida Fuller, daughter of Jacob and Anna (Johnson) Fuller, and he and his wife are the parents of one child, Marion, who was born July 28, 1915. Mr. and Mrs. Nesseth are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Eau Galle, of which he is secretary and treasurer. They are both natives of this county, in which they are well known and respected.

John Iverson, a practical farmer operating in Section 10, town of Elk Mound. was born in Christiania, Noway, May 5, 1888, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Iverson, the mother's maiden name having been Mary Aaso. The family came to this country in 1888 when the subject of this sketch was only three months old. They settled in the town of Colfax on 40 acres of wild land, on which there were no buildings, the father clearing a space and building a frame house and barn. After developing a part of that land he bought 40 acres more and continued farming there He then sold that place and bought an improved farm of 87 acres, until 1896. which he operated for seven years. Then selling that, he retired and went to the state of Washington, where he died in April, 1920. His wife, who survived him, now resides on Coupeville Island, Washington. They had three children: Helga. Martin and John. Helga, now Mrs. Henry Larson of the town of Colfax, has three children, Harvey, Elsie and Marion. Martin, engaged in the hardware business at Tonasket. Wash., married Elva Bjornson of Colfax, and has two children, Bennie and Dorothy. John Iverson, who acquired his education in the rural school of his district, remained at home with his parents until attaining his majority. He then took up the blacksmith's trade in Colfax, which he followed as a journeyman, working for others, until 1918. In that year he opened a shop of his own in Colfax and conducted it for about three years. Selling out that business in 1921, he bought his present farm of 200 acres in Section 10 and 15, town of Elk Mound. It was a well improved farm, but included some wild land, which Mr. Iverson is now gradually developing. He has a fine set of buildings, including a full basement barn of 34 x 60 feet in ground plan and supplied with a patent equipment. He also has a large silo of 12 x 45 feet; a machine shed with a chicken house and work shop attached, one at each end; a cement-block milk house, a combined granary and corn crib; a garage and other out-buildings. The house is a fine residence, set off by tall shade trees and a handsome lawn, and the location on State Trunk Highway No. 40, is both convenient and picturesque. Mr. Iverson is engaged in general farming and dairying, keeping grade Holstein cattle and also raising Poland-China He was married April 18, 1908, to Alma Hilson, who was born in Running hogs. Valley, Chippewa County, March 10, 1889. Their family circle has been enlarged by the birth of five children, as follows: Victor, March 2, 1909; Orville, March 22, 1911; Louis, April 24, 1913; Earl, Jan. 24, 1920, and Robert, April 29, 1924. Mr. Iverson and his family are members of the Lutheran Church.

Christian Nelson, proprietor of Lookout Farm in Section 30, town of Eau Galle, who has been a resident of this town for 60 years, was born in Rock County, Wisconsin, Sept. 16, 1860, son of John and Bertha Nelson. The father was born in Sweden and came to America when 25 years old. The mother, a native of Norway, was brought to this country when a babe by her parents. Mr. and Mrs. John Nelson were married in Rock County, where they engaged in farming. In 1864 they came to Dunn County and settled in Eau Galle village, where Mr. Nelson found employment with the lumber concern of Carson & Rand. In the following year he bought a homestead right of a Mr. Blake of 80 acres in Section 32, town of Eau Galle. On the tract was a log hut or shanty into which he moved his family, he, however, continuing to work for Carson & Rand. During the winters he would cut logs on his farm and develop some of the land. Most of the grubbing and breaking, however, was done by his sons when they became old enough. In the early days a grub hoe was used in the planting of corn and other crops. Gradual progress was made, a frame house, barns and other buildings erected and in time, a good farm developed, on which John Nelson finally died in 1904. His widow resided on the farm, which is now owned and operated by their son Emanuel, until her death in March, 1925. The children of Mr. and Mrs. John Nelson were: Nels, now living in St. Paul; Christ, of the town of Eau Galle; Marie, of Elmwood, Wis., who survives her husband, George Wilson; Anna, now Mrs. Samuel Sloan residing in California; Ellen, who is Mrs. Calvin Thompson of Minneapolis; Emanuel of the town of Eau Galle; and John, who lives in Pierce County, Wisconsin. Christian Nelson as a boy attended the Chase Hill School (District No. 5) in the town of Eau Galle and remained on the home farm until he was 21 years old. His time as a vouth was spent in developing the home farm, his brothers being associated with him in the work, as the father was for many years busy working for the lumber company already mentioned. But at the age of 28 Christian started in for himself, buying 80 acres of wild timber land in Section 30, town of Eau Galle. There were no improvements, not even a small clearing, which latter Mr. Nelson had to make in order to get space whereon to built a dwelling. This was a log house and all his other original farm buildings were of the same construction. During his first winter on the place Mr. Nelson cut the timber on 40 acres, and in the following spring he bought a cow and a pair of oxen and began the development of what is today known as Lookout Farm. The log house has been remodeled and sided and is now a good country home. The barn, built in 1914, measures 34×50 feet in ground plan, has 9-foot posts and a full basement, the basement wall being two feet thick and containing in all 32 cords of rock. The other out-buildings, all erected by Mr. Nelson, are in keeping with the house and barn. Lookout Farm is nicely situated on Chase Hill in the southwest corner of the town of Eau Galle. The soil is a fine rich clay loam which raises abundant crops, and open fields of waving grain, or green pastures, have taken the place of the sombre forest which 35 years ago covered the land. Mr. Nelson carries on general farming, giving particular attention to dairying and has a good standing among the farmers of his town. In a certain sense he is a link between the past and the present generation, as he not only did much to develop his parents' farm and has built up his own from the wilderness, but for 13 winters in early manhood worked as a lumberjack in the woods, an active unit in that great industry which played so important a part in the woods, an active unit in that great industry which played so important a part in the development of the Northwest, including Dunn County. He has served as a member of the school board of District No. 5, the school of which he attended when a boy. Mr. Nelson was married Nov. 27, 1889, to Abbie Bundy, who was born in the town of Weston, Dunn County, Wis., July 10, 1872. Her parents, Aldis and Lavina (Dupont) Bundy, were pioneers of Dunn County, both now deceased, the father having died May 28, 1888, and the mother Jan. 23, 1883. Mr. and Mrs. Christian Nelson are the parents of six children, Bertha, Carl, Archie, Grace, Ethel and Leon in regard to whom the following is a further record. Bertha horn July and Leon, in regard to whom the following is a further record. Bertha, born July 30, 1892, is now Mrs. Nicholas Geiger of Elmwood, Wis., and has six children, Raymond, Leonard, Christian, Arnold, Cyril and Berdina. Carl, born June 15, 1897, now of Elmwood, is a painter by occupation. He married Beth Whipp and has three children, Blake, Corvin and Orville. Archie, born June 21, 1894, is a farmer in Pierce County and married Hannah Pittman. Grace, born Aug. 29, 1901, is residing in Minneapolis. Ethel, born Feb. 26, 1909, and Leon, born Nov. 28, 1917, are living on the home farm with their parents. The family worship at the Methodist Episcopal Church.

Frank H. Gehn, a well known farmer of Section 6, town of Eau Galle, was born in Germany, March 26, 1875, son of Fred and Caroline (Klick) Gehn. In his native land he attended school, was confirmed in the Lutheran church, and grew to manhood. Having accompanied his parents to the United States in 1890, he resided with them for three years in Dodge County and then came with them to Dunn County, the father taking land in Section 6, town of Eau Galle. Frank H. assisted him in clearing the home farm and cultivating it, and also at times worked out for others until 1902, when he started in for himself. For the first year he rented a farm in Pierce County. He then returned home and for the next five years was engaged in conducting the home farm. Then from Frank Kuesel he bought an 80-acre farm in the town of Weston, which he operated for seven years and at the end of that time bought the Herman Samuel farm of 43 acres in Section 31, town of Weston, which he conducted for six years, when he sold it to Peter Schroe-Then together with his brother-in-law, William Samuel, he purchased the der. Mike Kerg farm of 80 acres in Section 6, town of Eau Galle, which they are now Conducting together. When they moved onto this farm it was badly run down, both in production and with respect to the buildings. Mr. Gehn and his partner have completely changed this state of affairs. They have improved and put the buildings into good condition, refenced the entire farm, redug the two cisterns and rectified everything that was wrong about it. The residence is a ten-room house built of cement blocks, and the barn, which measures 40 x 86 feet, has been practically rebuilt and is provided with a full basement. The farm is situated on an elevation known as Morton Hill, which commands a view of a fine stretch of prairie It is well stocked and watered, the cattle being of the Brown Swiss breed land. and the herd having a pure bred sire at the head. Mr. Gehn was married June 10, 1902, to Mary Samuel, who was born in Dodge County, Wis., Oct. 5, 1881, daughter of Herman and Henriette (Dietman) Samuel. Her parents, natives of Germany, came to the United States in 1880, first settling in Dodge County and coming to Dunn County in 1882, when they settled on land in Section 31, town of Weston. This was a wild tract, only a small patch of which had been cleared, on which stood a log house and log barns. On that farm Mr. and Mrs. Herman Samuel lived until 1916, when they moved to Elmwood; though they are now living with their son-in-law the subject of this sketch. They have had ten children, as follows: Charles, of Stevens Point; Anna, now Mrs. William H. Weber of the town of Eau Galle; Herman, of Pierce County; Bertha, wife of Michael Kerg of Elmwood; Minnie, who is Mrs. William Rodewald of Clear Lake, Wis.; William, associated with his brother-in-law, Frank H. Gehn, in farming; Mary, wife of Frank H. Gehn; Ella, now deceased, who married Alvin Webb; Amanda, who is the second wife of Alvin Webb; and Henry, who is deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Frank H. Gehn are the parents of two children: Hedwig, born Feb. 7, 1904, and Adolph, born Jan. 26, 1906. Hedwig, who is the wife of Calvin Fischer of Rock Elm, Pierce County, has a daughter, Fern. The Gehn family are affiliated with the Lutheran church.

Otto J. Gehn, a typical representative of the farming interests of the town of of Eau Galle, was born in Germany, Nov. 8, 1876, son of Fred and Caroline (Klick) The parents, natives of that country, came to the United States in 1890, Gehn. settling in Dodge County. In 1893 they came from there to Dunn County, the father buying 80 acres of land on Morton Hill, town of Eau Galle. It was located in Section 6 and was cut-over land heavily covered with brush. There was an old frame shanty on it and also a log barn. Fred Gehn remodeled the shanty into a fairly decent and comfortable residence and put up some good out-buildings to replace the log barn. The work of land clearing went on slowly but steadily, Mr. Gehn being assisted by his sons Frank and Otto. There he farmed until his death on Feb. 27, 1915. His wife is still living on the farm in the original frame residence. They were the parents of five children: Anna, now Mrs. Fred Belling of Shell Lake, Wis.; Frank, a farmer of Eau Galle; Otto J., subject of this sketch; Martha, deceased; and Emma, who is Mrs. Ernest Gallop of the town of Weston. Otto J. Gehn attended school in his native land and was also confirmed in the Lutheran church there. He was 14 years old when he came to America with his parents, settling with them in Dodge County, where he remained for three years, during a part of which time he attended English school. He accompanied his parents to Dunn County in 1893, and subsequently spent years in assisting his father to clear and break the parental acres and erect the buildings on the home farm, Section 6, town of Eau Galle. He and his brother Frank were each given 40 acres by their father just before the latter's death, and Otto, having bought out his brother's 40, now owns the entire farm. In 1916 he built a fine new residence of eight rooms. His dairy barn is 40 x 86 feet, with a full basement and all his out-buildings are in keeping with it, having been built by himself, and his farm is highly cultivated and ranks as one of the best in this part of the county. In 1925 he built a concrete silo 12 x 36 feet and a chicken house of concrete bricks, 14 x 40 feet. He carries on both grain farming and dairying, and keeps a herd of good Brown Swiss cattle with a pure bred sire. Mr. Gehn was married July 30, 1911, to Augusta Lenk, of Dodge County, Wis., who was born Aug. 28, 1878. He and his wife have been the parents of two children: Marcella, born June 14, 1912; and Edwin, born June 27, 1915, who died Feb. 14, 1916. The family are affiliated with the Lutheran Church.

Edward Hofland, a well known farmer of the town of Menomonie, who has made a fine record as a Holstein breeder and dairyman, his farm being situated in Section 33, was born in Norway, Feb. 26, 1876, son of Andrew E. and Otellia (Aamodt) Hofland. As a boy of seven years, he came to America with his parents in 1883, was educated in the district schools, and subsequently worked for and with his father until he purchased the home farm in 1907. This farm has an area of 233 acres and is situated in Section 33. Up to 1914 Mr. Hofland was engaged in mixed farming, but in that year he made a start in the pure-bred stock business, buying five pure-bred Holstein heifers and a pure-bred bull; also 40 high grade heifers, but he gradually sold off the grade stock and today has a herd of 52 pure bred animals. Twenty-two of them are milch cows, of which 14 have yearly records. The best cows in the herd, which is the best cow in Dunn County, has a year record of 956 pounds of butter. The dam of Mr. Hofland's present sire had a state record of 1008 pounds of butter when she was a four year old, and was state champion in 1919. Mr. Hofland is vice president of the Dunn County Holstein Breeders' Association, also a member of the State association and the United States Breeders' Association. In 1921 he and Hjalmer Vigels organized the Menomonie Dairy Co. of Menomonie, to which he furnishes milk and cream from his herd of pure breds. He is also a stockholder in the Menomonie Milling Co., and in the Bank of Menomonie. Since he purchased his farm he has rebuilt the barn, put up a large tile silo and erected a fine 12 room residence that is modern in every way. Mr. Hofland was married in Menomonie, Oct. 9, 1912, to Helga Lund, who was born in Norway, Oct. 9, 1879, and came to the United States in 1895. For several years prior to her marriage she was a nurse in Minneapolis. Mr. and Mrs. Hofland are the par-ents of six children, who were born as follows: Helen, May 19, 1914; Agnes, Sept. 25, 1915; Esther, June 12, 1917; Paul, Aug. 11, 1920; Frederick, Jan. 28, 1922, and Alfred, May 14, 1924. The Hofland family are members of Our Saviour's Lutheran Church.

Alton L. Clark, a retired farmer residing in the town of Sherman after a long career of useful industry, was born in the town of Springvale, Fond du Lac County, Wis., Jan. 23, 1850, son of Chester R. and Jane (Newman) Clark. The parents were born in New York State, the father on July 31, 1814, the mother on July 26, 1818. In 1843, some time after their marriage, they came to Wisconsin, settling in Whitewater, where they spent two years. It was at the end of that time that they moved to Fond du Lac County, where they pre-empted 80 acres of wild land. In 1856 they came to Dunn County, settling in the town of Rock Creek, where they spent the remainder of their lives. Mrs. Clark was the first to pass away, her death occurring on Feb. 10, 1878; Mr. Clark died July 10, 1899. They were the parents of six children: Harriet, who died in 1861, at time of her death being Mrs. John Shepard; J. Newman, now living in the town of Rock Creek, Dunn County; Milton C., of Fall Creek, Eau Claire County; J. Daniel, who died in 1920; Alton L., of Section 9, town of Sherman; and Bertine P., who resides at Doliver, Iowa. Alton L. Clark was about six years old when he came with his parents to Dunn

County. He was educated in a log schoolhouse in the town of Rock Creek, and remained at home with his parents until he was 22 years old. During his last years there he worked the farm for his father. In March, 1874, he came to the town of Sherman and homesteaded 80 acres of wild land on Section 4, building a small frame house on it. In course of time he developed that farm and erected on it two good sets of buildings. When he came to the town of Sherman he traveled across the country with an ox team, there being no roads. Three years later he bought a horse team. The place was 11 miles north of Menomonie, and all supplies and mail had to be brought from there through the woods, often on foot. On March 15. 1874, Mr. Clark was married at Eau Claire, to Hattie Hart, who was born in England, not far from London, (in Bedfordshire) on May 5, 1848. Her parents were Charles and Sarah Hart, the father being a shepherd by occupation. Her mother was present at the coronation of Queen Victoria in 1837. The family came to America when Hattie (Mrs. Clark) was five years old, or in 1853, settling first near Cleveland, Ohio, where Mr. Hart rented a farm for 16 years. In 1869 they came to Dunn County and to the town of Rock Creek where they took a farm, and where both parents died many years ago. Mrs. Clark proved a good helpmate to her husband and they worked together successfully to build up a rural home. There was plenty of wild game, but for some years their neighbors were few and far between. In 1892 Mr. Clark bought an 80-acre tract in Section 16. On Aug. 26, 1896, on returning home, he found his wife dead. It was a severe shock, as they had passed 22 happy years together, and had been the parents of six children, born as follows: Eugene E., March 22, 1875; Elmer A., Oct. 24, 1876; Clarence E., June 10, 1879; Charles C., Aug. 8, 1881; Oscar H., May 9, 1883; and Hattie S., Dec. 3, 1886. Elmer A. died July 27, 1899, and Oscar H. on March 16, 1903. Clarence E., who is a farmer in the town of Sherman, operating 240 acres, married Mamie Jones and has five children, Alton, Bernice, Guy, Myrtle and Clinton. Hattie S. married Frank Steies and lives near Chetek in Barron County. She has five children, Leonard, Ethel, Howard, Lawrence and Erving. Eugene E. and Charles C., who are unmarried, in 1913 bought the old homstead from their father, but in 1920 they sold it and bought 160 acres on Section 9, where they now reside. They also own two 80-acre tracts besides, making 320 acres in all. When their father sold the homestead to them he moved to Section 13, where he bought an 80-acre tract, which he still owns and on which he resided from the fall of 1913 to 1920. He also owns the 80-acre tract in Section 16 that he bought in 1892. He is now living with his sons Eugene and Charles. They have 150 acres under the plow and the farm has been brought into good condition. It is five and a half miles southwest of Wheeler and six miles southeast of Bovceville, from which latter place the family receive their mail. Mr. Clark has always been a Republican politically but votes according to his own judgment in local elections. He has served his town on the side board and for years was clerk of his school district. During his life he spent one winter in the lumber industry, that season logging on The Clark family are of the Baptist faith. In early days a the Chippewa River. Rev. Mr. Holden used to hold meetings in the district schoolhouse and a Sunday school was organized and maintained, of which Mrs. Clark was superintendent for many years up to the time of her death.

Paul Edwin Gregg, proprietor of Gregg's Music Store in the city of Menomonie, was born in Delphi, Ind., June 14, 1888, son of George M. and Lucy C. (Bulger) Gregg, both of whom were born in that place, where for 40 years the father conducted a music store, and where he still resides, the mother having passed away Feb. 14, 1924. There were five children in the family, namely: Georgia, now Mrs. C. M. Kerlin, Mr. Kerlin being owner of a large grain elevator at Delphi, Ind.; Sallie, of Los Angeles, Calif.; Charles A., who is with the Penn Rubber & Supply Co. at Youngstown, O.; Julia, who married Harry W. Foreman but is now deceased; and Paul E., the subject of this sketch. Paul Edwin Gregg acquired his general education in his native town of Delphi, Ind., being graduated with the high school class of 1905, of which he was president. In 1907-08 he was business manager of the Lafayette (Ind.) Conservatory of Music, where he studied voice, and in 1909-10

he took a course in public school music in the Northwestern University. In the fall of 1910 he came to Menomonie, Wis., and during the three following years was supervisor of music in the public schools, and for four years, covering practically the same period, he directed music work in the Congregational church. Soon after that he was called upon to install a retail music department in what is now the Waterman-Ehrhard store, the new department being opened on July 1, 1913. Mr. Gregg remained in charge of it for two and one-half years, or until Jan. 1, 1916, at which time he went into business for himself, leasing a building at 332 Main Street and establishing a music store there. After remaining at that location for four years he leased a room in the Heller building at 145 Main Street, to which he moved his business and where he is still conducting it. He has a well equipped store which will compare favorably with many in cities much larger than Menomonie, and enjoys a good patronage. In the fall of 1922 he again took up the super-vision of music in the public schools. He has also been active in promoting musical interests in other directions. In 1918, while serving as chancellor commander in the Knights of Pythias lodge, he organized a band, which was later made the official "Dokie" band of Oman Temple, D. O. K. K. of Eau Claire. Since 1921 he has served as director of the Ludington Guard Band in Menomonie and through his efforts the band erected a fine shell in the city park, which was later donated to the This band is equipped with three complete changes of uniform: (1) Regulacity. tion A. F. M. coat and cap, and "Dokie" royal purple broadcloth capes, lined with vellow skinner satin. (2) Purple astrachan busby with yellow pom pom, white duck breeches and black patent leather leggings. They tied for first place and received as prize a Conn saxaphone and a director's baton. The band has a music library valued at $1,000 and $700 worth of instruments. Fraternally Mr. Gregg is a member of the Ed C. Goettry Lodge, No. 170, K. P., of Me-nomonie; Carroll Lodge No. 174, I. O. O. F.; Menomonie Lodge No. 164, F. & A. M.; Menomonie Chapter No. 53, R. A. M., and Oman Temple No. 196, D. O. K. K. of Eau Claire; the Menomonie Commercial Club and the Rotary Club. While a student at Northwestern University he was director of the band and a member of the Glee Club and the Delta Tau Delta fraternity. Mr. Gregg was married July 12, 1914, in Chicago, Ill., to Helen Fisher of Aberdeen, S. D., daughter of Frank M. and Minnie C. (Van Wie) Fisher. Her parents, who were early settlers in Menom-onie, are now deceased. To Mr. and Mrs. Gregg have been born three children: Frances K., Jan 27, 1915; Robert F., Feb. 27, 1916, and Paul E., Jr., Jan. 15, 1924. The family attend the Congregational church.

Nicholas Schanen, proprietor of Sunset Farm in Section 4, town of Spring Brook, was born in the town of Belgium, Ozaukee County, Wis., Oct. 22, 1869, son of Dominic and Mary (Schneider) Schanen. The father and mother had come to America with their respective parents from Luxemburg, settling in Ozaukee County, Wisconsin, where they were married, subsequently farming there until 1888. Then coming to Dunn County, they settled on 160 acres in Section 2, town of Spring Brook, which place they made their home until Mrs. Mary Schanen's death in After that event Mr. Schanen continued to live on the farm until March, 1894. 1896, in which year he sold it to his son John and took up his residence in Eau Claire, where he spent his last years, dying in August, 1908. Mr. and Mrs. Dominic Schanen were the parents of 11 children, namely: Nicholas, of the town of Spring Brook; John, also of this town; Anna, who is now Mrs. Oscar Ek, of St. Paul; Jacob, deceased; Thomas, of St. Paul; Katie, deceased; Frank, of Philadelphia; Rose, who is Mrs. Albert Lipke of Minneapolis; Joseph, of Mitchell, S. D.; Helen, now Mrs. Earl Williams of Minneapolis, and one who died a babe unnamed. Nicholas Schanen as a boy attended school in Ozaukee County, and at the age of 14 began to earn his own living, which he has done ever since. In Ozaukee County he learned cheese making, which he followed as a trade for three summers, during the winter months working in the woods in lumber camps. He was 19 years old when he came with his parents to Dunn County, where he has since resided. In 1892 he bought his present farm of 247 acres, 160 of which are in the town of Spring Brook and the balance in the town of Elk Mound, and he has made a fine farm of it. His cow barn is 38 x 82 feet in ground plan, and has a wing of 24 x 42 feet for a horse barn. This is supplied with the Libby equipment. The hog barn measures 38×50 feet with a granary on the second floor large enough to hold 4,000 bushels of grain. There are also two machine sheds, one of 24 x 40 feet and the other of 16 x 30 feet; also other out-buildings and a comfortable 14-room residence. In 1908 Mr. Schanen built a small sawmill and planing-mill and has since done custom sawing. He cut all the lumber used in the construction of his own buildings, and has cut altogether some 3,000,000 feet since he started. As a general farmer and dairyman he has made a good record, keeping Holstein cattle with a pure bred sire, and also raising Shropshire sheep and Chester White hogs. He is a stockholder in the Elk Mound Cooperative Creamery, and for 17 years has served as a director of School District No. 1. Mr. Schanen was married Dec. 18, 1893, in Ozaukee County, Wis., to Marion Dietz, who was born in the town of Belgium, that county, Sept. 17, 1873, daughter of Lawrence and Mary (Wieland) Dietz. The father was a native of Wisconsin and the mother of Germany; both are now deceased. They were the parents of eight children: Barbara, deceased; Katie, now Mrs. Peter Lecher of Eau Claire; Marion, wife of Nicholas Schanen; Mary, wife of John Kramer of the town of Elk Mound; Anna, who is Mrs. John Molitor of the town of Spring Brook; Lizzie, wife of Michael Schrantz of the town of Spring Brook; Susan, now Mrs. Marshall Cartwright of the town of Spring Brook; and Tony of Eau Claire. Mr. Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Schanen have had nine children of whom the following is a brief record: Richard, born Aug. 9, 1895, died Feb. 19, 1897; Harry, born Aug. 7, 1897, and now a farmer in the town of Elk Mound, married Mary Ulrich; Gertrude, born June 15, 1899, now doing clerical work for the Bemis Bag Co. of Minneapolis; Arthur, born Oct. 21, 1901; Mary, Feb. 3, 1905; Marvin J., April 15, 1907; Edward and Edwin (twins), March 1, 1910, and Veronica, July 22, 1913. The Schanen family are members of St. Joseph's Catholic congregation at Elk Mound.

Carl E. Peterson, the present mayor of the city of Menomonie, a lawyer by profession, and with a good record as a soldier of the United States in the great World War, was born at North Menomonie, Oct. 23, 1896, son of Hans and Mary (Johnson) Peterson. The parents came to America as young people from Norway, the father in 1862 and the mother in 1870. Married in Dunn County, Wis., they settled down to home making and agriculture on a farm near Menomonie Junction, where Hans Peterson still resides, Mrs. Mary Peterson having passed away on Aug. 5, 1922. They had eight children: Henry, deceased; Minnie, of Menomonie, widow of William Hanson; John, a restaurant man of Menomonie; Helmer, a telegrapher living in Winnipeg, Canada; Oscar, who married Maude Reynolds of Glenwood City, Wis., and is combination man for the Wisconsin Telephone Co. at Menomonie; Selma, now a stenographer in Chicago; Martin, a combination man for the Wisconsin Telephone Co., who married Merle Sipple and has two children, Robert and James; and Carl E., the subject of this sketch. Carl E. Peterson as a youth attended grade and high school in Menomonie, being graduated from the latter with the class of 1914. He then entered the state university at Madison, where he took the commercial course, which, however, he did not complete for several years later, owing to interruptions. The first of these was an illness which The next was his war service, obliged him to relinquish his studies for a while. which began with his enlistment on May 28, 1918, as a private attached to the headquarters of the 29th Division. He trained at Camp Johnston, Florida, and in July was promoted to the rank of corporal. On Aug. 1, 1918, he left for overseas, was subsequently landed at Brest, France, and at once was set to the front, serving on the St. Mihiel and Argonne Forest sectors. At St. Mihiel he was gassed, which caused him to spend a short period in a hospital. After hostilities came to an end with the signing of the armistice on Nov. 11, 1918, he entered the University of Clermont-Ferrand in the city of the same name, where he spent four months in the study of law and French. He then returned to the United States, landing in this country on August 1, and being discharged at Camp Grant, Ill., on August 3, 1919. After his return home he reentered the Wisconsin State University and resumed his commercial studies, completing the course in 1920. He then entered the law department of the University, from which he was graduated Feb. 5, 1924, being admitted to the bar on April 7, the same year. Persuaded by his friends to run for the office of mayor of Menomonie, he was nominated in March, 1924, and elected April 1, by a large and gratifying majority. The term of office is six years, the city being under the commission form of government. That he was granted this honor-one involving considerable responsibility-is proof sufficient that his fellow citizens had been convinced of his capacity and trustworthiness, and felt that they had nothing to fear but much to hope from his administration. Mr. Peterson is a member of some half dozen or more societies, three of them connected with his former college life, namely: the Delta Kappa Epsilon Fraternaity, the National Greek Letter Fraternity, and the Phi Delta Phi. He is also a member of Hosford-Chase Post of the American Legion, the Veterans of Foreign Wars Society, the Menomonie Country Club and the Menomonie Rod and Gun Club. Mr. Peterson was married July 5, 1924, to Thelma Leonard, of Birmingham, Ala. and they have one child, Mary Ann, who was born March 27, 1925.

John S. Smith, a prosperous farmer of Section 28, town of Hay River, was born in Lynga, Denmark, Aug. 1, 1856, son of Soren and Metta (Jensen) Smith. His school attendance as a boy and youth was confined to the common schools, but by night study he learned bookkeeping and obtained a good position as bookkeeper with a large business house, also acting as salesman and buyer for the concern. In 1883 he married Maren Mikkelsen, and five years later, in 1888, he resolved to emigrate in order to better his condition. He landed from a steamer at Quebec, accompanied by his wife and two children, and for the next six months remained in Canada. Then he came with his family to Glenwood, Wis., arriving there with but $15 in his pocket. Now began for them all a period of hard times. In beginning housekeeping in Glenwood, out of his $15 he paid $12 for a cook stove, which left him and his wife but $3 for all other expenses. He was sick but was obliged to work and therefore engaged as a mill hand on wages at first of only $1 per day, being obliged to work long hours for that pitiful sum. Though he kept up as brave a heart as possible, on his way to work sometimes he could not help crying out with discouragement. It would be difficult to imagine people in harder circumstances living in a civilized community. To make it worse, three children were born to him and his wife in Glenwood, of whom two died, and there were funeral expenses to Then in 1890 his wife died. Mr. Smith remained in Glenwood for seven nav. years in the employ of the same concern. In 1892 he married Lawrense Larson of Glenwood. In 1894 he entered upon his career as a farmer, buying 200 acres of wild land in Section 16, town of Hay River, Dunn County. There were some rather poor log buildings on the place, but with these he made a start, and from that time his career has been one of progress, and, in the main, of success. He has added 80 acres to his farm, increasing its size to 280 acres, of which he has 150 under the plow. He has erected a good two-story frame house and other necessary buildings and has a good operating equipment for carrying on general farming and dairying. His herd of cattle are grade animals and he also keeps Shropshire sheep. Mr. Smith has served some years as town assessor, in politics being independent, and he and his family are affiliated religiously with the Norwegian Lutheran Church in Wheeler. His surviving children by his first wife are: Christine, now Mrs. "Mike" Rowgoski of Winchester, Wis.; Maren, who is Mrs. Theodore Rogowski of Ashland, Wis.; and Anna, who is living in Michigan. The children of the second marriage were the following: Margaret, who became Mrs. Christ Rassmussen and died leaving two children, Frans and Margaret, who since their mother's death are being reared and educated by Mr. and Mrs. Smith; Thorvald, a farmer in the town of Hay River; Harold, a farmer in the same town; Julia, who is Mrs. "Mike" Flynn of the town of Hay River; Gladys, residing on the farm with her parents; Arnold, a farmer in the town of Hay River, and Lillian and Helen. Thorvald and Harold served in the U. S. army in the World War. Harold, who enlisted soon after this country entered into the war, was in France for 11 months, but Thorvald, who was selected in the last draft, did not get across. Both returned home without misadventure.

Peter L. Prichard, a well known resident of Knapp, Dunn County, who has had a business life of varied activities in different places, was born in the town of Liverpool, Fulton County, Ill., Jan. 8, 1859, son of Robert and Rebecca (Shelby) Prichard. The paternal grandfather, Jordan Prichard, who in the early years of the nineteenth century was living in Pennsylvania, fought against the British in the war of 1812-15. After the war, he followed the example of the thousands who were crossing the mountains to seek homes in the west, going as far as Licking County, Ohio, and settling near Newark. Robert Prichard was born in 1826. In 1832 as a child of six, he accompanied his parents to Illinois, the family crossing the Illinois River at Clark's Ferry (now Peoria) and settling on a homestead in what is now Fulton County. There Robert grew to manhood and was educated, and in time he became one of the most prominent and influential citizens of that county, of which for 20 years or more he was sheriff. His chief business was the breeding of Percheron horses. It was in Fulton County that he married Rebecca Shelby, and they became the parents of five children: George, who became a physician but is now deceased; Alice, who is Mrs. Frank Kost of Beardstown, Ill.; Peter L., of Knapp, Wis.; Olive, who is the wife of James Ashbaugh of Galesburg, Ill., and Robert, residing in Loup City, Neb. Both parents died in Lewiston, Ill., the father in 1916 and the mother in 1919. Peter L. Prichard, after acquiring his elementary education in district schools, was graduated from the high school of Lewiston, Ill. He resided with his parents until 1882, in which year he went to Hillsboro, N. D., where he engaged in the hardware business. While there he was a candidate for the office of railway commissioner but failed of election. In 1905 he sold out there and went to Alexandria, Minn., where also he was engaged in a mercantile business. Disposing of that business in 1910, he went to Montana, where he was engaged in real estate operations and oil production, and also read law to some ex-Later he became a county justice, though not admitted to the bar. There tent. he with others arrested 35 cattle rustlers who were operating in Montana, Wyoming, North and South Dakota and Kansas, and who were all sent to the penitentiary. Mr. Prichard was married at Hillsboro, N. D., Sept. 17, 1884, to Lillian A. Honstain, who was born in Richland County, Wisconsin, Dec. 12, 1860, daughter of Capt. Edward and Amanda (Logue) Honstain. He and his wife have been the parents of two children: Norman K., born Nov. 25, 1885, at Hillsboro, N. D., who died in infancy; and Ella H., born at Hillsboro, Sept. 14, 1894. The latter came with her mother to Knapp, and on Sept. 6, 1915, was married to Roy J. Turner. A little over eight years later, or on Oct. 7, 1923, she died at Knapp.

Mrs. Lillian A. Prichard, a capable business woman of Knapp, and one occupying a good social position, was born in Richland County, Wisconsin, Dec. 12, 1860, daughter of Capt. Edward and Amanda (Logue) Honstain. The father of Capt. Edward Honstain was a remarkable instance of longevity, as he lived to be 112 years old. Capt. Edward himself was a man of superior physical qualities, as he traveled for some years with Dan Rice's circus as a bareback rider, riding four horses abreast. Being injured by a fall while performing, he gave up riding but held other positions with the circus after his recovery. After leaving that mode of life he became a building contractor, an occupation that he following for a number of vears. He also saw military service, taking part in quelling the Sioux Indian insurrection which broke out at New Ulm, Minn., in the summer of 1862. After that was accomplished he returned to Muscoda, Wis., which place was then his home, and re-enlisted, raising a company which he accompanied south as captain, and, having joined Sherman's army, took part in that general's famous campaign, including the march to the sea. His daughter Lillian was married Sept. 17, 1884, to Peter L. Prichard, whose biography preceeds this. Before that date she had had some business experience along mercantile lines, and after her marriage she continued her business activity, and has done so to this day, having served behind counters for over 45 years. While Mr. Prichard was engaged in the hardware business in Hillsboro, N. D., she conducted a store there, dealing in millinery and other ladies' goods, and she also operated a business of her own in Alexandria, Minn. Having traded their business there for a farm in Minnesota, they subsequently—in 1910—traded the farm in Minnesota for a mercantile business in Knapp, which she has since operated, carrying a large and well assorted stcck. She employs as manager, Benjamin C. Lierman, but takes an active part in it herself. Her children, Norman and Ella H. have been mentioned in the sketch of Mr. Prichard; but it should be added that Ella, on her death, left two children, Lillian L., born Dec. 8, 1915; and Lilborn R., born Dec. 22, 1918.

Frank Dix, a representative dairy farmer of the town of Dunn, was born in New York State, Jan. 1, 1879, son of Merritt and Ellen (Easton) Dix. The parents were natives of New York State who settled in the town of Sherman, Dunn County, Wis., in 1881, and there for a short time worked rented farms. They afterwards bought a farm in that town but sold it after a few years and moved to St. Paul, where Merritt Dix engaged in the milk business. He remained but a short time at that, however, selling out and returning to Dunn County and buying back his old farm in the town of Sherman, which he operated until the death of his wife on Jan. 18, 1905. He then sold the farm and subsequently lived with his children, chiefly with his son Frank, in whose home he died Nov. 24, 1915. Mr. and Mrs. Merritt Dix had five children: Cora, who is deceased; Libbie, now Mrs. Alfred Jones of the town of Sherman; Bertha, who married Charles Markee and resides in Cla.k County, Wis.; Frank of the town of Dunn, and Lula, now Mrs. A. J. Burrett of Boyceville, this county. Frank Dix acquired his education in a district school in the town of Sherman and a public school in St. Paul. From that city he returned with his parents to Dunn County and to their farm in the town of Sherman, which he helped to clear, residing on it until the year 1900. Then he started in for himself, renting a farm in the same town which he worked for eight years. At the end of that time he bought a farm of 185 acres in the town of Dunn, situated in three Sections 7, 8 and 17. It was partly developed and was provided with a set of This is his present place; he has greatly improved it in every way and buildings. it is now one of the fine modern farms of the county. He has enlarged the house, adding a fine porch, has enlarged and remodeled the barns and erected various buildings, including a silo, ice house, corn cribs, machine shed, hog house and hen house, besides clearing more of the land. He raises some grain and clover, but his main business is dairying and he has a fine herd of Holstein cattle, some of high grade and some of pure breed, including a pure bred sire. He is a patron of the co-operative creamery at Downsville. For one year Mr. Dix served the town as Frank Dix was married Feb. 22, 1898, to Angie Wieman of the town of assessor. Sherman, Dunn County, who was born Nov. 3, 1880, daughter of Julius C. and Mary (Porter) Wieman. The father was born in Germany and the mother in Erie, Ohio. Julius C. Wieman was five years old when he came to America, his first residence in this country being at Manitowoc, Wis., but he had been there but a short time when he came to Dunn County. On May 6, 1861, he enlisted as a private in Company C, Sixth Reg. Wis. Vol. Inf., and with that organization he showed all the qualities of a good soldier and performed a valiant part on numerous battle fields in the great struggle for the preservation of the Union. Being discharged Dec. 31, 1863, at the end of his term of service, he re-enlisted on the same day and in the same company as a veteran and remained in the army until his final discharge on May 27, 1865, about seven weeks after Lee's surrender. By trade Mr Wieman was a saw filer and as such he worked for some time for Knapp, Stout & Co. After the close of the war he took a homestead in the town of Sherman, Dunn County, not far from Lamb Creek Falls, and there as a pioneer he began the creation of a farm from a tract of timber and cut-over land. Some years later he disposed of that place and bought a farm of 120 acres in the same town. At one time he also owned and operated a sawmill on the old stage road that is now Federal Trunk Highway No. 79. After several years of agricultural activity there, he rented that farm and moved to Wilson in St. Croix County, where he passed away April 18, 1884. His wife Mary Porter Wieman, to whom he was married March 8, 1866, survived him 14 years, passing away Dec. 18, 1898. They were the parents of eight children: Kitty, born Sept. 4, 1867, now Mrs. A. L. Proper of Clear Lake, Wis.; Mary E., born Sept. 23, 1869, who is Mrs. Levi Geisert of Elmo, Mont.; Harry C., born May 20, 1871, now of Washburn, Wis.; Frank E., born Jan. 15, 1877, also of Washburn; Angie, born Nov. 3, 1880, now Mrs. Frank Dix of the town of Dunn; and Nellie, born Aug. 27, 1885, who is Mrs. R. E. Moore of Jerome, Ariz.; and Dora and Jennie, who died in infancy. Mr. and Mrs. Frank Dix are the parents of four children: Harry, born March 14, 1900, who is associated with his father in the work on the farm; Inez, born June 11, 1901, who married Grant Smith of the town of Dunn, and has three children, Kenneth, Phyllis Mae and Robert; Lela, born Sept. 29, 1903, and Merle, born Feb. 17, 1914, who are residing at home.

Mr. Dix is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and Beavers, and Mrs. Dix of the Rebekahs and Beaver Queens. They have a wide circle of acquaintances and a good social standing in the town of Dunn and the vicinity. They attend the Louisville M. E. Church.

Willard L. Smith, Civil War veteran and an early settler in the town of Eau Galle, Dunn County, who is now living on his farm in Section 17, this town, was born in Clinton County, New York, Nov. 8, 1845, son of Ephraim and Phoebe (Burton) Smith. The father was a native of that state, but was married in Ontario, Canada, he and his family coming west to Dunn County, Wisconsin, in 1860. Here they bought 80 acres of land and began farming, but after operating their farm until 1878, they moved to Stearns County, Minnesota, where they continued in agricultural life for a number of years, Mrs. Phoebe Smith dying in 1884, and Ephraim Smith in 1890. They were the parents of eight children: Sylvester, now deceased; Angeline, now 85 years old, who is Mrs. John W. Hoyt of Eau Galle; Levi, of Stearns County, Minn.; Willard L., subject of this sketch; Wallace, who lived in Eau Galle and died in 1914; Myron, of Eau Galle; Ephraim, of Frazee, Minn., and Edward, who is deceased. Willard L. Smith as a boy attended the district school in the village of Eau Galle, which was then conducted in an end room in the boarding-house of the lumber concern then known as Carson, Eaton & Rand, and later as Carson & Rand. He subsequently entered the employ of that company, and for many years worked on the river as a pilot during the summers and in the woods during the winters as a camp cook. On March 29, 1864, he enlisted at Eau Galle, in Company E, 37th Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry. He was sent to the Army of the Potomac, then under Grant, who was ready for the final struggle with Lee, and on May 6, he crossed the Rapidan with the army into the Wilderness. Then followed the terrible battles of Spottsylvania Court House (May 8, 12 and 18); and Cold Harbor, on June 3, in which the Federal army met with heavy losses. Then the James River was crossed and Grant took up a position before Petersburg, which the enemy had fortified, and where the fighting went on for 10 months almost continuously day and night. The works were carried April 2, 1865, and Richmond taken on the following day. Lee's surrender followed on the 9th, and the war was practically over, as the remaining Southern armies soon laid down their Mr. Smith took part in most of the fighting and was present at Appomattox, arms. subsequently taking part in the Grand Review at Washington. On July 26, 1865, he received an honorable discharge and returned home. He did not got through the war entirely unscathed, as at Reams Station, Va., he was wounded in the left leg, and for the following 16 days was confined to the hospital. After the war he became a charter member of the John Green Post at Eau Galle, and for 12 years served as its commander. In 1889, having then been married some 17 years, he turned to farming and began the building up of a permanent home. The land he selected was a tract of 120 acres lying partly in Section 19 and partly in Section 20, town of Eau Galle. It was all wild, and Mr. Smith built a log house and barns and began the development of a farm. From time to time he added to his land until he had 240 acres, all in the sections above mentioned, and he continued to improve and operate that place until 1910. He then sold it and bought 120 acres in Sections 17 and 18, a tract on which there were some improvements, and this farm likewise he further improved, for a number of years making a specialty of dairy farming, but in recent years following diversified crop farming rather more. As citizens of his town, Mr. Smith was called on to render service in local office, and for 17 years was a member of the board of supervisors, during four years of which time he was chairman of the board, which made him also a member of the county board. He also served 20 years as clerk of School District No. 7. In 1902 he was elected sheriff of Dunn County, being by that time well and favorably known throughout the county, and served one term in that office, during which time (two years) he resided in Mencmonie, and also for a year afterwards. He then returned to his farm, where he has since resided. He is a member of Menomonie Lodge No. 164, F. & A. M., and of Menomonie Chapter, R. A. M. His religious faith is that of the Unitarian Church. Mr. Smith was married, Nov. 8, 1872, to Louisa Schroeder of Eau Galle, who was born in Maryland, Oct. 12, 1852, and died March 14, 1892, leaving eight children, namely: Lester, now farming near Spokane, Wash., who married Nellie Mulheron, now deceased, by whom he has two children, Carl and Isabelle; Della, who married Thomas Baskin and died in 1896, leaving one child, Thomas; Mary, who became the wife of William Hoyt and died in 1905, leaving three sons, Willard, Bertram and Lyman; Cora, wife of Albert Klatt of Fall City, Dunn County, who has a daughter, Marv Ellen; Harwood, now of Eau Claire, who married Virginia Abbott and has one child, James Abbott; Edward, of Green Bay, Wis.; who married Ellen Foster and has two children, Marjory and Dale; Milton, of the town of Eau Galle, who married Nellie Sinz and has four children, Clinton, Neva, Elizabeth and Philip; and Harrison, who lives near East St. Paul, who married Hazel Vanortwick and has one child, Stanley. On Dec. 4, 1900, Mr. Smith was married, secondly, to Maud I. Smith, who was born in the town of Rock Elm, Pierce County, Wis., June 5, 1873. The fruit of this marriage is two children: Ira J., born July 17, 1902, and Harriet, born Dec. 21, 1903. Ira J. is now agent for the "Soo" line at Cadott, Wis., while Harriet, is the wife of Earl De Long of the town of Eau Galle, and has one child, Jean A. Mr. Smith's record as soldier, lumber worker, farmer, home builder and public official is a long and honorable one, and has given him a wide acquaintance throughout Dunn County. He enjoys a well earned popularity as one of its upbuilders, a d has always been recognized as a man of staunch integrity and agreeable personality, and his children also have reflected credit on the family name.

Norman L. Howison, M. D., a well known and highly respected citizen of Menomonie, was born in the county of Shipton, Canada East, on June 13, 1851, son of Andrew and Mary (Jones) Howison. His parents are further mentioned in the sketch of Charles E. Howison. Norman L. Howison as a youth attended district school in Dunn County and later was a student at Gale College, Galesville, Wis. With such preparation as he there received, he entered the Iowa State University at Iowa City, from which he was graduated with the class of 1882. For two years he practiced his profession at Prairie Farm, Barron County, Wis., but in December, 1884, moved to Rice Lake, where he practiced until the spring of 1893. He then came to Menomonie and opened offices in the First National Bank Building. Later he built a house at the corner of Wilson Avenue and Third Street, locating his office in it, and continuing in general practice until 1921, when he practically retired, though he is acting physician for the Dunn County Asylum. He is a member of the county and state medical societies; also of Menomonie Lodge No. 164, F. & A. M. Dr. Howison was married Jan. 4, 1894, to Elizabeth Kelsev, daughter of Dr. L. C. and Cordelia (Webster) Kelsey, the father being a prominent dentist in Elyria, Ohio. Both her parents are now deceased. Dr. and Mrs. Howison have one child, William, who was born July 6, 1896, and is now engaged in journalistic work in Brooklyn, N. Y.

Charles E. Howison, an early settler in Dunn County who had a varied career of many years as mill worker, farmer and public official, and whose death occurred but little over a year ago, was born in Shipton County, province of Quebec, Canada East, on April 14, 1843, son of Andrew and Mary (Jones) Howison. The parents were both natives of eastern Canada, the father born March 18, 1818, and the mother Aug. 14, 1820. They came to the United States in 1861, settling in the town of Plainview, Wabasha County, Minn. In 1863 Andrew Howison enlisted for Civil War service, becoming a member of the First Minnesota Heavy Artillery with which he served until the close of the war. After his return home in 1865 he moved with his family to Dunn County, Wisconsin, taking a homestead in Section 31, town of Weston-the farm that is now owned by Henry Miller-and there he and his wife spent the rest of their lives building up a fine farm. Andrew Howison died on Aug. 24, 1898, and Mrs. Mary Howison on March 3, 1914. They were the parents of seven children: Charles E., the subject of this sketch; Adelia, who married Edw. Brown but is now deceased; Norman L., a physician residing in Mencmonie; Robert R., a dentist in Boyceville; Clara, deceased, who was the wife of Dr. E. O. Baker of Menomonie; Capitola, a resident of Menomonie, who is the widow of Henry Miller; and Ada, who married David Bailey, but is now deceased. Charles E. Howison acquired his education in the common schools while living in Canada, and came with his parents to the States and to Minnesota in 1861. As he was their eldest son and child, it devolved upon him to be the man of the family during his father's absence in the army. After the father's return Charles E. came with the family to Dunn County, Wisconsin, and to their farm in the town of Weston, on which he worked until his marriage Aug. 31, 1867, to Deborha Dean. She was born in St. Joe County, Michigan, Nov. 17, 1850, daughter of Charles H. and Mary (Eaton) Dean, and had come with her parents to Dunn County, Wisconsin, in July, 1865, from Fayette County, Illinois, where they had resided for a time. On their arrival here they settled on a farm about three miles from where Mrs. Howison now lives. In 1868 and 1869 Charles E. Howison was employed by Knapp, Stout & Co. in their mill at Cedar Falls, after which for six years he engaged in farming for himself on Section 31, town of Weston. At the end of that period he sold his rights in the farm to Joel McCarthy and bought 80 acres of railroad land; also 40 acres from Joseph Bindegar and another 40 acres from his brother-in-law, Edward Brown, thus acquiring in all a farm of 160 acres. The land, taken together, formed one piece and was all in Section 31, town of Weston. This farm Mr. Howison operated and developed for 19 years, at the end of which time he rented it and moved to the city of Menomonie to take up the duties of sheriff of Dunn County, to which office he had been elected and in which he served for one term of two years. For three years longer he continued his residence in Menomonie; then, longing for the old scenes and the companionship of his friends in the town of Weston, in 1900, he resumed farming in that town, buying the old John Cummings farm of 60 acres in Section 30. On this place he built up a nice residence, in which he and his wife took up their abode and where he spent the last 23 years of his life, passing away on Aug. 6, 1923. He was a man whose demise was much regretted, as the integrity of his personal character and his many deeds of kindness had made him personally popular. For many years he took an active part in town affairs, as well as in those of the county, serving not only as county sheriff, but also as a member and chairman of the town board, as a member of the county board, for 13 years as town assessor of the town of Weston, and for 12 years as treasurer of that town. Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Howison were the parents of seven children, namely: Frank and Elmer, both of whom died at the age of two years; Effie, who is now Mrs. Effie Everett and resides with her mother in the town of Weston; Edna, who is Mrs. Ernest Gardner of the town of Weston; Blanche, who died at the age of 15 years; Ruby, living on the home farm, and Ray W., one of the progressive younger farmers of the town of Weston, who is given further mention in this volume. The family are members of Lower Weston M. E. Church.

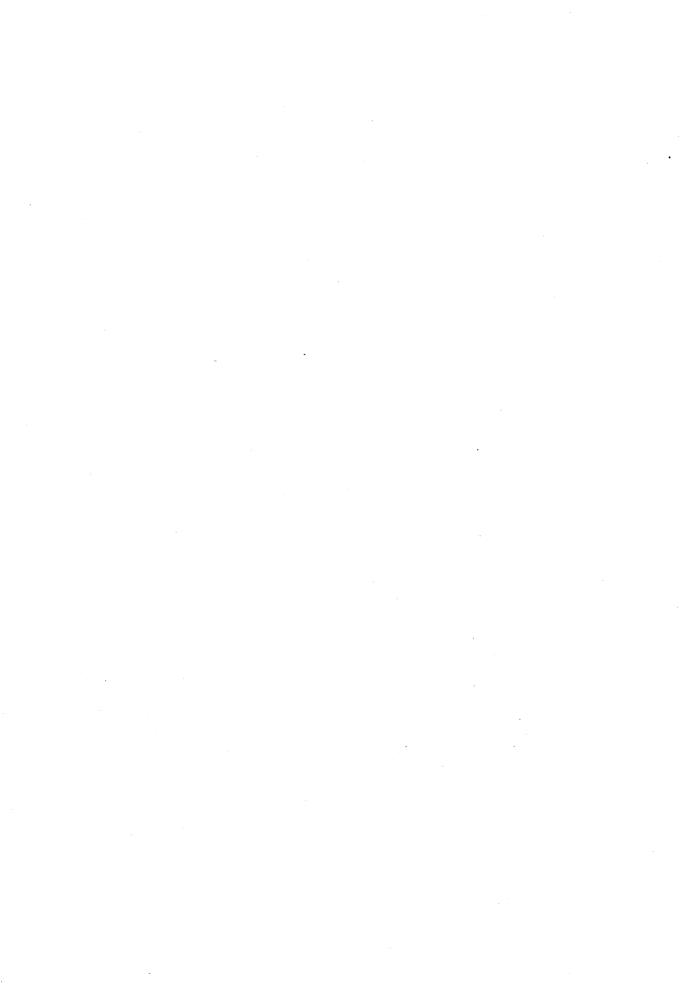

John Kaufman, Sr., proprietor of a farm of 240 acres, known as "Kaufman's Ranch," and situated in Sections 34 and 35, town of Eau Galle, was born in Austria, May 4, 1864, son of Joseph and Anna (Meixner) Kaufman. The family came to the United States in 1881, first settling in the town of Lima, Pepin County, where they remained for two years. At the end of that time they took a farm in the town of Eau Galle, which Joseph Kaufman was engaged in operating for the rest of his life. He died in 1907 and his wife in 1912. Their son John, the subject of this sketch, was educated in his native land, where he also had a little experience in farm work. This came useful to him when in 1889 he bought 80 acres of land in Section 34, town of Eau Galle, Dunn County, and began farming on his own ac-There was a log house on the place, and also log barns, and about six acres count. of the land had been broken. Of this place in the course of time Mr. Kaufman made a fine farm of 240 acres, 200 acres of which are in Section 34 and 40 acres in Section 35. About 100 acres of the land are under cultivation, the rest being in pasture and timber. Until 1916 Mr. Kaufman resided on his original 80-acre tract but in that year gave it to his son John, Jr., together with the buildings. At the same time he gave the adjoining 80 with its buildings to his son Frank, keeping 80 acres for himself, on to which tract he moved, his residence and other farm buildings being situated on the 40-acre tract lying in Section 35. In 1917 he built a basement barn of 36×80 feet, together with the other necessary out-buildings, and here he follows dairy farming to good advantage. For a number of years he had two lime kilns on his place and burned and sold lime quite extensively. John Kaufman, Sr., was married June 7, 1887, to Cecelia Brunner, who was born in Austria, Nov. 22, 1860, and who came to the United States in 1880, settling in Durand, Wis. He and his wife have been the parents of seven children, John Jr., Frank, Margaret, Lena, Matilda, Edward and Ida, all of whom are now living. John, born April 16, 1888, is still on the original 80-acre farm given to him by his father. Frank, born March 22, 1890, and living on his own 80-acre farm, married Mary Meixner, and has four children, Belva, Lynette, Blaine and Vaynard. Margaret, born April 1, 1893, married Earle Hooker and has three children, Selma, Paul and Edith. They reside in Durand, where Mr. Hooker conducts a billard parlor. Lena, born Sept. 23, 1895, is the wife of Clarence Sinz, a farmer in the town of Eau Galle, and has three children, Cyril, Dorothy and Wayne. Matilda, born Feb. 10, 1898, resides at home with her parents. Edward, born Oct. 13, 1900, is also on the parental farm, while Ida, born April 10, 1903, is living in Eau Claire. The family are members of St. Henry's Catholic congregation of Eau Galle.

C. Freeman Blood, an early settler in the town of Glenwood, St. Croix County, where he did pioneer work in developing a farm from the wilderness, was born near Bangor, Maine, May 1, 1835. In 1860 he came west with his parents to Stark County, Illinois, where the family settled on a farm. On Jan. 13, 1861, he married Rachel A. Sturn of the county and they farmed there until 1878, in which year they came to Dunn County, Wisconsin. Mr. Blood bought 80 acres of land from the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company, who had cut all the pine timber from it. The tract was situated just across the line from Dunn County, in the town of Glenwood, St. Croix County; but while their farm was in St. Croix County, their principal interests were in Dunn County, as they did their trading in the village of Downing, which was also where the family attended church and the children went to school; that is, after that village was started, for there was nothing there when they first settled on their farm. At that time the nearest settled community was Wilson in St. Croix County, seven miles distant, from which place the Bloods had to get their mail and groceries. They had a span of small mules and a wagon which Mr. Blood had built with his own hands in Illinois, and with which they had made the journey to Dunn County, bringing a few household effects with them. Mr. and Mrs. Blood started in farming with about $20 in cash and had to go into debt for their land. They were therefore on the lookout to make a dollar whenever they could. Mr. Blood and his sons picked berries in the woods and dug wild ginseng, and with the money derived from the sale of these commodities, Mr. Blood made the first payment on his land. Though never very strong, he was a hard-working man, often over taxing his strength in the effort to make both ends meet. To tell how he finally advanced to a prosperous condition in life would be to reiterate the oft-told story of pioneer life, a phase of experience passed through by most of the old settlers in the county. Suffice it to say that in the course of years the Blood farm assumed the appearance of a well cultivated and well kept place, and Mr. and Mrs. Blood were numbered among the representative people of their town. After remaining on the farm until 1907, they left it and bought a neat and comfortable dwelling in Downing, where some years later, on April 17, 1915, Mr. Blood passed away. The house is still occupied by his widow. Their farm which they sold on their retirement in 1907, was located one and a half miles south of Downing. As wife and mother, and in particular as housewife, Mrs. Blood did her full share in earning the property and her husband and children owed much to her for her efficient work. She has spent the last three or four winters with her daughter, Mrs. George Koberstein of Glenwood City, Wis., spending the summers in her Downing home. When Mr. Blood moved to Illinois from Maine he was a Free Will Baptist in religion, while Mrs. Blood at the time of her marriage, was a member of the United Brethren Church, afterwards adopting her husband's faith. Occasionally during their early years in this region, they were able to secure a Baptist minister to preach in their community, though no Baptist church was ever organ-The organization of a union church was, however, effected in Downing, ized there. and while the Bloods did not formally unite with this body, they gave of their means to build and support the church, and worshipped there. Mr. Blood was conscientiously opposed to the use of intoxicating liquors and tobacco, neither of which he ever used himself, nor did he ever use profane language. He was not active in politics but for many years served as clerk of his school district. The children of Mr. and Mrs. C. Freeman Blood were Lenora M., Ulysses G., Charles W., Laura May, Violet Leona, Arthur, Caddie Pearl and Claude L. Of these eight children Arthur died in infancy. Of the others, the following is a further record.

Lenora M. Blood, born Oct. 23, 1861, was married Dec. 28, 1884, to Clarence H. Stoddard of Downing and has three children, namely, Mabel N., Lena, and Laurel Rachel, of whom Mabel N., unmarried, resides with her parents; Lena is the wife of Carl Foltz, lives in Montana and has had seven children, Muriel, Carl, Lynn, Jean, Mary L., Marjory (deceased) and a baby girl; and Laurel Rachel is now Mrs. Charles Slama of the town of Glenwood, St. Croix County.

Ulysses G. Blood, born May 29, 1865, is now a merchant at Ingraham, Wis. He married Edith Paul of Prentice, Wis., who died July 1, 1923. They had but one child, a son who died in infancy.

Charles W. Blood, born May 12, 1867, is a band saw filer residing at Hancock, Mich. He married Alice Payne of Glenwood City, Wis., and he and his wife have had five children, three of whom died in infancy, the two survivors being Howard C. and Bernice Viola. Howard C. married Pearl Cowles of Downing and now resides at Pequaming, Mich. He has three sons, Charles Martin, Gordon Lee and Whitney Howard. Bernice Viola (daughter of Charles W. Blood) is the wife of LaRoy Ward, a hardware merchant of Glenwood City, Wis., and has had two children. Charlotte Ellen (deceased) and Fred, who is ten months old.

Laura May Blood, born March 3, 1874, is the wife of A. C. Harriman of Glenwood City, senior member of the A. C. Harriman Hardware Co. They have two children, Dorothy S., now attending Wisconsin State University at Madison, and Marguerite Rachel.

Violet Leona Blood, born Oct. 10, 1877, is the wife of E. W. Beard and live on the old Blood farm. She has a daughter, Rachel E., who is attending school in Downing.

Caddie Pearl Blood, born Feb. 13, 1882, married George R. Koberstein of Glenwood City, who since 1910 has been the junion member of the A. C. Harriman Hardware Co. of that place. They have two children, Freeman G. and Harriet E. Mrs. Koberstein and her sister Violet formerly taught school in Dunn County for several years. Mrs. Koberstein—then Caddie P. Blood—taught the Washburn Farm School in Sheridan township, the Goff School in the town of Tiffany, and one room of the Elk Mound School, between the years of 1899 and 1904.

Claude L. Blood, born Oct. 27, 1884, is now on the auditing staff of a railroad at Duluth, Minn. He married Hazel Blood and they have three children, Iris Dorothy, Ellsworth Freeman and Marjory.

William H. McNaughton, a well known farmer in the town of Dunn, Section 34, who owns and operates the farm developed from wild land by his parents, was born on it Dec. 10, 1880, son of Peter and Bessie (Kearns) McNaughton. The father was a native of Scotland who came to America when quite young; lived for a while in Canada, and then came to the States. In course of time he found his way to Dunn County, Wisconsin, and went to work for Carson & Rand of Eau Galle. The steady job he found with them seems to have inspired him with courage to enter the state of matrimony, for after saving up a few dollars he returned to Canada and there married Bessie Kearns, who was a native of the Dominion. To Eau Galle he brought her and they settled down to housekeeping in a nice little cottage. Mr. McNaughton continuing for two years more in the employ of Carson & Rand. At the end of that time he began his career as a farmer, buying of a man named, or called, Jack Allen an 80-acre tract of land in Sections 33 and 34, town of Dunn. On the property stood some poor buildings, and Mr. McNaughton put up better ones. He also cleared and grubbed and broke the land, making some progress every year, and practicing strict economy, whereby, after the first few years, he usually had a little fund in reserve ready to apply on further improvements when In this way he continued until when he sold the farm to his son, William needed. H., and retired to the village of Eau Galle, where he spent his remaining four years of life, dying August 8, 1912. His wife Bessie survived him some years, passing away on June 20, 1920. They had a family of five children: Christine, now Mrs. S. B. Ingram of Menomonie; John A., a farmer in the town of Dunn; Jessie, now Mrs. Stewart McGilton of Menomonie; William H., on the old home farm; and Claude E. of Menomonie. William H. McNaughton acquired his education in the Waubeek district school and grew to manhood on his parents' farm, which he helped his father to improve. He always remained at home assisting his parents to improve. He always remained at home assisting his parents and in 1909 purchase the farm, which he has since continued to operate. He has rebuilt the house, making a fine residence out of it, has erected good out-buildings, and with an adequate equipment of modern tools and machinery, is successfully following dairy farming with a herd of mixed cattle, the Guernsey blood predominating. He also raised Chester-White hogs. A reliable citizen, he is well known and stands well in the community with his family. Mr. McNaughton was married Dec. 15, 1909, to Margaret Flick, who was born at Dunnville, Dunn County, Wis., May 27, 1880, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Flick. The issue of this marriage is three children: Raymond F., born Jan. 11, 1911; Richard W., born March 10, 1917, and Louis E., born June 25, 1921, who died Jan. 30, 1922. The family are connected religiously with the Methodist Episcopal Church.

J. B. Mousel, proprietor of the Twin Hill Guernsey Farm in the town of Spring Brook, who has been a resident of Dunn County for many years, was born in Luxemburg, Jan. 24, 1868, son of John and Marie (Gasper) Mousel. The parents, also natives of that European duchy, spent their entire lives there the mother dying first in 1897 and the father on April 15, 1906. The subject of this sketch acquired an ordinary school education, after which he learned the carpenter's trade, which he followed in his native land for three years. In 1893 he came to the United States with his brother Nicholas and two sisters, Mary and Anna. Two other brothers, John and Michael, were then living in the town of Elk Mound, Dunn County, Wis., having come to this country some time previously, and the new immigrants here joined them. Nicholas, John and Michael began farming, buying 120 acres of land in Section 3, town of Spring Brook, our subject, J. B., for five years doing farm labor in the town of Spring Brook and Elk Mound. At the end of that time he bought out his brothers and the 120-acre farm became his and has since remained so, it being his present home. He has, however, greatly improved it, doing practically all the carpenter work himself on the buildings, of which he has a very good set. The house and barn are modern and supplied with all necessary conveniences and equipment, including electric lights, the power for the latter being obtained from the Elk Mound branch of the Northern States Power Company. The farm is well stocked with high grade Guernsey cattle, with a pure bred sire in the herd, and Mr. Mousel is a stockholder in the Elk Mound Cooperative Creamery. For several years he served as treasurer of his school district and he has always taken a keen and helpful interest in the welfare and progress of the community in which he lives. Mr. Mousel was married Sept. 27, 1898, in the city of Menomonie, to Catherine Schrantz, who was born April 5, 1879, at Random Lake, Wis., daughter of Nicholas and Marie (Schneider) Schrantz. The children of this marriage are: Nicholas J., born June 5, 1900; Edward N., born Feb. 1, 1902, who was killed while working in the Schanon sawmill on March 19, 1919; a babe born Aug. 29, 1906, that died in infancy; Mildred, born Feb. 2, 1908, and now attending high school in Elk Mound; and Raymond, born Jan. 19, 1912. The family are members of St. Joseph's Catholic congregation at Elk Mound.

Nicholas Schrantz, a retired farmer in the town of Spring Brook, residing on the farm on which he settled over 40 years ago, was born in the town of Sherman, Sheboygan County, Wis., son of John and Catherine (Molitor) Schrantz. The parents came to the United States from the Duchy of Luxemburg in 1847, locating first at Port Washington on the shore of Lake Michigan in Ozaukee County, Wis., but it was not long before they left that place for the farm in the town of Sherman, that county, on which their son Nicholas was born, and where they spent their remaining years. They had 14 children, six of whom died in infancy, the other eight being Metthew, Susan, Nicholas, Mary and Margaret (twins), Julia, Katherine and John B. Of these, Matthew, Susan, Margaret, Julia and Katherine are now deceased; Mary, who married Matt Molitor, is a widow; John B. is living in the town of Elk Mound, and Nicholas in the town of Spring Brook. Nicholas Schrantz as a boy attended school in Sheboygan County and remained at home with his parents until 30 years of age. Then coming to Dunn County, he began farming here, buying an 80-acre tract in Section 3, town of Spring Brook, to which he later added 40 acres. In course of time he cleared some 90 acres, besides putting up a complete and substantial set of buildings. When he first settled on the farm, not having enought to buy a team of horses, he and Nicholas Mickelbook bought a team together and helped each other in their first clearing work, the two farms being adjacent to each other. All their grubbing was done by hand. After conducting his farm successfully until 1902, Mr. Schrantz sold it to his son Michael and retired. For a number of years he was a stockholder in the first creamery established in Elk Mound village and for many years he served as a director on the school board of his district. Mr. Schrantz was married Nov. 14, 1876, in Sheboygan County, Wisconsin, to Marie Schneider, who was born in that county, Aug. 18, 1854, daughter of John and Susan (Gasper) Schneider. Her parents were natives of Luxemburg who came to this country about 1845, spending the remainder of their lives in Sheboygan County, where they died within less than three weeks of each other, Mrs. Schneider on April 12, 1912, and Mr. Schneider on April 29, that year. They had four children: Mary, now deceased; Michael, who is operating the old home farm in Sheboygan County; Marie, now Mrs. Nicholas Schrantz, and Matthew, deceased. To Mr. and Mrs. Schrantz five children were born, John, Katherine, Michael, Joseph M. and Nicholas, of whom the last mentioned is deceased. John, born Aug. 27, 1877, who is a farmer in the town of Spring Brook, married Mary Kremer and has two children, Irwin N. and Helen M. Katherine, born April 5, 1879, is now Mrs. J. B. Mousel of Spring Brook. Michael, born Aug. 3, 1880, proprietor of the old homestead, married Elizabeth Dietz and has three children, Cecelia B., Andrew N. and Clarence A., of whom Cecelia is now Mrs. William L. Walcott of Elk Mound. Joseph M., born May 12, 1890, who married Anna Hurth, is a farmer in the town of Spring Brook. The Schrantz family are members of St. Joseph's Catholic Congregation at Elk Mound.

Chester R. Case, cashier of the First National Bank of Knapp, was born at Garden City, Blue Earth County, Minn., March 1, 1869, son of Anthony Wyckliffe and Mary Ella (Wellcome) Case. The Cases were from the Island of Prudence off the coast of Rhode Island and the Wellcomes from the state of Maine. Both families came west, the Cases about 1857 and the Wellcomes a few years later. The paternal grandfather of the subject of this sketch, was the Rev. A. W. Case, a Baptist minister. After coming west to Wisconsin, he moved from Fox Lake by prairie schooner to Garden City, Minn. It was during the Civil War period, and soon after he reached there the Sioux Indian outbreak took place, when many settlers and their families were massacred, the centre of the trouble being at New

The Rev. Mr. Case's son Anthony W., father of Chester R. Case, rendered Ulm. service as a "minute man," subject to instant call to help defend the territory between New Ulm and Garden City. The Rev. A. W. Case married Ann Gevry, who died at Garden City, after having been the mother of four children, and in 1875 he moved to Sleepv Eye, Minn., where he resided with his daughter, Mrs. J. M. Thompson, whose husband was a practicing attorney. There he subsequently followed his vocation as a preacher until he was over 70 years old. After that he accompanied the Thompsons to Santa Rosa, Calif., where he subsequently died at the venerable age of 98 years. Mr. and Mrs. Thompson also died there, leaving three children, namely: Rolf L., for years a prominent attorney and now a superior court judge of Sonoma County, Calif.; F. C. Thompson of Santa Rosa, Calif.; and Ethel C., who married Dr. Lester Sorenson and is now in Hilo, Hawaii, where Dr. Sorenson is practicing dentistry. In 1873 Anthony Wyckliffe Case, father of the subject of this sketch, moved to New Ulm, where he followed farming until 1879, when he moved to Sleepy Eye, Minn. He died at the home of his son Chester R., in Knapp, Wis., in 1918. His wife, Mary Ella, died six months later. The latter was one of the numerous family of Dr. J. W. B. Wellcome, Sr., whose son and namesake, Dr. J. W. B. Wellcome, Jr., was for many years a practicing physician at Sleepy Eye, Minn. Dr. Florado Wellcome, another son of Dr. J. W. B. Wellcome, Sr., was a graduate of Rush Medical College. He went to Granite Falls, in Yellow Medicine County, Minn., where he practiced medicine for ten years and then organized the Yellow Medicine County Bank. In 1899 he took up his residence in Meinneapolis and organized what is now the Union Investment Company, one of a chain of 43 banks. He died in that city in December, 1921, after having amassed a fortune of one and a half millions. Chester R. Case, the direct subject of this sketch, was educated in the grade and high schools of Sleepy Eye, after which he became connected with a wholesale produce business there. In 1898 he went to Chicago, where for one year he was correspondent for the Merrill& Eldridge Company, wholesale dealers in refrigerators and supplies, and during the next year was a traveling salesman in Missouri and Iowa for the same company. It was in 1910 that he became connected with the banking business, being tendered assistant cashiership of the Exchange Bank at Farmington, Minn., which he accepted and was thus employed until 1904. In that year he came to Knapp, Dunn County, Wis., and organized the State Bank of Knapp, of which he, himself, was cashier. In 1918 it was converted from a state bank into the First National Bank of Knapp and as such remains. Mr. Case has also remained the cashier, and throughout the existence of the institution he has been the chief motive power in its progress, and his watchful care and steady and efficient work have established it on a solid and secure foundation. Aside from his duties in connection with the bank, Mr. Case has interested himself from time to time in other matters pertaining to the welfare and progress of the community. He was the first president of the village after its incorporation, and as such was also a member of the county board. He was also one of the organizers of the Home Telephone Co. of Knapp, in which he is a stockholder, and has stood in similar relationship to the Knapp Creamery and the Farmers' Equity Association. Mr. Case was married on June 7, 1900, at Chilicothe, Mo., to Julia Elizabeth Stuckey, who was born in Tennessee, Oct. 23, 1881, and was educated in the Chilicothe schools. He and his wife have one child, Perry Edward, who was born June 1, 1914. The religious affiliations of Mr. and Mrs. Case are with the Methodist Episcopal Church, while the former belongs fraternally to the Beavers, Knights of Pythias, Odd Fellows and Modern Woodmen of America.

Andrew H. Johnson, whose earthly life terminated Oct. 7, 1921, was for many years one of the outstanding figures of Dunn County, being notable in various lines of activity. In fact, speaking in general terms, there was little that he did not try and his capacity was such as to place him high on the list of the county's successful men. To unfold the story of his life is a pleasing task, for in it there was naught to conceal but much to inspire. Andrew H. Johnson was born in Norway, May 3, 1844, and acquired a good education in his native land, where he remained

Then, having attained his majority, he emigrated to the United until about 1865. States to find a field wherein his ambition might have fair scope. On his arrival in this country he located at Decorah, Iowa, where he spent two years, but in 1867 he came to Dunn County, Wis., and for a time worked in the mill at Downsville. There he met with a severe accident, losing the fingers of his left hand. In 1869. before the wound had healed, he came to Menomonie and entered the employ of Knapp, Stout & Co. Company, being given a clerical position in their store, where his quick intelligence and good education, together with a genial and accommodating disposition, made him valued by his employers and popular with the general public. There he remained until 1871, in which year he started a grocery store of his own, and also a livery stable. This was the beginning of his highly successful mercantile career, for in time his business expanded to large proportions, having branches in Colfax and Superior, and not being confined to groceries, but taking in many other departments, including hardware, harness, lumber and farm machinery, so it was said that one could buy anything at the Johnson stores from a paper of pins to a threshing-machine. Mr. Johnson owned property at Spring Valley, Pierce County, Wis. In addition to carrying on his stores, he also operated as a building contractor and shipped the first stock out of Menomonie, making an outlet for the farmers. Another branch of his manifold business activities was the buying and shipping of horses in car-load lots. He was fond of all domestic animals, especially horses, and he was able to indulge his tastes in this direction, as he was the owner of a large farm, which he conducted himself with satisfactory financial results. He undoubtedly sold more land on contract than any other man in Dunn County. He bought large quantities of farm machinery, which he sold to farmers on contract. On this branch of his business he lost money, but said that he did not regret it, as it was one of the methods of progress in agriculture, and though one might lose, many would be benefitted. In 1907 he sold out all his business interests except his farms, of which he had several and which he continued to conduct and look after until his death. He took a strong interest in the growth and progress of the city, and was always ready to assist any laudable enterprise. In many of the business enterprises he was a stockholder, among them being the First National Bank. Mr. Johnson was married Dec. 1, 1871, to Johanna Ludvigson, who was born in Norway, June 24, 1852, and who accompanied her parents, Hans and Helen (Johnston) Ludvigson, to America in 1853. They located in Fond du Lac, residing there until 1861, when they came to Elk Mound, Dunn County, where Mr. and Mrs. Ludvigson spent their lives on a farm, the former dying in 1881, and the later in 1888. Mrs. Johnson became closely interested in her husband's business affairs, and now owns three of the farms he left; one of 500 acres near the city of Menomonie, another at Colfax, and the third on Rusk Prairie of 120 acres. She has other considerable holdings, including a large residence at No. 802 Sixth Avenue, which she now occupies. The large three-story brick building at the corner of Main and Seventh streets, which was built by Mr. Johnson in 1880, and which for so many years was his store, and in recent years was the property of his son, Herman W., housing the automobile business of Berg & Anderson, was totally destroyed by fire on the night of May 4, 1924. Mrs. Johnson has in her possession a beautiful gold-headed cane presented to Mr. Johnson by the McCormick Harvester Co. as a reward for selling more farm machinery than any other of their agents. To Mr. and Mrs. Johnson were born eight children, namely, Helen, Lottie, Herman, Edgar V., Vivian C., Alfred L., Waldemar R., and Hazel L. Helen, born Nov. 28, 1872, died in February, 1873. Lottie, born Oct. 5, 1876, died April 12, 1879. Herman W., born Sept. 20, 1878, who from the age of 17 years until the year 1923, was in the U.S. postal service, is now associated with his brother Edgar in the automobile business. Edgar V. was born July 7, 1881, and in addition to the occupation above mentioned, is also engaged in the feed and grain business in Menomonie. Vivian C., born Jan. 7, 1886, is now Mrs. Oscar Dramson of Wilson Station, Wis. Alfred L., born June 7, 1886, is treasurer and road commissioner on the city council. Waldemar R., born Aug. 1, 1889, who for several years until the fall of 1923 was with the State Department in tubercular eradication, is now helping his mother in the management of the farms. Hazel L., born Jan. 6, 1893, is the wife of Robert Elliott of Chicago.

Myron J. Brewer, proprieter of a farm of 320 acres in the town of Wilson, was born at Mauston, Juneau County, Wis., Feb. 6, 1870, son of Gaylord I. and Lucy L. (Wright) Brewer. The father was a native of New York State and the mother of Ohio, the former coming to Wisconsin with his parents when a young boy. Settling first in Racine County, they moved from there to Juneau County, where Gaylord was reared and subsequently engaged in farming. The paternal grandfather of Myron came to Dunn County in 1863, taking a homestead of 160 acres of land in Section 36, town of Wilson. Those were pioneer days and there were few comforts of civilization to be obtained in the north woods or in any part of this region to which the railroad had not yet penetrated. While the farms were in the rough state it was rarely that horses were used on them, the ox being practically the only draught animal seen among the early settlers. It was also used under some circumstances which would nowadays cause amusement; as for instance, when Gaylord Brewer married and went to get his bride, he hitched one ox to a buggy and drove over to her parents' house for her, a spectacle that today would make a good picture for the Sunday newspapers. Myron J. Brewer was a young boy when his parents settled in Dunn County and homesteaded land. The father built a board shanty for a temporary dwelling, which they occupied until he had cleared some land. He then put up a frame house, barn and other buildings and continued to improve the farm and land until his death. He was prominent as a citizen and was a member of the town board when the town of Wilson was a part of Sheridan. The subject of this sketch has in his possession an Indian beaded purse, which his mother owned when she was 15 years old. Mr. and Mrs. Gaylord I. Brewer had two children, both sons, Cassius, who is now deceased, and Myron J. Myron J. Brewer grew up on the home farm, as a boy attended the rural school, and when older helped his father to improve the homestead. After the death of his last surviving parent he fell heir to the farm, and has since enlarged it by the purchase of 160 additional acres, thus increasing its area to 320 acres, of which he has 75 under the plow. He carries on general farming and dairying, having 30 head of mixed grade cattle, and raises hogs and Shropshire sheep. He has served three years as constable and three years as school clerk, and is a stockholder in the Ridgeland Cooperative Creamery. Mr. Brewer was first married Oct. 31, 1900, to Bell Sloan, daughter of Benjamin and Josephine Sloan, her parents having been early settlers in Barron County. She died in July, 1901. On June 16, 1915, he was married in Menomonie to Sophie Mathieson, daughter of Elissus and Caroline (Larson) Mathieson. Her father came from Denmark and the mother from Sweden. On coming to the United States, they first settled in Dakota. Thence they subsequently moved to Minnesota, and in 1901 came by team to Dunn County, Wis., buying a farm in the town of Otter Creek. There Mrs. Mathieson died and Mr. Mathieson then returned to Minnesota, where he died in December, 1924. Their children were Anna, Mabel, Sophia, Lillian, Agnes and Marvin, of whom the last mentioned is now deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Myron J. Brewer have four children, Clarence, Vernon, Edna and Violet.

Gaylord Baldwin, who formerly operated a farm in the town of Wilson, was born in Juneau County, Wisconsin, Sept. 21, 1875, son of H. William and Laura (Wright) Baldwin. The parents, who farmed in Juneau County until 1877, then came to Dunn County, homesteading 160 acres of land in Section 36, Wilson township, on which the father built a log dwelling and barn, afterwards replacing them by better buildings, and he and his wife spending the remainder of the lives there. They had four children, two of whom are living: Adra, wife of George Smith of the town of Otter Creek, and Gaylord. Those deceased are Laura M. and William. After the death of his parents Gaylord secured the farm, which he conducted until 1917, when he sold 80 acres of it; and in 1921 he sold the other 80. He was married in the town of Sand Creek Dec. 25, 1905, to Bell Roberts, daughter of William and Clara Roberts. Her parents, who were early settlers in Dunn County, being now deceased. Mrs. Baldwin died Feb. 12, 1917, leaving five children, namely: Clifford, Alva, Velma, Robert and Glenn.

Lewis Hanson, a well known representative of the agricultural interests of the town of Dunn, where he has spent nearly 30 years in developing a farm, was born in Brottum, Norway, Aug. 19, 1851, son of Hans Larson and Anna (Sorensdatter) Both parents died in Norway, the father in 1862 and the mother in 1903. Hanson. Lewis Hanson's education was acquired in the public schools of his native land, after which he learned the carpenter's trade, which he followed there until he was 29 years old. In 1880 he came to America, locating in Menomonie, Wis., where he followed his trade for three years. Then in 1883 he entered the employ of the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company as millwright, continuing with them until 1896. The vast expanses of rich but uncultivated land that he saw around him on every side fired him with the ambition to become a farm proprietor, something that would have been very difficult in his native land but was quite easy here, except for the amount of hard work involved. Not being afraid of work, Mr. Hanson in 1894 took the first step toward the realization of his ambition, buying 100 acres in Section 28, (Township 27 N.), town of Dunn. It was a tract which was partly improved and on it were a log house and log barns, buildings enough to make a start with. Mr. Hanson at once moved his family into the house, though he continued to work for the Knapp-Stout people two years longer. Then he gave up his position with the The method by company to develop his farm, taking up his own residence on it. which the wilderness was tamed and converted into fertile farm lands is so familiar to nearly all residents in Dunn County that it need not be re-described here. It is sufficient to say that Mr. Hanson made steady progress along the up-hill road, his task, however, becoming less arduous as time went on and he was able to use machinery for some of the work. The extent of his progress was made visible in 1919, when he erected a fine modern ten-room house, with an outside stucco finish, and hardwood interior finish, and installed with a furnace and hot water heat. Into this mansion the family moved from the little log dwelling in which, though cramped for room, they had spent many happy years. Nor was this all, for the log barns also are gone, having been replaced by a full complement of modern farm buildings, including a barn of 34 x 84 feet. Mr. Hanson has 68 acres of his land under the plow, the balance being in pasture and timber. He keeps grade Guernsey cattle, with a pure bred sire, and Duroc-Jersey swine. His farm is well managed and presents every evidence of thrift and prosperity. He is a patron of the Downsville Cooperative Creamery. As a Free Mason he belongs to the Menomonie Lodge No. 164, F. & A. M., and to Menomonie Chapter, No. 53, R. A. M., and also has membership in the Modern Woodmen of America. Mr. Hanson has been twice married; first in March, 1885, to Rena Mattison, who died in November, the same year, a little daughter, named Anna, dving also. On Oct. 29, 1890, Mr. Hanson married Ragnhild Lee, who was born in Tyldalen, Norway, April 20, 1870, and came to America in 1884, settling in Downvsille, Dunn County, Wis. Seven children have come to enlarge the family circle: Randy Louise, born Aug. 5, 1891; Herman August, Dec. 22, 1893; Bertha Elisa, Oct. 20, 1895; Sewell Edwin, March 30, 1899; Helen Olivia, June 2, 1901; Bessie Isabelle, June 17, 1908, and Jay Theodore, July 15, 1910. Randy Louise, Sewell Edwin, Bessie Isabelle and Jay Theodore are residing on the home farm with their parents. Herman August, who is now a prosperous farmer in the town of Dunn, married Helen A. Ziehl, on Sept. 7, 1921, and has a son, Raymond. Bertha Elisa was married June 19, 1919, to Fred Krueger and resides at Gilman, Taylor County, where Mr. Krueger works on the railroad as section foreman. Helen Olivia is employed in the piano factory in Menononie. Mr. Hanson and his family are members of the Varney Creek Lutheran Congregation.

Louis Hermann, a former resident of the town of Dunn, where he was well known as a successful farmer, was born on his father's farm in this town on Jan. 30, 1862, son of Jacob and Christina (Bachtle) Hermann. He was educated in the district school but as a boy his time was spent mostly in helping his father on the home farm, which his parents had taken as pioneers and were endeavoring to develop. The necessity for hard work and the general conditions under which he grew up caused him to acquire habits of thrift as well as industry. He saved his money with an eve to the future and thus had some when he was ready to start out for himself. After the death of his parents he came into possession of a part of the home farm, including the residence and other buildings. He was then his own master and continued his agricultural activities as before, enlarging and improving his place according to his opportunities, so that at the time of his death, which took place Nov. 4, 1910, he owned 416 acre of fine land, with a good set of buildings, and his farm was well stocked and well cared for in every detail. He was a stockholder in the cooperative creamery and for several years had rendered public service on the town board. His passing deprived the community of a good citizen who had the respect of all of his neighbors. Mr. Hermann was married Jan. 4, 1890, to Christiana Carolina Arnold, who was born in Wurtenberg, Kaldenwesten, Germany, Jan. 28, 1870, daughter of Christian and Christiana (Hermann) Arnold, with whom she came to America in 1883. The Arnolds located near Brownton, McLeod County, Minn., where they engaged in farming. There the father died Nov. 7, 1887, and Mrs. Arnold subsequently took up her residence in the village, where she resided for a while, after which she went to live with her daughter, Mrs. Hermann, in whose home she died Sept. 4, 1916. Mr. and Mrs. Arnold were the parents of five children: Christ, now of California; Julius, deceased; Henry, who owns the home farm at Brownton, Minn.; Christiana, who married Louis Hermann; and Pauline, who is now Mrs. Gottfreid Obenland of Ackley, Minn. Mr. and Mrs. Louis Her-mann also had five children, Louis H., Olga P., Alma L., Emma L. and Elmer A. Louis H., who was born Sept. 24, 1890, is now conducting the home farm. He was married Jan. 19, 1924, to Elsie Schneider of the town of Eau Galle, who was born in Switzerland, 1901, and came to America in 1921. Louis H. Hermann is one of the prominent young farmers of his town. He is secretary of the Downsville Colony of Beavers. Olga O., born Feb. 21, 1892, is now Mrs. Robert Froeschle of the town of Weston and has one child, Lyle. Alma L., born Nov. 1, 1899, died at the age of seven months and nine days, on June 10, 1900; Emma L., born Aug. 4, 1903, and Elmer A., born Sept. 16, 1909, are residing with their mother. After her husband's death Mrs. Hermann continued her residence on the farm, which was managed for her by her son Louis until March 21, 1924, at which time she rented it to him and took up her residence in Menomonie, buying a nice house at 1515 Broadway. The Hermann family are members of the Lutheran Church.

Edvard Skille, a former resident of Dunn County, now residing in Drummond, Bayfield County Wis., is an American citizen of Norse birth and ancestry who has reflected credit on his race by the scientific achievement of having designed a practical method for the reform of the calendar, the desirability of which has been recognized by learned men for centuries past, though without any perfect plan being proposed. Edvard Skille was born on the farm Sör-Hjelmen, in Skogn parish, Nord-Tröndelag County, Norway, May 11, 1868. His father was Hans Skille, born on the farm Refset, in Stören parish, Sör-Tröndelag County, Norway, Nov. 24, In the parish church at Stören on July 11, 1867, Hans Skille was united 1836. in marriage with Gunild Rogstad, who was born on the farm Rogstadoien, in Storen parish, Sör-Tröndelag County, Norway, on Nov. 29, 1836. Shortly afterwards they moved to Skogn parish. It is unnecessary to enter minutely into the family history at this period or later. Suffice it to say that Mr. and Mrs. Hans Skille found the battle of life in their native land a sufficiently hard one to fight, and within a few years after their marriage they began to consider the advisability of emigration to America. Having resolved to take this step, the father came first, landing at Halifax in June, 1881, bound for Red Wing, Minn. Two years after Hans Skille's departure from Norway, Mrs. Skille with her son Edvard (their only child) set out to join the husband and father. Leaving the city of Tröndhjem, Norway, on April 5, 1883, passing through Hull and Liverpool, England, and landing at Philadelphia, Penn., on April 22. They arrived at North Menomonie at noon, April 25, finding lodging in the house of Lars and Guri Granöien, on Tainter Street, where Mr. Skille was then boarding. Thus the reunion of the family took place. Hans Skille died at 227 Wilson Street, North Mencmonie, on July 9, 1912, and was laid to rest in Halvorson Cemetery, near Mencmonie Junction. Mrs.

EDVARD SKILLE, 17 YEARS GUNILD SKILLE, 48 YEARS—HANS SKILLE, 48 YEARS Taken in the summer of 1885.

Gunild Skille survived him nearly ten years, passing away April 4, 1922, and being laid to rest by his side in Halvorson Cemetery. Edvard Skille's schooling was very meager, as he attended the common parish school in Norway only, then the common school at North Menomonie for his first two winters there, and the common school at Forest Center on Little Elk Creek in the winter of 1885-86. He found it difficult to obtain work in Menomonie on his arrival, but finally got a job piling slabs under the directorship of Mr. Curtis at the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company's watermill. This was at noon on May 29, 1883. The compensation was $20 per month, and he had to pay his own board—"eat myself," as he says the expression went in those days. He worked for the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company for four summers, and at the brick yard of the Menomonie Pressed Brick Co. for two summers. His father, Hans Skille, worked for the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company for two years and a half after the arrival in this country of Edvard and his mother. But owing to the fact that Mr. Skille's health was fast failing, he quit the sawmill and bought a "forty" of land on Little Elk Creek in the town of Dunn, to which the family moved on Nov. 11, 1885. In the spring of 1894 the parents sold that place and moved back to North Menomonie. In 1895 they bought the old Sager farm, about three miles north of Menomonie Junction, where they made their home until the fall of 1901. Then they sold that place and moved back to North Menomonie, to 227 Wilson Street, where they resided until their death. Seeking woods work. Edvard Skille found it in the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company's camp under charge of "Med." Fournier several miles from Rice Lake, where he worked during the winter of 1886-87. The next two winters he worked for the Rice Lake Lumber Co. in one of their camps some miles north of Rice Lake. On Oct. 22, 1890, he began work for the Rust-Owen Lumber Co. of Drummond, Wis. During the first year and a half, with an ordinary cross-cut saw, he made saw-logs, then acted as log scaler for five years. For the last 28 and a half years he has served as bill-clerk in the lumber office of the concern. On July 31, 1898, Edvard Skille was married in Ashland, Wis., to Jenny Solberg, who was born on the farm Bjeglerud in Mordre Land parish, Opland County, Norway, on Oct. 22, 1873. She emigrated from Oslo, Norway, on July 29, 1892, and arrived at Drummond, Wis., on Aug. 15, the same year. She is the second child of Hans Skogen and wife, Oline, whose maiden name was Solberg, both of Mordre Land parish, Norway. Mr. and Mrs. Skille have no children. With respect to the scientific achievement of Mr. Skille referred to at the beginning of this article, it may be well to make further mention of it in his own words. He writes as follows: "For a number of years I have been very much interested in reforming our incorrect and antiquated calendar. To that end I published, 1918, in the Norse language, 'Den Metriske Kalender,' " proposing and explaining a completely new method of computing time, based on the decimal system. This metric calendar is absolutely my own invention. Several learned men have spoken very highly of the little book, and it caused 'Den Norske Presseforening i "The Amerika,' some years ago to adopt the inventor as an honorary member. new leap-year cycle I propose in connection with the Metric calendar is, so far as I know, the only cycle proposed whereby calendar time checks with the tropical years without variation of a single second. Lack of funds has so far prevented the translation and publishing of the new calendar into American. A friend of mine in Duluth drew up in translation the main points the other year. I send a copy of that along so you can get the main run of the metric calendar. "Dr. O. M. Norlie, Decorah, Ia., in his just published book, 'History of the Norwegian People in America,' has given me a very nice space among 33 Norse inventors out of a total estimated at 33,000 in this country." Mr. Skille adds that both he and his wife are deeply interested in literature and of late years have gathered together a nice private library. Though, as he says, he contributed very little or nothing to the history of Dunn County, he is deeply interested in its history and future welfare. The description of Mr. Skille's plan for a metric calendar-that is, one founded on the decimal system—is contained in a typewritten pamphlet received, entitled "Paper by John Heitman on The Metric Calendar." It makes brief reference to the Julian and Gregorian calendars, pointing out their defects, and clearly shows the advantages of that proposed by Mr. Skille. Could the publishers of this volume devote the space necessary to an exposition of this scientific subject, it would be a pleasure to print it, but such space is not available. For the benefit, however, of those who take an interest in the subject, it may be said that the Skille calendar—as it may be appropriately called—"aims not only at a new chronology but a new era." By an ingenious method of intercalation, the civil year is made to agree with the astronomical to the very second for all time to come, avoiding the present divergence of 26 seconds each year between the civil and the solar year. Moreover the inconvenient division of the months into days of unequal number, and that of the day into two times 12 hours, is corrected and a more scientific plan substituted. This system could be put into operation "at the instant of midnight between the 21st and 22d of December, in that year, of the Gregorian calendar in which the metric calendar is adopted for the future chronology of the world," or "when the winter solstice at Greenwich meridian occurs near or at the instant of midnight between the 21st The years 1936 and 1940 would be suitable for the purpose, and 22d of December." especially so, 1940. It could, if desired, be put into operation at some other time. Though revolutionary, a close study of the plan reveals its inherent harmony, andwhat is more surprising—an extreme simplicity. "All complications and perplexi-ties in matters of chronology have been removed." The ease with which time may be computed almost baffles comprehension." That a practical and highly scientific system for the reckoning of time-a highly complex subject that has troubled the brains of some of the world's greatest thinkers since the beginning of civilizationshould have been devised by a man of Mr. Skille's limited educational opportunities, compelled to earn his living by steady labor since boyhood, shows that he possesses intellectual powers out of the ordinary, and it may be hoped, and expected, that it will attract the attention of those whose word in its favor will give it greater publicity and perhaps a chance of adoption by the scientific world or by civil society in general throughout the world.

August Bjork, who owns and operates one of the best developed farms in the town of Elk Mound, which he has been laboring to improve for the last 29 years, was born in Sweden, Jan. 20, 1865, son of Gustave and Mary (Olson) Bjork. Both parents died in Sweden, which was their native land. August as a boy attended school there and was confirmed in the Lutheran church. In 1882, at the age of 17, he came to America, locating in Chicago, where he secured employment in an organ factory. From there he came to Wisconsin and for one summer, 1884, was in Durand, Pepin County, Wis., spending two summers in Meridean, Dunn County. He next went to Eau Claire, where for three years he was employed in lumber mills. At the end of that time he left this part of the country for a while, going west to the state of Washington, where for 18 months he was engaged in carpenter work. Then returning to Wisconsin, he engaged in sawmill work for the summer, his next employment being at Bruce for Mr. Weyerhauser, he spending three years there. It was at the end of that time, or in 1895, that he bought his present farm of 210 acres in Section 1, town of Elk Mound, Dunn County. About 35 acres of it had been broken, the balance consisting mostly of woodland, and for buildings there was a small shack. Having married some years previously, he and his family took possession of the shack and made their home there for some years thereafter, in fact, until 1906, in which year Mr. Bjork built his present residence, a very good house, and, in its present condition, quite modern, having a full basement, being provided with a home waterworks system and hot air heating plant. In other respects he has made equal progress. In 1908 he built a barn of 34 x 58 feet in ground plan, with full basement and provided with the James patent equipment and drinking cups. He has also built a Netco tile silo of 12 x 30 feet, a machine shed of 20 x 48 feet and another of 16 x 30 feet, also a granary and chicken house. For his water supply he has two drilled wells and a cistern. Mr. Bjork's farm is the result of hard work for a considerable period of time, and shows good taste in the arrangement of the buildings, with convenient access from one to another. His driveways are amply large for the passage of teams, and he has plenty of yard space. He keeps a herd of good Guernsey cattle, with a pure bred sire, raises Duroc-Jersey swine, and has 90 acres of land cleared, broken and under cultivation. He is engaged in general farming and dairying and is a stockholder in the Elk Mound Cooperative Creamery and the Colfax Produce Co. Mr. Bjork was married April 28, 1888, to Mary Christenson, who was born in Norway, Aug. 20, 1864. He and his wife are the parents of three children: Gunder Adolph, born Feb. 25, 1891, now residing in St. Paul; Mabel A., born July 8, 1893, who is now Mrs. Milton Mathews of Chicago and has a son, Arnold; and Carl W., born Oct. 8, 1900, who married Nora Evenson of Colfax. The family are members of the Free Lutheran Church. They enjoy a good social standing, and their home, set off by a spacious lawn and ornamental shade trees, is one of the attractive spots in the northeast part of the town.

Hans C. Prestrud, who is engaged in agriculture in Section 2, town of New Haven, where he has been established for nearly 24 years, was born in Modum, Norway, June 14, 1868, son of Christian and Engeborg (Anderson) Prestrud. Both parents are deceased, the father having died when Hans C. was five years old. Hans was given a common school education and after his father's death remained at home with his mother until he was 24 years old. He then emigrated to the United States and coming directly to Wisconsin, located at Prairie Farm, Barron County. For ten winters he worked in the woods and for eight summers was employed as a lumber piler in mills in Minneapolis. In the spring of 1896 he went to Bessemer, Mich., where he was employed in and about the iron mines. The next spring he came to Dunn County and bought 80 acres of wild land on Section 9, town of New Haven. He kept that land only for two years, making little improvement on it, and then sold it. In 1898 he bought 40 acres on Section 9, a tract which he also sold after cutting the timber on it, and did the same with another 40-acre Then in 1901 he bought the land that constitutes his present farm, a tract tract. of 80 acres in Section 2, town of New Haven. It was pretty well covered with hardwood timber and had no buildings on it or other improvements. He has since spent his time in developing it into a good farm, now having 30 acres under the plow. His first buildings were poor, but he has since erected a good frame house, and in 1924 he built a fine modern frame barn, with measurements of 36 x 72 x 12 feet, with gamble roof, half stone basement with cement floors, steel stanchions and drinking cups for 25 head of cattle, and a four-stall apartment for horses. The cattle are of good grade and Mr. Prestrud gives close attention to dairying besides general farming; as a specialty he raises tobacco. He was married Nov. 24, 1904, to Berthine Severson of Minneapolis, who was born at Castle Rock, Dakota County, Minn., daughter of Sever and Sophia (Olson) Severson. Both her parents are deceased, Mrs. Severson having died at the home of a daughter and son-in-law, at Chetek, Barron County, Wis., on Oct. 13, 1921, and Mr. Severson just three weeks later. To the subject of this sketch and his wife seven children have been born, as follows: Clarence, Jan. 16, 1908; Henry, Jan 18, 1909; Ralph, May 8, 1910; Evelyn, April 30, 1911; Olive, Dec. 15, 1912; Burdette, Sept. 27, 1914; and Ellen, June 13, 1916. The family belong to the Vestre Akre congregation of the Norwegian Lutheran Church.

Christ Maves, a resident of Dunn County for 45 years, who has done good pioneer work in developing farm lands from the original wilderness, and is now the proprietor of a good farm in the town of Eau Galle, was born in Saxony, Germany, Aug. 29, 1847, a son of Christ and Louise (Hartman) Maves. He was nine years old when brought to the United States by his parents, who settled in the town of Herman, Dodge County. There he attended public school and grew to manhood. In 1879, at the age of 32, having at that time been married several years, he came to Dunn County, bringing his family with him and also his parents. In Section 5, town of Eau Galle, he bought 80 acres of land, of which about 20 acres had been broken, additional improvements being a few log buildings which stood on it. On that place his father died in December, of the same year, and in July, of the following year, 1880, young Maves traded the farm for a 160-acre tract across the road in Section 8, about 40 acres of which had been partly cleared and there were a log shanty and log buildings on it. Mr. Maves moved into the crude log dwelling with his family and his widowed mother and then began the real work of developing They lived under pioneer conditions and for ten years had to haul their a farm. water by team from the spring in the valley by Morton Hill, a distance of a mile and To illustrate the wilderness of the country at that time, Mr. Maves relates a half. that one day, happening to glance across the landscape he saw shuffling along at no great distance from the house what he took to be three black sheep and wondered who could be their owners. Then as they drew nearer he discovered them to be three black bears, which continued unconcernedly on their way and finally disappeared in the forest. Mr. Maves in the meanwhile was improving his place, including the buildings, and erecting other whens the necessity arose, and since those early days he has cleared and broken about 100 acres of land and has them under good cultivation. The farm is also well fenced and is now provided with modern buildings, including a fine residence that he built in 1903. In 1900 the log barn was replaced with a large basement barn of 36 x 74 feet in ground plan, installed with the James equipment; and his other out-buildings are all adequate to present-day needs. Thrift, economy and efficiency have been Mr. Maves' guiding principles of action and they have proved effective in advancing him well along the road of prosperity. His farm is known as the Morton Hill Dairy Farm and it is one of the fine pieces of agricultural property in the town of Eau Galle. In building it up through the early stages Mr. Maves was effectively aided by a good wife and helpmate, whose maiden name was Johanna Pfieffer, and who was born in Wittenburg, Germany, Oct. 12, They were married April 12, 1874, and after 40 years of married life and of 1857. duties well performed, Mrs. Maves passed away on Aug. 6, 1914. The issue of the marriage was six children, as follows: Rose, born April 12, 1875, who died on March 25, 1902; August, born June 12, 1877, and now a farmer in the town of Rock Elm, Pierce County, who married Ella Mecklenburg, and has six children, Marie, Robert, Christ, Helen, Donald and Jean; Christ, born Oct. 23, 1879, who resides with his father; Henry, who died in infancy; Mary, born June 27, 1882, now Mrs. Gust Mecklenburg of the town of Eau Galle, and Lydia, born Sept. 16, 1890, still residing on the home farm. Mr. Maves and his family are members of the Sacred Heart Catholic Congregation at Elmwood.

William Mecklenburg, who in Section 4, town of Eau Galle, performed the highly useful work of converting 80 acres of land into a fruitful farm, was born in Germany, Dec. 15, 1841. He came to the United States in 1880, settling first in the town of Woodland, Dodge County, where he remained until 1882, when he came to Dunn County and took up the land above mentioned, to the improvement of which he devoted the rest of his life. It was all practically wild land and he started in a primitive way with log buildings, from which beginning he progressed through hard work from one point of vantage to another, continuing his agricultural operations until his death on Oct. 27, 1919, which was much regretted. Mr. Mecklenburg was married in Germany, Oct. 3, 1867, to Louise Braesike, a native of that country, born Dec. 8, 1846, and who is still living on the old home farm, which is now conducted by her son, Gust. Mr. and Mrs. Mecklenburg were the parents of ten children in all, namely, Anna, Bertha, Fred, Frank, Gust, Martha, Emma, Ella, William and Charles, of whom the following is a further record: Anna, born March 20, 1870, who died June 24, 1890, having been the wife of Charles Rodewald; Bertha, born June 12, 1872, is now Mrs. Otto Lamm of the town of Rock Elm, Pierce County. Fred, born Sept. 24, 1878, is unmarried and lives in Roberts, Wis. Frank, born April 12, 1880, married Frances Spencer and they reside in North Dakota. Gust. born Jan. 25, 1882, who owns and conducts the home farm, which he has doubled in size, married Mary Maves, on Oct. 20, 1915. Martha, born Nov. 7, 1883, is single and lives in Minneapolis. Emma, born Aug. 24, 1885, is now Mrs. Frank Walker of Durand, Wis. Ella, born Dec. 19, 1888, is the wife of August Maves of the town of Rock, Elm, Pierce County, Wis. William, born Aug. 20, 1890, married Marion Freeman and lives in Watertown, S. D. Charley, born July 21, 1892, married Minnie Limmelink and lives in Roberts, Wis. It was about 1905 when Gust became the owner of the farm. Later, in 1908, he added to it another 80-acre tract adjoining, consisting of wild land, thus increasing the area of the farm to 160 acres.

He has cleared and developed the larger part of this latter acquired tract. He has built a fine new residence of the semi-bungalow style; also a fine dairy barn of 36×74 feet, with full basement and modern equipment, and has remodeled other outbuildings, besides fencing the farm. He is engaged principally in dairying, keeping Shorthorn cattle, and is recognized as one of the progressive and successful farmers of the town of Eau Galle.

Henry Kelkenberg, proprietor of Spring Dairy Farm, the largest farm in the town of Elk Mound, containing 800 acres, and who has various other important business interests, both agricultural and otherwise, was born in Germany, Feb. 4, 1844, son of Christian and Mary Kelkenberg. His parents died in their native land when he was quite young. He acquired a good education and remained in Germany until he was 22 years old, coming to the United States in 1866, and for a year thereafter working on farms in La Crosse County, Wisconsin. In 1867 he went to Eau Claire, where he worked in a sawmill for about a year, afterwards becoming assistant miller in the flour mill on Elk Creek in Eau Claire County, which was conducted by a Mr. Summermeyer. After remaining there for a year and a half, he went to Chippewa Falls, where he was employed for one year in a sawmill. It was at the end of that time that he came to Dunn County and began his career as a farmer, in which he has been more than ordinarily successful. He started with 320 acres of land in Section 21, town of Elk Mound-a larger stretch of land than most Dunn County farmers began with, and, moreover all raw or wild-and from that he has developed his present fine property, notable not only for the large number of acres under cultivation, but also for its admirable buildings, which present a pleasing view to the eye indicative of good taste and successful industry. The main barn, set on a full basement, measures 40 by 140 feet, and is supplemented by a small one of 40 x 70 feet, while Mr. Kelkenberg's machine-shed is 112 feet long. There is also a fine granary and corn cribs, with a hog house underneath the latter measuring 22×40 feet. The residence is in keeping with the other buildings and has the desirable setting of yards, lawn and shrubbery, including an evergreen wind-The water supply is derived from a fine well which furnishes running water break. for the residence and other buildings. Mr. Kelkenberg has a spendid herd of Holstein cattle including both grade and pure bred stock with a pure bred sire, and his dairying, stock raising and crop farming operations have been conducted with intelligence and usually with a considerable degree of success. As he is now 80 years old, he has for the last five years rented his farm out, but still resides on it and is active every day helping to do some of the work, being exceedingly well preserved both mentally and physically, and rather having the appearance of a man of 60 than of one of his years. He is a stockholder in the Farmers Cooperative Creamery at Elk Mound, and is also interested in the general store and machinery business of William Siedenberg in the village of that name, he and Mr. Siedenberg owning together 240 acres of land in the village, some of which they have platted into lots and some of which they lease. They also own certain other lands together. Mr. Kelkenberg is a member of the Lutheran Church. He has never married, his household having been taken care of by hired help.

Samuel M. Tufts, now living retired in the village of Knapp, has been a resident of this village, except for brief absences, for practically 40 years, during most of which time he led a very active life, engaged at different times in several occupations, in all of which he showed himself efficient and reliable. He was born at Young's Mills, Leeds County, Ontario, Canada, on March 18, 1860, son of William and Sarah (Monroe) Tufts. The parents were natives of Canada, where they spent their entire lives, William Tufts being a cooper by trade, though he also followed farming. His wife Sarah dying in 1860, he married again in 1869. His own death occurred on Jan. 31, 1881. He had 11 children, all by his first wife, namely: Maria, David, William (first), William (second), Clara, James, Melissa, Richard, Henry, Mary and Samuel M., of whom the last mentioned—the subject of this sketch—is the only one now living. Mrs. Sarah Tafts, not having been in very good health for some time passed away some three months after the birth of her youngest child, Samuel M. As she was unable to care for him, when two days old he was put under the care of a family named Gibson, with whom he remained until he was a babe of nine months, after which until he was nine years old he lived with his grandmother Monroe. Then, on his father's second marriage, he went to work for a farmer named Samuel Avery, with whom he remained for four years, during which time His next employer was John Dickey and he remained with he attended school. him until he was 16. In March, 1876, he entered the employ of the Grand Trunk Railway as rail inspector, and he was thus occupied until Dec. 1, 1880. On leaving the employ of the Grand Trunk road Mr. Tufts came to Wisconsin, locating at Wilson, St. Croix County, where he worked for James Austin, who had timber holdings in the vicinity. For 18 months he was engaged in chopping cordwood. In 1882, when the city of Winnipeg was enjoying a boom, he went there and earned six dollars per day working in the sawmill. After staying in that city for a month, he went east of it to Keetwain Mills, where he remained until Nov. 1, 1882. He then entered the employ of the Gardner-Thompson Company, having charge of v crew of Indians who were building roads for dog teams over which to haul provisions into the lumber camps in Ontario and Manitoba, near Fort Francis, building tote roads, rollways and skidways. On Jan. 4, 1883, he had the misfortune to break his right arm, which was set for him by a Frenchman, who was not, however, a doctor, and as the setting was not perfectly done, the arm subsequently became discolored and he was obliged to seek a properly qualified surgeon. The nearest one was 120 miles away at Rat Portage, which is now Kanora, Ontario, and it took him seven days to get there, the temperature being 60 degrees below zero at the time. He was hauled there by a dog train and five Indians on a taboggan. After he had recovered, he became watchman in the mills at Keetwain Mills. On October 15, 1883, Mr. Tufts set out on his return to Wisconsin. He had to stop at several places and seek work, as he had sent practically all his money to a man in Hersey, Wis., and not being able to find work, he went "broke". A little Irish woman saved his life by giving him food. In three weeks he reached Wilson, St. Croix County, and during the following winter he cut cordwood on 120 acres of land which he owned in the vicinity, selling it to the railroad company for two dollars per cord. In May, 1884, he came to Knapp to visit the James Austin family. He was expecting to return to Canada, but was induced by the Austins to remain in Knapp and for four years he worked in the stave factory here. After that he operated a meat market for a short time. In the fall of 1888 he purchased 15 colonies of bees and in the following year 15 more and began a career as an apiarist that lasted for many In fact he still keeps a limited number of swarms and is gradually going in vears. stronger each year. For a few years during the early part of that period, however, he had other occupation, going to work in the fall of 1889 as fireman on the Omaha railroad, working on the stone train during the summer, and during the remainder of the year being employed on the chain gang. He remained with the company until 1895, taking some time off each year to care for his bees, and after that year he gave his whole attention to them, in time becoming known as the most extensive honey producer in the community. In 1910, his health having declined, he sold his bees to Willis Krause, and, accompanied by his family, went to the state of Washington, and later to Sand Point, Idaho, returning to Knapp in 1912. After his return he operated an engine for the Winston Construction Company of Minneapolis at Knapp, Hersey and Park Falls. On April 9, 1917, he was appointed postmaster at Knapp, which office he held until Feb. 1, 1922. At various times he also served in other public offices, being chairman of the town of Stanton in 1901, and therefore a member of the county board; town assessor in 1898, 1899 and 1904; first assessor of the village of Knapp; second president of the village in 1907, 1908 and 1913; also supervisor, and a member of the county board during the construction of the agricultural school in Menomonie. He is a member of the local lodge of Masons, and also belongs to the order of Beavers. Though Mr. Tufts suffered many vicissitudes and hardships during his earlier years, he made gradual progress toward a more prosperous condition and finally gained a fair competence, which he is now enjoying. At all times he has proved himself a good citizen, and, whenever in office, a competent official, and he is one of the widely known men in the western part of Dunn County, with a record that will stand inspection. He was married in 1891, in Knapp, Wis., to Ida Staley, who was born Sept. 6, 1865, daughter of Benjamin and Sarah (Studebaker) Staley. Her parents were natives of Indiana who came to Dunn County about 1854, settling two and a half miles north of Menomonie Junction. They were genuine pioneers of the county, and Benjamin Staley was, moreover, a Civil War veteran. In 1878 he and his family came to Knapp, where he and his wife spent the remainder of their lives. Mr. and Mrs. Tufts are the parents of three children: Nellie V., born May 24, 1892; Laura, born June 9, 1894; and Beatrice A., born June 21, 1899. Nellie V. is now Mrs. Emil Beck of Seattle, Wash., and has a son, Bernard. Laura, who is the wife of Walter Searle of Altoona, Wis., has four children, Nellie M., Katherine A., Walter J. and Francis S. Beatrice A. is now Mrs. Horace Lynch of Altoona. Wis., and has three children, Horace H. Phvllis and Maxine. In the fall of 1923 when the state Federal Highway course was changed at Knapp, it went directly by Mr. Tufts' home and through his land. He at once saw an opportunity for business and converted a part of his residence into an eating-house and ice cream parlor; also opened a free camping ground on his land across the highway opposite the restaurant. He has a fine location for tourists and is doing a good business.

Henry Johnson, a substantial farmer in the town of New Haven, was born on a farm in Denmark, Jan. 20, 1866, son of Johannas and Stina Johnson. He was the eldest in a family of five children, the other members of which were Marie, Axel, Magnus, and one whose name is not now remembered. The parents spent their lives in their native land, where they finally passed away, and all the children also remained there except Henry, who came to America with his uncle Marius Hendrickson in May, 1882. His first summer in this country he spent at Stonebank in Waukesha County, Wis., as a farm hand in the employ of a widow, Mrs. Helgerson. During the winter of 1882-83 he worked for the Vandusen Lumber Co. at Dor-Then in the spring of 1883 he went to Hennepin County, chester, Clark County. Minnesota, and that summer was employed on a farm a few miles north of Minneapolis. In the following winter-that of 1883-84-he was again with the Vandusen Lumber Co. at Dorchester, remaining there until the spring, when he went to Goodhue County, Minnesota and that summer was employed on a farm not far from Red Wing. The winter of 1884-85 he spent in a lumber camp near Curtis, Clark County, Wis., and in the following spring went to Freeborn County, Minn., where he staved for three years, being employed on a farm near Albert Lea. In the spring of 1888 Mr. Johnson moved to Martin County, Minnesota, where he operated a rented farm for nine years. In that period he bought an 80-acre tract of unimproved land, which he later sold after breaking 60 acres. In 1896 he moved with his family to Pine County, Minnesota, where he bought 40 acres of wild land, of which he improved ten acres. At the end of five years he sold out and in 1902 moved to Dunn County, buying a farm of 120 acres on Section 26, town of Hay This was an improved farm with a log house and barn and with 60 acres River. under the plow. There Mr. Johnson remained until the spring of 1911, at which time he sold out and bought a farm of 160 acres on Section 14 in the town of New Haven, which is the farm he is now operating. At that time 35 acres of the land was improved. Today he has 55 acres under the plow, the balance being in pasture, timber, and meadow land. The original buildings were poor but he has erected a good set and in all respects the farm is now in excellent condition. Mr. Johnson carries on general farming and dairving, keeping good grade Guernsey cattle with a pure bred sire. He is a stockholder in the Boyceville Telephone Co. Credit must be given to his good wife for helping materially to win the success they have achieved, she having performed her part with equal efficiency. Mr. Johnson was married Oct. 13, 1887, in Martin County, Minnesota, to Guro Larson, who was born in upper Telemarken, Norway, Aug. 19, 1868, daughter of Lars Magnuson and wife, Bertha Torgerson. Both the parents died in Norway and Guro came to America in 1884. After residing for three years in Freeborn County, Minnesota, she went to Martin County, where she was married. Mr. and Mrs. Henry Johnson have been the parents of nine children, namely: Lauritz J., born Dec. 13, 1888, now a farmer in Valley County, Montana; William Joseph, born May 28, 1890, who is Road Master for the "Soo" line at Appleton, Wis.; Anna M., born June 9, 1892, unmarried and living on the home farm; Marius C., now of Galata, Mont., employed on the Great Northern Railway, as section foreman; Sevart H., born April 4, 1897, who is deceased; Oscar B., born April 13, 1900; Julius S., born April 4, 1903; Bertha A., born Nov. 19, 1905, now Mrs. Ingwald Gunness of the town of New Haven; and Selma H., born July 16, 1910, residing on the home farm.

Marius C. enlisted Aug. 7, 1917, at Helena, Mont.; was transferred from there to Fort George Wright, Wash., where he served until Aug. 29, 1917; he was transferred from there to Kelly Field, Texas, where he served until Oct. 17, 1917. From there he went to Barron Field, Texas, where he served until April 25, 1918. He was then transferred to the 207th Aero Squadron, April 25, 1918, in which he served until Nov. 26, 1918, when he was assigned to the Flying School Department at Barron Field; and was there honorably discharged March 28, 1918. Sevart H., who was taken in the last draft, left home Sept. 14, 1918, for Camp Grant at Rockford, Ill. He was inducted into the 161st Depot Brigade and was sent to Camp Hancock at Augusta, Ga., where he died Oct. 10, 1918, from influenza which he had contracted at Camp Grant. He was then a member of Company 25, Machine Gun Corps, having been placed in it on his arrival at Camp Hancock. His remains being sent home, he was given a military funeral and now rests in Vestra Aker Cemetery not far from his home. The family are members of the Vestra Aker congregation of the Norwegian Lutheran Church. Mr. Johnson is nominally a Republican in politics but votes for his favorite candidate regardless of party. At various times he has served in public office. He was a member for three years of the town board of the town of Galena, Martin County, Minn.; also for an equal length of time a member of the town board of Hay River, Dunn County, Wis., and for nine years served as a member of the town board of New Haven.

Andrew J. Ajer, secretary and manager of the Boyceville Store Co. of Boyceville, and president of the Ajer-Iverson Mercantile Co. of Colfax, was born at Nes-Hedemarken, Aug. 15, 1863, son of Johannes and Johanna (Alm-Brottum) Ajer. Both parents died in Norway, their native land. In addition to Andrew J. their first-born child, they had two others-Nels, who is still in Norway, and Karen, who is now Mrs. Carl Evenson of Eau Claire. Andrew J. Ajer in Norway attended both common and high school. In 1881 at the age of 18 he came to America, making his home until 1884 on the farm of an uncle, Torger Nelson, at Yankton, S. D. In that year he came to Menomonie, where he clerked in a store. Later he went to Colfax, where he was employed by the Colfax Store Co. as clerk until 1910. In that year he established a mercantile business in Boyceville known as The Ajer Store. Three years later The Boyceville Store Co., Inc., was organized, with William M. Clough as president and Andrew J. Ajer as secretary, treasurer and general manager. This is a large department store carrying practically everything demanded by the village and rural trade. A fine brick store building was erected of 70 x 80 feet in ground dimensions, and consisting of one story with a full basement, and a splendid business has since been done. Mr. Ajer is also president of the Ajer-Iverson Mercantile Co. of Colfax and a stockholder in the Bank of Bovceville, besides being interested in other enterprises. A man of marked foresight, enterprise and "push," he has become one of the dominent figures in the business life of Dunn County. Andrew J. Ajer was married in July ,1887, to Ingeborg Anna Siverton, who was born in the town of Grant, Dunn County, July 10, 1865. He and his wife are the parents of eight children: Julius, born Nov. 10, 1888, a resident of Boyceville; Norman, born Nov. 18, 1890, also of Boyceville, now vice president of Boyceville Store Co.; Edwin, born Feb. 15, 1893, a prominent business man of Colfax; Selma, born Dec. 7, 1895, who is Mrs. J. D. Stout of Bemidji, Minn.; Agnes, born Jan. 2, 1899, who is employed by the Ajer-Iverson Mercantile Co. of Colfax; Ruth, born July 15, 1901, who is a graduate from the River Falls State Normal School and now a teacher; Esther, born Oct. 25, 1903, wife of C. A. Shern of Colfax; and Oliver, born Jan. 24, 1906, a student at St. Olaf College at Northfield, Minn. Mr. Ajer and family are members of the Lutheran Church.

ANDREW J. AJER

Casper Remel, prominent among the retired farmers now living in Menomonie, and who deserves special mention for his horticultural tastes and achievements, was born in Germany, May 24, 1848, son of Jacob and Marv (Demrae) Remel. It was in 1854 that the family came to the United States, settling in Neosho, Dodge County, where Jacob Remel for 22 years followed his trade of cabinet-maker. Later he moved to Jackson County, where he died in 1901, his wife having passed away ten vears before, in 1891. Their children were: Casper, of Menomonie; Mary, now Mrs. John Breitenbach of Alma Center, Jackson County, Wis.; and Mathias of Watertown, Wis. Casper Remel in his boyhood had but few school advantages. He remained at home with his parents until he was 24 years old, working for his father most of the time. On Oct. 15, 1875, a young man of 27, he came to Dunn County and began farming on his own account, buying 160 acres of land in Section 26, town of Red Cedar. The land was all wild, and he had to borrow $200 in order to be able to put up a house, for the use of which money he had to pay eight per cent interest. It was sided with boards and lathed inside, but was not plastered. At that time he had already been married for several years and he and his wife moved in and made the place as comfortable as possible. That house was their home for seven years, during which time they were both working hard to improve the property and better their condition, both of which objects they accomplished. Indeed, they developed a fine farm there, buying 160 acres more land, which gave them a farm of 320 acres. In 1898 they also replaced their original half-finished residence-for they had never had it plastered-with a good frame house of ten rooms, costing $5,000. They also erected a barn and other out-buildings, enterprises which showed that they now stood on a solid foundation. Mr. Remel followed diversified farming with good success and became more prosperous as the years rolled by. Moreover he and his faithful wife and helpmate were not satisfied merely with material progress along primitive and customary lines, but sought to beautify their place and make it attractive. As a means to this end he planted an evergreen grove containing 20 different varieties of trees, and in particular started and developed fine flower gardens, which made the Remel place known for many miles around and brought many visitors to the farm. There he and his wife resided until 1914, in which year they sold the place and established a new home in Menomonie, buying four lots at the corner of 13th Street and the Stout Road, in the Lakeview District. Here he bought a fine modern residence of nine rooms, picturesquely situated, and which he has further beautified by the laying out of lawns and flower beds, the grounds being surrounded on three sides by a well trimmed evergreen hedge, making the place one of the most attractive residence properties in the city and an ideal home for himself and wife. Mr. Remel was married Jan. 10, 1872, to Margaret Fox, who was born in Washington County, Wis., Nov. 22, 1855, daughter of John and Angeline (Nils) Fox. Her parents were natives of Germany who came to America in 1844, settling in Washington County, Wis., at that time among the early settlers there. They spent the rest of their lives in farming, the father dying in April, 1899, and the mother in February, 1909. In the Fox family there were four children: Peter, now of Milwaukee; Anna, who married Nichlaus Kidenger and is now a widow residing in Dodge County; Susan, who is the widow of John Henschen and lives in Kenosha, and Margaret, now Mrs. Casper Remel. Mr. and Mrs. Remel have been the parents of nine children, Mary, Angeline, Theresa, John, Johanna, Elizabeth, Clara, Frank and Anna, whose record in brief is as follows. Mary, born in March, 1874, is the wife of Joseph Schoemacher of the town of Elk Mound, Dunn County, and has eight children, Margaret, John, Mamie, George, Lillie, Theresa, Angeline and Frances. Angeline, born July 25, 1876, and who married John Wagner, died April 5, 1913, leaving four children, Lawrence, Ralph, Evelyn and Gerald. Theresa, born June 8, 1878, married Henry Tyler and died Dec. 24, 1905, leaving two children, Bernette and Raymond. John, born Dec. 10, 1880, died April 1, 1912. Johanna, born Dec. 8, 1882, is the wife of Carl Hagen of the town of Elk Mound and has had two children, Marshall and Hazel, of whom Hazel is deceased. Elizabeth, born Feb. 12, 1884, married William Molitor and resides at home; she has two children, Bernice and Margaret. Clara, born May 19, 1886, is the wife of Geroge Campbell of Excelsior, Minn., and has two children, Casper and Margaret. Frank and Anna are deceased. Frank was born Feb. 12, 1884, being a twin of Elizabeth. All the adult members of the family are good representatives of American citizenship and their children are full of promise for the new generation.

Hans Hanson, a retired farmer of Section 24, town of Elk Mound, may well be ranked among the builders up of Dunn County having been an active factor in its agricultural progress. He was born in Lullen, Denmark, Oct. 16, 1852, son of Hans and Anna Marie Hanson. The father was killed in the woods in 1852, before the subject of this sketch was born. The latter when he grew up had to serve for a while in the Danish army and learn the duties of a soldier, but in 1878 at the age of 26 he came to the United States and to Dunn County, Wisconsin, locating in the town of Elk Mound, where for seven years he worked on farms during the summers and at logging in the winters. His mother, who followed him to this country in 1880, died in 1886. At the end of the seven-year period mentioned Hans Hanson went to Eau Claire, where he found work in a mill. It was in 1888 that he began farming for himself in the town of Elk Mound, on 80 acres in Section 24. The greater part of the tract had been broken, but there were no buildings except a small frame shack, which was not plastered or finished. This Mr. Hanson plastered and put into shape to serve as a residence, and, having been married July 12, that year, to Katrina Faber, he and his wife took possession of this home. Through hard work they made gradual progress and prosperity came surely, if slowly. In time Mr. Hanson rebuilt the house, making it into a nice-looking and very convenient residence; and in 1896 he built a barn of 26×50 feet, which he subsequently enlarged to 26 x 70 feet, putting a full basement under it, with cement floor, and providing it with electric lights. He also erected a fine set of out-buildings, and continued to farm the property successfully until 1921, when he rented it to his son Harold C. For himself and wife he built a neat little modern bungalow close to the farm residence, putting in a pipeless furnace, and installing electric lights, as in the other farm buildings. He and his family are members of the Barum Lutheran Church of Elk Mound, which he has served as trustee and deacon. They are the parents of two children: Anna M., born May 16, 1889, and Harold C., born April 2, 1893. The former is now Mrs. Edward Meyer, Mr. Meyer being a prominent farmer of Chippewa County and the Meyer farm lying just across the road from the Hanson place. Anna has two children, Melvin and Edward. Harold C., who is now conducting the old home farm of the Hanson family, married Marie Jensen of Varney Creek, Dunn County and has two children, Evelyn Pauline and Elmer Harland. Mrs. Katrina Hanson passed away March 17, 1925.

Glenn T. Hensel, manager of the O. & N. Lumber Co.'s vards at Wheeler, was born at Walnut, Ill., March 26, 1888, son of John A. and Emma J. (Bruton) Hensel. The parents, natives of Illinois, are now living retired at Princeton, that state. The subject of this sketch acquired his elementary education in rural schools, and subsequently pursued higher studies in the Princeton High School. After remaining at home until he was 22 years old, he went to North Dakota and entered the service of the North Star Lumber Company as a team freighter, doing freighting from Richerton to Mott, and being thus employed for four months. He was then promoted to the position of second man in their yards at Richerton and worked as such until 1911, not only there but also at Beach and Oaks. In 1911 he came to Wheeler as manager of the company's retail yards here, retaining that position after the business was sold to the Midland Lumber Co., and also after the latter company sold out to the O. & N. Lumber Company. As such he is now employed. The company handles all kinds of lumber and building material at retail. Mr. Hensel is a man of progressive spirit and has identified himself closely with the general interests of the village. He is a member of the Wheeler Commercial Club and for several years has been its president. He is also a stockholder in the First National Bank of Boyceville. A member of the Masonic Order, he belongs to Menomonie

Lodge, No. 164, F. & A. M., and to Menomonie Chapter No. 53, R. A. M.; also to two other fraternal orders, the Modern Woodmen of America and the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. He was married Oct. 21, 1911, to Nellie J. Porter, of Wheeler, who was born Aug. 16, 1893, daughter of Robert R. and Clara (Dahl) Porter. Mr. and Mrs. Hensel are the parents of a daughter, Margaret Helen, who was born May 5, 1913, and who is now a pupil in the Wheeler public school. The family are members of the Evancelical Church of Wheeler.

August Tietz, now a resident of Menomonie, where he is living a retired life, but who was formerly an active farmer in the town of Weston, where he spent some 40 years in the development of a farm from wild land, was born in Germany, March 1, 1852, son of Ferdinand and Justine (Price) Tietz. It was in 1873 that the parents came to America, first making their home at Fond du Lac, Wis., where they spent two years, and then coming to Dunn County to live with their son-in-law, Sever Siefert. Ferdinand Fritz died in 1893, and his wife in 1894. August Tietz attended school in his native land, where he grew to manhood. He came to America in 1872, the vear before his parents did, being then about 20 years old. Locating in Fond du Lac, he followed there for four years the blacksmith and wagon-making business. In 1876 he came to Dunn County, finding employment on The Knapp, Stout & Co. Company's farms, and he continued this occupation four years. At the end of that time, having a year before bought an 80-acre tract of land in the town of Weston, he moved on to it. At the time he bought it, it had some old and poor buildings on it, and he now found that some one had burned them; so making a clearing, he built a frame shack, and a few small buildings to house his grain and stock, and started to develop the land. This was a pioneer job and was hard and slow work; many were doing it at that time, each working for himself and thinking only of the personal reward that should be his after many years of toil, but altogether laying the foundation of the civilization and prosperity of this county. Mr. Tietz gained the reward he was seeking, in time finding himself the owner of a profitable farm, with a good house, barns and other buildings, and he remained on it until 1920, actively engaged in agricultural pursuits, at which time he sold it to his son Paul and retired to Menomonie, buying a comfortable residence at No. 1220 13th Avenue, which he and his wife now occupy. During his active career Mr. Tietz served two years on the board of supervisors of the town of Weston and for nine years was clerk of School District No. 2. He was a stockholder in and a patron of the Downsville Creamery. Mr. Tietz was married Dec. 24, 1876, to Caroline Neumann, who was born in Germany, Dec. 30, 1851, and came to America with her parents, William and Caroline (Meyer) Neumann. The family located in Manitowoc County, Wis., where Mr. and Mrs. Neumann passed away, the former on Aug. 14, 1897, and the latter on Feb. 25, 1890. Mr. and Mrs. Tietz have been the parents of 10 children, Emma, Ida, William, Helen, Agres, Paul, Martha, Edna, Bertha and Rudolph. The two last mentioned died in infancy. The record of the others is briefly as follows. Emma is now the wife of Charles Price, Mr. Price being a farmer in the town of Menomonie; they have two children, Irene and Ida is Mrs. Fred Sommerfeldt of West Allis, Wis., and has two children, Gerhard. Eva and Manola. William, of the town of Menomonie, Dunn County, married Edua Seipel and has four children, Albert, Clarence, Alice and Robert. Helen, who is now Mrs. William Seipel of Eau Claire, has five children, Elmer, Ralph, Roy, Esther and Gertrude. Agnes, the wife of Reinhart Zuehlke of Menomonie, has two children, Eugene and Carl. Paul, who owns the old farm in the town of Weston, married Frances Thomas and has one child, Dorothy. Martha is the wife of Albert Okarn of Martha Durn Country and has the state of the second seco wife of Albert Olson of Knapp, Dunn County and has four children, Loraine, Vernon, Elfrida and Raymond. Edna is the wife of Herman Moe of Luck, Polk County, Wis., and has two children, Kenneth and Maynard. The Tietz family, in particular Mr. and Mrs. August Tietz, are affiliated religiously with the St. Paul's Lutheran Church in Menomonie.

Isaac Aasen, an up-to-date farmer in the town of Wilson, whose parents settled in this town nearly half a century ago, was born on the parental homestead in Section 26, on Dec. 26, 1880. The parents, Iver O. and Anna (Berge) Aasen, were natives of Norway, the father being a farm laborer. They came to the United States in 1875, settling first in Jackson County, Wisconsin, where Mr. Iver O. Aasen bought 40 acres of land; but after two years he sold it and in 1877 came to Dunn County and took the homestead of 160 acres in Section 26, town of Wilson, above mentioned as the birthplace of his son, Isaac. The first buildings he erected on the place were a log house and a log barn, the latter with a hay roof. While they were in process of construction he and his family lived with Gunder O. Berge. Later he built a frame house and another log barn, and farmed there until his death on July 16, 1911. His wife survived him a few years, dving Jan. 18, 1916. They had 11 children, one of whom, Anna, died in 1912, and three died in infancy in Norway. The survivors are Ole, Olena, Jennie, Ingvold, Nettie, Isaac and Laura. Ole is given separate mention in this volume. Olena is now Mrs. Charles Holberg of Minneapolis; Jennie is the wife of Thomas Emmerson of that city; Nettie married Ole Moen, and Laura married Edward Knutson of the town of Wilson. Isaac Aasen was reared on the home farm and as a boy attended rural He helped to clear the parental acres, working on the home farm until school. he was 32 years old, during which time he spent four winters in the woods. In 1907 he bought 120 acres in Sections 25 and 26, some of the land being cleared and broken, and he has since been engaged in converting the place into a good modern farm, having made considerable progress. It is well fenced and provided with a good residence, a frame barn, and all necessary sheds. At present he has 45 acres of the land under the plow, the balance being in pasture and small timber. As a general farmer and dairyman he keeps mixed grade cattle, now having 17 head, and also raises Poland-China hogs and Shropshire sheep. His machinery includes a Fordson tractor. He is a stockholder in the Ridgeland Cooperative Creamery and has served three years as treasurer of the school board of his district. Mr. Aasen was married in the town of Otter Creek on July 16, 1913, to Marie Wold, daughter of Ole and Bertha Wold, early Norwegian settlers in that town, but both now deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Aasen are the parents of two children, Bernice and Julian. They are well known and respected residents in the town of Wilson and the vicinity, representing a high type of citizenship.

Ole Aasen, proprietor of part of the old Aasen homestead in Section 26. town of Wilson, was born in Gudbrandsdalen, Norway, Jan. 3, 1869, son of Iver O. and Anna (Berge) Aasen. He was brought to America by his parents in 1875 and to their homestead in Dunn County in 1877. Here he grew up and attended district school. Being the eldest son, much of the work of breaking and developing the farm fell upon him. About 1896 it was deeded to him, it then containing 160 acres. He later sold three forties, or 120 acres of it to his brother-in-law, Edward Knutson, he, himself, having left a 40-acre tract (in Section 26); but he purchased 80 acres more, a tract which lay across the road in Section 35, and on which stood an old The house he moved on to his 40-acre tract and rebuilt it into a good farm house. In like manner he moved the barns and remodeled them. He has conresidence. tinued to follow mixed farming. He is a stockholder in the Ridgeland Cooperative Creamery and in the Prairie Farm, Dallas & Ridgeland Telephone Co. Mr. Aasen is not married.

William E. Canfield, a well known and respected citizen of the town of Tiffany, for many years successfully engaged in general farming and dairying, and who has a record of efficient service in public office, was born on a farm in Polk County, Iowa, June 25, 1869, son of Jeremiah and Jane (Gregory) Canfield. Both parents were natives of Pennsylvania, the father born in Bradford County, on April 3, 1830, and the mother in Susquehanna County, May 8, 1834. They were married at Forest Lake in Susquehanna County on Sept. 20, 1853. In 1856 they came west, locating in Polk County, Iowa, where they rented land and farmed for a few years. At the end of that time they moved to a locality near Mitchellville, Iowa, buying 40 acres of unbroken land there, on which Mr. Canfield built what was a good house for those early days in the West, and in time he developed the entire 40 acres. The Civil War drew him into the army, as he enlisted early in 1862, becoming a member of Company D, Second Iowa Cavalry, under command of Colonel Hatch.

W. E. CANFIELD AND FAMILY

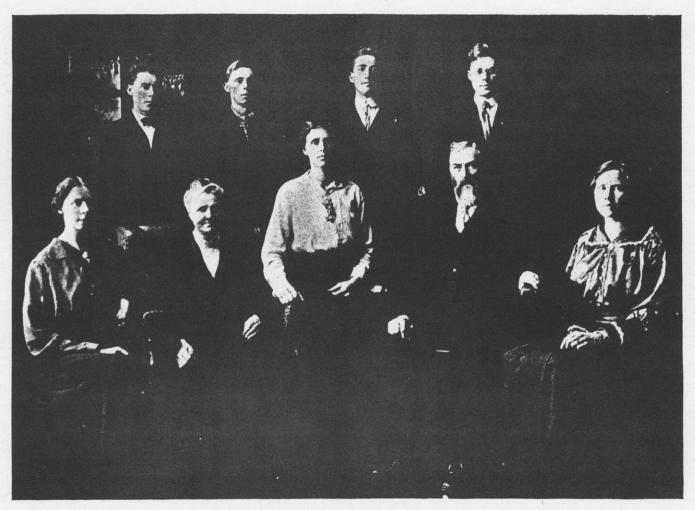

He served three years and 62 days, escaping serious casualty, but being confined to a hospital at St. Louis, Mo., for several months, owing to a severe and protracted attack of pneumonia. On being honorably discharged he returned home and resumed farming, in which occupation he had a successful career, at the time of his death, which occurred May 13, 1876, being the owner of 392 acres of good land. His wife died June 1, 1922. The record of their eight children is briefly as follows: Wallace A., born Aug. 6, 1854, died at Brookings, S. D., Feb. 12, 1923. Andrew L., born in Pennsylvania, died in infancy. Charles M., born Feb. 1, 1857, is now a retired farmer living in Des Moines, Iowa. Martha A., born March 10, 1859, who married Rev. O. S. Baker, a Methodist minister, died at Alliance, Neb., April The fifth and sixth children died in infancy. William E., subject of this sketch, was the seventh. Oscar, the eight and youngest, born March 28, 1871, resided on the old home farm in Iowa, about 12 miles east of Des Moines, until his death on Nov. 28, 1923. William E. Canfield acquired his elementary education in the common school and subsequently attended the high school at Altoona, Iowa, for a year. On his father's death he came into possession of 80 acres of the home farm, which he operated, also helping his brother Charles to conduct their mother's farm, until 1902. He then sold his own property and, coming to Dunn County, Wisconsin, bought an improved farm of 160 acres on Section 4, town of Tiffany, which has been his home ever since. By an additional land purchase of 80 acres he has increased its area to 240 acres, of which he has 160 acres now under the plow. He has also provided adequate buildings, having improved the old barns, built a stave silo, and, in 1912, a good modern frame house of eight rooms, comfortably heated and provided with hot and cold water. As a general farmer and dairyman he keeps a herd of high grade and pure bred Shorthorn cattle, having 28 milch cows and young stock. He has a good equipment and his place is conveniently situated at an equal distance from Downing and Boyceville, both of which villages he uses for markets. He is also a stockholder in the Bank of Boyceville. In politics a Republican, Mr. Canfield has taken a more or less active part in the affairs of local government. He served the town of Tiffany as supervisor in 1906, 1907 and 1908, was town assessor in 1913, and in 1924 became chairman of the town board, which makes him now a member of the county board. For the past 12 years he has also served as director and treasurer of the Chimney Rock School To the conscientious performance of the duties of all these offices he has given his best ability and proved efficient in all of them. For many years Mr. Canfield has belonged to the fraternal order of Modern Woodmen of America, first joining Elm Camp No. 121, of Mitchellville, Polk County, Iowa, and for some time he has been a member of Bolen Camp No. 6568, M. W. A., at Connersville, Dunn County, Wis. Mr. Canfield was married Oct. 26, 1890, in Mitchellville, Iowa, to Margaret De Long, who was born in Polk County, Iowa, Oct. 26, 1872, daughter of Amasa and Elizabeth (Rooker) De Long. Her father was born in Pennsylvania, Sept. 24, 1845, and her mother in Polk County, Iowa, Feb. 14, 1848. They were married Jan. 10, 1867, and settled near Mitchellville, Iowa. Mr. De Long died at Mitchellville, Iowa, Feb. 4, 1920, and Mrs. De Long is now living at that place. Mrs. Canfield has a twin brother, William P. De Long, and a sister, F. A. Kettells, now living in Des Moines; a sister, Mrs. Henry Gifford of Altoona, Iowa, and a brother, W. F. De Long of Denver, Colorado. Mr. and Mrs. Canfield are the parents of ten children, namely, Raymond E., Bessie R., Della E., Jeremiah, Ida May, Daisy B., Elsie M., William E., Guy Theodore and Harvey D., the first seven of whom were born in Polk County, Iowa, and the three youngest in Dunn County. Raymond E., who was born Aug. 7, 1891, is unmarried and is helping his father to operate the home farm. He was taken in the last draft of soldiers for the World War, left for training at Fort Riley, Kansas, on June 25, 1918, and was in the medical corps attached to the 77th Infantry. From Fort Riley he was transferred to Camp Custer, near Battle Creek, Mich., and was there stationed when the armistice was signed, being discharged soon after. Bessie R., born Aug. 29, 1892, married Floyd C. Burton and they reside in the town of Tiffany; they have one child, Donald, born Dec. 17, 1920. Mr. Burton served in the World War in an ambulance company, having trained at Fort Riley and being overseas 11 months. Della E., born Jan. 3, 1894, is the wife of James Van Dien of Glenwood City, Wis., and has four children: Dorothy, born May 16, 1918; Billy, Sept. 24, 1921; Jean, Feb. 23, 1923, and Gail, July 17, 1924. Mr. Van Dien wasoverseas with the army during the war and served for nearly a year. Jeremiah, born Oct. 4, 1895, and now living in Glenwood City, married Nora E. Schmidt and has two sons: Robert, born Sept. 1, 1920, and Thomas, born Nov. 19, 1922. Ida May, born June 11, 1897, was graduated from the Glenwood City High School with the class of 1918, and after teaching rural school two years, entered the State Normal School at River Falls, Wis. She subsequently taught public school at Shell Lake, Wis., and now holds a position in the office of the Globe Democrat in St. Louis. Daisy B., born July 12, 1899, is the wife of Earl Schmidt, a farmer in the town of New Haven, Dunn County, and has two children: Verna, born March 25, 1922, and Wilma, born June 23, 1923. Mr. Schmidt also served in the World War, enlisting in the navy and training at the Great Lakes. Elsie M., born March 15, 1902, was grad-uated from the Glenwood City High School, with the class of 1921. She taught school two years, was a student in the River Falls Normal School, is now in the office of the Globe-Democrat, St. Louis. William E., Jr., born Oct. 2, 1906, was graduated from the Glenwood City High School and is on the home farm helping his father. Guy Theodore, born Jan. 2, 1909, is in his second year as a student in the Glenwood City High School. Harvey D., born July 1, 1914, is attending the Chimney Rock School. The Canfield family attend the M. E. Church at Connersville, Mrs. Canfield being a member of it and Mr. Canfield assisting in its support.

A. J. Running, a member of the firm of Running & Martin, of Colfax, and a representative of one of the pioneer families of Dunn County, was born in the village of Colfax, where he now resides, on March 15, 1879, son of Peter and Martha (Simons) Running. He was educated in the local schools and in 1897, as a youth of 1897, he took charge of his father's hardware store, the father having died October 31, that year. He continued to manage the business until 1904, in which year, together with G. F. Martin, he purchased it, and it has since been conducted under the firm name given above. In 1910 he went to Fond du Lac, where he learned the art and science of undertaking, which he and his partner in the following year made a part of their business, and he has since been in charge of that department. In October, 1920, they also purchased the undertaking business of J. D. Burns. In September, 1916, they took over the Ford agency, which department is managed by Mr. Martin. In connection with a good line of light and heavy hardware, they also carry a small stock of furniture. Mr. Running has been treasurer of Colfax since the village was incorporated in 1904. He is a member of the Scandanavian-American Fraternity and of the Odd Fellows, serving as secretary of the latter lodge. He was married in Colfax, Oct. 20, 1906, to Bertha Peterson, daughter of Peter and Olava (Lomoe) Peterson, both her parents being now deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Running have three children: Alvilde, born Sept. 24, 1912; Melva, born March 31, 1916, and Sylvia, born Oct. 26, 1917. The Running family are members of the Norwegian Lutheran Church in Colfax, Mrs. Running belonging also to the Ladies' Aid and other societies.

G. F. Martin, a well known business man of Colfax, a member of the firm of Running & Martin, was born in Dunn County, Wisconsin, Jan. 6, 1874, son of John and Mary J. (Oliver) Martin, both of whom are now deceased. As a boy he attended district school in the town of Otter Creek, and then engaged in various kinds of labor, operating threshing-machines, doing other farm work, or working in the woods as lumberjack, in short, anything at which he could earn wages. On January, 1898, he established a livery business in Colfax, which he conducted for the next five years. It was in 1904 that he became a member of the firm of Running & Martin, he and A. J. Running buying the hardware business then managed by the latter, but previously conducted by Peter Running. Since then they have enlarged the scope of their operations so that it now embraces an undertaking department, which is under the care of Mr. Running, the Ford agency, which is under the care of Mr. Martin, and a furniture department, the last mentioned having so far been conducted on a small scale. The business has been carefully managed and now rests on a solid foundation, the two partners being men in whom the people of this locality have confidence. Mr. Martin served for one year as village president and has been a village trustee for several years. His fraternal affiliations are with the Modern Woodmen of America. He was married in Colfax, Wis., on March 20, 1900, to Martha Running. He and his wife belong to the Methodist Episcopal Churck, Mrs. Martin being active in the work of the church and its societies.

Hans A. Frogner, proprietor of the Frogner Farm situated in Section 3, town of Elk Mound, was born at Frogner, Christiania, Norway, Dec. 29, 1857, son of Andreas Hokenson and Randina (Hanson) Frogner. The parents were natives of the same country, the father born at Gudbrandsdalen and the mother in Barrum. The former died in 1866 and the latter in 1874. Their family consisted of four children: Hans A., subject of this sketch; Martin, who died in Norway; Axel, who is now living in that country, and Nels R. A., of the town of Elk Mound, Dunn County, Wis. Hans A. Frogner as a youth attended school and was confirmed in the Lutheran church at Grönland. In 1873, at the age of 16 years, he came to America, locating first in Pittsfield, Mass., where he was a servant for one year in the home of Captain Morris Shaff. Then coming west to Eau Claire, Wis., he became connected with the lumber industry, working in the mills in summer and at logging in the winter until 1883. After that he was night watchman for three years at the plant of the Rust-Owen Lumber Co. of Eau Claire. During that period he bought 80 acres of land in Section 3, town of Elk Mound, Dunn County, on to which he moved in 1886. This was all railroad land and in a raw or wild condition. No clearing had been made and there were no buildings. After clearing a space Mr. Frogner built a small frame house as a dwelling for himself and family, and, buying a log house from a neighbor, he moved it to his farm to serve the purposes Thus he began his career as a farmer in this town, and thenceforth for of a barn. years his time was spent in grubbing, clearing and breaking the land, to which he added 40 acres more, in the meanwhile improving, or adding to his buildings until he found himself the possessor of his present fine set. These include a hay barn of 24 x 52 feet, with a lean-to cow barn on the south side of 15 x 62 feet, and a leanto horse barn on the north-side of 16 x 26 feet; also a garage, machine shop, granary, a stone milk house, a tobacco stripping shop of 16 x 20 feet, a tobacoc drying barn 28 x 52 feet, and a chicken-house 16 x 32 feet. He has also drilled a well 82 feet deep. His buildings are so placed as to leave ample yard room, and a part of the available space has been utilized in laying out lawns and planting trees and shrubbery. For many years he has raised about two acres of tobacco each year, and this has always been a successful crop. The cattle on his farm are grade Durhams, the herd having a pure bred sire. Mr. Frogner carried on the farm personally until 1917, when he had the misfortune to break his ankle, since which the place has been successively managed by his different sons on shares, the son now conducting it being Alfred. Mr. Frogner is a stockholder in the Colfax Cooperative Creamery. Hans A. Frogner was married Oct. 6, 1883, to Bertha Isakson, who was born in Krodshered, Norway, Feb. 4, 1854, and came to this country in 1873, settling first in Minnesota and in 1882 in Dunn County. Mr. and Mrs. Frogner have been the parents of eight children, namely, Ruth, Mary, Olga, Alfred, Henry, Emil, Isak and Eilert, whose respective records are in brief as follows. Ruth, born Dec. 4, 1884, is now Mrs. Fred Brunn of Elk Mound township and has four children, Barnetta, Suella, Eilert and Marget. Mary, born July 17, 1886, died March 16, 1918. Olga, born Aug. 11, 1888, is Mrs. Arthur Stobb of the town of Elk Mound and her children are Raymond, Marget, Clifford and Edwin. Alfred, born Nov. 4, 1890, and now operating the home farm is as yet unmarried. Henry, born Nov. 6, 1892, is a farmer in the town of Elk Mound and was in the U.S. milltary service in the war with Germany; he married Mabel Hulm. Emil, born Oct. 7, 1894, who was a farmer in the town of Elk Mound, died March 19, 1925; he married Alma Lee and had two children, Edwin and Elvina. Isak was born Oct. 8, 1896. Eilert, born Sept. 24, 1899, died

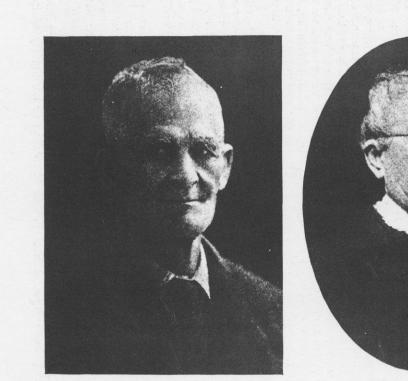

Oct. 2, 1899. The Frogner family are members of the Lutheran church.

Herman K. Halvorson, proprietor and editor of the Boyceville Press, was born in Ventura, Iowa, Aug. 17, 1890, son of John Halvorson Bly and Sarah Halvorson Bly. Both parents were born in Norway, the father in Blei and the mother in Hardanger. The former was for 25 years a sailor on the Atlantic Ocean, but gave up the sea for a home in the United States, settling at Decorah, Iowa, where for several years he was engaged in the grain business. It was there that he was married to his wife Sarah in 1874. Giving up the grain business, he engaged in farming at Ventura, Iowa, where he remained many years and where his wife died in 1897. After her death he remained there until 1902, in which year he moved to Minnesota and for a number of years was engaged in farming there. At last he retired and bought a home in Boyceville, Dunn County, Wis., where he died Jan. 27, 1925. He and his wife were the parents of three children: May, now Mrs. Adolph Olson of Hancock, Minn.; Henry, also of Hancock, Minn., and Herman K. of Boyceville. Herman K. Halvorson was educated in part in the common and high schools of Jasper, Minn., after which he completed a nine months' business course in Willmar Seminary at Willmar, Minn., being a member of the class of 1906. After that until 1912 he followed in succession various avocations, both in Minnesota and Wisconsin, coming to the latter state in 1908 and locating in Boyceville. In 1912 he purchased the Boyceville Press, a weekly paper, at that time having a circulation of 150. Mr. Halvorson has enlarged it to an eight-page issue and its circulation is now the second largest in Dunn County. In connection with the paper he has also built up a fine job printing department and is doing a nice business. He is a member of Bovceville Lodge of Odd Fellows and of Trinity Lutheran Church. Mr. Halvorson was married May 30, 1916, to Myrtle L. Drake of Boyceville, who was born May 9, 1897, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Drake. He and his wife are the parents of one son, Donald A., who was born Nov. 25, 1917.

Arthur M. Howe, the present postmaster of the village of Elk Mound, which position he has held for some nine years, was born in this village, Feb. 25, 1885, son of John L. and Mary (Sorenson) Howe. The father was a native of Wisconsin They were married in Elk Mound, where for over 20 and the mother of Norway. years John L. Howe was section foreman for the Omaha railroad. He is now retired from active work and is a widower, Mrs. Mary Howe having died March 29, 1908. Their children now living are Arthur M., George, Otilda and Elmer. George, who is assistant in the J. C. Penny store at Thief River Falls, Minn., married Elsie Radke of North Menomonie and has three children, Romaine, Geraldine and James. Otilda is manager of the Cooperative Store Co. at Altoona, Wis. Elmer, who married Barbara Lang, is a railway mail clerk at Horican, Wis. Arthur M. Howe was educated in the public schools of Elk Mound and for a short time thereafter was engaged in farm labor. At the age of 20 years he obtained a position in the general store of Henry Ausman, for whom he worked as clerk for about nine months, at the end of which time he became assistant postmaster. On July 1, 1915, under President Wilson's first administration, he was appointed postmaster of Elk Mound, was reappointed under that President's second administration, and was again appointed by the late President Harding, on no occasion having any opposition, as he is popular with both Democrats and Republicans. At the time of his first appointment, Elk Mound was a fourth class post office with four rural routes. It is now a third class office and Mr. Howe has added another rural route. Mr. Howe is an active force in the business and social life of the village. He is secretary and treasurer of the Commercial Club, secretary, treasurer and manager of the Elk Mound Hall Co., secretary and treasurer of the Elk Mound Bowling Club, and a member of the Elk Mound Rod and Gun Club. He also belongs to several fraternal societies, including Menomonie Lodge No. 164, F. & A. M., the Modern Woodmen of America, and the Beavers Fraternal Reserve Association. On June 1, 1910, he was united in marriage with Agnes J. Hanson of Elk Mound, and he and his wife are the parents of two children: Mildred D., born May 1, 1911, and Loraine A., born Nov. 12, 1913. Mr. Howe and his family are members of the Norwegian Lutheran Church.

MR. AND MRS. OSCAR B. HOYT AND WEBSTER W. HOYT Herbert G. Flick, proprietor of the Elk Mound Auto Co., in the village of Elk Mound, was born in the town of Dunn, Dunn County, Wis., Sept. 9, 1896, son of Peter and Anna (Weber) Flick. The parents, though married in Dunn County, were natives of Switzerland, who came to this country when young. after their marriage they settled in the town of Dunn on a farm, where the father, Peter Flick, is still living, Mrs. Anna Flick having died on June 3, 1916. They had four children, Levi, Herbert G., Emma and Walter. Herbert G. Flick was educated in the public schools of Downsville. At the age of 14 he went out to work as a farm laborer, and when 18 he began to learn the automobile business, in particular the repairing of cars of all the various makes, in time becoming a first class mechanic. After satisfactorily filling a number of responsible positions, in 1922 he came to Elk Mound and bought out the stock of the W. H. Hackman garage, establishing the Elk Mound Auto Co., and he has since conducted this business with good finan-His garage measures 40 x 60 feet, the plant including an office, salescial results. room, storage room and repair department. Besides doing general repairing, he carries a full line of accessories—in particular, the Kelly, Springfield, Miller, and Oldfield tires—and handles the Paige, Jewett, Dodge and Chevrolet cars. He holds the office of justice of the peace, is a member of the local camp of Modern Woodmen of America and also of the Lutheran Church. Mr. Flick was married June 27, 1922, to Beatrice Hotter, of Pepin County, and he and his wife are the parents of a daughter, Geraldine, who was born May 19, 1923.

George Hilson, agent and operator for the "Soo" line at Wheeler, also secretary of the Wheeler Commercial Club, and an active stirring citizen in the affairs of the village, was born at Stillwater, Minn., Dec. 20, 1889, son of Christian and Christine (Nielson) Hilson, further mention of whom may be found elsewhere in this volume. He was educated in the Colfax schools and subsequently went to Chicago, where he studied railroad accounting. He then learned telegraphy at Colfax under J. L. Smith after which for two years he was "relief man" on the "Šoo" line, working wherever he was sent with no permanent headquarters. On May 12, 1916, he was assigned to the Wheeler station as agent and operator, also having charge of the freight and express business. He has thoroughly mastered all the details of the departments of which he has charge and is recognized as a good practical railroad man whose services are valuable to the company he works for. He is a member of the order of Railway Telegraphers; also of the fraternal orders of Modern Woodmen and Odd Fellows, and as secretary of the Wheeler Commercial Club he exercises another useful function, placing him among those who are caring for the interests of the village and working together to promote its advancements. Mr. Hilson was married July 7, 1912, to Gyda Reiten of Stanley, Wis., who was born at Menomonie, Wis., May 21, 1887. Two children have been born ments. of this union: Noel, Jan. 12, 1913, and Ruth, March 14, 1914, both of whom are attending the Wheeler school. Mr. Hilson and family are members of the Norwegian Lutheran Church in Wheeler and occupy a good social position in the village. In regard to the Reiten parental history, Nels Reiten and Randi Ryan, both born in Norway, were married in Menomonie, Wis., one year after they left their native They resided in Menomonie for 18 years and then moved to Stanley, Wis. land. Mr. Reiten was employed by The Knapp, Stout & Co. Company for several years and later worked in the brickvards, continuing to be thus employed after his removal to Stanley, acting as assistant foreman. Later he and his wife removed to Oregon, where they are now living.

Webster W. Hoyt, proprietor of Locust Grove Farm in Section 20, town of Eau Galle, and the present chairman of the town board, was born at Prairie Farm, Barron County, Wis., Aug. 21, 1884, son of Oscar B. and Alice D. (Sunderland) Hoyt. Both parents were born in the East, the father in New York State and the mother in Vermont. They were married in New York State and came west in 1880, settling in the town of Eau Galle, Dunn County, where they remained for two years, moving at the end of that time to Hersey, St. Croix County. Thence they moved later to Downing in Dunn County, and from there to Prairie Farm in Barron County, thence back to Hersey, and in 1889 to Dunn County again, for the next five years operating rented farms in the town of Eau Galle. Oscar B. Hoyt then bought 80 acres in Section 18, kept it for a year and a half, then sold it and bought 40 acres in Section 20, town of Eau Galle. On this tract stood an old log house, into which he moved with his family, and he then began to improve the land. Later he replaced the log house above mentioned with a "blocked" or hewed-log house, the latter giving way in time to a good frame dwelling, which stands on the farm today. He also built a large basement barn and all needed out-buildings, besides adding to his land until he had 173 acres. He continued farming until 1919, when, having in the previous year lost his wife, who died April 23, 1918, he retired. He now makes his home with his children. Of these there are seven, namely: Mina, now Mrs. Charles F. Smith of the town of Eau Galle; George, of Fort Shaw, Mont.; Carrie M., now Mrs. Ephraim Smith of Sun River, Mont.; Hector, of Fort Shaw, Mont.; Clarence of the town of Eau Galle; Webster W., also of this town, and Nora, who is Mrs. Jacob Gimsbach of Rock Elm, Pierce County, Wis. Webster W. Hoyt acquired his education in the district school of his neighborhood, and from his boyhood to the present time has never lived anywhere but on the old home farm. He was the only boy in the family who did so, the other all leaving home when about 17 years old. Consequently his parents learned to depend on him and he proved a great assistance to them, the greater share in the management of the place falling in time upon his shoulders. It was in 1918 that he took over the entire management, at the same time buying 36 acres of his father's 173. Having previously bought a 40-acre tract, he now had 76 acres of his own, and his present farm of 213 acres is composed of this land and the 137 acres that he rents from his father. The farm is nicely situated in a pretty valley, well protected from extreme cold and high winds, and through it flows a creek giving good watering facilities, while the house stands in the midst of a grove of locust trees which were set out by Mr. Hoyt's father, and which have given to the farm its name. In the spring of 1920 Mr. Hoyt was elected chairman of the Eau Galle town board and has continued to hold that position through re-election. It makes him a member of the county board and therefore one of the legislators in local affairs. For three years he served as school director and for eight years as clerk of the school board of his district and his public service has been marked by competence and fidelity to his appointed tasks. Webster W. Hoyt was married Sept. 29, 1910, to Alice E. Hoyt, who was born in the town of Eau Galle, June 21, 1893. They are members of the West Chapel congregation of the Eau Galle M. E. Church, of which also Mr. Hoyt is a trustee. He belongs to the Eau Galle lodges of Modern Woodmen and Royal Neighbors, Mrs. Hoyt being a member of the latter.

Anton Anderson, who has a high standing for industry and success among the farmers of the town of Colfax, was born on a farm in this town on Nov. 5, 1868, son of Andrew and Anna (Halverson) Anderson. The parents were among the pioneers of this region, coming here from Norway in the 60's, the last stage of their journey being made on foot from Eau Claire. They took a homestead of 160 acres in Section 2, town of Colfax. The land was wild and neighbors were few, as the county was then but sparsely settled except in the vicinity of the sawmills or lumber camps. But Mr. and Mrs. Anderson had come here to build a home and were prepared to endure some privations, knowing that conditions would improve in time. They, themselves, were among the factors in that improvement. To begin with, Mr. Anderson built a log house and a straw barn and began clearing his land, breaking it with an ox team. After he began raising grain he used to haul it to Eau Claire with the oxen and brought back the supplies for the family from that place. He and his wife spent their lives on that place, where both of them finally passed away. Their family was a large one, numbering in all 11 children, of whom those now living are Anton, Albert, Edwin, Caroline, Halvor and Clara. Caroline is the wife of Ole O. Peterson of Minneapolis and Clara the wife of Fred Smith of Those deceased are Peter, Mary, Anton (first), Eddie and Clara (first). Colfax. Anton Anderson, the survivor of the name, was reared on his parents' farm in Section 2, town of Colfax, and as a boy attended the district school. Later he began helping on the farm and also spent ten winters logging in the woods, becoming connected with the lumber industry when he was 17 years old. It was then the most ready means of obtaining cash, and few were the early male settlers who were not at one time or another engaged in it, though it took a strong physique and ability to endure the hardship and hard work. He continued to make his home with his parents until they died, and after that he began farming for himself, buying his present farm of 160 acres, of which he now has 130 under the plow. As a general farmer and dairyman, he keeps 31 head of grade Guernsey and Durham cattle, with a pure bred sire, and he has improved his place by the erection of a fine barn, two silos and other buildings. Mr. Anderson was married in Running Valley, to the northeast of Colfax village, on Dec. 2, 1893, to Mary Nerison, born Sept. 1, 1875, daughter of Halver and Isabelle Nerison, both her parents being natives of Wisconsin, who on coming to Dunn County settled on farm land in the town of Sand Creek. In the Nerison family there were three children by Mr. Nerison's first wife, Isabelle, of whom Mary (Mrs. Anderson) is the only one now living, the other two having died in infancy. After the death of Mrs. Isabelle Nerison, Mr. Nerison married Aleta Anderson, by whom he had five children, Milla, Henry, Nora, Elvin and Helmer. Milla and Henry are deceased; Milla before her death was Mrs. Roy Branville. Mr. and Mrs. Anton Anderson have had five children, one of whom, Ella, is deceased. The four living are: Alba. wife of Edwin Bjornson of the town of Grant; Mabel residing at home; and Helmer and Lloyd, also at home and assisting on the farm.

Burton Edsal Nelson, president of the Stout Institute, Menomonie, was born at Cessna, Bedford County, Penn., July 30, 1867, son of John and Susan (Cypher) John Nelson was born in Pennsylvania, June 9, 1821, and died Sept. 6, Nelson. His grandfather came to America just previous to the Revolutionary War. 1904. and, adopting the cause of the patriots, served as a musician in Washington's army. He, John Nelson, with his eldest son fought for the preservation of the Union in the Civil War and was mustered out as first lieutenant after losing his right leg and being otherwise wounded in an encounter with Moseby's guerillas at Fairfax Courthouse, Virginia. He occupied the position of Associate Circuit Judge in Pennsylvania for a period of ten years. It was at Saxton, Penn., that John Nelson married Susan Cypher, who was born at Saxton, Penn., Jan. 10, 1833, and who died at Cessna, Penn., Dec. 13, 1906. She was mother of 13 children, seven sons and six daughters, all of whom, in good health, attended their parents' golden wedding anniversary at Cessna, Penn., during the Christmas season of 1903. Eleven of the sons and daughters are living at this date, the youngest having attained the age of 49 years. Burton Edsal Nelson was sent very early to the Pennsylvania Military Academy at Whitehall, Penn., and was afterwards graduated from the Pennsylvania State Normal School at Millersville, Penn. Several years afterward he took his B. S. degree from the Western Normal College at Bushnell, Ill., and two years later he received his Master's degree from the same institution. After teaching one year in Pennsylvania, he came west to Carrollton, Ill., where he continued his teaching career in the village schools and high schools in Greene County. Subsequently he was superintendent of schools for two years in Bushnell, Ill., and for seven years in Lewistown, Ill., also spending four years in Lincoln, that state. In 1904 he left Illinois to become superintendent of schools at Racine, Wis., a position that he resigned after 14 years to accept that of district sales manager for the Keystone View Company. In this new capacity he continued his educational work as demonstrator and lecturer on visual education. In April, 1923, he was tendered and accepted the presidency of the Stout Institute. It was through his work in Racine, where in 1911 he established the first vocational education school in Wisconsin, that he gained the necessary experience and made preparation for this position, his name becoming well known in educational circles from his achievements there. That his abilities and methods of work in his present sphere of activity are favorably regarded, is indicated by the dedication to him in the year 1924 of the college annual, "The Tower," the dedicatory note reading:

"To Burton E. Nelson, whose cordial friendliness, democratic fairness and neverceasing interest in vocational education have won for him the respect and esteem of his associates, we dedicate this volume of "The Tower" for 1924."

In his educational connections Mr. Nelson has served as president of the Southern Wisconsin Teachers' Association, the Superintendents' and Principals' Association of Wisconsin, and the Wisconsin Teachers' Association. He has several times appeared on the program of the National Educational Association. His society connections are many and varied. He is a member of all the consecutive branches of the Masonic order through the thirty-second degree, and of Tripoli Temple A. A. O. N. M. S.; also of the Knights of Pythias, the Modern Woodmen of America, the Brotherhood of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, the Knights of Khorassan, and of Rotary International, having held membership in the Rotary Clubs of Racine and Menomonie. Both of these clubs he organized. He has served as District Governor of Rotary International and as a committee man for the National organization. In 1893 Mr. Nelson married Rachael Schrader, a college classmate at Bushnell, Illinois, to whom a daughter Ruth, was born at Lewiston, Ill. There Mrs. Rachell Nelson died in 1897, and in 1900 Mr. Nelson married Mae C. Mack, one of his corps of teachers. Of this union a son, Wayne, was born at Lincoln, Ill. The daughter, Ruth, is a graduate of The Stout Institute and the son, Wayne, was graduated in 1923 from Colgate University.

Martin A. Hanson, postmaster of the city of Menomonie, was born at Cambridge, Dane County, Wis., April 3, 1866, son of Hans D. and Ingeborg Hanson. The father was a Norwegian tailor who in 1854, at the age of 24 years, came to the United States, located at Cambridge, Wis., where he found work at his trade, and in the following year was married there. Three children were born of the union: H. J., deceased; L. J., of Eau Claire, and Martin A. When the last mentioned was three years old the parents left Cambridge and during the next four or five years were residents in turn of Sparta, Black River Falls, Augusta and Neillsville, Wis. It was in Neillsville that Martin A., in 1871, began attending public school. In 1879 the family moved to Menomonie and here the subject of this sketch attended the public schools until 1882. On April 12, that year, he began work in the post office as clerk and he now has a record of 42 years of continuous service in the same office. He was appointed postmaster on April 13, 1922, being one of the 104 postmasters in the United States who have worked their way up from the bottom to a postmastership. On Oct. 13, 1887, Mr. Hanson was married to Helen A., daughter of John and Ingeborg Hanson of Menomonie. He is a member of the Menomonie Commercial Club, also of the Knights of Pythias, the Independent Order of Foresters and the Congregational Church. Finding his chief recreation in fishing, he joined the Menomonie Game and Fish Association, of which he was secretary and treasurer for 25 years. At 910 Main Street he and his wife have a convenient and comfortable residence.

Nils H. Mork, an early settler in the town of Wilson, where he is now living, having built up a good farm in Section 26, was born in Norway, Sept. 16, 1846, son of Hans and Anna Mork. The mother having died in Norway, in 1869, Hans Mork came to the United States and settled in Minnesota, where he remained for two years. He then came to Dunn County, driving here with an ox team, and homesteaded 160 acres of wild land in the town of Sheridan, he and his family making their home in their covered wagon until he had built a small frame house, the lumber for which he hauled from Prairie Farm. He cleared his land and spent the rest of his life in conducting his farm. He was twice married, by his first wife Anna having six children, all of whom are now dead but Nils. His second wife, to whom he was married in Dunn County, died on the farm. Nils H. Mork was married in Norway, in 1871, to Ingeborg Aanden, daughter of Ole and Cecil Aanden, who spent their lives in their native land. In the same year he came with his wife to the United States, locating in Minnesota, where he found employment on farms. In 1873 he came to Dunn County, where he and his family lived one winter with his father. He then took a homestead of 160 acres in Section 26, town of Wilson. The land was wild and included some standing timber. Mr. Mork began improvements by building a log house of 12 x 14 feet and a log barn with straw roof, and began the clearing of his land. For some years he was unable to give all his time to it, for money had to be earned for the support of the family, and to earn it he had to work out for others. At that time there were many Indians about but it is not recorded that they gave the family any trouble, though Mrs. Mork and the children may sometimes have felt timid when the father was away, as it was not many years after the Indian uprising in Minnesota when so many white settlers were killed. The Morks probably heard gruesome stories from eye witnesses of the terrible things that happened then-some nine or ten years before. For a number of years, like the other pioneer settlers, Mr. Mork used oxen on his farm and split rails and built rail fences. In time he put up another log house, larger than his first, making his own shingles for the roofing. For many years he has farmed here gradually increasing in prosperity and continuing to improve and modernize the place. In 1903 he built a seven-room frame house and a frame barn of 34 x 72, with a granary, machine sheds and other buildings. He has bought additional land until he now owns 360 acres in Section 26 and has 70 acres under the plow. He does general farming and dairying, having at the present time 42 head of mixed grade cattle, and he also raises Duroc-Jersey hogs. He is a stockholder in the Ridgeland Cooperative Creamery. He formerly served many years on the Wilson town board as supervisor, and at various times served as school director and as road commissioner, making a good record as a public official. In 1921 he and his wife celebrated their Golden Wedding, receiving many congratulations on having reached that important milestone on life's pathway, which is the lot of but few married couples. They have had 13 children, nine of whom are now living, namely, Hans, Claus, Sina, Anton, Sam, Jennie, Gunda, Otto and Morris. Those deceased are Matt, Mary, Ida and Andrew. Sina married Paul Thompson of the town of Wilson; Jennie married Helmer Hanson of Duluth; Gunda married Oscar Steen of the town of Tainter; Olaus is farming in the town of Wilson, and Otto, Anton and Morris are living on the home farm. In September, 1917, Morris was enrolled in the U.S. service and trained at Camp Grant, where he performed duty in the camp bakery until the close of the war. Mr. and Mrs. Mork in addition to the above mentioned children, have an adopted daughter, Gunda Lee, whom they have reared from infancy.

Olaus Mork, a respected citizen of the town of Wilson, engaged in general farming and dairying in Section 34, was born in Fillmore County, Minnesota, Sept. 28, 1873, son of Nils and Ingeborg (Aanden) Mork. In the same year he accompanied his parents to Dunn County, Wis., and was subsequently reared on the home farm in the town of Wilson, as a boy attending the district school, and when older helping his father to clear the land and make other improvements. He also spent ten winters in the woods on the Chippewa River in the employ of the Rice Lake Lumber Company. He resided on the home farm until 1906, and started in for himself by buying 160 acres in Section 34, town of Wilson in 1900, all wild land, of which he has since cleared 50 acres. He has also built a frame house, barn and other buildings, and has put up all necessary fencing. He has 20 head of grade Holstein cattle and also raises Poland-China hogs, and as a general farmer and dairyman is making good progress. He has served one year in the office of town supervisor. Mr. Mork was married in 1905 in the town of Otter Creek to Lena Wold, daughter of Ole and Bertha Wold, the parents being natives of Norway and early farmers in the town of Otter Creek. They had seven children, six of whom are living, namely: Carrie, who married Louis Anderson of Wheeler; Anton; Emil; Mary, wife of Isaac Aasen; Petra, who married Paul Olson, and lives on the Wold farm in the town of Otter Creek, and Lena. Stena is deceased. Ole Wold died in 1906 and his wife Bertha in 1920. Mr. and Mrs. Mork are the parents of three children, Nora, Helmer and Edna; also an adopted son, Melvin Mork, son of Olaus Mork's brother, Anton.

E. S. Synder, a retired farmer and veterinary surgeon residing in Colfax village, was born in Green Lake County, Wisconsin, Sept. 28, 1852. After acquiring a public school education, he entered the old Philadelphia Veterinary School at Philadelphia, which he attended two years. He then returned to his home, which at that time was in Winnebago City, Minn., his parents having moved to that place some 12 years before. There he practiced his profession for one year-the year 1871 -and then in 1872 came to Dunn County, Wisconsin, and became a farmer in the town of Grant. He began this occupation on 180 acres of wild land, the tract being destitute of buildings, so his work in developing the place took him through every phase of agricultural experience. He first erected a log house 12 x 24 feet in dimensions, and also a log stable and out-buildings, and then got busy on the land. There he went through many years of hard work, but in the end built up a good farm. After living on it until June, 1923, he sold it and bought his present residence in the village of Colfax, a nice little dwelling in bungalow style. During all his years on the farm-more than 47 in all-he followed his profession of veterinarian as his services might be called for, for five years of the time having an office at New Auburn, and for the rest of the time on his farm, and he was often called to render such service in Menomonie, Chetek and many logging camps. It is not too much to say that he succeeded in saving many valuable animals. For twelve years he was also health officer for the town of Grant. On July 5, 1873, Dr. Synder was married to Minnie E. Krause, who after a married life of over fifty years, died Oct. 20, 1923. She had been the mother of one child. Leon, born Aug. 29, 1874, who is now operating a photo studio in Colfax. Leon married Mildred Best. Dr. Synder is a stockholder in the Litnun Bronze Co. of Menomonie. He is fraternally affiliated with the Modern Woodmen of America.

David McRoberts, one of the notable pioneers of Dunn County, who came to this section when almost all of it was a wilderness, was born in Lisnamore, County Down, Ireland, on Nov. 17, 1833. He acquired a good education and grew to manhood in his native land. In 1855, when 22 years old, he emigrated to the United States and for one year resided in the state of New York. In 1856 he came west to Wisconsin, reaching Eau Galle, Dunn County, on May 27. Here, being a first class cook, he found employment at once with Carson & Eaton, working in the woods as camp cook during the winter and in the mills and vards of the company during the summer and early fall. In September, 1863, he returned to Ireland and on May 23, 1864, was married there to Sarah Nixon, who was born in 1844, and whom he brought to America with him on his return to this country, resuming his position with Carson & Eaton at Eau Galle. Later that concern became Carson & Rand, and he remained with them for ten years. At the end of that time Mr. McRoberts bought a farm of 80 acres in the town of Eau Galle, though it was then practically all wild land, and started to develop it. The task took many years, particularly as he increased the area of his property by buying 40 acres more, but in time he had a very nice farm of 120 acres, with good buildings, and was recognized as one of the substantial citizens of his town. He took a deep interest in its affairs, served as town clerk for several years, and as justice of the peace, and was widely known and highly respected. In early life he had joined the Presbyterian Church but later became a Methodist, at all times being a worthy and honorable christian gentleman. He lived to the age of 88 years and two months, passing away Jan. 17, 1922. His good wife Sarah had a much briefer earthly existence, passing away at the age of 38 years on Oct. 25, 1882. They had two children, Margaret Ellen, born March 14, 1866, and Thomas Nixon, born March 6, 1868. Before Ellen was 14 years of age, owing to her mother's death, she had to assume the duties of housekeeper, which she discharged with efficiency, residing at home until her marriage, Nov. 14, 1887, to Louis C. Johnson. Mr. Johnson was born in Minnesota, Dec. 23, 1861, son of Arvid and Sarah (Alls) Johnson, and in 1864 had accompanied his parents to Pepin County, Wis. His father, Arvid, was a native of Massachusetts, born at Becket, that state, Dec. 23, 1836, and after moving west and living in Minnesota for a while, came to Dunn County, Wis., in 1864 and settled in the town of Eau Galle, where he became a prosperous farmer. His settled in the town of Eau Galle, where he became a prosperous farmer. His marriage to Sarah Alls occurred Feb. 19, 1856. She died in 1894, her husband surviving her until Dec. 26, 1913. They had nine children, Louis C., Daniel, Chester, John, Rose, Ida, Mary, Martha and Fanny, of whom Louis, John and Rose are now deceased. After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Louis C. Johnson bought a farm in the town of Spring Creek, Buffalo County, Wis., residing on it for six years and a half, when they sold it, and, coming to Dunn County, purchased an 80-acre farm in the town of Dunn, only 14 acres of which had been broken, the only building on it being a small shack. This place they developed in time into a good farm homestead, with substantial barns and out-buildings and a comfortable residence, Mr. Johnson operating it profitably until his death on Aug. 2, 1904. After that event Mrs. Johnson rented the farm to a tenant, but continued to reside on it until the fall of 1921, when she sold it and, moving to the village of Eau Galle, bought the residence she now occupies. She has an adopted daughter, Viola, who is now Mrs. Norman King and the mother of two children, Harriet and Eldon.

Thomas Nixon McRoberts, born March 6, 1868, now owns and conducts the old McRoberts farm in the town of Eau Galle. He was educated in the public schools of Eau Galle and learned agriculture from his father, with whom he later became associated, in the operation of the farm. In time he became the owner of 68 acres of it, to which he has added until he has now a good farm of 117 acres, and in addition to this, he owns 100 acres of wild land. Since taking over the home place he has made many improvements on it, rebuilding the house, barns and other buildings and developing the land into a high state of cultivation. The chief branch of his business is dairying and his place is known as the Elm Lake Farm. For the past 15 years he has been agent for the Farmers Mutual Fire Insurance Co. of Dunn County. On Dec. 31, 1891, he was married to Alice Bashaw, of Arkansaw, Pepin County, Wis., who was born Feb. 24, 1874, daughter of Joseph and Kate (Trombly) Bashaw, both her parents being now deceased. Of this union two children have been born: David E., on July 14, 1893, and Lewis M., on April 2, 1895. David E., now a prosperous farmer in the town of Eau Galle, married Laura Golden. Lewis M., who is associated with his father in conducting the latter's farm, married Matilda Shaw of Buffalo County and has three children, Lyle, Derell and Alice The family faith is that of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Marie.

Sivert Sivertson, an early settler in the town of Grant, where he carved out a good farm from the wilderness, and died some 25 years ago, was born in Norway. where he grew to manhood and married Sivi Knudtson. It was in 1864 that he emigrated with his family to the United States. After reaching Detroit the family proceeded to Chicago and from there west to the Mississippi River, where they took boat up the river to Read's Landing opposite the mouth of the Chippewa River. There Mr. Sivertson left his wife and children, and, crossing the river, went on foot to Menomonie, thence to Eau Claire, and from the latter place to Colfax, where he found some relatives who had preceeded him to this country. In about ten days, after investigating the locality, he procured a team and went back to Read's Landing for his family. They were living there in a shack and had but little to eat. The whole party proceeded to Eau Claire, where Mr. Sivertson found work in the sawmills, remaining for a year, at the end of which time he and his family came to Colfax and for a year lived on the farm now owned and operated by Israel Fjelstad. In 1866 Mr. Sivertson bought 160 acres of land in the town of Grant, of which tract ten acres were cleared, the rest being wild. This place was to prove the family homestead, as having taken up their residence in a log house which stood on it they began the work of improvement that resulted in time in a good farm. There Mr. and Mrs. Sivertson spent the remainder of their lives, the latter passing away first, in 1879, and he on Feb. 23, 1898. The children were seven in number, namely: Severin S., now residing in Colfax; Knute, deceased; Karen, who is now Mrs. B. Field of Pierce County; Christina, who is Mrs. Ole S. Gunderson of Colfax; Anna, wife of Andrew Ajer of Boyceville; Mary, who was Mrs. Ole Kjorstad of St. Croix County, Wis., who died Feb. 15, 1925; and Sarah, who married Christ Olson but is now deceased.

Severin S. Sivertson, a retired farmer now residing in the village of Colfax, and who is a representative of one of the pioneer families of the town of Grant, was born in Norway, Sept. 27, 1856, son of Sivert and Sivi (Knudtson) Sivertson. He was in his eighth year when he accompanied his parents to the United States, and about ten when they settled in the town of Grant, Dunn County, Wis. His educational opportunities were very limited, but farming required no knowledge of the dead languages nor of the higher mathematics, but merely intelligence, hard work, and patience, and of these qualities young Sivertson had enough for success. At the age of 18 years he became the manager of the home farm, of which in 1886, he purchased one-half from his father, later buying the remainder, and as, previous to his first purchase of any part of the home farm, he had bought an 80-acre tract adjoining it, he now found himself the owner of 320 acres. There he carried on diversified farming until 1920-a period of 34 years-at the end of which time, his health failing, he sold all but 140 acres, rented that remainder to his son Sewell, and retired, taking up his residence in Colfax, where he is now living. While on the farm he erected a fine set of buildings. He was also quite active in public affairs, both town and county, serving for many years on the school board, as constable and road oversear, two years as side supervisor, and 24 years as chairman of the town board, the latter office also making him a member of the county board, of which he was chairman for two and a half years. During that time he served on a number of important committees. This public record shows that for nearly a quarter of a century Mr. Sivertson was one of the few men who were guiding the destinies of the county, and whatever improvements were made during that period, he had a hand in. Consequently he is one of the well informed men in regard to the county's history and is well known in practically every part of it. He was also active in community work in various ways; he helped to build the Holden Church, of which he has been a trustee for many years. He has met with misfortunes in the loss of children and once met with a serious personal accident, at the same time losing a brother. It was on March 22, 1876, when he was in his 20th year, that he and others were getting out stone for the foundation of the Holden Church. They were working under a ledge, which suddenly gave way just as he was stooping to pick up a stone. He was hit by a mass of rock which broke his jaw in several places and nearly scalped him, his brother Knute being killed at the time. He himself was laid up for nearly a year. On Oct. 4, 1882, Severin S. Sivertson was united in marriage in the town of Grant, Dunn County, to Thorena Holverson. She was born in Norway, May 20, 1861, daughter of Jens and Ingeborg (Nelson) Holverson, the family coming to America in 1869 and first locating in Fillmore County, Minnesota, where they remained for five years. They then came to Dunn County, Wisconsin, where Mr. and Mrs. Jens Holverson passed the remainder of their lives. Mr. and Mrs. Sivertson have been the parents of nine children, scme of whom has passed away. The full list is as follows: Dora, born June 6, 1883, died July 20, 1899. Sewall, born Feb. 13, 1885, resides in the town of Grant. He married Clara Foslid, by whom he has seven children, Chester, Hazel, Leroy, Ilene, Louise, Ruth and Selvia. Julia, born June 8, 1887, is now Mrs. Carl Rolstad of Colfax and has two children, Esther and Royce. Mabel, born June 19, 1889, resides at home with her parents; Tilla, born Aug. 17, 1893, died Jan. 23, 1915; Carl, born Oct. 12, 1895, died March 23, 1919. Elmer and Elvin, twins were born July 5, 1899. Elmer is now attending Gale College at Galesville, Wis., while Elvin is in the employ of the Colfax Store Co. Victor, the youngest child, born Jan. 29, 1903, is at home. Mr. Sivertson and his family are members of the Holden Norwegian Lutheran Church in the town of Grant.

Charles F. A. Liermann, who was for many years an active farmer in the town of Lucas, was born in Milwaukee, Sept. 27, 1862. He was three years of age when he came to Dunn County with his parents, who settled in the town of Lucas, three and a half miles southeast of Knapp. Their land was wild, but in time they developed a good farm. There the subject of this sketch was reared, and in course of time began farming for himself, developing one of the best farms in the town of Lucas. He had erected a good set of buildings, lighted with electricity and provided with running water, and was known as one of the substantial farmers and reliable citizens of his town. Active in local politics, as a Republican, he served in various offices and he and his family were prominent members of the German Methodist Episcopal Church. On Aug. 21, 1886, Mr. Liermann was united in marriage in Menomonie, with Ernestine F. Wagner, who was born in Germany, daughter of Herman and Ernestine Wagner. She survives her husband and is still living on the old farm, which is managed by her son, Richard, Mr. Liermann having passed away May 21, 1923. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Liermann were as follows: Benjamin C., who is manager of the Prichard store in Knapp; Arthur, who died in infancy; Alfred, now residing in St. Paul; Leo, who resides in Menomonie; Millie, who married Fred J. L. Wolbert; Saide, who died; Martin G., also deceased; Melissa, who is the wife of Benjamin Metling of Menomonie; and Richard, who, as already mentioned, is operating the home farm for his mother. Martin G. had a World War record. He went into the U. S. service, becoming a member of Co. H, 128th Infantry. He advanced in rank from private to second lieutenant; went overseas and served 18 months in an officers' training camp in France as platoon sergeant, training men and taking them to the front, and was gassed while in service. Sent home with the rank of second lieutenant, he was discharged in May, 1919, and, as the result of being gassed, died at home May 13, 1923, one of the heroes of the war who gave his life for his country, and whose names deserve to be held in perpetual remembrance.

Benjamin C. Liermann, manager of the Prichard store in Knapp, was born on a farm in the town of Lucas, July 16, 1887, son of Charles F. A. and Ernestine (Wagner) Liermann. In his boyhood he attended rural school and subsequently was a pupil for two years in the Knapp High School, having to walk the three miles there and back daily. During the winters of 1906-07, 1907-08 and 1908-09 he worked in the woods, the summers during the same period being in work on the home farm. After that he became connected with the mercantile business as clerk in the Farmers Cooperative store in Knapp, being thus employed for a year, after which he worked for a while in the store of the Austin Mercantile Co. of Knapp. In the spring of 1910 he entered the employ of Mrs. Peter L. Prichard as manager of her store, remaining as such until May, 1913, when he temporarily left that service and went to Montak, Mont., where he was clerk for a year in the hotel of F. C. Brooks. While there, on Sept. 6, 1913, he was united in marriage with Frances Emma Brooks, daughter of his employer, and who was born in Janesville, Wis., Feb. 20, 1891. In the spring of 1914 Mr. Lierman returned to Knapp, Wis., with his wife, and reentered the employ of Mrs. Prichard as manager of her business, and he has since remained as such. He built a comfortable residence in the village, where he and his wife enjoyed a happy home life until her lamented death on Dec. 19, 1921. They were the parents of three children: Alice L., born June 4, 1914; Ernestine F., born March 9, 1916, and Emma F., born Dec. 12, 1921. Mr. Liermann is a Republican in politics; he has served Knapp as a member of its council for three years and was formerly a member of the school board. Fraternally a Mason, he belongs to J. H. Knapp Lodge No. 238, and Chapter No. 53, R. A. M. in Menomonie. In the lodge he served as warden and was elected master but resigned. He and his wife were both members of the Eastern Star Chapter (Valley Chapter No. 230) in Knapp, Mrs. Liermann being its marshall at the time of her death. Both were active in the Methodist Episcopal Church in Knapp, he being for years a member of the choir, and now a trustee.

Charlie Thompson, engaged in general farming and dairying in Section 4, town of Wilson, was born in Telemarken, Norway, May 9, 1846, son of Thor and Carrie Hodvklef. He was reared in his native land and at an early age went to sea, following a sailor's life for some years. He visited various countries, including Palestine and the East Indies, which he saw on a trip that lasted for a year. In 1869 he came to the United States, crossing the Atlantic on a sailing vessel and landing at Boston. He came west to Chicago, went on to Jefferson City, Mo., but not staying long there, located in Eau Claire, Wisconsin, where he worked three years in the sawmills. In 1872 he came to Dunn County and took a homestead of 160 acres in Section 1, town of Wilson. He had made the trip from Eau Claire with an ox team, which he later found useful on the farm. The land was wild and there were many Indians about, besides various kinds of wild game. Mr. Thompson built a log house with shake shingles, also a log barn with a straw roof and began clearing his land. He farmed there for many years, spending many of the winters in the woods as a member of logging camps. Finally he sold his farm in Section 1, and bought 80 acres in Section 4, of Cornell University. He and his family cleared off the brush and built a frame house and frame barn, and other buildings, and he is here doing general farming and dairying, also raising Duroc-Jersey hogs, and making a specialty of growing potatoes. Mr. Thompson was married in 1877 in the town of Wilson to Mary Olson, daughter of Ole and Carrie Olson. She was born in Norway and came to the United States with the Tolluf Thompson family in 1872. Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Thompson have five children, all sons, namely; Theodore, Olaus, Henry, Oscar and Sam. Henry is now residing in Superior, Wis., while the others live near the home farm in the town of Wilson.

Sven Thompson, a hardy pioneer of Dunn County and resident of the town of Wilson, who has weathered 80 years of life, 64 of which have been spent in Dunn County, was born in Telemarken, Norway, May 12, 1842, son of Thor and Carrie The father, a farmer by occupation, lived and died in Norway, his Hovdekleiv. native land, the mother subsequently coming to the United States, where she spent her last years. They had a family of 12 children, of whom Alex, Charlie and Sven are the only ones now living. Sven and Charlie came to the United States in 1860, and to Dunn County, Wisconsin, Sven taking a homestead of 160 acres in Section 14 and being the first settler in that locality. At that time there were numerous Indians about and also plenty of wild game. Bringing an ox team with him when he took possession, he built a log house with shake roof, and also a barn with a hay roof, he, himself, cutting out the logs for both from the surrounding timber. This log house has done good service, and, having been sheathed, forms a part of his present residence. Mr. Thompson spent many years in land clearing and breaking, farming for a number of years with oxen, as practically all the pioneer settlers did, both because oxen were less expensive than horses and because they were better fitted for the rough work of a pioneer farm. At first he had to bring in his flour and other supplies on his back, but after roads had been laid out through this territory, he hauled his wheat with ox team to Menomonie. The first of these roads, which was constructed by Louis Brown, crossed Mr. Thompson's land, Mr. Brown agreeing to pay him ten cents as damages, but the account, says Mr. Thompson, has never been paid. In 1870 Sven Thompson and his brother Charlie sent to Norway for their brother Tollef, who is now dead. For a number of winters Mr. Thompson worked in the woods for Knapp, Stout & Co., and also for Capt. Tainter, and at times he also worked in the mills at Eau Claire. In short, his experiences were typical of those of the early settlers in this county, including much hardship to be endured, with sometimes a spice of danger, but occasionally times of good cheer, and a gradually increasing prosperity. Mr. Thompson was first married to Rengrel Larson, their union being solemnized in the town of Wilson. She died at child-birth with her son, and subsequently Mr. Thompson married Margaret Gundersdatter Aasen of Telemarken, Norway. The wedding ceremony took place in the log house on his farm on New Year's Day, 1884. The neighbors had planned on honoring them with a chivari, which meant a merry and up-roarous time for all, but the plan was frustrated by a big snow storm which blocked the roads. Mr. and Mrs. Thompson have been blessed with four children, all now living, Marie, Thea, Gunda and Carl. Marie is the wife of Oscar Roth and they live on the Thea, Guida and Carl. Where is the wife of Oscar Roth and Guida are actresses and travel with theatrical companies. Carl is now a street car conductor in De-troit, Mich. Mrs. Thompson was born in Telemarken, Norway, in June, 1847, and came to the United States in 1884. Both she and her husband enjoy good health for people of their years.

Charles C. Kraft, a retired farmer residing in the village of Downsville, was born in Wuetenburg, Germany, Nov. 14, 1865. His parents were Christian and Christina Kraft, the father born in 1834, and the mother in 1836. Married in their native land, they came to America in 1883, in the month of May, that year, arriving in Downsville, Wis. Their object was to build up a rural home and Christian Kraft accordingly bought an 80-acre farm on Section 15, town of Dunn. There he settled with his family, and that place was the home of himself and wife, his death taking place on Aug. 20, 1904, and hers on July 10, 1914. Their children were: Simon, now deceased; Anna, who is Mrs. Andrew Solie of Downsville; Charles C., subject of this sketch; Christ, a farmer of the town of Dunn; Caroline, who is Mrs. Edward Bublitz of St. Cloud, Minn.; Johanna, deceased; Conrad, residing in Menomonie; Minnie, now deceased, who was the wife of Hans Hanson of Iron River, Wis.; William, who is on the home farm; Emil, who was one of the soldier victims of the World War, and Albert, who lives in St. Paul, Minn. Emil, who enlisted in the regular army, was a member of the "Rainbow Division," and held the rank of sergeant. He died of wounds received at the front, and his remains, having been sent home, were interred at Downsville. Charles C. Kraft attended common school in Germany, which was the limit of his educational opportunities. At the age of 19 he entered the employ of Knapp, Stout & Co., who employed him for three years as a farm hand. Then T. B. Wilson obtained a position for him with John H. Knapp as caretaker and coachman, and he continued as such for eight or nine years. It was in 1895 that he left Mr. Knapp's service and began farming for himself, having bought 200 acres of wild land in Sections 9, 15 and 16, town of Dunn. On this place he built a frame house and log barns and in course of time developed 75 acres of the land. He was thus actively employed until the spring of 1924, at which time he retired and moved to his present residence in Downsville, which he owns. He still owns 80 acres of his farm, having Mr. Kraft was married March 8, 1886, to Ida Jacobs, daughter sold 120 acres. of Sebastian and Katherine Jacobs. She was the eldest child of her parents, who are both now deceased, and whose family included the following children. Ida, now Mrs. Charles C. Kraft; Katherine, who is Mrs. William Zittelman of Menomonie; Otto, of Spokane, Wash.; George, of Menomonie; and Margaret, who is Mrs. Louis Peterson of Menomonie. Mr. and Mrs. Charles C. Kraft have been the parents of four children: Henry C., Edward S., Edna M. and Agnes L. Henry C. who was born May 14, 1887, is now a farmer in the town of Dunn. He married Jennie Skillings of the same town and they have three children: Velma E., born June 8, 1913; Dorothy Idell, born April 1, 1916, and Paul H., March 8, 1918. Edward S., born Aug. 1, 1889, died March 13, 1901. Edna M., born March 14, 1902, is now Mrs. Ralph Abbott and is living with her husband on Mr. Kraft's 80-acre farm. They have one child, Arline M., born May 16, 1925. Agnes L., born Aug. 1, 1904, is living with her parents at Downsville. The Kraft family are members of St. Jacob's German Lutheran congregation at Downsville. Mr. Kraft is a stockholder in the Downsville State Bank. In politics he has always been a Republican. For 11 years he was director of Joint School District No. 4, of Dunn and Eau Galle.

Hans R. Hanson, a well known and respected farmer of Section 12, town of Elk Mound, where he has resided for many years, was born in Barrum, Norway, Jan. 11, 1855, son of Hans Christopher and Ellen Marit Jenson. The parents died in Norway, which was their native land. Hans R. was educated in the public schools of his native land and remained there until 1882 when he came to America, and to Dunn County, Wisconsin, locating in the town of Elk Mound. For a few years he was employed in lumber camps in this vicinity and for a while worked in a lumber mill at Eau Claire. It was in 1896 that Mr. Hanson began farming, buying 80 acres of land in Section 12, town of Elk Mound, the tract being mostly wild, though a few acres had been broken and there was a log house and stable on it. With that for a beginning Mr. Hanson set out to develop the property, and his efforts after years of hard work have resulted in the present Springdale Farm, of which he is proprietor, a fine rural estate pleasantly situated in a sheltered spot among the hills of this region. Mr. Hanson's present residence has for its main part his old log cabin, which has been sided and added to by a frame structure so as to make of the whole building what is practically a frame house, substantial, comfortable and of neat and attractive appearance. Mr. Hanson has also a fine large cattle barn of 30 x 40 feet, and a group of well constructed out-buildings, including a wagon shed, hen house, hog house, garage, a cement block silo of 12 x 30 feet, built in the spring of 1923 and a cement-block milk house of 12 x 12 feet. He has a 50-foot driven well on his farm whence he derives an adequate supply of good water. Mr. Hanson was married in Norway, June 26, 1882, to Karen Sorenson, who was born at Barrum, Norway, Nov. 22, 1859. Mr. and Mrs. Hanson have three children: Anna H., born Jan. 23, 1884, is unmarried and a resident of Chippewa Falls; Martin, born Nov. 27, 1888, and now a farmer in the town of Elk Mound, married Matilda Benson and they have one child, Raymond; Harold F., born June 16, 1891, who is assisting his father on the home farm, is as yet unmarried. The religious affiliations of the Hanson family are with the Lutheran Church.

John Froseth, a prominent farmer of the town of Spring Brook, is a native of Dunn County, having been born in the city of Menomonie, Nov. 27, 1872, son of Nels and Guro (Hustoft) Froseth. The parents were natives of Soknedalen, Norway, the father born Dec. 13, 1836, and the mother Sept. 7, the same year. Married in their native land, they came to America in 1870, landing at Quebec, Canada, from which city and port of entry they came directly west to Menomonie, Wis. Here Nels Froseth found employment with Knapp, Stout & Co., working in the woods in winter and in the mills in summer. During that period, however, he was looking ahead and making plans for the future, which included the establishment of a permanent home; so in the spring of 1875 he came to the town of Spring Brook and bought the Daniel Beaman farm, a tract of 44 acres in Sections 3 and 10, the locality known as the Chippewa bottoms. For several years after settling there he continued to work at logging during the winter months in the employ of the lumber company at old Meridean. In the summer he worked on his farm and after it was sufficiently improved to afford him a living, gave his whole time to it. By the purchase of more land he increased its area in time to 220 acres, of which 120 acres were situated on Mud Creek Prairie, and he gradually erected a good and substantial set of buildings. Here he carried on general farming and dairying very successfully until his death, which occurred on May 10, 1899, 24 years after he had begun work on the place. His career had been that of a typical pioneer, and he had achieved success through hard work and patent determination, taking advantage of such opportunities as lay in his path. For a few years after starting on his farm he made use of oxen, getting his first team of horses in 1879. After the floods of 1880 and 1884 he worked for the lumber companies again, helping to put back into the river the logs and lumber that had been carried by the flood and deposited all over the land in the vicinity. He was a man of firm religious principles, an ardent church worker, and he helped to build the Spring Brook Norwegian Lutheran Church in old Meridean. His wife, Mrs. Guro Froseth, survived him little more than a year, passing away on May 31, 1900. They were the parents of two children: John, the direct subject of this sketch, and Carl, now residing in Caryville. John Froseth acquired his education in the Foss Brook School in the town of Spring Brook and remained on the home farm, which he helped his father to develop. After the father's death John and his brother Carl until 1910 operated it together, but in that year John bought Carl's interest and has since been sole proprietor. He has added to it a tract of 40 acres on Mud Creek Prairie, which makes the area of his farm 260 acres. He has considerably improved the buildings and now has one of the best farms in his locality. It is well stocked with grade Holstein cattle, the herd containing a pure bred sire and Mr. Froseth is one of the stockholders in the Elk Mound Cooperative Creamery, as well as in the Caryville Telephone Company. He has also served many years as clerk of the Foss Brook School. On July 1, 1899, Mr. Froseth was united in marriage with Kari Market, who was born in the town of Spring Brook, Oct. 28, 1877, daughter of Peter and Ellen H. (Johnson) To this union 11 children were born, as follows. Gunda, March 9, 1900; Market. Nels, Aug. 1, 1901; Palmer, Nov. 22, 1902; Harold, Feb. 28, 1904; Herman, July 1, 1905; Julius, May 23, 1907; Clarence, Aug. 22, 1909; Raymond, April 6, 1911; Hilda, Sept. 15, 1914; Norma, July 16, 1916, and Irene, May 31, 1919. Of these children, Gunda is now Mrs. Edward Swanson of Eau Claire and the mother of two children, Ione and Loraine. Nels is the only one deceased, his death having occurred Aug. 26, 1914. Palmer is now in the employ of the Brack Auto Co. of Menomonie, Harold is doing farm labor in the town of Elk Mound, and Herman similar work in the town of Spring Brook. Mr. Froseth and his family are members of the Spring Brook Norwegian Lutheran Church, he being secretary of the congregation, while Mrs. Froseth is an active worker in the Ladies' Aid Society.

Peter Market, an early settler in the town of Peru and for many years one of its active farm workers and respected citizens, was born in Sokendalen, Norway. He came to the United States in 1866, locating in old Meridean, Dunn County, Wis., and in the following year there came Ellen H. Johnson, a native of the same place, to whom Mr. Market was married in 1869. They settled on a rented farm in the town of Peru, on which they resided until 1872, Mr. Market in the meanwhile working for the Meridean lumber company. He then bought 52 acres on the Chippewa bottoms in Section 5, town of Spring Brook, and began the development of a farm, making gradual progress from year to year. In 1894 he doubled the size of his farm by the purchase of 52 acre more in the same section, and still later he bought 80 acres on Mud Creek Prairie, making a total of 184 acres contained in his place. Of this he cleared and brought under cultivation some 40 acres, creating a good farm, on which he died Sept. 2, 1910, at the age of 64 years lacking two davs, he having been born on Sept. 4, 1846. His wife, born March 12, 1847, is still residing on the home farm with her son Odin. Mr. and Mrs. Market were earnest workers in the Spring Brook Norwegian Lutheran Church in old Meridean. They were the parents of nine children, namely: John, of Seattle Wash.; Julia, who is Mrs. Peter Amdahl of the town of Spring Brook; Kari, now Mrs. John Froseth; Odin, who is operating the home farm: Mary, who became the wife of John Brendsel but is now deceased; Hattie, wife of Hans Blessem of Berthole, N. D.; Gust, of Chippewa Falls; Gina, of Eau Claire; and Hilda, who is Mrs. Paul Swetlick of Eau Claire. The history of the Froseth and Market families has the genuine pioneer flavor, illustrating the qualities that have had most to do with making Dunn County what it is today.

Oscar A. Krause, the enterprising prosprietor of a fine 330-acre farm in Sections 5, 6 and 8, town of Grant, known as Sunnyside Farm, which he built up from 160acre farm of his parents, was born in this town, Jan. 8, 1870, son of Ludwig and Louise (Lantz) Krause. The father was born in 1827 and the mother in 1825. They were German farmers, who came to the United States to better their fortunes, settling first in Juneau County, Wis., coming to Dunn County in the early 80's, making the journey with oxen. The land they selected here consisted of 160 acres in Section 8, town of Grant. It was covered with heavy timber and brush; clearing it was long and difficult. Ludwig Krause used oxen for all his work on farm and road, hauling his grain and other produce to Menomonie, the nearest trading-point, for needed supplies. In making these trips it was necessary to cross the Red Cedar River, forded in summer and crossed on the ice in winter. On one of these trips, when returning from Menomonie he nearly froze to death. After some years he re-placed his original dwelling with a fine log house of unusual size, as it contained six rooms. At one time he made a trip to Texas, and, taking a fancy to that country, purchased 240 acres of land there, but after a short time he sold it and returned to his farm in Dunn County, Wis., where he died in 1903. His wife died in 1911. Of their ten children, seven are living, namely: Emil, of Barron, Wis.; Ida, wife of Samuel Sherwood of the town of Otter Creek; Matilda, who married George Paul, Sr., and is now a widow residing in Colfax; Bertha, who is Mrs. John Berg of Otter Creek; Ella, wife of Josepk Weirus of Thief River Falls, Minn.; Gustavis, of Colfax and Oscar A., of the town of Grant. Those deceased are Richard, Henry and Minnie, wife of Dr. E. S. Snyder. Oscar A. Krause was born and reared on the home farm, and attended the district school, helping his father out of school hours as soon as he was old enough. After coming in possession of the home farm, he added more land, so that it now contains 330 acres. He made important improvements, having built a frame house of nine rooms, modern equipment; a new barn 36 x 120 feet, with James equipment and running water. In fact all buildings are new. He has also an ample supply of necessary machinery for general farming and dairying, which he is carrying on successfully. He has 50 head of grade Durham cattle with a pure bred sire; a large flock of Shropshire sheep; 50 head of Poland China hogs; large flock of pure strain Buff Orphington chickens, and other poultry, as geese, turkeys and several strains of ducks. His farm machinery includes two tractors. Oscar Krause was married Aug. 2, 1898, to Ottilie Abraham, born June 28, 1877. She was the daughter of Albert and Amalia (Haak) Abraham, who were of German birth, the father being a tailor by trade. Albert Abraham was born Feb. 11, 1826, and died Nov. 18, 1920. Mrs. Ámalia Abraham was born Feb. 15, 1840, and died March 11, 1920. Mr. and Mrs. Krause had three children, two of whom, Pearle and Earle are living, Harry, having died in infancy. Pearle Krause acquired her high school education in the Academy at Northland College, Ashland, Wis., her Junior College work at the State Normal School, Superior, Wis.; and received her A. B. degree from Lawrence College, Appleton, Wis. She is a member of the Kappa Alpha Theta Sorority and Shakespeare Club of Chicago, Ill.; has taught in Nebraska, Illinois and St. Paul, traveled through western and southern states and is now principal of the high school at Hill City, Minn. Earle Krause attended high school in the winter of 1922 at Morgan Park Military Academy, Chicago, Ill., but on account of illness did not complete the course. He also took a short combination course in the Rasmussen Business College, St. Paul, Minn. He was granted a diploma as master welder and mechanic by the Twin City Modern Auto and Tractor School and is now assisting his parents on the farm.

Martin Wegan, a well known farmer and dairyman and respected citizen in the town of Wilson, was born in this town March 22, 1876, son of Halvor and Ella The parents were natives of Norway, the father being a carpenter (Hogan) Wegan. They came to the United States soon after the Civil War, settling first by trade. in Fillmore County, Minn., whence after a time they removed to North Dakota. From the latter state they came to Dunn County, homesteading 80 acres of land in Section 15, town of Wilson. The tract proved so wild and rough, however, that Halvor Wegan soon disposed of it, buying another better 80-acre tract in the same section, on which he started improvements by building a log house and log barn. He subsequently cleared the land and erected other buildings, which together with other necessary improvements, converted it into a good farm. On Halvor Wegan's death the property passed to his son Christ. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Halvor were nine in number, of whom three—Gust, Anna (first) and Henry are ceceased. Those living are Simon, Sophia, Christ, Martin, Hilda and Anna (second). The three daughters are married, Sophia being the wife of George Halsted, Hilda of Carl Thorson, and Anna of a Mr. Broberg of Minneapolis. Martin Wegan was reared on the home farm in the town of Wilson, Dunn County, which, as a boy, he helped his father to clear, also assisting him in the erection of a frame house on the place. At the age of 14 he began working out for others, during the first year on farms and afterwards in the woods engaged in the lumber industry. He spent 16 winters as a logger, besides working in sawmills. In 1909 he bought 80 acres of land in Section 4, town of Wilson, of which he has since cleared 25 acres, which he now has under the plow, the balance still remaining in pasture and timber. He does general farming and dairying, keeping grade Holstein cattle, and also raising some sheep and hogs. He also bought the old home farm from his brother Christ, which he later sold. Mr. Wegan was married in the town of Wilson in 1907 to Minnie Peterson, daughter of Peter and Mary Peterson, her parents being natives of Norway who settled in Dunn County many years ago. Mrs. Minnie Wegan died in 1911, after having been the mother of two children, one of whom, Pearl, is now deceased. The survivor, Merlin, is keeping house for her father. In 1920 he completed on his farm a fine semi-bungalow home of modern construction.

Aug. F. Schoenoff, proprietor of the plumbing and heating business in Menomonie, was born in Bradenberg, Germany, Aug. 6, 1869, son of Fred and Minnie (Steinbring) Schoenoff. The family came to America in 1884, settling in Menomonie, Wis. Aug. F. Schoenoff as a boy attended school in Germany and was 15 years old when he came to this country with his parents. For two years his arrival in Menomonie he was engaged in farm work near the city, after which he entered the employ of W. H. Allen for whom he worked three years as hostler and caretaker. He then worked six months in a similar capacity for H. E. Knapp. In 1890 he went to St. Paul, Minn., where he learned the plumbing and heating trade, spending four years and two months there and returning to Menomonie in December, 1894, on the 15th day of that month he established himself in business at the corner of Fifth and Main streets, in that location he remained until 1897, in which year he moved into his own building which he had erected at 309 Main Street, a brick structure of 20 x 80 feet and two stories high and full basement. Mr. Schoenoff installs hot water, steam and vapor heating plants, plumbing and sewer work. He is a member of the Menomonie Commercial Club. Mr. Schoenoff was married in Menomonie, June 18, 1896, to Elizabeth Rowe, daughter of August and Dorothy (Giese) Rowe. Eight children have been born of this marriage, as follows, Frank, Ruth, Waldemar, Elizabeth, Paul, Gilbert, Alfred and Clara, two of which having died in infancy. The family are affiliated with the St. Paul's Evangelical Lutheran Church and has his residence at 1103 Tenth Street.

Albert Dehnhoff, now retired from active work, but still residing on the farm in the town of Red Cedar which he spent 35 years in developing, was born in Preusen, Germany, Feb. 4, 1856, son of Mr. and Mrs. August Dehnhoff. He was reared and educated in his native land and was there married in 1876 to Louise Cook, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Cook. In 1883 he came to America with his family, locating in Menomonie, where, as many other immigrants had done, he went to work for the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company, being employed by them for six years on the Moore farm. In 1889 he went to work for his father-in-law, Charles Cook on his farm, and in the following year, when Mr. Cook died, he bought the farm from the heirs, and for the next 26 years was engaged in operating and improving it. By the purchase of additional land he increased its area to 400 acres. Then in 1916 he divided it evenly, selling the north half to his sons Robert and August, and the south half to his sons Paul and Otto. In 1920 Otto sold his interest to Paul, who is now the owner of the south 200 acres. Mr. Dehnhoff had cleared altogether some 100 acres and had made a good record as a general farmer carrying on diversified farming. He was also for many years active as a town official of the town of Red Cedar, being elected supervisor, in which office he served until 1902. He was then elected chairman of the board, whereby he became a member of the county board, holding that position until 1909, and serving at different times on various important committees. He was one of the organizers of the Rusk Creamerv and has always exerted his influence in favor of everything calculated to benefit the Thirteen children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Dehnhoff, but town and county. five of them have died. The eight who are now living are as follows: William of the town of Red Cedar; Anna, who is Mrs. August Casper of Knapp and has two children, Mvrtle and Hugo; Albert of Rusk, who married Addie Kinney; Otto, residing on the home farm, who married Amelia Bever and survives her; Paul, who married Gertrude Middlestad, resides in the town of Red Cedar, and has two children, Kenneth and Luverne; Robert, who married Alma Rose and has one child, Gladys; Alma, now Mrs. Louis Hanke of the town of Tainter and the mother of two children, Irvine and Loraine, and August, on the home farm, single. Albert Dehnhoff and family are members of the German Lutheran Church of the town of Red Cedar.

Frank William F. Rose, a prominent farmer of the town of Elk Mound, whose record of achievement along agricultural lines is well worth attention, was born in Brandenburg, Germany, Nov. 4, 1855, son of Frederick and Caroline (Miller) Both parents died in Germany, where Frank spent the first 26 or 27 years Rose. of his life, acquiring a practical education in his boyhood by attending a good school. It was in 1882 that he came to the United States and to Mencmonie, Wis., where he entered the employ of Capt. William Wilson, for whom he worked two years. After that he entered the employ of the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company, in whose mill he worked four years. The next six years were spent as an employee in the brick yard of Frank Kelly. In 1894 Mr. Rose began farming, coming to the town of Elk Mound, where he bought 160 acres of partly cleared land in Sections 6, 7 and The buildings were all small and consisted of a house, barn and granary. 8 Mr. Rose remodeled and enlarged the house and has erected a barn 32×60 feet, three machine sheds, a corn crib, pig house, milk house, garage and garnary, all of which buildings he has kept in good condition. He has also added 80 acres to his original tract of 160, his farm now containing 240 acres, and a large part of this he has developed and placed in a state of cultivation. At the present time his herd of Holstein cattle number 28 head and contains a pure bred sire. He is a stockholder in the Rusk Cooperative Creamery, and in addition to his dairying business he successfully raises Duroc-Jersey hogs. Mr. Rose was married June 21, 1884, to Fredericka Dehnhoff, who was born in Brandenberg, Germany, April 10, 1858, and who came to America in 1880, locating in Menomonie. Mr. and Mrs. Rose are the parents of seven children, as follows: Ida, now Mrs. Wm. Wieman, living on a part of the home farm, and the mother of three children, Margaret, Angie and Irene, of whom Margaret is now Mrs. Walter Maves of Elk Mound and Angie is Mrs. John Ballard of St. Paul; William, a farmer of the town of Elk Mound, who married Emma Stobb and has four children, William Marvel, Alma and Etta; Hattie, wife of Albert Mittelstadt of Rusk, who operates a cream route, their children being Myrtle, Roy, Mabel and Iris; Alma, who is Mrs. Robert Dehnhoff of the town of Red Cedar, and has one child, Gladys; Hugo, working on the home farm; and Richard and Herman, also living at home with their parents. The religious faith of the family is that of the Lutheran Church, and socially they are held in high regard.

The Nelson Brothers, John, Peter and Otto, who are engaged in operating the farm in Section 30, town of Wilson, that was established by the parents in the early 80's, are sons of Hans and Ingeborg (Johnson) Nelson, who were natives of Norway. The father, Hans, was an expert log hewer and builder of log houses, followed that occupation there until he came to the United States in 1880. He settled first in Fillmore County, Minnesota, where he worked one summer in the harvest fields. In 1881 he came to Dunn County, taking a homestead of 160 acres in Section 30, town of Wilson, on which he erected a log house and a log barn with a straw roof, and after his family had arrived in that same year they lived in Menomonie until the house was finished, when they moved into the new home. This house was 20 feet square. Later Hans Nelson bought 200 acres more land, which gave him a farm of 360 acres, and in time he built another log barn of 24 x 26 feet, with a log addition of 16×16 feet and a driveway. He also cleared a considerable amount of his land, a task that his sons finished. For two years he carried mail on the Star route, moving to Ridgeland, where he built a residence. He died on April 5, 1915, a widower, as his wife had passed away some years before, on April 15, 1908. Their family consisted of nine children, Carrie, Nels, Christ, Albert, Hilda, Pauline, John, Peter and Otto, of whom Christ, Albert and Hilda are now deceased. Of the three brothers who are the direct subjects of this sketch, John was born in Norway, Dec. 25, 1880; Peter Sept. 4, 1883, and Otto Sept. 6, 1891. Having bought the home farm from their parents, they are now engaged in general farming and dairying, keeping Holstein cattle, of which at the present time they have 35 head, and raising Duroc-Jersey hogs. They have 175 acres of land under the plow, the balance being in pasture and timber. In 1908 they built a sandstone silo of 16 x 30 feet, and in 1914 a frame barn of 36 x 76 feet with a full basement, provided with running water and with the Louden equipment. In 1909 they built a granary of 20 x 24 feet with a lean-to 16 feet wide. The farm is well provided with modern machinery and the brothers own an interest in a silo filler and a threshing-machine. John is a director in the Farmers Cooperative Shipping Association of Ridgeland and vice president of the Ridgeland Cooperative Creamery Co. He served three years as town supervisor and is a member of the district school board. Peter in 1906 went to North Dakota, where he homesteaded 160 acres of land, which he improved and farmed for six years, at the end of which time he sold it and returned to Dunn County. Otto was married to Kristofa Larson, daughter of Sigwald and Martha Larson, her parents being natives of Norway who did not emigrate to this country. Otto and his wife have one son, Sherman, who was inducted into the United States' service May 18, 1918, trained at Camp Grant, Illinois, and at Jacksonville, Florida, and served in France and in the army of occupation in Germany after the armistice. He was discharged in July, 1919.

Austin C. Rude, proprietor of a machine and blacksmith shop in the village of Colfax, was born in Fairchild, Wis., June 17, 1892, son of Chris and Betsy (Christian-The mother is still a resident of Fairchild, the father being deceased. son) Rude. Austin C. attended school in Fairchild and resided with his parents until reaching the age of 17 years. He then went to Osseo, Trempealeau County, Wis., where he learned the blacksmith's trade of John Konz, in whose employ he remained for seven years. In September, 1917, he was drafted for military service, and sent to Camp Grant with Company A, 345th Infantry. From there a month later he was transferred to Camp Pike Arkansas, where he was assigned to the 87th Division as a horseshoer. Nine months later he was sent to Camp Dix, New Jersey, and in July, 1918, sailed for overseas, being landed at Liverpool, England. Thence he went to La Harve, France, and from there to Javers, where he was stationed until the war was over. He returned to the United States Jan. 5, 1919, and was discharged Jan. 18, 1919. After visiting his mother at Fairchild, he went to Plainview, Minn., where he remained until June, 1921, when he came to Colfax, Wis. Here he bought a half interest in the John Iverson machine and blacksmith shop, which he and Mr. Iverson conducted together until 1922. He then bought out his partner and has since conducted business alone. His shop, measuring $38 \ge 50$ feet, is built of concrete blocks and fully equipped with all necessary machinery, including triphammers. drills, emery stand, welding machine and motor thread-cutting machine. Mr. Rude was married, June 14, 1920, to Nancy Linnel, daughter of George and Helen (House) Linnel, her parents being farmers near Hixton, Jackson County, Wis. Mr. and Mrs. Rude attend the Methodist Episcopal Church. They have one child, Betty, who was born Nov. 14, 1923.

Peter J. Zimmer, the creator and proprietor of Challenge Diary Farm in Section 18, town of Eau Galle, was born in Dodge County, Wis., Feb. 16, 1859, son of Michael and Anna Zimmer. The parents were natives of Germany, in which country they were married. When they came to the United States, they settled in Dodge County, Wisconsin, where they engaged in farming, and where, as above recorded, their son Peter was born. Many years afterwards the father passed away at the home of this son, the mother having died several years previously in Dodge They had seven children, the first born of whom died in infancy. County. The others were Michael, of Hartford, Wis.; Mary, now Mrs. Nick Roeder of Hannibal, Wis.; Kate, of Hartford, Wis.; Angeline, deceased; Peter of the town of Eau Galle, and Matt of Mayville, Wis. Peter J. Zimmer acquired a public school education in Dodge County and remained at home until 15 years old. He then began working out and continued to do so until he was 24. After that he spent three and a half years working for the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company in Dunn County. Then he returned to the home farm and remained there for a while. He next bought an 80-acre homestead in Section 18, town of Eau Galle, Dunn County, this being a tract of which five acres had been broken, and a log stable and another log shack were also standing on it. On starting in to improve the place, he lived for a year with his brother-inlaw, Nicholas Roeder, and, in the meanwhile was married, March 21, 1886, to Mary Kerg, who was born in Dodge County, Wisconsin, Jan. 9, 1871, daughter of Nicholas and Margaret (Ginsbach) Kerg. Mr. Zimmer now began to lay the permanent foundations of a home, building a frame house and pushing forward the clearing of his land. He also bought an additional tract of 53 acres of Willard L. Smith, which adjoined his farm on the south, and also 80 acres in Pierce County; the latter tract, however, he sold later. He now owns a fine farm of 133 acres, 53 of which are in Section 19 and the remainder in Section 18. In 1907 he built a basement barn of 32 by 62 feet, which is finely equipped. He has remodeled and rebuilt his residence so that it is practically new and is substantially built and commodiously arranged. In 1911 he put up a silo of 14 x 32 feet. He has also sunk a 300-foot well, pumping the water for house and barns with a windmill. About 100 acres of his land were brought under cultivation and Mr. Zimmer successfully carried on mixed and dairy farming, keeping Guernsev cattle with a pure bred sire, until his retirement in 1925. The development of this farm on his part was a worthy achievement and placed him well up in the ranks of the progressive farmers of the county. Pleasantly situated on a ridge overlooking the Missouri Valley, its broad expanse of well cultivated acres is well supplemented by the tastefully designed house, with its fine lawns, decorated with shrubs and flowers, showing that he had an eye to the beautiful as well as for the practical. And his wife has proved a good helpmate and co-worker, performing her part with equal ability and often making good suggestions. They have been the parents of ten children, all of whom are now living and are as follows. Michael, born Aug. 5, 1887, who is a merchant in Spring Valley, married Emma Langer, and has four children, Alois, Carl, Dorothy and Mary. Anna, born Dec. 11, 1888, married Nicholas Mousel of the town of Elk Mound, and has five children, Helen, Agnes, Lawrence, Clarence and James. George, born Sept. 23, 1891, is a railroad man living at Walla Walla, Wash. He married Dorothy Poirier, and has four children, Mary, Agnes, Frances and George. Margaret, born May 16, 1894, married Michael Mousel and her children are Raymond, Elnora, Donald, Robert and Andrew. Edward, born Oct. 1, 1896, who is living at Spring Lake, Pierce County, married Anna Seipel and has four children, Cyril, Marie, Esther and Ronald. Joseph, born May 10, 1899, also resides in Pierce County. Lawrence, born Aug. 4, 1903, married Anna Webb and they reside on and conduct the home farm. Agnes, born March 27, 1905; Reynold, born June 3, 1908, and Genevieve Isabelle Marie, born Jan. 23, 1911. The family are members of St. Nicholas Catholic congregation of Farm Hill, Pierce County. In February, 1925, Mr. Zimmer rented the farm to his son Lawrence and retired to the village of Spring Valley, in Pierce County, where he purchased a fine modern home, now occupied by himself and wife.

Bert French, whose well managed farm is situated in Section 23 west, town of Spring Brook, was born in the town of Frankfort, Pepin County, Wis., July 19, 1871, son of John and Hannah (Plant) French. The father was a native of Penn-sylvania and the mother of New York State. Both came to Menomonie in the early 50's, working a short time for a Mr. Gilbert who operated a sawmill on Gilbert Creek. It was there that they first met, after their marriage settling in Pepin. For nearly 30 years John French followed river work on the Mississippi and he helped to raft many fleets of lumber as far south as St. Louis. Later he took a homestead in the town of Frankfort, Pepin County, where he and his wife spent the remainder of their lives. Of their seven children only three are now living: John, of Conrath, Rusk County; William of Pepin County, and Bert. Those deceased are George, Frank, Nellie and Anna. Bert French acquired his education in Pepin County and remained at home with his parents until 15 years of age, when he began working out at common labor. In 1887 he came to Dunn County, and continued to so occupy himself until 1908, when, he bought his present farm consisting of 80 acres in Section 23, town of Spring Brook. Thirty-five acres of the land had been broken but there were no buildings. Mr. French has erected a fine set, besides clearing 20 acres of the land. The farm is well stocked with grade Holstein cattle and he carries on general farming and dairying successfully. He was married Nov. 22, 1900, in the town of Spring Brook to Mary Witt, daughter of William F. and Fredericka L. (Lentz) Witt.

Robert Klukas, owner of Paradise Milk and Honey Farm in the town of Colfax, of which he is a well known and respected citizen, was born in Germany, April 5, 1870, son of Frederick and Wilhelmina (Krueger) Klukas. The father, a wagon maker and farmer by occupation, came with his family to the United States in 1884, settling in the town of Elk Mound, Dunn County, Wis., where he bought an 80acre tract of land and began to build up a farm. Subsequently he purchased additional land until he had 304 acres. His original tract was wild but had a small log house on it, and there he lived for a number of years engaged in improving the place. About 1907 he retired, he and his wife taking up their residence in the village of Elk Mound, where they lived for a while, and then moved to the village of Colfax, where he died March 14, 1914, and she Jan. 6, 1916. Robert Klukas had a good home training, as a boy attended rural school, and as soon as he was old enough helped his father, clearing, grubbing and breaking land for a number of years, and in the meanwhile acquiring a good practical knowledge of agriculture.

In 1909 he married Lizzie Harley, daughter of Christ and Louise (Hein) Harley, her parents being natives of Germany who came to this country before the Civil War. Mr. Harley served for a year and a half in the Civil War in a Wisconsin regiment. At the time of his marriage Mr. Klukas, by gift and purchase, became the owner of the home farm, comprising 120 acres of land, to which he later added 80 more. Of the total he gave his parents 20 acres and on the remainder followed general farming and dairying until ill health obliged him to give up that occupation for a time. He then sold the place and moved to the village of Colfax, where he worked in a livery stable, ran an auto livery, and was also employed for a while in a confectionary store by John Gullickson. In the village he built a stone house, which in 1916 he traded as part payment for 50 acres of land in Section 8, town of Colfax. To this, by purchase he added 46 acres more and proceeded to make other improvements. He built a frame barn of 22 x 50 feet, with a hay shed 20 x 70 feet, and a machine He also remodeled the house, put the Star equipment into the barn, and shed. provided both house and barn with running water. Here he is carrying on general farming and dairying, keeping pure bred and grade Holstein cattle, raising Poland-China hogs, and also keeping bees and producing honey. Mr. and Mrs. Klukas have six children, Herman, Ida, Albert, Lillie, George and Henry.

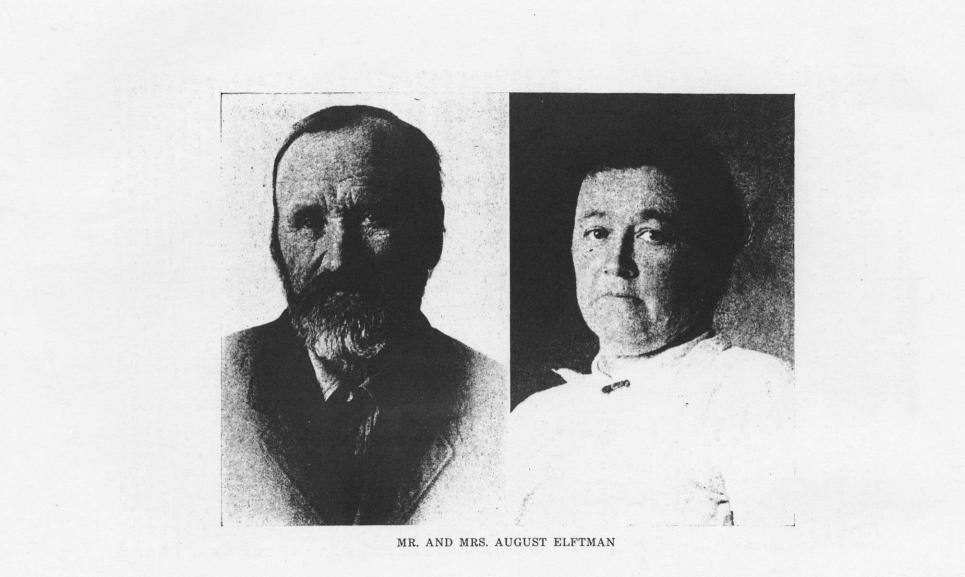

William H. Francis, president of the First National Bank of Knapp and who for many years has been agent here for the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha Railway, was born at Sparta, Wis., March 19, 1859, son of Peter and Mary (Bradley) Francis. The father was a native of Metz, in Lorraine, France, and the mother of Ontario, Canada. They were married in Watertown, Wis., from which place they moved to near Sparta, where they spent the rest of their lives in agriculture. William H. Francis as a boy attended school in Sparta and subsequently took a commercial course in Valparaiso, Ind. Then for two years he was engaged in teaching school. At the end of that time he took up railroad work at St. Paul for the Omaha line, and after being located there for three and a half years, in 1885 he came to Knapp, Wis., as agent and was here in that capacity until the fall of 1908, when he was transferred to Menomonie, where he was agent for the road until the spring of 1912. He then resumed his old position at Knapp, where he has since remained. Mr. Francis has always identified himself closely with local affairs, taking a deep interest in the progress and prosperity of the village. When the First National Bank was organized in 1904, he became one of the stockholders and was chosen vice president, in which position he served until March, 1922, when he was elected president to succeed the late William Robinson. For several years he also served as clerk of the Knapp school board. He is a member of the Railway Veterans Association, the Order of Railway Telegraphers and the Modern Woodmen of America, and is a thirty-second degree Mason. He was married in 1882, to Mary E. Blackburn of Sparta, who died in October, 1920. On Dec. 22, 1923, he married Harriet P. Vincent of Norwalk, Ohio. He and his wife are members of the Congregational church.

Nels A. R. Anderson Frogner, an active and progressive farmer of the town of Elk Mound, whose fertile and attractive farm of 80 acres is situated in Section 3, was born in Christiania, Norway, April 6, 1866. His parents also natives of Norway, were Andrews Hokenson and Randina (Hanson) Frogner, the father born in Gudbrandsdalen, and the mother in Barrum. They spent their lives in their native land, the father dying in 1866 and the mother in 1874. Their children were: Hans A., now of Elk Mound, Dunn County, Wis.; Martin, who died in Norway; Axel also in Norway, and Nels R. A., of the town of Elk Mound. The subject of this sketch was educated in Norway in the Gronland school and confirmed in the Gronland Lutheran Church. He began industrial life in the printer's trade, afterwards became a butcher and next learned the locksmith's trade. Not caring much for any of these occupations, however, and being attracted by the sea, he followed a sailor's life for two years, subsequently driving a hack for two years in Christiania. In 1888 he came to America and, locating in Eau Claire, Wis., was engaged in sawmill work there during two summers, spending the winters in the woods as a logger. In 1890 he began farming, buying 80 acres of land in the town of Colfax, on to which he moved in 1893, but resided there only one year, at the end of which time he sold that property and bought his present farm of 80 acres in Section 3, town of Elk Mound. There were no buildings on the place but 30 acres of the land had been broken. Mr. Frogner built a good frame house, also a good set of out-buildings, and planted oak, maple, pine and spruce trees in the yard, which have since grown into fine shade trees. He has broken and developed more of the land and has made good progress as a general farmer and dairyman. He is a stockholder in the Colfax Produce Co. and in the Elk Mound Cooperative Creamery. His farm is known as Maple Grove Farm. Mr. Frogner was married Dec. 2, 1901, to Randi E. Sorenson, who was born in Barrum, Norway, June 5, 1870, and came to this country when nine years old, her family locating in Eau Claire. Mr. and Mrs. Frogner have one son, Conrad Rudolph, born Dec. 4, 1903, who is his father's assistant on the farm.

Justus C. Smith, a retired farmer now living in the village of Elk Mound, has a record well worth preservation, both as a pioneer of Dunn County and an agriculturist of half a century's actual experience. He was born in the town of Bucking-ham, Province of Quebec, Canada, Nov. 1, 1843, son of John O. and Sarah A. The father was born in Canada, May 11, 1820, and the mother (Chipman) Smith. in New York State, June 10, 1816. Having met and become acquainted with each other during their school days, they were married on June 19, 1842. They spent their subsequent years in Canada as farmers, Mrs. Smith being the first to pass away, on Jan. 9, 1892. Her husband survived her until April 6, 1909. Their children, nine in number, were as follows: Justus C., of Elk Mound, Wis.; Henry O., born July 16, 1845, now a retired farmer living in Eau Claire; Mary S., born March 19, 1847, who became the wife of Henry Seaman and died Oct. 31, 1904; Sarah A., born Dec. 17, 1848, who married John Seaman and died July 29, 1923; Ralph C., born Aug. 26, 1850, who died July 10, 1899; Frances C., born Oct. 10, 1852, married John Cork, and died July 17, 1908; Charlotte M. born May 7, 1855, who died July 29, 1857; Frederick S., born Nov. 12, 1857, who lives on the old homestead in Buckingham, Province of Quebec, Canada; and George W., born Aug. 22, 1859, who died June 10, 1860. Justus C. Smith as a boy attended school in Canada, and had attained his majority when he came to the States in July, 1865, locating in Eau Claire. The Civil War had ended but three months before, or less, and in every part of the Union returned soldiers were seeking to resume their place in the industrial life of the nation. Eau Claire had its compliment of the soldiers, but there was plenty of work to be done, especially in the lumber business, which was rapidly expanding. Young Smith found a place to fit in, and until 1870 he worked in the woods and on the river, with headquarters at Eau Claire. The cutting away of the forests was revealing vast stretches of land admirable for agricultural purposes, and the farmer was close on the heels of the lumberman. The more permanent occupation appealed to Mr. Smith, and in 1870, there, with his brother, Henry O., he came to Dunn County and purchased a 160-acre tract in the town of Spring Brook. Three years later he bought his brother's interest in the property and continued to improve it, in time fencing the entire tract and putting it all under cultivation. It was on that place that he spent the half century of agricultural endeavor already referred to, and during which he accomplished notable results. Having retired from work in April, 1920, he has since resided in Elk Mound, enjoying years of restful ease. He has sold 80 acres of his farm to his son, Charles D., and now rents the other 80 to his son, Hugh L. For many years during his active career he was a member of the school board of his district and he also served for several years as road overseer. Mr. Smith was married in the town of Spring Brook, to Eleanor Hoskin, who was born in De Kalb County, Ill., daughter of Duane and Phoebe A. (Hayward) Hoskin. Her parents had located in that county in the early 50's on their arrival from New York State. In 1867 they came to Dunn County, arriving here May 2nd, and settled in the town of Elk Mound, where they made their home until Mr. Hoskin's death in 1884. Mrs. Hoskin then went to the State of Washington, where she lived for 36 years after, passing away in 1920. Mr. and Mrs. Smith have been the parents of ten children, namely, Fred C., Ethel, Sarah D., Phoebe B., Thomas J., Charles D., Olive M., Hugh L., Ralph L., and William J., of whom the following is a further record. Fred C., born Feb. 5, 1874, married Bernice Avery, and died Feb. 7, 1913, leaving four children, Blanche, Justus, Duane and Donald. Ethel, born July 17, 1875, and who married Walter Lee, died July 17, 1903, leaving two children, Merton and Doris. Sarah D., born March 12, 1877, now Mrs. C. A. Wood of Clarkston, Wash., has six children, Mabel, Earl, Hugh, Thomas, William and Robert. William was killed in an auto accident in October, 1924. Phoebe B., born Dec. 20, 1878, is now Mrs. Clyde Mason of Caryville, Dunn County and has three children, Daisy, Vera and Howard. Thomas J., born Oct. 25, 1881, married Mrs. Fred Smith, widow of his eldest brother, and has a daughter, Eleanor; they reside at Peck, Idaho. Charles D., born Nov. 17, 1884, died April 2, 1918; he married Lena Kikendahl and they had three children, Lyle, Thelmo and Allen. Olive M., born Jan. 22, 1889, is the wife of Alvin Webert, a farmer in Chippewa County, and has four children, Carl, Guy, Merlin and Robert S. Hugh L., born June 13, 1892, married Lizzie Shoff; they operate the old home farm and have four children, Eleanor, Frederick, Ralph, Edward and Charles M. Ralph L., born March 28, 1895, was the first man drafted into the army from the town of Spring Brook. for World War service, and was killed in action in the Argone Forest, Sept. 18, 1918; he was with Company A, 39th Infantry. William J., born Nov. 3, 1899, is residing at home with his parents. Mr. and Mrs. Smith are members of the Unitarian Society, also of the Dunn County Old Settlers' Association.

August Elftman, owner of the well known Elftman Dairy Farm in Section 9, town of Eau Galle, which is his own creation, as he developed it from the primitive wilderness, was born in Germany, Nov. 10, 1855. He acquired his schooling in his native land, where he remained until he had attained the age of 18 years, and then, in 1873, came to the United States to seek wider opportunities for advancement. For about two months after his arrival in this country he remained in New York State, and then came west to Oshkosh, Wis., where he spent the rest of that vear. Thence he went to the state of Iowa, where he spent a year. The following year was spent in Menomonie, Wis., and after that he spent a year in Minnesota. He then returned to Menomonie and entered the employ of the Knapp, Stout & Company, for whom he worked for six years. It was at the end of that time, or in 1882, that he began farming, buying 80 acres of wild land on Morton Hill in Section 9, town of Eau Galle. There were no buildings on it and no attempt had been made Mr. Elftman made one at once and put up a log dwelling and log at a clearing. barns, he then began to clear the land for cultivation. The story of the development of the many beautiful farms that now delight the eye of the traveler through this region has been told many times over and one individual case closely resembles another. Where there was timber, it had to be cleared away and the stumps removed, the latter operation, which was a difficult one, being usually termed "grub-There was also as a rule a considerable amount of "brush," consisting of bing." young trees that had sprung up from seed within a year or two, wild shrubs and bushes, and other small undergrowth, all of which had to be removed. Then the sod-covered surface had to be broken, or turned up with the plow, exposing the underlying soil to the rays of the sun, and for years after the first plowing there would usually be a pretty thick growth of weeds, the seeds of different species lying at different depths below the surface. Even on prairie land, where there was no timber, the work was much the same after the first breaking of the soil. But Mr. Elftman knew that persistent work would conquer all difficulties and acted accordingly. In time he also increased the size of his farm, buying an additional 30acre tract, and later an 80-acre tract, thus building it up to an area of 190 acres, of which 110 acres are now cleared and under cultivation. The improvements in his buildings are equally noteworthy. The original log house is no longer in evidence as a dwelling, but instead there stands a beautiful modern residence of ten rooms, which was built in 1908, and a full basement barn of $32 \ge 62$ feet, fulfills the chief purposes connected with the dairying branch of the business. This barn has the James patent steel equipment. The other buildings on the farm include a good-sized machine shed, a chicken house, a hog house and a garage. The homestead is provided with waterworks, and the grounds about the house show well kept lawns, giving indication of a keen appreciation of beauty on the part of the owner, in addition to that of utility. In developing this place Mr. Elftman has established a monument to his own memory that will last for many years after he has passed away and the farm is occupied by his descendants, or perhaps, by representatives of some other family. He is no longer engaged in hard work upon it, having in 1925, turned over the active management to his son, Charles, but he still resides on it. Mr. Elftman was married on April 2, 1882, to Mary Labs, who was born in Germany, Jan. 15, 1865, and was brought to this country by her parents. Mr. and Mrs. Charles Labs, when a babe of nine months. She proved a faithful wife and helpmate, a wise and kind mother, and an agreeable neighbor, and she was sincerely mourned when she passed away on Aug. 16, 1922. The children of Mr. and Mrs. August Elftman were four in number, three daughters and one son, namely: Emma, Angelia, Charley and Frances. Emma, born March 10, 1883, is now Mrs. Christ Bergman and has three children, William, Harry and Hazel. Angelia, born Feb. 16, 1886, is the wife of Frank Lamb, a farmer in Pierce County, and has two children, Alma and Oscar. Charley, born March 8, 1892, and now conducting the home farm, married Lottie Britton and has five children, Carol, Fern, Dorothy, Arnold and Loraine. Frances, born Feb. 17, 1896, died Feb. 24, 1899. The Elftman family are members of the Lutheran Church at Elmwood.

William Seidenberg, proprietor of the Farmers Store in the village of Elk Mound, who has been an active and successful merchant here for the last 22 years, was born in the town of Elk Mound, Dunn County, Jan. 1, 1873, son of Henry and Sophia (Keilkenberg) Seidenberg. He acquired his elementary education in the village school, and subsequently attended the Menomonie High School and Northwestern University at Watertown, Wis. After his return home he became his father's assistant on the home farm and worked in that capacity until 1898. In that year he gave up agriculture for mercantile life, becoming manager of the Farmers Cooperative Store in the village of Elk Mound. Until 1902 he remained in that position and then, being prepared to enter into business for himself, he bought out the stockholders and has since operated the store on his own account, also carrying on an implement business. In addition to this he has dealt extensively in real estate and owns several business blocks and dwelling-houses in the village, besides three farms in the town of Elk Mound. He is a stockholder in the Elk Mound creamery and his reputation as a representative business man is not confined to Elk Mound but extends all over Dunn County.

Theodore Seehawer, a well known and respected resident of the town of Grant, the owner of farm property in Sections 5 and 6, was born in Manitowoc County, Wis., March 25, 1881, son of Gust and Mary (Flackey) Seehawer. The parents were natives of Germany and early settlers in Manitowoc County, and both are now living. Their family numbered ten children: Henry, a farmer in Dunn County; Gust, who is farming in Manitowoc County; Theodore, our present subject; August and Arnold, contractors at Manitowoc; Walter, a farmer in Manitowoc County; Minnie, wife of John Holt of Manitowoc County; Alma, wife of Will Halverson of Appleton, Wis.; Mary, wife of John Duffern of Manitowoc County, and Rose, wife of Willis Synder of Appleton, Wis. Theodore Seehawer was reared on his parents' farm in Manitowoc County and attended district school there. He remained at home until he was 21 years old, when he began working out on farms for others. In 1910 he came to Dunn County and bought 120 acres of land in Sections 5 and 6, town of Grant, but did not immediately settle on it, as he returned to Manitowoc County, remaining there two years longer. At the end of that time he came back to Dunn County and began the operation of his farm, which was already partly improved. In time he brought 80 acres under the plow, leaving the rest in timber and pasture, and carried on general farming, dairying and stock raising. On the farm is a herd of 20 head of mixed grade cattle, and Chester-White hogs and Shropshire sheep are also raised. In April, 1924, he was appointed patrolman of County Trunk Highway U, and rented the farm out, though he still lives on it. Mr. Seehawer was married in Dunn County in 1910, to Minnie Beyer, who was born in the town of Grant, Jan. 17, 1885, daughter of Henry and Augusta (Lueck) Beyer. Her parents were both natives of Germany, the mother born in Posen. Henry Beyer came to the United States and to Dunn County, Wis., in 1876 as a young man, buying 160 acres of land in Section 5, town of Grant. It was a wild tract, which he cleared, erecting good buildings on it. He and Augusta Lueck were married in Mencmonie, in 1883, she having come to this county alone. Mr. Beyer died in 1898. Of their children five are living, Minnie, Theresa, August, Emil and Matilda. Two others, Otto and Edward, are deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Seehawer have two children, Lila and Vila.

Sam Sorenson, of Section 3, town of Elk Mound, who belongs to the sturdy agricultural class on which society depends for the chief necessaries of life, and in which the country is now taking a more than ordinary interest, was born on his parents' farm in this town on July 6, 1865, son of Andreas and Elizabeth Sorenson. The parents, natives of Barrum, Norway, came to America in 1860 and directly to Dunn County, settling on the farm above mentioned in Section 21, town of Elk It was then, however, merely 120 acres of wild land, and its subsequent Mound. value depended on Mr. Sorenson's strong arms and industrious habits. In effecting its transformation into a good modern farm he was greatly aided by his wife, who, like himself, was built of good pioneer material and managed the household with care and frugality. They spent 22 years on that place, starting with log buildings, which Andreas Sorenson erected, and clearing more land from year to year. In 1882 he sold that farm and in partnership with his son Sam bought one of 80 acre in Section 3, where he put up a house and other buildings, though he and his wife did not move to it until 1884, in the meanwhile residing on a rented farm. On the latter farm they subsequently resided until their death, Mr. Sorenson passing away first, on April 18, 1891, and Mrs. Sorenson on Nov. 14, 1893. Their children, six in number, were Maren, Arne, Randi, Lars, Lena and Sam, of whom Sam is the only one now living. Sam Sorenson as a boy attended the school of his district, after he was old enough assisting his father to develop the home farm, which he did until he was 20 years old. Then going to Washburn, Wis., he found employment as "carriage man" in the sawmill there, a job at which he worked for eight At the end of that time he returned home to take over the management of years. the farm and care for his parents, upon whom the years were beginning to press heavily. In fact he not only took over the management, but the farm became his property, the other heirs signing off their claims in his favor in consideration of his previous services and with the stipulation that he should continue to care for the parents for the rest of their lives, and this he did. He has done his share as a progressive farmer to keep abreast of the times in everything pertaining to his business. He has remodeled the farm residence, built a good barn and other out-buildings and has cleared and developed many more acres of land. He is engaged in general farming and dairying with good results, and is a stockholder in the Colfax Produce Co. of Colfax. On Aug. 17, 1895, Sam Sorenson was united in marriage with Minnie Nelson, who was born in the town of Elk Mound, June 27, 1870, daughter of James and Hannah Nelson. Her parents were natives of Norway who came to this country in the early 60's, and to Dunn County, Wis., settling on a tract of 160 acres of land in Section 2, town of Elk Mound, and, starting in pioneer fashion with a set of log buildings, which Mr. Nelson erected, they in time built up a good modern farm, which, when they were ready to retire, they sold, moving to the village of Elk Mound, where Mr. Nelson died May 14, 1895, and Mrs. Nelson Feb. 22, 1902. They had a large family of 13 children, namely: Ole, deceased; Christ, who met his death from drowning; Nels, deceased; Caroline, deceased, who was the wife of John Jurgenson; James of Eau Claire; Martha, who married Lars Benson and is now a widow living in Chicago; Lena, residing in Elk Mound village, the widow of Christ Ludvigson; Mary, living in Eau Claire County, the wife of John Melby; Hannah, who married Edd Gunderson and is now a widow; Anna, also a widow, whose husband was Engebrit Garvick; Minnie, who is Mrs. Sam Sorenson; Louise, wife of John Hanson and residing in North Dakota; and one who died in infancy. Mr. and Mrs. Sorenson are the parents of four children, all residing at home with them, who were born as follows: Arthur J., Dec. 22, 1896; Henry L., May 22, 1900; Mildred, July 17, 1902, and Hazel L., Feb. 3, 1906.

William W. Cronk, an early farmer in the town of Dunn, now passed away, was born in Billeville, Ontario, Canada, Oct. 29, 1849, son of Solomon S. and Hannah (Wesells) Cronk, the parents also being natives of Canada. There he acquired his education in the public schools, continuing to reside in the Dominion until 1866, when, at the age of 17, he accompanied his parents to Wisconsin, the family settling on a farm in Dane County. Thence nine years later, in 1875, they came to Dunn County, taking land in the town of Dunn, which William W. helped to clear. In 1886 he started farming for himself on a rented farm in Louisville, on which he remained two years. He then moved to the Creaser farm at Downsville, which he operated for four years. His next move was to buy a farm of 160 acres on Rusk Prairie in the town of Dunn. This was improved land, with some old buildings, which later Mr. Cronk rebuilt, also putting up several new ones and adding to the general improvements from year to year. He also added another 80 acres to his holdings, making a fine farm of 240 acres, and it has been said that he was the first man to raise corn on Rusk Prairie, or practically so. He continued farming on that property until the fall of 1903, at which time, renting it out, he moved to Menomonie and built himself a fine residence at 1316 Main Street. But he was not destined to enjoy any long period of comfortable leisure, as his health had already begun to fail and he died at Denver, Colo., on Jan. 9, 1907, when in his fifty-eighth year. Mr. Cronk had been married on Feb. 25, 1885, to Mrs. Mary E. Krause, whose maiden name was Mary E. Lynch. She was first married Feb. 2, 1879, to Henry Krause, who gied July 14, 1881, leaving one son, Leslie R. Krause. After the death of Mr. Cronk his wife continued to occupy the Main Street residence that was the family home until her own death, which took place Oct. 29, 1921. She was in her sixty-seventh year, having been born at Necedah, Juneau County, Wis., Jan. 18, 1855. Thus passed from earthly scenes two residents of Dunn County who had borne a worthy and effective part in its agricultural and social development, and whose memory will remain green for many years to come.

Leslie R. Krause, a well known and respected resident of Menomonie, formerly engaged in agricultural and dairying activities is a native son of Dunn County, having been born on a farm in the town of Dunn, July 27, 1880, son of Henry and Mary E., (Lynch) Krause. As elsewhere narrated, both parents are now deceased, the father passing away when Leslie R. was a year old. A few years later he had a step-father, his mother having become the wife of William W. Cronk. With them he resided on the home farm, which, after attending the rural school on Rusk Prairie, he helped to operate. When in 1903 they retired and took up their residence in Menomonie, he accompanied them, and after Mr. Cronk's death in 1907 he and his mother kept house together until 1915, in which year he began working for himself, a farm of 160 acres that the mother had bought in the town of Sand Creek. There he carried on dairy farming, improving the land and buildings. His mother having died in October, 1921, in May, 1923, he sold the farm and returned to the city residence on Main Street, Menomonie, which had come into his possession on his mother's death. Mr. Krause was married July 12, 1915, to Margaret Feyen, who was born in Eau Claire, Sept. 19, 1891, and the old home on Main Street is now enlivened by the presence of four children, the issue of this marriage, who were born as follows: La Rue McNeil, July 12, 1916; Stanley Waldo, Oct. 27, 1917; Elila May, Nov. 11, 1918; and Lucille Marie, Dec. 1, 1922.

Harry L. Kyle, who has been for most of his life a business man, though for a few years a farmer, and is now proprietor of an old established mercantile business in Downsville which he, himself, helped to develop at an early stage of its existence, was born in the town of Dunn, Dunn County, Wis., Nov. 15, 1875, son of John and Nettie (Macauley) Kyle. His parents having moved to Read's Landing, Minn., when he was young, he attended school there for some years. In the spring of 1892 he returned to Dunn County, resuming residence on the old homestead in the town of Dunn. In the fall of the same year he became employed in the general store in Downsville operated by his father and uncle and known as Kyle Bros. Mercantile

MR. AND MRS. PETER ROBERT KELM

Store, and during the next 13 years he worked there, during that time acquiring a very thorough knowledge of mercantile business and making a wide circle of acquaintances. In 1905 he purchased the store and stock and for about eight years, or until March, 1913, conducted it on his own account. He then sold it and buying the old home farm in the town of Dunn, known as the Broad Acres Farm, he engaged in agriculture, operating it for four years. In March, 1917, Mr. Kyle retired from that line of industry and again bought his old store in Downsville, of which he has since been proprietor. He handles a large stock of groceries, shoes, dry goods, International farm machinery and light hardware. The store is the largest in the village of Downsville, the main building being 40 x 60 feet in ground dimensions, while he has a warehouse 20 x 30 feet and another 20 x 50 feet, he and his family occupying for a residence the second floor of the main building. He is also president of the Farmers and Merchants State Bank in Downsville, having held that position since the bank was organized; is a stockholder in the Downsville Cooperative Creamery Company, and for the last 17 years has been treasurer of the town of Dunn. Such a record shows unmistakeably that Mr. Kyle is a man of brains and force, able to maintain himself and fight the battle of life successfully under varying conditions, and also to render efficient public service appreciated by his fellow townsmen. He has society affiliations with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, the Modern Woodmen of America and the Beavers in all of which he has held office. On Jan. 1, 1906, Harry L. Kyle, was married in Menomonie to Madge Cook, daughter of George P. and Jane (Folsom) Cook of this city. He and his wife are the parents of one son, born Sept. 10, 1916. Mrs. Kyle is a member of the M. E. Church, also a steward of the church and president of the Ladies' Aid Society. While the United States was at war with Germany she was very active in Red Cross work.

Peter Robert Kelm, a retired farmer residing in Section 16, town of Eau Galle, was born in Germany, July 24, 1861, son of Gottleib and Mena Kelm. The father died when the subject of this sketch was nine years old, and the mother subsequently came to the United States, making her home in Indiana, where she spent the rest of her life. Peter Robert Kelm was educated in his native land, where he was married Sept. 16, 1880, to Amelia Martischeska. In the following year he came with his wife to America, and for a year after his arrival resided in Indiana. In 1882 he came to Dunn County, Wisconsin, and went to work for a brother-inlaw, William Bergman, a farmer in Section 7, town of Eau Galle. After remaining in his employ for seven years, he began farming for himself, buying 80 acres of land in Section 8, of the same town. The buildings were an old board shanty and barn, into the former of which he moved with his family, after which he began the development of the land. Six years later he had made fair progress and built a good frame house, though his first wife, Amelia, was no longer living to share his prosperity, as she died in December, 1899. On Sept. 26, 1900, he married Mrs. Ulrica Lehmann, whose maiden name was Ulrica Theil, and who was born in Germany, Sept. 4, 1862. She came to this country in 1882, settling in the village of Rusk, Dunn County, Wis., and was first married Sept. 20, 1884, to Ferdinand Lehmann, who was born in Germany in 1862, came to America in 1880, and died Sept. 7, 1899. In 1909 Mr. Kelm built a good substantial barn of 27 x 48 feet in ground plan, besides putting up out buildings from time to time. He also bought 40 acres more land in Section 9 and 20 acres in Section 16, and continued farming until the fall of 1922, when he sold the farm to his son William, who built the bungalow on the 40-acre tract in Section 16, where Mr. Kelm and his wife now reside enjoying a season of leisure after their many years of hard work. In speaking of the younger generation, three families of children have to be considered, the three related to each other more or less closely, two by blood, and the third by marriage. The children of Mr. Kelm by his first wife, Amelia were seven in number, namely: Emma, now Mrs. Jacob Burke of Rock Elm, Pierce County, Wis., who is the mother of three children, Elmer, Freeman and Hazel; Ida, who married Charles Weber of the town of Eau Galle and has 4 children, Peter, Louise, Earl and Carl; Olga, deceased; William, present owner of the home farm, who married Emma Lehmann, and has four children, Violet and Viola (twins), Evelyn and Alice; Augusta, who resides in Iowa; Anna, who resides in Onalaska, La Crosse County, Wis.; Vanda, wife of John Hoyt of Glenwood City, Wis., and the mother of three children, Effie, Leonard and Loraine. The children of Peter R. Kelm by his present wife Ulrica are two in number: Amelia, who is now the wife of Victor Wencl of the town of Eau Galle; and Paulina, who is living on the farm with her father and mother. Mrs. Kelm by her first husband, Ferdinand Lehmann, had six children, of whom five are now living, the record in brief being as follows: William, of the town of Eau Galle, who married Rosetta Furhmann, and has five children, Agnes, Elmer, Lloyd, Ruth and Leona; Paul, of the town of Weston, a farmer, who married Blanche Seitz and has three children, Merle, Herbert and Kenneth; Otto, single, living in the town of Eau Galle; Herman, also single and living in the town of Eau Galle; Emma, wife of William Kelm, and Lizzie, who died at the age of 19 years. Mr. Kelm, his wife and family, are members of the Lutheran Church in the town of Eau Galle.

Ole Rognstad, a farmer of Section 14, town of Grant, who has well deserved the success he has attained, was born in Lillehammer, Norway, March 7, 1871, son of Andrew and Gora (Olson) Gognstad, the mother being a daughter of Ole and Berret Olson. The father was a carpenter and also a farmer, but anxious to make a better living and provide something for old age, he decided to emigrate to the United States, his wife favoring the plan. Not having the means to pay the passage of the whole family at once, or perhaps wishing to see the country first, he came over alone in 1883, locating in Chippewa County, Wisconsin. In the following year he came to Dunn County, where he was joined by his wife and children, and in the same year they settled on 120 acres of wild land in Section 14, town of Grant. He built a log house for a dwelling and started clearing his land, but having no team he had to hire some one to do his breaking for him. Later he got an ox team and put up other buildings, and there he and his wife lived until old age compelled them to retire from active work, and after that they lived with their children until they died. Of these children there were seven, one of whom, Bertha, is now deceased. The living are Stena, John, Ole, Tillie, James and Sarah. Stena is the wife of Tom Skie and lives in North Dakota; Tillie is the wife of Paul Isakson of the town of Grant: Sarah also is married and lives in North Dakota. Ole Rognstad attended school in Norway and also did farm work there. After coming with his mother to this country in 1884 he went to school in the town of Grant, and out of school hours helped his father to clear the home farm. He also spent 13 winters in the woods in the lumber industry, while during the summers of the same period he worked on the farms of others. During his first summer thus spent he milked nine cows daily, took care of the stock, and was also helper to a mason, carrying all the brick for building a large brick house, and all this for wages of \$7 per month. True, the \$7 would buy more than twice as much as it would today, but it was very inadequate pay for so much labor, and young Rognstad resolved to be his own master as soon as he was able to obtain land for a farm. He was 29 years old before he was able to do this, but in the year 1900 he bought 160 acres of land in Section 14, town of Grant, which was an improved place to a certain extent, as 70 acres of the land had been broken and there were a log house and straw barn on the place. On taking possession he continued the improvements, clearing away the brush and adding to his cultivated area until he now has 105 acres under the plow. In 1903 he built an eight-room frame house; and he has from time to time erected other buildings as needed, and these include a barn 36 by 60 feet, a silo 14 x 32 feet, and a granary. Mr. Tognstad has a good equipment of machinery. He keeps a herd of $\overline{36}$ grade Holstein cattle, raises Poland-China hogs, and carries on general farming and dairying. On April 6, 1910, Ole Rognstad was married in the town of Grant to Julia Isakson, daughter of Martin and Sophia (Peterson) Isakson. She was born in Section 14, town of Grant, July 30, 1882, her parents having come to Dunn County in the early 60's. Though her mother is deceased, her father is still living in Colfax, being now 90 years of age. They had ten children, eight of whom are now living, namely, Mary, Paul, Olaf, Minnie, Otto, Henry, Lizzie and Julia. Those deceased are Elisa and Olea. Minnie is now Mrs. T. E. Thompson and Lizzie is the wife of Herman Gunderson. Mr. and Mrs. Rognstad are the parents of two children, Gora S., born Feb. 13, 1911, and Odin J., born Sept. 21, 1913.

Emanuel Nelson was born on the farm which he now owns and operates, in Section 32, town of Eau Galle, on Jan. 28, 1876. His parents were John and Bertha Nelson, the father a native of Sweden, and the mother, whose own family name also was Nelson, a native of Norway. They were both young when they came to the United States and were married in southern Wisconsin. They came to Dunn County in 1864, settled first in the village of Eau Galle, and a year later on the farm now owned by the subject of this sketch, John Nelson working many years for Carson & Rand. Their further history may be found in the biography of their Emanuel Nelson acquired his education in the district school son Christian. known as the Chase Hill School, and as a young man helped his brothers to clear, cultivate and develop the home farm, the father being able to give little time to it on account of his activity in the lumber business. In 1902 the father turned the farm over to him and he has since continued to improve, both with respect to the land and the buildings. Of the land he has cleared and broken about 15 acres He has also erected a new and substantial residence and certain out-buildmore. ings, and is carrying on general, mixed and dairy farming with good success. keeps grade Holstein cattle, having a full blooded sire at the head of his herd. For three years he has been a director of the Chase Hill District School. Nelson was first married June 1, 1909, to Sadie White, who was born in Pepin County, Wis., in 1890, and who after eight and a half years of married life, died on Jan. 3, 1918. She left three children: Mitchel, born July 30, 1910; Wayne, born Aug. 22, 1911, and Evelyn, Sept. 17, 1914. Mr. Nelson was married secondly on June 24, 1922, to Mary Bank, who was born in Germany. The Nelson family are affiliated religiously with the Methodist Episcopal Church, and Mr. Nelson is a member of the Modern Woodmen lodge at Eau Galle.

William Daugherty, a pioneer of Dunn County long since passed away, but who started and for some 20 years carried on a farm adjoining the site of the present village of Downing, was a native of New England, having been born at Portland, Maine, April 16, 1834. As a young man of 18 he came west in 1852 to St. Louis and there obtained a job as cook on a Mississippi steamboat plying between St. Louis and St. Paul, an occupation in which he continued for five years during the seasons, in the winters cooking in logging camps. In 1857 he located at Lakeland near Stillwater, Minn., where he bought a farm in partnership with James Downing, familiarly known as "Jim" Downing, after whom the village of Downing, Dunn County was named. He and Mr. Downing took up their residence on the place and began the work of improving it, living as bachelors until Mr. Daugherty was married at that place on Jan. 16, 1861, to Ellen Johnson, a daughter of Ely and Amy (Brown) Johnson. He remained at Lakeland until 1868, in which year he sold out and came to Dunn County, arriving here on March 20. He bought 160 acres of wild land adjoining the site of the village of Downing, and on it built a small log house and barn and began clearing the land. He continued his improvements on the place for a number of years, but in 1878 sold the west half of his farm, but continued to develop the remaining 80 acres. In 1888 he suffered a sunstroke at Hudson, Wis., from the effects of which he never fully recovered, though he worked to the extent of his ability. Within a year or two after the sunstroke he had a paralytic stroke, which rendered him nearly helpless. It was the precursor of the end and he passed away on June 1, 1892. He died about one thousand dollars in debt, but his widow and children continued to carry on the farm and in time cleared off the debt. These children were: Prudence A., born March 23, 1863; Bertha, born June 21, 1866, and William J., born April 14, 1879. Prudence A., who became the wife of Huller Culberson of Downing, died on Jan. 15, 1884, leaving a son, W. Harry, then but three weeks old, who was adopted by his grandmother Mrs. Daugherty and by her reared to manhood. He repaid her, for from the age of seven years he began to make himself useful and later on did his share in helping to raise the debt of the farm. The second child, Bertha V., married J. T. Rorbeck of Downing and later they moved to Montana, where she died July 5, 1914, and William J., who is now a well known farmer in the town of Tiffany, is separately mentioned in this volume. William Daugherty, the father, was a well known and popular character in his day. He served on the town board and also on the district school board, being a Republican in politics, and he took a useful part in the general affairs of the community, being active in establishing the Downing cemetery. He and his wife were members of the Methodist Episcopal Church and always active in religious work, attending meetings wherever they were held-in schoolhouses and other places. The Daugherty home was a hospitable one and large companies often gathered there to partake of chicken pie cooked by Mr. Daugherty himself. When the community church was built in Downing he aided the movement by giving of his means and also helping in the labor, and after his death his family continued to worship there. After remaining on the farm until the fall of 1912, having with the help of her children paid off the debt and erected a comfortable set of frame buildings, she leased it to her son William J. and bought a home in Downing village, where she lived for some years, passing away on June 26, 1923. She was a native of Ohio, and had migrated by means of wagon and team in 1852 to Hudson, Wis., the party consisting of her parents and their five children. She had been a good wife and mother, well adapted to meet pioneer conditions and surroundings and make the best of them. She and her husband had nothing when they started in Dunn County and had to go to Menomonie or Hudson for their supplies or to sell produce, a trip taking two days and two nights, but they established a good farm and will be remembered as worthy pioneers of this county.

William J. Daugherty, a well known farmer in the town of Tiffany, was born in this town, near the site of the village of Downing, on April 14, 1879. His parents were pioneers who had settled there ten or 11 years before and were still living in their original log house. He had but little schooling, as he was the only boy in the family, and at the age of 13, owing to the death of his father, he had a heavy burden of responsibility thrust upon him in the active management of the farm. Thus he was engaged up to the age of 18 years, at which time he went to work on the Wisconsin Central railroad as section hand, having his headquarters at Downing and boarding with his mother on the home farm near by. Each month he turned over his pay check to his mother to help raise the debt on the farm and create a fund for the erection of a better set of buildings on it. This lasted for several years, or until the spring of 1900, at which time he entered the employ of T. B. Davis, a merchant who kept a store in Downing, as his clerk. With Mr. Davis he remained nearly two years; then in the spring of 1903he entered the creamery of Montanyea & McClelland at Downing to learn butter-making, and he made such good progress that in September, of the same year, he was given charge of the plant, subsequently continuing for five years with that firm. During all this period he was giving a large part of his earnings to his mother. Few people travel long on life's journey, however, without meeting with some misfortune, or set-back, and one came to Mr. Daugherty in June, 1908, when he was attacked by rheumatism, which so disabled him that he was laid up for a year and a half. During the winter of 1909-10 he owned and conducted a livery business in Downing, but sold it in 1911 to become clerk in the Herdahl store, a position in which he remained until February, 1912. In the fall of that year he rented his mother's farm and moved onto it, selling his Downing home to his mother, and he remained on the farm until the fall of 1916, when he returned to Downing. During the winter of 1916-17 he logged in the town of New Haven, Dunn County for D. C. Coolidge of Downing, and in the spring of 1917 bought the Synder jewelry and confectionary business in Downing. This, however, he was obliged to sell in the spring of the following year, as his rheumatism had again attacked him, and to combat this foe he entered a sanitarium at Jordan, Minn., for treatment. After a short time he was back home again, and had entered the employ of D. C. Coolidge as manager of the Fairmount Dairy Farm near Downing, being thus occupied subsequently until August, 1920. The next position he took was that of traveling representative for the Minneapolis Pine Tree Milking Machine Co. for this section and with that concern he remained one year, at the end of that time returning to Downing, where he became connected with mercantile business again as bookkeeper in the store of John Morrow. In 1920 Mr. Daugherty rented a 40-acre farm in Section 29, town of Tiffany, about a mile and a half east by south of the village of Downing, a property that he purchased a year later and on which he is now living. He has a fair set of buildings and the farm is well stocked with high grade and pure bred Holstein cattle, he having been engaged in the raising of pure bred animals since the spring of 1923. His herd inincludes 12 milch cows. He is a stockholder in the creamery at Downing and still keeps books for the Morrow store. Mr. Daugherty has been active at various times in the affairs of local government, for five years serving as a member of the village board and for two years as president. During his last year as president of the board he took the initial and leading part in the improvement of the Downing cemetery and in the erection of a substantial civic building. He is fraternally affiliated with the Modern Woodmen of America and the Odd Fellows, belonging to Downing Camp No. 5752 of the former, which he joined at the age of 18 years and in which he has filled all the chairs, serving for years as camp clerk. He was 21 when he joined the Odd Fellows, being initiated into the scarlet degree in Tiffany Lodge No. 40, in which he has filled all the chairs. In fact, he has gone over the entire route in Odd Fellowship, and was a delegate to the grand lodge at Janesville On Oct. 12, 1905, Mr. Daugherty was married to Amelia C. Rudow, in 1909. who was born at Osceola, Wis., Oct. 4, 1878, daughter of William and Anna (Brandt) Rudow, the parents—both now living—being of German nationality or ancestry. Before her marriage Mrs. Daugherty taught in the public schools of Dunn and Polk counties. She has two brothers and three sisters all of whom are teachers. Mr. and Mrs. Daugherty began domestic life in Downing, where they owned a nice residence. Three children have been born to them: Ellen A., Aug. 16, 1908; William H., June 15, 1910, and Carl R., July 10, 1912. The two eldest are attending high school and the latter the grade school in Downing. The family worship with the community congregation in the village.

Engebrigt J. Halseth, who for many years has lived retired in the city of Menomonie, to which place he came in 1869, was born in Soknedalen, Norway, son of Jens and Kristine (Solberg) Halseth. It was on his parents' farm that he first saw the light, though his father was not a farmer but a military man. Our subject's grandfather and great-grandfather were also military men. Jens Halseth died at the age of 64, and his wife at that of 87, both in their native land. They had a family of seven children, three sons and four daughters, those in addition to the subject of this sketch being: Bernt and Sivert (sons), and Karen, Ingeborg, Sara and Kris-tine, daughters. The only members of the family to come to America were Engebrigt J. and Ingeborg, the latter of whom is now deceased. She was the wife of Peter Dalquist of Warren, Minn. Engebrigt J. Halseth, after attending the parish school up to the age of 14 years attended the military school at Trondhjem for two He then entered regular military service and remained in the army until vears. he was 32, leaving it with the rank of sergeant. Immediately he came to America, reaching Read's Landing, Minn., in the spring of 1868. There he remained until the fall, at which time he came to the Chippewa Bottoms in Dunn County. In the following spring he took service with Knapp, Stout & Co. at Menomonie as millwright, and in that capacity he worked for 27 years, retiring in 1896 on account of ill health. For 15 years he was troubled with rheumatism, but is now enjoying good health for a man of his age. Mr. Halseth was first married on Jan. 19, 1878, to Karen Fladoes, daughter of Sivert and Marie Fladoes of Menomonie. She was born in Lindstrand, Norway, Jan. 7, 1853 and came to this country with her father in 1875, her mother having died in Norway. Her father died in Menomonie, and she, herself, passed away in this city on Aug. 13, 1883. On Jan. 13, 1888, Mr. Halseth married for his second wife Maret Setter of Menomonie, who died July 17, 1894. By his first wife Mr. Halseth had five children, Jens C., Marie S., Christine A., Sivert K. and Egbert K. Jens C. is now living in Milwaukee. Marie S. is Mrs. A. M. Stori of Menomonie. Christine A. is unmarried and is keeping house for her father. She was graduated from the Menomonie High School, and also from the Wisconsin Library School after summer session work. Since 1913 she has been employed as librarian at The Stout Institute. Sivert K., is now in British Columbia. Egbert K., died in infancy. There was one child by Mr. Halseth's second marriage, namely, Carl M., who was born April 16, 1889. He was graduated from the Menomonie High School and later from Wisconsin University as a civil engineer. He now lives in Minneapolis and is employed by the Northern States Power Co. In 1877 before he was married, Mr. Halseth built a comfortable two-story brick house, located at 1003 Eighth Street East, which is his present residence. Industrious and frugal in the days of his activity, he accumulated a modest competence, in the meanwhile giving his children as good an education as possible. He was the first treasurer of the city of Menomonie, serving one year and failing of re-election owing to the opposition of the saloon element. He was one of the leaders in the founding of Our Saviour's Lutheran Church of Menomonie, was a Sunday school teacher for 25 years, and has always endeavored to regulate his life by the example and precepts of Christ, and to follow the Golden Rule in his dealings with his fellow men. Therefore in the evening of life there is nothing to cause him dismay, and he leads a quiet and peaceful life in faith, hope and charity.

August Ziehme, who for 35 years was an active farmer in the town of Weston, creating a good farm from the wilderness, and thus having a good claim to the title of pioneer, was born in Nieder Lipgo, Germany, March 28, 1858. He was there reared and educated and remained in his native land until the spring of 1884, when he emigrated to the United States. Landing at New York, he came directly west to Dodge County, Wisconsin, but soon afterwards moved on to Pierce County. and in the spring of 1885 came to Dunn County, where he began his career as a farmer. The land he purchased was a wild tract of 80 acres in Section 7, town of Weston and on it he built a small log house of which he and his wife took possession. for he had been married in February, that year, in Dodge County, to Augusta Reise. She was a native of Germany, born Dec. 22, 1863, and for 16 years, or more, she was his faithful companion and helpmate, but was not privileged to see the full fruit of their joint labors, as she died on Nov. 10, 1901. The children of this marriage were: William, now of Glen Flora, Rusk County; Martha, who is Mrs. James Kiser of the town of Weston; Herman, of Menomonie; Albert and August, who are on the home farm; Minnie, who is Mrs. Howey Youch of Pierce County; and Ella, who is Mrs. William Wolske of Pierce County. Mr. Ziehme traveled the familiar path of the pioneer, clearing, breaking and planting his land and improving and putting up better buildings, as he was able. Also, by the purchase of more land, he increased its area to 200 acres, of which he cleared 85 and broke 60. He was a very active member of St. Johns Lutheran Church in the town of Weston from 1885 until his death, which took place on May 25, 1924. For several years previous he had been retired, having in 1920 sold the farm to his sons Albert and August. He was a man who deserved to be remembered for the useful work he did, and his good wife also should not be forgotten.

Ziehme Brothers, Albert and August, who are operating the old Ziehme farm in Section 7, town of Weston, which they own, have justly taken their place among the enterprising and successful young farmers of this part of Dunn County. They are sons of August and Augusta (Reise) Ziehme. Albert was born March 20, 1893, and has a similar personal history to his brother August, whose birth date was Aug. 23, 1895. Both acquired their education in the district school near their home in the town of Weston, and have always lived on the home farm except while they were in military service in the war against Germany and the other Central Powers. Honorably discharged from the army in 1919, they returned home and in the following year purchased the home farm which they have since been engaged in operating. In 1922 they erected a fine barn of 36×100 feet in ground plan, installed with the Olson equipment, and they have a large herd of grade Holstein cattle. Albert Ziehme was married Dec. 15, 1922, in Red Wing, Minn., to Lillian M. Hurtgen, and they have a son, Raymond A., who was born Sept. 3, 1923. The military record of the two brothers, given in more detail, is as follows. Albert Ziehme was drafted May 28, 1918, and sent to Camp Grant, Ill., where he was . , • assigned to Company F, 342d Infantry, 86th Division. Four months later he was transferred to Camp Upton, N. J. He sailed for overseas in August, 1918, was landed in Liverpool, England, proceeded thence to La Havre, France, with the 7th Division and was in the second line trenches, but saw no action. After the armistice he was with the army of occupation, and in June, 1919, returned to the United States, being discharged June 28 at Camp Grant. August Ziehme was drafted Oct. 3, 1917, sent to Camp Grant for training and assigned to Company C, 342d Infantry, 86th Division. Later he was sent to Camp Pike, Arkansas, and transferred to the 345th Infantry, 85th Division. Subsequently sent to Camp Green, South Carolina, he was there transferred to the Fourth Division Ammunition Train. He sailed from Hoboken, N. J., May 22, 1918, was landed in Brest and went to Bordeaux. He saw action on several fronts and was subsequently with the army of occupation. Aug. 1, 1919 he returned to the United States, being discharged Aug. 9 at Camp Grant.

Herman Zuehlke, a well known farmer in the town of Red Cedar, was born near Rehsel, Pommern, Germany, Feb. 3, 1872, son of Ferdinand and Fredericka (Hanke) Zuehlke, who were natives of that country where they were married in 1868. The father for a number of years was in the employ of German noblemen. In 1882 he emigrated with his family to the United States, coming directly to Dunn County, Wisconsin, where he joined a brother-in-law, Ferdinand Hanke, residing with him during his first summer here. He then bought land in Section 36, town of Tainter, later taking a homestead, which gave him a farm of 160 acres, which, as soon as he was able, he started to improve. For a few years he had to work for others much of his time to obtain money to live on, but when his farm had reached such a condition that he was able to live from what it produced, he gave his whole attention to it and advanced more rapidly, and he finally brought it to a high state of cultivation, also replacing his original shacks with good buildings. After an active career of 33 years on this place, he died in 1915, being survived by his wife, who is still living on the home farm, which is now owned and operated by her son Otto. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Ferdinand Zuehlke were: Ferdinand and Anna, who died in Germany; Amelia, now deceased; Herman, of Section 1, town of Red Cedar; William, a farmer in the town of Elk Mound; Frank, a carpenter living in Rusk; Emil and Otto of the town of Tainter, and Alice, now Mrs. Fred Scharlau of the town of Elk Mound. Herman Zuehlke attended school both in Germany and in the town of Tainter, Dunn County, Wisconsin. He started working out at the age of 14 years and was employed for three years by the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company in their mills at Cedar Falls. While there he purchased 120 acres in Section 1, town of Red Cedar, and later bought 120 acres more. In 1916 he sold the north tract of 120 acres to his brother-in-law, Otto E. Olson, and proceeded to develop a farm from the other tract. He has erected various buildings on his place, including a barn 30x 50 feet in ground plan, with 14-foot posts; a double corn crib of 20 x 22 feet; a machine shed, 22 x 40 feet; a chicken house, 12 x 20 feet, and a granary of 16 x 26 feet with 14-foot posts; and he is now planning the erection of a new dwelling-house. As a general farmer and dairyman he is making good progress, keeping grade Holstein and Durham cattle and Poland-China hogs. Mr. Zuehlke was married in Mencmonie, Nov. 18, 1908, to Linnie Heiden, who was born April 19, 1874, in the town of Menomonie, daughter of John and Caroline (Ginrich) Heiden, the parents having been among the first settlers in that town. Both her father and mother are now deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Zuehlke are members of the Evangelical Church in the town of Tainter. Mr. Zuehlke for several years was superintendent of the Sundav school and is now one of the members of the board of trustees.

Thomas Wittig, a well known stock and dairy farmer in the town of Red Cedar, who has gained an enviable reputation as a butter maker, which occupation he formerly followed exclusively, was born in Pepin County, Wis., Aug. 4, 1875, son of Leopold and Mary (Brunner) Wittig. The parents were natives of Austria, where they were reared and subsequently married. With the exception of eight years during which Leopold Wittig served in the German army, he followed the trade of linen weaver until he came with his family to America in 1872. Arriving in this country in April, they came west to Pepin County, Wis., having relatives there, and settled on a farm, which Mr. Wittig operated for many years subsequently, improving it into a fine piece of agricultural property. In 1904 he suffered a bereavement in the loss of his wife, after which he resided with his son John in Pepin County until his death, Sept. 26, 1924. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Leopold Wittig were eight in number: Leo, now a farmer in Buffalo County; Tina (a twin sister of Leo), who married John Weissenbeck and is now deceased; John, a farmer in Pepin County; Theresa, who resides with her brother John; Thomas, subject of this sketch; Rufus, a retired farmer now living in Durand; Nat, who is operating the old home farm in Pepin County; and Mary, now Mrs. John Schober of Pierce County. Thomas Wittig was reared and educated in Pepin County and remained at home with his parents until 16 years of age. He then went to work in the Tarrant creamery in Bear Creek Valley, Pepin County, and remained there several years, or until the fall of 1894, during which time he learned some of the practical business of butter making. To increase his knowledge, he entered the University of Wisconsin at Madison, and there took a three months' dairy course, at the end of which period he went to Pittsburg, Penn., where he Then he returned to Pepin County, Wis., and in January, 1897, spent six months. became butter maker and manager for the Rusk Creamery Co., at Rusk, Dunn County, a position that he held continuously for seven years. During the winter of 1902 he took a special course in butter making at the Iowa State University at Ames, Iowa. For the next six and a half years he occupied a similar position with the Downsville Cooperative Creamery, but in the fall of 1910 returned to Rusk, where he operated the creamery until the spring of 1912. In the meanwhile he had contemplated establishing himself on a farm, and had taken the first step with that object in view, having in the fall of 1903 bought 80 acres of land in Section 15; also 40 acres in Section 14 and another 80 acres in Section 15, making a fine farm of 200 acres, the latter 80-acre tract being known as the A. C. Sherburne farm. In March, 1912, he gave up his connection with the creamery business and, settling on his farm, proceeded to build up a dairy business, and he has continued in that line of enterprise, today having a herd of 45 pure bred Holstein cattle. He is also somewhat extensively engaged in raising pure bred Poland-China hogs. He is a member of the county and national Holstein-Freisian associations and has often served as one of the judges on butter at the Dunn County fair. During his career as butter maker and creamery man he sent samples of his product a number of times to fairs and agricultural exhibitions and won his share of laurels. He has also been a director of the Rusk Cooperative store since its organization, and has been active in many things tending toward the betterment of his town and county. His fraternal society affiliations are with the Beavers. Mr. Wittig was married in Eau Claire, Wis., Dec. 3, 1903, to Grace Miller, and he and his wife are the parents of two sons: L. Miller, born Oct. 3, 1905, and Lyman J., born July 10, 1907, both . living on the home farm.

Ray Randolph Chamberlain, a farmer and prominent citizen of the town of Wilson, was born in Sparta, Wis., Feb. 8, 1879, son of Thomas Jefferson and Amelia (Ghent) Chamberlain. The father, who was born in Catteraugus County, New York, came west with his parents in 1851, the journey being made with a wagon and team, the former loaded with household goods and driven by a brother of Thomas. Having arrived at Sparta, Monroe County, Wis., they stopped there, and two miles to the north of that city, or village, as it was then, Grandfather Chamberlain bought a farm, which became the family home. There Thomas J. Chamberlain was reared, attending school, and there he resided until he came to Dunn County in 1880, with his family, having in 1878 married Amelia Ghent, a native of Germany. Three years after arriving here he settled permanently on 80 acres of railroad land in Section 7, town of Wilson, he and his family living on the Dan Fuller farm until he had put up a log house. He also put up a log barn with a straw roof. At that time there were no roads in this section, and the woods were so dense that he had to cut a way through the timber so that he could drive in with his wagon. In course of time he cleared considerably of his land, and also built a house 30 x 30 feet in ground plan, and a barn $34 \ge 50$ feet, besides other buildings. In addition to general farming he conducted a blacksmith's shop on his place. In 1915 he sold the farm and moved with his wife to Ridgeland, where they are now living. After his retirement he purchased an 80-acre tract across the road in Section 8, which he sold to his son Ray R. He and his wife have had three children: Ray Randolph, above mentioned; Grace, wife of L. C. Brown of Ridgeland, and Ameda, wife of A. C. Thorberg of Chetek. Ray Randolph Chamberlain was one year old when he came with his parents to Dunn County, and four years old when they bought their farm in Section 7, town of Wilson. He was reared on the home farm, attending rural school, and became his father's assistant, remaining at home until 1900 in that capacity, and then buying 25 acres of adjacent land on which he built a house for himself, and the land of which he cultivated, also operating the home farm until 1915. He then bought the 80 acres in Section 8, previously mentioned as having been purchased by his father, and on this place he has since been engaged in general farming and dairying with good results. He has erected a four-room frame house, a barn and other buildings. His cattle are Holsteins and he raises Duroc-Jersev hogs. Mr. Chamberlain is a stockholder in the Farmers store at Bloomer, the Prairie Farm, Ridgeland & Dallas Telephone Co., and the Ridgeland Cooperative Creamery Co. At different times he has performed creditable public service, his first experience in this direction being as town clerk, to which office he was elected in 1909 and in which he served six years. In 1915 he was elected chairman of the town board, and served two terms as such, at the same time being a member of the county board, and since 1918 he has been treasurer of the town of Mr. Chamberlain was married in Menomonie, on Feb. 22, 1905, to Ella Wilson. Rear, daughter of Thomas and Carrie (Larson) Rear. He and his wife are the parents of four children, Esther, Ethel, Le Roy and Gordon. In October, 1922, Mrs. Chamberlain was appointed clerk of the town of Wilson, and in 1923 was elected and in 1924 re-elected to the same office. Her father, Thomas Rear, was born in Dane County, Wisconsin, and her mother in Vernon County, (both) being of Norwegian parentage or ancestry. The latter, Carrie Larson, came with her parents to Running Valley and she and Mr. Rear were married in Colfax. In 1900 he bought a farm in Sections 21 and 22, town of Wilson, on which he erected barns, a granary and other buildings, carrying on the farm until his death on Feb. 4, 1912. He had been a widower for nearly eight years, his wife having passed away in Feb. Of their seven children, four are now living, Will, Jennie, Cora and Ella, 26, 1904. those deceased being Ella, Nellie and Sadie. Jennie is the wife of Arthur Ebling of the town of Wilson; Cora married Clyde Call of Marinette, Wis., where she resides

William M. Clough, a prominent citizen of Boyceville, manager of the Boyceville Telephone Co., was born Feb. 25, 1859, in that extreme southern part of Illinois known as Egypt, owing to the fact that the city of Cairo is located in it. His parents were Daniel W. and Lavina Ann (Baker) Clough, the father a native of Maine and the mother of Illinois. Daniel W. Clough came west when young and he and his wife were married in Illinois. At the out-break of the Civil War he enlisted to fight for the Union, becoming a member of the 21st Illinois Regiment, of which Ulysses S. Grant, afterwards general, was then colonel. He was wounded in battle during the first year of the war and discharged. After his recovery he enlisted in the navy, but disability from the effects of his wound caused his discharge from that branch of the service also. In 1865 he came to Wisconsin and located at Kilbourn, Columbia County, near which place he did farming and bought livestock, being thus engaged until 1879. In that year he came to Dunn County, driving here with an ox team and settling in the town of New Haven, where he bought a piece of railroad land and there began the building of a home by erecting a log house and barn. For years thereafter he and his family were living under pioneer conditions, he carrying the necessary supplies packed on his back from Menomonie. There in time he built up a good farm, residing on it for over 30 years, at the end of which time, in 1910 he sold it and took up his residence in Boyceville, where he spent the rest of his life retired from active work. He died Aug. 4, 1918. His wife, who survived him, resided in Boyceville with her son Theron, until her death on Oct. 21, 1924. Daniel W. Clough was a good citizen of his town, in the early days helping new settlers and taking part in the building of roads and schools. He served for many years on the town and county boards and also on the school board. He and his wife had ten children, namely: William M., the direct subject of this sketch; Benjamin B., a farmer in the town of New Haven; John, of North Dakota; Arthur L., of Seattle, Wash.; Warren, of Tacoma, Wash.; Theron and Walter, who operate the Ford garage in Boyceville; Peter, of North Dakota; Blakely, who died in Illinois; and Myrtle, who died at the age of 14 years. William M. Clough was educated in Kilbourn City and as a young man worked with and for his father on drives and in the woods. In 1879 he came to Dunn County with his parents, with whom he remained until he was 22 years old. In 1881 he bought 80 acres of wild land in Section 9, town of Tiffany and for three years subsequently was engaged in its improvement, residing on it. Then selling it, he bought another tract in Section 23. of the same town. In 1882 Mr. Clough went to Edmonds County, South Dakota, and pre-empted 160 acres of land, and the next seven years of his life were spent in its improvement. Then returning to Dunn County, he settled on his farm in the town of Tiffany, where he made his home until 1904, during that period homesteading 160 acres in St. Louis County, Minnesota, which he sold after he had proved it up. In 1904 he rented out his farm in the town of Tiffanv and came to Boyceville. Here he bought and sold livestock for 12 years. In 1917 he also went into the hardware business with his son-in-law, Jesse Culp, whose interest was purchased later by Mr. Clough's brother Walter, the two brothers conducting the business until the Boyceville Store Co. was organized in 1914, with William M. Clough as president, Walter Clough as vice president and Andrew J. Ajer as secre-tary and manager. William M. has since sold a part of his interest in the company, but is still acting president. He sold his farm to his son Calvin and has sold Texas land for several years. He served as chairman of the town of Tiffany for seven years and helped to organize the village of Boyceville, which he is now serving as president. His fraternal affiliations are with the Odd Fellows and the Modern Woodmen of America, the last mentioned of which he served as venerable counsel. Mr. Clough was married Jan. 6, 1882, in the town of New Haven Dunn County, to Cora L. Applebye, daughter of Zelotis and Lorenda (Goodrich) Applebye. Her parents, who settled in the town of Tiffany, Dunn County, in 1880, spent the rest of their lives there, being now deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Clough have four children: Pearl, now Mrs. Jesse Culp, of Dickenson, N. D.; Hazel M., who is Mrs. Guy M. Owens of McAllen, Texas; Sylvia, who is Mrs. Julius Ajer of Boyceville; and Calvin now proprietor of the old home farm in the town of Tiffany. Mr. Clough became manager of the Boyceville Telephone Co. in July, 1919.

Christian A. Lee, a retired farmer residing in Ridgeland, who came to America half a century ago and was for a number of years closely connected with governmental affairs in the town of Wilson, was born at Gusdal in Gudbransdalen, Norway, Sept. 22, 1856, son of Amund and Ingeborg Lee. The parents were farming people who came to the United States in 1884 to make their home with their sons, Ole and Christian. They are now deceased. Of the eight children in the family, Those deceased are Gunder, Simon, two are now living, Christian and Andrew. Bertha, Carrie, Sina and Ole. Christian A. Lee was reared and educated in his native land and subsequently worked on farms there until the age of 19. Then in 1875 he came to the United States, locating at St. Charles, Minn., where he remained for a year. In 1876 he came to Dunn County, Wisconsin, and began farming for himself, buying 80 acres of railroad land in Section 23, Township 31 North of Range 11 West, or what is now the town of Wilson, though at that time it was part of the town of Sheridan. Later he bought 40 acres more, this giving him a farm of 120 acres, and still later he bought an additional 80-acre tract. His land was covered with brush and there were no buildings. To start things moving Mr. Lee built a small frame house and a barn, the latter being a dug-out in the side of a hill and capped by a straw roof. He used both oxen and horses in his farm work, cleared and broke his land, and later erected another frame house and other buildings. Afterwards he sold 80 acres to his son Simon, who is now patrolman on State Highwav No. 25. He carried on general farming and dairying until 1914, in which year he retired and moved to Ridgeland. In 1906 he had opened a hardware store in Ridgeland, which he conducted until 1909, when he was burned out and returned to his farm, where he spent the next five years. Since 1914 the farm has been rented to one of his sons. Mr. Lee served as supervisor or county commissioner for many years, representing what is now the town of Wilson, which town he took an active part in having set off and organized. For a number of years he was chairman of the board, and as such a member of the county board. He also served many years as clerk of the school board of his district. As one of the leading citizens of his town for so long a period, he is widely known and his personal record is one that commands respect. It is 44 years that Mr. Lee entered upon the domestic period of his life, being married in 1880, to Gunhild A. Gregorson, daughter of Peter and Signa Gregorson. Her parents, who came to this country from Norway at an early date took a homestead in the town of Sand Creek, Dunn County. They are now deceased, as also is their daughter, Mrs. Lee, who passed away in 1902, after a married life of about 22 years. She had been the mother of seven children, six of whom are now living, namely: Edmund, Peter, Simon, Ingeborg, Clarence and Gunda, the one deceased being Sina. Ingeborg married George Stecker, a railroad man now working on the "Soo" line out of Ridgeland. Peter and Clarence were in the United States' service in the war, Peter entering the army in 1917. He served in France in the railroad department and was discharged in 1919. Clarence, who entered the navy, was stationed at Puget Sound, where he remained until his discharge in the same year, 1919.

Otto Olson, a well known and respected citizen of the town of Wilson, and proprietor of a farm in Section 13, was born in Norway, April 22, 1856, son of Ole and The father, a farmer, died in Norway, and his wife came to the United Mary Olson. States and settled in Minnesota. She died at Pelican Rapids, that state. Of their seven children, five are now living: Otto, Hannah, Lena, Olenna and Arne. Hannah, who married a Mr. Peterson, lives in Spokane, Wash. Otto Olson was reared in Norway and worked on farms there until he came to the United States in 1880. He first settled in Eau Claire, where he spent four years, working in sawmills in summer and in the woods in winter. At the end of that time he came to Dunn County, driving a mule team, and took a homestead of 160 acres in Sections 12 and 13, town of Wilson, making his home with Arne Larson until he had built a log house, and he also built a log barn with a straw roof, carrying the logs on his shoulders. The land was wild and covered with brush and he cleared and broke it with oxen. He also broke land for his neighbors as well as for himself, using seven ox teams. In early days it was quite a common circumstance for him to walk to Eau Claire and back. After breaking sufficient land he started farming, continuing his work in the woods in winter until altogether he had spent ten winters that way. After he had made considerable progress he built a frame house and two silos, besides other buildings. He also bought more land, including 280 acres from Oscar Larson, and now has 480 acres, of which about 300 are under the plow. He carries on general farming and dairying, having 30 head of Holstein grade cattle, and raising Duroc-Jersey hogs. When he first settled here he and his family used to do most of their trading at Sand Creek, traveling back and forth over Knapp, Stout & Co.'s tote road. Mr. Olson was married in Norway, in 1879, to Olea Evenson, who was born Feb. 5, 1859, daughter of Iver and Thea Hoyland. Her parents lived and died in Norway. Of the six children in the Hoyland family, two, Thomas and Thea, are now dead. The four living are: Olea, now Mrs. Otto Olson; Julius of Minneapolis; Andrew, of Hay Creek, and Martha, residing in Norway. Mr. and Mrs. Olson have had eight children, one of whom, Olive, is deceased. The others are, Thomas, Alfred, Oscar, Anna, Ingman, Ole and George. Anna married Will McNear of Eau Claire, Wis.; Thomas lives in Sand Creek; Oscar and Ingman in Eau Claire, and the others on the home farm. On July 6, 1918, Alfred was drafted into the United States' service, being assigned to the infantry. He trained at Camp Hancock, Georgia, and went overseas with the 82d Division, serving six months there and being discharged June 20, 1919. Ingman, who was drafted July 10, 1918, trained at Camp Hancock, Georgia, with displacement units, and was assigned to a machine gun company. His service was in this country and he was discharged on the close of the war.

John Peter Sipple, in former years an active farmer in the town of Spring Brook, where he did good work along the lines of agricultural improvement, but who passed away some years ago, was born in the state of Pennsylvania, Sept. 17, 1854, son of Conrad and Catherine Sipple. It was in 1862 that he accompanied his parents to Dunn County, Wisconsin, the family locating on a farm, or tract of land, in the town of Spring Brook. There John Peter attended school and grew to manhood, assisting his parents in the development of their farm. This was a hard task for a young boy, as the land was wild and had to be cleared of stumps and brush. After remaining on the home place until he was 22 years old, he bought a farm of 120 acres near it and began his career as an independent farmer; about the same time he got married. His place had but a poor set of buildings on it, but he made them do for some eight years, at the end of which time he was able to put up better ones, which, indeed, were first class. He had also proceeded far with the cultivation of his land, and on that farm he and his family resided until 1892, in which year he sold it, buying an improved farm of 215 acres in the same town and not far from Moving to his new purchase, he continued his agricultural operations the first. and also the work of improvement, keeping busy in this way for some 16 years, when on March 18, 1908, he was called away by death. His work had been well done and he had proved himself a live factor in the agricultural development of Dunn County, helping to make it what it is today. Mr. Sipple's marriage, briefly referred to above, took place on March 21, 1877, and united him with Emma Vonderheiden, who was born in Chippewa County, Wis., Jan. 11, 1859, daughter of William and Henrietta (Fleuk) Vonderheiden. Her parents were natives of Germany, who came to America when young people and were married in St. Louis, Mo., in 1856. immediately afterwards settling in Chippewa County, Wisconsin, where they spent the rest of their lives. To Mr. and Mrs. Sipple ten children were born, namely, Lena, William, Fred, Amanda, Walter, Melvin, Phila, Merle, Edna and Elmer, of whom the further record is briefly as follows: Lena, who married John Kraft, is now deceased; she left three children, Laneta, Earl and Viola. William married Eliza Sheaier, who died leaving two children, Raymond and Gladys. William married secondly, Mary Bufton, by whom he has two children, Florence and Helen. Fred, who is now conducting the old home farm, married Lena Miller and has three children, Clarence, Earl and Dorothy. Amanda is now Mrs. George Kothlow and the mother of four children, Llovd, Lawrence, Alvera and Luverne. Walter met an accidental death, being killed by a threshing-machine. Melvin married Della Wallace and has two children, Gilbert and Marion. Faila is the wife of Arnold Quilling and has two children, Marvin and Doris. Merle married Martin Peterson and has two children, James and Robert. Edna is now Mrs. Arthur Medtlie and has three children, Marlis, Janet and Arthur. Elmer, a graduate of the Menomonie High School and the Stout Institute, is an instructor in manual training at Minnetka, Illinois. Mrs. Sipple is a member of the Evangelical Church and also of its Ladies' Aid Society. She has a good social standing, with a wide circle of friends and acquaintances.

Captain William Wilson, one of the founders of Menomonie, and the pioneer who took the initial steps in the organization of the great lumber concern afterwards known as The Knapp, Stout & Co. Company, was born at Pine Creek, Clinton County, Penn., on Feb. 9, 1807, the son of Martin H. and Mary (Lambert) Wilson. Both parents were born in England, Martin H. Wilson in Leeds, Yorkshire, and Mary Lambert in Berkshire. William Wilson early became interested in farming and lumbering and for a while was a steamboat pilot on the west branch of the Susquehanna River in his native state. In 1827 he was married to Maria Blair, daughter of Thomas and Eliza Blair of Bellefonte, Penn. With his wife and two children he came west in 1836, making the journey in a covered wagon. Though a Pennsylvanian, he had all a Yankee's shrewdness in business matters, perhaps having inherited it from his Yorkshire forbears, and it is said that on his journey west he lost no opportunity of effecting a horse trade; it is not recorded that in any instance he got the worst of it. The journey ended at Fort Madison, Iowa, where he settled, and where he remained for some ten years, during which time he engaged in a number of enterprises. He owned a hotel and livery and engaged in lumbering, farming and contracting. He constructed a part of the Illinois canal and operated a stage line between Burlington and Keokuk, Iowa. In local affairs he took an active part and served as justice of the peace. He also became interested in steamboat ventures and had command of a Mississippi River packet, thus acquiring his title of Captain. The steamboat venture, however, was unfortunate and involved him in financial disasters. While living at Fort Madison he heard trappers and other wanderers talk of the vast pine forests in Wisconsin and Minnesota, which started in his mind a new train of thought. He immediately foresaw the wonderful development which was sure to come to the Northwest and determined to make a trip into the pine regions to investigate conditions for himself. Early in 1845, therefore, he came to this region and thoroughly examined the Chippewa and Menomonie territory. With his wide experience as a riverman, lumberman and business man, together with that faculty of mind which is designated as "vision," he readily comprehended the vast resources, wealth and future possibilities these lands embraced, if properly handled, and he returned to Fort Madison full of enthusiasm and determined to cast his lot in these pine forests. He interviewed John H. Knapp, a prosperous business man of that place, and interested him in a plan to develop the Menomonie country. An interest was purchased in a little sawmill on the present site of Menomonie, and a partnership agreement made between Mr. Wilson and Mr. Knapp, which in time resulted in the famous Knapp, Stout & Co. Company. From the beginning Captain Wilson was the active and moving force in this concern, but owing to the involved condition of his finances in those early days, he remained the silent partner, and his name was never attached to the firm with which he was so vitally and importantly connected. His first wife Maria had died at Fort Madison, Icwa, in 1839, and he was married at that place in 1840, to Angeline Hale, who was born at Piqua, Ohio, Jan. 14, 1822, daughter of Thomas and Jane Hale. With her and four children—Thomas B., Eliza T., Martin and Jane H.—he arrived in Menomonie to make his permanent residence here, on July 4, 1846, the Nation's holiday. He moved into a log house and at once started operations. This was the real beginning of Menomonie. To the task of engineering those influences which were to make the region for half a century one of the foremost lumbering areas of the world, and afterward one of the most prosperous farming and dairying regions of the United States, Captain Wilson brought a mind, soul, body, temperament and experience well suited to the tremendous duties which were to devolve upon him. In body he was rugged and virile, a man of ceaseless activity, untiring energy and unflagging enthusiasm, with unlimited capacities for physical and mental work, and one whom no hardship of forest or stream could ever daunt. In mind he was of quick decision, indomitable courage both physical and moral, keen business acumen and remarkable foresight. In temperament he was always cheerful and optimistic, but most emphatic in his likes and dislikes. In soul he was of strong faith and of a decided religious belief. As a leader of men he was just, and fortunate in those qualities that win loyalty, fidelity and service. As a citizen he labored ever for those things which he believed were for the best interests of his fellow men. As a host his reputation for hospitality was far famed. From the first he announced his faith in this region and his firm determination to stay here. He declared that the Red Cedar River was one of the most beautiful streams he had ever seen, and as his eye swept the natural arena which is now Menomonie he envisioned its splendid possibilities as an important center of the great lumber industry and as the site of a prosperous community that should long endure. Beginning with his arrival on that doubly historic day, July 4, 1846, and continuing until his death on Sept. 4, 1892, his work and influence were interwoven into the history of Menomonie, Dunn County, and the Knapp-Stout activities. Without fear, whether of pioneer hardships, Indian outbreaks, fire or flood, or even of ridicule, he went straight forward on his appointed task and laid it down but with his life. His good wife shared his courage and accepted her full share of work and responsibility. She acted the part of a true mother to her two step-children, and shed her gracious influence on every phase of life which her husband's interests touched. Between them there existed a strong sympathy founded upon mutual love and respect that lasted until they were separated by death. It was Captain Wilson who pre-empted the site of Menomonie and later platted the village. In 1857 he was a member of the state senate, and when Menomonie was incorporated he became its first mayor. He established the first church and the first school by advertising for a teacher and preacher and securing the Rev. Joshua Pittman to act in those capacities. As neither church nor school activities were pursued on Saturdays, Captain Wilson, in order that Mr. Pittman might not be idle on that day, assigned him the task of piling shingles. He bought the material for the publishing of the "Dunn County Lumberman," the first newspaper in this region, and persuaded Charles S. Bundy to come here as its editor. He was one of the founders of the First Baptist Church, which stood where now stands the Stout Gymnasium, and also the chapel on Rusk Prairie, four miles out, which is still standing and is now used as a schoolhouse. To the church in town he gave a pipe organ and he made many liberal donations to the denomination. These were but some of his many personal benefactions, in addition to those he shared with his partners. In fact for nearly half a century there were few meritorious movements or causes in the community in which he did not have a generous share. Infrequent indeed were the meals when the long-length dining-table in the Wilson home was not surrounded by guests. Indigent clergymen found the home a refuge and asy-People of distinction made their eager way to the door. Susan B. Anthony lum. and Elizabeth Cady Stanton were welcome guests, the former on three different occasions, as Mr. and Mrs. Wilson and Eliza T., were early believers in what were then called "Woman's Rights." Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Tilton, Wong Chang Foo and Ole Bull were a few of the many other people of note and culture who enjoyed the peaceful, friendly atmosphere of this pioneer home. Thus with busy work and useful activities, with pleasant intercourse with his fellow men, the years moved swiftly on. In the greatest period of the changing of the Northwest from a forest to a wonderful sweep of rich agricultural lands dotted with prosperous cities and villages, Captain Wilson lived well his life, meeting four-square every obligation that a man could fulfil, and in 1892 he was laid to rest amid the scenes he loved so well, leaving the further development in the hands of those for whom he had so ably led the way. His wife Angeline had passed on before him, having died in Menom-The children of Captain Wilson's first marriage, to Maria onie, on Dec. 23, 1885. Blair, were: Thomas Blair Wilson, born March 5, 1832, at Monroeton, Penn., who died March 26, 1898, at Menomonie; and Eliza Thompson Wilson, born April 1, 1834, who died at Eau Claire, Oct. 19, 1902. The latter's interest in the cause of "Woman's Rights," already casually mentioned, brought her into contact, and made her personally acquainted with, many of the leaders of that movement. In Civil War days she also showed her enthusiasm for the cause of the Union, and, indeed, accompanied a regiment to the front, like a French vivandiere, though not in the supply department, but to help encourage and cheer up the soldiers, and add a woman's refining influence and ready sympathy to the other measures taken for their welfare. Later she showed practical business ability in the successful operation of a mill in the town of Spring Brook, Dunn County. Of Captain Wilson's second marriage, to Angeline Hale, were born eight children, namely: Martin Wilson, born Jan. 4, 1842, who died Jan. 2, 1924; Jane Hale Wilson (Mrs. G. W. LaPointe, Sr.); Mary A. Wilson (Mrs. F. J. McLean), born Dec. 13, 1847, who died Jan. 7, 1913; William Wilson, born Sept. 2, 1852, who died Nov. 26, 1901; Elizabeth Epley Wilson, who died when about two years old; Ella Kellogg Wilson (Mrs. W. L. Mead), born July 15, 1858, who died March 14, 1910; Angeline Wilson (Mrs. James H. Stout), and Sarah Hale Wilson (Mrs. F. K. Harris).

Thomas Blair Wilson, an active citizen of Menomonie for many years, was born in Monroeton, Penn., March 5, 1832, the son of Captain William and Maria (Blair)

Wilson, with whom he came to Iowa, in 1836, and to Menomonie, in 1846. Two years later he joined the government survey crew, and with the official surveyors traveled over the vast pine regions in the development of which he was later to have so important a part. In 1854 he was admitted as a member of Knapp-Stout & Co., and in the fall of 1858, immediately after his marriage he went to Read's Landing, in Minnesota, to look after the company interests there. Under the firm name of T. B. Wilson & Co., he had charge of the company holdings at Read's Landing and supervised the rafting operations from that point to Dubuque Iowa. For nearly two decades he was a dominant factor in the life of the busy little village on Lake Pepin. He ably supervised the interests of his company, he maintained a hospitable home, he served as postmaster and in other official capacities, was superintendent of the Union Sunday school, and was especially active in young people's work. He was a close friend of Bishop Henry B. Whipple, missionary to the Indians, whom he said was the bravest man he ever knew, and the Bishop often visited the cheery home and was much interested in the merry group of growing Wilson children. In 1874 Mr. Wilson came back to Menomonie to assist his father and in 1878 became secretary of the newly incorporated Knapp, Stout & Co. Company, which office he held continuously until his death, and being in active charge of the operations at Menomonie, and traveling through the territory which embraced the vast holdings of the company and its associated organizations. He had inherited many of the admirable qualities of his father and mother, and was an important factor in the growth of the county and company. Unassuming and retiring, he was a keen business man, a good citizen and companion and an ideal family man. His benefactions were many, but much of his charity and generosity was anonymous, as he especially disliked ostentation and display. He died March 26, 1898, his death being almost coincident with the diminution of the lumbering operations in which he had so important a share. Thomas Blair Wilson was married on Oct. 12, 1858, at Jersey Shore, Penn., to Julia Frances Epley, daughter of Peter and Amelia Epley. She was born at Pine Creek, Lycoming County, Penn., on March 8, 1836, and died in Menomonie, on Nov. 20, 1911. The children of on March 8, 1836, and died in Menomonie, on Nov. 20, 1911. Thomas Blair and Julia Frances (Epley) Wilson are: Peter Epley Wilson, born Aug 1, 1859, who died Dec. 29, 1913; James Fountain Wilson, born June 20, 1863; Thomas Blair Wilson, Jr., born Sept. 30, 1865; Paul Carleton Wilson, born Feb. 16, 1869; Thaddeus Wilson, born Feb. 18, 1872, who died in March, 1874; and Philip Aitkin Wilson, born Nov. 15, 1874.

John Holly Knapp, son of Gen. John H. Knapp, was born at Elmira, N. Y., March 29, 1825. His father was a man of remarkable energy, tact and business ability-one of the pioneers of internal improvements in New York. He was one of the original projectors of the Chemung canal and secured the charter for, and was one of the constructors and proprietors of the Blossburgh and Corning railroad, one of the first successful railway enterprises in this country. Financial embarassment of and disaster to some of his business associates, involved him in serious financial reverses in 1834, and in 1835 he gathered up the remnant of what had been a large fortune, and started for the far west. He crossed the Mississippi River at a point where now stands the city of Fort Madison, Iowa, and settled at that place on what was known then as the "Black Hawk purchase"—then a part of Michigan territory. It was there amid the western wilds that the childhood and youth of Mr. Knapp was spent, attending school and assisting his father in his business. When 20 years old he went east and entered a collegiate institute at New Haven, Connecticut, where he remained during one school year. With the exception of a subsequent course at a business college, this ended his school days, yet in a true sense he was a thorough scholar and a man of varied and high culture. The scenes and vicissitudes incident to a pioneer's life in a new country, were well-fitted to develop and bring out those qualities of mind and heart that contributed so largely toward making him what he was as a friend, citizen and a christian gentleman. Fond of nature, a lover of the romantic and beautiful-the undulating billowy expanse of the western prairies, and the majestic sweep of the "Father of Waters" were to him a perpetual inspiration and objects of thought. He, in early youth, became acquainted with the celebrated Indian chief Black Hawk, and heard from him the story of the white man's injustice to his race and their privations and sufferings. He familiarized himself with the Sac language and in early boyhood frequently saw the matchless orator and warrior chief Keokuk, the Cicero of the western tribes. He knew Joseph Smith the great apostle of Mormonism, and many times visited the Mormon settlement and temple at Nauvoo, Illinois; and although he had no confidence, in, or respect for the leaders or their religion, yet he ever characterized the treatment of them by the settlers and authorities as unjustifiable and brutal. It was the thought and purpose of his youth and manhood-that he would spend the closing years of his life at Fort Madison, and with that object in view he early secured a beautiful property on a plateau, overlooking woodland, prairie, city and river; but he was not permitted to realize this fond hope. In June, 1846, with Captain William Wilson, he left Iowa for what is now Menomonie, Wisconsin, to commence that career in business which was marked with a degree of success that has rarely been equaled in the Northwest. They purchased of David Black a half interest in a sawmill and fixtures. Mr. Black dying soon afterwards, they purchased the other half and in July, of the same year, the firm of J. H. Knapp & Co. was formed and commenced business in the pineries of the Chippewa Valley, and at towns along the upper Mississippi River. The history of the development. growth and prosperity of the industries that they then and there inaugurated comprise no small portion of the history of the material resources, intellectual and moral force and progress of the Chippewa Valley. Commencing with a small sawmill, with a single saw, without wagons, wagon roads, railroads or steamboat communication for travel, without shops or stores, without schools or schoolhouses, with no better means for the transportation of supplies and clothing than a keel boat, and with a purchasing market no nearer than Prairie du Chien, nearly 200 miles away, their little plant grew. In a few years Captain Andrew Tainter's physical and mental powers were added, and as the business enlarged and became more diversified, more capital and resources were needed, and a little later on H. L. Stout, of Dubuque, Iowa, purchased an interest and became a member of the firm, and its name was changed to that of "Knapp, Stout & Company." The financial depression of 1856 and 1857, the loss of the mill by fire, their labors and struggle to surmount difficulties and threatened disaster,-their triumph and continued success thereafter-is so interwoven with the labor and lives of each of the men who composed that firm, that it is difficult to speak of any one without referring to all. Mr. Knapp at first looked after the running of lumber to market, selling it and securing the pay, and purchasing merchandise and supplies, but after a few years he had more particularly in charge the Company's large merchandising business at Menomonie and other points, and co-operated with others in looking after the finances of the firm. In his life time their business of manufacturing lumber increased from a few hundred thousand feet, to about one hundred million feet a year, and it has been reported by the Lumbermen's journals that the annual product of the Company's manufacture for several years "exceeded that of any one firm or corporation in the world." Like many others when he entered on his business venture here, it was with the purpose of accumulating a competence and returning to his former home. He had no just conception of the fertility of the soilthe healthfulness of the climate-the resources of the country, and in this he but shared with other pioneers in the erroneous impression and judgment entertained concerning northern Wisconsin. It is but justice to him to say, that at the time of his decease, few men had a better knowledge or more true appreciation of the wealth, resources and possibilities of northern Wisconsin than he. In those early days, it was to him a pleasure and much prized recreation to lay aside the cares and responsibilities incident to his labors and equipped with fishing rod, or gun-a sack with flour or bread in one end of it, and a piece of raw pork in the other-to set out on foot through woods or over prairie in quest of wild game, or some trout brook. Often, when on such excursions, he would remain over night where the shadows of night first fell upon him, sleeping under some forest tree, or upon some grassy knoll by the stream. He was not only a lover of such recreation, but said the excitement and abandon of the hunter's and fisherman's life at times had a peculiar attraction and charm. What is known as Little Elk Creek was one of his favorite trout streams and he frequently repaired to its banks after a day's work and fished until twilight, sleeping on its banks at night and filling his basket at early morning. He sometimes went as far as Rush River, Pierce County, on these fishing excursions. The hills and bluffs west of Irving Creek and the Eau Galle woods were his favorite hunting grounds in those days. In 1869, accompanied by his son Henry E. Knapp, he visited Europe, hoping to secure relief, if not a cure of the disease that had begun to affect him, and which baffled all the skill of the most eminent physicians of Europe and America and at last caused his death. During his sojourn in Europe, he traveled extensively in England, France, Germany and Italy. The letters he wrote home to his family and friends, were not only models of epistolary correspondence, but exhibited evidence of such close and accurate observation, discrimination and descriptive powers as to attract attention, and call forth high commendation from those who read them; some of them were published in the News and were re-published in other journals with favorable comment. In 1878 the business of the firm of Knapp, Stout & Company had become so extensive-with ramifications and departments in four different states-with the vicissitudes of fortune incident to great business enterprises, and the danger of death to the members so apparent that it was deemed expedient to organize the firm into a corporation. At the annual meeting of the firm in 1878, steps were taken in that direction and Mr. Knapp was elected a director and president of the new corporation which assumed the name of "The Knapp, Stout & Co. Company." He held that office and discharged its duties with great credit to himself and the satisfaction of his associates, until the annual meeting in February, 1886, when on account of failing health he tendered his resignation as president and declined a re-election. Eighty years have passed since William Wilson returned to Fort Madison from his exploration of the Chippewa Valley, and enlisted Mr. Knapp in his contemplated business undertaking in the pineries of the Northwest. Seventy-nine years ago they commenced business together here, and their association in business was doubtless longer than that of any other two men who have lived in the Chippewa Valley-almost half a More than 72 years ago the co-partnership known as Knapp, centurv. Stout & Company, was formed, and continued in business until 1878, and was then, (as we have already said) changed to a corporation embracing all the members of the old firm. Probably no other business institution of such magnitude in the Northwest has continued so long in business without serious reverses or death among the members. More remarkable than all else, is the fact that with such large and diversified enterprises-with so many departments and branch business locations, no differences or contentions ever arose to weaken their effectiveness and success. That men with such business push and firmness and such decision of character should amicably adjust any and all antagonism of opinions and judgment (if there ever were any) is one of the highest and best tributes that could be paid to them. It is not necessary to make any discrimination between them in this regard. It is enough to say that Mr. Knapp recognized and acted upon the important fact that unity of endeavor and co-operation were essential to success-and to that end he ever sustained cordial and friendly relations with all his business associates. Naturally conservative, he was made more so by a close observation of the business methods and mistakes of others, and this may have led him to devote much time and energy to minor details of great business enterprises, and attempt to compass all their final results. He was disposed to content himself with what was reasonably certain rather than venture where there was a chance or probability of a great gain with some hazard. With his temperament and convictions, he could not fail to make "common cause with the oppressed;" hence he, in early life became identified with the anti-slavery movement, and subsequently with the Republican party Thoroughly informed in politics and political economy, his observation and experience made him in his mature and last years an earnest and enthusiastic friend and advocate of the doctrine of "Protection to American Industries." It was not simply a personal interest, for he looked beyond the individual to the nation---to national life and prosperity. He was in no sense a politician, and office-holding had no fascinations for him. He was made a presidential elector in 1876, but with the exception of being elected to municipal office for one or two terms, he held no political office and declined all political preferment. He took a deep interest in the development of northwest Wisconsin, and at an early day in its history devoted of his time and money freely to its accomplishment. Largely, if not mainly, through his own personal interviews at the East and pecuniary aid the late D. A. Baldwin was induced to examine the route of the "Tomah and Lake St. Croix," subsequently the West Wisconsin railway. He was not estentatious. He never paraded his benefactions before the public, yet quietly time and time again did he gladden with substantial aid the hearts of those in need. In some instances the benefactions were quite large sums of money, to persons distant from his home, or to educational, religious or charitable institutions. Of him it may be truly saidhe shrank from all imposture, false pretension and deceit. He never stabbed by work or deed in the dark. He took no advantage of the weakness of others; he was ever modest in the assertion and exh[•]bition of his own merit. In the maintenance or defense of what he believed to be right, he was zealous, brave and constant. He was frank and candid, and on his work absolute reliance was reposed. He believed that honor and truth are not mere abstractions but among the highest and grandest realities upon which men found their surest reliance, noblest purposes and greatest happiness. Of pleasing manners, animated by noble, but honest impulses and aspirations, he had just those endowments of mind and heart, that fitted him for a life of promise, and a useful and honorable career. His memory was tenacious and his power of recalling men, localities and events was remarkable; this with his excellent discipline of mind and gentle humor rendered his conversation attractive and entertaining. In his own home, surrounded by his family he was the center of interest, confidence and love; among his neighbors and friends--his integrity of purpose-helpfulness and christian virtues won for him their good opinion and respect. He was an earnest and sincere christian-a member of the Congregational church and a liberal supporter of educational, charitable and religious institutions. It was his strong religious convictions-his unwavering faith and trust in an infinite and all-wise Father and a Divine Redeemer that more than all else nerved and sustained him during all the years of his sickness and suffering. No thoughtful person could have been with him during the last four years of his life and witnessed his cheerfulness, serenity and resignation as in darkness he carriec his load of pain without a murmur, without being impressed that "here is an example of patient suffering, christian fortitude, and an undimmed spiritual vision such as the world has seldom seen." The world freights us with burdens and cares and many of us bear them at best with feelings of disappointment or indifference. To such, life has no romances or grand realization and they plod through a cold, unsympathetic world heavy laden with sorrow, often times longing for the rest of the last silence, or to "touch elbows" with glad souls beyond. To John H. Knapp, the universe was a system of adjustments and balances-a universe where honest labor in the end will receive its reward—where patient endurance of ills brings a priceless boon-where infirmity cheerfully awaits the just compensation of the life hereafter, and where eternal laws in their silent majesty are enforcing order, restoring chaos to harmony and bring good out of evil. To him, the great mission of this life was to reverently, and righteously build a character worthily fitted for the life hereafter. This world was to him a grand world, and yet a sad and weary world. A wondrous mosaic of care and toil-of light and shadow-of laughter and tears-wondrous in its bitterness-wondrous too in the height and grandeur of its success. He believed that as "plant and pebble goes attended by its shadow—as the rolling stone leaves its scratches on the mountain, the river, its channel in the soil, the fern and leaf their modest epitah in the coal-the falling drop of water its sculpture in the sandstone, so every act of man inscribes itself in the memories of his fellows and in his own manners and soul." A man with such conceptions of being and doing-of motive and influence-of such trust in Infinite power and goodness-such unwavering faith in Divine purpose and helpfulness-such clear discernment of human duties and responsibilities and such a spiritual vision of the life hereafter, could not fail to be manly, true and just in all the relations of life.

Frank J. McLean, one of the early residents of Menomonie, was born in Cambridge, Washington County, N. Y., Sept. 11, 1837. His great-grandfather, William McLean, a Scotchman, came to America about 1760 from County Antrim, Ireland, and settled in Trenton, N. J., where he died Oct. 2, 1781. His widow with her children John, Francis, William, James, Andrew, Thomas and Jane moved to Washington County, New York in 1784. Francis, the grandfather of the subject of this sketch, lived his entire life in Washington County, near Cambridge. He married Mary Hill and to them seven children were born, William, Alexander, Francis, James, Ebenezer, Martha and Anne. He died Jan. 11, 1831, on his farm in Cambridge. James, the father of our subject, was born in Washington County, New York, Sept. 17, 1803, and died at Nichols, Tioga County, N. Y., Oct. 7, 1877. He too was a farmer. He married Eliza, daughter of Owen and Lydia (Sawyer) Perry, who was born in Newburyport, Mass., June 3, 1813, and who died in Menomonie, Wis., May 31, 1878, while visiting her son. The children born to them were Mary L., Lydia L., Frank J., Rose E. (Mrs. J. F. De Groat), William H. and Martha (wife of Dr. D. H. Decker of Menomonie). Frank J. McLean received his early education in the common schools at Nichols, N. Y., and at the Owego Academy. At the age of 17 he taught winter school at Balls Mills near Williamsport, Penn., and later he taught the village school at his home in Nichols, for three years. He then went into business-general merchandise and grain-in Nichols, the firm name being McLean & Howell. Later he attended the Albany Law School, graduating with the class of 1865. He then returned to Nichols and practiced law in Tioga County for two years. In 1867 he settled in Menomonie and immediately began the practice of law here, in which he continued for many years, for a part of the time under the firm name of F. J. & W. C. McLean. He gradually gave up the practice of law as he became interested in banking and other business. In 1883 he organized the First National Bank of Menomonie and was its president until he sold his interest in 1906. He helped to organize the Bank of Barron, Wis. and was its president for about 20 years. He also helped to organize the First State Bank of Prairie Farm, Wis., and was an active officer in it for many years. He organized the International Bank of Superior, Wis., and was its president for many vears. He also helped to organize and was the first president of the Menomonie Hotel Co., which built the Hotel Royal in 1885. In 1901 he organized the Excelsior Brick Co. of Menomonie and was its president and manager until ill health required him to give up active business. He at one time owned and pub-lished the Menomonie Times. Deeply interested in the schools of Menomonie, he served at one time as president of the board of education. He was a member of the Masonic Fraternity. In politics he was a Democrat. Frank J. McLean was married Oct. 7, 1875, to Mary A. Wilson, daughter of Capt. William and Angeline (Hale) Wilson, at her home in Menomonie. She was the first white child born in Menomonie and the second born in Dunn County. Mr. and Mrs. McLean were both members of the First Congregational Church of Menomonie. He died March 27, 1914, his wife having previously passed away on Jan. 7, 1913. They were the parents of five children, James P., Mary W., (who died in infancy) William Wilson, Francis J. and Marjorie W. In regard to these children the following further data is available. James P. McLean, a resident of Menomonie, is president of the Excelsior Brick Co. of Menomonie. He and Ada E. Lewis of Stevens Point, Wisconsin, were married Aug. 2, 1898. Their daughter Mary W. McLean is now Mrs. Ronald W. Ramsey of Portland, Oregon. William Wilson, a resident of Menomonie, is one of the directors of the Excelsior Brick Co. Francis J. of Menomonie is secretary of the Excelsior Brick Co. Marjorie W. was married Dec. 25, 1919, to J. E. Bahner of McKeesport, Pennsylvania. They now reside at Cleveland, Ohio, and have one child, John M. Bahner.

William C. McLean, who was for many years one of Menomonie's best known and most respected business men, was born in Cambridge, N. Y., April 22, 1849.

It was there that he received his early education and grew to manhood. At the age of 21 he came to Menomonie. In 1873 he entered Wisconsin State University, and, having been graduated from the law class in 1875, he practiced law in Menomonie for five years. In 1883 he helped to organize the First National Bank of Menomonie, of which he was the first cashier, holding that position for 20 years, at the end of which time he retired to give his attention to his growing real estate and loan business. For many years up to the winter of 1916-17, he was president of the Bank of Barron, at Barron, Wis. He died at Buena Vista, near Miami, Fla., whither he had gone to spend the winter, on Jan. 17, 1918. Mr. McLean was a self-made man. He worked his way through the University of Wisconsin and was always proud of the fact that he was graduated with the class that numbered among its members such men as Charles Waldo Bardeen, afterwards for six years a circuit judge in Wisconsin and for five years associate justice of the Supreme Court of Wisconsin; Charles Wilson Bunn, who became general counsel for the Northern Pacific Railway, residing in St. Paul; James Kirwin, who became a member of the Board of Regents of the University of Wisconsin and later for several years associate justice of the Wisconsin Supreme Court: John Collins Sherwin (a Menomonie boy), who became district judge of the 12th District of Iowa, a position that he held for 12 years, later becoming associate justice of the Supreme Court of Iowa; Edward Perrin Vilas, one of the Vilas Brothers, a prominent Wisconsin law firm; and John Bradley Winslow, for three years city attorney at Racine, Wis., for seven years judge of the First Judicial Circuit of Wisconsin, and who at the time of his death was chief justice of the Wisconsin Supreme Court. Other members of his class, also, became able and prominent lawyers in their respective localities of the state. During his whole life Mr. McLean was engaged in doing useful and generous acts for his fellow men. He made some liberal donations, not for self advertisement but because of the worthiness of the cause and because they would confer benefit and happiness on others. Among instances of this kind may be mentioned his bequest of $5,000 to the Memorial library, the income from same to be expended solely in the purchase of books; a liberal donation to the choir of the Congregational Church, in which he sang for many years; and his gift of a flag and flag-pole to William Evans Post, G. A. R., of Menomonie. Though he had not been a soldier, he had an intensely American spirit and the members of the Post made him an honorary member. Mr. McLean was a member of the Clan MacLean, which on many occasions in the past took a prominent part in the shaping of Scottish history. In 1912 the chief of the clan, Sir Fitzhugh Roy Donald MacLean, who lives in Scotland, came into possession of old Duard Castle on the Island of Mull, Scotland, an old fort of the clan MacLean, which for 250 years had been out of their hands. It was a gala occasion. A call had been sent out by the chief to members of the clan in all parts of the world, inviting them to attend the ceremonial, and many did so, including the subject of this sketch, who had the pleasure of meeting and being greeted by the chief. Mr. McLean for many years was an active member of the Old Settlers' Association in which he took a deep interest, for several years being its treasurer. He was married Aug. 26, 1879, at Nichols, N. Y., to Mary Frances Kirby, who was born there Sept. 18, 1853. After acquiring her preliminary education, she entered Elmira College for Women, at Elmira, N. Y., where she took the regular courses and was graduated with the class of 1877. After entering upon her married life in Menomonie Mrs. McLean became a welcome and useful member of local society. She was adept in the art of hand painting of china, and in her latter years took much pride in this work. She was also skilful in oil and water color painting, having studied these branches of art under Prof. Walters at Elmira, N.Y. She was a member of the Menomonie Sketch Club, also of the Menomonie Woman's Club, and, like her husband, of the Dunn County Old Settlers' Association, being an active worker in it and always taking a keen interest in its reunions. She survived Mr. McLean some years, passing away on May 7, 1924. Mr. and Mrs. McLean were the parents of three children: Selim Kirby, born July 26, 1884, who died Sept. 26, the same year; Marguerite Louise, born Aug. 24, 1888, now Mrs. Day Henry Johnson of Nichols, N. Y., and Jessie Kirby, born Aug. 29, 1894, who is now Mrs. Adrian Leo Mitten of Menomonie, Wis.

Egbert Bird Bundy, formerly judge of the Eighth Judical Circuit of Wisconsin, was born at Windsor, N. Y., Feb. 8, 1833, son of Dr. Oliver T. and Lydia (Smith) Bundy. His general education was obtained in the common schools of Windsor, at Windsor Academy, and at Oxford, N. Y. He studied law in the law office of Wheeler and Moore at Deposit, N. Y., and was admitted to the bar in Courtland, N. Y., at the general term of the Supreme Court in 1856. In the following year he came to Dunn County, Wisconsin, and for three years practiced law at Dunnville, then the county seat; in partnership with his brother C. S. Bundy, now judge of the municipal court in Washington, D. C. In 1860 he moved to Prescott, Wis., where he practiced law for one year. Then in 1861 he came to Menomonie, where he was engaged in the practice of law until 1866. In that year he moved to Wabasha, Minn., where he remained for a year, in 1867, moving to Durand, Wis. In 1868 he returned to Menomonie and for the next nine years was engaged in law practice here, at first with Robert Macauley and later with E. B. Mainwaring. Then in 1877 he was elected judge of the Eighth Judicial District to fill the unexpired term of Judge Humphrey, who had resigned. He was again elected in 1878, 1884 and 1890. After his last term had expired, on Jan. 1, 1897, he engaged in the practice of law in Menomonie in partnership with his son, R. E. Bundy, and was thus occupied subsequently until his death, which took place Sept. 29, 1904. In taking cognizance of his death the members of the bar of Eau Claire County referred to him as "an able, upright and fearless jurist. . . held in high esteem and respect, not only by the profession, but by the community in which he resided, and by the citizens of the state, for his ability, his integrity and uniform kindness in all his dealings, acts and relations with all with whom he came into contact,' and in a set of resolutions again referred to him as "one of the purest, most conscientious and learned members of the profession," further stating that the bench had lost "one of its ablest jurists; the community an honored citizen and a true and reliable friend; his family a kind and devoted husband and parent." A resolution was also passed to the effect that the members of the bar of Eau Claire County attend his funeral, and that a copy of the resolutions be given to the family of the deceased. Judge Bundy was a Mason, an Odd Fellow, and a communicant of the Episcopal Church. In politics he was a Democrat. He was married in 1861 to Reubena H. Macauley, by whom he had nine children, all of whom are now living, as also is his widow.

Robert E. Bundy, a prominent Dunn County attorney, was born in the city of Menomonie, Jan. 14, 1866, son of Egbert Bird and Reubena H. (Macauley) His education was acquired in the public and high schools of Menomonie Bundy. and in the University of Wisconsin, he being graduated from the law department of the latter institution with the class of 1888. Admitted to the bar the same year, he began the practice of his profession at Rice Lake, Wis., where he remained for two years. He then spent five years in Superior, Wis., and one year in Eau Claire. In 1896 he returned to Menomonie and from that time on was engaged in practice with his father until the latter's death in 1904, after which he again practiced alone. In 1916 he was appointed postmaster of Menomonie and served in that office until Since 1924 he has been trust officer in the First National Bank of Menom-1922. onie, having charge of the Trust Department of that bank. He is active in civic affairs, being a member of the Commercial Club, while his fraternal society affiliations are with the Blue Lodge, Chapter and Commandery of the Masonic order and with the camp of Modern Woodmen of America, all in Menomonie. Mr. Bundy was married in Menomonie on June 26, 1895, to Mabel McLain, daughter of David and Margaret McLain. Of this marriage there are two children: Margaret, who is now Mrs. L. J. Melrose of Duluth, Minn., and William H., a student in the University of Wisconsin.

Earl L. Edes, county superintendent of schools, was born in the village of Downsville, Dunn County, Wis., on May 6, 1892, son of William G. and Maria (Cunningham) Edes. As a youth he attended the Downsville public school, being graduated from the eighth grade in 1906 and from the ninth grade in the following

vear. He was a member of the Downsville school band organized by the principal, Mr. R. C. Winger. During the last three years of his school period in Downsville he worked for his board and room at the Downsville Hotel. In the fall of 1907 he entered the Dunn County Normal School, where he came under the inspiring influence of G. L. Bowman, and in the spring of 1909 he was graduated. While there he took an active interest in basketball, playing on the school team, which was a winning team both years. Mr. Edes began teaching in the spring of 1909 in the Bear Lake school in Polk County-a school of 65 pupils, and he taught for two months before he was 17 years of age. In the fall of 1909 he taught for two months in the Cranberry Creek school. The remainder of the year he spent as a pupil in the Menomonie High School, which he attended also in the early part of 1910. He was a member of the high school basketball team, which took part in an inter-state tournament at Madison in the spring of that year, five states being represented, and his individual play was so good that he was selected as a member of the all-state team. For several weeks in the spring of 1910 Mr. Edes substuted as principal of the Boyceville school, and he was also principal for two months of the Weston graded school, afterwards serving in the latter position for two years-There also he continued his interest in athletics as manager from 1910 to 1912. of the Weston basketball team, and also playing on the Weston baseball team during the summer months. In the years 1913, 1914 and 1915 Mr. Edes attended the Stevens Point State Normal School, giving nine months of each year to study, while he worked during the other three months to earn money to pay his expenses. He also did odd jobs at school with the same object. He was captain of the Normal basketball team for two years, and also played on the football team during his three years there, besides coaching the winning boy scout team of Stevens Point in 1915. That he was popular there is proved by the fact that he was vice president of his class. His activities were not confined to athletics, for he stood high in scholarship, was a member of the junior debating team which defeated the Oskosh Normal in the spring of 1914, and for the entire three years of his attendance a member of the school band and orchestra. He was graduated from Stevens Point Normal School in the spring of 1915. During the years 1916, 1917 and 1918, he was principal of the Eau Galle graded school and in addition to capably directing its scholastic work, he organized and directed orchestras, basket ball teams and school plays, and played on the Eau Galle baseball team. In the spring of 1917 he ran for the office of county superintendent but was defeated. On June 15, 1918, Mr. Edes enlisted at Milwaukee in the United States' navy. He was sent to Bremerton Yard, in Puget Sound, where he remained until September, being then transferred to the municipal pier at Chicago, and, a month later, to Cleveland, Ohio, where he joined the steamer F. B. Squires, on which he served for six weeks. After entering the navy he took the naval officers' training course, and while at Bremerton taught classes in the Y. M. C. A. schools there. He was discharged from service on Dec. 25, After his return home Mr. Edes served as principal of the Elk Mound 1918. school until June, 1919. In April, that year, he was elected county superintendent, assuming the duties of the office in July. Since then he has been three times reelected and is now serving his fourth term, which gives evidence of the fact that he has shown himself equal to the position not only on account of his scholastic acquirements but also by reason of executive ability, which is a qualification equally necessary. Mr. Edes has most of the accomplishments that go with a well rounded education. His athletic ability has already been referred to, but it may be added that he played on the Menomonie baseball team for several years, being manager one year. He also played on the American Legion state champion basket ball team, being a member of Hosford-Chase Post, No. 32 A. L. His other society affiliations include membership in the Wisconsin Teachers Association, the Wisconsin Superintendents Association, of which he was president in 1924, and the society of Alumni of Dunn County Normal School, of which he has been president and local manager. He is also a Free Mason, belonging to the lodge at Durand and the chapter at Menomonie. He is now but 33 years old, and as the result of hard work backed by considerable natural ability, his career has acquired a momentum that should carry him far before he reaches the ultimate goal. Mr. Edes was married in Menomonie on June 6, 1924, to Nelle Gordon, daughter of Ben and Anna (Strand) Gordon. She is a graduate of the Menomonie city schools, the Dunn County Normal School, and the River Falls Normal School, having also taken a course of extention work in the University of Minnesota. Her ability as a teacher has been exercised in the rural schools of Dunn County, the Menomonie city schools, the Dunn County Normal School and the Juneau County Normal School at New Lisbon. She has also taken an active and useful part in the work of Our Saviour's Lutheran Church.

John G. Inenfeldt, in early days an employee in the lumber business, later for many years proprietor of a meat business in Menomonie, but now deceased, was born in Posen, Germany, Nov. 1, 1843, son of Christian and Augusta Inenfeldt. He was educated in his native land, where he subsequently did farm labor. In 1864 he had to serve as a soldier in the war between Prussia and Austria, and he was in the army until 1869. Soon after his discharge he came to the United States, landing at Baltimore, and from that city he came directly to Menomonie, Dunn County, Wis., where he entered the employ of Knapp, Stout & Co. and worked in their mills, in the woods and on the drives until 1874. In that year he went to Stillwater, Minn., where for about two years he was employed in a meat market. After that he conducted a grocery store at Baldwin for two years, and from that place went to Fall Creek in Eau Claire County, where he conducted a market for Then returning to Menomonie, he formed a partnership with his brothera year. in-law, Edward Manske and they engaged in the meat business in the Vodisch building, at the corner of Broadway and Main street, remaining there until the property was taken over by the Stout Institute. They then moved to the Stori property farther east on Main Street. After the dissolution of the partnership, Mr. Inenfeldt for three years conducted a market on the site of the present C. G. Tilleson market on Broadway, with George Ordeman for a partner. In 1890 this partnership was dissolved and Mr. Inenfeldt then took his own son, Henry C., into the business. For ten years they conducted a market in the brick building on Main Street that is now occupied by the Hintzman furniture store. On the subsequent sale of that property, which was owned by J. B. Edwards, Mr. Inenfeldt entered the meat department of Sipple, Henneman & Quilling, where he was employed for about two years. Then he and his son Henry purchased that department and conducted it for several years. After that they bought the building at the corner of Main and Fifth streets known as "The Farmers' Home," and converted it into a market, where another son, Alfred L., is now conducting a like business under the name of "The Table Supply." Henry C. remained an active member of the firm until 1904. Mr. Inenfeldt himself continued in business until 1920, when he retired, and from 1904 to that year he had for partners his sons Frank and Alfred L. For four years he was alderman from the Fourth Ward and for one term was deputy sheriff. At the time of his death, which occurred March 24, 1924, he was one of the oldest Odd Fellows, from the point of view of membership, in the state, and at the time of the Odd Fellows' convention he was awarded a medal, as a mark of honor testifying to his 35 years of active service in the order up to that time. He was a member of the German Lutheran Church. Mr. Inenfeldt was married at Fall Creek, Eau Claire County, Wis., in July, 1872, to Wilhelmina Manske, who died soon after they had celebrated their Golden Wedding, after completing half a century of married life together. They had been the parents of 11 children, of whom eight are now living, namely: Henry C., conducting a real estate and insurance business in Menomonie; Olga, now Mrs. George Willis of Rochester, N. Y.; Alfred L., in the meat business in Menomonie; Martha, wife of John Webster of Menomonie; Hulda. now Mrs. Carl G. Swallander of Minneapolis; Frank of Racine, Wis.; Anna, of Menomonie, and Emma, now Mrs. James Higgins of Minneapolis.

Alfred L. Inenfeldt, proprietor of the Menomonie Table Supply, corner of Main and Fifth Streets, was born in the city of Menomonie, Dec. 5, 1879, son of John G. and Wilhelmina (Manske) Inenfeldt. He acquired his education in the grade and high schools of Menomonie, subsequently entering his father's meat market as helper. There he remained for several years, becoming a good meat cutter, a trade that he later followed in Marshfield and Ashland, Wis., and in Faribault, Minn. In 1902 he returned from Faribault to Menomonie and became a partner in the meat business with his father under the firm name of J. G. Inenfeldt & Son. After continuing thus until 1907 he sold his interest to his brother Frank and went to Walker, Minn., where he engaged in the meat business for himself. In 1911 he sold out there and went to Coeur d'Alene, Ida., where he was successfully engaged in business for five years. Then he sold out there and returned to Menomonie, purchasing the business conducted by his father and brother Frank and establishing the Menomonie Table Supply. This is a first class market, fully equipped with modern machinery and tools, and strict sanitation is provided for and observed. The Table Supply is favorably known far and wide for the famous home-baked ham, prepared by Inenfeldt himself. Mr. Inenfeldt is one of Menomonie's popular business men and is always ready to lend hand or voice in "boosting" the city. He is also a musician, having for 25 years been a clarinet player in the Ludington Guard Band besides having done orchestra work not only in Menomonie, but in all the other cities in which he has from time to time resided. He is a member of Menomonie Lodge No. 164, F. & A. M.; Ed C. Gottry Lodge No. 170, K. of P., and the D. O. K. K. lodge connected with the Knights of Pythias order. Mr. Inenfeldt was married Oct. 30, 1901, to Maud Wilson, who was born in the town of Eau Galle, April 18, 1878, daughter of William Henry and Faustina (Merrill) Wilson. Her father was born in Russelltown, Canada, and her mother at Fulton, N. Y. They came west with their respective parents when young children, William H. Wilson at the age of eight years and Faustina Merrill at the age of six They were married in Menomonie and for some time thereafter lived in vears. Eau Galle, where Mr. Wilson was a sewing machine salesman. From there they moved to Maiden Rock village in Pierce County, Mr. Wilson becoming a traveling salesman in the boot and shoe trade, and in that occupation he continued for the rest of his life. He died in Spokane, Wash., Aug. 27, 1903, and his wife in Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, on June 25, 1913. Their children were; Maud, now Mrs. Alfred L. Inenfeldt; Adde, who is Mrs. Adolph J. Schulthess, of Spokane, Wash., and Mabel, who is Mrs. Edward Green of Spokane. Mr. and Mrs. Inenfeldt are the parents of two daughters: Metta Margaret, born Nov. 16, 1903, and Frances Wilson, born July 8, 1908, the latter now a member of the junior class in the Menomonie High School. Metta Margaret, who was graduated from the Menomonie High School with the class of 1921, then entered Stout Institute and received a degree from the institute in 1925. She is now teaching home economics and directing music at Montgomery, Minn. Mr. Inenfeldt owns a fine residence at No. 921 Wilson Avenue, which he and his family occupy. Their religious affiliations are with the Christian Science Society.

Henry C. Inenfeldt, engaged in handling land, loans and insurance, was born in this city March 4, 1873 son of John G. and Wilhelmina (Manske) Inenfeldt. He was educated in the grade and high schools here and also gained special knowledge through the Scranton correspondence school course. At the age of 17 years he became associated with his father in the butcher business, and remained with him subsequently until 1900, in which year he was elected register of deeds of Dunn County, which important office he held for the next eight years. He then established himself in his present business, which has grown to considerable proportions, and it is said that he has placed more new settlers in Dunn County than any other real estate man in the city. He has bought and sold many thousands of acres of land, not only in this state, but also a considerable quantity in the states of Minnesota, North and South Dakota and Canada. His insurance business is of all classes except life. He is a member of the Commercial Club and for several years was chairman of the committee on public affairs. From 1910 to 1914 he was a member of the board of education of the city of Menomonie. It was through his efforts that the Nestle's Food Co. located here. He was one of the organizers of the Litnum Bronze Co., manufacturers of acid-resisting metal, and was president of it for several years. For 12 years he was director of the Schutte-Quiling Bank until it was merged with the First National Bank. Mr. Inenfeldt was married March 24, 1914, in Menomonie, to Nettie M. Borland, daughter of John and Mary (Miller) Borland, her parents, who were early settlers in Dunn County, being now deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Inenfeldt are members of the Congregational Church.

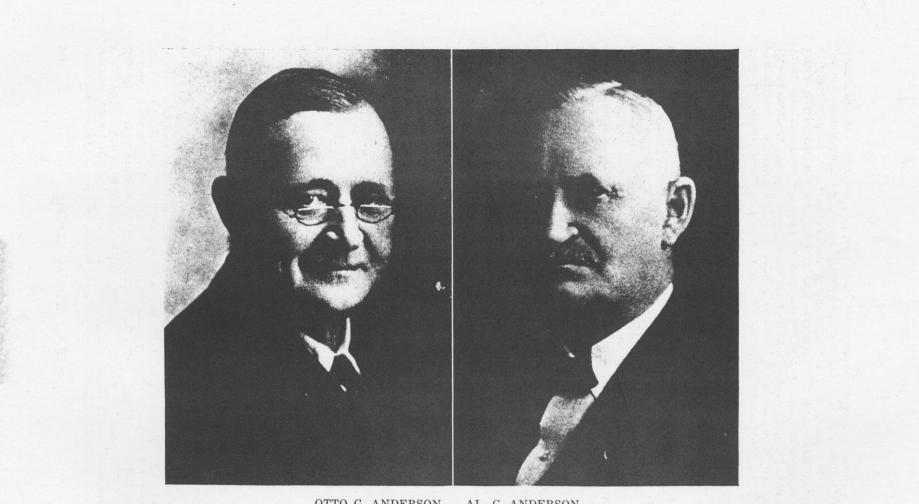

Frank Olson, a Civil War veteran now deceased, for many years a resident of Dunn County, was born in Christiania, Norway, Dec. 25, 1844. He attended public school in his native land until he was 13 years old, at which time he was brought by foster parents to America, locating with them near Rushford, in Fillmore County. There he attended English school and assisted his foster parents. On Nov. Minn. 10, 1863, when yet under 19 years of age he enlisted in defense of the Union in Company B, Fourth Regiment Minnesota Volunteer Infantry, in which he served until honorably discharged on July 18, 1865. During his service he took part in the Atlanta campaign and made the famous march to the sea under Sherman. After the war young Olson came to Menomonie, and entered the employ of Capt. William Wilson as coachman, also doing work for him on his farm and on river drives. After his marriage in 1873, he lived a few years at Menomonie Junction and about one vear at Little Elk Creek, where he managed the Eliza Wilson mill. After that he became manager of the Wasburn farms for the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company and was with them for seven years, at the end of that time he and his wife settling permanently in Menomonie, where until 1914 they conducted a large boarding-house and feed stables, finally retiring from active work. Mr. Olson died July 29, 1922. He was a deeply interested member of the William Evans Post, No. 58, G. A. R., for three years holding the office of junior vice-commander. He was of a type of manhood to which this country owes much, and was a good comrade of sterling personal qualities. As already mentioned, Mr. Olson was married in 1873. It was on November 26th and his bride was Randie Olson, who came from the same land as himself, having been born in Gudbrandsdalen, Norway, Sept. 16, 1854 and b sught to the United States when six years old by her parents, John and Ambjor (Martinson) Olson, who settled in Dunn County, Wis., on railroad land on Little Her father died in 1868, after which event the mother bought 80 acres Elk Creek. more of railroad land, Mrs. Frank Olson at that time accompanying her mother to Hudson, where the purchase was made. Mrs. John Olson, the widow, suffered many hardships and privations after her husband died, all of which she endured with the patience usually manifested by the pioneer settlers and which was one of the conditions necessary to success. She had to do a man's work, breaking up the land with the help of the young children and putting up improved and additional The children, becoming more useful as they grew buildings as they were needed. older, helped her to develop the place, and they all prospered through hard work and self denial. These children were as follows: Randie, now widow of Frank Olson of Menomonie; Mrs. Olena Leland of Minneapolis; Olaus and Martin, who are now deceased; Edward, of Minneapolis, and Frank and Elias, who are deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Frank Olson had four children, Louis, Emma, Oscar and Fannie, whose personal records are in brief as follows: Louis, born Aug. 17, 1883, and now residing in Chippewa Falls, married Mary J. Carney and they have two children, John and Emma, born Oct. 2, 1885, became the wife of Wallace Tyler Crawford Robert. and they live at Faribault, Minn., having two children, Richard and Josephine. Oscar, born Feb. 7, 1890, died April 29, 1891. Fannie, born Nov. 17, 1895, married Mitchell M. Tuttle of Menomonie, and has two children, Mitchell M., Jr., and Robert Bruce. Mrs. Olson is a member of the Congregational Church, and also of the Woman's Relief Corps, in which she is an ardent worker. She has a comfortable home at 515 Second Avenue East.

Al. C. Anderson, secretary and treasurer of the firm of Anderson Brothers, Inc., cigar manufacturers, Menomonie, former state senator, and now member and chairman of the Wisconsin State Highway Commission, was born in Shovde, Sweden, Sept. 24, 1860, the son of Claes F. and Magdalene Anderson, who brought him to America in 1872, and on May 15, of that year settled on 40 acres of railroad land, three-quarters of a mile north of Menomonie Junction. There Al. C. worked on the farm helping to develop it, and attended four winter terms of school. At 17 he was apprenticed in the barber trade, and subsequently conducted a barber shop in River Falls for twelve years. In 1889 he was elected city treasurer of River Falls. With his brother, Otto G., he established the firm of Anderson Brothers, cigar manufacturers, at Menomonie, on May 3, 1893, and in this business has since successfully continued. In 1916 he was elected to the upper house of the Wisconsin legislature, and served in that body with considerable distinction until January, 1923. In July, 1921, he was appointed to the State Highway Commission, and in May, 1925, elected chairman, and is still serving. Fraternally he is a thirty-second degree Mason. He was married on June 20, 1895, to Minnie Scanlan. Still in the midst of his business and civic activities it is too early to make an estimate of the life and work of Senator Anderson. Sufficient is it to say that he is an excellent example of the immigrant boys who have made their own way in the world, achieved success, and rendered real service to their fellow men, and he is meeting every obligation of life in a fully adequate manner.

Otto G. Anderson, president of the firm of Anderson Bros., Inc., cigar manufacturers, Menomonie, was born in Shovde, Sweden, April 8, 1858, son of Claes F. and Magdalene Anderson. In his native land he received a good education. In 1872 he accompanied his parents to America, on May 14 arriving in Menomonie. Since that time he has continued to reside in Dunn County, except for a period of seven years which he spent in St. Croix County and another of five years spent at River Falls engaged in the barber business. On May 3, 1893, he and his brother Al. C. established the firm of Anderson Bros., of which, he, Otto, is president. He was a member of the board of education for 15 years and for 20 years a member of the Menomonie Fire Department. He has taken his place among the prominent business men of the city and is recognized as one of its useful citizens. Mr. Anderson was married Jan. 3, 1882, to Emily A. Dodge, daughter of E. J. and Minerva Dodge of New Richmond. He and his wife are the parents of three children: Karl E., now of Portland, Ore.; Hazel, who is Mrs. W. L. Davis, Jr., of Eau Claire, and Otto, Jr., of Menomonie.

John Scanlan, a former resident of Dunn County, who was a veteran of the Civil War, was born in Detroit, Mich., June 24, 1838. His parents, Michael and Margaret (Donavan) Scanlan, were natives of County Clare, Ireland. After coming to America they lived successively in Canada and Detroit, Mich., where the father died in 1839 and the mother in 1844. Their six children were Mary (Leyden), James, Ann (Guy), Michael, Elizabeth and John. John Scanlan resided for a time after the death of his mother with his Grandmother Donavan in Canada. At the age of 15 he was sent to Detroit and began an apprenticeship to the ship carpenter's trade. A year later he engaged in teaming and in 1855 went to Buffalo, and thence to Chicago and Grand Haven, working in the pineries through the winter. In the spring he became a sailor before the mast and the next winter he spent in Canada. The following spring he went to the Lake Superior country, but finding that he had been deceived with respect to its business prospects, he went to St. Croix Falls, where he passed a season. In the winter he was engaged on Snake River, Minnesota, went again to the pineries and came down with the drive in the spring to Stillwater. He obtained employment harvesting in Pierce County, Wisconsin. He hunted and trapped on the Eau Galle and spent a winter in the employ of Knapp, Stout & Co., and in the spring engaged in logging with C. C. Washburn, remaining in Menomonie until he entered the army. He enlisted Aug. 24, 1862, in Company K, Fifth Wisconsin Infantry, going to Washington and thence to Baskersville to join the regiment the last of September. The regiment was assigned to Hancock's Brigade, First Division, Mr. Scanlan being in Company H, the regiment having been reorganized. He had a very full army experience. He performed picket duty at Baltimore, moved to White Plains, thence to fight at Fredericksburg; from there to winter quarters at Aquia Creek and to stick in the mud in mid-winter with Burnside; took part in the second Rappahannock campaign in the spring; the battle of Fredericksburg and the charge at Marye's Heights; then in camp seven miles below Fredericksburg, where Capt. Bissell took command of the company, Captain Turner having been killed. At Gettysburg he was with the Sixth Corps on Round Top through the two last days of the battle; on the pursuit on the 5th went into camp at Warrenton; he had been made corporal on the march to the battlefield. He next went to New York to assist in enforcing the draft and his company after being stationed in the harbor of New York, was sent to Troy and Albany. At Castle Garden (New York) Mr. Scanlan was promoted to sergeant and at Troy guarded a number of substitutes who gave the command some trouble. In the New York draft riots the company was under orders to go on the double-quick from City Park to City Hall at the first tap of the bell. Another campaign being imminent on the Rappahannock, the regiment returned just in time to get into the fight at Rappannock Station, going without knapsacks into the charge on the forts, which they took, with the guns and 800 prisoners, principally "Lee's Tigers." The regiment camped across the river on the farm of John Minor Botts, and went to fight at Mine Run, Nov. 26, 1863. In May, 1864, Mr. Scanlan went into the Wilderness campaign (May 5 to 12), and on the last day, at Spottsylvania, he was wounded, a musket ball striking his right arm as he fired. The ball entered the lower part of the arm shattering the bone and continuing on in its direction, injured the collar bone and breast bone, inflicting three severe wounds. In the field hospital the fractured bone was removed, and he went successively to hospitals at Fredericksburg and Alexandria. In October he was granted a 30-day furlough, and after that another, when he returned to Wisconsin. He went afterwards to Madison. and from there to Camp Distribution at Baltimore; was in Fort Henry, and thence to Alexandria, whence convalescents were being sent to the front. Taking off his bandages, he succeeded in passing, but on the boat his condition was discovered and he was sent to Carver Hospital at Washington and was discharged June 25, 1865. Mr. Scanlan then returned to Dunn County, where he had located a claim (on the Red Cedar River, town of Dunn), which he improved and where he lived until his removal to Menomonie in 1873. While there he served a term as assessor. He was married Oct. 1, 1865, to Jane Frances Monehan, who was born in Toledo, Ohio, Aug. 16, 1838, daughter of James and Winnifred (Newcomb) Monehan. Mrs. Scanlan passed away at the family home Dec. 23, 1901. Their children were Mary Frances, William Alvert, Emma Elizabeth and James Andrew. Mary Fr (Minnie) born Oct. 1, 1866, was married June 20, 1895, to Al. C. Anderson. Mary Frances, William Alvert, born Oct. 18, 1867, was married May 14, 1887, to Theckla Miller and they have four children, Angela Lucile, Inez Levern, Albert Edward and Dorothy Louise. Emma Elizabeth was born Oct. 5, 1870 and died May 19, 1884. J Andrew, born Aug. 21, 1872, was married Aug. 16, 1895, to Mary Drinken. James Mr. Scanlan was a charter member of William Evans Post, G. A. R., and a member of the A. O. U. W. In politics he was a stauch Republican and served as street commissioner some years. He was appointed to a position in the capitol at Madison by Governor Upham and reappointed by Governor Scofield. With the exception of his six years in Madison, the home was at 1212 Broadway, Menomonie, where John Donovan Scanlan passed away on May 8, 1904.

Paul A. Andreassen, manager of the Farmers' Store, Menomonie, was born on his parents' farm in Chippewa County, Wisconsin, July 14, 1880, son of Christian L. and Aletha (Lyngsnes) Andreassen. The parents were natives of Norway, in which country they were married. After coming to the United States in 1872, they settled in Chippewa County, Wis., where they spent the rest of their lives on the farm above mentioned. Paul A. Andreassen as a boy attended the rural schools and the grade school at Bloomer. In 1895 he entered the college department of the Augsburg Seminary at Minneapolis, and in the year 1900 completed the course there. He then spent a year at the Minneapolis Academy, and after his return home he and his brother Asmund conducted the home farm, being then its owners. Two years later Paul purchased his brother's interest and for the next two years conducted the farm entirely on his own account. It was known as the "Prairie View Farm" and contained 160 acres. At the end of the two years mentioned Mr. Andreassen sold the place and subsequently until 1913 was engaged in carpenter work at Bloomer. He then entered the Farmers Store at Bloomer, in which he was clerk for three years, at the end of that time, or in 1917, coming to Menomonie to accept the position of manager of the Farmers' Store here. The store was then located in the building now occupied by the Broadway Cafe, but two years later the management bought the stock of goods of the J. D. Carter Mercantile Co. at No. 445 Broadway, at the same time leasing that building and moving their other stock there. They carry a large and complete line of general merchandise, and under the able management of Mr. Andreassen they have had a steady increase of business each year. About 12 clerks are employed, each one carefully selected to fill his or her particular position, and the customers of the store known that they will always receive a "square deal" and courteous treatment. Mr. Andreassen is a member of the Masonic Blue Lodge, also of the order of Beavers, the Menomonie Commercial Club, and the Norwegian Lutheran Church. He was married Sept. 16, 1908, to Thora Amundson of Bloomer, Wis. and they have a comfortable home at No. 1121 Seventh Street. They are the parents of three children: Johan, born Aug. 18, 1909, now a pupil in the local high school; Laura, born Dec. 27, 1910, and Dagney, born Dec. 14, 1913. Mr. Andreassen is a stockholder in the Farmers' Store, and is recognized as a capable and progressive business man.

Carl Froseth, manager of the elevator at Caryville, is a product of Dunn County, having been born in the town of Spring Brook, Dec. 3, 1875, son of Nels and Guro (Hustoft) Froseth. The parents, born in Norway, came to the United States in 1870, locating at Menomonie, where Nels Froseth worked for Knapp, Stout & Co., logging in the woods in winter and working in the mills in summer. Many of the old time loggers and sawmill men subsequently bought land and went farming, and so did Nels Froseth, in 1875 buying 90 acres in the town of Spring Brook. There in time he built up a fine farm, having a good set of buildings, in-cluding a comfortable residence. He subsequently added 160 acres more to the place, making a farm of 250 acres, which he cultivated and managed successfully until his death on May 10, 1899. His wife passed away in the following year, on May 31, 1900. They had two children: John, who now owns the old homestead, and Carl, the subject of this sketch. Carl Froseth acquired his education in the public schools. He remained at home assisting his father to develop the home farm and was thus occupied until the father's death in 1899, when he and his brother became the owners of the place, conducting it together until 1910, when Carl sold his half interest to John, who is now operating it. For three years after selling out Carl worked on farms for others. In the fall of 1914 he came to Caryville as manager for the Milwaukee Elevator Co. Three years later that concern sold out to the Armour Grain Co., who retained Mr. Froseth as buyer and manager until they sold out in turn four years later to the R. E. Jones Company. The latter also retained him and he is still buyer and manager for them, having proved himself a thoroughly competent man for the position. Mr. Froseth was married June 18, 1921, to Bessie E. Bryce, who was born in the town of Rock Creek, Aug. 31, 1892. He and his wife have one child, Nels Albert, who was born Dec. 10, 1922. Mr. Froseth and family occupy a fine bungalow residence which he built in 1921. They are members of the Lutheran Church, Mrs. Froseth being an active worker in the Ladies' Aid Society.

James Manley, formerly engaged in the bus business in the city of Menomonie, a line of occupation that he followed for many years, was born in the north of Ireland, May 16, 1853, and came to the United States with his parents when three years old. They settled in Galena, Ill., where the parents subsequently died. At the age of 14 James came to Menomonie with his uncle, Thomas Manley. Here he remained and in September, 1885, was married to Leora Perrault, daughter of Peter and Agnes (Vance) Perrault. For 30 years Mr. Manley was engaged in the bus business, during 28 years of that time residing at the City Hotel, which was the property of his wife's parents. Before taking up that occupation he has worked as a clerk in the warehouse of the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company. When he started his bus line he used to transfer people from the Junction with a four-horse team, that being before the short line, or spur track, was built to Menomonie. Though Mr. Manley's life for many years lay in a single groove, it was one to which he was well fitted and in which he proved his usefulness. He died Jan. 23, 1911, leaving two sons, Peter and James.

Peter Perrault, formerly proprietor of the City Hotel in Menomonie, was born in Becancour, Canada, April 22, 1840, son of Moses and Alice (Dervaul) Perrault, the parents being also natives of Canada. In 1857, as a youth of 17, Peter Perrault left home to seek his fortune in the States, locating in Menomonie, Wis. Here he was employed by Knapp, Stout & Co. as general filer, having charge of their lath mill until July 14, 1862. The Civil War being then in full progress, he enlisted on the date mentioned in the Fifth Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry, in which he served until the close of the war. He fought in the two battles of Fredericksburg and was there wounded in the charge on Marye's Heights, Sept. 13, 1862. He was later in the Wilderness campaign under Grant, and, in fact, took part in all the engagements in which his regiment participated, except the battle of Gettysburg, which was fought while he was still in the hospital recovering from the effects of Escaping any further casualties, he finally returned to Menomonie and his wound. to the employ of Knapp, Stout & Co., who placed him in charge of their saw filing department at Waubeek, where he was thus engaged until 1872. It was in that year that he started the City Hotel and Livery in Menomonie. He was owner of the omnibus line which was operated by his son-in-law, James Manley. In that manner the rest of his life was spent, and he passed away Jan. 5, 1900, respected as one of the brave defenders of the Union, as a reliable friend and as a good citizen. Mr. Perrault was married Dec. 25, 1866, to Agnes Vance, daughter of Levi and Leora Vance, who were early settlers in Dunn County. Mr. Perrault was a member of the Grand Army of the Republic and of the Ancient Order of United Workmen. He and his wife were the parents of 12 children, three of whom are living, namely, Leora, Lenora and Edna.

Peter E. Manley, an active business man of Menomonie, manager for the Nestle's Food Co., was born in this city, March 28, 1893, son of James S. and Leora (Perrault) Manley. He attended the grade and high schools of Menomonie, being graduated from the latter with the class of 1912, after which he took the special agricultural course at the University of Wisconsin, completing it in 1916. Then returning to Menomonie he obtained a position with the John Wilde Evaporated Milk Co. of this city, but after working here a short time was transferred to Reedsburg to learn the business and spent seven months at that place. He then went into the army for service in the World War. He had previously entered his name with the Ordinance department for training in the officers' training camp, but hearing nothing further of the matter, and being tired of waiting, he enlisted in the Fourth Company, 39th Heavy Artillery, stationed at Fort Warden, Washington. While there he was called for officers' training as a result of his previous application, but secured release and stayed with the artillery, remaining in Washington ten months. He was then sent to Camp Grant at Rockford, Ill., where he was stationed for a while, being discharged there on Jan. 3, 1919. He then returned to Menomonie, and, resuming his connection with the John Wilde company was made assistant manager of the plant. On May 1, he was transferred to the Reedsburg plant as superintendent and manager. In 1920 a consolidation of the Wilde and Nestle concerns was effected, Mr. Manley being appointed manager. He remained in Reedsburg until Nov. 1, 1923, when he again returned to Menomonie and has since been manager for the Nestle's Food Company, a position in which he has shown efficiency and good business ability. He belongs to the University of Wisconsin chapter of the college fraternity, known as the Delta Upsilon, and also to the Knights of Pythias. Mr. Manley was married Nov. 20, 1920, at Reedsburg, Wis., to Martha Mathews, daughter of Frank and Helen (Watters) Mathews of Ashland. She is a member of St. Joseph's Catholic congregation. Mr. and Mrs. Manley are the parents of three children: Margaret born Jan. 29, 1922; Patricia, born May 4, 1923 and Peter Eugene, born April 14, 1925.

William Schlough, who is conducting a large and well improved farm in the town of Sheridan, which he has himself built up to its present condition, was born in Dane County, Wis., May 16, 1870, son of Carl and Mary Schlough. In their native land, Austria-Hungary, the parents were small farmers. It was in 1860 that they emigrated to the United States, locating in Dane County, Wisconsin. where Carl Schlough bought 40 acres of land and began to develop a farm. He cut the logs for the house and barn he built, the latter having a straw roof, and like most of the other settlers used oxen for draught purposes and in breaking his land. He also built a two-wheeled cart which he used until he was able to get a wagon. From time to time he bought other land until he had 240 acres, and he continued to improve his farm until his death in 1880. After that event the family continued to operate it until it was sold about two years later. In 1884 Mrs. Mary Schlough bought a partly improved farm in Section 27, town of Sheridan, on which she built a house, barn and other buildings, but after a while she returned to Dane County and took up her residence in Madison, where she died in 1901. She and her husband were the parents of a large family numbering 14 children, of whom 10 are now living, namely, Charles, Martin, Elias, Joseph, Susan, Jury, John, Paul, Albert and William. One died in infancy and the three others deceased are Michael, Steven and Josephine. Michael fought for the Union in the Civil War in a Wisconsin regiment; Susan, who became the wife of A. A. Tinker of Black Earth, Wis., is now a widow; Charles lives at Sauk Rapids, Minn., with his son, Joseph; John is in Dane County; Jury resides at Lone Rock, Richland County, Wis.; Martin, Elias and Joseph are farmers in the town of Sheridan, Dunn County; Paul resides in Barron County, and Albert lives with his brother, William. William Schlough was reared in Dane County, Wisconsin, and there attended both common and high school. He worked on the home farm until it was sold, after which he spent two years in Mazomania, Wis. In 1884 he came to Dunn County and subsequently remained on the farm with his mother, in Section 27, town of Sheridan, until he was 23 years old. He then began farming on his own account, buying 140 acres of improved land in Section 28, which was a homestead originally taken by his brother Stephen in 1871, the latter having built a log house and barn on it. After William had occupied the house for some time the buildings burned down, and he replaced the log house with one of frame construction, which he has since improved and enlarged by additions until he has converted it into a nice modern home. He installed in it the first hot water heating plant in the town of Sheridan and has hot and cold running water, besides an acetylene gas plant for lighting and heating purposes. When he had finished clearing the land in the original farm he bought more, and and now has 400 acres with 125 under the plow. He does general farming and dairying, at the present time having a herd of 34 pure and grade Durham and Holstein cattle, and also raises Duroc-Jersey hogs. He is a stockholder in the Boyceville and Connersville creameries, a stockholder and director in the Federal Land Bank of St. Paul, and a stockholder in the Ridgeland, Prairie Farm & Dallas Telephone Co. and in the Boyceville Co. For many years Mr. Schlough has been a prominent citizen of his town and has taken a useful part in public affairs, both of the town and county, having been elected to various offices. In 1897 he was elected treasurer of the town of Sheridan and served 13 years as such. He also served one year as assessor and was then elected for four terms in succession chairman of the town board, which made him a member of the county board. He also served as supervisor, road commissioner and as a member of the school board of his district, and in 1921 he was again elected chairman of the town board, which office, carrying with it membership on the county board, he filled for four years up to the present year 1925. In all these public capacities he showed himself active and vigilant in caring for the best interests of his town and county, and made a record appreciated by his fellow citizens. On March 15, 1925, he was made superintendent of patrols for Dunn County to have charge of all patrolled roads and patrolman in the county. Mr. Schlough was married Nov. 17, 1892, in the town of Sheridan to Rosetta West, daughter of David H. and Mary (Queins) West, the father being a native of New York State and the mother born in Scotland of Irish ancestry. On coming to Wisconsin more than half a century ago they first settled in Marquette County, coming to Dunn County in 1873. Here in the town of New Haven they homesteaded 80 acres of wild land covered with hardwood timber, on which Mr. West built a log house, cutting the logs himself, and began the creation of a farm, clearing his land during the summers and during the winters working in the woods to earn money for the support of the household. In 1892 he sold that farm and bought a tract of 160 acres in the town of Sheridan. There was a log house on it, but he later built a frame one and resided there until his death in 1918. For three years during the Civil War period he was in the army, having enlisted in the 31st Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry, and he took part in Sherman's campaign to Altlanta and the sea. His wife Mary is still living. They had seven children, Samuel, Rosetta, David A., James W., Mary Jane, John R. and Orrin, of whom the two last mentioned are deceased. Mary Jane married W. A. Schlough of the town of Sheridan. Mr. and Mrs. William Schlough are the parents of five children, Emma Jane, Walter J., Lena Mary, Howard W. and Orrin M. Emma Jane is now Mrs. Howard Clough, her husband being a farmer in the town of Sheridan who served in the World War. Lena Mary married Floyd McIntyre of the tcwn of Tiffany, where she resides. Howard W., who entered the coast artillery service in 1918, trained at Jefferson Barracks, Mo., and spent five months in France, being discharged in 1919. Walter and Orrin are on the home farm.

Algot B. Keller, proprietor of a machine shop and welding plant, located at No. 121 Sixth Avenue, Menomonie, was born in Sweden, April 22, 1897, son of J. E. and Breta (Borg) Keller. In 1903 he accompanied his father and step-mother to America, the family landing at New York City and coming west to Bloomer, Wis., whence they came to Menomonie in 1905. Here Algot B. attended school, the grade school first and afterwards the high school, from which latter he was graduated with the class of 1917. He began industrial life, however, as early as 1911, working in his spare time after school, on Saturdays, and during his vacations, for the Oscillating Sled Company in their factory and repair shop. In this manner he gained experience and also earned some money. As a student in the grades and high school he took a course in blacksmith work and also in machine and lathe work, in fact, taking the general manual training course. After his graduation he entered the blacksmith and machine shop of his father, for whom he worked continuously until May, 1918. He then entered the United States' service in the Quartermaster Corps at large and was sent for training to Jefferson Barracks, Mo. From there he went to Camp Meigs at Washington, D. C., and in September, 1918, left for overseas on the British freighter Armagh. Being landed at Brest, France, on Oct. 14, he accompanied his detachment to Gueves and thence to Chateau-du-On November 10 they were sent to Paris, where Mr. Keller remained for Loire. ten months, for the greater part of that time being on duty in the office of the chief purchasing officer Charles G. Dawes, now vice president of the United States. On Sept. 1, 1919, he embarked for home on the U.S. Steamer George Washington, on board of which were the King, Queen and Prince of Belgium. Young Keller being a good musician, he was given a pass admitting him to all parts of the boat and played the banjo-mandolin before royalty on the way. He was landed in the United States on Oct. 2, 1919, and discharged at Camp Dix, New Jersey, Oct. 8, After returning home he re-entered the employ of his father, remaining with 1919. him until November, 1922. He then went to Minneapolis, where he followed the machinist's trade until the spring of 1923. After that until August, 1924, he was similarly occupied in Milwaukee. Then returning to Menomonie, he engaged in his present business here, erecting a brick and tile building of 40 x 44 feet in ground plan and installed with modern machinery and appliances for general machine work, including two large machine lathes, one 14 inch and the other 24 inch; a milling machine, a planer, a radial drill press, a cut-off saw, an oxy-acetylene welding outfit, a forge outfit and a complete line of tools and fittings, enabling him to handle effectively all kinds of work in his line. Mr. Keller plays alto horn in the Ludington Guard Band, having been a member of the organization since 1912. He was married Feb. 24, 1923, to Martha Cudd, who was born at Ellsworth, Wis. The family residence is at 504 Tenth Street.

Frank C. Brooks, a respected resident of Knapp, was born in Manchester, N. H., Aug. 2, 1860, son of Thomas J. and Fanny A. (Young) Brooks. Both parents were natives of New Hampshire, the father being a machinist by occupation. While serving as a soldier in the Civil War, he was captured and confined for six months in Andersonville prison, and the hardships he endured there so affected his health that he was never strong afterwards. He survived the war for nearly 20 years, however, dying in Janesville, Wis., Dec. 16, 1884. His wife Fanny died in Linton, N. D., Sept. 28, 1923, at the venerable age of 85 years. Frank C. Brooks spent the years of his boyhood in Providence, R. I., and acquired a common school education, after which he learned the trade of gun and locksmith, which he followed for five years. He was about 19 or 20 years of age when he accompanied his parents to the West, and for some 30 years thereafter he lived in Janesville, Wis. He had not been long there when he was married in that city to Frances L. Honstain, daughter of Captain Edward and Amanda (Logue) Honstain, of Richland Center, Wis. He subsequently resided in Janesville, working at his trade until 1908, in which year he and his family moved to Linton, N. D., where he operated a farm of 640 acres, none of the land being broken when he began work on it. After four years in improving that property, in 1912, he went to Ft. Union, Mont. where he was in the hotel business and also operated a ranch. There he spent seven years, in 1919 selling out, and coming to Knapp, Dunn County, Wis. He and his wife have had two children, Addison C. and Frances Emma. The elder, Addison C., was born in Janesville, Wis., Sept. 6, 1880, and is on a farm in the town of Stanton, near Knapp village. The daughter, Frances Emma, born in Janesville, Feb. 20, 1891, was married Sept. 21, 1913, to Benjamin C. Lierman of Knapp, and died in Knapp, Feb. 19, 1922, after eight years and some months of married life. She left three children, Alice L., Ernestine F. and Emma F., in regard to whom further mention may be found in the biography of Mr. Lierman. Since their daughter's death Mr. and Mrs. Brooks have kept house for their son-in-law, Mr. Lierman. Mr. Brooks is affiliated with the Methodist Episcopal Church, while Mrs. Brooks is a Seventh Day Adventist.

George B. Plumer, a merchant in the village of Caryville, in the town of Rock Creek, where he has made his home for the last 32 years, was born in the town of Waterville, Pepin County, Wis., Sept. 4, 1871. His parents were Nathaniel and Sarah (Dunlap) Plumer, the father born near Lowell, Mass., and the mother in Mahoning County, Ohio. They were married in the town of Durand, Pepin County, Wis., and for many years Nathaniel Plumer held the office of county surveyor for that county. He was also connected with the lumber business, for a number of years being proprietor of a portable sawmill. He died in 1896, being survived by his wife Sarah, who passed away some 23 years later, in 1919. George B. Plumer acquired a public school education in Durand and then learned telegraphy, completing his practice period in 1889. Then being qualified to perform actual service, he was made relief man along the line of the C. M. & St. P. Railway between Wabasha and Chippewa Falls. In 1892 the company stationed him at Caryville as operator and agent and he continued to act as such for 23 years. Before the end of that time, however, in 1913, he engaged in mercantile business, buying the general store of O. M. Smith, and in 1915 he resigned his position with the railroad in order to give his entire attention to his business. In addition to keeping a general store which supplies the surrounding country, he deals in lumber, having a line of sheds for storing it. He has been very successful, and his store houses the post office, of which Mrs. Plumer has charge, having been appointed postmistress in 1910. Mr. Plumer was formerly a member of the county board, having been for three years chairman of the board of supervisors of the town of Rock Creek. He is treasurer of the school board of Caryville and secretary and treasurer of the local telephone company. Fraternally he is affiliated with the Modern Woodmen of America and the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. Mr. Plumer was married June 2, 1895, to Alice M. Gorton of Porter's Mills, Eau Claire County, Wis., who was born May 23, 1876, daughter of Evander and Aura (Rogers) Gorton. Mr. and Mrs. Plumer have one child, Esther Isabella, who was born Nov. 16, 1896, and who married G. C. Rodge, a traveling salesman for the "Western Grocer" of Minneeapolis. Mr. and Mrs. Rodge have two sons, John C. and Gerhart C. Caryville is a small place and to a stranger would seem to present but poor opportunities for advancement; but Mr. Plumer's career shows that success depends largely, or chiefly, upon the man, and that one who knows how to make the most of such opportunities as present themselves will in the end occupy a better position than most of the rolling-stones who fly from one town, county or state to another looking for chances to get rich quickly.

Rev. Albert J. Dorrenbach, pastor of St. Joseph's Catholic Church, Menomonie, was born in Munster, Westphalia, Germany, May 28, 1876, son of Peter and Gertrude (Mauser) Dorrenbach. The parents, natives of Cologne, came to the United States in 1886, and settled in St. Louis, Mo., where the subject of this sketch attended the St. Nicholas parochial school until 1890. He then entered a preparatory seminary at Columbus, Ohio, and completed his classical studies in 1896. After that until 1902 he attended the Pontificial College at Columbus, Ohio. On June 14, 1902, he was ordained to the Catholic priesthood by Archbishop Moeller, and, entering the Diocese of La Crosse, he was assigned to Thorp in Clark County, Wis., where he remained until Nov. 1, 1904. He was then transferred to Hewitt in Wood County, where he was stationed until August, 1907, also having charge of the Bakersville congregation. His next charge was that of Neillsville, Wis., where he remained until coming to Menomonie in 1914.

Lauris E. Sorenson, of the town of Elk Mound, now living retired after a long and effective career of industry along agricultural lines, is a native of Dunn County, having been born in Section 14, town of Elk Mound, Sept. 23, 1861. His parents Engebreth and Anna Sorenson, came to the United States as young people, and single, becoming residents of Fond du Lac County. They were married at Waupun, that county and then settled in Minnesota, from which state they came in 1859 to Dunn County, Wisconsin, and to the town of Elk Mound, where they bought 120 acres of government land in Section 14. Making a clearing and erecting a set of log buildings, Engebreth Sorenson began the development of a farm. The task of making a living during Civil War times proving hard, he enlisted in 1862 as a soldier and as such served two years, being honorably discharged. Then returning to his farm, he continued his improvements for some years longer, when his further efforts were terminated by his death on March 26, 1871. He was not yet 41 years old, having been born May 7, 1830. For three years after his death his wife carried on the farm alone and then became the wife of Anders Hanson, and she and Mr. Hanson continued to reside there until 1893, when they moved to another farm owned by Mr. Sorenson in the same section, where Mrs. Hanson died at the venerable age of 92 years and five days on Nov. 10, 1919. She had survived her husband nearly 49 years. Mr. Hanson, who was born Nov. 19, 1845, died Jan. 25, 1922. It is told of Mrs. Hanson that when she came to Dunn County from Minnesota, she walked all the way, carrying a nine-months baby and driving a cow and calf before her. Of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Engebreth Sorenson six children were born, the first two of whom died in infancy. The others were Lauris E. subject of this sketch; Gena, who married Peter Mahla and is now a widow residing in the town of Elk Mound; Gabriel, a prominent farmer of the town of Elk Mound, and Martin, also of this town. Lauris E. Sorenson was educated in the district school. Being the eldest surviving child in the family, as soon as he was old enough most of the farm work fell upon him. He continued to perform it until his mother's second marriage in 1874, when Mr. Hanson took charge of the farm, though Lauris until 1890 worked on it a part of the time, when not working out for others. In 1890 he began farming for himself on 120 acres of land that he had previously purchased in Section 14. Of this tract 16 acres had been broken, the rest being Mr. Sorenson began the work of improvement by erecting a small frame wild. house and several other small buildings, and in time through much hard work, sometimes in spite of discouragements, he developed a considerable part of his In 1915 he added to his farm another tract of 40 acres, increasing the total land. area to 160 acres. In 1899 he built a barn of 32 x 56 feet and has since increased its length to 70 feet. In 1900 he erected a fine residence, and among his various labors was the construction of a cement-block silo of 12 by 36 feet and other good out-buildings in addition to the barn. Mr. Sorenson continued to operate the farm until Nov. 15, 1923, when he rented it to his son Carl, and he and his wife have since made their home with their son Tille, who owns a farm in Section 27, near the village of Elk Mound. During his active career Mr. Sorenson served several years as town supervisor, and was also at times a director and treasurer of his school district. He is a stockholder in the Farmers Cooperative Creamery of Elk Mound. He was married July 19, 1890, to Clare Tilleson, who was born in the town of Elk Mound, June 23, 1865, daughter of Tille E., and Anna B. (Benson) Tilleson. Her parents, who came to this country when young people, were married at Elk Mound and then engaged in farming in Section 22, where they remained for the rest of their lives. Mr. Tilleson, who was born Feb. 15, 1842, died at the age of 81 years, on May 25, 1923. His wife Anna, who was born Oct. 7, 1847, had a shorter lease of earthly life, having passed away on June 18, 1914. Mr. and Mrs. Sorenson have enjoyed 34 years of happy wedlock, during which time they have been loving and mutually helpful companions. They have had five children, Tille, Anna, Emil, Leonard and Carl, whose individual records in brief are as follows. Tille, born Feb. 17, 1893, and who was in the U.S. service in the World War, is now the proprietor of Silver Spring Farm in Section 27. His army service covered the period from August, 1918, to June, 1919. Anna, born Aug. 31, 1896, is now Mrs. George Ausman of the town of Elk Mound. Emil, born May 15, 1899, is residing with his Leonard, born Feb. 23, 1901, is living on the old home farm with his parents. twin brother Carl, who operates it. Carl married Emmen Ellingstad and he and his wife are the parents of one child, a daughter, Ione. The family are members of the Barrum Norwegian Lutheran Church in the town of Elk Mound.

Joseph Roeder, who owns and operates an excellent farm in Section 18, town of Eau Galle, was born on this farm April 12, 1884, son of Nicholas and Mary (Zimmer) Roeder. The parents were natives of Dodge County, Wisconsin, where they were It was in the year 1882 or 1883 that they came to Dunn County, buying married. an 80-acre tract of land in Section 18, town of Eau Galle, which forms a part of the present farm of the subject of this sketch. The land was mostly wild, only three acres having been cleared, and the buildings thereon were a log cabin and one or two log barns. The next few years were busy ones for Mr. Roeder, but by 1889 he had progressed so far that he was able to build a frame house, and substantial barns and other out-buildings were erected as time went on and his condition improved. He also bought another tract of land, of 40 acres, and continued to follow general farming here until 1909, when he moved to Hannibal, Taylor County, Wis., where he and his wife are now residing. Their children were: Anna, now Mrs. Jesse Matson of Hannibal, Wis.; Frank, also of Hannibal; John of Hannibal; Joseph, a twin brother of John, who resides in the town of Eau Galle, Dunn County; Peter, of Hannibal; Mary, now Mrs. Ben Schaffner of Woodville, Wis., and George, who lives in Minneapolis. Joseph Roeder acquired his education in the district school and when he grew up, instead of leaving the old home to seek his fortune elsewhere, he remained with his parents, helping his father to develop the farm. In 1909 he rented it and operated it under rental for the next three years. In 1912 he bought it and since then has made such improvements that it is now one of the finest farms on the Ridge. These improvements concern both the land and the buildings, as, with respect to the latter, he has remodeled and enlarged both the house and barns, besides building a large machine shed, hog pens, chicken house and garage, and his land is well cultivated and productive. He has a good herd of grade Durham cattle, and cattle and hogs are his chief stock. He follows diversified farming and has attained a recognized position among the successful farmers of his town. He is now serving as a member of the board of Joint School District No. 7. Mr. Roeder was married March 14, 1912, to Bessie Wilson, who was born in the town of Eau Galle, June 1, 1894, daughter of George W. and Marie (Nelson) Wilson. Her father died Feb. 11, 1922, but her mother is still living and resides in Elmwood. Their family includes three children: Edward, a barber in Elmwood; Charles, who conducts a restaurant in Elmwood, and Bessie, now Mrs. Joseph Roeder. Mr. and Mrs. Roeder are the parents of four children, who were born as follows:

MR. AND MRS. NICHOLAS ROEDER JOSEPH ROEDER AND FAMILY MR. AND MRS. GEO. W. WILSON

Thelma Grace, Nov. 7, 1913; Geraldine Clara, April 9, 1916; Majorie Opal, Jan. 21, 1918, and Vilas George, Sept. 27, 1922. The Roeder family affiliate religiously with the Methodist Episcopal Church.

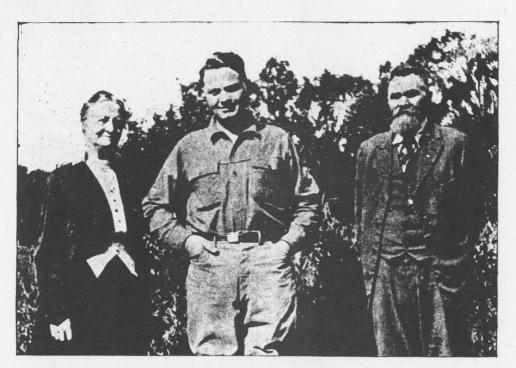

Julius E. Rublee, farmer and tobacco buyer, proprietor of Oak Park Guernsey Farm, also a raiser of fine stock, with a farm and business headquarters at Colfax village, was born at Stoughton, Dane County, Wis., March 12, 1869, son of Even and Betsey (Onsgaard) Rublee. The parents came to the United States from Norway, about 1845 and were married in Chicago, later settling near Stoughton, Wis., where they spent the remainder of their lives. The father died March 28, 1893, and the mother on Feb. 11, 1897. Their children were ten in number: Ole, Knute and Mary, who are deceased; Mary (second), who married Sever Egtvedt and lives in Seattle, Wash.; John E., deceased; Barbara, who is Mrs. T.O. Rime of Orfordville, Wis.; Lena, who married Lars Bakken and is now a widow residing in Brooklyn, Wis.; Edwin, deceased; Julius E. of Colfax, and Samuel, deceased. Julius E. Rublee in his boyhood lacked educational opportunities, as when he was nine years old his father was striken by paralysis, and our subject's brothers having died, he had to do what little he could to assist his parents. After his father's death in the spring of 1893 he rented out the farm and for several years subsequently resided in Stoughton. Then after his mother's death in 1897 he In 1902 Mr. Rublee came to Colfax and settled on a farm of 66 sold the farm. acres which he had purchased in the previous year, and 26 acres of which are within the limits of the village of Colfax, 40 acres being in Section 9, town of Colfax, and known as the Christ Amble farm. Here he has made considerable improvements, having built a new house and remodeled the out-buildings. For several years he raised tobacco extensively, also buying it on commission, which he still does. In 1921 he went into the raising of pure bred cattle, and now has ten head of pure bred Guernseys. In 1923 he exhibited stock at Chippewa, Menomonie and Colfax, and ook the silver cup at the Colfax community fair. At the Dunn County fair held in Menomonie in the fall of 1924, Mr. Rublee exhibited his Guernsey herd and vearling sire. He was awarded first prize on his herd exhibit and the grand sweepstakes on the yearling sire. This is good evidence that he understands the business and is raising some very good animals. He disposes of all his milk to the merchants in Colfax and is a stockholder in the Colfax Cooperative Creamery. Mr. Rublee was married July 1, 1905, in Colfax, to Ella Thompson, who was born Aug. 17, 1884, daughter of Jacob and Pauline (Holt) Thompson. Mrs. Rublee's mother died June 6, 1910 and her father resides in Colfax. Mr. and Mrs. Rublee are members of the Norwegian Lutheran Church. They are the parents of four children: James E., born May 12, 1906; Philip B., May 14, 1908; Margaret E., Jan. 15, 1915; and Winnifred R., Dec. 30, 1919.

Andrew T. Larson, assistant cashier of the First National Bank of Boyceville, who is also clerk of the village, was born in Norway, Feb. 4, 1888, son of Olaf and Aase (Anderson) Larson, who were natives of that country. In May, 1890, the Larsons came to America, locating at Glenwood City, St. Croix County, Wis., where the father, Olaf, worked in sawmills for four years. He then engaged in farming in the town of Hay River, Dunn County, where he and his wife still reside, and on Feb. 20, 1924, they had the pleasure, enjoyed by few married couples, of celebrating their Golden Wedding. They have been the parents of 11 children, three of whom have passed before them to the other shore. The eight living are as follows: Florence, now Mrs. John Smith of the town of Hay River; Alfred, a farmer in the same town; Oscar, at present a cook in lumber camps; Ole, of Auburn, Wash ; Lars, residing on the home farm; Henry, of New Richmond, Wis.; Andrew T., of Boyceville; and Julius. Andrew T. Larson, after passing through the common or grade schools, in 1915 took a course in the Winona Business College, of Winona, He then bought a farm in the town of Tiffany, Dunn County, Wis. and Minn. for two years thereafter was engaged in agriculture. Selling his farm at the end of that time, he came to Boyceville and entered the general mercantile store of I. Mahonna, where he was employed for three years, doing clerical work. During the next two years he was with the Boyceville Telephone Co., after which he was with the Square Deal Mercantile Co., in their store in Boyceville, remaining with that company until August, 1923, when the business was sold, the new proprietors continuing it under the name of "The Square Deal Store," and retaining Mr. Larson as chief clerk and bookkeeper. This position he held until July 1, 1924, when he was tendered and accepted that which he now holds. At various times Mr. Larson has performed useful public service. Before the village of Boyceville was incorporated he was town clerk of the town of Tiffany, and in September, 1922, he took the office of village treasurer to fill out the unexpired term of the former incumbent, completing it in April, 1923. Then in 1924 he was elected village clerk, and as such is still serving. He has always given his best service in every employment he has had, either of a business or official nature, and has made a record that inspires confidence. Mr. Larson was married Oct. 16, 1911, to Pearl M. Holden of Menomonie, and he and his wife are the parents of two children: Alice Fern, born Dec. 2, 1915; and Mildred Pearl, born Feb. 9, 1924. The Larson family attend the Methodist Episcopal Church, and Mr. Larson belongs to the Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

August Abraham, a retired farmer living in the village of Colfax, was born in Germany, March 26, 1864, son of Albert and Anna (Kedrowski) Abraham. Both parents are deceased, the mother having died when the subject of this sketch was three years old. August in boyhood attended the public schools of his native land and for a short time subsequently worked in a tailoring establishment. In 1881 Henry Beyrer, then living in the town of Grant, Dunn County, Wis., sent him a ticket good for his passage to America and accordingly he came. During his first year here he worked for Mr. Beyrer on his farm on Poplar Creek, in order to pay the debt he owed him. After that for several years he worked out on farms in the town of Grant. Then he started working farms on shares and this system proved so satisfactory for him that he subsequently continued it, never owning a farm of his own, but operating them on shares for some 25 years. He knew the business thoroughly and was industrious and economical, which accounted for his success. In 1910 Mr. Abraham gave up regular farming and moved to Colfax, where he bought a good stone house which he and his wife occupy. Though he may be regarded as retired, he does some market gardening every summer in the town of Grant to have something to occupy his mind and furnish him with mild exercise. For many years formerly he served his town as road overseer. Mr. Abraham was married Nov. 23, 1887, to Mrs. Bertha Van Woert, whose maiden name was Bertha Beyrer, she being a sister of the Henry Beyrer who advanced him the price of his passage to America. She was born in Germany, March 5, 1848, and came to America in 1874, locating in the town of Grant. She was first married to Thomas Van Woert, who met an untimely death in 1876. By him she had one child, Martha, now Mrs. Theodore Tietz, residing in Colfax. Mr. and Mrs. Abraham are members and liberal supporters of the German Lutheran Church.

Adolph R. Olson, who is congenially employed in conducting the Menomonie Phonograph and Art Store, of which he is the proprietor, has been a business man of Menomonie for only about four years (at this writing) but during that time has made gratifying progress in establishing himself on a secure foundation. He was born on a farm in Pepin County, Wisconsin, Aug. 22, 1891, the youngest son of Nels William and Emma (Nelson) Olson. The parents, natives of Sweden, came to the United States when young and single. They were married at Red Wing, Minn., and for some time lived at Vasa in Goodhue County, that state. Thence they moved to Pepin County, Wisconsin, where they were engaged in agriculture until 1910. They then retired and moved to the village of Pepin, where Mrs. Emma Olson died Nov. 26, 1918, being survived by her husband, who is still living. They had four children: Anton, now a farmer in Pepin County; Oscar and Gust, who are in the hardware business at Pepin; and Adolph R., of Menomonie. Adolph R. Olson acquired his elementary education in the public schools of Pepin County and the village of Pepin, subsequently taking a two year course in the University of Minnesota. It was in 1912 that he came to Dunn County, locating at Knapp, where for three years he was assistant manager of the Thies lumber yards. He entered into mercantile business in 1916 when he purchased the variety store of I. E. Lepley at Knapp, which he conducted until April, 1921. Then selling that business, he came to Menomonie and bought the Menomonie Phonograph and Art Store of E. L. Gabelein located at 606 Broadway. This business was established by E. L. Scott in the locating now occupied by the Anderson Bros, electrical store, was later moved into the Huber building, and still later across the street to its present location. It now occupies a good store building of 22 feet front by 84 feet deep, and is a center of attraction to art lovers throughout this region, being particularly well patronized by the students of the Stout Institute. So good a store, in fact, is rarely found in a small city the size of Menomonie, and it has been Mr. Olson's aim not only to keep but also to enhance its reputation. His six thousand dollar stock of art goods is of exceptional artistic merit and a constant source of delight to his numerous patrons, whom he seeks to please by making almost constant additions to it, using the utmost care in selection. It comprises books, statuary, pictures, and other attractive lines of art goods in considerable variety and profusion, and is constantly changing owing to the frequent and steady sales and purchase of new stock. Mr. Olson also attends to a considerable business in picture frames and framing and keeps in stock the Edison and Brunswick phonographs and records and the Gertz pianos. In thus catering to the aesthetic tastes of the residents of Menomonie and the vicinity he has shown a fine natural ability and understanding of the beautiful in art and is taking no unimportant part in the educational development of the city. Since he took hold of his present business his sales have increased 25 per cent each year. He is also interested in the general welfare of the community and while residing at Knapp served as health officer and as one of the trustees of the village. On Dec. 8, 1915 Mr. Olson was married to Esther May Casey, who was born in the village of Knapp, May 30, 1894. He and his wife have been the parents of three children: Doris, born Feb. 14, 1917; Eileen, born April 14, 1919, who died April 17, 1920, and Leone May, born June 6, 1923. The family attend the Methodist Episcopal Church and Mr. Olson is fraternally a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, belonging to the lodge and to the encampment.

Gerhart C. Rogde, traveling salesman for the Western Grocery Co. of Minneapolis, was born at Minneota, Lyon County, Minn., on June 2, 1896, son of John C. and Nancy Ann (Heimdahl) Rogde. As a youth he attended the public schools of Taunton, Minn., subsequently taking a two-years' course in the National Business In 1912 he came to Rock Creek township, Dunn County, College in Minneapolis. with his parents and for about a year resided on their farm. He then took a position with the Wisconsin-Minnesota Light & Power Co. (now the Northern States Power Co.) as paymaster and remained with that concern until Dec. 14, 1917. On that date he enlisted for service in the quartermaster's corps at Eau Claire, Wis., being ranked as sergeant. He was sent to Jefferson Barracks, Missouri, and while there was transferred to the infantry, going to the infantry officer's training school at Camp Grant, near Rockford, Ill., where he trained until he was discharged on Dec. 4, 1918. After his release from service Mr. Rogde obtained a position as bookkeeper with the Moskewitz Hide & Fur Co. at Chippewa Falls, with which concern he remained for two years. He was then clerk for one year in the general store of George B. Plumer at Caryville, after which he was offered and accepted a position as salesman for the Menomonie Grocer Co., with headquarters at Menomonie. with whom he remained until July, 1925, when he accepted his present position. He is a member of Pinery Lodge, No. 176, A. F. & A. M. at Chippewa Falls. Mr. Rogde was married Jan. 24, 1919, to Esther Isabel Plumer, who was born Nov. 16, 1896, daughter of George B. and Alice M. (Gorton) Plumer. He and his wife are the parents of two children: John Christian, born Jan. 1, 1921; and Gerhart Charles, born July 13, 1924. The religious affiliations of the family are with the Episcopal Church.

John C. Rogde, a prominent citizen of the town of Rock Creek, was born in Hardanger, Norway, May 28, 1851, son of Christian and Bertha A. (Kragevik) Rogde. Both parents died in Norway. The maternal grandfather was a soldier in the war between Norway and Sweden when the former country secured its independence. John C. Rogde attended public school in Norway until 14 years of age. He then spent six years on a fishing vessel. In the spring of 1872 he came to America and for a short time resided at Stoughton, in Dane County, Wis., subsequently going to Deerfield in the same county, where for five years he worked on Then with money he had saved he purchased a team of horses and in the farms. spring of 1877 drove to Lyon County, Minn., arriving there in the month of June. For a year or more he worked as a farm hand. Soon after his arrival he had traded his wagon and team for a homestead right in Westerheim township, and in December, 1878, he moved on to it. There he followed farming for 23 years, or until the spring of 1902, when he moved to the town of Eidsvold, settling on a farm which he had purchased in the previous autumn. He sold his farm in the town of Westerheim in 1911, but still owns his fine farm of 480 acres in the town of Eidsvold, which he operated until the spring of 1912. It was at that time that he came to Dunn County and bought a 200-acre farm in the town of Rock Creek, Sections 13, 14 and 24, the buildings being situated in Section 24. He has also since purchased 40 acres in the town of Albany, Pepin County. Mr. Rogde, like all early settlers of this region, experienced some hardships, but having the necessary courage and endurance, he persevered and finally became prosperous. In 1907 he made a trip to his native land, spending three months there, visiting his old home and meeting former acquaintances. When in Norway on a trip in 1923 he made a donation of 5000 Kr. to the community of Ullensvang in Hardanger, this amount to be put at interest for 25 years and at the end of that time to be used by those in charge as a relief fund for needy, aged and crippled persons and poor families. He has also made other charitable donations in his fatherland as well as in America. He was a member of the town board of Westerheim, Lyons County, Minn., for several years and also treasurer of the same town for several years, and in 1884-85 he was assessor. For three years he was a member of the Eidsvold town board. He was one of the organizers of the Farmers & Merchants Supply Co., of Minnesota, was a director of the company for a number of years and is still one of the stockholders. Since coming to Dunn County he has closely identified himself with local affairs and has proved a valuable citizen in his community. Mr. Rogde was first married at Marshall, Minn., Dec. 3, in 1878, to Anna Thompson, who was born in Norway, Feb. 4, 1851, and died in Minneota, Minn., Dec. 25, 1888. Of this union four children were born, Bertha, Albert, Sarah and Carrie. Bertha, who is now Mrs. O. H. Sterk of Marshall, Minn., has three children, Adelaide, Vigo and Helen. Albert, who lives in Taunton, Minn., married Lizzie Kosmolski and has three children, Anna, Harriett and Clyde. Sarah, who first married Joseph White, had by that union four children, Arda, Ariel, Morris and Anna. She is now Mrs. Robert Tyson of St. Paul, Minn. Carrie is the wife of E. Hoover of Rock Creek and the mother of four children, Alden, Clayton, John and Avis. On April 24, 1891, Mr. Rogde married Nancy Ann Heimdahl, who was born in Dane County, Wis., Sept. 3, 1852, daughter of Olaf and Haega (Bergy) Heimdahl. Her parents, who came to this country from Norway, settled in Dane County, Wis., in 1844. Mr. Rogde by his second marriage has two children, Oritha Ann and Gerhart Christen, the former of whom is now Mrs. John Fossum of Rock Creek township. Gerhart Christen, who is a traveling salesman for the Western Grocery Company of Minneapolis, and resides in Menomonie, married Esther Isabel Plumer and has two children, John C. and Gerhart C. Mr. Rogde is a Royal Arch Mason.

Olai Anderson, now living retired in the village of Colfax, after spending half a century in the work of agricultural development in Dunn County, was born in Molsalven, Norway, April 20, 1848, son of Andres Olson and Anna Maria (Gulbranson) Olson. It was in 1862 that the family emigrated to the United States, settling in Dunn County, Wisconsin, on a tract of 160 acres of wild land in the town of Colfax. Having made a clearing, Mr. Olson built a log house and barn and then bought 40 acres more, continuing the work of improvement and carrying on general farming. There he died a widower in 1901, his wife having passed away in 1894. They were the parents of 10 children, of whom two died in infancy, the others accompanying the parents to America, namely, Ole, Martha, Olai, Berit, Nels, Ingeborg, Celanna and Ida. Olai Anderson when old enough attended rural school in his home district and subsequently became his father's helper on the farm. After remaining with his parents until he was 20 years old, he started in for himself, buying 80 acres in the town of Colfax, on the southwest corner of Section 16. Improvements had been made on the place, but only to a limited extent, most of the land being wild. He began at once the creation of a farm, building a frame house and log barn and clearing and breaking the land as fast as he was able. Later he bought 80 additional acres in Section 21, which adjoined his first tract, and afterwards a tract of 20 acres which lay on the west side of his place, which gave him a farm of 180 acres, all of which he worked. By 1889 he was so far advanced that he was able to build a good residence, which he considerably improved in 1914. He then had a barn of 32×60 feet for the main part and with a wing measuring 32×10^{-10} 40 feet with basement, also a large silo, with other buildings, in all a fine set. There Mr. Anderson remained until 1904, when he rented that farm to his son, Albert G., and moved to a location on Section 14, two miles east of Colfax, where he bought a 30-acre tract that included a house. On that place he erected a barn and continued to farm there, though on a small scale, until 1918, when he sold out and moved to Colfax village. Here he built the nice bungalow house which he and his wife now occupy, keeping a cow and chickens to remind them of their old days on the farm and give them a little light occupation. It was on May 15, 1873, that Mr. Anderson was united in marriage with Christina Benson, who was born in Norway, July 23, 1850. They have had nine children, of whom seven are now deceased, the two survivors being Tillie and Albert G. Tillie, who is the wife of Elling Ellingson, a farmer in Bronken Valley, town of Grant, Dunn County, has five children, Florence, Orean, Lloyd, Ida and Elsie. Albert G., the present proprietor of the old home farm in the town of Colfax, was born March 2, 1881. married Oleva Nestad and they have four children, Myrtle, Orvie, Silah and Edler. As seen by the foregoing narrative, Mr. and Mrs. Anderson, though unfortunate in losing so many of their children, have two still left to them, together with nine grandchildren who give promise of being useful men and women bound to perpetuate the family traditions of industry, honesty and good citizenship.

Francis Finley, a pioneer of Dunn County, was born in Philadelphia in 1917, during President Monroe's administration—the fifth president of the United States -and only two years after the conclusion of this country's second war with Gt. The records of his early life are not available, but he probably spent Britain. that period in his native city or state. In due course of time he married Margaret Motheral, a native of Pennsylvania, and in 1859 they joined the tide of emigration westward, coming to Dunn County and settling in the town of Red Cedar, where they took 160 acres of wild land, half a mile south of Rusk and began the task of improving it into a farm. Mr. Finley first built a log house, in which he and his family resided for some years, and atterwards a frame one. He remained in that location until the fall of 1866, when he rented the farm to a tenant and moved with his family to Eau Claire, where for one year he followed the trade of lathe turner, which he had learned in the East. At the end of that time he sold his farm on Rusk Prairie and moved from Eau Claire to Barron County, where he bought 160 acres of land from which he developed another farm, remaining there until 1873. In that year he divided the farm among his sons, and, returning to Dunn County, located on 40 acres of land near Menomonie Junction. This was a tract of timber land that he had owned for some time without any attempt at improvement. He now began the work of clearing it and in the course of time developed a good farm out of the property, making that place his home for the rest of his life, which came to an end in 1887. His wife died before him, in 1879. They had five children: Alfred B., who is deceased; Charles F., now of San Francisco, Calif.; Samuel R., who is settled in the Yakima Valley in the State of Washington; Edward A., of Menomonie, and Anna, now deceased, who married Doctor Wendell.

Edward A. Finley, a well known and respected resident of Menomonie, now retired, but formerly active in agricultural development, was born in Green County, Wisconsin, May 6, 1857, son of Francis and Margaret (Motheral) Finley. As a babe he came with his parents to Dunn County in 1859, was educated in the public schools, and grew to manhood on his father's farm. At the early age of 16 he began operating the farm on shares and he so continued until the father's death in 1887. He then came into possession of 80 acres of his parent's farm in Barron County, and that amount of land not being sufficient for him, he bought 80 acres of railroad land adjoining, which gave him a farm of 160 acres, and he later bought 40 acres more, making 200 in all. On this property he farmed until 1903, in which year he traded it with his father-in-law, A. J. Depew, for 140 acres near Menomonie Junction. This latter place he farmed until 1920, at which time he retired, selling his farm and moving to Menomonie. Here he bought the house in which he now lives, including two acres of land, and located at the corner of 13th Street and 11th Avenue. While engaged in farming Mr. Finley taught rural schools during the winters for over 30 years, and also a number of summer terms, though a self educated man, to a large extent. He served eight years as clerk of the town of Menomonie and for six years was a member of the county agricultural and county normal school boards. For several years he has been a director of the Litnum-Bronze Company of Menomonie. He belongs fraternally to the Beavers and Modern Woodmen of America, and is a member of the Unitarian Society. In 1916 Mr. Finley went to Mission, in southwest Texas, near the Rio Grande, and bought 40 acres of irrigated citrus fruit land, which he still owns. He hires Mexicans to attend to the irrigation and development of his orchard and has himself been down there three winters to look after the property. Mr. Finley was married Oct. 12, 1879, to Hattie Depew of Menomonie, who was born in the town of Spring Brook, Dunn County, May 22, 1859, daughter of Andrew J. and Sarah (Hulbert) Depew. Her parents were early settlers in Dunn County, arriving here in 1857 and locating in the town of Spring Brook, whence in 1869 they moved to a farm at Menomonie Junction. Both died at Deronda, Polk County. Mr. and Mrs. Finley are the parents of two children: Arthur E., born April 4, 1881; and Raymond E., born March 15, 1897. Arthur E., married Belle Markham and they have three children, Inez, Ethel and Jeanette. Raymond E., who is on a farm in the town of Weston, married Edna Huntz. In the winter of 1923-24 Mr. and Mrs. Finley enjoyed a pleasant trip to the far west, visiting many of the principal cities in the different states.

Ole Arntson Samdahl, a pioneer citizen of the town of Red Cedar, now deceased, but who in his day was a prominent farmer here, was born in Horig, Trondhjem, Norway, March 25, 1844, son of Arnt Halverson and Bereth Lund. He was one of a family of ten children, eight sons and two daughters. After completing his early education he entered a seminary in Norway. The was a good period period also had musical ability, which he demonstrated by making a "salmodikon," on also had musical ability, which he accompaniment of the instrument. He also spent five years in the government military service. For six years he was employed by the "lensmand" (sheriff) of Horig, his wages amounting to six dollars During that time many of his friends were leaving for America, and. a year he on learning of the wonderful country decided to come also. He had saved the money earned in the lendsmand's employ, and also some which he had got from selling ryper, which he shot at early dawn. The total amount was not enough, however, to purchase his ticket; so he borrowed the amount needed-$13-from his brother-in-law. The gun he then used and always had for hunting, is still preserved as a relic by his family. He left his home and native land on May 8, 1872, from the port of Trondhjem, Norway, sailing on one of the vessels of the National American line, and reaching New York on June 10, 1872. His ticket was bought for Mankato, Minn., but aboard the ship some of his friends persuaded him to come to Menomonie, Dunn County, Wis., with them, they having friends here, so he decided to follow them. It took the party five days and nights to travel from New York to Chicago, in which latter city young Samdahl changed his ticket for Menomonie, receiving a difference in cash of two dollars and 60 cents. Thev arrived at Menomonie Junction June 15, 1872, and as at that time there was no railroad from the Junction to the village of Menomonie, they made the distance on

The road was lined on both sides with timber, chiefly pine. On arriving in foot. Menomonie Mr. Samdahl found he had only two dollars in Norwegian money left; yet he did not spend it all before earning more, as some of the actual money is still in possession of the family. Three days after his arrival here he began work in the sawmill of Knapp, Stout & Co. (later the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company), but shortly afterwards he went to work as blacksmith, as there was a greater demand for blacksmith's work and better wages were paid for it. He worked at that trade in the employ of the company for about 20 years, and was considered one of the best steel blacksmiths in this region. In the spring of 1879 Peder Larson came to the Knapp-Stout people and offered his farm for sale. Mr. Samdahl thought very little of farming at that time, but went out to look at it. It was an 80-acre farm and Mr. Samdahl decided to buy it, which he did; two years later he purchased the adjoining property from the railroad company, which together comprises the whole There were two small buildings on the place and 20 acres of land under farm. cultivation when Mr. Samdahl began improving the place during his spare time, for he still remained in the employ of the company. For a while he operated by means of hired help, whom he paid partly from nis owns wages earned as a blacksmith, for the income from the farm was not sufficient for that purpose and the prices of farm products were not high. It was in the fall of 1892 that Mr. Samdahl took up his residence on the farm and from that time on he attended personally to it and with such help as he needed, did the land clearing, building, and other work in the line of improvements. He served as director for several years of the school board of his district, and was widely known as an industrious, useful and successful man. He was a member of the Norwegian Evangelical Lutheran Church now known as Our Saviour's Lutheran Church. On Dec. 5, 1921, he was suddenly taken ill and died from pneumonia on Dec. 10. He was a man whom the community could ill afford to lose. Ole A. Samdahl was married May 15, 1878, to Clara A. Bakke, daughter of Erick Jonassen and Anne Melby Bakke. Her paternal grandfather, Jonaas Bakke, who was a tailor in Ringerike, Norway, died in Norway, in 1858, leaving a wife and six children. In 1859 this family left Norway on a two-masted sailboat and after a voyage of five weeks and three days, landed at Quebec, whence they came westward to River Falls, Wis., where they lived eight years, subsequently moving to Fillmore County, Minnesota. The maternal grandparents of Mrs. Clara A. Samdahl, Christian and Bergette Melby, owned and operated a brandy distillery in Aasnes, Soler, Norway. They spent their lives in their native land. Her father, Erick Jonassen, was born March 26, 1834, in Ringerike, Norway. When When 18 years old he enlisted and served five years in the government military service. In June 13, 1859, he married Anne Melby. After that he worked 14 years for the Thurman-Rodick Lumber Company of Christiania, holding the position of foreman. In the spring of 1873 he emigrated to America with his wife and family of six children -two sons and four daughters-and after a seven weeks voyage, arrived at the port of Quebec. After remaining two days at the depot, they took the train to Chicago by the way of Toronto and Detroit, Mich. There a stop was made to see if any of the emigrants wanted to take up land. Leaving Chicago, they had tickets for Fillmore County, Minn., and on the train some previous settlers advised them not to go there on account of the grasshoppers having destroyed crops there the previous_year._ Having relatives who settled near Hastings, Minn., they went there. From Hastings Mr. Jonassen walked to Rush River, Minn., where he had The next morning his brother went over to Hastings brothers and sisters living. The next morning his brother went over to Hastings and brought the family to Rush River, all residing there until the fall, when they took him and his family to Menomonie by way of the old Hudson Road. After arriving here he hired out to work in the sawmill and lumber yard of the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company under Mr. Larcom and Mr. Webber. The church denomination adhered to by the generation on this side has been the Norwegian Vor Frelsers Kirke. To the union of Ole A. and Clara A. Samdahl were born 14 children, 11 of whom are living, namely: Oscar Krafting, born Dec. 1, 1880; Harold Arnold, born July 6, 1882; Edwin Selmer, born April 22, 1886; Clara Olivia, born Nov. 11, 1889; Nathalia Almira and Albertina Miranda (twins), born Oct. 22, 1892; Eilert

Albin, born May 21, 1894; Carl Frederick, born Oct. 10, 1897; Agnes Stephania, born March 25, 1900; Alvin Olger, born May 27, 1903, and Effie Adelia H., born March 30, 1909. In regard to these children the following additional facts are available. Oscar Krafting was educated in the public schools of Menomonie. On Dec. 31, 1913, he was married to Ingeborg Rogstad, daughter of Hans and Anna Rogstad oi Rice Lake, Wis. Since 1903 he has been connected with Crisler, Hartel Co., now A. J. Bull & Co. of Rice Lake, Wis., where he and his wife now reside. They have no children. Harold Arnold, who was educated in the public schools of Menomonie, was married Nov. 10, 1910, to Bertina Samstad, daughter of John and Mollie Evjen Samstad of Badger, Minn. He was formerly a conductor on one of the Grand Forks street car lines. Since 1916 he has made his home in Menomonie and is now a painter by trade. Edwin Selmer, educated in the common school, married Louise Mathilda, daughter of Henry and Wilhelmine Harnisch of Menomonie, on June 6, 1911, and resides on a farm in the town of Spring Brook. He and his wife are the parents of three children, namely: Alice Linka H., born Aug. 15, 1912; Frances May O., born May 16, 1917; and Janet Olita A., born Dec. 13, 1921. Clara Olivia acquired her education in the common and high schools and in the business college at La Crosse, Wis. She was employed as stenographer by the Excelsior Brick Co., also by the Bloomer Machine Works of Bloomer, Wis., and subsequently in the law office of District Attorney J. C. Ticknor, this being prior to this country's entrance into the World War. During the war she took a U.S. civil service examination in the commercial course, and having passed, obtained a position as stenographer in the construction division of the Engineering Department of the Ordinance. She was promoted to the Research and Secret Department, and later transferred as section-chief and chief in the adjutant-general's office, which position she held for a year. For the past five years she has been stenographic reporter in the law office of District Attorney J. C. Ticknor. Of the twins, Nathalia Almira and Albertina Miranda attended the common school and are still living at home. Carl Frederick was educated in the common school and agricultural school. In 1918, after enlisting for World War service, he entered the students' army training corps at Beloit College, Beloit, Wis., and after completing the course there he sailed for overseas Nov. 13, 1918. He left Camp Grant, Rockford, Ill., Oct. 19, 1918, with that division, under Captain Hopkins, for Camp Crane, Penn.; was transferred there to the Medical Ambulance Service No. 620 as first class private, and was then transferred to Camp Merritt, N. J., where he and his comrades made preparations to leave for overseas. They sailed on the British Empire ship under the British flag from the port of New York on Nov. 13, 1918, landing at Liverpool, England, after a 13 days' passage, Nov. 26. From Liverpool they were sent to Windledown, where they remained two weeks in rest camp, being then transferred to Southampton, from which port they crossed the English Channel to Le Havre, France. Thence they were transferred to Ferrieres "Blew" le Bourg, where they got ready to drive Ford ambulance trucks, evacuating wounded soldiers from hospital to hospital and remaining there until Jan. 1, 1919. They were then transferred to Paris, where they had three days allowed them for sight seeing. They were next transferred to the encampment at Schletstadt, Germany, evacuating wounded soldiers from hospital to hospital. Later they had 14 days allowed them to visit cities of southern France and northern Italy, such as Nice and Monte Carlo. Then they returned to Schletstadt, Germany, to visit the Kaiser's palace, a guard accompanying every two men. Preparations made, they left Schletstadt for Brest, whence they sailed for home May 24 on a U. S. battleship, arriving at Brook-lyn Pier No. 4, N. Y., June 4, thence going to Camp Dix, N. J., and being transferred to Camp Grant, Rockford, Ill., where they were discharged June 17, 1919. Carl Frederick Samdahl was married Jan. 26, 1924, to Hazel Hutchins, daughter of James and Estella Hutchins, of Eau Galle, Wis., and they have one child, Donald, who was born July 7, 1924. Agnes Stephania graduated from the common school, attended high school, and was subsequently graduated from the Teachers' Training School of Menomonie. She subsequently taught school for five years-three in Dunn and two in Eau Claire County-then attended three summer sessions at the

Eau Claire State Normal School. She is now a dental student at Marquette University, Milwaukee, Wis. Alvin Olger was educated in the common school and the Dunn County School of Agriculture, and is residing at home. Effie Adelia H., a graduate of the common school, is now a sophomore in the Menomonie High School.

Ingebret Klefstad, a substantial farmer in the town of Sheridan, who, during many years has been building up a good place in Section 27, was born in Norway, June 4, 1859, son of Eric and Anna Klefstad. The family came to the United States in 1883 and also to Dunn County, the father renting a farm in the town of Sheridan for a while. Finally he and his son Ingebret bought 160 acres in Section 27, town of Sheridan, which was a tract of wild land. The usual pioneer log house and barn were built and the family set to work to build up a home. On this place Eric Klefstad died seven years later. His wife Anna died in 1907. They had been the parents of seven children, of whom six are now living, namely: Ingebret, Sigrid, Anna, Iver, Ole and Rande. Sigrid is the wife of Easton Often, Anna the the wife of Edward Erickson, Iver resides in Barron County, Ole in Minnesota and Rande in South Dakota. The one deceased is Sarah. Ingebret Klefstad lived in Norway until he was 20 years old, attending school for the usual period and after-wards finding general employment. In 1879 he came to the United States and to Dunn County, Wisconsin, locating at Cedar Falls, and working in the woods in winter and on the drive in spring. In the summers he worked on farms and also at times in the mills. After he and his father had purchased the land in Section 27, town of Sheridan, already referred to, he helped to develop it and since his father's death he has made a number of improvements. These include the erection of a frame house of 10 rooms, also a frame barn and silo. Here he has since been engaged in general farming and dairying except for a period of three years during which he had a tenant on the place. His herd contains 18 head of mixed cattle, and he raises a few hogs for home use. For two years he served the town as road overseer. Mr. Klefstad was married in the town of Sheridan in 1903 to Mattie Solen, daughter Ole and Anna Solen, both now deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Klefstad had seven chil-dren, of whom four are living, namely, Eric, Agnes, Olena and Helen. These deceased are Ole, Anna and Odine. The mother, Mrs. Mattie Klefstad, died in a Minneapolis hospital in 1919 after undergoing an operation.

Hans Swenby, furniture dealer in Menomonie, 30 years ago a Norwegian immigrant boy of 16, now one of the leading merchants in this enterprising and prosperous city, was, as already intimated, born in Norway, the date of his nativity being Sept. 13, 1877, and the names of his parents Ole and Inga (Burud) Swenby. For many years the father was engaged in the lumber business in Norway, and there he and his wife remained until 1891, when they came to America. They were not the first members of the family to arrive here, as several of their children had preceded them. As a resident of this country Ole Swenby lived a practically retired life, though it was many years before he passed away, his death occurring in January, 1920. He was then a widower, his wife Inga having died in May, 1918. Hans Swenby acquired a good public school education in Norway, being graduated from the high school there. He then began to learn the trade of upholsterer, which in time he thoroughly mastered. It was in 1893 that he came to America, locating in Menomonie, and the day after his arrival he secured a position in the upholstery department of the Gallaway Furniture Co., with which concern he remained eight years. During the early part of that period, soon after his arrival here, he attended public school two months in order to familiarize himself better with the English language, and also at two different periods he attended the State University of Minnesota, taking up the study of embalming and funeral directing. During his last four years with the Galloway concern he had charge of their undertaking department. In 1901 Mr. Swenby engaged in business for himself in the furniture and undertaking business, with Frank Hintzman as a partner. His association with Mr. Hintzman lasted four years and since the end of that time he has conducted business alone. In 1920 he sold the undertaking department of his business to Carl Olson, having since confined himself to dealing in furniture, with an upholstery branch in connection with it. In both lines he is doing a fine business. He is affiliated fraternally with the Modern Woodmen of America, the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the I. S. W. A. He is also a member of the Norwegian Lutheran Church. Mr. Swenby was married June 10, 1902, to Mattie Furbur of Menomonie and he and his wife are the parents of two children: Esther L., born Nov. 25, 1903, who is a graduate of the Menomonie High School and a student in the Stout Institute; and Melvin E., born Jan. 14, 1906, who has the same educational record. The family home is at 1221 Second Street; Mr. Swenby's place of business at 308 Main Street.

Sever Sommervold, proprietor of the Sommervold cabinet works on Sixth Avenue West, Menomonie, was born in Orkedalen, Norway, March 30, 1883, son of John and Millie (Amundson) Sommervold. The parents lived and died in Norway, their native land, the mother passing away in 1900 and the father in 1923. After attending public and high school in Norway, Sever Sommervold learned the trade of carpenter and cabinet-maker. In 1902, a youth of 19, he came to the United States to better his fortune, and, like the great majority of his countrymen, naturally gravitated to the Northwest. Having an aunt, Martha Brerad, in Menomonie, he came first to this city and stopped with her for a while. From July until October, that year, he worked for farmers, being busily engaged during the threshing season. In October he went to the woods for the Chippewa Lumber & Boom Co. and was in their employ until March, 1903. Then he began working for Sever Olson, a carpenter and contractor with whom he remained that summer. His next employment was with the Dunn County Sash & Door Co., and lasted three years, at the end of which time the concern went out of business. After that and until 1913 Mr. Sommervold was with Govin & Hanson, who also were contractors and builders. He terminated his service with them by buying them out and going into business for himself in the Govin & Hanson shop, and here he has since re-He manufactures sash and doors and does all kinds of cabinet work to mained. order. A highly skilled workman, and thoroughly reliable in business matters, he has built up a large trade which is still gradually increasing. His shop is equipped with all necessary machinery, such as a jointer, moulder, tenon mortiser, rip saws, and a large collection of hand tools. Mr. Sommervold was married Dec. 1, 1906, to Amelia Johnson, who was born in Mencmonie, Nov. 10, 1884, a daughter of John and Hanna (Larson) Johnson, who settled in Menomonie in 1880. The father died in 1916 but the mother is still living. Mr. and Mrs. Sommervold have one child, Melvin John. Mr. Sommervold is a member of the Knights of Pythias and the Scandanavian American Fraternity. In 1920 he made a trip to Norway to see his father and other relations and old friends, being away three months. He and his family are members of the Norwegian Lutheran Church.

Henry Quilling, who made a good record as agriculturist in the town of Red Cedar, but is now retired, though still living on the farm on which he has made his home for many years, was born in the town of Spring Brook, Dunn County, Sept. 5, 1857, son of Christian and Dorothy (Hecht) Quilling. As a boy he attended district school in the town of Spring Brook and subsequently worked for his father on the home farm until arriving at the age of 18 years. At that time he and his brother John rented the farm and operated it together until the father's death. The property was then divided, each of the two sons mentioned receiving 120 acres, 80 acres coming to Henry being located in Section 36, of the town of Red Cedar and 40 more in Section 1 west in the town of Spring Brook. Later he bought another tract of 80 acres, which gave him 200 acres, and this during the subsequent years he improved by dilligent toil into a fine farm, continuing to operate it until 1921. In that year he sold 100 acres of it to his only son Leonard, to whom he also rents the other 100 acres. Mr. Quilling was married June 30, 1884, in the town of Spring Brook, Dunn County, to Elizabeth Schaefer, who was born Sept. 3, 1862, in this town, the daughter of Carl and Magdalene (Brioer) Schaefer, her parents, now deceased, having settled in this town in pioneer days. Mr. and Mrs. Quilling have had three children, Laura, Phylia, and Leonard, one of whom, however, they have lost, as Laura, who married William Webert, died May 25, 1923, leaving three children, Vern, Maurice and Ervin. Phylia is the wife of Samuel A. B. Ausman of Elk Mound, and has had three children, Dorothy, Eleanore and Loraine, of whom Eleanore died March 4, 1924. Leonard married Lillian Lentz and he and his wife are the parents of three children, Alvin, Marjorie and Ruth. Mr. and Mrs. Quilling are typical home folks, as they were born and reared and have always lived within a few miles of the respective birth places, both in the town of Spring Brook. They are members of Salem Lutheran Church in Spring Brook.

John Quilling, a widely known citizen of the town of Spring Brook, has the. unique record of having lived for 69 years on the same farm, as he was born here on Jan. 5, 1856, and it has been his home ever since. His parents were Christian and Dorothy (Hecht) Quilling, elsewhere mentioned in this work. His elementary education was acquired in a district school in this town, and he also followed a two-year course in the Menomonie High School. Industrially he gave his attention to agriculture, assisting his father in the development of the home farm. At the age of 21, the father having retired. John took charge of it and it was subsequently deeded to him on the father's death as his share of the estate. It is a farm of 200 acres in Section 1 west, and he has cleared and developed a considerable part of it as sole proprietor in addition to what he did while helping his father. The buildings erected by the latter having been destroyed by fire, our subject has built a second set, which are modern and conveniently placed and the farm is in excellent condition and well managed. In connection with his general farming operations Mr. Quilling has bought and sold stock to a considerable extent on commission, and this business has made him well acquainted with many farmers in Dunn County and the vicinity, among whom his reputation stands high as a man of integrity. At various times he has shown a commendable public spirit by extending his aid and influence to worthy causes-to any cause, in fact, calculated to benefit the moral or material interests of the community at large. He has been for many years an earnest worker in the Salem Evangelical Church in the town of Spring Brook and has served as a member of the Sunday school for nearly 40 years. Mr. Quilling was married on April 15, 1876, at his home in the town of Spring Brook to Amelia Vest, who was born in Green County, Wis., Sept. 17, 1858, daughter of Henry W. and Angeline (Spike) Vest. Her father, a native of England, and her mother, of Switzerland, were married in Madison, Wis., and spent the remainder of their lives in this state. Mr. and Mrs. Quilling have been the parents of 12 children, 11 of whom are now living, and have at the present time 50 grandchildren, an impressive family record. The children are William G., Samuel J., Peter F., Walter H., Sarah L., Alice H., Sherman A., Nellie D., Frank L., Rose A., James H. and Grace. The individual record of the children is, briefly given, as follows. William G., born Nov. 27, 1877, and now living at Hardin, Mont., married Emma Seng and has five children, Virgin, Vernon, Idell, Ethel and William (Billie). Samuel J., born July 17, 1879, now a substantial and progressive farmer in the town of Spring Brook, married Anna Dahms, who died June 30, 1924. There were six children of the marriage; Earl and and Roy (twins), Ralph, Pearl, Mabel and Florence, of whom Roy is now deceased. Peter F., born March 4, 1881, now residing at Lambert, Mont., married Mattie Wagner and has six children, Bessie, Blanche, Helen, May, Katherine and Jane. Walter H., born April 26, 1883, who is living at Sidney, Mont., married Sylvia Tubbs, and has six children, Jennie, Emma, Clara, Elva, Walter and Gordon. Sarah L., born June 26, 1885, and now Mrs. Martin O'Brien of Eau Claire, is the mother of ten children, George, Thomas, Alice, Martin, John, Marion, Katherine, Barney, Patrick and Irene. Alice H., born Feb. 22, 1888, is the only deceased child of Mr. and Mrs. Quilling, she having died a babe on June 8, the year of her Sherman A., born Aug. 26, 1890, and now a farmer in the town of Spring birth. Brook, married Georgia Miller and has four children, Harold, Robert, Keith and Clinton. Nellie D., born Nov. 2, 1892, and now Mrs. Roy Miller of Eau Claire, has four children, Ruth, Hazel, Howard and Mildred. Frank L., born Jan. 7, 1894, married Nellie Rowley and has three children, Orvill, Willis and Doris. He and his family live on the home farm. Rose A., born Jan. 8, 1896, and now the wife of Malcom Campbell of Eau Claire, has five children, Mary, Allen, Katherine, James and Roy. James H., born Sept. 11, 1899, who married Grace Barber, is now living in Idaho. Grace, born May 13, 1905, is on the home farm. Mr. and Mrs. Quilling and their children who are home, are members of the Salem Evangelical Church, in the town of Spring Brook, Mrs. Quilling being also an active member of the Ladies' Aid Society.

Anfin Anderson, now living retired in the village of Meridean after a long and active career, first as a lumber and mill worker and later as a farmer, was born near Trondhjem, Norway, June 20, 1845. He was educated in his native land and was there confirmed in the Lutheran Church. Coming to America in 1867, he located in Menomonie, Wis., and worked there seven months for Knapp, Stout & Co., that winter attending English school in the town of Peru. During the following summer he worked in Porter's Mills in Eau Claire County, and in 1869, 1870 and 1871 he was employed in the sawmills at old Meridean. He then began farming in the town of Peru, buying 55 acres of land in Section 11, on which he erected buildings and where in time he developed a good farm. Selling it in 1894, he bought 120 acres in the town of Rock Creek, which farm he later enlarged by the purchase of an additional tract of 125 acres, carrying on general agriculture there until 1904. He then sold that farm also and went to the state of Washington, but in September. the same year, returned to Wisconsin and bought 40 acres of land near Mondovi in Buffalo County, in whick vicinity his son Anton owned a farm of 170 acres. Mr. Anderson purchased that farm, which he operated until 1920, when he sold it, and until April, 1923, lived retired in the village of Mondovi, when he came to Meridean, where he bought the residence he now occupies. Mr. Anderson has been described as a gentleman of the old school, fond of good literature and all those things which elevate the mind and refine the manners but which are too often neglected in the struggle for the material benefits of life. He was married in October, 1871, to Louisa Olson, who was born in Norway, Oct. 20, 1845. After living together in happy wedlock for 46 years, they were separated by death, Mrs. Anderson passing away on Jan. 20, 1918. They had been the parents of four children, Anton, Mary, Ole and Nels. Anton, a resident of Mondovi, Buffalo County, married Lizzie Fitzgerald, but has no children. Mary, who married Ole Austinson, died in August, 1909, leaving four children, Mabel, Alice, John and Marion. Ole, who married Agnes Johnson, died in Montana, Dec. 8, 1918, their surviving children being Lyle, Kermit, Robert and Ogden. Nels died in 1887. Thus, of Mr. Anderson's immediate family, he and his son Anton are the only surviving members, but the grandchildren bid fair to perpetuate the family stock and do it full credit.

Charley Wolf, proprietor of a farm of 280 acres in Sections 15 and 16, town of Eau Galle, and a resident of Dunn County for over 40 years, was born in Soden, Germany, May 4, 1859, son of Wendlin and Margaret (Carl) Wolf. He acquired his education in the schools of his native land and subsequently became both a wood and stone worker, learning the mason's trade. It was in 1880 at the age of 21 that he emigrated to the United States, arriving in the village of Eau Galle, Dunn County, Wis., October 1. Here he found employment in the yards of Carson & Rand. In the following year he went to Shell Lake, arriving there July 16. That place was then a wild tract covered with timber, there being neither a town nor any roads. It was necessary for the first settlers to cut down large pine trees to make a roadway, which later became one of the principal streets. When Mr. Wolf arrived, almost the first objects that met his eye were some Indians, who were very numerous in the vicinity. Having never seen any before, he was quite fascinated with their appearance. He remained at Shell Lake several years, working in the sawmill during the summers and in the woods during the winters. In 1885 Mr. Wolf returned to Dunn County and bought 80 acres of land in Section 15, town of Eau Galle. The greater part of the tract was wild land, but there was an old log house on the place, put up by some former owner who had given up the idea of creating a farm there. Mr. Wolf, however, was anxious to begin the building of a home, for he was married in Sept., 1885, that year, to Matilda Zinkan, who was born in Soden, Germany, June 9, 1861. She had arrived in the United States in 1883, first locating in Chicago, whence she had come to Eau Galle. Into the old log house above mentioned Mr. Wolf moved with his wife, and then began a long period of hard work and self denial in the effort to build a home. That very fall he put up a frame house of 16 x 24 feet and moved from the old log cabin into the new one, and then began clearing the land. Other buildings were erected in time, as progress was made, and further improvements and additions made to the house. His first building worthy to be called a barn was erected in 1906 and measured 36 x 60 feet in ground plan. In 1914 he put up another barn of the same size, both having basements. He has also erected other fine out-buildings, sunk a 50-foot well and put a windmill over it for pumping water, and by additional purchase has increased his holdings until he now has 280 acres. This extra land includes a second farm, in Section 16, on which he has also put up excellent buildings. In 1921 he built a fine, modern ten-room house, and in 1922 a full basement barn of 36×96 feet. He has cleared altogether about 120 acres of his land, the balance being in pasture and timber. He is engaged in mixed and dairy farming, having a fine herd of cows. Mr. and Mrs. Wolf are the parents of six children: Eugene, residing on the home farm; Ida, also on the farm; John, working on his father's other farm in Section 16, who married Olivia Lechler and has one child, Alfred; Amy, wife of Charles Weber of the town of Weston and the mother of a son, Bernard; William who graduated from the Wisconsin Business College and is now with the Northern States Power Co. in their office at La Crosse; and Charles, a graduate of the Durand High School and the Wisconsin Business College at La Crosse, who is now holding a position as stenographer, bookkeeper and general office man with the Durand Auto Co. at Durand.

Max Maves, a prominent farmer of the town of Spring Brook, was born in the town of Elk Mound, Dunn County, Wis., Dec. 7, 1879, son of Charles and Augusta (Hine) Maves. He was educated in the Beyers school in the town of Red Cedar and until 24 years of age remained on the home farm assisting his parents. Then going to California, he spent four years there, during two years of that time being engaged in operating a rented farm with his cousin, William Maves, and the rest of the time doing common labor. Having returned to Wisconsin, in 1908 he took up his residence on his present farm of 240 acres in Sections 13 and 18 of the town of Spring Brook, the place at that time being owned by his father. In October, 1915, he bought it and has since erected on it a fine barn, silo and other buildings. He has a fine herd of grade and pure bred Holstein cattle and is a stockholder in the Rusk Cooperative Creamery. Mr. Maves was married on Dec. 1, 1908, in the town of Spring Brook, to Ida Schaefer, who was born April 1, 1882, the daughter of Henry and Mary (Sipple) Schaefer. He and his wife are the parents of six children, who were born as follows: Irene, Oct. 16, 1909; Stella, Aug. 22, 1911; Verne, Sept. 21, 1913; Irving, Jan. 23, 1916; Willard, Aug. 20, 1917; and Loraine, July 20, 1919. The Maves family are members of the Salem Church on Iron Creek.

William F. McKanna, proprietor of Brookside Home in Section 24, town of Lucas, was born on this farm Jan. 19, 1886, son of Thomas and Mary (Kinny) McKanna. He was educated in what is now the Sunnyside School, and as a young man remained at home with his parents helping his father to develop the farm, which he took over in 1918 and has successfully operated since. He is engaged quite extensively in dairying, his farm being well stocked with high grade Holstein cattle and for the improvement of his stock he keeps in his herd a pure bred sire. Mr. McKanna is recognized today as one of the leading young farmers in the town of Lycas, which he served for two years as treasurer; for the last six years he has also served as clerk of the Sunnyside School. He is a stockholder in the New Hudson Road Creamery. In religion he is a Catholic and his fraternal society affiliations are with the Knights of Columbus. On Nov. 30, 1918, Mr. McKanna was united in marriage with Frances Traxler, who was born in the town of Menomonie, Dunn County, Wis., daughter of Mark and Mary (Frisle) Traxler. He and his wife are the parents of one child, William P., who was born March 17, 1921. The family are members of St. Joseph's (Catholic) Congregation in Menomonie.

Mark Traxler, who for many years was well known as one of the leading farmers in the town of Menomonie, was born in Waukesha, Wis., March 21, 1856, son of Albert and Theresa (Seger) Traxler. As a child he came to Dunn County with his parents in 1862, and he was still quite young when his mother died, after which he made his home with his elder brother John, until 1886. In that year he married and settled on a tract of land in Sections 5 and 6, town of Mencmonie, and this, during the course of some 37 years he developed into a fine farm. He died Oct. 13, 1923. His marriage, above referred to, united him with Mary Frisle, who was born in Austria, Sept. 25, 1865, and had come to America with her parents when three years old, the family settling first in Pepin County, Wis., near Durand. Later her parents moved to Barron County, where they spent their last years. Mr. and Mrs. Mark Traxler were the parents of five children, Mary E., who died in infancy, Frances, Mark Jr., John and Frank A., whose further record is briefly as follows: Frances, who, after acquiring the elements of knowledge in the district school, pursued further studies in the Dunn County Agricultural School, the Dunn County Normal School and the Stevens Point Normal School, and subsequently taught rural school in Dunn County for eight years and grade school at Elk Mound for four vears, after which she became the wife of William F. McKanna. Mark Traxler, Jr., born Oct. 12, 1890, married Emma Dahl and now operates a farm in the town of Hav River. John, born June 23, 1892, who is now operating his father's old farm in the town of Menomonie, married Olga Peterson; they have been the parents of two children, Harold J., born Sept. 23, 1923, who died March 9, 1924, and Robert J., born Oct. 22, 1924. Frank A., born July 10, 1894, married Mrs. Arthur Leach, who in maiden life was Lillian Dolezal, and he and his wife reside in St. Paul, Minn.; they have one child, La Vern, born Sept. 27, 1922. Frank A. Traxler enlisted for service in the World War, Aug. 4, 1917, trained at Camp Douglas until Sept. 16; was thus sent to Camp MacArthur at Waco, Texas, arriving there Sept. 19, and there trained until Feb. 2, 1918; thence went to Camp Merritt, N. J., remaining there until Feb. 14, or the day they sailed; landed in Brest, March 1; thence went to Percy De La Petet, and was there transferred to Company C, 28th U.S. Infantry, going into the trenches on the Toul Sector, March 23. His regiment was relieved April 5 by the 102nd Infantry, and he was then transferred to the Cantigny Sector, where he saw intense shell fire; was relieved from that front July 10, and after five days rest was sent to the Sissons front and was there wounded July 19, 1918. After spending several months in French hospitals, he returned to the United States, and was discharged Jan. 31, 1920.

Ole Erickson Hagen, A. M., M. L., Ph. D., one of the best known citizens in the southeastern part of Dunn County, was born in Skiaker, Gudbrandsdalen, Norway, Sept. 28, 1850. He came to the United States with his parents in 1869, settling near Rock Falls, Dunn County. He was fitted for college at Galesville University and entered the University of Wisconsin in 1878, being graduated in 1882. In the following year he occupied the chair of Greek and Latin in Galesville University, then returned to the University of Wisconsin and in 1884 completed the graduate courses for master degrees. The same year he was recalled to Galesville University, where he filled the chair of Greek and Latin until June, 1886, when he resigned in order to study in Europe. For several years he pursued classical, oriental, and archeological studies at, or in connection with, the University of Leipzig, carrying on his investigations for a considerable portion of the time at the great archeological centers in Europe, principally the British Museum in London, the Palais de Louvre in Paris, and the Roval Museum in Berlin, Germany. Returning to the United States, he accepted the chair of modern languages in the University of South Dakota, in 1891, but in 1899 was transferred to the classical department; occupying the chair of Greek, Hebrew and Scandanavian languages and literature. In 1901 he resigned his position in the University of South Dakota and has since resided with his family on his farms near Meridean and Rock Falls, Dunn County, Wis. Dr. Hagen has received the following degrees: from the University of Wisconsin, A. B. and B. L. in 1882, and A. M. and M. L. in 1884; from the University of Leipzig, A. M. and Ph. D. in 1890. Among his contributions to philology and archeology that have already appeared, or are ready for publication, may be mentioned the following: "Keilschrifturkunden zur Geschichte des Koenigs Cyrus;" "Saparda-Zur Ethnologie Lydiens;" "Untersuchungen Zur Ethnologie und Vorgeschichte Westerans;" "Anzan-Reich und Volk des Alten Elams;" and "On the Geographical Situation of Saparda." Numerous other contributions of a more general nature, both in prose and poetry, are not enumerated here. Dr. O. E. Hagen was married Sept. 14, 1898, to Constance E. Johnson, who was born in Minneapolis, Minn., July 20, 1874. In June, 1884 she came to reside in the vicinity of Rock Falls, Dunn County, Wis., but in the summer of 1892 went back to Minneapolis. Dr. and Mrs. Hagen have been the parents of two sons: Leif Einvald, born Feb. 18, 1900, who died March 13, 1908; and Odin Einar, born Oct. 1, 1903, who is living with them on their farm near Rock Falls.

Lewis E. Hagen.-The name of Hagen is one of the best known in the southern part of Dunn County, where for half a century it has carried weight as representing a high type of cultured citizenship, not only successful in self-advancement, but helpful and efficient in promoting the public interest. During an agricultural career of many years the subject of this sketch has achieved practical and lasting results, and as a public official has rendered valuable service to his town and county. Mr. Hagen was born in Gudbrandsdalen, Skjaak, Norway, March 12, 1858, son of Erik and Kari (Skjei) Hagen, who also, as may be surmised, were natives of that country, the father born in 1822, and the mother in 1816. It was in 1869 that they emigrated to the United States, settling first in Eau Claire, Wis., where they remained for one year, Erik Hagen doing carpenter and mill work. In 1870 he brought his family to Dunn County and began the development of a farm, taking 80 acres of wild land in Section 16, town of Rock Creek. The task before him was a long one and called for much patience, determination and hard work, besides the ability to endure temporary hardship; but, stout of heart and strong of hand, he was well fitted for it, and had a worthy helpmate in his good wife, who cheerfully performed her duties during the span of years that were allotted to her. After making considerable progress on his original tract, Erik Hagen bought 160 acres of additional land in Section 17, which gave him a farm of 240 acres, and this he continued to improve and operate until 1885, when he turned its management over to his son, Lewis E., he and his wife continuing to reside on it. A few years later, on March 4, 1890, she passed away at the age of about 74 years. Though feeling deeply this bereavement as the severance of his closest earthly tie, he survived her until May 15, 1908, when he, too, took his final leave of earth. Thus departed two worthy pioneers of Dunn County who had well played their part in the mighty work of its development and civilization. They were the parents of four children, Karn, Ole E., Maria and Lewis E. Maria died at the age of 66 years, while Ole E., is separately mentioned in this volume. Karn, who was born Jan. 16, 1848, became the wife of Lorentz C. Johnson, who died Jan. 24, 1902. They had six children, Emily C., Emma C., Laura D., Agnes C., Oscar O. and Carl Emil, of whom Emma C. died April 14, 1896, and Carl Emil in infancy in 1876. Mrs. Johnson resides on the farm with her brother Lewis E. Lewis E. Hagen, unlike most youths of his day in this then undeveloped country, was fortunate in being able to obtain a good education, as, after acquiring the elements of knowledge in the rural schools, he became a student in Gale College at Galesville, Wis., and subsequently attended the University of Wisconsin. He grew to manhood on his parents' farm, which he helped his father to develop, thereby acquiring a good practical knowledge of agriculture, both under pioneer and modern conditions, and when he took over its management in 1885 he was well prepared for the task. He continued to improve and cultivate it and in 1893 he bought it. It then contained 240 acres and was in good condition In 1907 Mr. Hagen purchased an adjoining farm of 120 for a farm of those days. acres and for several years thereafter conducted both. His active career as a farmer was brought to a close in 1910, when he met with a severe accident, losing his left hand in a corn husker, and in the following year he rented out the farm, though he has since continued to reside on it. It is a well kept piece of property, with fine buildings and broad, well cultivated fields properly fenced. In early days he kept Pole Durham cattle, but replaced them later with Holsteins, of which breed the herd now consists. On several occasions Mr. Hagen has identified himself with business enterprises not directly connected with the management of his farm. In 1898 he set on foot the movement that resulted in the organization of the Meridean Cooperative Creamery, of which he was for 11 years the secretary, treasurer and manager. He also helped to organize, in 1911, the Rock Falls and Meridean Telephone Company, which he is now serving as secretary and manager, and he is a stockholder in the Meridean State Bank. With respect to his service in public office, he was for ten years chairman of the board of supervisors of the town of Rock Creek, and during the same period, by virtue of that office, a member of the county board. He served as town clerk for 11 years, was assessor for one year, and was school clerk of District No. 5 from 1886 to 1914, when he was elected school treasurer, in which position he is still serving. During his long career Mr. Hagen has kept his integrity unspotted, and in his connection with public affairs, as well as in the management of his private business, has shown a degree of wisdom and foresight that have made an impression upon his fellow citizens, who have often consulted him on matters of importance. His advice is always freely given when sought, and he has always been ready to help those in need or to support any worthy cause. He is a consistent member of the Lutheran Church. Mr. Hagen has never married.

Mike Weber, proprietor of Fertile Valley Farm in Section 28, town of Eau Galle, was born in Austria, Sept. 26, 1878, son of John and Agnes (Risler) Weber. The family came to the United States in July, 1880, settling in Pepin County, Wisconsin, on 100 acres of wild land in the town of Lima, which he cleared and broke, also building a frame house as the family home. He continued to farm that property until his death on July 22, 1891. His wife, surviving him 18 years, died on the farm Aug. 13, 1909. They were the parents of seven children: Mary, who became the wife of Fred Brunner, but is now deceased; John, residing in the town of Peru, Dunn County; L. F., of the town of Lima, Pepin County; Lena, now Mrs. John Fride of Peruficience Without in Mary, With the town of Lima, Pepin County; Lena, now Mrs. John Feide of Buffalo County, Wisconsin; Mike, of the town of Eau Galle, Dunn County; Frances, who is Mrs. Anton Foster of the town of Lima, Pepin County, and Ignatz, who is residing on the old home farm in Pepin County. Mike Weber was educated in the Luna School in the town of Lima, Pepin County. He remained at home until he was 26 years old, helping his mother after his father's death to develop the farm. He then bought a farm of 120 acres in the town of Rock Creek, Dunn County, improved, which two years later he traded for a farm in the town of Lima, Pepin County. After keeping and operating the latter for two years, he sold it and bought his present farm of 177 acres in Section 28, town There was a brick house on the place, but Mr. Weber has put up of Eau Galle. all the other buildings, including a basement barn of 36 x 64 feet, erected in 1912, and furnished with drinking cups for the cattle. He has also drilled a well of 163 feet in depth, from which he obtains his water supply, and has broken some land on the place. In the fall of 1922 he bought an adjoining farm of 142 acres, with buildings, among which are a fine basement barn of 36 x 72 feet installed with the James equipment. The combined area of the two farms in 320 acres. Mr. Weber is engaged principally in dairy farming, keeping grade Holstein cattle, with a pure bred sire. He also raises Duroc-Jersey hogs. He has served in school office and is a member of the Catholic Knights. He was married Nov. 15, 1904, to Hanna Bauer, who was born in the town of Lima, Pepin County, April 27, 1887. He and his wife have nine children, the first of whom, Philip, was born in the town of Rock Creek, April 20, 1906. The others are: Lucy, born Jan. 3, 1908; Lavigne, June 7, 1911; Marie, April 19, 1913; Raymond, July 31, 1914; Leonaro, August 17, 1917; Loraine, Jan. 4, 1920; George, May 8, 1922; and Galen Frederick, born Aug. 7, The family are members of St. Henry's Catholic Church. 1924.

Charles F. Unser, proprietor of Hill Crest Dairy Farm in the town of Eau Galle, who has made a good record along the line of agricultural development, was born in the town of Waterville, Pepin County, Wis., Sept. 16, 1882, son of Silas and Mary (Notham) Unser. He acquired his education in the Liddy district school of that town and in the public school at Arkansaw, Pepin County. After laying aside his school books he spent his time in assisting his father and in working out. In the spring of 1908 he bought his present farm of 120 acres, which, though it had been improved and operated, was pretty well run down and had but poor buildings. Mr. Unser set himself the task of building it up again. In 1912 he built a fine barn of 22 x 44 feet in ground plan, with balloon frame studdings. It is fitted up with the James equipment of stanchions, drinking cups and other barn necessaries, water for the farm buildings being derived from an over-ground cistern with windmill attachment. In 1915 Mr. Unser erected a large silo, and in addition to these improvements, he has fenced the farm and broken and developed about 10 acres of additional land. He largely follows dairy farming, having a fine herd of grade and pure bred Holstein cattle with a pure bred sire. He also keeps pure bred Duroc-Jersey swine, and has shown himself to be a practical man in every branch of his business. Mr Unser takes an active part in the general welfare of the community. For nine years he was clerk of School District No. 5, then was out four years and, being subsequently re-elected, is now serving in that position. He is also serving in his fourth year as a member of the town board. He has membership in the Beavers' Reserve Fund and belongs also to the Catholic Knights and the Knights of Columbus. Mr. Unser was married June 18, 1907, to Nellie Pease of the town of Eau Galle, where she was born Aug. 5, 1882, daughter of Albert and Anna (Davidson) Pease. Her parents were early settlers in the town of Eau Galle. Her father died Sept. 5, 1910, but her mother is still living and is a resident of Elmwood, Pierce County. Mr. and Mrs. Unser are the parents of eight children, who were born as follows: Ethel L., May 17, 1908; Donald C., Feb. 17, 1912; Kenneth E., Dec. 1, 1913; Floyd F., Nov. 23, 1916; Charles Silas, Nov. 1, 1918; Dorothy B., Nov. 29, 1920; Catherine Marie, March 24, 1923, and Loraine Isabelle, July 2, 1925. Mr Unser and family are members of St. Henry's Catholic Church at Eau Galle.

William Huber, a pioneer of the city of Menomonie, now deceased, was born in Lindau, Bavaria, on Dec. 13, 1825. He was there educated and grew to manhood. In January, 1856, he married Waldberga Schmidt, who was born at Geislingen, Wurtemburg, March 3, 1832. Soon after their marriage the young couple sailed for the United State:, landing in this country May 16, 1856, and coming west to Menomonie, Wis., which place they reached in June. The latter part of their trip was made by steamboat, probably from some point near Galena, Ill., up the Mississippi River to Read's Landing, Minn., and then up the Chippewa River to the Red Cedar and up the last mentioned to Menomonie. In Germany William Huber had learned the trades of carpenter and cabinet-maker, which he followed in Menomonie for several years. A few years after his arrival here he bought a lot on the corner of Main Street and Broadway, on which he built a residence, and later on he put up a frame building on the same lot for business purposes. For some time it was used for a tin-shop and later Mr. Huber conducted a saloon there. In 1882 this building was destroyed by fire, but in 1883 Mr. Huber replaced it with a fine brick structure of 26 x 80 feet in ground plan, and two stories high with a full basement. In this he continued business until 1889. He then rented it to Dan Murphy, retaining the ownership, however, until 1904, when he sold it to the Wilson-Weber Lumber Company. He died in Menomonie, March 23, 1907. His wife, who survived him seven years, passed away Dec. 22, 1914. They were the parents of eight children, all born in Menomonie, namely: William, born Nov. 4, 1856, died Jan. 20, 1857; Frank Joseph, born Jan. 30, 1858, died Oct. 23, 1910; Emily Ida, born Oct. 13, 1859, died March 25, 1879; John, born March 6, 1862, died March 25, 1862; Ellen, born Dec. 28, 1863, died Sept. 9, 1864; Angeline Grace, born Aug. 10, 1866, died April 8, 1910; Oscar W., born Aug. 10, 1868, is now living in Menomonie, being the only survivor of the family, as the youngest child, Mamie Katherine, born Oct. 22, 1873, died Oct. 4, 1901.

Oscar W. Huber, proprietor of the Broadway Billiard Parlor and News Depot of Menomonie, was born in this city, Aug. 10, 1868, son of William and Walberga (Schmidt) Huber. He was educated in the public schools of Menomonie and was with his father until the latter sold out his business in 1889. He then went to St. Paul, where for four years he was in the employ of his brother, Frank J. At the end of that time he returned to Menomonie and engaged in the saloon business on his own account, renting his father's old place, and he remained there until the building was sold in 1904. He then took a place on Main Street, where he conducted for two years, and afterwards conducted a bar connected with the Royal Hotel until the city of Menomonie was voted dry, which happened before the county went dry. For a year longer he remained there, conducting it as a soft drink place; then in 1917 he purchased his present place at 631 Broadway, a building 33 x 90 feet, one story with full basement, and established the Broadway Billiard Parlor and News Depot. The fixtures, modern and of fine quality, include six excellent tables; the place is well lighted and well patronized and is conducted in an orderly manner. Mr. Huber handles a full line of smokers' supplies, keeping the choicest brands of cigars and tobacco, and also candy. He has a large soda fountain and handles weekly and monthly magazines and newspapers. Mr. Huber was married Aug. 28, 1889, to Emma Diedrich of Menomonie, and they have three children, Frank W., Harriet Grace, and Paul H. Frank W., who was born April 14, 1895, is now his father's chief assistant. He entered the United States' service July 23, 1918, trained at Camp Grant, and sailed for overseas in August, with Headquarters Company 344, being landed at Liverpool, England, and from that place the company was at once set to France, where he remained until his return to the United States on July 11, 1919. He was discharged at Camp Grant on July 20, 1919, as a private of the first class. He is a member of Hosford-Chase Post No. 32, Menomonie. Harriet Grace, born Dec. 22, 1901, is residing at home. Paul H., born Oct. 19, 1903, who was graduated from the Stout Institute with the class of 1924, is now teaching printing and architectural drawing in the Douglas High School at Douglas, He married Josephine Kennedy of Grafton, N. D. In addition to these Arizona. children, Mr. and Mrs. Huber have reared Mr. Huber's nephew, Frank J. Huber, Jr., since the death of the boy's father in 1910. They have also reared and educated another boy, Frank A. Gradler, who came to make his home with them in 1915, at the age of ten years. He was graduated in 1922 from the Menomonie High School and is now city editor of the Dunn County News.

Nels H. Nelson, an early settler in the town of Elk Mound, now deceased, was born near Christiania, Norway, July 29, 1841, son of Henry and Partrenella (Tillesen) Nelson. The family came to the United States in 1853, settling first at Waupun in Fond du Lac County, Wis., whence they came to Dunn County in 1859. On arriving here they settled on a tract of land hear the site of Elk Mound village, and for the remainder of their lives were engaged in farming here, both being now deceased. Nels H., who came to America with his parents in 1853, attended school both in Norway and in Waupun, Wis. After coming to Dunn County he continued to reside with his parents until 1869. He then began farming on his own account, buying 120 acres of wild land in Section 25, town of Elk Mound. The first house he built on it was a small frame one of 16 by 24 feet in ground plan, and he put up other necessary buildings to correspond. His subsequent progress was gradual but sure and was continued over many years. In 1911 he built a modern barn of 36 x 60 feet in ground plan, and with a full basement, also a complete set of modern out-buildings, besides a residence, substantial and comfortable and with every desirable convenience. In 1919 he retired from active work, renting the farm to his son-in-law, Carl Hanson, but continuing to reside on it until his death, which occurred Oct. 21, 1923, when he was in his eighty-third year. He had had a long career and had made a worthy record as a good practical farmer, an agreeable neighbor, and kind husband and father. He was married Oct. 29, 1865, to Georgianna Bye, who was born in Norway, March 12, 1828, and who, after a happy wedded life of nearly 43 years, passed away on the farm, Oct. 23, 1908. They had but one child, Helma M., who was born July 19, 1868, and is now Mrs. Carl Hanson, having been married June 30, 1894. On the death of her father the home farm became her property and she and her husband are now conducting it. A fine piece of agricultural property, it is known as Meadow Spring Farm to everybody throughout this part of Dunn County.

MR. AND MRS. NELS H. NELSON MR. AND MRS. CARL HANSON

was born at Barrum, Christiania, Norway, April 28, 1862, son of Hans Christopherson and wife, the latter's maiden name being Marit Jensen. Both parents died in Norway. There Carl attended school and remained until 1882, when he came to the United States and to Dunn County, Wisconsin, locating in Elk Mound. At first he worked in the woods for The Knapp, Stout & Co. Company one year, and also worked out for other concerns, including the Shaw Lumber Co. at Eau Claire. Then in 1882 he began working for Nels H. Nelson on the latter's farm, for years helping him in its development, and from 1919 until 1923 he operated it on rental. He is a good practical farmer, engaged in mixed farming and dairying according to Mr. and Mrs. Hanson are the parents of two children, Guy H. modern methods. and Norman H. Guy H., born April 1, 1895, is now conducting a feed mill in the village of Elk Mound. He married May Wallace and they have two children; Maurice G., born March 1, 1921, and Janice A., born June 8, 1924. Norman H., born July 30, 1897, who is living on the home farm, married Olive Evenson and the have one child, Gloria W., born Aug. 17, 1921.

Henry Thompson, a substantial farmer and respected citizen of the town of Wilson, was born in the parental homestead on Section 11-14, this town, Dec. 19, 1887. His parents, Tolluf and Thora (Thompson) Thompson, were natives of Norway, Tolluf being 27 years old when he came to America and his wife Thora coming with her parents when a babe of 18 months. Her father, Evan Thompson, settled in Fillmore County, Minn., in 1861, taking a homestead, but when the Indian uprising took place in the summer of 1862, many of the settlers of New Ulm and elsewhere being massacred, he and his family thought it more prudent to leave there, and accordingly came to Colfax, Dunn County, where he homesteaded 160 acres of land in Running Valley in the town of Grant. He cut logs, hauled them for a mile, and built a log house. He and his family were the first settlers in the Valley near the river, the nearest neighbor being eight miles away. With the help of his sons he cleared his land and created a farm on which he and his wife spent the remainder of their lives. They had five children, of whom there are four Thomas E. Thompson of Colfax; Marie, wife of Osmund Strand of now living: the town of Grant: Gunhild, who married Ole Peterson, living on the farm, and Thora, who married Tolluf Thompson. It was in 1873 that Tolluf Thompson came to the United States, settling at Eau Claire, where he found employment in the sawmills. He began farming in 1874, coming to Dunn County and taking a homestead of 160 acres in Sections 11-14, town of Wilson. He also bought 40 acres more, all of it being wild land, and erected a set of log buildings. Later he put up a better log house, which he subsequently enlarged by a frame addition, the whole being sheathed outside, and it is still in use as the farm residence. In time he also erected a good frame barn, granary, and other buildings. The present barn has the West Bend equipment, and both barn and house are supplied with running water. Ninety acres of the land are now under the plow, the rest being in pasture. Married in Sand Creek on March 27, 1878, Mr. and Mrs. Tolluf Thompson had six children, all of whom are living, namely: Gena Caroline, Thomas A., Ingvold, Ingeborg E., Henry and Thorwald. Gena Caroline is now Mrs. T. Nelson of Sand Creek; and Ingeborg E. the wife of Thomas Nelson of Ridgeland. Tolluf Thompson died Nov. $\overline{23}$, $19\overline{23}$, after suffering from the effects of a stroke sustained in 1908. Since his father's first stroke Henry has carried on the farm, which he now owns. He does general farming and dairying, keeping grade Holstein cattle, of which at the present time he has 34 head, and also raising sheep and Duroc-Jersey hogs. He has never married and his mother keeps house for him.

John A. Jodell, for a number of years formerly an active and prosperous farmer in the town of Stanton, was born in Eidsvold, Norway, July 20, 1850, son of Andrew and Louisa (Hansen) Jodell. His education was acquired in the common school, and in 1872 he came to the United States, locating at Black River Falls, Jackson County, Wis. There, however, he remained but a few months, coming at the end of that time to Menomonie Junction, Dunn County, where he was employed on the Omaha Railway, and for a considerable period was engaged in construction work. He next found work in the shingle mill of the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company at Menomonie, and from there passed to the "rotary" mill in which he was employed on the carriage. He was advanced to the position of setter, next to that of head sawyer, and afterwards was placed in the filing-room and while there became an expert filer. From Menomonie he went to Wilson in St. Croix County, where he remained for 16 years, being head filer for the Wilson Lumber Company. It was in 1893 that Mr. Jodell turned his attention to farming, buying a 160-acre farm on Section 22, town of Stanton. It was partly cleared and on it was a small house. Moving on to it with his family, he began its development into a more perfect home, a task in which he was engaged for some 17 years, or until 1910. He then rented the farm to his son Henry, and moved to the village of Knapp, where he and his wife resided for two years. From there he moved to Drummond, Wis., where he entered the employ of the Rust-Owen Lumber Co. as head filer, remaining with them several years. He then moved to North Menomonie in order that some of his children might have the advantage of the Menomonie schools. About that time he purchased another farm, one of 80 acres adjoining his farm in the town of Stanton. Subsequently he sold out all his farm interests and again took up his residence in Knapp village, buying a house there. In the spring of 1917 he sold out at Knapp and moved to Washburn, Bayfield County, where he resided until his death on April 23, 1925, and where Mrs. Jodell still resides. Mr. Jodell's marriage took place on June 6, 1873, uniting him with Martha Toftness, who was born in Norway, Oct. 14, 1852, daughter of Bernt and Mary (Olson) Toftness. She had come to this country at the age of 20 years, her parents settling at Black River Falls. To Mr. and Mrs. John A. Jodell were born eight children: Maren, now the wife of James Harris of Spokane, Wash.; Barney, residing in Superior, Wis.; Henry W., of the town of Stanton, Dunn County; Martina, who died in childhood; Martin, who is in Seattle; Anna, wife of Alfred Flaa, a banker of Boyd, Minn.; Josephine, wife of Adolph Bye of Potlatch, Ida.; and Viola, who became the wife of Ray Abbott of Portland, Ore., and died April 10, 1925.

Henry W. Jodell, proprietor of Branchingbrook Stock Farm, Registered, who is engaged in agriculture in the town of Stanton, of which town he is one of the leading citizens, was born at Menomonie Junction, Dunn County, Wis., April 9, 1876, son of John and Martha (Toftness) Jodell. He had but a limited schooling, and after remaining at home until he was 21 years old went to South Dakota, where for two seasons he worked as a farm hand, returning to Dunn County for the winters, during which season he was employed in lumber camps for the Glenwood and Downing Lumber Co. On returning from South Dakota after his second season there, he rented his father's farm in Section 22, town of Stanton and for the next five or six years operated it under rental, buying it at the end of that time. It was a farm of 160 acres, of which 60 to 65 were cleared, the buildings being a small frame house and a granary. Mr. Jodell at the present time has 165 acres under the plow, having cleared 100 or more. He has also erected a number of buildings, including: two frame barns of modern type; a hog house; a hollow-tile silo; and a large frame house having all the conveniences of a city home, and set off by spacious and beautiful grounds. The farm is well stocked with high grade Guernsey cattle and Duroc hogs, with pure bred sires in the herds, while Mr. Jodell's teams, tools and machinery are of the best. He does general farming but makes a specialty of dairying, milking on an average of 20 cows. The farm is situated two and a half miles north of the village of Knapp. For six years Mr. Jodell was president of the Knapp Cooperative Creamery Co., and for some years he was a member of the Knapp Telephone Co., and secretary and treasurer of the Knapp Cooperative Exchange. He was married Nov. 29, 1899, to Inga Anderson, who was born in Trondhjem, Norway, Oct. 7, 1878, daughter of Arnt and Johanna (Danielson) Anderson. Her father, who came to this country and to Dunn County in 1882, entering the employ of the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company, having been a carpenter in Norway, after two years sent for his wife and three children, Inga, Thomas and Bertina, who joined him in 1884. In the family of Mr. and Mrs. Jodell is a boy, Lyle T., who was born Nov. 29, 1902. The Jodell farm now contains 240 acres, Mr. Jodell having added 80 acres to its original area. During the war he and his wife took an active and patriotic part in home war work, and for the past three years he has been treasurer of the Knapp school board. He is a member of several fraternal societies, including the Modern Woodmen at Knapp; Ridgely Lodge, No. 60, I. O. O. F., of which he is noble grand; the J. H. Knapp Lodge, F. & A. M. in Knapp, and the Masonic chapter in Menomonie. He and his wife were reared as Lutherans but are now members of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

Edward S. Bushnell, a well known and respected farmer in the town of Dunn. was born on a farm two miles frcm Nashville, Tenn.. March 24, 1871, son of James and Martha (Ford) Bushnell. The father was a native of New York State and the mother of Massachusetts, but each having come to Wisconsin when young, they were married at Alma, Buffalo County, and engaged in farming in that county. In 1867 they removed to Tennessee and farmed there until 1873, when they moved to Kentucky, where also they followed agricultural pursuits, chiefly tobacco raising. There James Bushnell died in 1874 and the mother and children came north to Durand, Wisconsin. In 1880 she married for her second husband George Brandt, she and her children taking up their residence on his farm in Plum Creek Valley, There he died in 1888 and she subsequently resided with her daugh-Pepin County. ter, Mrs. John Olbert, in Eau Galle, Dunn County, where she died May 28, 1898. By her first husband, James Bushnell, she had eight children: Mary, who died in 1898; Jennie, now Mrs. James Faulkner of Frontenac, Minn.; Margaret, who died at the age of 18 years; Sadie, now Mrs. John Harding of Duluth, Minn.; Alice, who died in infancy; Edward S., of the town; Leota, now Mrs. Lewis Crofoot of Douglass, Minn.; and Cora, who is Mrs. John Olbert of Boyceville, Wis. Edward S. Bushnell as a boy and youth attended various schools including the grade schools in Durand, the Plumb Creek Valley district school, the Waubeck district school and the Durand High School. He then went to live on the farm of Stewart Havenstrite, in Section 34, town of Dunn, which he inherited on Mr. Havenstrite's death. Sept. 7, 1910. It contained 89 acres and was largely developed. Mr. Bushnell has since added 37 acres to it so that he now has a farm of 126 acres on which he has made many improvements. In 1912 he built a nice ten-room house, and in 1922 a fine full-basement barn of 36 x 70 feet, with cement mangers and floors, calf pens and installed with the James equipment. He has also built a silo of 12 by 40 feet and in general has a fine set of out buildings. He has also cleared and broken several more acres of land and by industry and economy has built up a fine farm. He is a representative citizen of his town and for 12 years has been treasurer of the Waubeek school. He is following general farming and dairying, having a good herd of grade Holstein stock, and being a patron of the Downsville Cooperative Creamery. Mr. Bushnell was married Oct. 18, 1911, to Harriet E. Byington, who was born in Plum Creek Valley, Pepin County, June 29, 1879, daughter of Lucius E. and Catherine E. (Hawkins) Byington. Mr. and Mrs. Bushnell are the parents of two children: Eula Kathrine, born March 5, 1913, and Flovd Wayne, The family are active and earnest members of the Methodist born July 22, 1915. Episcopal Church in the village of Eau Galle, and on their farm is a small church edifice, used by a branch congregation of the Eau Galle church. Mr. Bushnell has been a class leader for several years and has also held the offices of steward and a member of the board of trustees. Lucius E. Byington, father of Mrs. Edward S. Bushnell, was born at Bristol, Wis., Sept. 8, 1842. When six years old he moved with his parents to Connecticut and at the age of 13 began work in a factory there, continuing as a mill or factory worker until 21 years old, at least for most of the In 1863 he returned west with his parents and for most of that season was time. engaged in hauling government supplies across the plains of Minnesota and Dakota to the site of Fort Wadsworth. In 1868 he bought land in Plum Creek Valley, Pepin County, a wild tract which he began to improve and which he built up into one of the finest farms in the county. For many years he gave his attention to the raising of Percheron horses and at the time of his death Sept. 19, 1907, he owned 320 acres of land. He was first married Nov. 6, 1870, to Mary F. Hillard, who died Oct. 4, 1874, leaving two children: Bertha E., who died Oct. 18, 1874, and Charles E., a resident of Plum Creek Valley, Pepin County. On Nov. 25, 1875, Mr.

Byington married Catherine E. Hawkins, and of this union six children were born, namely: Harriet E., now Mrs. Edward S. Bushnell; Marie E., deceased; Orrin E., who is on the home farm; Lucius E., of Plum Creek Valley; Russell E., deceased; and Adeline T., now Mrs. Claud Philips. Mrs. Catherine E. Byington died Sept. 22, 1889.

Gustav Kuester, the creator of a good farm in Sections 25 and 36, town of Sherman, which he is still operating, was born in Brandenburg Fierodden, Germany, on July 22, 1862. His parents who spent their lives in their native land, are both now deceased. Gustav acquired a good public school education in his native land and there grew to young manhood. In the fall of 1881 he emigrated to the United States and immediately coming west, arrived in Waterloo, Jefferson County, Wis., There, however, he found work and remained for five years, at without money. the end of which time he came to Dunn County. Here he was employed for five years by the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company, during the winters in their lumber camps and during the summers in their mills in Menomonie. He had arrived in Dunn County with a family, having been married in Waterloo in January, 1882, to Mary Shiel of that place, who was born Aug. 14, 1862, daughter of Carl and Augusta (Stelz) Shiel. In 1891 Mr. Kuester began farming, buying 80 acres of land in Sections 25 and 36, town of Sherman. The tract was nearly all wild and there were no buildings on it. In the 33 years that have since elapsed he has built up a good farm which now contains 180 acres, of which 120 are under the plow, the balance being in pasture and timber. He has also erected a good set of buildings; installed an electric light plant that furnishes light to the house, barn and yard; and also a fine waterworks system supplying the house and barns. The farm is well stocked with grade Holstein cattle, the herd containing a pure bred sire. Mr. Kuester milks 20 cows and is a stockholder in the new Hudson Road Creamery. He has always been a hard worker and with the assistance of his sons has brought his farm into its present fine condition. He and his wife have been the parents of 11 children, whose records in brief are as follows: Anna, born Dec. 10, 1883, is now the wife of Fred Weyer, a farmer in the town of Menomonie, and has six children, Fred, Edna, Dorothy, Raymond, Arnold and Artist. Ida, born Nov. 7, 1885, died in August, 1886. Elsie, born Feb. 29, 1887, is the wife of Adolph Otto and the mother of five children, Eleanor, Vera, Adolph, Clifford and James. Carl, born Feb. 12, 1889, who is a farmer in the town of Sherman, married Mabel Hintzman and their children are Allen, Virgil and Inga. Mary, born March 28, 1891, has been twice married; first to Ole Erickson, by whom she has one child, Leroy. After Mr. Erickson's death she married Carl Moe and of this union there are two children, Frances and Virgil. Edward, born September 9, 1893, who is a farmer in the town of Sherman, married Esther Hintzman and has two children, Ruby and Verla. Arnold, born Jan. 3, 1896, was one of those patriotic heroes who enlisted in the United States' service soon after this country entered into the European war. He went across seas as a member of Company H, 128th Infantry, 32d Division, arriving in France, March 10, 1918. There the company, with the exception of Capt. Albert Nathness, was transferred to the 28th regiment of the First Division. Arnold Kuester was one of the first of Wisconsin's sons to fall in battle, being killed on May 21, 1918. Gustav, Jr., born April 29, 1898, and now living on the home farm, married Olga Otto. The other children are: Walter, born Nov. 23, 1901; Helmuth, born Dec. 20, 1905, and Leona, born May 7, 1908, all on the home farm. The family are members of the German Lutheran Church in Menomonie.

Even Nelson-Oderud, a well known general and dairy farmer in the town of Dunn, proprietor of Sunrise Farm in Section 23, was born in Modum, Norway, Sept. 8, 1871, son of Nels Evenson Hellum and his wife, whose maiden name was Ingeborg Christine Knutson. The father, born in 1851, died in Norway in 1884; the mother, born in 1854, died there in 1906. Even Nelson was educated in the public schools of his native land and began industrial life as a worker on farms. He also worked for eight years in a factory. On Dec. 4, 1894, he was married in Norway, to Anna Ostgaarden, who was born in Modum, Norway, Jan. 5, 1873. For seven years longer he remained in Norway and then in 1902 came with his family to the United States to establish a new home. He first settled at Bloomer, Wis. where he worked on farm: and in the woods. Then in 1903 he came to Menomonie. finding employment for three months with Dr. Kortgaard, and for four months subsequently in the foundry. Then for one summer he did carpenter work for Sever Olson and in the following winter was employed again by Dr. Kortgaard. After that he again worked for Sever Olson. In 1904 he moved on to the Dr. Finstad farm in the Louisville settlement, town of Dunn, and worked there for one year. After that he worked two years for John Vasey and the following year for the Samuelson sisters on their farm in the town of Menomonie. It was in February, 1908, that Mr. Nelson began farming for himself, buying 120 acres in Section 23, town of Dunn, of which 37 acres had been broken. There was a small house on the property and some poor sheds. Moving on to the place with his family, he began at once to improve it, but for three years could make but slow progress, as to meet running expenses he continued during that time to work for the Samuelson sisters, walking back and forth between his place and theirs. After that he gave his whole time to the development of his own farm. He has converted the original house into a really good residence, finished in hardwood, and installed with such modern conveniences as a heating plant and pressure tank, with hot and cold running water and an electric light plant. He has also sunk a well and erected a windmill and has a fine set of out-buildings, including a machine shed, hog house, hennery, corn crib, garage, and other buildings. At the present time he has under construction a fine large basement barn, to be fully equipped. He has fenced his farm wherever needed and has 75 acres under cultivation. He has also set out a fine apple orchard, which is now in good bearing condition, and his lawn, with its shrubbery, flowers and shade trees, add materially to the attractiveness of the place. This is good work to have been accomplished in 16 years, or practically in 13, and with little or nothing to start with, and Mr. Nelson's achievements have placed him among the upbuilders of his town and county. He follows general farming, paying particular attention to dairying, and keeping grade Guernsey cattle with a pure bred sire. His hogs are of the Berkshire breed. Sunrise Farm is situated midway between Menomonie and Downsville in a very picturesque spot, the broad fields sweeping eastward from the farm houses in the direction of the rising sun, for which reason its owner has given it the name by which it is known. Mr. and Mrs. Nelson are the parents of four children: Christ, born Jan. 5, 1899, now a farmer in the town of Menomonie, who married Gladys Kolkind and has one child, Geraldine; Albert Edwin, born Aug. 28, 1903, who is learning the carpenter's trade in Chicago; Henry, born Jan. 5, 1906, and Irma Helena, born Sept. 27, 1910, the two latter residing on the home farm. The family are members of the Elk Creek Lutheran Church.

William E. Krause, a well known farmer and apiarist in Section 18, town of Wilson, of which he is one of the foremost citizens, having served repeatedly in public office, was born in Juneau County, Wisconsin, Nov. 4, 1862, son of Wilhelm F. and Caroline (Schutte) Krause. The parents were natives of Germany who came to the United States in or about the year 1853, Wilhelm Krause at the age of 20 to avoid military service, and Caroline Schutte at the age of 13. They were married in Green County, Wisconsin, and settled in Juneau County, Wisconsin, where they bought a farm. After operating it until 1870 they sold out and came to Dunn County, making the journey with a wagon and ox team, at various places the whole family having to get out and push the wagon to get it up the steep hills. On arriving here they bought 160 acres of land in Section 25, town of Wilson, and during the first summer they camped out while Mr. Krause built a log house, which measured 16 feet square, with a shanty roof and no floor. This they occupied for only one year, as finding it too small, he put up a larger one-a hewed log house of 16 x 24 feet and a story and a half in height. He also built a log barn with a straw This second house was the home of the family for 15 years, by the end of roof. which time Mr. Krause had made sufficient progress to enable him to erect a frame barn, and the farm was then in fairly good condition. He and his wife spent the remainder of their lives there, finally passing away. They had nine children, two of whom, Amanda and Henry, are now deceased. The survivors are Minnie, William E., Fred, Theodore J., Linnie, Carl and Edie. William E. Krause was reared on the home farm and, like all boys in the rural districts, had to make himself useful at an early age. As there was no school in the neighborhood when he was a boy, he had had but six months schooling before he arrived at the age of 18 years. At that age he left home and went to Chippewa Falls, where he worked for his board and took steps to make up for his neglected education, passing through the common school and taking a high school course of three years. He made such good use of his opportunities that he was able to qualify as a teacher and followed that occupation for seven years, including 13 terms in the schools of the town of Otter Creek. In the meanwhile, however, he began farming on his own account, on a homestead of 160 acres in the town of Otter Creek, a farm that he operated for 12 years, during a part of which time he also followed the teacher's profession. Having brought the place into good condition, he sold it and rented his present farm on Diamond Ridge in the town of Wilson. Here, keeping a herd of grade mixed cattle, he is engaged in general farming and dairying, also raising Duroc-Jersey hogs, together with geese and chickens. He started in bee culture and honey production in 1899, when he bought 25 acres of land in Section 18, town of Wilson, and on this place he keeps from 100 to 125 swarms of bees, doing a large mail order business in both strained and comb honey. His public career covers service in various offices. In 1888 he became clerk of the town of Otter Creek and so remained for three years, at the end of which time he was elected chairman of the town board, serving as such for three years, and at the same time being a member of the county board. He has also served three years as chairman of the Wilson town board, at the same time serving on the county board, and for 14 years has held the office of assessor, making a record of 24 years in town office. In addition to this, for over 20 years he has been a member of the school board. Mr. Krause was married in 1891, to Jessie Darrow, daughter of Hezekiah and Clara Darrow of Treampealeau County, Wisconsin, of which union was born a daughter, Belle. Mrs. Jessie Krause having died in 1892, Mr. Krause was married secondly in October, that year, to Katie Darrow, his first wife's sister. The fruit of this marriage was ten children, of whom six died when young, the four survivors being Edith, Frank, Edna and Cleora. In 1920 Mr. Krause was again bereaved through the death of his second wife, and in 1922 he was married in Colfax to Mrs. Mary Higbie, daughter of John and Martha Ann (Lowry) Studley. Her father was born in England in 1839 and her mother was a native of New York State. Mr. Studley had accompanied his parents to the United States when three years old, the family settling in Waukesha County, Wisconsin. In 1862, being then a young man, he enlisted in Company E, First Wisconsin Cavalry, in which he served three years, taking part in the battles of Nashville, Selma and Pulaski. In 1866 he came to Dunn County, locating in the Matthews settlement, where the village of Colfax is now. There he died on May 31, 1922, at the age of 82 years, and in less than two weeks from that date his wife followed him to the grave, passing away on June 12. They had had a long and happy life together, being mutually helpful, and esteemed as good neighbors by all around They had six children, Mamie, Debbie, Arthur, William, George and them. Myrtle, all of whom are now living. Mamie is now Mrs. William E. Krause; Debbie is Mrs. G. G. Rye, and Myrtle is Mrs. Norman Olson. By her first mar-riage to George Higbie Mrs. Krause had four children, May, John, George and Ruth, all of whom are now living in the town of Colfax.

Oscar J. Stene, a general farmer and dairyman operating in the town of Tainter, was born at the home of his grand-parents in the town of Wilson, Dunn County, Wis., March 25, 1881, son of Jens O. and Anna (Olson) Stene. The father was a native of Norway who came to this country and the state of Wisconsin at the age of 18 years, residing five years in Rock County, then coming to Eau Claire and working one winter in the woods, and later being employed four years on the farm of Knapp, Stout & Co. Company in the town of Wilson. After starting to farm in the town of Wilson, he later sold his place there and moved to the town of Tainter, where he built up a farm and is now living. His wife Anna, to whom he was married in 1880, is the daughter of Iver and Anna Aason of the town of Wilson, her parents being now deceased. Oscar J. Stene was reared on his parents' farm and as a boy attended rural school. As he grew older he helped his father clear the land, working on the farm during the summers and in the woods during the winters, the latter for seven seasons. He also worked for a while in the sawmills near Bruce for the Arpin Lumber Co. In April, 1910, he began farming on his own account, buying 120 acres of wild land in Section 3, town of Tainter, later buying 40 acres more. Still later he sold 40 acres of this farm, leaving it with the same area as at first. During his first summer on the place he lived in a small frame shanty and began clearing his land. He has since brought 80 acres under the plow, has built a gothic roof frame barn of 34 x 60 feet, with full basement and patent equipment; also other farm buildings, including a silo of 12 x 28 feet, besides remodeling the house which stands on the 40-acre tract that he bought last. He has made good progress in general farming and dairying, and at present has 20 head of grade Guernsey cattle with a pure bred sire in the herd, and also raises Poland-China hogs. Mr. Stene was married at Prairie Farm, Wis., in 1908, to Gunda Mork, daughter of Nels and Ingeborg Mork, elsewhere mentioned in this volume. Mr. and Mrs. Stene are the parents of seven children, namely: Norvald, Jr., born in Rusk County, Oct. 9, 1908; Ingvald A., born in the town of Wilson, May 7, 1910; Glenard O., born March 3, 1912; Mildred I., born Jan. 12, 1914; Elmer R., born Oct. 22, 1916; Manley H., born Aug. 20, 1919; and Eunice L., born June 15, 1922.

Osmund H. Strand, farmer, dairyman and tobacco grower in the town of Grant, where he is well known and respected, was born in Norway, Sept. 19, 1856, son of Herman and Bessie (Olson) Strand. The parents, also natives of Norway, spent their lives there as farmers. They had five children, of whom two are living: Osmund H. and Anna, the latter being the wife of A. K. Norby and residing in Ole and Tone were two of the three deceased; the other, named Anna, Minnesota. died in infancy. Osmund H. Strand was reared and educated in his native land, where he subsequently worked on a farm and for two years on the wharf at a sea port, loading and unloading steam vessels. In 1878, at the age of 22 years, he came to the United States and to Wisconsin, settling near Baldwin, St. Croix County, where he remained for two years. He then went to Eau Claire, where he spent that summer working in a sawmill and a winter in the woods as a lumberjack. For 15 years subsequently he followed the same occupations in Dunn County, and in the latter part of that period on Dec. 29, 1894, was married to Mrs. Marie Langberg, who was a daughter of Evan and Ingeborg Thompson, natives of Norway and early settlers in Dunn County. In 1896 Mr. Strand began his career as a farmer, buying a tract of 240 acres in Section 19, town of Grant, of which 35 acres had been broken. There were also some old buildings on the place, including a three-room house, in which he and his wife took up their residence. Mr. Strand has since spent 29 years in improving the place, and besides having 90 acres under the plow, has erected some good buildings, including a good frame house installed with furnace heat and a substantial barn. As general farmer, dairyman and tobacco grower he has He owns at the present time 30 head of Durham grade cattle achieved success. and also raises Poland-China hogs. Of his marriage with Mrs. Marie Langberg, two sons were born: Herman and Oluf, both of whom are of the home farm. Mrs. Strand had four children by her first husband, Ole Langberg, one of whom died in infancy. Another, Ole, who entered the U.S. service when the World War was in progress, was sent to China, where he contracted tuberculosis. He was discharged and sent home, where he died Sept. 25, 1924. Of the other two children, Selma married Elven Evenson, resides in Colfax and has three children, Ellen, Ovedia and Esther; and Even married Karen Jacobson, lives at Osseo, Wis., and has two children, Olina and Esther. The family are members of the Holden congregation of the Norwegian Lutheran Church.

Peter Nelson, an active and successful farmer, operating 220 acres of land in the town of Rock Creek, was born near Trondhjem, Norway, Oct. 30, 1861, son of Peder and Margretha (Haas) Nelson. The parents were natives of the same land, the father born in 1824 and the mother in 1831. In 1869 they emigrated to the United States and to Dunn County, Wisconsin, settling in Section 7, town of Rock Creek, where a brother of Mrs. Nelson, Martinus Olson, had two years before bought 40 acres of raw land and built a good frame house on it. He sold this piece of property to Mr. Nelson, who at once began to clear and develop it, erecting barns and other buildings from time to time as he increased in prosperity. He also bought an adjoining tract of 80 acres in Section 18, and continued to farm the place until 1893, when he sold it to his son Peter, his death occurring in the same year. His wife survived him many years, dying in 1911. They had six children, Nora, Olena, Peter, Nels J., Martinus and Nora (second). The first child, Nora (first), met her death by accident at the age of 16 years, being killed at Old Meridean when the boiler in the shingle mill exploded. Olena, is now Mrs. Oluf Fossum of Meridean village; Nels J. is in Portland, Ore., Martinus in Superior, Wis., and Nora (second) is deceased. Peter Nelson grew up on his parents' farm, attending rural school, and, when old enough, helping his father to develop the home farm. During 11 winters also he worked as a logger in the woods, thus becoming familiar with more than one phase of pioneer life. This work made him strong and hardy and able to endure privation, and when in 1893, at the age of 33 years, he bought the home farm of 120 acres, he was well qualified to carve out his own fortunes. He has enlarged and improved the farm, having bought 100 acres more land, remodeled the residence and erected a garage and other out-buildings. He gives his chief attention to dairy farming, having a herd of Red Durham cattle, with a pure bred sire; he has also a good pen of Poland-China hogs. Mr. Nelson is one of the prominent men of his town, having formerly served seven terms on the town board and eight years as a member of School District No. 4. He is a stockholder in the Meridean Cooperative Creamery, the Meridean State Bank, and the Rock Falls and Meridean Telephone Co. In religion he is a Lutheran.

James McIntyre, a practical and representative farmer of the town of Hay River, was born at Owen Sound, Canada, May 29, 1869, son of Dougal and Jeanette (Morrison) McIntyre. The parents were born in Argyle, Scotland, the father May 6, 1830, and the mother on March 16, 1833. They were married March 16, 1852, in Canada, settling at Owen Sound, from which place they came in 1870 to Vernon County, Wisconsin, where they remained for two years. Then, coming to Dunn County, they took a homestead in the town of Hay River, on which they spent some six or seven years. In 1889 they moved to the state of Washington but in 1895 returned to Wisconsin and to the town of Hay River, Dunn County, where they subsequently remained and spent their last years. Their children were: Katherine, now Mrs. J. Critchlow of Marysville, Calif.; Neil, deceased; Annie, now Mrs. Hamilton Trumble of Burnette, Wis.; Duncan, in British Columbia; Mary, who is Mrs. James Waterbury of the state of Washington; Dougal, of Boyceville, Dunn County, Wis.; James, subject of this sketch; Margaret, a twin sister of James, who married Matt Allen and lives in the state of Washington; Archie, of the state of Washington, and Gilbert, who is in Alaska. James McIntyre acquired a common school education and remained under the parental rooftree until 1889, when he began working out. On Oct. 30, 1901, he was united in marriage with Jennie Lepovsky, who was born March 24, 1882, daughter of George and Jennie (Paulis) Lepovsky, of the town of Hay River, her parents having settled in this county on coming from Austria, which was when she was ten years old. The father was born in 1856 and died May 27, 1923. The mother, born in Austria, Nov. 13, 1859, died Aug. 24, 1921. They had five children, Frank, of Minneapolis; Jennie and Augusta (second); two died in Austria, namely, Augusta (first) and Julius. For some six or seven years after his marriage Mr. McIntyre was engaged in farming in the town of Sheridan. In 1910 he bought a tract of 120 acres on Section 13, town of Hay River, but did not move on to it until 1912. There were no buildings on it and but little had been done to the land. Mr. McIntyre erected a good frame house and other necessary buildings and has since put 80 acres under the plow, the rest of his land being in pasture and timber. He has a fair-sized herd of grade Holstein cattle and one of Duroc-Jersey hogs, and has a good operating equipment. He is successfully engaged in general farming and dairying, his farm lying on State Highway No. 25, three miles north of the village of Wheeler. Mr. and Mrs. James McIntyre are the parents of nine children, as follows: Hazel, born July 18, 1902, now the wife of Myron Sweeney of the town of Hay River, and the mother of one child, Nona; Margaret S., born Sept. 1, 1903, now Mrs. Harvey Nord of Minneapolis; Archie J., born March 27, 1905, who is on the home farm with his parents; Clarence E., born Oct. 3, 1906; Chester G., born May 24, 1908; Fay Augusta, born March 5, 1911; Ida J., born July 17, 1912; Lawrence J., born May 26, 1916; and Roy S., born July 14, 1918. Mr McIntyre was reared in the Scotch Presbyterian faith and Mrs. McIntyre as a Lutheran, but they affiliate with and support the Congregational Church at Wheeler, the children attending the Sunday School. In politics Mr. McIntyre is nominally a Republican but votes for the man rather than with the party.

John J. Kavenaugh, who for the last 23 years has been engaged in the development of a farm of 321 acres, comprising one-half of Section 17, in the town of New Haven, was born in County Mayo, Ireland, in 1855, son of William and Ellen (Corcoran) Kavenaugh. The father, who was for many years a shepherd and stock keeper for Lord Owen Moore, died in Ireland in 1912, his wife Ellen dying in 1914. Of their nine children, two, Mary and Patrick, died in Ireland. The others are: Nora, who married T. Hughes and lives in Ireland; Adelia, who is Mrs. Martin McGuire of Philadelphia, Penn.; Michael, residing with his brother John; Martin, of California; Sarah, who married a Mr. Dwyer and lives in Ireland; and Catherine, now Mrs. John McAndrew of Philadelphia. John J. Kavenaugh, after acquiring a common school education, at the age of 14 became clerk in a mercantile establish-When about 20 years old he went into business for himself, but in ment in Dubl'n. June, 1882, sold out and emigrated to Ottawa, Canada. A year later he went to Rochester, N. Y., and from there to Albany, N. Y., where he spent a year. In the spring of 1884 he came west to St. Paul, Minn., where he worked some time for the city and was also for a while engaged in railway construction work. Having come to this country with the idea of joining an Irish colony in Murray County, Minnesota, founded by a Mr. John Sweetman, with whom he had corresponded while in Ireland, he went there in the spring of 1885 to investigate, and though he did not join the colony he purchased 420 acres of its land. There was a small house on the tract and 15 or 16 acres of the land had been broken. Mr. Kavenaugh broke and developed nearly all of the remaining land, erected a good set of buildings, and successfully operated the farm until the fall of 1901. Then coming to the town of New Haven, Dunn County, Wis., he bought his present farm, the land being heavily timbered with beech, maple, and other hard wood. No clearing had been made and there were no buildings, so he had to start at the beginning, as he had done in Minne-This he did by erecting a small frame house, his family in the meanwhile sota. continued to reside on and operate the farm in Murray County, Minnesota, until the fall of 1902, when final removal was made. The new farm had excellent soil, and up to the present time Mr. Kavenaugh has developed 100 acres or more, which he has under the plow. In 1922 he completed a good nine-room frame house, and he has put up other substantial buildings, such as a barn, silo, and various sheds, as he needed them. He gives his whole attention to dairying and sheep raising, having a full modern equipment and keeping good stock. Mr. Kavenaugh was married June 12, 1879, in County Mayo, Ireland, to Eleanor Slaven, daughter of Stephen and Elizabeth (McCormack) Slaven of County Mayo, Ireland, where she was born in 1859. She came to America in 1883, bringing with her her mother and two daughters, Eleanor and Brida, and joining her husband at St. Paul. Eleanor is now Mrs. Lawrence Reidl of the town of New Haven, Dunn County, while Brida is the widow of Frances Phalen, and also lives in Dunn County. Mrs. Kavenaugh, though now 65, is still strong and vigorous, without a grey hair, and able to do the work of a much younger woman. She and her husband have been the parents of ten children, as follows: Michael, now of Springfield, Ill.; Charles, of Pittsburg, Penn.; Martin, of Springfield, Ill.; Gerald, of Pittsburg; Theresa, who is Mrs. Thomas Breslin of the town of New Haven, Dunn County; George, of Chrisholm, Minn.; Albert, of Pittsburg, Penn., and the eldest son who died in Ireland in infancy. To all of his sons Mr. Kavanaugh gave a good education, all being high school and college graduates, and also graduates of the Stout Institute of Menomonie. In addition to that, all are principals in the manual training departments of schools in the cities in which they respectively reside. Four of them—Charles, Martin, Gerald and George—enlisted for service in the World War and were assigned to different camps in this country as instructors in matters pertaining to their vocations. Though Mr. Kavenaugh is now in his seventieth year he is still strong and active, taking a pleasure in his work, and to all appearance he is likely to remain so for years to come.

Clarence A. Sinz, proprietor of Cold Stream Farm in Sections 20 and 21, town of Eau Galle, was born on this farm April 22, 1894, son of John and Nina (Baeier) The father was a son of Mr. and Mrs. Anton Sinz, who were the first repre-Sinz. sentatives of the family to settle on this land. They resided on it for the remainder of their lives. After their death their son John operated the farm until 1916, when he turned it over to his son Clarence A., and engaged in business in the village of Eau Galle, dealing in automobiles and other merchandise, and there he and his wife Nina are now living. She was born in the town of Eau Galle and they were married in Eau Galle village, so the family are native to the soil and have been identified with the affairs of this town more or less for, or during a part of, three generations. Clarence A., who acquired his education in the district school, learned agriculture on the home farm, of which he has had the full charge for the last eight years. In its present-day condition it is a model farm of 223 acres, provided with a fine set of buildings and modern machinery, and Mr. Sinz is operating it successfully, giving special attention to dairying. In addition to these activities he is serving as a director on the school board of District No. 2. He was married June 13, 1916, to Lena Kaufman, who was born in the town of Eau Galle, Sept. 23, 1895. He and his wife are the parents of four children: Cyril R., born May 25, 1917; Dorothy E., born Nov. 4, 1918, Wayne J., born April 12, 1923, and Lyle Edward, born Dec. The family are members of St. Henry's Catholic Congregation at Eau 24, 1924. Galle and Mr. Sinz belongs also to the Knights of Columbus.

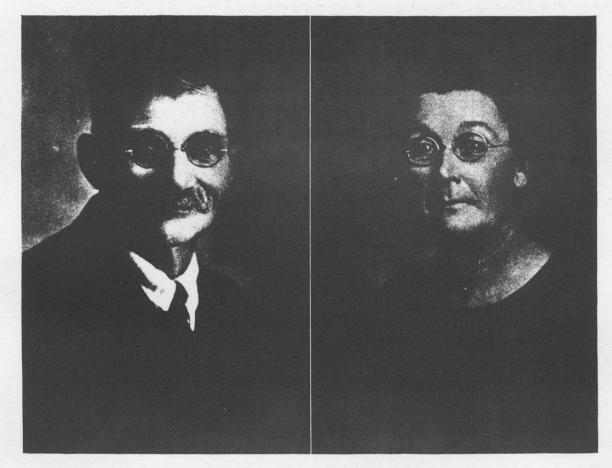

Morris Geer, who came to Dunn County some 42 years ago, worked for years in the lumber industry and has since built up a good farm in Section 35, town of Wilson, was born in Switzerland, Sept. 12, 1853, son of Albert and Barbara Geer. The mother having died when Morris was nine years old, the father married again. He was a farmer by occupation and after remaining in his native land until 1865 he emigrated with his family to America, first settling in Arkansaw, where he worked on a plantation for six months. From there he went to Memphis, Tenn., where he remained for a year. Then making another move eastward, he reached Highwald, Ill., where he spent four years, coming at the end of that time to Pierce County, Wis., where he bought a farm, which he cultivated besides working out occasionally. It was after the family had settled there that Morris left home and went to Missouri and Kansas prospecting. After a while he turned eastward again, spent some time in Illinois in the harvest fields, and in 1881 came to Menomonie, entering the employ of The Knapp, Stout & Co. Company, who put him to work sawing logs. He was thus engaged during the winter, going to Minnesota in Subsequently he returned to Dunn County and went to work again for the spring. The Knapp, Stout & Co. Company, during the following winter driving oxen and skidding logs. After that he spent three years on the Washburn farm. At the end of that time or in 1883 Mr. Geer began farming for himself, buying 40 acres of land in Section 21, town of Wilson. The tract was wild and so was the surrounding country, and he had to cut a road for half a mile through the woods so that he could haul the lumber for his first buildings. These were the usual log house and a log barn with a shake roof. After erecting them he started the work of clearing the land and bringing it under cultivation. Later he added to his farm in Section 21 until it contained 160 acres, and also bought 160 acres in Section 18, which he sold to his son William; and to his son Rudolph he sold 80 acres of his farm in Section 21. These sons had helped him clear the place, and it is with their assistance and that of his wife that he had made a success. When he first came to Dunn County his cash capital consisted of $300 and after he had built his house and bought furniture and other necessities he had but 50 cents left, which was all the money he did have until after the next harvest. He has 80 acres now under the plow, and is doing general farming and dairying, having 24 head of mixed grade cattle; he also raises Duroc-Jersey hogs. At one time Mr. Geer was a member of the side board of the town of Wilson and also at one time served the town as assessor. He was married in Menomonie, in 1883, to Minnie Luer, daughter of John and Doris (Meyer) Luer. The parents were natives of Germany, where the father died and the mother subsequently came to the United States, where she finally passed away. Mr. and Mrs. Geer have had four children, William, Rudolph, Edna and Elsie, the last mentioned being now deceased. Edna is now Mrs. Albert Buchholz of the town of William is farming in Section 18, town of Wilson and Rudolph in Section Wilson. Mr. Geer has a brother, Martin, living, and a sister, Clara, the latter being the 21. wife of Jacob High of Pierce County, Wisconsin.

Jochum Hansen, a resident of the village of Irvington in the town of Menomonie, where he is well known as a building contractor, and also as a manufacturer of concrete blocks, was born in Denmark, July 3, 1852, son of Jopp and Mary (Rasmussen) Hansen. Both parents died in Denmark, where in boyhood their son Jochum attended school. After relinquishing his school books he learned the mason's trade, which he followed in his native land until 1887, when he came to the United States. Landing at New York, he went directly from that city to Minneapolis, and in the latter place spent seven years. Then in 1894 he came to Dunn County, Wisconsin, and engaged in agricultural work, buying 80 acres of wild land in the town of Weston. Eighteen years of his life were spent on that farm, by the end of which time he had cleared 40 acres, which he was cultivating, and had gradually put up a substantial set of log buildings. He then sold the place to Henry Miller and bought 60 acres in the town of Dunn, on which farm he lived until 1916, when he sold that also, and has since made his home in Irvingston. Ever since coming to Dunn County, Mr. Hansen has followed his trade as he has found opportunity between the intervals of farm work and since 1916 has been a contractor. He has built a number of large barns in Irvington and the vicinity, and also a number of brick houses, and he manufacturers concrete blocks, having a small plant for that purpose on the John D. Black farm. At Irvington he owns a good residence, and he is also the owner of 100 acres of land in Boone County, Ark. Mr. Hansen was married in Denmark, in 1876, to Christina Berntsen, who was born in that country, March 29, 1855. That there is a good family heredity is proved by that fact that of the ten children that have been the fruit of this union, all are living but one. They are as follows: Mary, born March 18, 1877, in Denmark, who became the wife of Gorm Gormansen, and died Oct. 24, 1906; Thormina, born in Denmark, July 4, 1879, and now Mrs. Ferl Hathway of the town of Weston; Hans, born in Denmark, Feb. 5, 1880, who is now farming at Cobban, Chippewa County, Wis.; Dortha, born in Denmark, Feb. 3, 1883, now the wife of Jesse Jensen, a farmer in the town of Weston, Dunn County; Charles, born in Denmark, April 13, 1885, who is living in Minneapolis; Anna, born in Denmark, Feb. 14, 1887, now Mrs. Fred Beyer of Minneapolis; Cora, born in Dunn County, Wisconsin, Aug. 3, 1890, who is Mrs. Fred Becker of Menomonie; Victoria, born in Dunn County, Sept. 11, 1892, and now the wife of William Schultz of City Falls, this county; Esther, born Sept. 18, 1894, now Mrs. Helmer Debee of Irvington; and Lillian, born April 27, 1896, who is Mrs. Frank Gates of Minneapolis.

Ole Knudson, proprietor of Hillside Grove Farm in Section 28, town of Dunn, was born on this farm Nov. 21, 1881, son of Ole and Betsey (Solum) Knudson. The parents were both born in Esterdalen, Norway, whence the father came as a single man in 1867 to America, locating in Menomonie, Wis., where he found employment with Knapp, Stout & Co. It was after coming here that he married Mrs. Betsey Peterson, whose maiden name was Betsy Solum. Mr. Knudson worked for Knapp, Stout & Co. until 1880, and he was therefore in their employ when the name of the concern was changed (in 1878) to The Knapp, Stout & Co. Company. When he quit them he began farming, buying 140 acres of land in Section 28, town of Dunn. The tract was partly improved, some of the land being developed, and there were buildings on it, though not good ones. Mr. Knudson continued the improvements, clearing the land and erecting a new set of buildings, and there he continued to live until his death on Aug. 16, 1914, before which time he had added 80 more acres to the farm. His wife Betsy died in November, 1895. They had but two children: Ole and Minnie, the latter being now Mrs. Edward Torgerson of the town of Red Cedar. Ole Knudson when a boy attended the district school and grew up on his parents' farm, which he helped his father to develop, and of which he became the active manager several years before the father's death. On that event taking place, the property was divided between him and his sister Minnie, the latter receiving the 80 acres in Section 21 and Ole the 140 acres constituting the old home farm. Here he is engaged in dairy farming, having a herd of grade Holstein cattle, and he is a good farmer, respected in the community. He is a patron of the Downsville Cooperative Creamery. He has served as treasure of School District No. 8 and is a member of the Elk Creek Congregation of the Norwegian Lutheran Church. In the summer of 1924 he erected a fine semibungalow residence with full basement, heating plant, hot and cold water, and all necessary modern improvements.

Julius J. Stene, proprietor of Plainview Guernsey Farm and engaged in general and dairy farming, in the town of Tainter was born in the town of Wilson, Dunn County, Wis., son of Jens O. and Anna (Aason) Stene. The parents were natives of Norway who came to this country in 1873. Julius was reared on the home farm in the town of Wilson, acquiring his education in the local school. Until arriving at the age of 21 years old he remained at home assisting his father and then went to work for the Arpin Lumber Co. in their mill at Bruce, Wis., where he spent eight Altogether, however, he was 13 years in their employ, for a part of the time vears. in the mills and the rest of the time in the woods. In 1906 he bought 160 acres of wild land in the town of Otter Creek, of which he cleared some, building a house and barn; but after living there a year he traded that place for 80 acres in Section 3, town of Tainter. This tract was improved, having a house and barn on it. Mr. Stene remodeled the house and built a new granary, and has cleared and broken land until now he has 76 acres under cultivation. He is doing general farming and dairying, keeping a herd of about 14 grade Guernsey cattle with a pure bred sire, and is recognized not only as a good practical farmer but also as a useful and reliable citizen. Mr. Stene was married in Boyceville, July 4, 1907, to Ruby Caryl, who was born in Tiffany, Dunn County, June 8, 1885, daughter of Ansel D. and Elda A. (Best) Caryl. Her father was born in Jefferson County, Wisconsin, and her mother in Canada. They came to Dunn County, settling at Boyceville, before the building of the railroad, which was in 1884, and Mr. Caryl was postmaster of Boyceville when the stage from Menomonie carried the mail. They are still living, and are now residing on the Stene farm, where Mr. Caryl has a factory and is engaged in the manufacture of brooms. They have had five children, namely: Raymond C., Asa E., Rupert E., Audrey and Ruby. Audrey is the wife of Samuel Short of Bessimer, Mich. The three sons are all married and live at Spokane, Wash. Mr. and Mrs. Stene have four children: Ernest L., born Oct. 17, 1909; Elda A., Dec. 9, 1916; Julius J., May 16, 1918, and Inez C., Aug. 28, 1920. Before her marriage Mrs. Stene was a proficient teacher in Dunn County.

Ole Sperstad, who owns and operates Lawndale Dairy and Stock Farm of 240 acres in Section 20, town of Rock Creek, was born in Gudbrandsdalen, Norway, Jan. 7, 1860, son of Erick Tufts and his wife, whose maiden name was Elcha Sperstad. The father having died in Norway, the mother subsequently came to the United States and until her death made her home with her son Ole, the subject of this sketch. There were but two children in the family; Ole and Nels, the latter being now deceased. Ole Sperstad acquired his education in the public schools of his native land, where he remained until he was 20 years old. Then in 1880 he came to America and to Eau Claire, Wis., where he entered the employ of the Valley Lumber Co., working in summer in the mills and in winter in the woods. After being thus occupied until 1884, he settled on 120 acres of wild land that he had bought in the previous year, situated on Sections 19 and 20, town of Rock Creek. Dunn County, on which, however, a small clearing had been made and a board shanty erected. In settling on this tract and beginning its development, Mr. Sperstad was at the same time beginning domestic life or the building of a home, as he was married on April 7, that year (1884) to Ella Tostenson, who was born in in Gudbrandsdalen, Norway, Sept. 8, 1859. Together they began a career of hard work similar in all essential respects to that led by the earliest settlers in the county, except that they were not so far from a market or place of supplies. Mr. Sperstad hastily put up some frame shacks to protect his cattle and hay and then attacked the problem of clearing his land. The cleared area increased year by year and so did the amount of grain and other farm products which he raised. When the Eau Claire Lumber Co. closed up their business at old Meridean, Ole Sperstad and his brother Nels (who owned an adjoining farm) bought the old company boardinghouse and several of the other buldings, tore them down and hauled the lumber to their farms, having enough to build them houses, or what were considered houses in Since then, however, they have had to give way to modern buildings. those days. In 1900 Mr. Sperstad erected a fine stock barn of 30 by 60 feet. He added to his original tract of 120 acres until he had 280 acres, 40 of which he gave to his son William, leaving him 240, which is the size of his farm at the present time. He follows dairy farming, keeping Holstein cattle, and also raises Poland-China hogs, and he is a stockholder in the Meridean Cooperative Creamery and the Meridean State Bank. Though always a busy man. Mr. Sperstad has found some time to devote to public affairs, which indeed, has been expected of him by his fellow citizens, who conceived it right that the community should profit by that ability that he had shown in the management of his own private business; and so, some eight or ten years ago, they elected him supervisor, an office in which he has continued to serve until the present time. He has also served 14 years as treasurer of his school district and still holds that office. Mr. Sperstad's first wife Ella, previously mentioned, died May 8, 1902, leaving eight children, Alfred, Emily, William, Anna, Olga, Edwin, Severt and Ethel, whose records in brief are as follows: Alfred, born June 16, 1885, is on the home farm with his father; Emily, born June 29, 1886, is the wife of Gilbert Screeden, a farmer of the town of Rock Creek, and has four children, Evelyn, Orville, Elsie and Gladys; William, born Oct. 9, 1888, is at home; Anna, born Dec. 6, 1890, died Aug. 16, 1919; Olga, born Aug. 29, 1893, is now Mrs. Melvin Onstad of Eau Claire; Edwin, born Jan. 29, 1896, is residing on the home farm; Severt, born Sept. 15, 1898, died Sept. 9, 1907. Ethel was born May 6. 1902. On Nov. 4, 1904, Mr. Sperstad was married to Thea Thoreson, who was born in the town of Peru, Dunn County, Wis., Feb. 22, 1874. Of this union there are two children: Bert, born Aug. 21, 1905, and Edna, born Feb. 26, 1907. The family are affiliated religiously with the Lutheran church.

Nels Hanson, who for 48 years was proprietor of a wagon-making and repairing business in the village of Elk Mound, a few years prior to his death, which ocdured Dec. 30, 1924, lived retired in the village. He was born in Norway, Sept. 29, 1842, son of Hans Nelson and Martha (Daniels) Nelson. Both parents died in Norway. Nels, the subject of this sketch, was educated in his native land, where he learned the trade of wagon-maker, which he followed in Norway until he came to America in 1873. Landing at New York, he came directly to Wisconsin, locating first in Eau Claire, where he remained for six months. He then came to Elk Mound and for a year thereafter followed the carpenter's trade. Then in 1875 he built a shop and established himself in the wagon-making and repairing industry, in which, as already stated, he continued for 48 years, or until 1923, when he retired. For many years Mr. Hanson was a member of the school board, and he also served as town treasurer before the incorporation of the village. About 1878 he bought a 40-acre tract of land which now constitutes the northeast part of the village. He platted it in April, 1906, into village lots, and the tract is known as the Nels Hanson Addition. Thus he has written his name for all time into local records, but the present population of the village needs no such remainder of his personality, as he was known to all, old and young, and was one of Elk Mound's most popular citizens, Mr. Hanson was married in Elk Mound, March 12, 1881, to Marie Christopherson, who was born in the town of Elk Mound, Sept. 4, 1861, daughter of Bernt and Caroline (Christenson) Christopherson. Her parents were early settlers in this town and continued to make it their home until death. Mr. and Mrs. Hanson have been the parents of seven children, all living, namely: Hannah, now Mrs. Dallas M. Lee of Queen Anne, Maryland; Clara, living at home with her parents; Agnes, who is Mrs A. M. Howe of Elk Mound; Earl W., cashier of the Bank of Elk Mound; Herbert G., of Elk Mound, Wis.; Jessie, assistant postmaster at Elk Mound; and Noble, assistant cashier in the Bank of Elk Mound. The family are connected by membership with the Elk Mound Lutheran Church, while Mr. Hanson was for many years fraternally affiliated with the United Workmen.

Earl W. Hanson, cashier of the Bank of Elk Mound, was born in the village of Elk Mound, Oct. 17, 1888, son of Nels and Marie (Christopherson) Hanson. He was educated in the grade schools of the village and then for a while worked in his father's wagon shop, being later employed in a general store. In 1907 he prepared himself for further advancement in the business world by enrolling as a student in a business college in Eau Claire, Wis., later becoming bookkeeper for the Strong Hardware Co. of Baldwin, Wis. In November, 1908, he became bookkeeper and assistant cashier in the Bank of Elk Mound, and so remained until July, 1910, in which year he accepted the position of cashier in the Gilmanton State Bank, of Gilmanton, Wis., and was with that institution until December, 1911. He then returned to Elk Mound and resumed the position of assistant cashier in the bank here, continuing as such until January, 1918, when he was appointed to his present position as cashier. On July 23, 1918, he was drafted into the United States' service and sent to Camp Grant for training, where he remained until his discharge on Feb. 11, 1919. He is a Blue Lodge Mason, belonging to Lodge No. 164 in Menomonie, also to the camp of Modern Woodmen in Elk Mound. He resides with his parents in the village. As the son of worthy pioneers, he has a good heredity, and his own achievements thus far mark him as one possessed of qualities likely to ensure him an honorable and successful career.

Ole Moen, proprietor of a farm of 280 acres in the town of Wilson, was born in Norway, Nov. 30, 1861, son of Nels and Martha Moen. In his native land the father was a shoemaker and lumberman. It was in 1870 that he emigrated with his family to the United States, settling in Fillmore County, Minnesota, where for six years he followed his trade of shoemaker and worked on farms. In 1876 he came to Dunn County and homesteaded 160 acres of land in Section 32, town of Wilson. The journey was made with a covered wagon and ox team and the family drove some stock along with them. The land they had purchased covered with brush and jack pine and until Mr. Moen could make a small clearing and build a house they took up their quarters with friends in the town of Otter Creek. Their first dwelling on the place was a log house and Mr. Moen also built a straw-roof With the help of his family he cleared the land and farmed there for 25 years, barn. at the end of which time he retired. He is now 87 years old and is residing with his daughter Mrs. Oscar Anderson in Chippewa County. His wife, Mrs. Martha Moen, died in 1901. They had seven children, one of whom, Matt, died in 1920. The others, who are living, are Ole, Otto, Anna, Sena, Lena and Hilda. Anna is the wife of Julius Miller of Chippewa Falls, Sena the wife of Sever Peterson of Jump River, Wis., Lena the wife of Frank Sprague of Cornell, Wis., and Hilda the wife of Oscar Anderson of Cobban, Wis. Ole Moen was nine years old when he came with his parents to the United States. In Minnesota he attended a Norwegian school and worked for farmers. When his parents and the rest of the family came to Dunn County in 1876 he was a well grown lad of 15 and able to be useful. During the summers he worked on the home farm and during the winters in logging camps, for three years being in the employ of the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company, a part of his duties being the cutting of hay and the hauling of it with an ox team. He has never had the inclination to become a rolling-stone, but except when lumbering, has stuck close to the parental homestead, which he has done much to build up and develop to its present condition. He finally bought it from his father and has sheeted and remodeled the old log house, building an addition to it. In 1914 he built a barn of 36 x 64 feet, with a full basement and the Lowden equipment. He carries on general farming and dairying, having 100 acres under the plow and a herd of 27 grade cattle, also raising Duroc-Jersey hogs. Having some time ago bought a tract of 120 acres in the town of Otter Creek, he has thus increased the size of his farm to 280 acres, 180 acres of which are in pasture and woodland. For 20 years he has served as treasurer of the school board. Mr. Moen was married in 1904 at Prairie Farm, Barron County, Wis., to Mrs. Nettie Johnson, widow of Oluf Johnson and daughter of Iver and Anna Aasen. Her parents, natives of Norway and early settlers in Dunn County, are now deceased. They had eight children, one of whom, Anna, who married Jens Stene, of the town of Tainter, is dead. The living are Ole, Lena, Gena, Ingvold, Isaac, Laura and Nettie. Lena is the wife of Charles Holnberg of Minneapolis, and Laura the wife of Ed Knutson of the town of Wilson, Dunn County. Mr. and Mrs. Ole Moen are the parents of three children, Norris, Arthur and Evelyn. By her first marriage Mrs. Moen had four children, of whom three are living, namely, Alvera, Alma and Oleanna, the one deceased being Mabel. Alma married Carsten Emmerson of Minneapolis and Olenna is the wife of Hogan Knutson of Norton, Wis.

Albert O. Bryce, who has a good record as a Dunn County farmer, though now retired from active work, was born at Portage, Wis., Feb. 18, 1858, son of Thomas and Eunetia (Bissel) Bryce. Both parents were born in New York State, and came west in the early 50's, at first locating at Portage, and later moving to Eau Claire. In the latter place, however, he and his family made but a short stay, as he soon bought a tract of land in the town of Rock Creek, Dunn County, which in time he developed into a fine farm. On his place he also built and for over 30 years operated a shingle mill. He and his wife made their home on that farm for the remainder of their lives. They had five children: Angus F., deceased; Albert O., subject of this sketch; Archibald D., now of St. Paul; Bert T. of California; and Carrie J., now Mrs. Elmer Stanton, who lives in Seattle, Wash. Albert O. Bryce as a boy attended district school in the town of Rock Creek, and subsequently resided with his parents until 24 years old. In his father's mill he learned the art of shingle making, becoming a good workman. It was in 1883 that he began farming on his own account, buying 90 acres of land just west of his father's place. On this land he erected a complete set of buildings, and for many years carried on a dairy busi-ness, for 20 years furnishing the Palace of Sweets in Eau Claire with sweet cream, for which he received top prices. In 1918 he retired from active farm life to enjoy the rest and ease earned through years of hard toil. He still remains on the farm, however, which is managed by his youngest son Archie. He is fraternally affiliated with the Caryville lodge of Modern Woodmen of America. Mr. Bryce was married March 15, 1883, in the town of Rock Creek, to Sarah E. Ness, who was born in Champlain, N. Y., Sept. 10, 1862, daughter of Thomas and Martha (Barker) Ness. After a married life of a few days over 30 years, Mrs. Bryce passed away on March 19, 1917, her death being a severe shock to her husband and children, and deeply deplored throughout the community. She was a faithful and loving helpmate to her husband, a wise and affectionate mother, and a sympathetic and hospitable neighbor. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Bryce were five in number, Orrin T., Sadie T., Bessie E., George A. and Archie N. Orrin T., who was born Sept. 25, 1885, married Hattie Campbell, and has had four children, Ethel S., Evelyn, Claire O. and Alice M., the last mentioned of whom is now deceased. Sadie T., born Nov. 29, 1888, is the wife of Oscar Wagnild of Plentywood, Mont., and has three children: George D., Clarence V. and Margaret B. Bessie E., born Aug. 31, 1892, is now Mrs. Carl Froseth of Caryville, Dunn County. George A., born Dec. 29, 1893, resides on the old Bryce homestead. He married Minnie Cowell, and they have one child, Grace A. Archie N., born Jan. 29, 1896, married Sallie Spehle and they are operating the old home farm of their father.

Andrew Arntson, a member of the Menomonie post office force, attached to the rural mail service, was born in Soknedalen, Norway, March 25, 1867, son of Arnt

Setter and Mary (Wold) Setter. The parents were also natives of Norway, in which country the mother died when Andrew was five years old. In 1883 the later was brought to America by his father, and coming west to Wisconsin, they reached Menomonie, April 25. Here the elder Arntson entered the employ of the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company as a carpenter and mill worker, which occupations he followed for the rest of his life, remaining with the above mentioned company until his death in 1890. Andrew Arntson acquired the chief elements of his education in his native land. He was about 16 years old when he arrived in Menomonie and for one month he attended public school here. During that short time, of course, he could learn but little English, and he had to go to work at the end of it, like his father, entering the employ of the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company, with whom he remained for two years, working in the mill, in the pineries, and also on the river, and making his first river drive when he was only 17 years old. In 1885 he went to work for A. H. Johnson, proprietor of a general store in Menomonie, in whose employ he remained for a year and a half. Then in 1892 he formed a partnership with B. Bredeson, establishing a grocery store, which they conducted under the firm name of Bredeson & Arntson until the spring of 1903, when Mr. Arntson sold his interest to his partner. He had already taken the civil service examination and was duly appointed rural mail carrier, to begin work April 1, Assigned to rural route No. 4, he served it for 15 years, or until June 15, 1903. 1918, when he was transferred to Route No. 1. In 1920 he was transferred to Route No. 7, on which he has since continued to travel. He has completed 22 years of postal service and during that period has covered approximately 175,000 miles of road. An efficient and faithful government employe, he enjoys a wide acquaintance, and there are few persons whose coming is looked for so eagerly on the route He keeps horses for his winter driving and runs a car in the summer he travels. time. Mr. Arntson was married Aug. 22, 1896, to Anna Helgeson, who was born April 11, 1863. She died July 30, 1900, after less than four years of married life, having been the mother of three children: Arnold, born June 15, 1897; Evelvn, born Aug. 23, 1898, and Gilbert, born July 30, 1900. This last mentioned son, whose entrance into this world cost his mother her life, survived her but a few months, dying Dec. 21, 1900; and both the other children by the same mother are now dead. Arnold, who married Gertrude Van Alstyne of Kilbourn, Wis., but had no children, died Dec. 17, 1923, a young man in his twenty-seventh year; while the daughter Evelyn died at the age of little over 23 years, on Oct. 9, 1921. On Nov. 16, 1901, Mr. Arntson was married, secondly, to Lena Helgeson, a sister of his first wife, and who was born April 31, 1865. This second union has resulted in two children, both now living, namely: Anna, born Aug. 29, 1902, who is a stenographer for the O. & N. Lumber Co. and Gertrude M., born April 24, 1904, who is a graduate of the Menomonie High School and now a student in the Stout The family home, a pleasant residence, is at No. 414 Twelfth Avenue, Institute. a house that Mr. Artnson purchased in 1903. He and his family are members of Our Saviour's Lutheran Church.

Daniel D. Moyer, an early settler in the town of Rock Creek, now deceased, was born in Pennsylvania, April 22, 1822. With respect to his early life there is no available data, but he seems to have lived for a while in Indiana, as he was married at Wausau, that state, on March 27, 1852, to Barbara Plumridge, who was born in Canada, March 13, 1837, and was therefore, if these dates are corerct, but 15 years old at the time of her marriage, while he was nearly 30. It was in 1865 that they came to Dunn County, Wisconsin, having then five children, and settled in Menomonie, where they remained for a year. At the end of that time they began the development of a farm in the town of Rock Creek, buying 120 acres of raw land in Section 31. About 15 acres of this tract had been cleared and a small log house and some log sheds stood on it. From this starting-point Mr. Moyer continued the improvements, in time grubbing and clearing many acres of land and building a good frame house and barns. He also acquired additional land, owning at one time 320 acres, or half a section, and becoming one of the most substantial and prominent citizens of the town. As his five eldest children were sons, they were useful to him as they grew up, relieving him of much of the hard work, so that after he had reached an advanced age he was practically retired. He died on the farm May 14, 1897, but his wife, who survived him, is still residing on it, being now 87 years old. Their children, 12 in number, were born as follows: L. Jonathan, Feb. 22, 1853; Samuel D., Oct. 12, 1855; John H., June 15, 1858; Miles F., Nov. 25, 1860; Daniel P., Nov. 21, 1863; Sarah C., Nov. 16, 1866; Ida J., May 30, 1868; Jess L., Aug. 12, 1870; Charles J., Nov. 29, 1873; Peter A., March 3, 1876; Cora E., May 20, 1878, and Maggie A., Feb. 23, 1880.

Daniel P. Moyer, who after a long and successful agricultural career, is now living practically retired in the town of Rock Creek, Section 31, was born in Indiana, Nov. 21, 1863, son of Daniel D. and Barbara (Plumridge) Moyer. As a babe he accompanied his parents to Menomonie, Wis., and a year later to the town of Rock Creek, where they began the development of a farm, starting on land most of which was still wild. A few years later he began attending rural school where he acquired such elements of knowledge as were then considered essential, and as he grew to manhood he took part with his elder brothers in helping their father on the farm. Here he has ever since resided. On his father's death in the spring of 1897, he rented the farm, also undertaking the care of his aged mother, who still survives. Aside from the original home farm of 120 acres, he owns another tract of 160 acres, one-half of which lies in the town of Rock Creek and the other half in the town of Peru. The home farm is now being operated by William Parizo, a son-in-law of his, while Mr. Moyer's own farm is cared for by the latter's son, George F. Moyer. The marriage of Daniel P. Moyer took place on April 15, 1887, uniting him with Elizabeth Swonger, a native of Indiana. They have had four children, all of whom are now living, namely, George F., Roy E., Myrtle E. and Minnie D. George F., born Jan. 30, 1888, who has been already mentioned, married Evelyn Parizo and has one child, Floyd F. Roy E., born April 19, 1889, who lives in Meridean, married Hazel Percy and has one child, Daniel E. Myrtle E., born Dec. 28, 1892, is now the wife of Edgar Parizo. Thev reside in Buffalo County, Wisconsin and their children are Vilas E., Earl E. and Harold. Minnie D., born Feb. 6, 1896, is the wife of William Parizo, already men-They are living on the old Moyer homestead and have two children, tioned. Ole O. Hövre, a prominent resident of the village of Colfax, holding the office of assessor, who has formerly served in other public offices but most of whose active career up to this time has been spent in agricultural pursuits, was born in Guldbrandsdalen, Norway, Feb. 14, 1864, son of Ole O., Sr., and Sonov (Husmoen) The family came to the United States in 1869, landing at New York and Hövre. coming directly west to Wisconsin, settling in the town of Ettrick, Trempealeau County. There the father resided until his death over 30 years later, on Aug. 1, 1900. The mother, who survived him, is still living and resides with her son Gilbert on the old homestead, being now 86 years old. Their children were: Ole O., subject of this sketch; Olof, a farmer in Trempealeau County; Ingeborg, now Mrs. Ben Olson of Trempealeau County; Gilbert, who is operating the old home farm; and John, a merchant in Iduna, Trempealeau County. Ole O. Hövre, son of the above mentioned parents, acquired a better education than the average pioneer farmer's boy, as he was given the opportunity of attending Gale College, at Galesville, Trempealeau County, from which he was graduated in 1886. For the next three years he taught rural school, and then, in 1890, purchased a general mercantile store and business at Hale in the same county, which he operated subsequently for 26 years. During that period, his ability and integrity having become manifest to his fellow citizens, in 1914, he was elected county treasurer and served as such for two years. He was also for 12 years clerk of the town of Hale, and school clerk For 24 years and 60 days he served in the office of justice of the peace. eight years. In 1916 Mr. Hövre traded his store in Hale for a 200-acre farm in the town of Tainter, Dunn County, and on May 5, 1916, settled on it. The next five years were devoted to its cultivation; then in the fall of 1921 he rented it out and took up his residence in the village of Colfax, where he remained until April, 1924. He then returned to his farm, being not entirely satisfied with the results obtained from renting it out. It is well stocked with high grade Holstein cattle, including a pure bred sire, and with pure bred Chester-White swine. After moving to Dunn County, Mr. Hövre was elected clerk of the town of Tainter and served as such until he moved to Colfax, when he was elected assessor of the village, and served until he returned to the farm. At the spring election of 1925 he was elected assessor of the town of Tainter. He was married May 13, 1891, to Mathia Böle of Ettrick, Wis., who was born Feb. 7, 1871, daughter of Juuhl and Ingri Böle. The Böle family came to the United States in 1875, first locating in Vernon County, Wis-consin, but in 1876 moving to Ettrick in Trempealeau County, where the parents spent the remainder of their lives, the father dying in 1914 and the mother in May, Mr. and Mrs. Ole O. Hovre have been the parents of ten children, of whom 1921. the following is a brief record: Selma J., born May 16, 1892, is now Mrs. Victor Noer of Colfax and has one son Juuhl; Olga I., born Nov. 24, 1893, was a nurse in World War service, enlisting as such, or for that purpose, and is now county nurse of Freeborn County, Minnesota, with headquarters at Albert Lea; May O., born Sept. 1, 1896, is now the wife of Rev. Segrud Folkestad of Christiania, Norway, and has two children, Hildred and Segrud; Hazel, born Sept. 8, 1900, and now Mrs. Reuben Larson of Colfax, has one child, Orville R.; Lillian M., born May 13, 1903, died April 2, 1905; Myrtle L., born Jan. 22, 1906, is attending Normal School at Eau Claire; Orvile J., born Dec. 1, 1908, Alice J., born Nov. 23, 1911, and Catherine V., born Sept. 6, 1914, are attending public school. The Hovre family individually are members of the Norwegian Lutheran Church in Colfax, Mrs. Hövre being a member of the Ladies' Aid Society.

Ever Torgerson, one of the oldest and most highly respected citizens now living in the town of Peru, whose boyhood days were cast among the vertiable pioneers of Dunn County, and whose life story is well worthy of record in this volume, was born in the "place" of Runningsloan, Gudbrandsdalen, Norway, on Nov. 7, 1841. His parents. Ole and Eli (Groosberg) Torgerson, were natives of the same place, where they remained until 1858, when with three sons, Ole, Edmund and Ever, they came to the United States and to Dunn County, Wisconsin, making their temporary home with another son, Torger Olson, who had preceded them to this country in 1855. This son, Torger, it may be said was the first permanent settler in the town of Peru. Some time after the arrival of the main part of the family, the son Ole took land in the town of Red Cedar, and the parents went to live with They spent the remainder of their lives on his farm, where the mother passed him. away on Oct. 15, 1868, and the father on Sept. 4, 1875. Ever Torgerson was about 17 years old when he came to America with his parents. He had been given a public school education in his native land and attended English school eight months during the first two years after arriving in Dunn County. After that he worked out by the day until 1861, in which year he was employed by Ed Harrington for a season on his farm at Cedar Falls. That fall he returned to the town of Peru and for two winters thereafter worked in the pineries, in the summers being employed in the mills of the Chapman & Thorpe Lumber Co. at old Meridean. In 1865 he bought a place on the north side in Eau Claire, where he and his wife kept a boardinghouse, he having been married that year, on Oct. 26, to Runnog Bruden, who was born at Lom, Gudbrandsdalen, Norway, Jan. 30, 1842. After being thus engaged for two years, Mr. Torgerson sold out in the fall of 1867, and in the following year returned to the town of Peru and started in as a pioneer farmer, buying a tract of 120 acres in Section 14. It was partly improved, the buildings standing on it being a small house of poor construction, and a barn equally poor, or worse, being built of slabs with sharpened ends driven into the ground for the sides, and with poles laid across and covered with straw for a roof. With such inadequate and inconvenient buildings, the barn being particularly liable to destruction from fire, Mr. Torgerson began his agricultural career, and though his progress at first was slow, it was steady. In 1871 he built a combined barn and granary, and in 1876 a good residence; and at other times he bought additional land, 80 acres in the town of Peru and 40 acres of timber land in the town of Rock Falls. In 1910 he tore down the old barn and built a much superior one in modern style, measuring 36 x 82 feet in ground plan, and with a 14-foot driveway, which practically made the barn 96 In the same year he built a cement block silo of 14 x 33 feet. Altofeet long. gether, he erected a fine set of out-buildings for sheltering his stock, poultry, and machinery. He cleared and broke 70 acres of land himself and succeeded in developing a fine modern farm. His work in this respect, and in other ways, made him one of the leading citizens of his community. He was one of the organizers of the Meridean Cooperative Creamery, and is a stockholder in the Rock Creek and and Meridean Telephone Co. and the Meridean State Bank. Mr Torgerson also saw many years of public service in one office or another, including those of town treasurer, assessor, chairman of the town board and member of the county board; also as clerk and treasurer of his school district, and in 1900 he was U. S. census enumerator for the towns of Peru and Rock Creek. He continued to carry on his farm until 1913, when he sold it to his son, O. Theodore, retired, and built a small house on the property, in which he and his good wife resided until her death on Dec. 3, 1920, after a married life of 55 years. He then took up his residence again in the main house with his son and family. He is a member of the Lutheran Church at Meridean, serving many years as treasurer of the congregation, and until 1918 being one of the deacons. Mr. and Mrs. Ever Torgerson were the parents of eight children, Ellen, Ole Johan, O. Theodore, Carl, Tobias, Christina, John and Julius. Carl, Tobias and Ole Johan are deceased; so also is Julius, who married Alma Anderson and in 1910 went to Canada, where he took a homestead. Ellen, who married Rolf Tilstad, died in 1890 ,leaving two children, Rogna and Elmer. Christina is now Mrs. W. F. Micheels of Menomonie and the mother of four children, Lucille, Esther, Valeria and William J. John A., farmer in the town of Rock Creek, married Anna Brumberg and they have nine children, Leona, Arminda, Helen, Christina, Inger, Elvin, Norma, John and Gladys. O. Theodore is separately mentioned in this volume.

O. Theodore Torgerson, a prominent farmer in the town of Peru, was born on his present farm, Feb. 16, 1872, son of Ever and Runnog (Bruden) Torgerson. He was educated in the Meridean school and after living on the home farm with his parents until 25 years old, started out for himself, working in the woods at various places for jobbers, including Superior, Wis. and Cloquet, Minn. In 1904 he became the agent in Dunn County for the Watkins Medical Company of Winona, Minn., handling their remedies, spices, toilet articles, etc., and that position he held for In 1913 he returned to the town of Peru and bought his parent's farm, ten years. containing 240 acres, on which he has since followed general and dairy farming. In 1918 his large barn burned down with 36 head of cattle, seven horses and 17 pigs, entailing a loss of $9,000 with an insurance of $2,200. Having built a fine new barn on the same foundation, a cyclone in October, 1920, demolished its roof. In spite of these misfortunes, Mr. Torgerson has prospered and has today one of the best farms in the town of Peru, well stocked with grade Guernsey and Holstein cattle, hogs, horses and poultry. At the spring election of 1923 he was elected town treasurer. He was first married to Laura Shager, who died in November, 1906, leaving one child, Edna. In December, 1907, Mr. Torgerson married Anna Kleven of which union five children have been born, namely: Raymond, Evelyn, Arnold, Truman and Rosland.

John H. Fuller, a progressive young business man of Menomonie, was born near Durand, Wis. He was educated in that city and then took up electric work, which he followed in various places until August, 1911. Then as a partner he helped to organize the Menomonie Auto Company, with quarters located on West Main Street. At the time of organization they became agents for the Michigan and R. C. H. cars, but in 1913 took the agency for the Ford instead. In April, 1917, the partners divided their interests and Mr. Fuller engaged in the manufacture of oscellating sleighs, continuing in it for three years, at the same time having the Buick auto agency. In 1920 Mr. Fuller purchased the building at the corner of Sixth Avenue and Second Street West and established the Fuller Auto Company. He has since taken on the Dodge agency, so that he now handles two of the leading makes of cars, besides operating a large repair department and handling a large stock of auto accessories. He has made a good start on his business career and is enjoying a well earned prosperity.

Mathias Moen, better known as Matt, for many years a farmer in the town of Wilson, but now deceased, was born in Fillmore County, Minn., Oct. 26, 1874, son of Nels and Martha Moen. He was two years old when he came with his parents to Dunn County, where he was reared and attended school, subsequently helping his father to improve the home farm and remaining with his parents until he was 27 years old. At the age of 18 he began working in the woods in winters, and did so thereafter for a number of years, like most of the early settlers in this county. Having been given 80 acres of the parental farm, he afterwards bought 160 more in Section 33, town of Wilson, making a farm of 240 acres, cleared the land and erected a good frame house, barn, and other buildings, and in time put 100 acres under the plow. He followed general farming and dairying, keeping on an average about 25 head of grade cattle, and also raising Duroc-Jersey hogs. He served for a number of years as a member of the school board of his district, and remained active until his death on Dec. 26, 1920, since which time his wife has carried on the farm with the help of her sons. Mr. Moen's marriage took place at Prairie Farm, Barron County, March 27, 1904, uniting him with Amanda Carlson, who was born in Menomonie, Sept. 20, 1883, daughter of August and Mary Carlson; and of this union eight children were born; Marvin, Helen, Lillian, Agnes, Florence, Harold, Herbert and Norman; all but the eldest are residing with their mother on the home farm. Marvin married Gunda Lee and is at present employed on construction work on Federal Highway No. 25. Mrs. Moen's parents, who came to this country from Sweden, first settled in Menomonie, where Mr. Carlson worked in the mills of Knapp, Stout & Co. Company until 1896. He then settled in the town of Wilson, buying 160 acres of partly wild land, which in time he developed into a good farm, he and his wife residing there until 1909. Since then he has resided with his daughter, Mrs. Moen, while Mrs. Carlson lives with her son in They had ten children, of whom the four now living are Amanda, Carl, Duluth. Those deceased are Otto, Sadie, Tillie, Alvin, Oscar and one Fred and Adolph. who died in infancy. In 1917 after this country had engaged in the war with Germany and Austria, Oscar enlisted in the U.S. service and served in France in an artillery regiment. He died overseas from pneumonia.

John Fred Schmidt, proprietor of Trout Brook Dairy Farm of 240 acres, 80 acres of which are in the town of Wilson and 160 in the town of Sheridan, was born in Section 12, this town, Dec. 1, 1873, son of Walter and Maria (Kallenbach) Schmidt. Both the father and mother were born in Germany and came to this country with their respective parents in the early 60's, the two families settling in Dane County, Wisconsin. After the close of the Civil War they came to Dunn County, where Walter Schmidt and Maria Kallenbach were married. The journey from Dane County was made in covered wagons drawn by oxen and the two families slept in the wagons at night. As they found no roads covering the latter part of their journey, they had to make their way over blazed trails, and for the most part they crossed the streams at the nearest fords, for there were as yet few bridges. After their marriage, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Schmidt settled in the town of Sheridan, where they found plenty of Indians, who were for a time their only neighbors. They did most of their trading at Menomonie but hauled their grain with ox carts to Eau Claire, where they also bought supplies. The trip to and from Eau Claire took three days. They made gradual progress and in course of time erected a better set of buildings. After many years of labor there Walter Schmidt died on the farm His wife, who survived him, is still living and is now 75 years old. Thev in 1904. were the parents of a large family, numbering 14 children, 12 of whom are now living, namely: Katherine, Anna, John Fred, Walter, Mary, August, Edith, Louise, Maggie, Ernst and Lena (twins) and Mae. Katherine is the wife of Fred Lentz, Anna is the wife of Joe Sullivan, Mary the wife of William Gothier, Maggie the wife of John Wagner of California, and Mae the wife of John Hartung. John Fred Schmidt was reared on the home farm, as a boy attending rural school. He remained at home until the age of 13, then began working for others on farms. Later he went logging in the woods and worked for a part of his time in sawmills. In 1898 he began his farming career, buying 80 acres of land in Section 6, town of Wilson a tract of land mostly wild, but having a log house of 12 x 14 feet on it. To the latter he built an addition and with this improvement it was his home and that of his family for a number of years afrerward, or until the year 1912, when he built a modern frame house of 10 rooms. At various times he also built barns, a silo, and other buildings, as time passed and prosperity came, he bought 160 acres more, adjoining his original 80-acre tract, but just across the line in the town of Sheridan, this completing a fine farm of 240 acres. He has continued clearing his land until he now has 110 acres under the plow. Engaged in general farming and dairying, Mr. Schmidt has 32 head of grade Guernsey cattle, and also raises hogs successfully. He is a stockholder in the Ridgeland Co-operative Creamery. Aside from his regular occupation, he has rendered some public service, including 11 years as road boss and one year as a member of the side board. He was married in the town of Sheridan in 1892, to Anna Hartung, who was born in Germany, and who, having lost her parents when quite young, came to the United States at the age of nine years with some girl friends. Mr. and Mrs. Schmidt had seven children, of whom five are living, namely, Walter, Edward, Irvin, Roy and Herbert. Archie and Florence are dead, as also is Mrs. Anna Schmidt, who passed away on Aug. 23, 1920.

Ole G. Paulson, proprietor of a 160-acre farm in Section 25, town of Sheridan, was born in West Toten, Norway, Jan. 30, 1858, son of Paul and Olena (Olson) The parents, who were farmers, are both now deceased. They had Gilbertson. seven children, of whom four are now living: Oleana, widow of Hans Hoff and residing in Minnesota; Matilda, wife of J. A. Carsrud of Sioux Falls, S. D.; Ole G., whose name forms the caption of this article; and Augusta, wife of Olaus Negaard residing in Norway. The three deceased are Andrew, Helma and Matt. Ole G. Paulson attended school in his native land and afterwards worked on the home farm there until he was 21 years old. After having attained his majority and being his own master, he came to the United States in 1881, and to Dunn County, Wisconsin, locating in the town of Sheridan and entering the employ of the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company, for whom he worked in the woods, in mills and on the drive of the lumber rafts down river. The last drive he made took 80 days, and he would wake up sometimes in the morning to find himself in the water. For 12 years also he worked on the Washburn farm. While on this farm Mr. Paulson, with an eye to the future, bought 80 acres of wild land in the town of Sheridan, to which he later added 160 acres, but subsequently sold the first 80, which left him with his present When he bought this land it was covered with timber and brush. For his farm. original farm buildings he erected a frame house of $14 \ge 16$ feet and a log barn with a shack roof. He has since enlarged the house into an eight-room residence, and has made corresponding improvements in his other buildings. Sixty acres of his land are now under the plow, the balance being in pasture and timber. He carries on general farming and dairying, keeping Durham grade cattle and raising Poland-China hogs, and his long record of active industry is one of which he has reason to be proud. Mr. Paulson was married in Menomonie, in 1892, to Josephine Mikkelson, daughter of Anton and Helena Mikkelson. Her parents, now deceased, were natives of Norway and early settlers in Dunn County. Mr. and Mrs. Paulson have had four children, Henry O., Julia O., Oscar H. and Peter A., of whom the three first mentioned are now living. Henry O. married Blanche Dean of Sheridan and is a farmer having an 80-acre farm of his own besides renting 160 acres. He has three children, Melvin, Irene and Basil. Julia O. and Oscar H. are on the home farm. Peter A. lost his life in the great war. Inducted into the U. S. service, he became a member of Company H, Third Wisconsin Infantry (the Ludington Guard); trained at Camp Grant; went to France in 1918 and was killed in action in the Argonne sector on Oct. 19, 1918.

Robert Kirk, a well known farmer and respected citizen in the town of Dunn, was born in Yorkshire, England, Nov. 23, 1857. He attended school and grew to manhood in his native land, coming to the United States and to Dunn County, Wisconsin, in 1880. For 13 years after his arrival he worked on a farm in Section 7 for E. Ticknor, and then for two years on another farm for F. A. Vasey. It was in 1895 that he started in for himself, buying the Ticknor farm of 112 acres in Section 7 on which he had previously worked for 13 years. It was pretty well improved, but he has done a little more clearing and is successfully following general farming and dairving, keeping grade Holstein cattle. Always a hard worker, he has met with well deserved success. Mr. Kirk was first married Jan. 11, 1894, to Alice Ticknor, who died July 22, 1896. Mr. Kirk was married the second time on March 27, 1901, to Anna I., Reid, then of the town of Dunn, this county, but who was born in the town of Springbrook, April 16, 1866, daughter of James and Mary (Beatty) Reid. Her parents were natives of St. John, New Brunswick, who settled in what is now Pepin County, Wis., in 1854, whence they moved to Fall City, Dunn County, (Up to the year 1854 what are now the counties of Dunn and Pepin were in 1856. contained in Chippewa County, when they were set off as Dunn County, and Pepin was set off from Dunn in 1858). In 1866 Mr. Reid moved with his family to the Louisville settlement, where he engaged in farming. He also built a blacksmith's shop on his farm, which was well patronized, so that he was kept working at his trade for much of his time. As an expert horse shoer his reputation became widely extended and horses were brought to his shop from as far away as Eau Claire, Chippewa Falls and Menomonie. He died on his farm May 16, 1910, having survived his wife, who had passed away on Dec. 31, 1908. They were the parents of a good sized family, whose record in brief is as follows: William, who now lives in Sidney, Mont.; Elizabeth, who married Judge William Newcomb of Durand and died in March, 1923; Ida, who died Oct. 18, 1924; Frederick James, of Brainerd, Minn.; Hester K., who is the wife of Arthur Wright of Brainerd, Minn.; Anna I., wife of Robert Kirk; Josephine, who married Henry Hatch, is now a widow, and resides with her brother on the old farm; Gertrude M., who married Ed Kyle and died Feb. 16, 1920; George A., who died Feb. 2, 1897; and Frank, who is on the home farm. Mr. and Mrs. Kirk had one child, Doris, who was born March 11, 1908. and died the same day. They adopted another, Christine Norgaard, whom they have reared and educated, and who is a graduate of the Dunn County Normal School and has now taught school for four years, and is now a student in the River Falls State Normal School, taking the full three years' course. Before her marriage Mrs. Kirk taught school for 12 years, making a good record. She and Mr. Kirk are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, the latter belonging also to the Modern Woodmen of America, while Mrs. Kirk is a member of the Royal Neighbors.

James N. Clark, the owner of Walnut Grove Farm in Section 17, town of Rock Creek, and the oldest continuous resident of this town now living, was born in Catteraugus County, New York, Nov. 3, 1842, son of Chester R. and Jane (Newman) Clark. The parents also were born in that state, the father on July 31, 1814, and the mother on July 26, 1818. In 1843 they came west and settled at Whitewater, Walworth County, Wis., where Chester R. Clark worked in a sawmill for They then moved to Fond du Lac County, where until 1856 they were two years. engaged in farming. Coming to Dunn County in that year, they started pioneer farming on a tract of 230 acres of raw land which Mr. Clark bought in Sections 8 and 19, town of Rock Creek, and on which he built a log house and barns and made further improvements. Later he bought another farm, or tract, of 120 acres, and subsequently operated the two tracts as a single farm, which in time he brought into good condition, including buildings. Here his wife died, Feb. 10, 1878, and here also he, himself, passed away 21 years later, on July 10, 1899. Besides creating a farm, he and his wife had founded a family which numbered six children, namely: James N., the direct subject of this memoir; Milton C., a farmer in the town of Ludington, Eau Claire County, Wis.; Daniel G., who died in 1920; Alton L., a farmer in the town of Sherman, Dunn County; Bertine P., who resides in Doliver, Iowa; and Harriet, who in 1861 became the wife of John Shepard but died in the same year. James N. Clark as a boy attended rural school in the town of Rock Creek, his education being supplemented by a course in the Wesleyan Seminary at

Until he was 26 years old his home was on his parents' farm, which Eau Claire. he helped his father to clear, and for three years during that period he taught rural school. At times also he worked out on other farms. It was in 1868 that he began his own agricultural career as an independent farmer, buying 120 acres of virgin land in Section 17, town of Rock Creek. The tract was one of those "oak openings," the nature of which was made familiar to lovers of fiction many years ago by a novel of Fennimore Cooper published under that title. No clearing had been done and there were no buildings. Mr. Clark started the improvement of his place by building a small frame dwelling and one or two out-buildings, and then proceeded to clear the tract by cutting out the brush, saplings, and occasional young trees that dotted it here and there, and removing the stumps, which was the inevitable work of the pioneer farmer and involved a large amount of labor. By hard and long continued work, and the endurance of more or less privation during the early years he succeeded in time in building up an excellent farm. He also added to its area by the purchase of a tract of 40 acres of timber land in Section 8, of which he has cleared about 25 acres. He has made equal progress with his buildings. In 1902 he erected a fine, full-basement, dairy barn of 40 x 70 feet, installing a water system and individual drinking cups. He has also twin silos, one measuring 12 x 34 feet and the other 10 x 34 feet, both constructed of cement blocks; and in addition he has an adequate set of out-buildings and a good supply of up-to-date machinery. His present residence is a two-story frame house of 10 rooms, well planned for domestic convenience, and it may be added, that in the construction of this dwelling Mr. Clark did most of the carpenter work himself. He has a fine herd of high grade Holsten cattle, with a pure bred sire, and a good pen of Poland-China hogs. In addition to his ordinary farming and dairying activities, for the last 22 years he has devoted a little time to the cultivation of ginseng, from which he has realized altogether about $1,700, though he has but a small patch. During the last few vears, however, he has done but little of the hard work on the place, having turned over its management to his son Raymond C. It is frequently the case with men of extraordinary activity and ability in some particular direction, that, to ease the strain of the usual daily routine, they turn their minds to some form of esthetic enjoyment, thereby finding relief and new vigor in an occasional change of occupation. Many find such relief in an amateur cultivation of one of the fine arts, such as music, poetry, painting or sculpture, or in the collection of rare objects, like old Mr. Clarks' esthetic cravings have turned in another coins, shells, or porcelain. direction, influenced, perhaps, by the beauties of nature by which he has been surrounded from boyhood. For many years, being an expert taxidermist, he has taken pride and pleasure in collecting and mounting various specimens of birds and animals, and has now a fine and extensive collection representing between 500 and 600 different species. Of birds alone he has filled 18 side-wall show cases, and his wonderful collection, taken in connection with the skill with which his specimens are mounted, in characteristic attitudes or poses, has made his name known to nature lovers, not only in many part of this country, but also abroad. As a good citizen, willing to contribute his share of personal endeavor to the welfare of the general community, he has at various times rendered public service in official For many years he served as town clerk, and for eight years was town position. assessor. He also served for several terms as a member of the town board and for a long period was an active member of the school board. To all such public duties he gave his best efforts, which proved beneficial to the community. His life story, as thus briefly outlined, is worthy of a place in the annals of the county, as typifying the qualities which, taken collectively in the mass of its best citizenship, have transformed it from a wilderness, inhabited only by savages and wild animals, and largely covered with the primeval forest, to one of the richest and most civilized parts of the state of Wisconsin. But it still remains to speak of Mr. Clark's domestic life. He was married, April 17, 1886, to Jennie Norrish of the town of Rock Creek, who was born July 30, 1852, and to her steadfast and aimable qualities as wife and mother he owes much of his success in life. She died Dec. 12, 1916, leaving five children: Raymond C., born Sept. 5, 1889; Harvey E., born July 28, 1892; Mabel G., born Jan. 14, 1894; Bernice E., born Aug. 23, 1896, and Paul N., born Aug. 1, 1907. Raymond C., as already mentioned, is conducting the home farm. Harvey E. is also on the farm. Mabel C., who is housekeeper for her father and brothers, partakes of the former's tastes, being a great lover of birds and making a specialty of raising fine singers for the market, of which she sometimes has as many as 50 on hand at one time, selling them at prices ranging from $4 to $10 apiece. Bernice E. is now the wife of George Hintermeyer, a garage proprietor in the village of Rock Falls, and has one child, Leland. Paul N. is at home on the farm.

Ferdinand Schmidt, in former years a well known resident of Menomonie, was born in Baden, Prussia, Jan. 9, 1828. As a boy he attended common school, after which, his father being a sadler, he learned that trade under his instructions. By the time he was 19 years old he had resolved to seek his fortune in the United States, and, having taken passage on a sailing vessel, he arrived in this country and came west to Eau Claire, Wis. There for a while he worked at his trade, after which he came to Menomonie and became associated in business with Michael Fox, who later became his brother-in-law. On Dec. 31, 1876, Mr. Schmidt was married in Menomonie to Bertha Grob of Menomonie, daughter of Henry and Elizabeth Grob. She was born in Zurich, Switzerland, Oct. 31, 1855, and had come to this country at the age of 12 years with Henry Huber, a close friend of Henry Grob, her father. For several years Mr. Schmidt was associated with a brother-in-law, "Mike" Fox, in the operation of one of the first hotels established in Menomonie. Mrs. Schmidt's father, Henry Grob, was one of the best known citizens of Menomonie in early days. After being married in Switzerland he came to this country alone, leaving behind him his wife and son Henry Otto. It was five years before he saw them again, but at the end of that time, having made some financial progress, he went back to Switzerland and on his return brought them with him to this country. In 1870 he erected a building on Broadway, where the Grand Theatre now stands, that was known as Grob's Hall, and which for years was the scene of all the amusement functions held in the town, including dances, suppers, singing, society meetings and other entertainments. In 1861 he erected a building known as the Wisconsin House on Broadway, one of the first buildings of the city. Grob's Hall was destroyed by fire on Nov. 28, 1884, together with the Merchant's Hotel, but was rebuilt by Mrs. Grob and Ferdinand Schmidt. For some years his son-in-law, Ferdinand Schmidt, conducted a business in the lower story. Mr. Schmidt died April 29, 1890. His widow, Mrs. Bertha Schmidt, now lives in a comfortable home on Second Street West, just back of They had two children, Frederick H. and William S., who succeeded Smith's Hall. their father in the management of the business. Mr. Schmidt was a Democrat in politics, and although he never held local office, he stood so high with his party as to be sent as a delegate on several occasions to state conventions. He was a Lutheran in religion, as are all the members of the Schmidt family. With respect to the Grob family, Henry Otto Grob was born in Switzerland, March 8, 1857, and died in Menomonie, Wis., March 25, 1898, leaving a widow and three children, Edwin H., Dalos H. and Bertha. His widow is now living in Menomonie, together with her son Dalos H. Bertha, now Mrs. E. D. Pennington, lives in St. Paul, and Edwin H., attorney and publisher now resides in Los Angeles, Calif. Henry Otto Grob for many years was one of Menomonie's representative business men. Ferdinand Schmidt's sister Mary, who married Michael Fox is said to have been one of the first white women to live in Menomonie.

Smith Brothers, Frederick H. and William S., are the proprietors and managers of Menomonie's two theatres, the Grand on Broadway, and the Orpheum on Main Street, also owners and operators of the Menomonie Poster Advertising Co. They are sons of Ferdinand and Bertha (Grob) Schmidt, who arrived in this country from Prussia and Switzerland respectively, and further mention of whom is made in this volume. Frederick H. was born Oct. 21, 1877, and William S. on March 3, 1879, in Menomonie. Both were educated in the schools of their home city.

Later they remodeled the lower floor of the opera house building into a motion picture theatre, known as the Grand. Later they acquired the Main Street theatre from August Schoenoff, after renting it for five years. They show a high class of moving pictures and both of their houses have good patronage. Frederick H. Smith was married April 14, 1925, to Leona D. Becker, who was born in Menomonie, Aug. 26, 1894, daughter of Peter and Theresa Becker of Menomonie. For seven years Frederick H. was a member of Company H, Third Infantry, W. N. G., now Company A, 128th Infantry, otherwise known as the Ludington Guard. He is also a member of Ed. C. Gottry Lodge No. 170, K. P., and of Oman Temple No. 196, D. O. K. K. (Dramatic Order Knights of Khorassan), sometimes referred to as the "Dokkevs", of Eau Claire. Shortly after graduating from the Menomonie High School in 1897, William S. Smith became employed by the Wisconsin Telephone Co., serving in the Contract Department, working in various cities of Wisconsin. In the year 1903 he was made manager of the Wisconsin Telephone Co. Exchange, at La Crosse, and later made district manager, at La Crosse, and Green Bay, Wis.; after that was employed in the general office of the Northwestern Telephone Co., with headquarters in Minneapolis, Minn. William S. Smith was for some years quartermaster of old Company H., (Ludington Guard). In the Spanish American War he saw service in Porto Rico as a member of the Ambulance Corps. He is a member of the Ed. C. Gottry Lodge No. 170, K. P., also of Oman Temple No. 196, D. O. K. K., of Eau Claire, and for the past ten years has been local agent and representive for the Travelers Insurance Co. of Hartford, Conn. He was married Sept. 22, 1924, to Marguerite T. Weston of La Crosse. The Smith Brothers are numbered among the enterprising business men of their native city, and are highly honored and respected by all who know them; their friends extending to the whole citizenship of the community, having served the public with entertainment for nearly 35 years.

Ole E. Dahl, proprietor of a fine 240 acre farm in Section 29, town of Rock Creek, was born in Shaker, Gudbrandsdalen, Norway, Aug. 15, 1868, son of Esten and Sigrid (Holemark) Dahl. When he was four years old his mother died, and his father subsequently married Mrs. Elcha Sperstad, with whom at a later date he came to the United States. Both finally died on the farm of the subject of this sketch in the town of Rock Creek. The latter, who was educated in his native land, came to America in 1888, and it was in the spring of 1889 that he settled in the town of Rock Creek, Dunn County, Wis., and began farming, buying 80 acres of land in Section 29. The tract was partly improved, but the buildings were poor, the dwelling being only a board shanty. It was in the same year that he was joined by his father and step-mother, they taking up their residence with him. As the farm would not at first support them, Ole worked out at road building for two years, but made improvements on his farm as he was able. He bought a building at Porterville, which he tore down, hauling the lumber to his farm and using it to enlarge and improve his house, which he converted into a comfortable residence. He then set actively to work, clearing, grubbing and developing his land, and the result is his present fine farm. His house is now set off with a pleasing lawn adorned with flowers and shrubbery; his barn measures 32 x 60 feet, and his out-buildings, all substantial and adequate, include a granary, machine sheds, hog and chicken houses, and two fine silos, one of cement block construction measuring 12 x 30 feet, and the other of solid cement, measuring 10 x 27 feet. He has a very complete assortment of machinery, including a tractor. He has added to his holdings until his farm now includes 240 acres, all in Section 29 except 40 acres in Section 30. He gives special attention to dairying, though he also raises some small grain, and he is a stockholder in the Meridean Cooperative Creamery. A good practical farmer, he is also a reliable citizen, interested in everything that makes for the welfare of the community in which he resides and the county generally, and has served as road commissioner of his district. Mr. Dahl was married on April 18, 1896, to Annie Brostuen, born at Shaker, Gudbrandsdalen, Norway, Aug. 31, 1865, and who, after a married life of 18 years, died on the farm July 29, 1912. The children of this marriage were five in number: Edwin T., born Dec. 20, 1897, now employed in a lumber yard at Hibbings, Minn.; Peter, born April 15, 1899, who was married July 25, 1924, to Emma Stone, and is his father's assistant on the home farm; Clara, born Feb. 18, 1901, who has the care of the household; and Thalman and Odin (twins), born Oct. 2, 1906, who are also residing on the home farm. The family are affiliated religiously with the Lutheran Church.

Charles H. Reckin, Sr., who came to Dunn County at an early day and subsequently went through all the experience of pioneer farming, was born in Germany, son of Charles and Fredericka (Weber) Reckin. He was about ten years old when his parents, in 1858, brought him to America, the family first settling in Milwaukee, where they made their home for five years. At the end of that time they came to Dunn County, buying 40 acres of railroad land in Section 27, town of Eau Galle. It was a tract covered with heavy timber. There Charles Reckin made a clearing and erected a log house and barns, completing the house on April 14, 1865, the day on which President Lincoln was assasinated. In course of time, assisted by his sons, Charles H. and August, he cleared off the timber, grubbed out the stumps, and developed a fine farm, which was not confined to the original 40 acres, as he had added to its area by occasional purchases until it contained 320 acre, which was its size at the time of his death in May, 1894. The task had taken him 29 years, but it was a good piece of work, from which his children profited. After his death his sons Charles H. Sr., and August, Sr., remained on the farm, which they operated together until Charles H. was married in the town of Albany, in what is now Pepin County, Wis., to Mary Schriner, who was a native of that town and county. When he was married another house was built on the farm, of which he and his wife took possession, he at the same time taking 160 acres of the home farm, the tract on which the new house stood, in Section 37, town of Eau Galle. His mother, Mrs. Fredericka Reckin, resided on the old homestead until her death in 1906, at the age of 90 years and four months, she having survived her husband about 12 years. To the 160 acres of the parental estate which he obtained, Charles H. Reckin, Sr., added from time to time by additional land purchases until he had 260 acres, and he continued to operate this farm and to improve it until 1905, when he retired, subsequently making his home in the village of Eau Galle, where he passed away on Feb. 5, 1921. His wife Mary had died many years before, on June 24, 1899. They had been the parents of five children, as follows: Dora, who married Albert Schrader of Eau Galle, and is now a widow; Augusta, wife of Winton Kirk of Elmwood, Pierce County; Emma, who is Mrs. Edward De Long of the town of Eau Galle; and August, Jr., and Charles H., Jr., of the town of Eau Galle, August adding "Jr." to his name to distinguish him from his uncle August, who for the same reason is known as August Reckin, Sr.

August Reckin, Jr., a skilled and progressive farmer of the town of Eau Galle, was born in this town in a log house on the farm of his uncle, August Reckin, Sr., on Dec. 17, 1881, his parents being Charles H., Sr., and Mary (Schriner) Reckin. As a boy he attended the Hall school and grew to manhood on the home farm, working for his father until the latter retired in 1905, after which he and his brother, Charles H., Jr., conducted the farm together. Then, the latter marrying, the land was divided into two equal portions, between the brothers. On his own farm August has made great improvements. He has raised and remodeled the house, putting a basement under it and adding a large summer kitchen. In 1913 he built a fine basement barn 36 x 70 feet in ground plan, installed with the James equipment, and has also put up a number of good out-buildings. For a water supply he has sunk two wells, pumping the water to his house and barns by means of a gasolene His farm now contains 200 acres of fine fertile land, well cultivated, and engine. he is successfully engaged in general farming, giving special attention to dairying, for which latter purpose he keeps a good herd of Durham cattle. He is a stockholder in the Equity elevator at Durand and in the Elmwood State Bank, and is fraternally affiliated with the Modern Woodmen of America. August Reckin, Jr., was married

HISTORY OF DUNN COUNTY

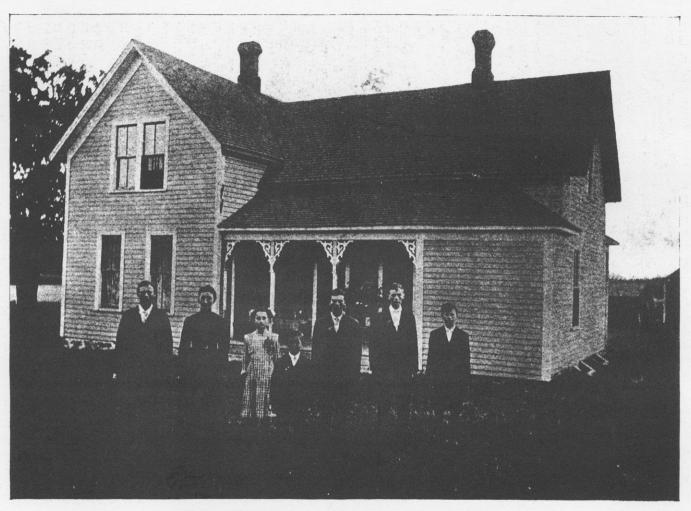

June 6, 1906, to Mary Gasteyer, who was born in the town of Eau Galle, March 7, 1884, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Casteyer. He and his wife are the parents of two children: Vera Louise, born Feb. 4, 1908, and La Verne Charles, born July 10, 1920. The family are affiliated religiously with the Lutheran church.

Charles H. Reckin, Jr., a representative farmer of the town of Eau Galle, was born on his parents' farm in Section 27, this town, a part of which he is now operating as his own property, on July 3, 1885, son of Charles H., Sr., and Mary (Schriner) Reckin. He was educated in the Hall district school and in boyhood and youth assisted his father on the farm. It has been elsewhere told, how, on the father's retirement in 1905 the two brothers, Charles H., Jr. and August, Jr. (the latter so called to distingulsh him from his uncle August) conducted the parental farm together for about two years, when Charles got married and the farm was divided between them. Charles's portion consisted of 120 acres with the buildings. He has since improved the property by remodeling the house and out-buildings, and in 1913 he built a full-basement barn 36 x 70 feet. The farm is situated in the "Missouri Valley" and in the Reckin Settlement, so called from the members of that family who settled here. Mr. Reckin has a fine herd of cattle with a pure bred sire and is gradually breeding up to pure Guernseys. He is paying particular attention to dairying, and he and his brother August are cooperating together in the improvement of their stock, making use of the same sire for their herds, and the same machinery in their business, all of the most perfect type. Charles H. Reckin, Jr., was married Oct. 9, 1907, to Anna Gasteyer, who was born in the town of Eau Galle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Gasteyer. He and his wife are the parents of two children: Floyd C., born April 6, 1909, and Vernice J., born Oct. 24, 1917. The family are members of the Lutheran church.

John J. Enge, proprietor of Sunnyside Farm of 240 acres in Section 33, town of Rock Creek, secretary and manager of Rock Falls Cooperative Creamery, formerly chairman of his town board and a member of the county board, was born in Gudbrandsdalen, Norway, Sept. 22, 1867, son of Jens and Mari Enge, who were natives of the same part of Norway. The parents came to this country in 1886, having been sent for by their sons John J. and Matt, who had preceded them. For four years after their arrival they lived at old Meridean, situated in Section 6, town of Rock Creek, Jens Enge being employed in the mill of the Eau Claire Lumber Company. In 1890 he and his wife moved to the farm now owned and operated by their son John J., where they made their home for the remainder of the lives. Mr. Enge died Feb. 9, 1909, at the age of nearly 73 years, having been born Feb. 22, 1836. Mrs. Enge, born April 1, 1831, attained the age of 79 years and several months, passing away Aug. 29, 1910. They had eight children: Karen, who died in Norway; Sigrid, who died in Eau Claire in 1884; Matt and Johanas, who are in Minneapolis; John J., of the town of Rock Creek; Gunda, who is Mrs. Martin Lee of Eau Claire; Mattie, who died in infancy; and Malla, who died in 1912 in Calif. John J. Enge as a boy attended public school in Norway and was 16 years old when he came to the United States in 1884, locating in old Meridean, Dunn County, There he found employment with the Eau Claire Lumber Co., working for Wis. them for years until they sold out to the Mississippi River Logging Co. in 1888, and after that being four years in the employ of the latter company. During the eight years that he was in the lumber business he worked in the mills in summer and in the woods in winter. It was during the latter part of this period, about 1890, that he bought from his brother Matt, a primitive farm in Section 33, town of Rock Creek, and his father and mother and brother Matt went to reside on it. Here he joined them in 1892 and began the development of the place. There was a small frame house on it, but very little clearing had been done. With that for a starting point, Mr. Enge set to work to build up a farm, which he determined should be one of the best in this part of the country, if not in the entire county. This purpose he has kept in view and very thoroughly fulfilled. Among his first acts were the erection of additional buildings and the enlargement of the house, and then he began to develop the raw land. Each year saw an advance over previous conditions and in time fields of grain and hay, or cattle pastures, occupied the place where formerly the lordly monarchs of the forests had darkened the ground with their dense foliage. Mr. Enge also bought another 80-acre tract of land, increasing the size of his farm to 240 acres, and at various times he was busy in improving, or adding to, his buildings. In 1909 he erected a large cattle and hay barn of 32×82 feet in ground plan, and with a central driveway; and in 1914 he built a fine, modern eleven-room residence, supplied with water, heat and light, the last mentioned necessity being derived from an acetylene lighting plant, which furnishes light also to the barn. Among the other buildings he has put up may be mentioned machine sheds, a granary, chicken house, garage, and a large silo. His residence s set off by a spacious lawn, with the further ornaments of flowers and shrubbery, and he has also set out apple and other fruit trees. He has a fine herd of grade Guernsey cattle, a pen of Duroc-Jersey hogs and a large flock of White Wyandott poultry, besides other fowls. Mr. Enge was one of the organizers in 1902, of the Rock Falls Co-operative Creamery, of which he has since been a director, and in 1911 he was elected its secretary and manager, in which position she is still serving with credit. He is also a stockholder in the Meridean State Bank. He was elected a member of the town board of supervisors, and after serving three years as such, was elected chairman of the board, thereby becoming a member of the county board, in which position also he served three years, proving himself a capable man of affairs in the handling of public business, as he had already done with respect to his own private concerns. His character is well known to his fellow townsmen and he enjoys their confidence and esteem. Mr. Enge was married April 5, 1896, to Andrena Shaker, who was born in the town of Spring Brook, Dunn County, April 18, 1879, daughter of Ole and Tolena (Dahl) Shaker. Her parents, natives of Gudbrandsdalen, Norway, were early settlers in Dunn County, first in the town of Spring Brook and later in that of Rock Creek, where they became prominent farmers. Both are now deceased, Mr. Shaker having passed away in February, 1904, and Mrs. Shaker in August, 1896. Mr. and Mrs. Enge are the parents of five children, Willard Leroy, Joseph Theodore, Laura Aleda, Morris Shaker and Goldie Margaret. Willard Leroy, born May 19, 1897, and who is now a merchant in Eau Claire, married Mildred Thompson of River Falls, Wis., and has one child, Maxine L. Joseph Theodore, born April 24, 1899, is in the garage business in Eau Claire. Laura Aleda, born Aug. 1, 1903, is a trained nurse having been graduated from Anker hospital at St. Paul in 1925. Morris Shaker, born Dec. 22, 1909, and Goldie Margaret, born July 16, 1912, are residing on the home farm with their parents. The family faith is that of the Lutheran Church.

John J. Tiller, now living retired in the city of Menomonie after a busy industrial career, was born at Klabo, Trondhjem, Norway, Dec. 21, 1859, son of John Ralston and Martha Knutson. The parents were natives of Norway, in which country they both died. John J. Tiller was educated in the public schools of his native land. In 1881, soon after attaining his majority, he came to the United States, locating at Concordia, Kansas, where he remained six months. In October the same year he came to Menomonie and entered the employ of the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company, with whom he remained as long as they continued in business here, working at different times in all the different departments, in the woods, on the drives and in the mills, according to the season. After the company closed out its business Mr. Tiller became a brick burner for the Wisconsin Red Pressed Brick Co. of Menomonie and was thus occupied until the fall of 1923, when he retired from hard labor. He is a stockholder in the Waterman-Ehrhard Co. of Menomonie and is one of the trustees of the Lutheran church of which he and his family are members, while fraternally he is affiliated with the Modern Woodmen of America. For five or six years he was supervisor of the first ward, which made him also a member of the county board. Mr. Tiller was married Oct. 20, 1888, to Anna Guldook, who was born in Trondhjem, Norway, Feb. 27, 1854, and who came to this country in 1886, locating in Menomonie. Mr. and Mrs. Tiller have three children, Amanda, Edwin and Jennie. Amanda is now Mrs. Andrew Knutson of North Menomonie and has two children, Jean and Luella J. Edwin, residing at home, is an electrician at the Stout Institute. After the declaration of war with Germany he was inducted into the United States service, becoming a member of the 86th Division, and after training at Camp Grant, went overseas in July, 1918. An attack of influenza, however, kept him from active service on the battle front, and in 1919, he returned to the United States and was discharged at Camp Grant. The other child, Jennie, is now a clerk in the employ of the Waterman-Ehrhard Co.

Henry Berg, a respected citizen who helped to develop the resources of Dunn County in the lumbering and agricultural industries, and who is now engaged in light occupation in the village of Rock Falls, was born at Byneset near Trondhjem, Norway, Feb. 18, 1862. His parents, John and Karen (Anderson) Berg, also natives of Norway, spent their lives in their native land and have passed away. Henry attended public school in Norway and subsequently served the allotted time in the Norwegian army. Having also learned the trade of shoemaker in his native land, he came to America in 1884, locating first in Volga, Brookings County, S. D., where he worked on a gravel train. In the same fall he came to Wisconsin and for a short time thereafter worked at his trade in Eau Claire. His next location was Chippewa Falls, where he followed his trade for a year and a half. At the end of that time he became connected with the lumber business, for six years being in the employ of the Chippewa Lumber & Boom Co., working in their yards in summer and in the woods during the winter. Then returning to Eau Claire he entered the employ of the Northwestern Lumber Co., and was with them for ten years in similar capacities, making 16 winters that he spent in the woods. It was on July 4, 1900, that he came to Dunn County and began his agricultural career, buying 120 acres of land in the town of Rock Creek that he had purchased three years before. This land being all wild, he had to make a clearing before he could built a house, which done, he and his wife-for he was then recently married-took up their abode in it. he continuing to make improvements. Both devoted themselves to steady industry, at the same time exercising close economy, and this course of action in time brought results in an excellent farm. Among the buildings erected by Mr. Berg was a good basement barn of 34 x 56 feet; also a silo of 12 x 36 feet, and a double corn crib with a shed between, as well as others. He cleared, broke and cultivated his land, and in addition, did considerable grubbing for others, and, all told, he cleared about 300 acres. There he carried on diversified farming until 1921, in which year he sold the farm to his son John Barnhart and moved to Rock Falls. Here he bought a lot for $500 and erected a fine bungalow, with modern fittings and conveniences, where he and his wife, who has been his faithful helpmate through the 24 years of their married life, are enjoying the fruits of their previous labors. Mr. Berg is not entirely idle, however, for he has fitted up a small shop at his home in which he conducts a harness and shoe repairing business, which furnishes him with congenial occupation and also add somewhat to his income. He took an active part in the building of the local creamery, hauling and breaking the first load of rocks for its foundation, and he is now one of its stockholders. He is also a stockholder in the local telephone company. The marriage of Mr. Berg occurred April 19, 1900, and united him with Lena Tourison of the town of Peru, Dunn County. She was born in Gudbrandsdahlen, Norway, Dec. 12, 1861, daughter of Böre and Margaret (Robertson) Tourison, and had accompanied her parents to America when six years old, in 1867, the family locating in the town of Peru, this country. After a number of years spent as farmers there, they both diec. They had a large family of 14 children, ten of whom grew to maturity. John, the eldest son, is now the owner of the home farm in the town of Peru. The daughter Lena (Mrs. Berg) was educated in the rural schools of that town and lived with her parents until her marriage. Mr. and Mrs. Berg have been the parents of eight children, four of whom are now living. The full list includes John Bernhart, Melvin Conrad, Harry Richmond, Arthur Martin, Gena Otelia, Melvin Oscar Siverine, Julius Conrad and Amanda Cornelia. John Bernhart, born May 10, 1891, who, as already mentioned, is proprietor of the old home farm, married Laura Stone, and is the father of three children, Bertha Rebecca, Irene Helen and Janet Melvin Conrad, born March 10, 1893, died Jan. 3, 1903. Harry Richard, Lillian born Feb. 6, 1895, died July 26, 1914. Arthur Martin, born Jan. 3, 1897, and now of Hibbings, Minn., entered the United States military service on Aug. 14, 1918, and was assigned to the Ninth Company, 161st Depot Brigade. After training at Annapolis, he was sent to Florida to go over seas, but on account of the armistice did not get across and was discharged Dec. 30, 1918. Gene Otelia, born March 12, 1899, is now Mrs Charles Spaulding of Eau Claire, Mr. Spaulding being employed in the Eau Claire Savings Bank while she is a bockkeeper and stenographer in that city. Melvin Oscar Siverine, born Nov. 6, 1903, and who served two years in the Marines, is now in California. Julius Conrad, born April 19, 1906, died on the day of his birth. Amanda Cornelia, born Dec. 2, 1910, died Dec. 18, 1910. The loss of four children, in infancy or childhood, brought sadness to the hearts of Mr. and Mrs. Berg, but they realize that they have many things to be thankful for, and, with their surviving children, are earnest and consistent members of the Norwegian Lutheran Church.

Joseph Peckmiller, a pioneer of Dunn County and a resident of the town of Spring Brook since 1855, was born in Austria, May 9, 1827, and there grew to manhood. It was in 1852 that he emigrated to America, settling that fall in Jefferson County, Wisconsin. For nearly three years he worked in and near Watertown; then in 1855 he left there with his family in a prairie schooner drawn by oxen for Menomonie, as work and money were scarce at Watertown and he had been told that if he came to Dunn County he could get work with Knapp, Stout & Co., which, shortly after arriving here he did. Later he bought a small tract of government land in Section 2, of what is now the town of Spring Brook, the tract being situated on Iron Creek a short distance north and east of his present place. Among the trees he erected a small log shack, into which he moved his family, making it as comfortable as possible and for some time after that he continued to work for the company, walking to and from Menomonie through the woods. After having saved a little money he gave up his job with the company and began the development of his farm home. For some years he and his wife had to practice great economy and self denial, but gradual progress was made along all lines and a prosperous condition finally attained. As time went on he added to his land until at one time he owned some 425 scres in the towns of Spring Brook and Red Cedar. His first buildings were of log construction but were later replaced by others of more modern type. After remaining on that place until 1894, he sold it to his son Herman and moved to the town of Menomonie, where he built up another farm in Section 14, (south), on which place he remained until 1916, since which time he has lived with his son Herman on the home farm, being now in his ninety-eighth year. Probably there are few men in Dunn County, if any, who are better entitled to the name of pioneer than Mr. Peckmiller, and it is doubtful if there is one now living who has cleared and broken more land, as he not only cleared and broke some 300 acres for himself but also a fair amount for his neighbors. He got his first team of horses in 1865, buying them in Missouri, and he and his eldest daughter by his first wife, to whom he was married in Austria, in 1849, went there by train to get them and rode them all the way back. In the early days he had more or less trouble with Indians, who on one occasion when he was away, came to his house and killed a large pig, also stole everything they could lay hold of and carry away, including clothes lines and other things about the house, and also a small lamb which he had brought from Jefferson County. Mr. Peckmiller was one of the first supervisors of the town of Spring Brook, and also served as a member of the school board and as road overseer, t eing one of the most active men of his town and a citizen held in high repute. In 1869 he married for his second wife Anna M. Roeder who died on April 13, 1884. By her he had two children, Herman and Matilda, the latter being now Mrs. Louis Harnish of St. Paul.

Herman Peckmiller, who was born December 14, 1870, on the excellent farm that he now owns and operates in Section 2, town of Spring Brook, was educated in the district school, and as he grew older remained at home with his parents, Joseph and Anna M. (Roeder) Peckmiller, helping his father to improve and conduct the home farm, which he took over in 1894. He has added to it more land and it now contains 380 acres in the town of Spring Brook and Red Cedar. He has erected the third set of buildings on the farm and is carrying on general farming and dairving, keeping Holstein cattle. He is a stockholder in the Rusk Co-operative Store and in the Waterman-Ehrhard Co. of Menomonie. As town supervisor he has rendered public service, and also as clerk of School District No. 6. Mr. Peckmiller was married Nov. 9, 1893, in the city of Menomonie, to Augusta Wagner, who was born in Minnesota, Nov. 25, 1872, daughter of Henry and Mary (Harder) Wagner, and he and his wife are the parents of six children, Nellie, Louis, Hazel, Matilda, Martin and Helen. Nellie, born Aug. 10, 1894, is now Mrs. William Grutt of the town of Spring Brook and the mother of two children, Elvira and Merlin. Louis, born Jan. 24, 1896, and now a farmer in the town of Menomonie, married Margaret Miller and has one son, Lawrence. Hazel, born Oct. 30, 1897, is the wife of Fred Eckert of the town of Red Cedar and has three children, Laverne, Beatrice and Gordan. Matilda, born Feb. 10, 1902, and Martin, born Feb. 28, 1905, are at home, and Helen, born April 26, 1911, is attending parochial school in Menomonie.

Henry Wagner, who was a resident of Dunn County for nearly half a century, a pioneer farmer and Civil War Veteran, but who has passed away, was born in Mecklenburg, Germany, Oct. 3, 1835. Coming to this country at the age of 21 years he settled in Jefferson County, Wis. In 1861 he enlisted at Janesville, in Company E, Fifth Wisconsin Infantry, which formed a part of the "Iron Brigade," —a name acquired for its hard fighting qualities—and with that famous organization he took part in some of the fiercest battles of the war, including Antietam, Gettysburg, Spottsylvania and others. But escaping harm, he returned safely home, and was married in Watertown, Wis., Feb. 26, 1865, to Mary Harden, a native like himself of Mecklenburg, Germany. For three years they resided in Watertown, but in 1868 came to Dunn County and for two years rented and operated the William Miller, Sr. farm in the town of Red Cedar. After that they rented the William Quilling farm for one year, at the end of which time they moved to Jackson County, Minn. There they remained five years and proved up a land claim, but met with misfortune, as grasshoppers were devasting the crops, and in the fall of 1876, they returned to Wisconsin and to Dunn County, and for a year resided on the Edward Blank farm south of Menomonie. Then they went back to the Miller farm and stayed there eight years. At the end of that time Mr. Wagner bought the old David Wallace farm a mile and a half south of Menomonie, on which he and his wife remained as long as he was actively engaged in farming, or until April 1, 1907, when he retired, he and his wife taking up their residence in Menomonie, where his death occurred on March 8, 1918. At various times in his active career Mr. Wagner had been prominently before the public as a town or school official. He served two years as chairman of the town board, and therefore as a member of the county board, and was four years on the school board, and he was one of the men who laid out and constructed the Irvington road extending south from Broadway. On Feb. 26, 1915 he and his wife celebrated their Golden Wedding, some 50 relatives or friends being present on the occasion, which was an enjoyable one. They were the parents of seven children: Alvina, who became the wife of William Quilling of Menomonie; Mary, who is Mrs. William Wallace of Menomonie; Herman, a farmer in the town of Spring Brook; Augusta, now Mrs. Herman Peckmiller of the town of Spring Brook; Peter, a farmer in the town of Menomonie; Martha, who is Mrs. Henry Beguhn; and Charles, who is a farmer in the town of Menomonie. Mrs. Henry Wagner passed away in January, 1918.

William L. Talford, who for 30 years was known in the town of Rock Creek as an energetic farmer and useful citizen, was born in Clinton County, New York, in 1835, and was there educated and grew to manhood. It was there also that he was married to Sarah Barker, a native of the same county, born in 1842. It was in 1881 that they came west to Dunn County, Wisconsin and began their career as farmers in the town of Rock Creek, buying 80 acres of land in Section 23. To this he subsequently added 60 acres in Section 25 and 40 acres in Section 35, which gave him a farm of 180 acres, a large part of which he cleared, carrying on diversified farming until his death in June, 1911. His wife survived him some years, dying Dec. 25, 1918. They were worthy people esteemed by their neighbors and acquaintances and contributed their share in building up the agricultural resources. of their town. They were the parents of ten children, namely: Minnie, now Mrs. William Ness of Carvville, Dunn County; Jennie, who is Mrs. Fred Hatch of Eau Claire County; Ernest of Eau Claire; William of Fall City, Dunn County; Pearl, who lives in the village of Meridean; Mattie, who is Mrs. Goodwin Strand of Eau Claire; Libby, wife of Newman Barnes of Durand, Wis.; Plin E. of the town of Rock Creek, Dunn County; Lem, of Eau Claire, and Bertha, also of Eau Claire.

Plin E. Talford, who is conducting diversified crop farming and dairying on quite an extensive scale in the town of Rock Creek, was born on his father's farm in this town on March 27, 1887, son of William and Sarah (Barker) Talford. He acquired his education in the district school and as he grew to manhood helped his father to clear the home farm, then consisting of 80 acres in Section 23, to which were added later 60 acres in Section 26 and 40 in Section 35. In 1910 he and his brother Lem bought the farm and conducted it for nine years under the firm name of Talford Bros. After Lem had left and gone to Eau Claire in 1919, Plin remained on it until 1921, when he rented the Geo. T. Brill farm, which he conducted for one year, after which he came to his present farm of 520 acres in Section 34. He has a herd of 45 head of high grade Holstein and Guernsey cattle, with a pure bred Guernsey sire. About 200 acres of the farm is under cultivation, the balance being in pasture and timber. Mr. Talford is an enterprising farmer of good practical ability, and has a high standing in the community. He was married March 26, 1919, to Anna O. Hysen, who was born on a farm in the town of Rock Creek, April 29, 1898, daughter of August and Emma (Erickson) Hysen. Of this marriage three children have been born: Duane E., Oct. 22, 1920; Arnold W., Nov. 4, 1922, and Elton R., May 31, 1924. The family are members of the Lutheran Church.

Peter C. Peterson, a former lumber worker who within the last 30 years or so has built up a very good and valuable farm in Section 33, town of Rock Creek, was born in Skjaak, Gudbrandsdalen, Norway, Nov. 9, 1867, son of Peter Larskveen by his wife Kari, whose family name was Grimsdadodegard. Mr. and Mrs. Larskveen came to America in 1892 and for a year thereafter resided in the city of Eau Claire. In 1893 they came to reside with their son, Peter C., in the town of Rock Creek, Dunn County, but on account of poor health returned after some time to Eau Claire, where both died, Mrs. Larskveen in 1920, and Mr. Larskveen in 1921. They had five children: Peter C., of the town of Rock Creek; Martin, of Eau Claire; Marit, now deceased; Caroline, now Mrs. Sever Johnson of Eau Claire; and Sina, who is Mrs. Ed Hanson of Eau Claire. Peter C. Peterson as a boy attended school in Norway until the age of 16 years, coming to the United States in 1884, and to Dunn County, Wisconsin. During his first winter here he resided with friends and attended school. He then went to Eau Claire, where he attended school for two more terms, continuing to reside in that city until 1893. During the greater part of that period he was employed by the Valley Lumber Company, but also worked for the Dells Lumber Company, during the summers in the mill and during the winters in the woods. In 1893 he returned to Dunn County and began his career as a farmer, buying 160 acres of wild land in Section 33, town of Rock The lumber company at old Meridean (the Mississippi River Logging Co.) Creek. was then closing out its business in this locality and Mr. Peterson bought one of their buildings, tore it down, moved the lumber to his farm and built a house with it, and also some small hay sheds. He then began the development of the land, in which work he has continued ever since, having now about 90 acres cleared. He has also kept pace with the times by improving his building or erecting new ones. He has remodeled and enlarged his house into a fine residence, completing this work in 1902, and in the same year erecting a good dairy barn of 30 x 60 feet, with 16foot posts. In 1914 he built a cement block silo of 14 x 35 feet, and at different times he has added other out-buildings as the need for them arose. As a general farmer and dairyman he has been successful and the progress he has made reflects credit upon his industry and capacity. His herd of cattle are grade Guernseys and he has a fair number of hogs and fowls on his place. He is a stockholder in the Rock Falls Cooperative Creamery, while his public service included five years as school director. Mr. Peterson was first married, in April, 1890, to Lena Nelson, who died Dec. 25, 1902, leaving three children, Palmer, Nelvin and Carl. Palmer, born March 15, 1901, and now a farmer in Eau Claire County, married Gena Lund and has three children, Leonard, Alvina and Gordon. Nelvin, born May 5, 1896, who is a butter maker at Meridean, married Berglott Embertson and has one child, Lila. Carl, born July 13, 1897, and as yet unmarried, is a butter maker at Cleghorn, in Eau Claire County. On June 19, 1905 Mr. Peterson was united in marriage with Thora Lund, of which union two children have been born, Adolph, on Nov. 13, 1912, and Jacob, on May 16, 1914. Mr. Peterson and his family are members of the Lutheran Church.

August Hysen, for many years a progressive farmer and esteemed citizen in the town of Rock Creek, but now deceased, was born in Sweden, July 6, 1862. He was educated in his native land and came to America in 1883, locating at Porter's Mills in Eau Claire County, Wis., where he worked in lumber yards until 1896. Then coming to Dunn County, he bought 80 acres in Sections 17 and 20, town of Rock Creek, which was partly improved land, though the buildings were poor, the house being a log structure. With this for a beginning Mr. Hysen went to work to build up a good farm, a task in which he finally succeeded, both with respect to land and buildings, as at the time of his death, which occurred Dec. 3, 1920, he had a good farm residence, a large barn, a large silo, and other well constructed buildings. He was also a stockholder in the Meridean creamery and in the Rock Falls and Meridean Telephone Company. Mr. Hysen was married Dec. 31, 1887, at Porter's Mills, Eau Claire County, Wis., to Emma Olivia Erickson, who was born in Sweden, Sept. 3, 1872, and who came to the United States in 1882, locating at Porter's Mills. The issue of this marriage was 12 children, Agnes Josephine, Carl Elmer, John Edward, Anna Otelia, Harry, Nora Marie, Esther Amanda, George August, Thelma Viola, Bessie Emelia, Lillian Mildred and Orrin Alfred, whose further record is briefly as follows. Agnes Josephine, born Aug. 23, 1890, is now Mrs. Severt Brumberg of Rock Creek, and has five children, Alice, Eldora, Stewart, Otis and Morris. Carl Elmer, born July 25, 1893, died Dec. 3, 1918. John Edward, born June 9, 1896, who now lives in Missoula, Mont., married Stella Garlie and has one child, Carl L. Anna Otelia, born April 29, 1898, is the wife of Plin E. Talford of the town of Rock Creek and has three children, Duane E., Arnold W. and Elton R. Harry, born Sept. 10, 1900, married Alvina Schultz and lives in Clinton, Wis. Nora Marie, born Oct. 14, 1902, is residing on the home Esther Amanda, born Sept. 13, 1904, was graduated from the Eau Claire farm. Rural Normal School and is now a teacher. George Augustus, born Aug. 24, 1906; Thelma Viola, born Sept. 5, 1908; Bessie Emelia, born Sept. 19, 1910; Lillian Mildred, born Jan. 9, 1913, and Orrin Alfred, born Nov. 20, 1915, are all on the home farm, which since the death of Mr. Hysen has been operated by Mrs. Hysen with the help of her children. The family are members of the Lutheran Church.

Peter I. Peterson, a substantial farmer of the town of Spring Brook, of which town he was for many years one of the leading officials, is a native of Dunn County, having been born, Dec. 9, 1862, in the town of Red Cedar, near Little Elk Creek, son of Simon and Elizabeth (Lien) Peterson. Simon Peterson, the father, was born in Lille Elvedalen Annex, Norway, Feb. 13, 1834, his parents, Peder Olsen and Anne Johnsdatter, being farmers. In 1860 they emigrated to America, but Peder Olsen died on shipboard while on the journey and was buried at Quebec, to which port the ship was bound. Thus suddenly bereaved, Mrs. Peder Olsen, with her son Simon, came on to Meridean, Dunn County, Wis., where she had a son and daughter living—Ole and Merith—who had come to America several years before. Of this son and daughter it may be said that Ole spent the rest of his life at old Meridean, while the daughter, Merith, married Espen Hanson and accompanied her husband to Crookston, Minn., and it was with her that Mrs. Peder Olsen spent her latter years. Simon Peterson, who was 26 years old when he came to America, located first in La Crosse County, Wis., where for one year he operated a rented

On Sept. 9, 1861, he was married in Bostwick Valley, that county, to farm. Elizabeth Lien, who was born in Norway, May 25, 1828. Soon after their marriage, in the fall of that year, they came to Dunn County, settling first near Little Elk Creek, where, however, they remained but a short time. In 1862 Simon Peterson homesteaded a small place in the town of Rock Creek, to the area of which he later added by buying more land, and there he resided with his family until 1870. In that vear he purchased his present farm in the town of Spring Brook, at that time containing 160 acres, but to which he later added by degrees, so that when he finally retired in 1902 he owned 377 acres on the Chippewa bottoms. As a pioneer of this county he had to suffer privations and make the best of scant opportunities, for many years farming with oxen. After the great flood of 1880 he entered into a contract with the O. H. Ingraham Lumber Co. to collect and put back into the Chippewa River all the stray logs and lumber that had been scattered over the land in his neighborhood. This contract was a piece of good fortune for him, as his farm had suffered considerably from the flood and he had lost his crops. Simon Peterson was a very prominent man in his community, serving the town of Spring Brook many years as a supervisor on the side board and being also active and useful as a member of the school board. When he retired he turned the farm over to his son Peter I., but is still living on it, being now nearly 91 years old. His wife Elizabeth, who was a loving companion and efficient helpmate to him for more than half a century, died Feb. 23, 1912. They were the parents of six children, who were born as follows: Peter I., Dec. 9, 1862; Cecelia, May 20, 1864; Annette, May 8, 1866; Ida, Feb. 21, 1869; Severt, who died at the age of seven years and Ludvig, who died at the age of five years. Peter I., who acquired his education in the local school, as he grew up helped his father to develop the homestead, the latter depending upon him to an increasing extent as he grew older, and since 1902 he has had full charge of it as proprietor. For many years he has been one of the most prominent citizens of the town of Spring Brook, which he served 22 years as supervisor and many years on the school board, as his father had done before him. He was married Nov. 18, 1900, to Mary Westward, and he and his wife are members of the United Lutheran Church in the town of Spring Brook. Cecelia Peterson, who married John Borseth, died Aug. 11, 1909. She was the mother of four children, James, Lila, Hilda and Selma, of whom the three first mentioned reside in Alberta, Canada, and Selma in British Columbia. Lila is Mrs. Elden Hosford, Hilda is Mrs. D. Widen and Selma is Mrs. Pontas Johnson. Annette Peterson was married April 14, 1888, to Holly Ranum and now resides in Faribault, Minn. She has six children, Edmond, Luther, Clara, Hilda, Ray and Spencer, of whom Edmond married Marie Amundson, Luther married Esther Rich, Clara is Mrs. Emil Shager, Hilda is Mrs. Peter Sneen, and Roy married Beatrice Macdonald. Ida Peterson was married April 24, 1886, to O. M. Solberg, who died March 18, 1910, and she is now residing on the old Peterson homestead in the town of Spring Brook. She is the mother of five children: Audrey L., now Mrs. Peter Hughdal of Spring Brook township; Charlotte N., now Mrs. Oliver Danielson of St. John, N. D.; Inez O., wife of Samuel Stenson of Alexandria, Minn.; Lydia V., who is Mrs. Ludwig Johnson of Strum, Wis.; and Silas M., who died in infancy.

Alfred Johnson, a representative farmer of the town of Tainter, was born in Norway, Dec. 26, 1880, son of Christian and Carrie Johnson. The father, who worked in a planing-mill, spent his life in his native land, where he died in 1914, being survived by his wife, who still lives in Norway. Their children were Elias, John, Caroline and Alfred. Caroline married Thomas Hagen and resides in Minnesota, and Julius lives in the town of Tainter, Dunn County, Wis. Alfred Johnson was reared in Norway, where as a boy he attended school and afterwards worked in a manufacturing machine plant. It was in 1904 that he came to the United States, settling in Dunn County and for two years thereafter working out on farms. He then began farming on his own account, buying 160 acres of land in Section 17, town of Tainter. The tract was wild but there were some rough board shacks on it. His brother John having an adjoining farm, the two worked together for a while, but subsequently divided their farms, Alfred letting Elias have 40 acres of his . . • original 160, this leaving him 120 acres, which is the area of his farm at present. He cleared off the brush, dug out stumps, built a good frame house, barn and sheds, and now has 70 acres under the plow, doing general farming and dairying, and keeping a herd of 21 grade cattle of the Guernsey breed with a pure bred sire. He also raised Duroc-Jersey hogs and his farm is well supplied with modern machinery, including a Fordson tractor. This is a good record for Mr. Johnson to have made and proves him to be a man of enterprise and industry. He was married in the town of Tainter in 1915 to Ruby Hilson, daughter of Robert and Anna Hilson. Her parents, natives of Norway and early settlers in Dunn County, are now deceased, and Mrs. Johnson herself passed away in 1917, leaving one son, Clifford.

Frederick Roth, Sr., in former years a well known farmer in Section 16, town of Dunn, was born in Switzerland, Nov. 19, 1843. There he grew to manhood and married Marguerite Michael, who was born April 25, 1848. It was in 1884 that they came to the United States, settling in the town of Dunn, Dunn County, Wis., where, soon after their arrival Mr. Roth purchased 80 acres of wild land in Section 16, and, having built a small house, began to develop the land. In time he broke and cleared the greater part of it, besides erecting all necessary buildings, and was still engaged in improving his place when death claimed him on Sept. 3, 1899. His wife survived him over 17 years, dying April 8, 1917. They were the parents of five children, namely: Frederick, Jr., now residing in the city of Menomonie; John, a farmer in the town of Dunn and present chairman of the board of supervisors of that town; Martin, also a well known farmer in the town of Dunn; and Margery and Henry, who together as partners own and operate the old home farm.

Frederick Roth, Jr., of Menomonie, one of the substantial and well known citizens of Dunn County, was born in Canton Bern, Switzerland, June 9, 1868, son of Frederick and Marguerite (Michael) Roth. He was educated in the public Schools of his native land and when nearly 16 years of age was brought to America by his parents, who settled in the town of Dunn, Dunn County, Wis. He attended public school at Downsville and grew to manhood assisting his parents in the development of their new farm. At the age of 18 he entered the employ of the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company, and from that time on was with them until they closed out their business here. During his many years of service with the great lumber company he filled various positions, and all efficiently and to the satisfaction of his employers. He worked in the mill, in the woods and on the river, and was cook in lumber camps and on rafts going down the river from Menomonie to Read's Landing. Frederick Roth, Jr., was married April 28, 1897, to Henrietta M. Arndt, who was born in the town of Dunn, this county, Oct. 22, 1876, daughter of Fred and Augusta (Wucherpfennig) Arndt, her parents, who were natives of Germany, having been early settlers in Dunn County. After the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company ceased their activities in this region Mr. Roth worked for a short period on the farm of John Curran in the town of Menomonie. He and his wife then purchased 80 acres of land on Section 17 in this town, it being a partly cleared tract with a small house and a few out-buildings on it, and there they entered upon a different and more independent career, in time developing an excellent farm. The original buildings were replaced with a fine residence, a large barn of modern construction, and all necessary out-buildings. There they carried on farming for 11 years and for three years during that period Mr. Roth was cook for Company H of the Third Regiment while they were at Camp Douglas. For two seasons also he was cook for Mr. and Mrs. George R. Van Reed at their summer home on the island in Cedar Lake near Mikana, Barron County; and one winter he was cook in the Nicollet at Barron. After selling their farm in the town of Menomonie, Mr. and Mrs. Roth moved to the city of Menomonie and for three seasons he worked for the Frank Carter Co.; also one summer for the Cast Stone Construction Co., and for the Eau Claire highway commissioners. After a residence of four years in Menomonie, he and his wife rented the Priscilla Blank farm in the town of Red Cedar, which they conducted for two years. They then moved to North Menomonie and for one summer he was patrolman on the state highway. He and his wife then farmed five years in the town of Sherman, during which period he served as patrolman on Federal Trunk Highway No. 25. In the fall of 1924 they sold out their holdings in the farm and moved to Menomonie to make their home here. To Mrs. Roth must be ascribed credit for much of the success which they have achieved, as she has always been a hard worker and her judgment and advice have always been found good. Mr. and Mrs. Roth are the parents of a daughter, Charlotte Frieda, who was born May 11, 1906, and was graduated from the Menomonie High School with the class of 1925. They are members of the German Lutheran Church.

Hildur C. Nelson and Elmer T. Nelson, proprietors of the Nelson Bros. Motor Co., of Menomonie, are sons of Andrew and Christina Nelson, natives of Denmark, where the father is still living, the mother having died in 1896. Both sons were educated in their native land. Hildur C. Nelson, who was born Nov. 27, 1890, came to the United States in 1906, and Elmer T., born June 9, 1893, came in 1910, both locating in Wisconsin. Of a mechanical turn of mind, they took up the auto-mobile business and general mechanics, Hildur C. coming to Menomonie in 1912, and Elmer T. in 1915. During the World War period Hildur remained here doing Red Cross work and helping in the Liberty Loa: and other drives. Elmer T. saw more active service, enlisting on Sept. 4, 1917, in the 341st Infantry. He trained at Camp Grant, Illinois, and on April 2, 1918, was transferred to the 129th Machine Gun Company, and on May 10, 1918, he went overseas with that organization. As gunner of his company he served on the Somme and Verdun fronts, and, being wounded at Verdun, Oct. 4, was sent to the base hospital at La Tours. Later he was transferred to the base hospital at Savenay, from there being returned to the United States. He was discharged from service in the hospital at Camp Grant on Feb. 4, 1919, after confinement in hospitals of just four months to a day. He then spent a year at the Great Lakes Naval Station, at the end of that time returning home to Menomonie. He is a member of the Hosford-Chase Post No. 32, of the America Legion. On Dec. 22, 1923, he was married to Idell Bailey of Menomonie, and they have one child, Richard Elmer. Hildur C. Nelson was married July 5, 1913, to Ella Brimer of Menomonie and has three children, Beatrice C., Hilda L. and James F. The Nelson Bros. Motor Co. was organized Jan. 1, 1922, the company's place of business being at the corner of Second Street and Sixth They do a general automobile business, having a large sales and Avenue East. display room and a very large and fully equipped repair department, employing from five to seven mechanics. There is also a nicely finished and comfortable office, and in addition to the mechanics, a bookkeeper and salesman are employed. Their storage space accommodates about 135 cars. They handle the Fisk and other reliable tires, keep a full line of other accessories, and also have a filling station, using the Winona gas and oils and Mobile oil. The company also handles the Nash and Oldsmobile cars and trucks and the J. I. Case tractors. Their establishment is well ordered and every department is kept busy. Both brothers are good workmen and courteous and efficient business men. Their business has tripled in volume since it was started.

Louis Naseband, an early settler in the town of Weston, where he is now living highly esteemed and respected, after a long and active career along agricultural lines, was born in Pommern, Germany, Nov. 11, 1849, son of Charles and Anna Naseband, the mother's family name also being Naseband. The father died in Germany, and in 1882, Mrs. Anna Naseband came to this country, spending the remainder of her days with her son, Louis. The latter attended school in his native land and at the age of 15 years took to a sea-faring life and followed the sea as a deep water sailor for some 12 years thereafter, making his last voyage in 1876-77. During that period of his life he visited most of the principal ports of the world and for the last few years he was quartermaster. In the spring of 1877 he came west to Dodge County, Wisconsin, and that summer was engaged in farm work there. Then in the fall, with Charles Frank and Herman Kuesel, he came to Dunn County and entered upon the career of a farmer, buying 80 acres of what constitutes his present farm in Section 18, adjoining the Pierce County line. At that time there were but two other settlers in the territory south of Hatchville and within a reasonable distance of that place. It was not until the following year, 1878, however, that he settled on his land, erecting a small shack for a dwelling. In 1879 he built a log barn, and made other improvements as he found opportunity in preparation for a home life on the place. That home life began in 1881, as on Febuary 2, that year, he was united in marriage with Sophia Moritz, and for a while they lived in the shack above mentioned until after some years it was replaced by a better residence. Mr. Naseband also increased the size of his farm by purchasing another 40 acres of land, lying in Pierce County, and during the years that have since elapsed he has erected other buildings and brought his land into a high state of cultivation. His wife Sophia, who proved a faithful companion and good helpmate to him, after 17 years of married life, died on May 5, 1898. They had been the parents of four children, all residing at home, namely: Anna, who is now Mrs. Julius Fuhrman of Pierce County, and his children are members of St. Peter's Lutheran Church in Elmwood, Pierce County.

Gust Eckert, who has been engaged in farming in the town of Red Cedar for the last 37 years, during which time he has made material progress, was born in Germany, Sept. 19, 1860, son of August and Ernestine (Hunt) Eckert. The family came to the United States in 1867, landing at New York, whence they came west to Oshkosh, Wis., where August Eckert was employed for three years in the lumber mills. He and his wife then settled on a farm in the town of Poygon, Winnebago County, where they devoted their remaining years to agriculture, Mr. Eckert passing away in 1904 and Mrs. Eckert in 1906. They had four children: Ernesta, now Mrs. Louis Elftman of the town of Weston, Dunn County; August, now deceased; Fred, who lives in Menomonie; and Gust, of the town of Red Cedar. Gust Eckert was reared and educated in Winnebago County, Wisconsin, and remained at home with his parents until 17 years of age. He then came to Dunn County and for seven years thereafter worked in the mills and pineries for the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company. In 1887 he bought 80 acres of wild land in Section 33, town of Red Cedar, and began farming, working that place until 1896, by which time he had improved it to some extent. He then traded it for his present farm of 115 acres in Section 4, which place he has also improved, both land and buildings, so that he now has a fine set of the latter. He is successfully carrying on general farming, keeping high grade Holstein cattle, with a pure bred sire, and is a stockholder in the Rusk Cooperative Creamery Co. He has also rendered public service for several years as a member of the school board. Mr. Eckert was married, in the city of Menomonie, on Nov. 21, 1882, to Mary C. Marco, who was born Dec. 11, 1864, and who, after proving a good home companion and helpmate for 40 years, passed away on March 8, 1923. Mr. and Mrs. Eckert were the parents of seven children, of whom three, Sadie, George and Mary, are now deceased. The survivors are as follows: Angelico, now Mrs. Theo. Schroeder, of the town of Red Cedar, who has two children, Teddie and Herbert; Gust, Jr., who married Loura Wagner, and also lives in the town of Red Cedar; Herbert, now assisting his father on the home farm, who married Marty Beguhn and has two children, Hazel and Marjory; and Esther, now Mrs. Carl Kelling, of the town of Dunn, this county. Mr. and Mrs. Eckert and family are members of the Evangelical Lutheran St. Paul's Church of Menomonie.

August Evenson, who for 26 years has been section foreman for the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway at Downsville, was born in Christiania, Norway, Sept. 1, 1856. His parents were Even Olson and Sophia (Christianson) Olson, both of whom died in Norway, the mother at the age of 42 years and the father at that of 85. August, the subject of this sketch, acquired an education in the public schools of his native land, where he subsequently learned the mason's trade. In 1883 he came to America, locating in Menomonie and entering the employ of the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company, and for eight years he worked in the woods during the winters and in the mill in summer. At the end of that time, or in the fall of 1891 he entered the employ of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Kailway, for four years working on the section at Menomonie and for two years at Red Cedar.

In the spring of 1898 he came to Downsville as foreman of the section here and has since continued to hold that position. Mr. Evenson was first married to Ellen Reher, of which union three children were born, Anna, Mamie and LaRue. The two daughters are both married and live in Minneapolis, while the son resides in St. Paul. Mr. Evenson married secondly Mrs. Mary Booth, whose maiden name was Mary Long. She was born at Logansport, Indiana, March 4, 1849, a daughter of Shepard and Ann (Moore) Long, both of whom are now deceased. Mrs. Evenson was first married to Stephen Booth, at Appleton, Wis., and in 1883 they came to Dunn County, locating at Downsville, where for five years they conducted a hotel and boarding-house for the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company. They then bought a farm at Waubeek in the town of Eau Galle, which they operated for eight years, after which they sold it and, returning to Downsville, bought the hotel which they had previously operated and which they conducted together until Mr. Booth's death on Dec. 12, 1900. Two years later, or in 1902, the widow became Mrs. August Evenson, and continued to conduct the hotel until 1913, and furnishing accommodations for the section crew. The hotel was then sold and Mr. Evenson took up their present residence in the house in which they are now living, on Main Street, Downsville, and which they had bought in 1910. Mr. Evenson, however, is still in charge of the section. Mrs. Evenson has a daughter, Cora, the truit of her first marriage, who married Louis Hanson and is now living in Montana. Mrs. Hanson has four children, Leland, Stephen, Mary and Ever. Mr. Evenson is a member of the S. A. S., and Mrs. Evenson fo the Royal Neighbors, the woman's auxilliary to the Modern Woodmen of America.

Christ J. Johnson, an active business man of Colfax, proprietor of a harness shop, with a boot and shoe department in addition, was born in Denmark, March 9, 1873, son of John and Elsie M. (Foss) Johnson, who were natives of the same country, the father having been born in 1834 and the mother in 1844. They were married there, and for some years conducted a small farm, which they gave up in 1883 to emigrate to America. Landing at New York, they proceeded west to Council Grove, Kansas, where for two years John Johnson made a living by doing common labor. He then settled on a farm in that locality, conducting it until 1892, when he came with his family to Chippewa County, Wis., locating near Bloomer, where he was engaged in agricultural work for nine years, or until death put an end to his labors on May 3, 1901. His wife, Mrs. Elsie M. Johnson, remained on the farm and later became the wife of Ole Oas, with whom she went to La Porte, Texas, where Mr. Oas died. She returned north and is now living in Chippewa Falls. Mr. and Mrs. John Johnson had eight children: John, who died at the age of 51 years; Peter, who is farming near Houston, Texas; Johanna, now Mrs. Marcus Leason of Wyoming; Christ J., of Colfax, Wis.; Frank, who died Dec. 26, 1922; Trena, wife of Thomas Walling of Pelican Rapids, Minn.; Mary, wife of W. D. Fairchilds of Portland, Ore.; and Rosa, who married Peter Young and is now a widow residing at Larimore, N. D. Christ J. Johnson was a boy of about ten years when he arrived with his parents in Council Grove, the county seat of Morris County, Kansas. There he attended school and learned the English language. After remaining with his parents until he was 22 years old, he came to Chippewa County, Wisconsin, and began to learn the trade of harness maker in the shop of Frank Oplitiner at Bloomer. He remained but a short time there, however, going to Eau Claire, where he finished his apprenticeship under Emil Kohlkeep, in whose shop he worked for four years. Then on Feb. 26, 1906, he came to Colfax and bought the harness shop of E. A. Holcomb, located on the site of the north half of the present Colfax Bank. There he conducted business for 13 years, or until 1919, when he built his present shop and store just south of the Bank of Colfax, a one-story brick structure 42 x 52 feet, in which, in addition to his own business, the Mattison jewelry store is located. On moving into his new building he added a complete line of men's and boy's footwear to his other stock, which includes harness goods and supplies, robes and blankets, whips, and various articles used by drivers of horses. He himself manufactures most of the harness he sells. Mr. Johnson was married Feb. 26, 1908, in Colfax, Wis., to Albertine Everson. Both her parents died in Norway. To Mr. and Mrs. Johnson three children have been born, Emil J., Bernard M. and Chester A. The Norwegian Lutheran Congregation of Colfax includes the Johnson family among its members.

Arthur Heinsohn, of Boyceville, manager of the Wisconsin Milling Company's elevator, and also of the service station owned by the company in Boyceville, was born at Great Bend. Barton County, Kansas, May 20, 1890. His parents, William and Henrietta (Eickmier) Heinsohn, natives of Germany, came to the United States when young and settled in central Kansas, being subsequently married in Great Bend, at which place for 20 years William Heinsohn worked on the railroad as section foreman. He died in April, 1909, and in May, the same year, Mrs. Heinsohn and family came to Wisconsin. She is still living and is now a resident of Bovceville. Arthur Heinsohn in his boyhood and youth attended common school in Great Bend, Kans., and high school in Glenwood City, Wis. Then. on his own account, he engaged in farming on 80 acres of land which he bought in the town of Tiffany. In 1916 he sold his farm and moved to the village of Downing, where he engaged in business as proprietor of a feed mill and elevator, handling hay, grain and feed and doing commercial grinding. In 1918 he sold his business in Downing and moved to Wheeler, where he engaged in a similar enterprise, adding, however, a potato warehouse. The Wheeler business he conducted until 1920, when he sold it to the Wisconsin Milling Co., retaining a personal interest. He then came to Boyceville as manager and one of the directors of the Wisconsin Milling Co.'s elevator here. In 1920, at a cost of $10,000, the company built their Boyceville service station, a fine station constructed of kellystone and including four large receiving tanks able to contain four carloads of gas. They supply 13 country pumps in addition to their own filling station. They handle all pure oil products and do a large business, both wholesaie and retail in flour, grain, feed, oil, gasoline and greases, covering a large scope of territory. Mr. Heinsohn is also a stockholder in the "Square Deal" store in Boyceville and has served as village clerk. He was married June 4, 1913, to Venetta Delilah Towle, of Brook Park, Minn., and he and his wife are the parents of one child, Arthur Vernon, who was born Feb. 12, 1920. They are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

James T. Holstein of Menomonie, who is a veteran in the meat business here, was born in the town of Menomonie, Dunn County, Feb. 22, 1864, son of Jens and Tony (Lee) Holstein, the parents being natives of Norway. The father came to the United States at the age of 14 and grew up at Neenah. He came to Dunn County in the late 50's and settled in the town of Menomonie near Little Elk Creek, where he took a tract of wild government land. Making a clearing he built a log house and barns and in time developed a good farm. In 1863 he enlisted for service in the Civil War, and remained in the army until the close of hostilities, when he returned home and resumed work on his farm. His wife, who had been brought to Neenah, Wis., when a babe, was reared there, that place being her home until she married and came with her husband to Dunn County. She died on the farm in the town of Menomonie, and Jens Holstein then sold the place and went to Oregon, where he spent his last years. Mr. and Mrs. Jens Holstein had seven children: Amelia and Lena, who are deceased; Thomas and James T., twins, the former of whom is a farmer near Devil's Lake, N. D., and the latter the subject of this sketch; Samuel, deceased; Samuel (second), now of Oregon; and Sophia, now Mrs. Martin Rongsted of Menomonie. James T. Holstein when old enough attended district school in the town of Menomonie and remained at home until the age of fourteen. He then went to work for the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company and spent two winters in the woods at Rice Lake as a mule team driver, after which for the following two years he was in the employ of the Mississippi Logging Co. at Meridean, Dunn County. At the end of that time he became connected with the meat business in Menomonie, working two years for Christ Krause. In 1897 he formed a partnership with C. J. Tilleson, their store being located on Main Street between Second and Third. The partnership lasted five years, at the end of which time Mr. Holstein bought Mr. Tilleson's interest in the business and subsequently conducted the store as sole proprietor until August 22, when he was burned out. He then opened his present market at 1124 Broadway. Mr. Holstein has had a steadily successful career in the line of mercantile enterprise that he chose for himself. He has built up a good trade, his customers knowing that they can depend on the meat products he handles and that his prices will always be fair. In young manhood he served 11 years in this city as a volunteer fireman and for five years was a member of Company H, Third Infantry, W. N. G. He belongs to two fraternal societies, the Odd Fellows and the Maccabees. Mr. Holstein was married in the city of Menomonie on Oct. 26, 1895, to Ellen Lien, and he and his wife are the parents of three children: Floyd, now manager of a lumber yard at Edgar, Mont.; Mildred, a graduate of the Stout Institute, who is teaching domestic science at Almond, Wis., and James, a member of the senior class in the Menomonie High School. The family are members of the Norwegian Lutheran Church.

Olaf C. Nelson, manager of the O. & N. Lumber Co.'s yard at Downing, was born in Sweden, Oct. 9, 1875, son of Mr. and Mrs. Nels Nelson. Both parents are now deceased. Olaf C. attended school in his native land and for several years subsequently was engaged in farm labor. In 1896, after learning the tailor's trade, he came to the United States, locating in St. Paul, Minn., where he entered the employ of the tailoring firm of Schaub Bros., in the Pioneer Press building. He remained with that concern for 12 years or more, after which, on Oct. 8, 1908, he came to Downing, Wis., and bought an interest in the Herdahl Company's store, for one year thereafter being vice president of the company. In 1911 he was elected its president and he served as such until the building was destroyed by fire Oct. 24, 1922. He was in personal charge of the grocery department and also did the buying for the concern. On April 1, 1923, he took the position of manager for the O. & N. Lumber Co., which he still holds. He has served as clerk of the village, and as a member of its board of trustees, and is a member of the Downing Commercial Club. His fraternal affiliations are with Tiffany Lodge No. 40, I. O. O. F., of which he has been treasurer for the past 11 years, and with the M. W. A. lodge in Downing. Mr. Nelson was married June 27, 1901, in St. Paul, Minn., to Sarah Herdahl, daughter of Ole and Mary (Larson) Herdahl, and who was born in Norway, May 6, 1874. She came to the United States with her parents in 1885. Mr. and Mrs. Nelson have had seven children, of whom are now living, the record being as follows: Clifford J., born June 19, 1902; Alice M., born Jan. 26, 1904, now teaching in the Goff school, Dunn County; Wilbur C., born Jan. 15, 1906, who died Sept. 12, 1907; Paul W., born Aug. 17, 1907; Robert E., born Feb. 15, 1910; Margaret S., born June 24, 1912; and John W., born Nov. 11, 1915. The Nelson family are members of the Downing Union Church, Mrs. Nelson being a member also of the Ladies' Aid Society connected with it.

Ole Kleven, now deceased, but who was for many years one of the outstanding figures in the town of Peru, a man of ability in his chosen walk of life, and of nigh moral worth, was born at Gudbrandsdalen, Norway, Aug. 19, 1848. He acquired a more than ordinarily good education and was confirmed in the Lutheran church. It was at the age of 21 years that he came to America seeking a better field of opportunity than he could find in his native land. Continuing his westward journey to Dunn County, Wisconsin, he found employment in the sawmills at old The next event of importance in his life was his marriage in Eau Claire, Meridean. in the month of September, 1874, to Mathia Johnsgaard, a native of Gudbrandsdalen, Norway, who came to America in 1873. For two years after his marriage Mr Kleven continued working in the sawmills at old Meridean, he and his wife practicing frugal living and saving what they could of his earnings with an eye to the future. At the end of that period he entered upon his career as a farmer, buying 120 acres of wild land in Section 22, town of Peru, and he and his wife set to work with energy and determination to build up a rural home. The task was one that kept them busy for a number of years, but it was congenial work, though hard, for every year found them better off and with more to show for their labors. Clearing and developing more and more land and putting up new buildings, or improving old ones, were their principal occupations during that period. The result was one of the best farms in the town of Peru, the buildings being especially notable. The residence was a fine one, not only with respect to its outside appearance but also with respect to its inside arrangement of rooms, closets and general modern con-The barn was also remarkable in several ways, and, generally speaking, veniences. was one of the best in the town of Peru. It measured 36 x 101 feet in ground plan, and was provided with a full basement, the equipment being adequate and thoroughly modern in style, and the other buildings on the place were in keeping with the house and barn. Mr. Kleven also bought 80 acres more land, making the total area of the farm 200 acres. Much credit for the successful management of the place must be given to Mrs. Kleven, for a part at least of Mr. Kleven's time was taken up with the duties of public office or with enterprises of a more or less public character. He organized and was head man of the cheese factory at Meridean before the establishment of the creamery, and also helped to organize the creamery, serving as its first president. He represented as agent the Dunn County Farm Insurance Co., and was also agent for a firm manufacturing separators. For several terms he was chairman of the town board and, therefore, a member of the county board, and for 19 years he served as town treasurer and for a number of years was active as a member of the school board of his district. He possessed natural creative genius and to all who knew him he was a man worthy of great esteem. His death on Aug. 5, 1904, left a void not easily filled. His wife, Martha, who had proved an efficient helpmate, after his death carried on the farm successfully, and continued to improve it, painting the buildings, building a machine house, and raising the residence, putting in a basement wall and cementing it. In 1919 she sold the farm to her son Adolph. To Mr. and Mrs. Kleven eight children were born, John, Adolph (first), Reinhart (first), Anna M., Rosa J., Reinhart (second), Jerry, and Adolph (second). John, now a substantial farmer in Eau Claire County, married Andreana Screeden, but has no children. Adolph, the first of that name, died at the age of five years, and Reinhart, (first), at that of two and a half. Anna M., who is Mrs. Ole Torgerson of the town of Peru, is the mother of five children, Charlotte, Raymond, Arnold, Truman and Julia. Rosa J., wife of Orrin Hanson of the town of Colfax, has four children, Le Roy, Margaret, Norma and Omar. Reinhart (second), now a farmer in Eau Claire County, married Laura Leer and has three children, Maxine, Omar and Elizabeth. Jerry, manager of the farmers Store at Rusk, married May Hart and has two children, Loraine and Jerome. Adolph (second), proprietor of the old home farm of 200 acres in Sections 21 and 22, town of Peru, and a prominent citizen of this town, married Luella Myre, and has four children, Alice, Obert, Marion and Lyman, the two latter being twins. The Kleven family have always stood high in the community and the younger generation are showing the effects of the good training they received from their parents.

William S. Casey, of Knapp, formerly a farmer in the town of Stanton, was born Washington County, Ohio, Oct. 2, 1874, son of John T. and Louise (Mills) Casey. The parents were natives of Ohio, the father born June 1, 1841, and the mother, Sept. 14, 1843. They were married in December, 1861, and for a number of years were engaged in farming in their native state. In 1881 they came to Wisconsin, locating in St. Croix County, where they remained for two months, at the end of that time removing to Dunn County. Here they bought 80 acres of land in the town of Stanton, which was all wild, or what was called "slashed land," the "saw timber" having been slashed out, leaving only small timber, light wood and Making a clearing, John T. Casey built a log house and barns and started in to develop his land, which in time he succeeded in doing with the help of his wife and children. In those early days there was plenty of work for all, and most of it was hard work, but each did his or her share, and by all pulling together, the family prospered, though prosperity came but slowly and after the lapse of years. There the father died on Aug. 24, 1898, and the mother, Mrs. Louisa Casey, sub-sequently resided on the farm with her son, William S., who took it over and is now living with him in the village. Mr. and Mrs. John T. Casey had seven children, Mary M., Samuel J., I. M., Laura N., John S., William S. and Sarah L., of whom further record is as follows. Mary M., born July 12, 1863, and who became the wife of Joshua T. Forakre, died Dec. 4, 1884, without issue. Samuel J., born Dec. 2, 1865, married Matilda Beatty, and has two children, Esther and Ruby. I. M. Casey, born Jan. 13, 1868, is now a farmer in the town of Lucas, Dunn County. He has been twice married, first to Mary E. Gunter, by whom he had two children, Lettie F. and Laura L. He married secondly Emma Christner and by this wife also has two children, Hazel and Albert R. Laura N., born Dec. 11, 1869, has been twice married, first becoming the wife of George Gunter, of which union there are two children now living, Eva E. and Margaret. She married secondly James W. Frawley, who is engineer on the Omaha "pusher" at Knapp, but there are no children by her second union. John S., born March 28, 1872, who helped his father develop the home farm, resided in Dunn County up to four years ago, but is now a farmer at Blocmer, Chippewa County. For some years formerly he conducted a meat market at Knapp, erecting a building for the purpose, but on account of his health gave up the meat business and moved to his present farm. While in Knapp he served three years as a member of the village council and was chairman of the street committee. Fraternally he belongs to the Odd Fellows. He was married first to Eleanore Page, by whom he had two children, Roy A. and Gladvs V. He was subsequently married, Dec. 25, 1919, to Betty Coville of Milwaukee. His farm consists of 54 acres and is in the town of Woodmore, Chippewa Sarah L., born Oct. 11, 1877, is now Mrs. George Cope of Glendive, County. William S. Casey was a boy of about nine years when in 1883 he accom-Mont. panied his parents to Dunn County, Wis. For a few years thereafter he attended rural school in the town of Stanton. He also helped to develop the home farm of 80 acres, and in 1898, on his father's death, he took it over and continued its development. Among his improvements he erected a nice nine-room residence; also a large basement barn 36 x 80 feet in dimensions, besides a number of outbuildings and a silo, installing a domestic waterworks system which served all the buildings. In addition to all this, he increased the size of his farm by purchasing four additional tracts of 40 acres each, which gave him a farm of 240 acres, of which, however, he sold ten acres. It was situated in Sections 31 and 32, and is today one of the fine farms of Dunn County, being thoroughly improved and well kept. It is known as Springbrook Dairy Farm and is well stocked with Guernsey cattle. In 1919 Mr. Casey rented the farm and moved to Knapp, buying the Dr. McCarty residence on Main Street, a fine modern building, which he now occupies. For three years he was agent for the Standard Oil Co.'s distributing plant in the village. In the fall of 1924 he purchased his present business and is now conducting a twochair barber shop and billiard hall. While on the farm Mr. Casey served as a member of the town board of supervisors and is now marshall of the village of Knapp. He is fraternally affiliated with the Masons and Odd Fellows. Mr. Casey was married July 4, 1896, to Daisy Carrington, and he and his wife have had two children, John R., and Marjorie I., the latter of whom resides with her parents. John R. Casey, born in 1898, in 1918 entered the United States' service and was in training at the S. A. T. C. Training School at Beloit, when he had an attack of the "flu" developing into bronchial pneumonia, and died Oct. 30, 1918. Mr. Casey and his family are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church and have a good social standing in their village and town.

Patrick Nooney, one of the notable settlers of Dunn County, who had much to do with the development of the village of Wheeler, was born in Ccunty Kildare, Ireland, Aug. 28, 1851. He was 20 years old when he emigrated to the United States, locating in Mencmonie, Wis., where he entered the service of the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company, which at that time was known as Knapp, Stout & Co., and with them he remained for about 12 years, working in lumber camps, on the river drives and in the mills and yards. In 1883 he went to Eau Claire, where he was employed by the Daniel Shaw Lumber Co. for nine years, doing the same kind of work. In 1892 he returned to Dunn County and bought of a Mrs. Cisco a homestead of 120 acres lying within the limits of the village of Wheeler. He later added to this another 40 acres, erected a good set of buildings and engaged in farming. Later he bought other village land, some of which he resold. He also built the Wheeler Block, which now houses the Wheeler Store Co., and other business enterprises, and for two years and a half he and his wife conducted a general store They also made a hotel of their residence, conducting it as such for 15 years, there. and later as a boarding-house. Mr. Nooney also bought another farm of 160 acres in the town of Hay River, adjoining the village limits and adjoining his original farm, and he platted and sold the Noonev First, Second and Third Additions to Wheeler. For quite a number of years he was active in various village affairs. being a stockholder in the creamery, the bank, and the telephone company, and being esteemed as a useful and honorable citizen by all in the village and many outside of it who knew him. As such he passed away May 10, 1918, leaving a record that deserves a place in the annals of this county. Mr. Nooney was married Nov. 24, 1894, to Margaret Trainor, who was born in Benton, Lafavette County, Wis., April 27, 1860, and came to Wheeler in 1894, the year of her marriage. This union resulted in the birth of three children: Margaret, born Sept. 9, 1895; Helen, Oct. 2, 1897, and Thomas, Aug. 20, 1900. The family are members of the Catholic church, belonging to the congregation in Menomonie.

Anton Anderson Rostamo, a general farmer in the town of Grant, was born in Molselven, Norway, July 3, 1859, son of Andrew and Karen (Tolefson) Anderson. The parents were natives of the same country and the father a farmer by occupa-They spent their lives in their native land, where both of them finally passed tion. away. Anton was brought up to farming, and, as he had opportunity attended the common school in his neighborhood. In addition to farm work he spent about two vears as a fisherman. In 1882, when about 23 years old, he came to the United States to better his fortune. Locating first at Eau Claire, he was connected for seven years thereafter with the lumber industry, working in saw mills during the summers and in the woods during the winters. He then spent a summer in Minneapolis and a year in North Dakota. From that state he came to Dunn County, Wisconsin, and in 1892 he settled on the land, buying 160 acres in Section 34, town The tract was partly improved and he proceeded to further develop it, of Grant. taking up his residence in the log house which was already on the place, together with a log barn. Later he bought 40 acres more, so that his farm now contains 200 After ten years hard work on the place, Mr. Rostamo, by 1902 found himself acres. in a position to provide himself and family with a better dwelling and accordingly erected a good frame house of ten rooms. He has also built a good barn, silo and stone milk house, and at the present time has 90 acres of his farm under the plow. He does general farming and dairying and for some years has grown potatoes on quite an extensive scale. He has a herd of Holstein cattle, with some grade animals of mixed breeds, and has 50 head of Poland-China hogs. His place is a typical Dunn County farm, well managed and of good appearance, and in spite of the setbacks which come to every farmer, he has made substantial progress. He has also rendered some public service, having been for six years a member of the school board of his district. Mr. Rostamo was married in the town of Grant, Dec. 23,1900, to Indiana M. Moen, daughter of Christian and Catherine (Tollefson) Moen, who are now deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Rostamo have six children: Constance, wife of Andrew Edwards of Colfax; Arthur, Harold, Erling, Ernst and Agnes, the five last mentioned all residing at home with their parents. Mr. Rostamo and family are members of the Holden Congregation of the Norwegian Lutheran Church of the town of Grant, and Mr. Rostamo for several years was one of its trustees.

P. Gustav Barum, who is engaged in general farming and dairying in the town of Elk Mound (Section 9), has had a long and busy career and has accomplished much through determination and perseverance. He was born in Barum, Norway, Feb. 13, 1852, son of Peter H. and Martha (Johnson) Barum. In 1865 the family came to the United States to found a new home in a land of better opportunity, and for five years they resided in the town of Wheaton, Chippewa County, on Big Elk Creek. In 1870 they moved into Dunn County, taking a homestead of 160 acres of wild land in the town of Colfax. There, making a clearing, Peter H. Barum built a log cabin and log barns and began the development of a farm, in which task he continued until his death in 1889. His wife survived him about 15 years, finally passing away in 1904 at the home of her son P. Gustav. There were five children in the family, but the only ones now living are the subject of this sketch, and his sister Annie, the latter being now Mrs. Öle Johnson of Eau Claire. P. Gustav Barum attended public school in Norway and also two terms in Chippewa County, Wisconsin. He remained with his parents, becoming his father's assistant and so continuing until 1870, when the father suffering from a stroke, the brunt of the hard work and the main part in the development and management of the farm fell upon the shoulders of Gustav. In the year of the great Chicago fire, 1871, Mr. Barum went to Chicago and there worked in the Boughton Machine shop until the middle of the following summer, when he returned to Wisconsin. Besides clearing, grubbing and breaking his own land, or that of his parents, he at times did similar work for others, and so kept constantly busy, having as many as five teams of oxen working at one time. Also, before his first marriage in 1884 he spent 17 winters in logging camps in the woods, and one winter after, and during eight winters of that time he drove a four-horse team. He also worked 13 summers in sawmills. After his father's death he conducted the home farm for a few years or until it was In 1892 he bought his present farm of 80 acres in Section 9, town of Elk sold Mound, covered at the time with heavy hardwood timber. Making a clearing, he built a frame house into which he and his family moved, including his aged mother, who came to live with him at that time and remained an inmate of his home until her death. As soon as he had settled on the place he commenced the clearing and grubbing of the land, a long, hard and tedious task, but in time accomplished with a good farm as a result, which is the second one he has developed. Six acres of land, however, he left in timber for the sake of a supply of wood. For many years Mr. Barum grew tobacco, but of late years he has given his attention to dairying and general crop farming, not tobacco raising, and the tobacco shed he constructed when he started in that business he later converted into a stock barn. He has a herd of grade Holstein cattle and is today one of the substantial citizens of his town, a position he has worked hard to attain, and his activity for so many years in the important industries of lumbering and farming, entitle him to be considered as one of the creators and upbuilders of the county, a useful and necessary cog in the great machine of modern civilization. As intimated Mr. Barum has been more than once married: first in 1884, to Tillie Clauson, who died after a short married life in 1888, leaving two children: Annie, now Mrs. Ole Eng of Leroy, Minn., and the mother of six children; and Oscar, a farmer in the town of Elk Mound, who married Ethel Parker and has two children. Mr. Barum married secondly Mary Carlson, who died in 1909, leaving one child, Martin G., now living with his father and conducting the home farm. The family are Lutherans in religious faith.

Bennett H. Berg, a well known and popular citizen of the town of Grant, where for 25 years he has been engaged in building up a farm in Section 28, was born in this town April 13, 1870, son of Hans A. and Bertha (Jacobson) Berg. The parents were natives of Telemarken, Norway, where the father after growing to manhood worked as a day laborer. But realizing that to continue as such meant an old age of penury unless he was taken care of by his children, he resolved to emigrate to America and establish a new home with better opportunities. Accordingly, about 1861 he came to this country, bringing his family, and locating in Dunn County, Wis., took a tract of wild land in Section 27, town of Grant. He built there a log house and made that place his home, clearing and improving it, until the death of his wife in 1871. He then sold that farm and bought 80 acres in Section 28, a little later adding 40 acres more to it. On this place he built a small frame house without a studding in it, except ratters. He also built a log barn and here he farmed until 1899, when he sold the place to his son Bennett. His death occurred Oct. 14, 1903. Hans A. Berg was three times married, his first wife dying while on the ocean trip to America. Then he married Bertina Jacobson, the mother of Bennett H., his only son. After her death he married for his third wife Bergetta Rollefsdatter, by whom he had two children, both of whom are now deceased. She died Oct. 15, 1904. Bennett H. Berg, who took over the farm in 1899, as already mentioned, has made some substantial improvements on it. He has put up an eight-room frame house, furnished with hot and cold running water; a large barn also provided with running water; a granary and other buildings. He is carrying on general farming and dairving with good results, having at the present time 18 head of grade Holstein cattle, and also raising Duroc-Jersey hogs. He has served as town clerk, assessor, and clerk of his school district. On June 20, 1902, Mr. Berg was united in marriage, in the town of Grant, with Mary Score, daughter of Peter and Barbara (Arntson) Score, her parents, both now living and residing in the town of Colfax, having been early settlers in Dunn County. Six children have come to enlarge the Berg family circle, namely, Byron (first), Hans, Mabel, Byron (second), Alma and Lillian, all as yet living at home with their parents, born as follows: Hans, born Nov. 1, 1903; Byron (first), born July 29, 1905, and died Oct. 24, 1909; Mabel, born Oct. 2, 1907; Byron (second), born March 26, 1910; Alma, born March 6, 1912; and Lillian, born April 5, 1922. Mr. Berg and family are members of the Holden congregation of the Norwegian Lutheran Church of the town of Grant.

Henry Reitz, who years ago established a farm in the town of Eau Galle, carving it out of the primeval forest, was born in Germany and came to this country when young, settling in Eau Galle, Dunn County, Wis., where he was employed by Carson & Rand. Here he made the acquaintance of Josephine Seng, like himself a native of Germany, and they were married. That was a turning-point in his life, as, with an eye to the future, he now turned his attention to building up a farm home, buying with his savings 80 acres of wild timber land in Section 11, town of Eau Galle. Making a small clearing he built thereon a log house and stables and began to shape out his farm. There were trees-many of them--to be felled, stumps to be grubbed, and land to be broken and planted, to say nothing of various odd jobs, such as clearing away brush and building fences, most of it done in a primitive way at first, but better and more thoroughly as time went on. Later he bought 40 acres more in the same section, though not adjoining his original place, and continued agricultural operations until his death on May 2, 1900. Previous to that he had rebuilt the log barn and had also put up other buildings. His wife Josephine, who survived him continued to reside on the place with her son Herman, into whose hands it passed, until her death at the age of 84 years. Mr. and Mrs. Henry Reitz had seven children: Edward, now deceased; Henry, of Elmwood, Pierce County; Mary, of Los Angeles, Calif.; Herman, proprietor of the old home farm; Kate, now Mrs. Joseph Bates of Elmwood; Ben, of Fairchild, Wis., and Josephine, wife of Peter Renke of Elmwood.

Herman Reitz, proprietor of Spring Couley Dairy Farm in Section 11, town of Eau Galle, was born on this farm Oct. 11, 1868, son of Henry and Josephine (Seng) Reitz. As a boy he attended District School No. 2, in the town of Eau Galle, and when old enough began to assist his father in the operation and improvement of the home farm. There he continued to reside except for three years which he spent as a lumber employe, working in the woods and mills. In 1899 he bought the home farm, comprising 120 acres in Section 11, town of Eau Galle, and of which he has since remained the proprietor. He has made extensive improvements on it, in 1906 building a large basement barn of 34 x 68 feet, installed with the James equipment. In 1914 he replaced the old log house with a nice eight-room dwelling facing west and over-looking a fine sloping lawn adorned with flowers and shrubbery. He has also erected a number of good out-buildings, including a large machine shed, a chicken house, garage, hog house, granary, wood shed and shop, besides several smaller structures, and in 1924 he installed a domestic water system, providing running water in the house and barns. He keeps a good herd of grade Guernsey cattle, and follows mixed farming and dairying very successfully. The building up of this farm from the virgin forest is an enterprise that is worth recording, as adding materially to the agricultural wealth of the county and its present proprietor is chiefly to be credited with its fine appearance and excellent condition. In addition to his interest therein Mr. Reitz is a stockholder in the Peoples State Bank at Elm-Mr. Reitz was married Nov. 22, 1898, to Mary Hofacker, a daughter of wood Mr. and Mrs. Conrad Hofacker. She was born in the town of Eau Galle, Oct. 20, 1880, and as wife, mother and housekeeper has well performed her part in advancing the happiness and prosperity of the family. Mr. and Mrs. Reitz are the parents of six children, who were born as follows: Elmer C., June 26, 1902; Edna J., April 15, 1905; Anna L., March 19, 1907; Vera, July 7, 1909; Grace C., June 16, 1912, and Marie, July 4, 1916. The family are members of St. Henry's Catholic Congregation at Eau Galle village.

Herman Berg, a farmer in the town of Wilson and a factor in the agricultural progress of the county, was born in the town of Sand Creek, Dunn County, Wis., Sept. 6, 1883, son of John F. and Rönog. The parents belonged to that hardy class of Norwegian settlers who have done so much to develop and civilize the great Northwest. In his native land John F. Berg was a miller. It was in 1874 that he emigrated to America, at first locating on Bloomer Prairie, Chippewa County, Wis. For two years he worked in the Chippewa Flour Mill and for one year in the Bloomer mill. He realized, however, that to continue as a journeyman miller all his life was not the best way to advance his fortunes, and that farming offered a better opportunity to establish a permanent home and a provision for his old age. At the end of the three-year period above referred to, therefore, he came to Dunn County and homesteaded 80 acres in Section 34, town of Sand Creek, a tract of land covered with brush. While building a log house on the place, he waiked to and from Bloomer Prairie. Then he moved his family and household goods with an ox team and they established themselves in their new home. For some years oxen were used for draught purposes on the farm, and for many winters John F. Berg worked in the woods to earn the money for current expenses, or to offset the effect of an occasional bad season. In time he cleared most of his land and there he and his wife in time finally passed away, their duty well done and their labors over. They had a family of nine children, of whom those now living are Bertha, Hans F., Inga, Oluf and Herman. Bertha has been married, first to Ole Loftus, who died, atter which she became the wife of Tom Tvedt of Sand Creek, where she is now living. Those deceased are Mary, Rudolph, Albert and John. Herman Berg, who was reared on the home farm in the town of Sand Creek, helped his father to develop it, sometimes, however, working out. In 1907 he started out for himself, buying 240 acres in Sections 23 and 24, town of Wilson. The land was partly improved and he has since added to the improvements until he has developed the place into a good modern farm. He built a frame house of nine rooms, and a barn 36 x 100 feet in ground plan, with a full basement and provided with the Lowden equipment. Both house and barn are supplied with running water and all the main buildings are electrically lighted, Mr. Berg having installed a Delco lighting plant. He has 90 acres of land now under the plow, the balance being in pasture and hay land. As a general farmer and dairyman he has made good progress and keeps grade Guernsey cattle, having a pure bred Guernsey sire. He also raises Duroc-Jersey hogs and Shropshire sheep. Mr. Berg was married in 1908 in the town of Sand Creek to Minnie Gilberts, daughter of Andrew and Christina Gilberts, her parents, who came to this country from Norway, being early settlers in that town, and still living. Mr. and Mrs. Berg have had eight children, but two of them, Archie C. and Morris R., are now deceased. The six living are Julian, Fern B., Arthur L., Amy L., Nila M. and Alfa M.

Barney A. Lee, retired farmer, residing in the village of Colfax, was born in La Crosse County, Wisconsin, Aug. 23, 1858, son of Andrew Jacobson Leebakken and his wife, Bertha Peterson Leebakken. The parents had settled on Halfway Creek in that county on coming from Norway in 1858, and there they continued to reside for several years. In 1862 the father, Andrew, came to Dunn County and took up 160 acres of government land in the town of Grant, to which place he moved his family in the following year. The journey was made by ox team and they brought with them two cows and some calves. Four other people came at the same time, namely, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Tollefson and Mr. and Mrs. John Larson, and this made their start in the wilderness somewhat easier than if they had been alone, as they could combine for mutual assistance, and did so, the men rolling up logs and building a house in which to pass the winter. This dwelling was somewhat crowded, as the Lebakkens had five children, making a company of 11 people in all. The next spring Mr. Leebakken put up a log house on his own land and the family moved into their new home. He also built a log barn and out-buildings and broke six acres of his land the first years. He was not destined to see his work come to full fruition, but before his death, which took place in 1872, he had added 40 acres more to his farm and improved it considerably. His wife survived him many years, dying in 1898. They had 11 children, namely: John, deceased; Peter (first), deceased; Peter (second) now living in Montana; Barney A., of Colfax; Michael A., deceased; Bertha, now Mrs. Edward Emmerson of Montana; Lottie, deceased; Minnie, now Mrs. Elling Gustad of Montana; Sam A., of Colfax; Nicholas of Clavton, Wis., and Eli of Montana. Barney A. Lee was an infant of four years when he accompanied his parents to Dunn County. When two or three years older he began attending district school, and he remained at home until he was 24. In 1884 he went to the Pacific coast, where for about nine years he worked in logging camps. He then returned to Dunn County, Wis., and bought the old homestead of 200 acres in the town of Grant. In March, 1895 his house burned down, but this proved no misfortune in the end, as he replaced it with a good frame dwelling, which was improvement to the farm. Another great improvement was a large barn of 36 x 90 feet that he built in 1914. By that time his farm was one of the best in the town, and he continued to carry on diversified farming there until Sept., 1923, when he rented the place to his son Arthur and retired, moving to the village of Colfax, where he bought the house in which he now lives. In the years of his early manhood Mr. Lee spent a number of winters logging in the woods along the Chippewa River, doing farm work during the summers. He was school treasurer of his district for 24 years. Through hard work and intelligent planning he acquired a reasonable competence and can spend the remainder of his days in ease and comfort. He is a stockholder in the Peoples States Bank and in the Colfax Cooperative Creamery Co. Mr. Lee was married Oct. 19, 1895, a year or two after his return from the West, to Ola Langmoe, who was born in Norway, July 15, 1870. He and his wife have had nine children, all of whom are now living save two, the list being as follows: Arthur, now conducting the home farm in the town of Grant, who married Florence Ellingson; Cora, residing in Eau Claire; Garfield and Esther, deceased; Manley, a student in the River Falls State Normal School; Bernice, bookkeeper for the Colfax Store Company; Alf, who is on the farm with Arthur; and Berdina and Sidney, who are attending public school. The family are affiliated religiously with the Lutheran Church of America.

Hans Teigen, the owner of Clover Leaf Dairy Farm of 160 acres in Section 33, town of Rock Creek, was born in Gudbrandsdalen, Norway, April 12, 1876, son of Albert and Anna (Odegard) Teigen. The parents died in Norway, the father in 1882 and mother in 1922. They had five children: Albert, now a prosperous merchant in Anthony, Eau Claire County, Wis.; Anna, who is Mrs. Charles Berglund of Eau Claire; Ole, who is deceased; Iver, who owns and conducts the old home farm in Norway; and Hans, subject of this sketch. Hans Teigen grew to manhood in his native land, where he attended public school. It was in 1896, when he was in his twentieth year, that he came to America and the state of Wisconsin. After stopping for a few days at Eau Claire, he came to Dunn County and for some time resided with P. C. Peterson, a farmer in the town of Rock Creek, though he worked that summer on the farm of L. E. Hagen. He then went to Superior, Wis., where for ten years he was in the employ of construction firms, laying water mains and sewers and connecting water pipes from the mains to residences. At the end of that period, returning to the town of Rock Creek, Dunn County, and began the operation of his present farm, which was then all wild land, and which he bought in 1902. As it was covered with heavy timber, he had to fell the trees, and. after making a clearing, he built a small frame house. Through persistent industry, involving much hard work, Mr. Teigen has since cleared and developed about 75 acres, the rest of his land being still in pasture and timber. He has also erected a good set of buildings, which include a barn built in 1923 and measuring 32 x 60 feet, with a half basement and patent equipment. Among his other buildings are a good granary and corn crib and a fine chicken house, and he has also sunk a well. His farm is now in good condition and he is successfully raising corn, oats and clover, besides other crops; he is also a stockholder in the Rock Falls Cooperative Creamery. Mr. Teigen is a member of the Lutheran church and is a man of sterling character, who stands high in his community. As yet he is unmarried.

Ludwig A. Tilleson, proprietor of a meat market in the city of Menomonie, who is an experienced man in his line of business, and who is well known throughout Dunn County, owing to having formerly held public office, was born in the town of Elk Mound, this county, June 7, 1871, son of Arne and Betsy (Anderson) Tilleson. His parents were farmers and as a boy he attended district school and when old enough helped his father to cultivate the parental acres. Afterwards he did farm labor for others and also for several winters worked as a logger in the woods. It was in 1891 that Mr. Tilleson first got into the meat business, entering the employ of A. O. Strand of Menomonie, with whom he remained for nine years, learning all branches of the business. At the end of that time, in 1900, he changed his occupation, becoming a member of the Menomonie police force, on which he served for three years. He then went to Barron and resumed his former occupation of meat dealer, conducting a shop there for two years. Then, being offered the position of chief of police of the city of Menomonie, he accepted, disposing of his market, and for the next two years he held the position above mentioned, at the end of that time going to work in the market of C. G. Tilleson. In 1915 he was elected sheriff of Dunn County and served one term of two years. During the next two years he was under-sheriff and was then once more elected sheriff, and after that undersheriff, serving two terms of two years each in each position, alternately. In the fall of 1922 he established the market he is now conducting, situated at the corner of Sixth Street and 13th Avenue, and has since built up a good trade. Though too old to be accepted as a soldier in the war with Germany, Mr. Tilleson has seen some home military service. He was formerly for eight years a member of the Ludington Guard, holding successively the rank of corporal and sergeant, and during the war served in the Reserve company, and was lieutenant of Company E. which was formed from members of the Reserve force. He is fraternally affiliated with the Knights of Pythias and the Maccabees. On Aug. 19, 1893, Mr. Tilleson was married in Menomonie to Bertha Walstad, who was born in Norway, Nov. 12, 1872, daughter of Martin and Johanna Walstad. Her father came to this country in 1885, and after working here for some years, sent for his family in 1891. Before coming to Dunn County he lived for some time in Clark and Jackson counties, in the latter being foreman for several years on the Price farms. After coming to Dunn County he was employed on the old Oakland Stock Farm, which was owned and operated by Captain Tainter. Mr. and Mrs. Walstad both died in Menomonie, the former on Nov. 17, 1916, and the latter on July 4, 1920. Mr. and Mrs. Tilleson have been the parents of six children, but have been deprived of three by the hand of death, those deceased being Julia, Lawrence and Arnold. The survivors are: Ernest, now manager of the Wisconsin Telephone Co. at Elsworth, Wis.; and Lawrence (second) and Julia (second), who are residing at home with them. The family are members of Our Saviour's Lutheran Church in Menomonie, Mrs. Tilleson being an active member of the Ladies' Aid Society, of which she served as president for two years.

Hans C. Aale, the owner and operator of the Aale Farm in Sections 14 and 15, town of Elk Mound, was born at Frederickstad, Norway, Oct. 28, 1852, son of Hans Thoreson and Christine Jacobson. Both parents died in Norway. Hans C. was educated in a Lutheran school and confirmed in the Lutheran church of his parish. He grew to manhood in his native land and was there married to Mena Sophia Aale. In 1884 he came to the United States, landing May 17, and locating at Badger Mills, Wis., where for eight years he was engaged in sawmill work. There his wife Mena died in 1888, leaving him with six children. On Sept. 19, 1891, he was united in marriage with Mary Jenson. In 1900 Mr. Aale bought his present farm of 120 acres in Sections 14 and 15, town of Elk Mound, Dunn County. It was an improved farm with about 60 acres broken and with an old set of buildings.

HISTORY OF DUNN COUNTY

The latter he has greatly improved and he now has a fine and comfortable residence: also a basement barn of $34 \ge 60$ feet with a lean-to for cows of $18 \ge 60$ feet. He also built a fine set of out-buildings including a machine-shed, hog house, chicken house and milk house, and has installed an acetylene gas plant for illuminating the residence. He has two drilled wells and on the whole his farm is one of the nicest and best kept farms in the community. As a dairyman he keeps Guernsey cattle with a pure bred sire at the head of his herd. He also raises Poland-China and Chester-White hogs successfully. Mr. Aale conducted the farm himself until 1916, when he rented it to his son George, but he still lives on it and leads an active life. By his two successive wives he has been the father of a large family of children, those by his first wife, Mena Sophia, being as follows: Herman, who is single and resides in California; Mary, now Mrs. Edward Johnson residing in Minnesota; Hannah, who is Mrs. Olaf Dahl of Eau Claire; Carl, unmarried and residing in California; and Helen, now Mrs. Steve Popier of Duluth. Of Mr. Aale's second marriage, to Mary Jenson, the children are: Alma, now Mrs. Harry Davis of Cloquet, Minn.; Martin, who served in the World War and is now in the U. S. Hospital at Mendota; Kari, who was graduated from the Stout Institute and the River Falls State Normal School and is now teaching in Mendota; Ida, also a graduate of River Falls State Normal School and a teacher; Esther, a graduate of the Elk Mound High School and now a teacher in the primary department; Hilda, who is a pupil in the Eau Claire Normal School; Henry, now a patrolman on State Trunk Line No. 40; George, who conducts the home farm; and Ragna, who is residing at home with her parents. Mr. Aale and family are members of Big Elk Creek Congregational Church, in which he holds the office of Deacon.

Hans K. Hanson, a good representative of the important dairy interests of the Northwest, manager and buttermaker of the Rock Falls Creamery Company, was born in Eau Claire County, Wisconsin, May 7, 1886, son of Knute and Betsy (Nelson) Hanson. The parents, who came to the United States from Norway when young people, and single, were married in Eau Claire County, where they engaged in farming, and where they are still living, after having been successful in establishing a good home and rearing six children of their own, besides an adopted child. Their own children were O. K., Hans K., Martin, Andrew, Lena and Emma, the adopted child being Allen. Lena is now Mrs. Leon Jacot, and Emma is Mrs. Martin Simonson. Hans K. Hanson acquired his literary education in the public schools of Eau Claire County, and subsequently entered the dairy department of Wisconsin State University, from which he was graduated with the class of 1907. He then took a position as butter-maker at Drummond, in Bayfield County, Wis., where he remained for three years. During the following year he was at Black River Falls. Then in 1910 he came to Rock Falls, Dunn County, and became butter-maker and manager for the Rock Falls Creamery Co., which position he has since continued to hold. As such he has won a good reputation both as a maker of high grade butter and as a business man, and his services are valued accordingly. Since coming here he has doubled the amount of business done by the creamery, in which he is a stockholder. Mr. Hanson was married Nov. 30, 1913, to Elsie Jackson of Eau Claire County, who was born June 16, 1893, daughter of Rodney and Anna (Burgess) Jackson. Mr. and Mrs. Hanson are members of the Lutheran Church, Mr. Hanson also belonging to the Brotherhood of American Yeomen and the Modern Woodmen of America.

Daniel S. Dodge, a prominent farmer of the town of Spring Brook, was born in Eau Claire, Wis., April 20, 1881, son of Alfonse and Lillie B. (Hutchins) Dodge. The father, who was born in Waldo County, Maine, on Feb. 2, 1847, came with his parents to Richland County, Wisconsin, when seven years of age, and in 1857 he accompanied them to Dunn County, growing to manhood in the town of Spring Brook. At the age of 17 he became a lumberjack in the employ of the Daniel Shaw Lumber Company of Eau Claire, working in the woods and on the river until 1886. He then began farming for himself in the town of Spring Brook, buying the Harshman estate of 240 acres in Sections 7 and 8 and 40 acres in the town of Elk Mound. This place was partly improved and Alfonse Dodge devoted the rest of his life to its further improvement and in time developed it into a fine farm. Here he died on June 14, 1914, being survived by his wife, who passed away nearly ten years later, on April 9, 1924. They were people widely known who stood high in popular estimation and will be remembered favorably in years to come. They had six children, as follows: Daniel S., of the town of Spring Brook; Nellie, who is Mrs. S. F. Rork now living in Bellingham, Wash.; Paul, who was killed in Montana in 1912; Harrison, of North Menomonie; Milfred, a farmer in the town of Menomonie, and Bernham, a farmer in the town of Spring Brook. Daniel S. Dodge acquired a district school education and remaining on the home farm assisting his father until he was 21 years old. In 1902 he went to North Dakota, but after remaining there for a year returned home. In 1905 he went again to North Dakota and took a land claim in McHenry County of 160 acres which he proved up, remaining there 11 years. In 1916 he returned home again and took charge of the home farm which he operated for his mother until her death, when he took over the farm and is now operating it along the same lines as father did except that he is paying more attention to dairying. Mr. Dodge was married in St. Paul, Minn., on April 30, 1916, to Belle Benner, daughter of Henry and Nettie (Lee) Benner, her parents, now deceased, having been early settlers near Connersville, this county. To Mr. and Mrs. Dodge five children have been born: Enid, on July 27, 1917; Dorothy, Dec. 18, 1918; Beverly and Burlie (twins), Aug. 15, 1920; and Mitchell, Sept. 23, 1922. The family are affiliated religiously with the Salem Evangelical Church.

Charles H. Carpenter, who owns and operates successfully one of the finest farms in the town of Peru, is a native of this town, having been born on his father's farm in Section 34 on Dec. 12, 1869. His parents were Charles Z. and Mary E. (Standish) Carpenter, the father a native of New York State and the mother of Vermont. Married at Keyesville, N. Y., they came west in 1868, to Dunn County, Wis., settling on land in the town of Peru in the spring of 1869. The tract was in Section 34 and contained 80 acres of wild timber land, which Chas. Z. Carpenter took as a homestead. He started his improvements by building a log shanty, also log barns for his stock and hay, and then took up the harder work of land clearing. During several of the early years while thus engaged he utilized some of the timber he had to destroy by burning charcoal. In time he bought another tract, containing 120 acres, which was across the line in the town of Lima, Pepin County, and he followed the career of an active and progressive farmer until his death in 1885. His wife is now living with her daughter, Maude, in Eau Claire County. It is worthy of note that Mr. Carpenter's original log shanty is still standing and has the same shingles that were put on it in 1869. Of their ten children, four are now living, namely: Julia, now Mrs. Frank Fast of Eau Claire County; Charles H., subject of this sketch; Maude, who married Emery Thomas and lives in Eau Claire County, and Elizabeth, now Mrs. E. E. Hoover of the town of Rock Creek. Charles H. Carpenter acquired his education in the rural school and in the public schools of Eau Claire. On account of his father's early death and also of that of his elder brother, he was obliged while still quite young to assume the management of the For ten years he rented it out and then in 1900 it became his own home farm. property, he having bought out the interests of the other heirs. Since then he has added two more 40-acre tracts to his holdings. In 1904 he built a comfortable residence and in 1912 a main barn of 34 x 48 feet with 16-foot posts and a cement basement, and installed with patent stanchions. He has also erected a hollow wall silo of 12 x 36 feet, an ice house, a wood house, hen house, and other farm buildings, all well planned and suitably arranged as to position, the house being painted white and the others red, forming a striking contrast. The farm is situated on State Highway No. 85, about halfway between Eau Claire and Durand, with Meridean four miles north by east and Rock Falls seven miles east by north. The lawns, trees and shrubbery near the residence are well situated to throw it into pleasing relief and present with the other buildings a good appearance, and the general aspect of the place gives evidence of energy and thrift, qualities for which Mr. Carpenter is well known in his neighborhood. He has a fine herd of grade Holstein cattle, including a full bred sire, and raises Poland-China and ChesterWhite hogs. He is a stockholder in the Meridean creamery and Durand Telephone Co., and formerly served a term as town assessor. On Dec. 25, 1902, Mr. Carpenter was united in marriage with Dora Brown, and he and his wife are the parents of a son, William W., who was born Aug. 25, 1904, and who is now a skilled and practical young farmer assisting his father.

Ole Hovde, a well known and respected citizen of the town of Peru, who has added to its agricultural resources by building up a good farm, was born in Gudbrandsdalen, Norway, Oct. 8, 1860, son of Öle and Ingeborg (Settern) Hovde. Both the parents died in Norway where they spent their lives. Ole as a boy attended public school there and was 24 years old when he came to America in 1884, first locating at Eau Claire. Thence he came to Dunn County, entering the employ of Peter Gilbertson of Peru, for whom he worked five years, afterwards renting land from him in the town of Peru, which he farmed for two years. At the end of that time he bought his present farm of 120 acres, of which 40 acres are in Section 26 and 80 in Section 35. It was an old farm with poor buildings, but some of the land had been broken and Mr. Hovde started in to improve it. The 33 years he has since lived on this place have been well spent and the results are plain to be seen in the fertile and attractive farm that meets the eye of the passer-by today. Some of the most important improvements on it have been effected within recent years. In 1904 Mr. Hovde built a residence of eight rooms and in 1909 a good modern barn of 32 x 50 feet, and his granary, machine shed and other buildings are well and substantially constructed. Ninety acres of his farm are now under cultivation, the balance being in timber and pasture. The cattle are grade Guernseys with a pure bred sire in the herd and Duroc-Jersey hogs are also raised. The farm is situated on State Trunk Highway No. 85 and is 11 miles from Durand. Mr. Hovde is a stockholder in the Meridean creamery, a cooperative concern, and the Rock Falls and Meridean Telephone Co. He was married in April, 1890, to Inga Hanson, who was born in Gudbrandsdalen, Norway, on Nov. 28, 1867, and who came to this country in 1889, settling in Meridean. Mr. and Mrs. Hovde are the parents of three children: Otto M., Margaret K. and Ida H. Otto M., born Oct. 14, 1893, has remained on the home farm assisting his father. He married Esther Brunn of Menomonie and they have one child, Gilbert O., who was born May 2, 1923. Margaret K., born Aug. 7, 1898, married Lawrence Brack and they live in St. Paul. Ida H., born Sept. 19, married Sever Bruberg and resides in Caryville. Their children are Mildred and Leslie. Mr. Hovde and his family are members of the Lutheran Church and are people who stand well in the community.

Philip G. Melrose, who after a career of some 37 years as a farmer in the town of Rock Creek, is now living practically retired from active work in the village of Rock Falls, was born at Savannah, Ga., Feb. 3, 1860, son of John and Elizabeth (Nelson) Melrose. The parents were natives of Berwickshire, Scotland who came to America when young people and were married at St. Augustine, Florida. Their sljourn in the far South came to an end in July, 1860, when one could already hear the mutterings of the coming war tempest which was to rend the nation in twain for a time. Mr. and Mrs. Melrose had seen something of the peculiar institution of slavery and in the questions which grew out of it their sympathies were with the To live safely in the South in those days, a man had to be Southern in north. sentiment; moreover, the enervating climate was not suited to their hardy Scottish natures, so they came north to Wisconsin and to Dunn County for a short stay, as the wife and children stopped for a while in the village of Rock Falls until Mr. Melrose could build a log house on the wild land which he had purchased in the town of Albany, Pepin County. This was an 80-acre tract through which ran Rock Creek, and on the banks of that stream Mr. Melrose built his cabin, he and his family taking up their abode in it. He then began the hard routine of pioneer farming, making gradual progress in prosperity, adding in time other land to his place until he had 300 acres, and also in time erecting good frame buildings to take the place of the primitive log structures, and his place was finally developed into a fine piece of agricultural property. But Mrs. Elizabeth Melrose, the faithful and loving wife and mother in the family, lived to see but few of these changes, for in the fall of 1865 she passed away, leaving her husband and five children to mourn Of these the eldest is Jane, who has always remained at home to care for her loss. the household and is now the owner of the home farm. The other children are: Euphemia, who married George Silvernail and lives in North Dakota; Philip G. of Rock Falls; Margaret, now Mrs. Frank Fox of Durand; and Belle, who became the wife of James Fox but is now deceased. Philip G. Melrose was educated in the public schools and until the age of 30 years remained at home assisting his father. During the latter part of the time he was also breaking and developing a farm of his own of 160 acres, which he bought in 1882 in the town of Rock Creek, Dunn County, and he cleared a portion of it, also building a good residence and a basement barn of 32 x 80 feet. In 1891, being married in that year, he took up his residence on it and continued the improvements. When he had got pretty far along with them he bought another 80-acre tract, which gave him 240 acres, of which he made a fine farm, in time erecting other buildings, among them a large machine shed and a As a general farmer and dairyman he made an excellent record and continued silo. operations until 1919, when, having saved a competence, he sold his farm and took up his residence in the village of Rock Falls. He keeps a team and raises poultry for the early market, but is otherwise retired. He is a stockholder in the Rock Falls Creamery Co. The marriage of Mr. Melrose, already briefly alluded to, occurred Dec. 16, 1891, united him with Mary L. Brown, who was born in the town of Durand, Pepin County, Dec. 18, 1859, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Brown, the mother's maiden name being Marie L. Bass. The parents, who were from New York State, had settled at an early date in southern Wisconsin, whence in 1854 they moved to Pepin County, taking land in the town of Durand. There Nathan Brown died in 1878, being survived by his wife, who is still living, though now well advanced in years, making her home with her daughter, Mrs. D. N. King of Meridean, Dunn The children in the Brown family were: Newton, now in Wyoming; County. Wallace, of California; Anna M., wife of D. N. King of Meridean; Mary L., wife of the subject of this sketch; Ernest, of Wyoming; Parke, of Grantsburg, Wis.; and Harry of Minneapolis. Mr. and Mrs. Melrose have been the parents of two children: Dale D., born Oct. 3, 1895, and John P. V., born July 19, 1900, the latter residing at home. Dale D., who enlisted for war service in the 361st Ambulance Corps, died at Camp Lewis, Wash., Dec. 18, 1917. The Melrose family are Presbyterians in religious faith. Mr. Melrose belongs to the order of Modern Woodmen of America and Mrs. Melrose to the auxilliary order of Royal Neighbors.

Sam D. Mishler, a well known farmer of Section 31, town of Peru, who has had a notable career in agriculture both here and elsewhere, was born in Cashocton County, Indiana, Sept. 30, 1860, son of Joseph and Rebecca (Moyer) Mishler. The father was born in Canada, June 25, 1822, and the mother in Pennsylvania, Sept. 19, 1826. Married in Indiana, they came in 1873 to the town of Dunn, Dunn County, Wis., where they bought 260 acres of land and there begun farming; but the flood of 1880 completely destroyed their farm, leaving nothing but sand bars. They then moved across the Chippewa River into the town of Peru, where Joseph Mishler bought 202 acres of farm land, and there he started all over again, in course of time building up another fine farm, on which place he died June 12, 1907. His wife, surviving him, passed away on April 20, 1911. They were the parents of a large family of 13 children, of whom the five now living are: Deskin, of Menomonie; Sam D., of the town of Peru; John, who runs the ferry at old Meridean and is also owner of a good farm in the town of Peru; Mary, who is Mrs. Sam Barnes of Birchwood; and Hattie J., now Mrs. Albert Tuttle of Buffalo County, Wisconsin. It is worthy of additional mention that Mr. Mishler and his son Joel (who died May 4, 1883) for four years while living in the town of Dunn conducted the old stage coach and mail route between Dunnville and Menomonie. Sam D. Mishler was educated in the rural schools and remained at home with his parents until 25 years He then started out for himself and for the next five years was employed old. in logging camps, spending his summers, however, on the home farm, which he rented at the end of that period, subsequently conducting it until two years before his father's death. Then he spent a year operating a rented farm in the town of Rock Creek, after which he spent two years at Gilmanton in Buffalo County. He then bought a farm in the town of Lima, Pepin County, which he conducted for a year and a half, when he sold out and returned to the home farm, where he re-At the end of that time he bought a farm of 330 acres in the town mained for a year. of Peru, situated in Sections 29, 30 and 32, where he carried on general farming until Then he sold that farm to Arthur Asher, buying his present farm of 95 1920. acres of Red Cedar in the town of Peru. Here he carries on general farming successfully, and in addition to this place he owns 35 acres of timber land in Pepin County. For many years Mr. Mishler has been a member of the school board of his district and for a great many years has served as road commissioner, performing the duties of each office in a capable and satisfactory manner. He was married Aug. 18, 1894, to Lucy Patrow of Durand, who was born Feb. 19, 1877. He and his wife are the parents of four children; Elmer, born Aug. 2, 1895; William Henry, born Nov. 21, 1897, and Joseph, born Nov. 6, 1905. Elmer, now a farmer in Pepin County, first married Rachel Frank, who died in January, 1921, after bearing him two children, Doris and Ruth. He subsequently married Emma Doan, of which union there is one child, Vera May. William Henry, who is a railroad man living at Oelwein, Iowa, married Merle Dalrymple and has one child, Betty Jean. Violet I., born Aug. 24, 1896, died in November, 1897. Joseph is residing at home with his parents. Mr. Mishler and his family attend the Methodist Episcopal Church.

Daniel W. Andrews, proprietor of a flour and grist mill in the village of Rock Falls, and one of the leading business men of this village, was born on a farm in the town of Rock Creek, on Dec. 12, 1872, son of Samuel and Mary (Melrose) Andrews, the parents, as elsewhere stated, being pioneers of this locality. As a boy he at-tended school in the village of Rock Falls and until reaching the age of 27 helped his parents to improve the home farm, on which they had settled some eight years before his birth. It was in March, 1899, that he started in his present business, coming to Rock Falls and buying his present mill, with all contingent rights, including a residence property, from Bump & Churchill, and he has since been engaged in operating it, having built up quite an extensive business. He has rebuilt and remodelled the mill and doubled its capacity, increasing its capacity to 50 barrels per day. His "Big Loaf" brand of flour has a reputation which extends throughout the state, and he also manufactures rye, buckwheat and graham flour, and does a large business in the grinding of grist. The product of his mill is manufactured from local grains, and as an additional occupation he buys and sells grain. In 1923 he built a new dam of concrete cement, which has not only increased the power of his mill but is also an ornament to the village. He is also active in other local. enterprises, in which he has a personal financial interest. He was one of the organizers of the Rock Falls Creamery Company, of which he has been the treasurer since 1910, and he helped to organize the Meridean State Bank of Meridean, and is a director of and stockholder in it. He is a member of the order of Beavers, and has rendered public service in connection with the affairs of local government, having been treasurer of the town of Rock Creek since 1901. His activities in these various directions mark him out as one of the leading citizens in the southeastern part of Dunn County, one who is a potent factor in its growth and development and whose word can always be relied on. Mr. Andrews was married April 3, 1895, to Rena M. Kepler of the town of Rock Creek, and he and his wife are the parents of four children: Ethel M., born May 14, 1898, who is now Mrs. William Hendricks of Eau Claire; Harold Alfred, born April 4, 1901, who married Frances Hendricks and is assisting his father in the mill; Mildred P., born March 17, 1906, and Doris E., born April 24, 1916, the two youngest residing at home with their parents. The family attend the Union church in the village. In 1916 Mr. Andrews tore down the old house which he bought with the mill and erected a fine modern residence.

Samuel Andrews, an early settler in the town of Rock Creek, but now deceased, was a native of England who came to this country when young. In the state of Ohio, he was married to Mary Melrose, a native of Scotland and in 1864 they came to Dunn County, Wisconsin, Mr. Andrews buying 260 acres of wild land in the town of Rock Creek. During their first year in the county, however, they resided in the village of Rock Falls, Mr. Andrews in the meanwhile being engaged in making a clearing and putting up a log house and barns. That accomplished, he and his wife toop up their residence on the land and began the life of pioneer farmers, enduring all hardships cheerfully in the effort to make a home. This was a task finally accomplished, though not without hard work, and in time the Andrews farm was recognized as one of the finest in the town of Rock Creek. It was also much larger than at first, as Mr. Andrews bought 40 acres in addition to his original purchase of 260, making a 300-acre farm. He resided there for nearly half a century dying on Nov. 6, 1912. His wife, who survived him, died Sept. 17, 1924. They had four children: William a resident of Rock Falls and retired; George, of Mt. Vernon, Wash.; John, of Walla Walla, Wash., and Daniel W., of Rock Falls.

William Andrews, a retired farmer residing at Rock Falls, was born in Cuyahoga County, Ohio, July 27, 1859, son of Samuel and Mary (Melrose) Andrews. As a young child he came to Dunn County, Wisconsin, with his parents in 1864. He was educated in the district school in the town of Rock Falls and remained at home with his parents until 21 years old. He then went to Chippewa Falls and learned the wheelwright's trade, which he followed there for four years. He then quit that occupation and for the next ten years followed the carpenter's trade. In 1889 he went to Snohanish County, Washington, where he spent ten years in the woods engaged in logging. At the end of that time, or in 1899, he returned to Rock Falls, Wis., to take charge of the home farm, and after his father's death, which occurred in 1912, he continued to operate the farm until 1920, in which he sold it, and has since lived retired in Rock Falls, his invalid mother residing with him. For the last five years he has been assessor of the town of Rock Creek. He attends the Union church in the village.

I. E. Brack, of Meridean, dealer in general merchandise, including farm produce, implements, and automobiles, and who is interested in other local business enterprises, was born in Norway, July 18, 1865, son of Iver and Anna Brack. He attended school in his native land, where he spent the first 21 years of his life. Emigrating to the United States in 1886, he landed at Boston and came west to "old" Meridean, Wis., where for one year he was employed in the sawmills. He then went to Drummond, Bayfield County, Wis., where he worked in sawmills for nine years. Returning to Meridean, he bought the small store in which he started mercantile business, and which he has twice rebuilt and enlarged until he has converted it into a store building measuring 64 x 65 feet. As a part of his general trade he handles everything in implements used on the farm, including the Primrose and De Laval cream separators; also Ford automobiles and tractors and the International trucks and tractors, together with the Louden barn equipment, and his business is now well established and on a sound basis. Among his other activities and interests, he is a stockholder in the Rock Falls-Meridean Telephone Co., vice president of the Meridean State Bank and treasurer and manager of the Meridean Cooperative Creamery Co. Since 1896 he has served as postmaster of the village, and for 20 years he was treasurer of the town of Peru. Mr. Brack was married in South Dakota, June 14, 1898, to Josephine Christianson, who died in 1901, and by whom he had one daughter, Alice, who is now teaching school in Racine. On June 14, 1903, Mr. Brack married Thorine Waddal, of which union four children have been born, Irvin, Evelyn, Jovce and Arvid. The family are members of the United Lutheran Church. In 1909 Mr. Brack's parents came to America and settled at Meridean, where the father is still living, at the age of 92 years, the mother having died in 1914. Mr. Brack is one of the active and successful business men of Dunn County and has built up a reputation for ability and integrity that is widely recognized.

Severt B. Brumberg, a good type of the successful Northwest farmer, operating in the town of Rock Creek, was born in Dane County, Wisconsin, Dec. 30, 1882, son of Henry and Kari (Fadness) Brumberg. The parents also born in Dane County, the father in 1850 and the mother in 1847, were married there. They came to Dunn County in 1894, taking a farm at or near "old" Meridean, in Section 6, town of Rock Creek, which Henry Brumberg operated until 1917, when he sold it. The two following years were spent by him in Oregon, after which he returned to the town of Rock Creek, Dunn County, Wis., and has since made his home with his son, Severt B. His wife Kari died in 1908. They had seven children: Anna, born Oct. 25, 1875, who died Nov. 12, 1900; Knute, born April 10, 1877; Olaus, born April 11, 1879, who died May 20, 1918; Cornell, born Sept. 9, 1881, and Severt B., the date of whose nativity has been already given. Severt B. Brumberg as a boy attended school in Dane County, and, after coming with his parents to Dunn County, pursued his studies further in the rural schools here. He grew to manhood on the home farm, assisting his father until 1908, in which year he started in for himself, renting a farm of 100 acres in Sections 20 and 21. In 1910 he bought it and it is the one he now owns and operates. He has remodeled the residence, and in 1913 erected a fine stock barn of 32×50 feet with full basement, installed with the Lowden and James patent equipment. He has also put up two silos, one of cement block construction, measuring 10×30 feet, and the other of concrete, measuring 8 x 30 feet, and has erected a full set of out-buildings of substantial construction. His fields are well tilled and his fences in good condition, and as a general farmer, dairyman and stock-raiser he has made steady progress. He has a fine herd of Holstein cattle, some of which are registered stock and the rest high grade, with a pure bred sire in the herd. He also raises a number of Duroc-Jersey hogs each year. In addition to all this, he is a stockholder in the Rock Falls & Meridean Telephone Company, and for six years he served as clerk of School District No. 5. Mr. Brumberg was married May 16, 1909, to Agnes Hyson, who was born at Porter's Mills, Eau Claire County, Wis., Aug. 23, 1889, and of this union five children have been born: Alice, Dec. 24, 1910; Eldora, March 9, 1913; Stuart, July 6, 1915; Otis, July 19, 1919, and Morris, Nov. 2, 1922. The family are affiliated by membership with the Meridean and Rock Falls Lutheran Church.

Rasmus H. Dahl, a resident of Dunn County for 40 years, and prominent in the town of Peru, where he has a good agricultural record, was born at Shager, Gudbrandsdalen, Norway, Aug. 28, 1860, son of Mr. and Mrs. Hans Rasmusson, his mother's maiden name having been Anna Swensdatter. The parents were born in the same part of Norway as himself, and the father died in that country in 1885, the mother coming to America in the following year and subsequently making her home with the subject of this sketch until her death in 1892. They had in all a family of eight children, five of whom died in Norway, the other three, who came to the United States, being: Swen Hanson, now deceased; Ingeborg, now Mrs. Peter Robertson of Buckley, Wash., and Rasmus H. of the town of Peru, Dunn County. Rasmus H. Dahl as a youth attended school in Norway and remained in that country until 22 years old. Then in 1882 he emigrated, locating at old Meridean, in Dunn County, Wis. During the summers he worked in the sawmill there, residing with Robert Robertson, and in the winters he worked in the pine woods. On July 12, 1885, he was married to Thora Tradet who was born in the same parish in Norway as himself on Sept. 12, 1857, and came to America in 1883. Mr. and Mrs. Dahl now secured a home by themselves and he continued his activities in the lumber industry until 1887, when he began his career as a farmer. The land he first bought was a tract of 160 acres in Section 19, town of Rock Creek, on which stood a house. Mr. Dahl erected a set of good buildings and farmed the place until 1896, when he sold it and moved to the Tyrone Farm of 920 acres in the town of Peru, which he conducted for 24 years, or until 1920. He then bought his present farm of 40 acres in Section 15, town of Peru, on which was a good resi-The other buildings, however, Mr. Dahl has put up himself, including a dence. fine basement barn, erected in 1923, and measuring 24 x 32 feet in ground plan; a large chicken house, and various other out-buildings. He has also cleared and developed more of the land, now having a fine farm, well fenced and in first class condition. He keeps Holstein grade cattle and Duroc-Jersey hogs, also White Wyandotte poultry. Mr. and Mrs. Dahl have been the parents of eight children, five of whom are now deceased, the record in brief being as follows: Oleanna, born Jan. 15, 1891, is now Mrs. Ole H. Shager, of the town of Rock Creek and the mother of six children, Rosa L., Edna T., Elsie L., Olaf E., Doris T. and Robert H. Anna Karolina, born Aug. 14, 1892, is Mrs. Fred H. Fry of Winona, where Mr. Fry is engaged in the film finishing business, also conducting a variety store; they have two children, Ruth and Owen. Swen, born Dec. 14, 1893, is in Chicago. Hans, born March 29, 1888, died on the Tyrone farm in 1911. Ole, born Jan. 18, 1890, was drowned in the Chippewa River, June 17, 1897, while swimming. Rosa, born Feb. 6, 1898, died Jan. 7, 1905. Robert and Tena died in infancy.

Julius Fedie, a representative farmer of the town of Peru, who has made his way in the world through industry backed by intelligence, was born in Pepin County, Wis., March 21, 1871, son of Frederick and Anna (Keins) Fedie. Austria was the native country of the parents, where in the year 1870, they were married on a Tuesday and started for America on the following Friday. On arriving in this country, they settled first in Trempealeau County, Wisconsin; but after remaining there one summer they moved to Pepin County, buying land in the town of Lima, where they developed a farm. In time Mr. Fedie sold that farm and bought another one of 80 acres in the town of Lima, on which he is still living, it being now, however, a farm of 140 acres. Mrs. Anna Fedie died when her son Julius was nine years old, or about 1880. Julius Fedie acquired his education in the rural school and remained on the home farm until 16 years old. He then began to support himself, working on the railroad, on farms, and at various other kinds of labor until reaching the age of 24. Having by that time saved a little money, he bought 160 acres of land in Section 35, town of Peru, a tract on which a few acres had been cleared, the rest of the land being mostly covered with heavy white oak timber. There was also an old shack on the place. Mr. Fedie has now spent 25 years in developing this farm and has achieved excellent results. He has 115 acres cleared and under cultivation, the rest being still in timber. He has fenced the entire farm and among the buildings he has erected are a fine ten-rocm residence, installed with a pipeless furnace, built in 1920; and a substantial basement barn, measuring 34 x 56 feet in ground plan, which he put up in 1906. He is engaged in general and dairy farming, keeping grade cattle, and is a stockholder in the Meridean creamery. He also raises Poland-China hogs. Mr. Fedie has long been recognized as one of the leading and most reliable citizens of his town, and about 1909 he was elected a member of the board of supervisors, in which position he served for seven years. Then he was off the board for five years, but in 1921 was elected again and is now serving. He is also school treasurer of Joint District No. 3, of Lima and Peru. In religion he is a Catholic. On Nov. 6, 1896, he was united in marriage with Mary Anibas of the town of Lima, Pepin County, who was born in Austria, Sept. 6, 1874, and who came to this country in 1882. The children born of this marriage are nine in number, as follows: Henry, born July 7, 1897, who is a carpenter, unmarried; Mary, who died in infancy; Rosa, born Aug. 19, 1900, residing on the home farm; Richard, born Jan. 31, 1902, who married Minnie Bichler and is a farmer in Pepin County, having one child, Luverne Walter; Victor, born March 26, 1905; Hubert, Nov. 2, 1908; Carl, Oct. 22, 1910; Alfred, June 28, 1912; Julius, Ir., Nov. 29, 1915, and Irene, Aug. 2, 1919, all the six last mentioned residing on the home farm. The Fedie family is one with a reputation for industry and good citizenship.

Mathias Hanson, for years a progressive and successful farmer in the town of Peru, but who is now deceased, was born in this town Dec. 13, 1878, son of Ole and Guri Hanson. The parents were born in Gudbrandsdalen, Norway, and came to America in the early 50's, settling in Dunn County, Wisconsin, Ole Hanson being one of the very first settlers in the town of Peru, in 1865 buying land in Section 12. Building a log house and log barn, he began the task of developing a farm, a work in which he was engaged for many years and in which he finally succeeded. He added to his holdings until he had 610 acres, all in the same town. A certain portion of his land was known as the Rumsey Landing Farm, being situated on Section 1, which was on the south side of the Chippewa River, just opposite the landing. Ole Hanson died on his farm in 1897, having survived his good wife, who had passed

They had been the parents of eight children, of whom only three away in 1881. were living at the time of Mr. Hanson's death-two sons and one daughter. The real property was then divided between the two sons, the daughter receiving an equivalent in money. Mathias Hanson acquired his education in the rural school near his home and as he grew up became his father's assistant or the farm, remaining with his parents instead of leaving home to seek his fortune elsewhere. On his father's death he inherited 330 acres of the home farm, and carried on agriculture there in time making further improvements to keep up with modern ideas in regard to farm management. Thus, in 1913 he built a fine cement block residence, though a year later he suffered a misfortune in the loss of a good barn which was struck by lightning and burned down. In 1915 he erected the present barn of 32 x 70 feet, with full basement, and at different times he built other good and substantial buildings, and was successfully engaged both in general and dairy farming until his death on Nov. 24, 1916. He was a stockholder in the Meridean Co-operative Creamery, and was a man of solid worth and reliable character, esteemed by all who knew him. Mr. Hanson was married April 21, 1905, to Oleanna Ladum, who was born at old Meridean, Dunn County, March 27, 1882, daughter of Thomas and Marit (Peterson) Ladum. Her parents, like those of Mr. Hanson, were born at Gudbrandsdalen, Norway; they came to this country in 1873, settling at old Meridean. Dunn County, Wis., where Mr. Ladum, who was a shoemaker, followed his trade and by industry and honest dealing became well and favorably known over a wide range of territory. He was thus occupied for the rest of his life, except for two years, during which he operated the Meridean ferry. He served acceptably in school and town office, and his death on Nov. 9, 1901, was an event deeply regretted. His wife, who has now been a resident of Dunn County for 52 years, is living with her daughter, Mrs. Mathias Hanson. After Mrs. Hanson's death Mrs. Hanson continued to carry on the farm until two years ago, and still resides on it, keeping a few cows, hogs and chickens, but renting out most of the land. She has two daughters, Gladys Myra and Florence Edna. Gladys Myra, born Sept. 22, 1906, is a graduate of the Eau Claire High School and the Dunn County Normal School, and is now teaching the Meridean school, residing with her mother. Florence Edna, born Oct. 2, 1907, is attending the Eau Claire High School. The family are members of the Lutheran Church. The children in the Ladum family, including Mrs. Hanson and her brothers and sisters, were as follows: Clara, now Mrs. C. J. Skamser of Colorado Springs, Colo.; Pauline, who is Mrs. J. W. Greathouse of Seattle, Wash.; Oleanna (widow of Mathias Hanson); Herman, now in the United States army stationed at Vancouver, Wash.; Matilda, who is Mrs. W. S. Baldwin of Atlanta, Ga.; and Albert, of Tacoma, Wash.

George Hubbard, a substantial farmer of the town of Peru, who has resided in this town for 68 years and is one of the best known citizens in the southern part of Dunn County, was born in the town of Oakfield, Fond du Lac County, Nov. 24, 1855. His parents were Hamilton W. and Margaret (Innis) Hubbard, natives of New York State, who were also married in that state, coming west to Fond du Lac County, Wis., at an early day, and taking a farm. Hamilton W. Hubbard for a while also conducted a mercantile business. It was in 1856 that he moved with his family to Dunn County, which had been set off only two years before from Chippewa and included what is now Pepin County. Buying land in the town of Peru, he started to develop a farm, adding to his possessions from time to time until he To the locality in which it was situated he gave the name of owned 1600 acres. Tyrone, and his place was known far and wide as the Tyrone Farm. An early plat book in the register of deeds' office in the court house at Menomonie shows a plat of Tyrone made in 1858, the location shown being in Sections 21 and 28, on the line of the C. M. & St. Paul Railway. Being such an early settler in the towna pioneer, in fact,—and a man of enterprise and ability, Mr. Hubbard was naturally prominent as a citizen. In addition to his farming operations, he did quite a logging business, operating a sawmill on his farm. He served a number of times in public office, for some time as chairman of the town board. His career in the town of Peru covered some 38 years, or until the death of his wife Margaret, which occurred Dec. 29, 1890. He then sold out his property and went south to the state of Virginia, where he married again, afterwards removing to Michigan, in which state he died June 10, 1909. George Hubbard, who was a babe less than a year old when his parents settled in the town of Peru, grew to manhood on their farm at Tyrone, and as a boy attended rural school. At the age of 25 years he started out for himself as a farmer buying 80 acres of land in Section 28, town of Peru, a wild tract which he at once started to improve, erecting a set of buildings, and he has since added to his landed possessions until he now owns 280 acres, 160 of which are in Section 28, 40 in Section 29 and 80 in Section 32. Always a hard worker, he has made good material progress and his integrity of character has won him friends. He follows general farming ano dairy, raising corn and other grain, also hogs, and is a stockholder in the cooperative elevator at Durand and in the Durand Telephone Though he has been tendered public office at different times, he has Exchange. always declined, feeling that his farm and home needed him most. Mr. Hubbard was married Dec. 5, 1880, to Josephine Gibson, who was born in Jackson County, Wisconsin, May 1, 1863. He and his wife are the parents of three children, Milton D., Stella M. and Nellie Belle. Milton D., who was born Aug. 27, 1881, is now a substantial farmer in the town of Eau Galle and a supervisor of that town. He married Margaret Olson and they have five children, Velma M., Elsie M., Josephine E., Mildred M. and James George. Stella M., born Feb. 1, 1883, is the wife of George L. Miles of St. Paul and the mother of two children, Ila L. and Alta I. Nellie Belle, born Feb. 26, 1885, is now Mrs. Charles E. Mishler of Eau Claire. Wis., and the mother of two children, Fern B. and Merle M.

Martin Larson, who is engaged in general agriculture in the town of Wilson, Section 11, was born in Norway, June 29, 1866, son of Arne and Anna Marie (Anderson) Larson. The parents were born in Soluer, Norway, where they were engaged in farming until they came to the United States in 1868, settling in Eau Claire, Wis., where Arne Larson worked in the mills that summer. He then came with his family to Mencmonie, entering the employ of Knapp, Stout & Co., for whom he worked that winter in the woods and the next summer in sawmills. Then coming to Colfax, Dunn County, he bought for $100, 80 acres of land in the town of Colfax, built a log house, and a log barn with a hay roof, and began clearing the land with the aid of his oxen. After living on that place five years he sold it and moved to the town of Wilson, taking a homestead of 160 acres in Section 13, the tract being covered with brush. He and his family were the first settlers in that section. Mr. Larson put up the usual log buildings, later enlarging the house by a frame addition and siding the log part. In time he got 150 acres under the plow, and he and his wife spent their last years there, he dying in 1897 and she in They were the parents of seven children, of whom five are now living; 1909. As there was no school in the vicinity at that time, he was unable to obtain an education until he was over 15 years old. He remained at home helping his father and acquiring a good practical knowledge of agriculture. When he was 17 he began working in Chippewa County, being thus employed during the winters. For five years he traveled in the West and South, following various occupations, working in the woods, in harvest fields at threshing, and on a steamboat on the Mississippi River, and running rafts of logs and lumber to St. Louis or other markets. On the death of his father in 1897 he went to live with his grandmother, who had taken the home stead in Section 11, town of Wilson that is his present farm, as she willed it to him after he had taken care of her until she died. He has cleared the land and erected a house, barn and other buildings, and has 70 acres under the plow. He is engaged in general farming and dairying, having a herd of Guernsey grade cattle, and raises Duroc-Jersey hogs. He is a stockholder in the Farmers' Store at Bloomer. At times Mr. Larson has rendered public service in an official capacity. He was for one year a member of the Wilson town board of supervisors, served 20 years as road commissioner, was constable two years, and treasurer of the school board of his district for three years, and he has always performed his full duty as a citizen and won the respect of his fellow townsmen. He was married in the town of Wilson in April, 1892, by Ira Bremer, J. P., to Denna Johnson, daughter of John and Julia Johnson, her parents, natives of Norway, having been residents of Polk County, Wis., but both are now deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Larson, the latter of whom died in 1907, had four children, Arthur, Julia, Jesse and Anna Marie, all residing at home but Arthur, who lives in Barron County.

Olof Olson, manager of the Meridean Lumber & Fuel Co., of Meridean, was born in the town of Rock Čreek, Dunn County, Aug. 18, 1870, son of Martinus and Lena (Wagnild) Olson. The parents were natives of Norway, in which country they were married. In 1866 Martinus Olson, leaving his family behind, came to the United States to establish a new home, locating first in Eau Claire, Wis., where he remained a short time. He then came to old Meridean, finding employment in Later he bought an 80-acre farm in the town of Rock Creek, now the sawmill. known as the Fossum farm, and, having sent for his family in 1868, he settled down to agricultural work, operating that farm until 1876. He then sold it and purchased another in the town of Peru-now known as the J. Stevens farm-and that he operated until 1905. In that year he retired, he and his wife taking up their residence in the village of Meridean, where Mrs. Lena Olson died on March 14, 1921. He survived her but a little over a year, passing away in May, 1922. Mr. and Mrs. Martinus Olson were the parents of six children: Olof, of Meridean; Sophia, now Mrs. Christ Olson of Coeur d'Alene, Idaho; Martin, of Iron Mountain, Wis.; Emma, who is Mrs. Eugene Marquis of Glasgow, Mont.; Anton, of the town of Rock Creek; and Sever, who is in California. Olof as a boy attended district school in the town of Peru, after which for nine years he worked in the woods and in sawmills. He then purchased the old home farm, which he operated until 1920, and during that period he was one of the prominent men of his town, serving frequently or constantly in public office. He was town assessor for six years and chairman of the town board for 12 years. By virtue of the latter office he was also a member of the county board and as such served on many important committees, thus taking an active and prominent part in the government of the county. He has been manager of the Meridean Lumber & Fuel Co. since the fall of 1920. He is a stockholder in and a director of the Meridean State Bank and a stockholder in the Meridean Cooperative Creamery. On June 10, 1893, Mr. Olson was married in Hudson, Wis., to Inga Johnsgard, and he and his wife have been the parents of one child, Melvin, who was born Nov. 21, 1895. The latter married Inga Fossum and has two children, Dorothy and Daniel D. The son Melvin is now operating his parent's farm. The family are members of the United Lutheran Church in Meridean.

Anton M. Olson, proprietor of Sunnyside Farm, in Section 16, town of Rock Creek, and who at the present time is serving as chairman of the town board of supervisors, was born in the town of Spring Brook, Dunn County, Wis., March 10, 1877, son of Martinus and Oleana (Wagnild) Olson. Martinus Olson was mill foreman there for the Eau Claire Lumber Co. His next move was to rent a farm in the town of Rock Creek, which is now known as the Fossum Farm and which he operated until 1876. In 1877 he moved to the town of Spring Brook, where until 1879 he operated rented farms. In 1879 he bought a farm in the town of Peru, which he operated until 1905, and which is now known as the J. Stevens farm. He then retired, and the rest of his life was spent in Meridean, where his wife died on March 14, 1921, and he May 2, 1922. He then bought his present farm in Section 16, town of Rock Creek, containing at that time about 40 acres of land. The buildings were poor, and a good deal of intelligent work was necessary to make a good farm of the place. This, however, Mr. Olson has done. He has doubled the size of the farm by purchasing another 40 acres of land; has remodeled and partly rebuilt the residence; in 1914 built a fine dairy barn of 34 x 36 feet, with basement and installed with the West Bend patent equipment and drinking cups; erected a fine cement block-block silo, and installed water works for the house and barn. He has a good herd of grade Holstein cattle, with a pure bred While living in the town of Peru Mr. Olson served three years as a member of sire. the town board, and after coming to the town of Rock Creek he was town assessor for one term. At the spring election of 1924 he was elected chairman of the town board, thereby becoming a member of the county board, an honor which shows that he is a man in whom his fellow townsmen have confidence. For the past five years he has been superintendent of state and county road work in the town of Rock Mr. Olson was married in 1899, to Paulina Olson, who was born in the town Creek. of Rock Creek, May 7, 1877. They were born as follows: Cornelia Olivia, Nov. 23, 1899; Mabel Adeline, Dec. 24, 1901; Ellen Sophia, Aug. 19, 1903; Palmer Andrew, April 21, 1906; Florence Lucille, September 12, 1908, and Alvin Otis, April 18, 1913. Cornelia Olivia is now Mrs. John J. Sneen of the town of Spring Brook and is the mother of one child, Jerome Arnold. Mabel Adeline is living in Eau Claire. Ellen Sophia, who was graduated from the Dunn County Normal class c 1920, is now engaged in teaching. Palmer Andrew is assisting his father on the farm, and the two others, Florence and Alvin O., are also at home. Mr. Olson and his family are members of the Rock Creek and Meridean congregation of the Lutheran church.

Frank W. Rowe, city clerk of Menomonie, was born in Pomar, Germany, Feb. 28, 1864, and was seven years old when he came to Menomonie, Wis., where he has since resided. After arriving here he attended the local schools, subsequently taking a business course in the commercial college at Winona, Minn., and then entering Northwestern University at Watertown, from which he was graduated in 1886. During the next nine months he taught school at Hartland. Then coming to Menomonie, he assumed charge of the parochial school of St. Paul's Evangelical Lutheran Church, which he taught for 18 years, when he resigned to take up his duties as city clerk. This position, to which he was first elected by a large majority vote, he has held since April, 1904. In politics he is a Republican: Mr. Rowe married Mallwina Pepper of Winona, Minn. He and his wife have been the parents of six children, namely: Edna, Hannah, Walter, Gerhart, Edgar and George, of whom Gerhart is now deceased.

Walter J. Rowe, one of Dunr County's progressive young business men, cashier of the Meridean State Bank, of Meridean, was born in Menomonie, Wis., June 24, 1897, son of Frank W. and Mallwina (Pepper) Rowe. He was educated in the grade and high schools of Menomonie, being graduated from the latter with the class of 1915. He was then employed in Milwaukee for one year as inventory clerk by the Gueder, Paeschke, Frye Company. On quitting the employ of that concern he enrolled as a student in the Metropolitan Business College of Milwaukee and spent one year in pursuing commercial studies to better qualify him for a business career. On Jan. 1, 1918, he became teller in the First National Bank of Menomonie, and not long afterwards was appointed assistant cashier. He remained in the employ of that institution until Oct. 23, 1920, at which time he was offered and accepted the position of cashier of the Meridean State Bank, in which he is now serving, being also a stockholder in the bank. He is also treasurer of the Rock Falls-Meridean Telephone Co., and is an important factor in the business life of the community in which he has made his home, and where he has numerous friends. Mr. Rowe was married April 21, 1924, in Wabasha, Minn., to Geneva M. Petersen, of Bloomer, Wis., daughter of A. B. and Caroline (Frederickson) Petersen. Her parents are now residents of Bloomer, Wis.

Louis Stever, a retired farmer and highly esteemed citizen of Section 26, town of Peru, was born in Trondhjem Stiff, Norway, Aug. 1, 1846, son of Engebrit and Elle (Peterson) Stever. Both parents spent their lives in Norway. Louis, after attending school in his native land, learned the shoemaker's trade, which he followed Then in 1868 he emigrated to the United States and to Dunn for five years. County, Wisconsin, locating at Downsville, where he entered the employ of Knapp, Stout & Co., with whom he remained two and a half years, working in the mill in summer and in the pineries in winter. Then with Ever Johnson he bought 160 acres of land in the town of Peru and farmed it a short time, after which he sold out and took up carpenter work in Menomonie, being employed on the court house, which was then in process of construction. After that he followed the same trade in Chippewa Falls for two summers and subsequently started a saloon there which he ran for a year and a half; but, having lost money in that business, he sold out and in 1879 returned to farming, buying 80 acres of wild land in Section 26, town of This was really the beginning of his agricultural career and it was practically Peru. a pioneer effort. Having made a clearing, he put up a frame house of somewhat crude construction, with a straw roof, and started to break the land. In time he considerably improved his house by turning it halfway around, raising it up a story, and rectifying previous deficiencies, thereby making it into a very good and convenient residence. He also bought a barn at Irving Creek, moved it to his farm and by his skill as a carpenter made a fine barn out of it. To increase the size of his farm he bought more land-40 acres on the west in the same section and 50 acres in Section 11, which gave him a farm of 170 acres, which he developed in time very nearly to its present condition, operating it until 1911. He rented it out for several years, afterwards selling it to his son Engebert O. Stever, he, himself, retiring from active work, though he has continued to reside on the farm. He is a man of high standing in the community and formerly served some time as assessor and pathmaster as well as school clerk. Mr. Stever was married in May, 1877, to Kari Lund, who was born in Gudbrandsdalen, Norway, Aug. 30, 1856. Eleven children came in time to enlarge the family circle, two of whom, however, died in The others are: Engebert O., now proprietor of the home farm; Ellen, infancy. who is Mrs. John Anderson of Eau Claire and has two children, Lucille and Jeanette; Martin, a farmer in the town of Peru who married Sarah Mishler and has one child, Norma Ellen; Tena, who resides in Nebraska; Odin, of the town of Rock Creek, who married Cora Anderson; Laura, now Mrs. Louis Larson of Eau Claire and the mother of eight children, Kenneth, Agnes, Margaret, Gertrude, Willard, Elenora, Theresa and Russell; Eleanor, residing in Wausau, Wis.; Goro, residing in the town of Rock Creek, and Irene, who lives with her parents.

John E. Sandvig, who was well known for over 30 years in the town of Peru, where he built up a good farm, but who is now deceased, was born in Gudbrandsdalen, Norway, Jan. 25, 1852, son of Ingebret and Johanna (Flademo) Sandvig. With his parents he came to America in 1870, and to Dunn County, Wisconsin, the family residing for a few years after their arrival on the farm of Torger Olson in the town of Peru. They then took land on Little Elk Creek, in the town of Red Cedar, and engaged in farming there, both parents finally dying on their farm. John E. Sandvig attended school both in the town of Peru and on Little Elk Creek, and lived on the home farm until he was 24 years old. He then went to work in the mills at "old" Meridean remained there for a few years, and afterwards went to Porter's Mills, Eau Claire County, where he was employed on the farm of the local lumber company. In 1887, more than ten years after his marriage, he came with his family to the town of Peru, Dunn County, and rented a farm in Section 19. It was a farm of 160 acres, and there was a house and small barn on it. After operating it under rental for three years, he bought it, and the rest of his life was spent in building up and improving this place, both land and buildings, a task he successfully accomplished. His death, which occurred Sept. 19, 1922, deprived the town of Peru of an industrious and worthy citizen who had gained the respect and esteem of his neighbors during a career of some 35 years in their midst. Mr. Sandvig's marriage, already referred to, took place March 10, 1876, in the town of Red Cedar, and united him with Ragnhild Ledum, who was, like himself, a native of Gudbrandsdalen, Norway. She was born Sept. 5, 1857, daughter of Halvor Ledum and his wife, whose maiden name was Ronnag Nedum. They came to America in 1871, settling first in Minnesota. There Halvor Ledum, the father, died in 1874, and his wife came to the town of Peru, Dunn County. Having married for her second husband, Halvor Mageli, they settled on the farm on which Mrs. Sandvig now lives. Both Mr. and Mrs. Mageli died in 1920, the latter passing away first on Sept. 15, and the former on Nov. 6, about seven weeks later. Mr. and Mrs. Sandvig became the parents of seven children, whose record in brief is as follows: Hanna, born April 4, 1877, residing at home; Engebrit J., born Aug. 4, 1879, now a carpenter living in Meridean, who married Thea Lund and has five children, Vernon, Violet, Vivian, Everett and Vyrl; Randina, born Oct. 21, 1882, now Mrs. A. D. Wimmer, residing on the Sandvig farm, and the mother of one child, Jewel; Carl G., born Sept. 27, 1885, who is a mason and carpenter living on the home farm; Johanna, born July 15, 1889, now Mrs. James Lystrom of Ada, Minn.; Ludvig A., born Oct. 29, 1896, who died Oct. 5, 1918, at Camp Hancock, Ga., while a member of the 16th Company, M. G. Ing Center, and Ragna J., born Oct. 3, 1899, now Mrs. Carlot Prestebak of Oslo, Minn. The family are members of the Meridean Con-gregation of the Lutheran Church. Carl G. Sandvig acquired his education in the school at Meridean. He remained at home until 1907, in which year he went to Montana, where he worked on farms and in a sugar factory at Billings. In 1914 he returned home, and has since followed his trade as above mentioned, also helping his mother to some extent on the farm. He is a stockholder in the Rock Falls and Meridean Telephone Company and in the Meridean State Bank.

Chris Swenson, who owns and operates a farm in the town of Peru that was established 36 years ago by his father, and who is now serving as supervisor on the town board, was born on this farm Sept. 18, 1890, son of Anton and Bertha (Jensen) Swenson. The father, born at Gudbrandsdalen, Norway, July 19, 1857, came to America and to Dunn County, Wisconsin, in 1874, settling at old Meridean, where he ran the ferry for 12 years. The mother was born at Appelo, Sweden, on Aug. 7, 1860, and came to this country and to old Meridean, Dunn County, Wis., in 1882. They were married in the city of Menomonie, on June 3, 1884. In 1888 Anton Swenson bought 147 acres of land in Sections 1 and 12, town of Peru and there began the development of a farm. It was a wild tract and Mr. Swenson began the process of improvement by building a log cabin, but later on, after making considerable progress, he built a frame house and barns on his farm, but in a different location. He also bought 40 acres more land, brought a large part of his farm under cultivation, and carried on general farming successfully until near his death, which took place July 3, 1905. He had willed the farm to his two sons, Chris and John and they now took hold of it, the mother and sister, Sophie, looking after the The children of Mr. and Mrs. Anton Swenson, six in number, are household. Ida, Selma, Chris, Albertina, John and Sophie. Ida, born July 8, 1886, is now Mrs. Ed Halland of Minneapolis. Selma, born June 13, 1887, is Mrs. A. H. Dahl of Tolna, N. D., and the mother of four children, Algernon, Darral, Elvin and Chris, born Feb. 18, 1890, is now proprietor of the home farm. Albertina, Lillian. born March 4, 1891, is the wife of Alfred Hoven of Antelope, Mont. John, born June 11, 1894, married Marcel Hart and lives in Rock Falls, this county. Sophie, born Sept. 28, 1895, is a graduate of the Eau Claire State Normal School and is now engaged in teaching. Chris Swenson acquired his education in the district school and grew up on his parents' farm, which he helped his father to improve and cultivate, remaining with him all the time except for a period of six months during which he was in North Dakota. On the father's death he and his brother John, came into possession of the farm, which they conducted together until 1922, when Chris bought out his brother's interests and became the sole owner of the property. He has since kept up the improvements and will soon build a fine stock barn and silo. He follows a general line of farming, doing some dairying, and also raising beef cattle and hogs. His cattle are grade Durham and his hogs Poland-China. Mr. Swenson has attained considerable prominence in his town and in the spring of 1923 was elected a member of the town board of supervisors. He is a stockholder in the Meridean Cooperative Creamery. A member of the Lutheran Church, he has also served as president of the Young Peoples' Society of the Lutheran congregation. as yet he is unmarried and his mother presides over the household.

Iver Stone, who owns and operates Oak Hill Farm of 120 acres in Section 21. town of Rock Creek, was born in Trondhjem, Norway, Aug. 10, 1869, son of Lars Stene and Anna (Iverson) Stene. The parents were natives of the same place, where the father died in 1909. The mother is still residing there, being now 89 Iver attended public school in his native land and came to America vears old. and to Dunn County, Wisconsin, in 1887. Locating in Menomonie, he worked two years for the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company, being employed in the mill during the summers and in the woods in winters. He then went to Eau Claire, where for eight summers he was employed in the lumber yards of the Daniel Shaw Company, during the winters working in the woods for different companies. He also spent one summer in a lumber yard at Dubuque, Iowa. In 1898 Mr. Stone came to Dunn County and took up his residence on 80 acres of land in Section 21, town of Rock Creek, that he had purchased in 1895. There were no buildings on it, but 30 acres had been cleared, which was of itself a good step in advance. He now built a small frame house into which he and his family moved, for he had then been married several years, and also erected some small sheds to shelter his stock and hay. Thus he began the development of what is now a very good farm, from time to time making other improvements. In 1911 he added 40 acres more to his farm, which increased its size to 120 acres, and in the same year built a concrete silo of $12 \ge 32$ In 1912 he built a horse barn of 18 x 22 feet, with 16-foot posts, and in 1915 feet. a large dairy barn of 32×44 feet, with full stone basement and 12-foot posts above the wall. He has also built a fine residence and has installed a 160-barrel cistern which furnishes water for the house and barns. Mr. Stone has a good herd of grade Guernsey cattle, with a pure bred sire at the head, and is carrying on dairying and diversified crop farming with good success. Aside from these personal interests, he served one term as a member of the town board and for two terms was a member of the district school board. Mr. Stone was married Nov. 10, 1893, to Betsey Johnson of Eau Claire, who was born in Bire, Norway, June 16, 1868, and came to the United States in 1887. He and his wife have been the parents of ten children: Anna, born May 4, 1895, who is now Mrs. Charles Lantz of Virginia, Minn.; Emma, born June 12, 1898, now Mrs. Peter Dahl of Rock Creek; Laura, born Jan. 9, 1900, who is Mrs. John Berg of the town of Rock Creek, and the mother of three children, Bertha Rebecca, Irene Harriet and Janette Lillian; Carl, born May 20, 1901; Benhart, born Feb. 19, 1903; Isaac, born Aug. 21, 1904; Oscar, born March 18, 1906; Minnie, born June 10, 1907, who died June 20 the same year; Hannah, born Nov. 7, 1908, and Edwin, born April 20, 1911.

Eddie B. Wollum, a young and progressive farmer of the town of Rock Creek, was born on the farm he now owns, consisting of 100 acres in Section 20. His parents were Ole and Lena (Thoreson) Wollum. The father, born in Norway, near Trondhjem, in 1859, came to America in the early eighties, and settled in Dunn County, Wisconsin. In the town of Peru in 1893, he was married to Lena Thoreson, who had been born in that town in 1865. Soon after his marriage Ole Wollum bought 100 acres of land in Section 20, town of Rock Creek, the chief improvements being a poor set of buildings. With this for a starting-point he set out to develop a good farm. He had before him a long and arduous task, and not merely that, it meant also a considerable degree of self-denial for some years to come; but he and his wife were equal to the demands upon their industry and endurance. They denied themselves all luxuries and most of the comforts of life, being content to get along for a while with the bare necessities, and in due time they had their reward in finding themselves the owners of a good farm and in comfortable circumstances. Mrs. Lena Wollum was not destined, however, to enjoy for many years the fruits of their joint labors, as she died on the farm on Dec. 28, 1910, at the comparatively early age of 45 years. Her husband survived her less than nine years, dying Sept. 11, 1919, at the age of 60. To this worthy couple were born eight children, all of whom have reflected credit on them for their up-bringing. These are as follows: Gena M., born July 19, 1894, is now Mrs. Selmer Lund of New Auburn, Minnie R., born Nov. 4, 1895, is Mrs. George Cramer of New Auburn and the mother of two children, Alton and Luverne. Eddie B., born Feb. 11, 1897, is the present owner of the home farm. Olga O., born Nov. 20, 1898, is house-keeper for her brother on the farm. Ida G., born March 10, 1900, is Mrs. Elmer Wis. Langert of Mondovi, Buffalo County, Wis. Josie O., born June 22, 1902, is now Mrs. Edwin Sperstad of Rock Creek. Berthen E., born May 12, 1904, married Signa Garlie and they live in the town of Rock Creek. Siverina T., born Sept. 5, 1906, is now Mrs. Geo. Schulner of Caryville. Eddie B. Wollum as a boy attended District School No. 3 in the town of Rock Creek, and grew to manhood on the home farm assisting his father in its development. Thus he acquired the knowledge and skill of a good practical farmer. After the death of his father in 1919 he purchased the home farm as it stood, embracing the 100 acres in Section 20. He has continued to make improvements, adding a good silo to the buildings, and is successfully engaged both in diversified crop farming, his main crops being hay and corn, with some small grain, and in dairying, to which latter branch of his business he gives particular attention. He has a good herd of grade Guernsey cattle. keeps Duroc-Jersey hogs, and other farm stock, including horses and poultry. He is a stockholder in the Meridean Cooperative Creamery, and as a man and citizen has gained a reputation for reliability and intelligent cooperation with his neighbors in things concerning the general good of the community that make him a valued citizen. He is an active worker in the Lutheran Church of Rock Creek, and in the Young Peoples' Society connected with it.

Harold L. Wallace, an enterprising farmer, also a stock and meat products dealer, whose farm is situated in Section 30, was born in this town, Jan. 23, 1889, son of Lee G. and Frances (Davidson) Wallace. The father, born in Joliet, Ill., Oct. 31, 1856, was a son of William and Amanda (Locke) Wallace, who were early settlers in the town of Rock Creek, taking land in Section 30, about 1868 or 1869, and here they spent the rest of their lives as farmers. In the Civil War William Wallace served as a member of Company I, 100th Regiment of Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and when he died on July 7, 1894, he was burried with military honors. Lee G. Wallace was 12 years old when he came with his parents to Dunn County. He grew up on the home farm, living there with his parents until arriving at the age of 18, at which time he became connected with mercantile business, entering the store of George H. Chamberlin at Rock Falls, where he was employed thereafter until his marriage. He then began operating the old home farm, consisting of 160 acres, which he subsequently built up into a fine place. For many years also, in connection with the operation of his farm, he bought, sold and shipped live stock and poultry and conducted a slaughter-house and retail market on it. His shipments were made in car lots, his trade being quite extensive. Until 1912 he remained on his farm conducting his business personally, after which it was operated for him until 1920 by hired help, he and his family having taken up their residence in Eau Claire. In that city he died on Feb. 21, 1923, being survived by his wife, Their children, 11 in number, were as follows: Carl, who is still residing there. born May 5, 1885, who died April 15, 1906; Inez, who married Wallace Norrish and is now a widow residing in Eau Claire; Harold L., on the old home farm; Oscar G., of Eau Claire; Ethel W., who is Mrs. Harry Britton of Great Falls, Mont.; Beth, now Mrs. Roy Rounce of Sidney, Mont.; Dorothy, wife of Roger Branham of Rice Lake, Wis.; Leslie G. and Madge, who live with their mother in Eau Claire, and two who died in infancy. Harold L. Wallace was educated in a rural school in the town of Rock Creek and later assisted his father on the home farm and in the livestock products business. In 1920 he bought the original 40 acres of the farm and engaged in business for himself, also operating the other 120 acres, which are still a part of the estate, the farm comprising 160 acres in all. Like his father he also has carried on the livestock and product business, buying livestock and poultry, which he kills and ships to market, besides conducting the retail market established by his father on the farm. Energetic and enterprising, he is doing a good business, both along the lines mentioned and also in dairying, keeping a herd of grade Holstein He formerly served a term on the town board of supervisors and is now cattle. serving his third term as clerk of School District No. 3. Well advanced in Free Masonry, he is a member of Durand Lodge, No. 149, F. & A. M.; the Indianapolis Consistory, at Indianapolis, Ind., and Alhambra Temple, N. M. S., at Chattanooga, Tenn., also belonging to the camp of Modern Woodmen of America at Eau Claire. On May 16, 1917, Mr. Wallace enlisted for service in the World War. He spent one week at Jefferson Barracks, St. Louis, Mo., and was then transferred to Fort Benjamin Harrison, at Indianapolis, Ind. Thence he was sent to Camp Fort Oglethorpe at Chickamauga Park, Ga., all this time being in the recruit service. He was discharged with the rank of first sergeant at the camp last mentioned on Jan. 11, 1919. On Aug. 21, 1919, he was married to Margaret Conley, who was born in Eau Claire County, Wisconsin, May 16, 1894. He and his wife have three children, John, Harold and Larry.

Nels E. Sperstad, who was for many years a factor in the agricultural activities of the town of Rock Creek, who is now deceased, was born in Shaker, Gudbrandsdalen, Norway, Dec. 13, 1857. He acquired his education in his native land and remained there until 1878, in which year he came to the United States. Locating in Eau Claire, he secured employment in the mills, working in them during the summers and as a log loader in the woods in winter. In 1889 Mr. Sperstad bought the Chester Clark farm of 160 acres comprising the southeast quarter of Section 19, town of Rock Creek. He had been married in the previous year, on May 5, 1888, to Marit Nelson Ulen, who was born in the same locality in Norway as himself, on April 16, 1855. She had come to this country in 1881, locating at Marquette, Mich., where she remained for three years, and going from there to Eau Claire, Wis., where she was living at the time of her marriage. Early in 1890 Mr. and Mrs. Sperstad took up their residence on their farm, which was partly improved and had a frame shack on it. As this residence was far from satisfactory, Mr. Sperstad went over to "old" Meridean, where the Mississippi River Logging Co. had recently got through operating, and bought the company's boarding-house. This he tore down, hauling the lumber to his farm. He then proceeded to make over the old shack into a more comfortable residence. Later he put up hay sheds and a good stock barn. In 1903 his present residence was completed and also a barn. In 1908 a fine barn of 32 x 50 feet was erected and in 1911, a cement-block silo of 14 x 36 feet. In short, the modern development of this fine farm was wholly the work of Mr. Sperstad, assisted by his good wife, who proved an effective helpmate, not only in the routine duties of the household, but in the outdoor work as well. In time also they were aided by their children. Mr. Sperstad continued to improve and cultivate his farm until his death, which occurred Sept. 1, 1921. He had served several terms as a member of the town board and was also for some time a member of the school board of District No. 3. He was a stockholder in the Meridean Cooperative Creamery and the Rock Fall and Meridean Telephone Co., and was a man whose life and character reflected credit upon the community in which he lived. Mr. and Mrs. Sperstad were the parents of six children: Emily Anna, born May 6, 1889; Emma, Nov. 22, 1890; Norman E., March 17, 1893; Oscar J.. May 2 1895; Carl W. May 4 1897; and George N. Feb. 25 1899. Emily Ann is now the wife of George Hanson one of the chief electricians for the Northern States Power Co. at Minneapolis and has one child Avrill Marshall. Emma is the wife of Ray O. Baird of San Francisco, Calif. Mr. Baird being connected with the United States Shipping Board there. Norman E. is the wife of Cleveland Phoebus, who is employed in the maintenance department of the Dodge Automobile Co., they have one child Junior. Oscar J. is now manager of the home farm and is one of the enterprising young farmers of the town of Rock Creek. He follows dairy farming along modern methods and is achieving good results. On Nov. 18 1918 he entered the U.S. service, was sent to Camp Grant Illinois where he trained in the 161st Depot Brigade remaining there till June 21 1918. He was then transferred to Company A. Casualty Regiment and on July 30 the same year went to Camp Joseph E. Johnston, Florida in the auxilliary remount department, remaining there until Feb. 3 1919 when he was discharged. He then spent one year at Durand as an implement salesman. In the following year he did electrical and mechanical work for the Minneapolis Street Car Co. after which he returned home to manage the farm. Carl W., who is now in the employ of the Brack Auto Co. of Menomonie, married Marie I. Brack, and they have one child, Ruth Marie. George N. is now teller in the Union National Bank at Eau Claire. He wan inducted into the U. S. army, Oct. 18, 1918, while at the Pullman State College at Pullman, Wash., was in Camp at W. S. C. Pullman, Wash., and was a private in the infantry. He was discharged Dec. 19, 1918. The Sperstad family are members of the Lutheran Church.

Ferdinand Meixner, who created a good farm in the town of Peru, which he operated for more than 40 years, was born in Austria, May 16, 1859, son of Ralph and Mary Meixner. He attended school in his native land and came to America with his parents in 1872, the family settling in the town of Lima, Pepin County, Wis., where Ralph built up a fine farm and prospered. In 1894 he turned it over to one of his sons but spent his last years on it, as also did his wife. Ferdinand attended English school for a while in Pepin County and made his residence with his parents until 1885, although he worked out a good deal on farms and in logging camps in winter, also in western harvest fields. It was in 1883 that he took the first steps toward the creation of the present homestead, buying 120 acres of wild land in Section 35, town of Peru. It was not only wild but covered with heavy timber so that he had to make a clearing on which to build his house. In 1885 he married and moved on to his land, beginning the development of his farm. This is a process so familiar to nearly all citizens of Dunn County that it need not be described in detail. It involved much hard labor, but the results speak for themselves, with respect to both land and buildings. The farm is larger now than when he started, as he added 80 more acres to it, this being a tract across the line in Pepin County. About 100 acres of the land are broken, the balance remaining in pasture and timber. He remodeled the house into a fine and comfortable farm residence; in 1903 he built a horse barn of 30 x 48 feet, and in 1913 a cattle and hay barn of 34 x 60 feet, with full basement and patent equipment, besides having at different times erected buildings for the housing of grain and machinery. His farm, called Shady Lawn Stock Farm, a name drived from its large shaded lawn, is now a valuable piece of agricultural property, and in its development Mr. Meixner worthily contributed to the agricultural resources of town and county. He was successfully engaged in general farming and dairying, having at the time of his death 22 head of grade cattle, seven horses and 25 hogs. He was a stockholder in the Meridean State Bank, and the Durand Telephone Company. His more than 40 years' residence in the town of Peru-made him well known to everybody in this part of Dunn County and the northern part of Pepin, and his reliability as a citizen led to his many years' service in local office. He was a member of the town board for ten years, served as pathmaster ten years and as school director 12 years. His death, which took place on Jan. 7, 1925, deprived the community of a valuable and representative citizen. Mr. Meixner was married May 26, 1885, to Catherine Ranharter, who was born in Austria, Nov. 25, 1864. With her parents, Michael and Frances Ranharter, she came to this country in 1867, residing for a while in Dane County, Wisconsin, and then in Buffalo County, where the parents after many years developed a good farm, which, in their old age, they sold. Having bought a house in Durand, they spent their last years in that place, where in time they peacefully passed away. Mr. and Mrs. Meixner have had five children—Mary F., Catherine T., Matilda M., Ferdinand A., and Leo Paul—all of whom are now living.

Mary F., born April 2, 1886, is now Mrs. Leo Zeilinger of the town of Weston and has one daughter, Margaret. Catherine T., born April 26, 1889, is Mrs. Ignatz Fedie of the town of Albany, Pepin County. Matilda M., born Oct. 4, 1891, is the wife of Robert Bauer of Eau Claire and the mother of a son, Ralph. Ferdinand A., born Dec. 8, 1893, married Esther Bauer, resides in the town of Rock Creek and has two children, Ralph and Benedict. Like his father, he has built up a fine farm from raw land, thus taking rank among the county's useful and enterprising citizens. Leo Paul, born June 22, 1897, on the death of his father inherited the home farm and is now conducting it along the same lines, his mother having charge of the household. The Meixners are members of the Catholic Church.

John W. Walton, a representative farmer of the town of Rock Creek, was born in Wayne County, Ohio, Oct. 15, 1854, son of Henry W. and Emeline (Edmunds) Walton. The parents were natives of that state and farmers by occupation. In 1876 they moved to Michigan, where they spent the remainder of their lives in Their son John W. was educated in the public schools of Wayne County farming. and remained at home until 20 years old, when he began working for others on his own account. The summer of 1879 he spent in Michigan and then returned to Wayne County, Ohio. In the fall of 1883 he again went to Michigan, remaining Then in 1884 he came to Wisconsin, arriving at Eau Claire, there six months. April 23. For a year and a half thereafter he was in the employ of Dwight Day and for six years subsequently in that of William Morrison, logging in the woods in winter and working on farms in the summer. At the end of that period he went to Little Black in Taylor County and for two years and a half worked about the mill there. Then he returned to Eau Claire and for the next two years was employed on farms in the vicinity. It was in 1896 that Mr. Walton began his career as an independent farmer, coming to Dunn County and buying his present farm of 80 acres in Section 9, town of Rock Creek. The place was partly improved, a small frame house having been built, and some of the land having been developed. Mr. Walton has since carried the improvements to a much higher point, having cleared more of the land, brought it into a good state of cultivation. In 1908 he built a new barn of 20 x 40 feet, in surface dimensions with a 16-foot lean-to, in addition to which he has put up a good set of out-buildings. He follows mixed farming and dairying with good results, and is a man who stands well in the estimation of his fellow citizens. Mr. Walton was married Dec. 23, 1896, to Jennie Blough, who was born in La Grange County, Ind., April 25, 1875, daughter of Joseph and Marv (Isley) Blough. The parents were natives of Indiana who came to Dunn County in 1881, settling on a farm in Section 16, town of Rock Creek. This farm, however, they later sold, buying one of 40 acres adjoining in the next section. After the death of Mrs. Mary Blough on April 23, 1914, Mr. Blough sold that farm also and for two years thereafter resided with Mr. and Mrs. Walton. He is now living with a grandson at Chile, Wis. Mr. and Mrs. Walton have been the parents of four children: Earl D., born Jan. 1?, 1898, who died March 4, the same year; Lilah C., born Jan. 10, 1903; Mary E., born June 15, 1908; and Bessie B., born April 19, 1914. The Walton family are affiliated religiously with the Methodist Episcopal Church.

Peder M. Pederson, proprietor of Clover Leaf Stock Farm in Sections 7, 8 and 18, town of Rock Creek, was born in the province of Quebec, Canada, Sept. 9, 1861, son of Ole and Olea Pederson. The parents were natives of Gudbrandsdalen, Norway, who emigrated to Quebec, Canada, and in the spring of 1861, came to Wisconsin, stopping for a while at Viroqua, Vernon County, whence in the following year (1863) they came to Dunn County, settling on 40 acres of wild land in Section 7, in the town of Rock Creek. Their ambition was to build up a farm home that should be theirs and their childrens' after them, but they had no money and knew that they must begin at the beginning as pioneers and toil for mary years ere they could reach a position of comparative comfort and independence. The times were bad, however, for the Civil War was at its height, wages were low and all business relations disturbed. After they had settled on their land Mr. and Mrs. Pederson found that they had nothing to live on and he could find no work to do at which he could earn money. In that situation there was but one recourse, which was to risk his life as a soldier for the sake of the pav he would receive, for, coming so recently from a foreign country, he could have had no great personal interest in the questions at issue between the North and South. He therefore enlisted and went to the front, where he was soon wounded in battle, and being sent home sick lingered as an invalid until the fall of 1864, when he passed away, the victim of circumstances over which he had no control. His wife was left to face alone the hard problem of life with little in the way of material resources, and with several young children depending upon her, the eldest of whom was only an infant. It was a terrible situation to be placed in, but in some way she and her children lived through the bitter hardships of those early years, and, clinging to the homestead, she in some way managed to clear the wild land, and put up buildings, in time creating a good farm. Moreover, not confining her efforts to the original tract. she bought more land until she owned 240 acres, all in one body, though including parts of three Sections, 7, 8 and 18. Her children helped her after they were old enough. but it is evident that she was the mainspring and guiding spirit of the household and that she had a marvelous fund of energy and determination. Doubtless Mrs. Pederson's pension as a war widow helped, but it was her own stout heart and busy hands that wrought out the salvation of the family. She carried on the farm until 1894, when she sold it to her son, Peder M., who had been of great assistance to her after his years permitted, she continuing to reside thereon until her death, in 1899. In addition to this son, she had three other children; Ole, who is now living on the farm, and Anna and Mary, who are deceased. Peder M. Pederson as a boy attended the rural school near his home, but when he was old enough to be of service to his mother, he had to leave his school books and take up the real business of life. Being the eldest son, his mother learned to depend upon him, and found she could do so without fear. Together they made the farm a paying proposition, not in the way of acquiring any great amount of wealth, but in making of it a home with all the necessities and some of the comforts of life. Since his mother sold the farm to him, he has greatly improved it, having developed more land, remodeled and rebuilt the house, erected a fine barn measuring 32 x 70 feet in ground plan, put up a large brick silo of 14 x 35 feet, and a hennery of 14 x 32 feet, besides some other buildings. To make the residence more homelike and beautiful, a fine lawn has been laid out, adorned with flowers and shrubbery, and the general aspect of Clover Leaf Farm is one to please the eve and arrest the attention of the passing traveler. With a keen perception of present-day opportunities. Mr. Pederson is devoting his energies largely to dairying, having a fine herd of grade Guernsey cattle, with a pure bred sire. He is a stockholder in the Meridean Cooperative Creamery and in the Meridean State Bank. Prominent in the community, he has been called upon to take part in public affairs, for three years served as a supervisor on the town board, and for a like period was a director of School District No. 4. Mr. Pederson was married June 4, 1899, to Thora Brack, who was born in Gudbrandsdalen, Norway, Sept. 29, 1875. The children of this union are four in number: Ida, born Dec. 15, 1900; Ole, Jan. 9, 1902; Alice, June 14, 1910, and Elsie, Feb. 26, 1915, of whom Ole is his father's assistant on the farm. The family are members of the Rock Creek and Meridean Congregation of the Lutheran Church.

Gilbert Jevne, proprietor of a good farm in the town of Peru, a stockholder in several business enterprises, and also a rural mail carrier connected with the Meridean post office, was born on a farm in Section 13, town of Peru, on Dec. 24, 1881, son of Peder Gilbertson and his wife, Kari (Franzdatter) Dalen. As his parents' farm was not far from Meridean, he attended school in that village and as he grew up became his father's assistant, helping greatly in the development of the home place, on which he has always resided except for a period of about six months, which he spent in Hudson. Wis. After his father's death, which occurred Aug. 14, 1909, he rented the farm for a year, and in the following year he and his brother Alfred bought it from their mother. In 1911 they divided the land, Gilbert taking 80 acres on which were no buildings. He accordingly started the development of the place by putting up a house and has since made many other improvements, his present residence being a fine dwelling. In 1913 he erected a fine barn of $32 \ge 52$ feet with full basement and installed with patent appliances for the stock and a water supply system. He has a good silo of $10 \ge 30$ feet in dimensions and a number of substantial out-buildings. He has also increased the size of his farm by the purchase of 80 acres of additional land so that the farm now contains 160 acres. This latter tract is situated in Section 23. Mr. Jevne is successfully engaged in general farming and dairying, assisted by his son, Franz. His cattle are grade Holsteins, and he also keeps some hogs, horses and poultry. He is a stockholder in the Meridean Cooperative Creamery, the Meridean State Bank and the Rock Falls & Meridean Telephone Co. Mr. Jevne has been rural mail carrier on Route No. 1 from Meridean since Dec. 15, 1909, a period of 15 years. During that time he has traveled over 75,000 miles, in all kinds of weather, and using all sorts of conveyances ----sometimes a horse carriage or buggy, and sometimes an automobile or a motor-In the case of deep snow in winter he has sometimes used skis, no other mode cvcle. of travel being practicable. It is his proud boast that he had never lost a day, and his absolute regularity and dependability are counted on by every patron on his Gilbert Jevne was married June 14, 1904, to Bessie Erickson, who was born route. at Porter's Mills, Eau Claire County, Wis., Aug. 16, 1885. Of this marriage nine children have been born: Franz F., July 2, 1905; Freda K. L., March 3, 1909; Kenneth P., May 25, 1911; Orville B., Oct. 11, 1912; Valborg E., March 6, 1915; George C., Dec. 18, 1918; Leonard R., Dec. 18, 1920; Irene L., June 5, 1922, and Byron G., June 24, 1924. A sad tragedy deprived Mr. and Mrs. Jevne of their son Orville. On July 8, 1925, while herding cows on a cross road near his father's farm, he fell asleep on the railroad track and was run over by the passenger train. He was of a studious nature and a great reader and while watching the herd of cows he took with him book or magazine and it is supposed, fell asleep while reading The Jevne family are affiliated religiously with the Lutheran Church.

Ole H. Shager, who owns and conducts the well improved piece of agricultural property known as Boulder Dairy Farm in Section 17, town of Rock Creek, was born in Eau Claire, Wis., son of Hans and Thora (Wigstad) Shager. The parents were natives of Shaker, Gudbrandsdalen, Norway, the father born Nov. 2, 1839, and the mother Aug. 10, 1840. Married in Norway, they came to America in 1879, settling first in Eau Claire, where Hans Shager was employed for about two years in the sawmill of the Eau Claire Lumber Co. In 1881 he came with his family to Dunn County and worked out on farms in the towns of Spring Brook and Peru for two years. He then bought 80 acres of land in Section 17, town of Rock Creek, of which tract a few acres had been broken, there being also a small house and small barn on it. Having taken up his residence on it, he began to develop it into a good farm. He remodeled and enlarged the house, built a barn of $20 \ge 60$ feet, and also put up a fine set of out-buildings. After conducting the place until 1909, he rented it in that year to his son Ole H., but continued to reside on it until his death, which occurred Aug. 11, 1914. His wife had previously passed away, on March 10, 1911. They had two children: Lena, who died at the age of four years, and Ole H. Ole H. Shager acquired his education in District School No. 4, town of Rock Creek and grew to manhood on his parents' farm, in time becoming his father's assistant, which he remained until he rented the farm in 1909. In 1911 he purchased it, and from the time it came under his control he has kept up the work of improvement, with respect to both land and buildings. In 1913 he erected a silo of 12×28 feet. His farm is pleasan'ly situated on an elevation of some 300 feet, close to County Highway H, the elevation affording Mr. Shager the opportunity, of which he has taken advantage, of laying out a good sloping lawn ornamented with shade trees and shrubbery. He has a fine herd of grade Guernsey cattle and is successfully engaged in dairying, being also a stockholder in the Meridean Cooperative Creamery. He was married March 17, 1908, to Oleana Dahl of the town of Peru, Dunn County, daughter of Rasmus and Thora (Snikkerstuen) Dahl, the parents being natives of Gudbrandsdalen, Norway, who settled in the town of Peru in the early 80's, and are still residing there. Mr. and Mrs. Shager are the parents of six children: Rosa L., born April 25, 1909, who was graduated from the Dunn County Normal School, with the class of 1925 and is now teaching the Lock School in the town of Peru; Edna T., born July 17, 1910, who lives at home; Elsie L., born May 6, 1914; Olaf E., born June 1, 1916; Doris T., born Oct. 24, 1918, and Robert H., born March 23, 1921. The family are members of the Rock Creek and Meridean Lutheran Congregation, of which Mr. Shager is a trustee, and they enjoy a high social standing in the community.

Ole Shaker, for many years a resident of Section 20, town of Rock Creek, where he developed a farm from the wilderness, was born in Skjaker, Gudbrandsdalen, Norway, June 17, 1844. He came to America in 1869, at the age of about 25 years, locating in the town of Spring Brook, Dunn County, Wis. It was in this country that he met Tolena Debdahler, to whom he was married at Eau Claire in 1875, and who was born at Ringebu, Norway, in February, 1853, and had come to this country in 1870. A few years after his marriage Mr. Shaker entered upon his career as a farmer, in 1878 buying 100 acres of wild land in Sec. 20, town of Rock Creek, Dunn County. A previous owner had begun the work of improvement, but had not proceeded very far with it. He had, however, built a small frame house, not much better than a shack, into which Mr. Shaker moved with his family, after which There were many acres of heavy timber on the place which he began his operations. had to be cut and disposed of, and then came the hard labor of grubbing and breaking the land. To describe his work in detail would simply be to repeat a story told many times in this volume, and one, moreover, which is known to every old settler in the county. It is sufficient to say that Mr. Shaker possessed those hardy qualities of mind and body that were essential to success in such a task, and that in time he succeeded in creating a farm out of a tract of forest and raw land. He greatly improved his dwelling and erected some other small buildings, adequate to his needs and continued to improve the place until his death, which occurred Feb. 19, 1905. He had then been a widower for some years, his faithful wife and helpmate having passed away on Aug. 31, 1896. They had been the parents of ten children, some of whom died in infancy, but five of whom are now living, the record in brief being as follows: Laura Eliza, born Feb. 25, 1876, who died Dec. 1, 1896; Olena, born July 20, 1877, who died July 29, 1901; Andrena, born April 18, 1879, is now Mrs. J. J. Enge of the town of Rock Creek; Gena, born Feb. 2, 1881, who married Albert E. Whitehead and is now a widow residing in Colorado; Ole, born Feb. 28, 1883, residing in Baraboo, Wis.; Edward, born July 1, 1885, residing in the town of Rock Creek, Dunn County; Gilbert, born Aug. 23, 1887, also of the town of Rock Creek; Albert, born Aug. 15, 1889, who died Aug. 28, 1889; Olga, born Nov. 11, 1890, who died Nov. 20, 1890, and Julius O., born June 7, 1892, who died Oct. 3, 1892.

Edward Shaker, the present proprietor and operator of the old Shaker farm established some 45 years ago or more, was born on this farm, July 1, 1885, son of Ole and Tolena (Debdahlen) Shaker. The parental homestead was then in the early stages of its development and the conditions under which the family lived were very similar to those of pioneer days, involving an immense amount of hard work, accompanied by some privation. For a few years in boyhood Edward attended rural school, assisting his father atter he was old enough. On his father's death in 1905, the mother having died some years before, he purchased the interests of the other heirs to the farm, which then contained 100 acres, and he has since continued to make his home here and to improve and develop it. In 1914 he increased its area by a purchase of 40 acres more land, and his building operations have placed the property well up among the modern farms in this part in Dunn County. He has practically rebuilt the residence, which is now a fine country home. In 1914, the year in which he bought his additional land, he erected a good dairy barn of 32 x 54 feet in ground plan, with full basement, and installed with the Lowden equipment. He has also erected buildings for the housing of his hogs, poultry and machinery, the granary having been built by his father, and has built a cementblock silo of 12 x 24 feet. The residence and barns are lighted by the Worthington home lighting system, which Mr. Shaker has installed and he has also put in a home waterworks system operated by air pressure. Thus he is well equipped to conduct farming and dairying along modern lines, which he is doing, having a fine herd of high grade Guernsey cattle headed by a pure bred sire. He was married March 14, 1906, to Ida Broberg, who was born in the town of Rock Creek, Dunn County, Wis., June 15, 1883, daughters of Lars and Margaret Broberg, her parents being natives of Gudbrandsdalen, Norway, who came to this country in 1881. In 1883 they moved to Pepin County, where they engaged in farming and where Lars Broberg died on April 6, 1920. Mrs. Broberg still resides on the farm, which is operated by her son Sever. The children in the Broberg family were: Eliza Marie, (deceased); Ida, now Mrs. Edward Shaker; Peter O. (first), deceased; Minnie Patrena, wife of A. O. Johnston of Minneapolis; Sena Oleana, who is Mrs. A. O. Lane of Minneapolis; Peter O. (second), now in Alberta, Canada; Sever, on the home farm; Laura M., now Mrs. Ole Haugen, who lives in Canada; John, of South Dakota; and Oscar Elias, of Hibbing, Minn. Mr. and Mrs. Edward Shaker are the parents of two children: Luella Therese, born Jan. 3, 1907, a graduate of the Eau Claire High School, now attending college; and Norman Otis, born Dec. 7, 1914. The religious faith of the Shaker family is that of the Lutheran church.

Hans Erickson, engaged in the garage business in the village of Ridgeland, was bern in Barron County, Wis., Dec. 24, 1885, son of Andrew and Anna Erickson. The parents came to the United States from Norway in 1881, settling in Barron County, Wis., where, however, they resided only for a short time. Then they came to Dunn County and in the town of New Haven bought 120 acres of wild land covered with brush and timber. Felling some trees, Andrew Erickson hewed out some logs and erected a log house and barn, after which he began clearing his land. For some years he could give but a part of his time to his farm, as he had to earn money for the support of his family, which he did by working in summer in the mill of the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company and in the woods in winter. When not employed in the mills in summer he worked on his farm, using oxen for all the pulling and hauling required. Thus he gradually made some progress until the farm had been so improved as to support himself and family, after which he progressed faster, putting up better buildings, including a frame house, barn and granary. In early days he obtained his supplies from Prairie Farm, journeying to and fro over the old After following general farming and dairying until 1921, he sold the farm and retired, he and his wife taking up their residence in Prairie Farm, Barron County, where he died in the following year. His wife, however, is still living, as also are all their children, Erick, Hans, John, Helma, Anna and Mollie. Helma married Peter Tronrud of Vance Creek, Barron County; Anna married George Carey and lives in Oregon; Mollie lives with her mother. Hans Erickson was reared on the home farm in the town of New Haven, as a boy attending rural school. At the age of 19 he went to Menomonie, where he worked three years for FrankMcLean. After that he worked on farms, in harvest fields, and in the woods for a while. Then he worked three years in the store of C. F. Scott at Prairie Farm, at the end of that time coming to Ridgeland to take the position of manager of the feed mill, in which he remained for four years. He then sold out to William Deiten and in 1919 opened a garage in the village, beginning in a frame building. As one of the steps in his progress, in 1921 he built a concrete-block garage of $40 \ge 60$ feet, with an addition of 24 x 60 feet and installed a full line of farm machinery, also doing general repair in a shop fitted out for that purpose. In 1924 he sold out his farm machinery and implement business and now carries a line of auto supplies, does general repair work, and runs a wholesale oil station, keeping trucks on the road to make delivery to customers on farms or elsewhere, besides operating a filling station in connection with his garage. For one year he served as assessor for the village of Ridgeland. Since starting out for himself he has made steady progress and now occupies a solid position among the business men of Ridgeland. Mr. Erickson was married in 1910, at Prairie Farm, to Edna Olson, daughter of Martin and Lena Olson, her parents, now living at Prairie Farm, having been early settlers in the town of Elk Mound, Dunn County. Mr. and Mrs. Erickson have had four children, of whom three are living and residing at home, numely; Levina, Mabel and Virginia.

Matt Knutson, proprietor of the farm in Section 28, town of Wilson, that was established by his father some 44 years ago, was born in Fillmore County, Minnesota, Nov. 4, 1868, son of Jacob and Anna (Ingebretson) Knutson. The parents came from Ringbo, Norway, where Jacob Knutson had worked some five years and also for 11 seasons on log drives. It was in June, 1869, that he came with his family to this country settling in Fillmore County, Minnesota, where he bought a farm. There the family remained for 12 years, or until 1881, when Jacob Knutson disposed of his farm and came to Dunn County, Wisconsin, making the journey with a wagon and team. He took the homestead in Section 28, town of Wilson, now owned by his son Matt, the land being then covered with brush. For a temporary shelter he put up a small shack and then went to work to build a substantial log house, hauling lumber and shingles from the Mooney mill at Hillsdale, Barron County. To reach their place they had pick their way slowly through the brush and timber, as there was no road. The clearing of the place was largely done by the son Matt, though Jacob Knutson did some of it. It was necessary, however, to earn some money and so the father worked at the mason's trade and also did hunting and trapping, as well as fishing at Turtle Lake, supplying Knapp, Stout & Co. Company with fish for their store. The parents spent the rest of their lives on this farm, Jacob Knutson dying in 1897, and Mrs. Anna Knutson in 1911. They were typical pioneers, hardy, industrious and patient, and respected by their neighbors. They had six children, three of whom died on shipboard on the voyage from Norway, and one in Minnesota, the two survivors being Matt and Carrie, the latter being the wife of Otto Moen of the town of Wilson. Matt Knutson was 13 years old when he accompanied his parents to Dunn County. He had attended school in Fillmore County, Minnesota, and did so for a while after coming to the town of Wilson, Dunn County. As a boy he became accustomed to farm work and later worked five winters in the woods in connection with the lumber industry. In time he bought the home farm and has since continued to improve it. He has built a cement-block house, a good frame barn and sheds and has cleared and broken a considerable amount of land. He carries on general farming and dairying, having 15 head of mixed grade cattle, and also raising Poland-China hogs. As a practical farmer and good citizen, the son of pioneer parents, he is widely known and re-spected. Mr. Knutson was married on his parents' farm, on Dec. 22, 1888, to Anna Halverson, daughter of Halvor Hanson and wife, the latter's maiden name having been Anna Christopherson. Her parents, natives of Norway, were early settlers in the town of Wilson, where they took a homestead on which in time they They had seven children; Hans, Anna. Anton, Peter (first), Peter passed away. (second), Tillie and Christ. Tillie, who married Louis Lind of Albertville, Chippewa County, is now a widow. Mr. and Mrs. Matt Knutson are the parents of six children: Anton, Henry, Julius, Alfred, Clara and Mabel, the last mentioned residing on the home farm. Clara is the wife of Peter Matson of Chippewa Falls. When this country was engaged in the World War Henry was inducted into the service on the second draft and assigned to the veterinary department of the army. He trained at Camp Grant, Illinois. and subsequently served one year in France, being discharged in 1919. Albert was also inducted into the service and went to Camp Grant, but was soon discharged on account of physical disability, having undergone an operation.

Dr. Leonard G. W. Hart, Jr., engaged in practice in Menomonie and surrounding territory as a veterinarian, was born in Eau Claire, Wis., Dec. 22, 1895, son of Dr. Leonard G. and Elizabeth (Crowley) Hart. The father, born July 29, 1869, in Columbus, Wis., acquired an elementary education in the grade schools in Eau Claire and subsequently attended school for two years in England. In 1892 he was graduated from the Veterinarian College in Toronto, Canada, and thus qualified to practice, returned to Eau Claire and formed a partnership with Dr. T. W. Wregglesworth, which lasted until May, 1904. He then came to Menomonie and took over the practice of Dr. William Wilson. Here, however, he remained but six months, going at the end of that time to Chippewa Falls, where he was engaged in practice as a veterinarian for the rest of his life—some 19 years—being known throughout the state as one of the ablest men in his profession, and enjoying a very large practice. His death was a tragedy, as on Aug. 22, 1923, while engaged in supplying his car with gas, he was badly burned as a result of an explosion, and died three weeks later, on Sept. 12. Dr. Hart was married at Washburn, Wis., in 1893, to Elizabeth Crowley and four children were born to them: Margaret, now Mrs. Richard W. Wilson of Idaho Falls, Idaho; Bessie, wife of Frederick Hoeing of Milwaukee; Leonard G. W., of Menomonie, and James of Chippewa Falls, who resides with his mother. Leonard G. W. Hart, the direct subject of this sketch, as a youth attended school in Eau Claire and Chippewa Falls, being graduated from the high school in 1914. He then entered a veterinary college in Kansas City, Mo., where he took the prescribed course, being graduated in 1917. He was then appointed assistant state veterinarian for Wisconsin, and held that position until Dec. 20, 1917, when he enlisted in the Veterinary Corps of the U.S. army. Stationed at Fort Oglethorpe, Ga., he remained there until the close of the war, being discharged Dec. 14, 1918. On January 1, following he resumed his former position as assistant state veterinarian, holding it until July 1, that year, when he became associated in practice with his father at Chippewa Falls, and so continued until Sept. 1, 1922, when he came to Menomonie and established himself in practice here. His record, though shorter, resembles his father's in that he is recognized as one of the best men in his profession. He is a member of the American Veterinary Association and of the American State Veterinary Association; also of the Knights of Columbus, the Elks lodge, No. 1326, at Chippewa Falls, and Hosford-Chase

John Johnson, a progressive farmer and dairyman of the town of Wilson, residing in Section 8, was born in Vernon County, Wisconsin, Jan. 29, 1874, son of Amund and Mary Johnson, the parents being natives of Norway. maker by trade, and was thus occupied in his native land. He came to the United States soon after the Civil War, settling at Coon Prairie, Vernon County, Wis., where he continued to follow his trade, making boots and shoes and doing repair In 1885 he came with his family to Dunn County and settled in the town of Wilson, buying 80 acres of land in Section 10. It was a wild tract and the task of converting it into a good farm occupied Amund Johnson for a number of years, though assisted by his sons. He built a frame house 16 x 24, together with a barn and other buildings and continued to farm the place until 1910, when he and his wife took up their residence with their son John in Section 8. Here Amund Johnson died in 1920, and Mrs. Mary Johnson in 1923. They had been the parents of eight children, of whom three-Tillie, Anton and Albert-are now deceased. The survivors are: Carrie, who married Matt Johnson of Minneapolis; John, the direct subject of this sketch; Minnie, wife of Warren Grover, postmaster at Ridgeland; Sophia, wife of Anton Lee; and Nettie, wife of Sener Hanson of Sand Creek. John Johnson was reared in Vernon County, where he remained until reaching the age of 11 years, at which time he came with his parents to the town of Wilson, Dunn County. He helped his father to build up and improve the home farm, residing in it until he was 28 years old. In 1894 he had bought 128 acres in Section 8, town of Wilson, a tract covered with brush, and neither on nor near a road. Since taking up his residence on this place he has improved it into a good farm, having brought 45 acres of the land under the plow, with the balance in pasture; he has also built a good frame house, barn, silo and other buildings. His cattle are of the Holstein breed, his herd including 16 milch cows, and he also raises Duroc-Jersey hogs. He has won a place in the community as a well known and respected citizen who is gradually making his way in the world. Mr. John Johnson was married first to Hilda Lee, daughter of Ole Lee, and by her he had one daughter. Mrs. Hilda Johnson died, and on Nov. 24, 1907, Mr. Johnson was married secondly in the town of Wilson to Agnes Boe, adopted daughter of Iver and Anna Boe, her parents being natives of Norway, who settled many years ago in La Crosse, Wisconsin. There are now five children in Mr. Johnson's family, namely: Helen, Isabelle, Alice, Marie, Nellie Louise and John A. Isabelle and Alice are graduates of the Dunn County Normal School and intend to follow teaching.

Gustav A. Johnson, a well known farmer and respected citizen in the town of New Haven, was born in Halum, Sweden, Nov. 4, 1870, son of John E. and Anna C. (Nelson) Johnson. His parents never came to this country but died in their native land. Gustav was their third child, the others being John, now in Sweden; Charles, of North Dakota; Hilda, who is Mrs. Martin Peterson of Waupaca, Wis.; and Alma and Andrew in Sweden. Gusta A. had good school advantages in his native land. He came to the United States in 1889, landing at New York on May 6, and immediately coming west to Waupaca, Wis., where he entered the employ of a mannamed Olson, who was a merchant and farmer. With him he remained for ten years, working on the farm in summers and in Mr. Olson's warehouse in the winters. It was during that period that he was married, Oct. 24, 1894, to Emily S. Larson of Waupaca, who was born at Big Stanton in the Sacramenta Valley, California, daughter of Olaus and Olivia Wilhelmina Larson. She had come to Wisconsin with her parents in 1880. After his marriage Mr. Johnson rented a 202-acre farm from Mr. Olson, and for the next 12 years he was engaged in operating it. Then for four years he operated another farm. On both these farms he made a specialty of raising potatoes, raising as many as 7,000 bushels annually. On Aug. 6, 1905, Mr. Johnson suffered a bereavement in the loss of his wife, who died in Waupaca County. She left an only child, Cora, who was born Oct. 7, 1900, and who has been her father's housekeeper ever since she became old enough. In the spring of 1911 Mr. Johnson came to Dunn County and purchased the Theron Clough farm of 80 acres in Section 4, town of New Haven. A few acres had been cleared and there were several buildings on the place, including a frame house, a barn, and a hay shed. He has now 36 acres under the plow and has improved the original buildings, besides erecting a combination granary, machine shed, and a potato house of 28×60 feet. The raising of potatoes is still his specialty, though he also does general farming and dairying, having a good operating equipment. The farm lies 12 miles west of Boyce-Mr. Johnson and his daughter are of the Swedish Lutheran faith, but there being no Swedish church in their neighborhood, they worship with the congregation of the Ventra Akra Norwegian Lutheran Congregation. Politically Mr. Johnson is a Republican.

George A. Manley, proprietor of a sawmill in the town of Menomonie, was born in Tunnel City, Monroe County, Wis., August 1, 1865, son of Jackson and Charlotte (Sawyer) Manley. The parents were natives of Pennsylvania who came west in the early 50's, when they settled at Tunnel City, which place, in spite of its name, is but a small village, and was so called on account of a tunnel there, through which a sister of the subject of this sketch was the first white child to pass. Jackson Manley, the father of George A., was a carpenter by trade, and worked as such for a period of 30 years in Tunnel City and the vicinity. Later he moved to northern Wisconsin and finally to Otter Tail County Minnesota, where he died in 1890. wife survived him, passing away in 1895. Their children were six in number. namely: George A., subject of this sketch; Frank, now of Stanley, Wis.; Mrs. J. W. Potter and Mrs. James English of Sparta; Mrs. Johnson of Minneapolis; and Mrs. Buck of Cloquet, Minn. George A. Manley as a boy attended school at Tunnel City and later took up sawmill work, being employed at different times in all the various departments of such mills, so that he gained a thorough knowledge of the business and an expert workman. He had held positions as engineer, head sawyer and head filer in many of the large mills in this state. In the fall of 1920 he built his present sawmill, which is located in Section 9, town of Mencmonie, near Irvine Creek where he does custom sawing each fall and winter, averaging about 200,000 feet per season. He was married March 30, 1922, to Mrs. James Thompson, who in maiden life was Stella Philips, her parents being Hiram and Lucy (Bishop) Philips, p oneers of Dunn County now deceased. In addition to his sawmill work Mr. Manley, with the assistance of his wife, carries on farming and dairying on a small scale.

Michael Score, formerly a lumber worker and pioneer farmer, and now engaged in the pleasant and congenial occupation of raising vegetables and fruit, being otherwise retired, is a resident of North Menomonie and for 44 years has lived in Dunn

County. He was born July 5, 1854, in Norway, that county that has given so many hardy workers to help build up the Northwest, and his parents were Arndt There were six children in the family, Mary, Gertrude, Michael, and Kari Score. John, Evan and Betsy, all of whom but Michael are now deceased. The parents died in their native land. Michael was educated in Norway and did railroad work there until he came to America in 1880. It takes some enterprise for a youth to say good bye to his parents and other relations and friends and go to a far distant foreign land, the language and customs of which he does not understand, and to know that he will arrive there with very little money, if, indeed, he has anything left after paying his passage. But Mr. Score did it. Landing at Philadelphia, he came directly to Menomonie, which place he reached on May 27. Here he joined the little army of workers employed by The Knapp, Stout & Co. Company, and was with that company for seven years, working in the mills during the summer months and driving a team in the woods in winter. In 1887 he bought 64 acres of wild land on the Hudson Road about three miles from Menomonie. There he made his home for six years, during which time he erected a set of buildings and cleared 25 acres of the land. Then, having sold the property, he worked for one summer in the brick yards. Next he bought 80 acres of land on Little Elk Creek in Section 17, of the town of Red Cedar, and began to built up another farm. His life and work on that place covered a period of 22 years, during which he carried on general farming, erecting buildings as they were required. In 1916 he retired, renting the farm to his son Alex, and in 1919 he sold it. When he left the farm he came to North Menomonie, buying a nice residence at 226 Douglass Street, which he has since occupied. He has an 8-acre tract of land just west of his home, where he does a little truck gardening and raises fruit in season, for which he finds a ready This adds a little to his income, which is amply sufficient for himself market. and wife, and also gives him agreeable occupation and exercise. Mr. Score was married in Menomonie, July 13, 1883, to Gena Rongness, who was born in Norway, July 24, 1863, daughter of Alex and Gertie (Ropstad) Rongness, both of whom died in Norway. She came to the United States in 1883, being married on her arrival. The home life of Mr. and Mrs. Score was rounded out and perfected by the birth of 11 children, of whom nine are now living. Their record in brief is as follows: Christina, born April 15, 1884, is the wife of John Moen of Hudson, Wis., and has four children, Helmer, Gerhart, Clarice and Esther; Alex, born June 17, 1889, married Ella Dahl, resides in Menomonie and has three children, Myrine, Adeline and Loraine; Anna, born Nov. 14, 1892, is the wife of Peter Rostadt of Eau Claire and the mother of two children, Milton and Lloyd; Gust, born May 17, 1894, is a farmer in the town of Menomonie; Emil, born Oct. 24, 1896, resides on the farm of his brother Gust, married Mary Dahl and has three children, Alvina, Margaret and Phyllis; Sigwold, born Feb. 13, 1899, married Esther Frank, resides in North Menomonie, and has two children, Leland and Jean; Manda, born Sept. 4, 1901, married John Dahl, resides in North Menomonie, and has two children who are twins, Mollie J. and Morris J.; Melvin, born Feb. 22, 1904, and Esther, born Feb. 15, 1906, who reside with their parents. The family belong to the Norwegian Lutheran congregation at North Menomonie.

James L. Shepard, residing in Section 7, town of Tiffany, was born in Marshall County, South Dakota, Oct. 15, 1886, son of Jeremiah L. and Drusilla (Babcock) Shepard. He had a common school education and lived with his parents practically all of the time until he was 25 years old, accompanying them as a child to North Dakota, and when a young man of 17 or 18 to St. Croix County, Wis., for the most part being engaged in farm work. He helped his father improve the St. Croix County Farm, where the family resided from about 1904 to 1911, and subsequently came with them to the town of Tiffany, Dunn County. On Nov. 22, 1912, he was married to Agnes Schramske, daughter of John and Julia Schramske of the town of Tiffany. Her parents, of German birth, had come to Wisconsin many years ago, and the mother is still living, the father being deceased. For two years after his marriage Mr. Shepard operated a rented farm in the town of Tiffany, not far from that of his wife's parents. In 1914 he bought a slightly improved farm of 80 acres in Section 7, town of Tiffany. The buildings on it were a small frame house and an old log barn. Moving into the house with his family he began the work of development and he has since transformed the place into the well cultivated and attractive farm on which he is now living. He has 40 acres of his land under the plow and has a good set of buildings. In 1920 he built a modern frame barn, on a tull cement basement, and in the same year erected a stave silo of 95 ton capacity. He is successfully carrying on general farming and dairying, having grade Shorthorn cattle and high grade Duroc-Jersey hogs, with full bred sires for both cattle and hogs. Active and enterprising, he is making steady progress and is a man of mark and influence in his community, and has served as treasurer of School District No. 3. He and his wife are the parents of six children, James Edward, John Frank, Julia Patricia, George C., Lawrence and William Leo.

Jeremiah L. Shepard, a retired farmer residing in the town of Tiffany, was born in Massachusetts, Oct. 30, 1850. When a boy he lost his parents, the mother dying a few days after the father. Later he came west to Illinois, in which state he remained for four or five years, and it was there that he was married to Laura Babcock, who was born in Illinois in 1861, daughter of James and Drusilla Babcock. After his marriage Mr. Shepard moved with his wife to South Dakota, where he homesteaded 160 acres of unbroken land near Britton. But drouth and grasshoppers drove him out and in 1890, he went to Hillsboro, North Dakota, where he was employed as a superintendent by A. M. Morton, a large land holder. For the next ten years he rented and operated farm lands there. About 1903 or 1904 Mr. Shepard came to Wisconsin, settling on a cut-over farm in St. Croix County, near Glenwood City. There were several log buildings on the place but not much else in the way of improvements. There he remained until 1911, and during that period of seven or eight years he built up a good dairy farm. Then in 1911 he traded the place for a partly improved farm of 200 acres on Section 5, town of Tiffany, Dunn County. This farm, which he still owns, he operated until the spring of 1920, when he rented it out and retired from active work. To Mr. and Mrs. Shepard were born five children: Edna, now Mrs. Joseph Gillman of St. Paul; Josephine, wife of Conrad Carlson of Gladstone, Minn.; Addie, wife of Monte Hardy of St. Paul, Minn.; Albert, a farmer in the town of Tiffany, Dunn County, and James L., a farmer in Section 7, this town. Mr. Shepard is spending his declining years among his children, enjoying an agreeable leisure after so many vears of hard work.

Eldon D. Whinnery, an active young farmer in the town of Dunn, was born on his present farm on May 1, 1898, son of Charles N. and Elizabeth (Lyness) Whinnery. He is a grandson of George and Mary (Pratt) Whinnery, who were pioneers who were pioneers of this county. He acquired his education in the district school and in the school in Downsville, and subsequently until the year 1917 assisted his father to operate the home farm. Then going to western Canada he secured employment in the service of the Canadian government running an engine in the construction of government roads. In 1921 he returned home to Dunn County and rented his father's farm, consisting of 200 acres in Sections 25 and 26, town of Dunn, and here he has since been engaged in dairy farming, keeping about 40 head of Holstein cattle, of which a part are pure blood and a part grade. He has a pure bred sire and is gradually improving his stock, and is conducting all his farm operations according to modern methods. Mr. Whinnery was married, July 17, 1917, to Faye Randolph, of Hersey, Wis., who was born July 31, 1896. He and his wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church and are young people well thought of in the community, and with a wide circle of friends.

Wilhelm Walter, a former resident of Mencmonie, in the flourishing days of the lumber industry, was born in Pommern, Germany, Sept. 24, 1853, and was reared and educated there. It was in 1883 that he came to the United States and to Menomonie, Dunn County, where he entered the employ of the Knapp. Stout & Co. Company, for whom he worked five years, or until his death on March 20, 1888. Mr. Walter was married in his native land, on Nov. 5, 1875, to Augusta Vendland, who was born Feb. 13, 1853, in Pommern, Germany. Of this union there were six children born: Anna, now Mrs. Savoy of Minneapolis; Charles, a farmer in the town of Weston; Mary, who is Mrs. Fred Bolle of the town of Menomonie; Emil, of Eau Claire; Emma, who is deceased; and Wilhelm, also deceased. Mrs. Augusta Walter remained a widow for some five years after Mr. Walters death, or until April 27, 1893, when she was united in marriage with Frederick Bolle. He died March 26, 1916, and Mrs. Bolle is now living in the city of Menomonie, having a comfortable home at 1015 Broadway.

Charles H. Walter, a well known farmer of the town of Weston, who has had an active career of many years in Dunn County, having been connected with its two principal industries, farming and lumbering, was born in Pommern, Germany, July 27, 1876, son of William and Augusta (Ventlind) Walter. He was six years old when he came to the United States with his parents, and for years thereafter resided in Menomonie, being educated in the Lutheran parochical school. At the age of 13 he began working in the shingle mills of The Knapp, Stout & Co. Company, which he continued to do for four summers. He also was employed as clerk for two years in A. H. Johnson's gun store. In 1893 he went to work for the Coffin Box & Lumber Co. at Irvington and was employed there for seven years. Then in 1900 he began farming on an 80-acre farm in Section 24, which he had purchased in 1898 from John Burns. It was but slightly improved, only a few acres having been cleared, and the remainder covered with large stumps, but its appearance today is very different, due to 24 years of hard work on the part of Mr. Walter. It is also larger than the original tract, as in 1920 he added another 80 acres to it. He has erected a fine set of buildings, including an eight-room brick house; a barn 36 x 60 feet in ground plan, with 14-feet posts and installed with the James equipment; also a large granary and machine shed. Mr. Walter is successfully carrying on general farming and dairying, having a herd of Holstein cattle with a pure bred He is a stockholder in the Downsville Cooperative Creamery and the Downssire. ville Telephone Co. In addition to well management of his farm, Mr. Walter has rendered some valuable public service, his official career extending over a number of years. He was three years town treasurer and six years supervisor, and is now treasurer of School District No. 4. On April 21, 1900, Mr. Walter was married in Menomonie, to Anna Voelker, who was born in the town of Menomonie, this county, Nov. 9, 1877, daughter of Julius and Julia (Sabatake) Voelker. Six children have been born of this union: Alma M., May 4, 1901, who is now Mrs. Allen Gebert of the town of Menomonie; Clarence C., June 19, 1903; Julia A., Oct. 15, 1904; Irma A., May 7, 1907; Martin W. J., Aug. 12, 1909; and Leonard L., Sept. 6, 1919. The family are members of St. Paul's Lutheran Church in Menomonie. Mr. and Mrs. Julius Voelker, the parents of Mrs. Walter, were natives of Germany, in which country they were married. On coming to the United States, they settled first at Ripon, Wis., where they remained for a year, moving from there to Menomonie, where Mr. Voelker was employed for many years by the Knapp. Stout & Co. Company as a blacksmith and mechanic. Later he bought 80 acres of land in the town of Menomonie, which he made into a good farm, and there he and his wife spent their last years, he dying on July 2, 1901, and she on Oct. 13, 1911. They had six children: Ernest, now a farmer in the town of Lucas, Dunn County; Fred, a farmer in the town of New Haven; Hulda, who is Mrs. Charles Hoffalder of the town of Lucas; Pauline, who is Mrs. Charles Ebert of Milwaukee; Alvina, wife of Frank Bussee of Menomonie, and Anna, who is Mrs. Charles H. Walter. Both Walter and Voelker families are well entitled to mention as having taken a worthy and helpful part in the development of the agricultural resources of this county

Edward H. Solberg, a well known and highly esteemed citizen and retired farmer residing in the village of Elk Mound, was born in Norway, April 16, 1846, son of Hans and Karina (Solberg) Solberg. It was in 1866 that the family came to the United States, locating first in Chicago, whence they came to Dunn County, Wisconsin in the following year, taking 160 acres of land in Section 1, on Elk Creek in the town of Elk Mound. There they spent the remainder of their lives, Hans Solberg dying in April, 1917. They were the parents of three children. Edward H., the subject of this sketch; Oliver, who lives in the town of Elk Mound, and Anna, who is deceased. Edward H. Solberg acquired a public school education in his native land and as a young man accompanied his parents to America and to Dunn County, Wisconsin. Until 1871 he assisted his parents on the home farm, in which year his father deeded 80 acres to him. Later he homesteaded 160 acres in the town of Colfax and of his landed possessions he made a fine farm, breaking and developing 110 acres of the land and erecting a good house and out-buildings. After farming there until 1919, he sold that place and moved to the village of Elk Mound, where he bought a home and has since lived retired. Mr. Solberg was married April 9, 1882, to Maria Aslakson, who was born in Norway, May 26, 1853, daughter of Aslak and Olea Severson. Both parents died in Norway, their daughter Maria coming to America in 1881. To Mr. and Mrs. Edward H. Solberg have been born eight children, namely: Hans A., Dec. 7, 1883; Anna O., May 10, 1885; Carl G., April 19, 1887; Emma K., Sept. 9, 1888; Otto R., Nov. 18, 1890; John S., Feb. 27, 1893; Severin E., April 2, 1895; and Ragna E., Oct. 24, 1898. With respect to the individual record of these children, Hans A., who is now a farmer in the town of Elk Mound, married Mabel Tilleson and has six children, Arnold, Blanche, Ruby, Gordon, Victor and Betty. Anna O., now Mrs. Albert Nelson of Rice Lake, Wis., is the mother of one child, Ione. Carl G., was graduated from the Union Business College at Eau Claire and is now a commercial teacher. He married Cornie Sorenson, and they have three children, Basil, James and Helen. Emma K., the wife of Carl Rosenberg of Elk Mound, has three children, Dora, Eva and David. Otto R., a traveling salesman, has a World War military record. He enlisted for service July 23, 1918, being assigned to the 161st Depot Brigade and training first at Camp Grant. Later he was transferred to Company H, 344th Infantry, and on Sept. 9, left for overseas, being landed at Liverpool, England, Sept. 23. He was then transferred to the 109th Machine Gun Battalion and after crossing to France was stationed at Thiaucourt, serving on the battle front from Oct. 14 to Nov. 11, when the armistice was signed. During that time he took part in all the principal fighting on his sector going over the top three times, and being slightly gassed after the signing of the armistice. After that he remained in reserve in France until April 19, 1919, at which time he sailed for home, being landed at New York, April 30, and discharged at Camp Grant, May 15, 1919, as a first class private. After his return home he resumed farming. He married Amy Blue, who died Sept. 5, 1923, leaving one child, Clayton. Since 1922, Otto R. has been engaged in selling separators on the road. John S. is now a merchant in Chetek, Wis., being proprietor of a fine store. He married Cora Munson and they have two children, Robert and Mary Jane. Severine E., now residing in Detroit, Minn., is a salesman. He was also in the army, entering the service in May, 1918. He trained at Camp Grant and became a member of Company C, 344th Infantry, and was sent to Fort Worth, Texas, where he was stationed until the end of the war, when he was discharged at Camp Grant. Ragna E., who is single, is residing on the home farm. The Solberg family are religiously affiliated with the Lutheran Church and are people who are both well known and well thought of in their community.

Jacob W. Bachler, proprietor of a 240-acre farm in Section 25, town of Hay River, was born in the town of Stanton, Dunn County, Wis., Feb. 10, 1877, son of Jacob and Mary (Blakeley) Bachler. The father was a native of Switzerland, born Jan. 6, 1838, while the mother was born in Ohio, July 25, 1846. They were married on Aug. 18, 1874, and came to Dunn County, taking the farm in the town of Stanton on which the subject of this sketch was born, and where Jacob Bachler, Sr., died July 16, 1922. His wife, who survived him, is now living with her son Jacob W. The children in the family were: Fred G., who lives in Minneapolis; Jacob W., above referred to; David, who resides in Dunn County; Laura, wife of Charles Jones of Minneapolis; August R., a resident of Spooner, Wis.; and Sarah E., who is deceased. Jacob W. Bachler, who educational opportunities were somewhat limited, was bout 20 years old when he left his parent's farm and became a lumber worker in the woods and in mills in this county. In 1901 he married for his first wife, Nettie, daughter of Sterling and Gertrude Harshman of the town of Hay River, and who was born near Fall City, Dunn County. His first home after marriage was at Brainerd, Minn., where he resided for two years, at the end of that. returning to Dunn County and renting a farm in the town of Hay River, which is the one he now owns and lives on in Section 25. Of its area of 240 acres, about 100 were under the plow, but the buildings were all log structures. After operating this farm under rental for three years, he bought a partly improved farm of 120 acres on Section 14, town of Hay River, on which was a fair set of frame buildings, moved on to it, and was there until the summer of 1924, when he traded it for the 240 acre farm in Section 25, which he had formerly rented, and this latter place is his present home. It is well stocked with grade Holstein cattle and he also has a good flock of Shropshire sheep. His operating equipment is good and includes a For the past six years Mr. Bachler has been employed as patrolman Ford auto car. on State Highway No. 25. Mr. Bachler's first wife, Nettie, died leaving four children: Leah M., born June 2, 1904; Howard S., July 11, 1906; William, Sept. 30, 1908, and Raymond L., May 11, 1911. On July 28, 1912, Mr. Bachler married Lucy A. Weaver, of the town of Hay River, who was born Dec. 7, 1890. Her father, who died when she was a child, was a native of this county, while her mother, born in Juneau County, Wisconsin, is still living, but an invalid, and resides with her and Mr. Bachler. The children of Mr. Bachler's second marriage are: Olive E., born Feb. 16, 1915; and Norma S., born April 17, 1922.

Herman J. Goetkin, manager of the Ripon Produce Co. of Downing, manufacturers of butter and casein, and also shippers of sweet cream, was born at Fort Atkinson, Iowa, Aug. 9, 1890, son of Louis and Anna (Chekal) Goetkin. parents came to Wisconsin, in 1901, locating at Glenwood City, where they made their home for many years, Louis Goetkin dying there on March 27, 1914. His wife Anna, who survived him, is still living there. Herman J. Goetkin as a youth attended school at Fort Atkinson, and subsequently in Glenwood City, Wis., to which latter place he accompanied his parents at the age of 11 years. After leaving school he was engaged in agricultural occupations until 1910. In that year he entered the creamery at Glenwood City conducted by C. T. Montanye, under whom he learned the trade of butter maker, remaining there until 1914, when he came to Downing to become butter maker in the creamery here, of which also C. T. Montanye was proprietor. As such he continued until the fall of 1917. when the creamery was burned. From that time until April, 1912, he bought, sold and shipped cream independently. In the month above mentioned he entered the United States' service in the marine corps, and was sent for training at Paris Island. There he became an instructor in bayonet work, holding the rank of sergeant, and remaining there until Aug. 12, 1919, where he received his discharge. After returning to Glenwood City he entered the employ of the Gt. Northern Railway at Superior, Wis., and was in the service of that company for two years. returning to Downing, he resumed the buying and shipping of cream and milk, being thus occupied for a year thereafter, after which he entered upon the duties of his present position as manager for the Ripon Produce Company. He is a member and Commander of the Downing Post No. 232, American Legion, also of the local lodges of the Modern Woodmen and Odd Fellows. On Nov. 8, 1919, Mr. Goetkin was united in marriage with Emma Wagner, daughter of F. and Minnie C. (Krug) Wagner. Of this union two children have been born: Harold, Dec. 14, 1920, and Dolores, Jan. 7, 1922. The family are affiliated religiously with the Methodist Episcopal Church.

Torger Olson, whose name is familiar to every old resident of the towns of Rock Creek and Peru as that of one of the first settlers in that region, was born in the parish of Fron, in Gudbrandsdalen, Norway, Dec. 2, 1833. It was in 1855 that he emigrated to the United States, arriving in La Crosse, Wis., July 4, and soon finding employment in the new settlements in the vicinity. He had crossed the Atlantic in a two-masted sailing vessel called the "Wilhelm Tell" which landed him in Quebec after a voyage of six weeks, whence he crossed into the States and proceeded to La Crosse. Late in the summer of 1855 a number of Norwegian immigrants had arrived in the town of Peru under the leadership of Hans Torgerson, having followed the Mississippi and Chippewa rivers with ox teams and wagons from La Crosse.

Torger Olson came early in 1856 and pre-empted his future home in Section 13, town of Peru, Hans Torgerson having located on Section 24 and Anders Fauske on Section 26, Peru. In the same year that Mr. Olson had come to America there had also come on a different vessel, the "Faedrenes Minde," three-masted, a young woman, Kari Hansdatter Underdahl, who had been born in the same parish as himself, June 4, 1837. Her parents were Hans Torgerson Dahl and Anne Pedersdatter, and the whole family came together, landing at Quebec after a nine-week's voyage, and, like Mr. Olson, journeying west to La Crosse, which place they reached some time after him. To Kari Hansdatter Underdahl, Torger Olson was married in the town of Drammen, Eau Claire County, Wis., on Feb. 24, 1860. It proved a happy union, lasting over half a century, for on Feb. 44, 1910, Mr. and Mrs. Olson celebrated their Golden Wedding, a large number of relatives, friends and of acquaintances being gather d together for the joyous occasion in the Olson home. A bountiful feast had been provided and among the events of the evening was a speech by Prof. O. E. Hagen, who expressed the sentiments of the assembled company in their affection and admiration of the aged couple, with appropriate allusion to the historical significance of the occasion as the culminatirg point of 50 years of progress, in which Mr. and Mrs. Olson had themselves been potent factors. Their own progress on the road to prosperity had been gradual but sure. Indeed it could hardly fail to be the latter in view of their earnest, resolute and patient characters. Mr. Olson was not only a successful farmer, keeping well up to date in his methods, but also a good blacksmith. He was for a long time part owner and operator of a threshing machine, and Mrs. Olson for a great many years was the constituted nurse in the settlement. Denomationally they belonged to the Norwegian Evangelical Synod of the Lutheran church and contributed generously to its support. Politically Mr. Olson was a Republican. They were not blessed with children of their own, but adopted and reared two girls, one of whom died a number of years ago, the other being now Mrs. Anton M. Olson of Section 16, town of Rock Creek. Like all the original pioneers of Dunn County this worthy couple have passed away. Mrs. Olson in Febuary, 1911, and Mr. Olson in the year 1918. It remains to say a few words of Mr. Olson's brothers who were also citizens of Dunn County, namely, Ever Torgerson, residing at Meridean, and Amund and Ole Torgerson of Elk Creek. They were all prosperous and up-to-date farmers. Ole Torgerson served four years in the Civil War in the Army of the Potomac. Besides taking part in numerous skirmishes he fought in ten hard battles, including the assault on Petersburg, and was wounded several times in the Wilderness, but in spite of his wounds he pressed on with the rest of the "boys" through that inferno, when good-sized trees were cut down by the hail of bullets and the woods took fire and cremated many of the wounded. He was in the ranks of those grim veterans who dealt the finishing blows to the confederacy in the last terrible encounters around Richmond. In later life he could tell many thrilling, and sometimes amusing stories of his army life, which were well worth hearing. Besides the members already enumerated, the family included a girl who died in childhood, and a brother, Johannes, who died when 24 years old. Their parents' names were Ole Torgerson Rydningeloen and Eli Iversdatter (Grosberg). Mrs. Kari Olson had one sister and one brother: Anne, who married Anders Fauske and went to Portland, Ore.; and Ole Hanson Dahl, deceased.

Anton Lee, a well known farmer in the town of Otter Creek, operating a farm in Section 4, was born in Vernon County, Minnesota, Sept. 25, 1874, son of Ole and Mary (Mork) Lee. The parents were natives of Norway. Ole Lee, the father came to this country at the age of 18 years, stopping first at La Crosse, Wis., where he worked out at odd jobs, as he had done in Norway. There he was married to Mary Mork and they went to Minnesota. In 1875 they journeyed with wagon and team to Dunn County, and on arriving here, took a homestead in Section 34, town of Wilson, the land being wild. Ole Lee built a log house and log barn with a straw roof and there in time built up a farm, after a number of years erecting a new set of buildings of frame construction. By his first wife Mary, who died in 1902, he had ten children, of whom three are living. Anton, Oscar and Anna, those deceased being Isaac, Albert, Sam, Nettie, Olous, Isaac (second) and Hilda. married Henry Knutson of the town of Wilson. Olous and Isaac were twins. Anna Ole Lee married for his second wife Anna Boe, who died in 1924. He is now retired and living with his son Anton, the subject of this sketch. Anton Lee was reared on the home farm in the town of Wilson, which he helped to improve and build up. Until he was 27 years old he remained at home helping his father and, like most young men of this region he earned money in the logging industry, spending nine winters in the woods. In 1901 with his father he bought 160 acres in Section 4, town of Otter Creek, and 80 acres in the town of Wilson. He also homesteaded 80 acres in the town of Otter Creek and crected on his place a house, barn and other necessary buildings. He has since cleared much of his land and now has 75 acres under the plow. He has a good herd of Holstein cattle-at the present time having 23 head-raises Poland-China hogs and Shropshire sheep, and is a stockholder in the Ridgeland creamery. As a general farmer he has made progress, and has attained a position as one of the substantial farmers and reliable citizens of his town. In 1902 Mr. Lee was married in the town of Wilson to Sophie Johnson, daughter of Amund and Mary Johnson, her parents having been early settlers in Dunn County. Mr. and Mrs. Lee have one daughter Myrtle and an adopted son, Gerald.

Edward Hart, proprietor of an excellent farm in Section 30, town of Rock Creek, which he has himself developed through successive stages to its present condition, was born in Cambridgeshire, England, Feb. 18, 1853, son of Charles and Sarah The parents, who were also born in Cambridgeshire, came to America in August, 1853, first settling near Cleveland, Ohio, where Charles Hart was employed for a few years on a farm. Then renting a large dairy farm about 40 miles from Cleveland, he followed dairving there until 1869. In the spring of that year he came to Dunn County, arriving in the town of Rock Creek on March 22, accompanied by his family. Here he bought 120 acres of land in Section 30, some of which had been broken and on which stood a log house and barns. residence on it, he began the work of further improvement, in which he spent nearly 13 years of his life, breaking and developing the land and putting up buildings as they were needed, until he was called away by death on June 7, 1882. He was then in his fifty-ninth year, having been born on March 11, 1824. His wife Sarah, who was almost exactly the same age as himself, having been born on March 13, 1824, continued the operation of the farm after his death and survived him nearly nine years, passing away on March 22, 1891. They were the parents of ten children, namely, Ellen, Harriet, Mary, Edward, William, George, Ellis E., Ashton, Charles and Arthur. Of these, Ellen, Harriet, Mary, William and Ashton are deceased, George lives in the town of Rock Creek, Ellis E. in Eau Claire, Charles in Mondovi, Buffalo County, and Arthur in the village of Rock Falls, Dunn County. Edward Hart as a boy attended public school in Geauga County, Ohio, and was about 16 years old when he came with his parents to Dunn County, Wisconsin. also he attended school for a while, and, growing up on the home farm, helped his father to clear and break the land and in many other things, all of which gave him abundant exercise, together with an insight into pioneer farming methods, besides hardening his muscles and gradually moulding him into good physical shape for In 1880, while still living with his parents, he bought 160 acres of wild land from Capt. William Wilson, situated in Section 30, town of Rock Creek, which he began to develop. In 1885 he built a small frame house and one or two small barns on the northeast corner of the land, and there began his own domestic life, being married on Nov. 15, that year, to Clara Robbins, who was born in the town of Albany, Pepin County. Wis., Sept. 10, 1866, daughter of John and Ada (Ayers) Robbins. In 1893 Mr. Hart tore down his buildings and moved them more to the west, and, as part of a general improvement plan erected a fine residence, a large dairy barn of $34 \ge 70$ feet, and other out-buildings, among which should be specially mentioned a silo of 14 by 30 feet. He developed 135 acres of his land and was engaged in mixed crop and dairy farming thereon until 1916, when he rented the farm to his son Clayton C. and retired. At the same time he built a nice little dwelling and other buildings on the spot where his first set had stood. He is a stockholder in the Rock Falls creamery. During his long active career Mr. Hart showed a degree of enterprise which marked him out as a man well fitted to aid in the administration of local government affairs, and so, for many years he was usually holding one office or another, including those of town supervisor, town assessor, and treasurer of School District No. 3, which last mentioned he held for 20 years. Mr. and Mrs. Hart have been the parents of ten children, namely: Hattie E., born Nov. 9, 1888, now Mrs. David Aldworth of Albertville, Eau Claire County, Mr. Aldworth being a farmer there; Guy E., born Dec. 13, 1889, engaged in the logging business at St. Joe, Idaho, who married Arabella Case, and has four children, Blanche, Luverne, Dale and Merle; Nettie M., born Jan. 27, 1891, now of St. Paul Minn.; May M., born March 24, 1892, who is the wife of Jerry Cleveland of Rusk and the mother of two children, Loraine and Jerome; Clayton C., born Dec. 5, 1895, now operating the home farm, who married Rebecca Adams, and has two children, Vera and Robert M.; Forest R., born Oct. 27, 1897, who died in infancy; Leonard J., born Feb. 13, 1899, now of St. Paul, who married Ruth Peterson and has two children, Shirley and John L.; Masel E., born Nov. 17, 1900, now Mrs. John Swenson of River Falls; Edna E., born May 13, 1904, who is Mrs. Levi Sankey of the town of Lima, Pepin County; and Elma A., born Sept. 17, 1905, who is still on the home farm. Mrs. Hart's father, John Robbins, died in 1885, but her mother is Their children were six in number: Clara, now Mrs. Hart; Nathan, still living. who lives in Iowa, and Agnes, Dalbert, Delbert and Nettie, who are all deceased.

Jacob Wheeler, an early settler in the town of Peru, and later in that of Rock Creek, was born in Indiana, July 29, 1846, and was educated and grew to manhood in his native state. In 1867 he married Rebecca Sawyer, who was born in Ohio, Jan. 29, 1851. It was in 1874 that they came to Dunn County, Wisconsin, and settled on a homestead in the town of Peru, which was just a tract of wild land. Mr. Wheeler put up some buildings and spent 14 subsequent years in developing the place, transforming it in that time into a fairly good farm. Then, in 1888, he sold it and, having purchased 160 acres of land in Sections 25 and 26, town of Rock Creek he moved on to it with his family and began once more the pioneer work of creating a farm. Later he added to this latter place until he had 240 acres of land in it, together with a fine set of buildings. After a successful agricultural career, he retired in 1910, selling the farm to his sons. Some five or six years later he died, on April 19, 1916, having survived his wife, who died May 4, 1906. They were worthy, industrious people, of good pioneer fibre, thrifty and prudent, and well calculated to get along in the world, which they did. They had five children, all now living, namely: Zelma, now Mrs. R. W. Colby of Mondovi, Wis.; Wilson W., a prominent farmer in the town of Rock Creek; John W., of St. Paul, Minn.; Chester L., of Rock Creek, and Harry E., also of Rock Creek.

Wilson W. Wheeler, a typical representative of the modern farmer of the Northwest, successfully engaged in agricultural pursuits in the town of Rock Creek, was born in the town of Peru, Dunn County, Wis., May 9, 1881, son of Jacob and Rebecca (Sawyer) Wheeler. He remained at home assisting his parents until he was 24 years old, his education being acquired in rural schools, and for two years subsequently rented the home farm and operated it on his own account. He then bought a house and seven acres of land in the village of Rock Falls, which a year later—the year of his marriage—he traded for his present farm of 160 acres in Section 35, town of Rock Creek. It was partly improved but had a poor set of buildings on it, except the house, which was a very good one. In 1915 Mr. Wheeler built a full basement barn of 34 x 56 feet, installed with Lowden stanchions. In 1923 he erected a concrete silo of 12 x 37 feet, and he has also put up other good out-buildings, making a complete set of modern type. In dairying and mixed crop farming he has made a good record, keeping grade Guernsey cattle, and also raising Poland-China hogs. He also served two years efficiently as a member of the town board. Mr. Wheeler was married April 18, 1906, to Pearl Brownell, who was born in Eau Claire County, Dec. 7, 1886, daughter of William and Anna (Robinson) Brownell, who were well known farmers in that county.

dovi, Buffalo County, Mr. Brownell having died Feb. 12, 1923. Mr. and Mrs. Wilson W. Wheeler are the parents of four children, who were born as follows: Everett Sawyer, March 23, 1907; Violet Marie, Jan. 20, 1916; Inez Evelyn, June 4, 1917; and Algie Rebecca, March 27, 1923. Mr. Wheeler has a membership in the Beavers' Reserve Fund of Rock Falls.

Chester L. Wheeler, progressive farmer, clerk of the town of Rock Creek, and who has an army record in the World War, was born on his parents' farm in Sections 25 and 26, town of Rock Creek, Feb. 16, 1891, son of Jacob and Rebecca (Sawyer) He acquired his elementary education in District School No. 6, in this Wheeler. town, and subsequently attended the Mondovi High School and the Dunn County Agricultural College, in which last mentioned he took the short course. Then returning to the home farm, he took up agriculture along modern lines. In 1910, with his brothers John and Harry, he purchased the farm, which contained 240 acres, and for some time they conducted it together. Then Chester and Harry bought out John and have since conducted the place under the firm name of Wheeler Brothers. Early in 1916, to better equip himself for the business world, Chester L. entered the Hunt Business College at Eau Claire, where he took a seven months' commercial course, after which he worked some time for the Minnesota-Wisconsin Light & Power Co. at Chippewa Falls. It was on Dec. 12, 1917, that he entered upon his army service, enlisting for clerical work in the Quartermaster's Department, and being sent to Jefferson Barracks, St. Louis. Within a short time he was sent to Camp Meig, Wash., and was there transferred to the "M. T. C." He left for overseas Jan. 6, 1918, and after being landed at Liverpool, was sent to Southampton, and thence crossed to Havre, France. From there he went to Nevers, where he was in camp for seven months and did guard duty. After that until May 24, 1919, he was attached to the office department at Verninel, doing clerical work and acting as information clerk. The war having been over several months he was now sent home, starting for Brest on the date last mentioned, sailing on June 10 and being landed in the United States, June 19. He was discharged at Camp Grant, Illinois, on June 27, 1919. After his return he resumed farming, in which occupation he has since continued, he and his brother constantly improving the farm. In 1914 they remodeled the barn and in 1915 built a concrete silo of 10 x 40 feet. They are following diversified farming and dairying, keeping a good herd of grade Guernsey cattle. Chester L. Wheeler is secretary and treasurer of local branch No. 604 of the America Equity Association. In the spring of 1923 he was elected clerk of the town of Rock Falls and was re-elected to that office in 1924. He was married June 30, 1920, to Marian E. Ayers, who was born in the town of Albany, Pepin County, April 14, 1900, and he and his wife now have two children: Dawn Gladys, born Sept. 16, 1921, and Dale Ayers, born Sept. 17, 1923. The family are affiliated religiously with the Baptist Church.

John W. Wheeler, was born in the town of Peru, Dunn County, Wis., Oct. 23, 1883. Residing at home until he had finished common school in School District No. 6, Rock Creek, he then pursued further studies in the Dunn County Normal School at Menomonie, and, having received a diploma, subsequently taught school for two years. He then entered high school, finishing the course in three years and receiving his diploma. After that he conducted the home farm for a while. Then selling his share in the farm, he went to St. Paul, Minn., where he entered the employ of the Pittsburg Glass Co., with whom he has been ever since. On June 28, 1916, he was married to Florence Lawsen of St. Paul, and they have one child, Richard Lawsen.

Harry E. Wheeler was born March 26, 1893. He has always remained at home except that in 1916 he went to South Dakota, for a season, returning home in about a year. He was married on Nov. 14, 1923, to Edna Cripe of the town of Drammen, Eau Claire County, Wis. They have two children, Kenneth George and Allen Jacob.

William Frederick Schröder, now deceased, who added to the agricultural wealth of Dunn County by the development of a good farm from wild land, was born in Germany, May 15, 1841. He was reared and educated in his native land, where he was married June 19, 1866, to Caroline Schütz, who was born Oct. 31, 1842. In 1881, with four children, they came to the United States, settling in Dodge County, Wisconsin, where they remained for three years. Then in 1884 they came on to Dunn County, and for one year operated a rented farm in the Little Missouri Valley, town of Eau Galle. In 1885 Mr. Schröder bought 160 acres of wild land heavily timbered, in what is known as Section 5, town of Eau Galle, made a clearing, built a house and barns, and began the task of developing a farm. He and his wife labored early and late, aided by their children as soon as the latter were old enough, and in time the work was accomplished, the result being what is now known as the Valley Branch Stock Farm, which Mr. Schröder continued to operate until his death on Sept. 20, 1905. His wife Caroline, who survived him, is still living on the farm, which is now owned and operated by their son, Paul. Notwithstanding the hard work she performed, and the many hardships she endured, in the early days she has retained her physical and mental faculties to a remarkable degree. Mr. and Mrs. Schröder were the parents of six children, William, Louisa, Anna, Paul R. A., Frank and Carl, of whom the following is a further record: William, born Nov. 23, 1867, married Amelia Feistad, and died June 30, 1897, leaving one child, Louisa, born April 7, 1871, married Michael Behrends, by whom she had one Lilv. child, George. Both the father and son are now deceased and Mrs. Behrends, a widow, is living in California. Anna, born May 14, 1873, became the wife of Gustave Krueger. She died March 25, 1919, leaving three children, Otto, Emma and Gustave. Carl, twin brother of Anna, died in infancy. Paul R. A., born Dec. 7, 1880, as already stated, is on the old home farm. Frank, born March 10, 1884, and now a prominent farmer in the town of Weston, married Phoebe Hoyt and has two children, Ruth and Sadie. The family faith is that of the Lutheran church.

Paul R. A. Schröder, proprietor of Branch Valley Stock Farm, situated in the beautiful Branch Valley in Section 5, town of Eau Galle, was born in Germany, Dec. 7, 1880, son of William Frederick and Caroline (Schütz) Schroder. He was a babe in arms when brought to America by his parents, with whom he lived for several years in Dodge County, Wisconsin, coming with them in 1884 to Dunn County, and to the farm which he now owns and is operating. It was here that he was reared after his first three years of life, and in boyhood he attended the Morton Hill District School. He was obliged at an early age to make himself useful on the farm, of which he became the sole owner in 1909, when he bought out the interests of the other heirs. It is well watered and is an ideal stock and dairy farm. Mr. Schröder has considerably improved it, having replaced the old log dwelling with a fine, modern, eight-room brick residence. In 1915 the log barn was discarded and a fine basement barn of 36 x 74 feet erected, being installed with the Lowden patent equipment. In 1924 a large cement-block garage was built and other out-buildings have been put up when needed. Thus Mr. Schröder has taken rank among the progressive and successful farmers in the southwest part of Dunn County and is respected also as a man and citizen. He has served on the board of the Morton Hill District School and is a member of the Lutheran Church. He married Delia Samuel, and he and his wife have been the parents of one child, Margaret Lillian, who was born April 13, 1923, and died June 16, the same year.

Alfred M. Jevne, a substantial and progressive farmer of Section 13, town of Peru, proprietor of Riverside Stock Farm, which he has himself built up to its present fine condition, was born on this same farm on Aug. 24, 1885, son of Peter and Kari (Franzdatter) Jevne. The parents were natives of Gudbrandsdalen, Norway, the father born in 1837, and the mother Dec. 24, 1844. They came to the United States when young people and before their marriage, Kari Franzdatter, who was bound for Eau Claire, coming by train to Read's Landing on the Mississippi River. Missing the Chippewa River boat at Read's Landing, she slept all night on the bank of the Mississippi, taking the boat next day for Eau Claire, where she was married to Peter Jevne, on Sept. 14, 1918. Two years later they came to Dunn County, where they bought 306 acres of land situated in Sections 12, 13 and 14, town of Peru. The previous owner had made an attempt to start a farm, having cleared and broken a few acres, put up a straw barn and a small frame shack for a dwelling, and from this Mr. Jevne started to build up what is now Riverside Stock It has been a work of many years, but he made gradual progress, clearing Farm. and breaking more of his land and putting up new buildings as he found opportunity and money, among them a good substantial residence and barn. His industry was rewarded by prosperity and he and his wife, who proved a loving companion and helpmate, were liked and respected in the community. Peter Jevne died on Aug. 14, 1909, and Mrs. Kari Jevne, surviving him many years, passed away on July 8, 1924. Both were sincerely mounred and their loss deeply regretted. been the parents of ten children, Julia, Mary, Anna, Gilbert, Franz, Sylvester, Gilbert (second), Franz (second), Alfred and Kadelia, whose further record in brief is as follows: Julia is now the wife of Rev. N. L. Blomholm of Hudson, Wis., and the mother of three children, Leonard, Freda and Ulrich. Mary is the wife of Rev. L. N. Oien of Manistique, Mich. Anna, and the first Gilbert and first Franz all died of diphtheria when young. Sylvester, who is a tourists' guide at Olds, Canada, married Grace Moyer and has seven children. Gilbert (second), resides at Meridean, being a farmer and a rural mail carrier on Route No. 1. He married Bessie Erickson and they have nine children, Franz, Frede, Kenneth, Orville, Valborg, George, Leonard, Irene and Byron. Franz (second), resides at International Falls, Minn., being county attorney of Koochiching County. He married Beatrice Perkins and has three children, Beatrice, Perkins and Robert. Kadelia is the wife of Russell Hanchette of Iron Mountain, Mich., a banker, and has two children, Russell and Marie. Alfred M. Jevne as a boy attended school in Meridean and subsequently helped his father on the farm, remaining on it until the year of the father's death, 1909. He then went to Big Falls, in Koochiching County, Minn., and took a homestead of 160 acres, which he proved up and which he still owns. Then returning to the town of Peru, Dunn County, Wis., he rented the home farm for a year at the end of that time buying 108 acres of it, with the buildings, and since then he has followed general farming here and built up the present Riverside Stock Farm. It is well fenced both with woven wire and barbed wire, and Mr. Jevne has also greatly improved the buildings. He has added a 14-foot driveway to the barn, making it $32 \ge 81$ feet; has built a cement-block silo of 11 x 34 feet; a granary, chicken house, woodshed, has sunk a driven well and put up a windmill. He has remodeled the house, adding three porches and has put up lightning-rods for the protection of all his larger buildings. His house is well set off by a large lawn planted here and there with trees and shrubbery. He has a fine herd of Grade Holsteins with a pure bred sire and also raises Duroc-Jersey He is a stockholder in the Meridean creamery and in the Meridean State Mr. Jevne was married Sept. 14, 1911, to Ellen Robertson, who was born Bank. at Meridean, Wis., Dec. 27, 1884, daughter of Robert and Anna (Erickson) Robertson, and he and his wife are the parents of three children: Paul Robertson, born July 4, 1912; Anna Karine, born May 8, 1914; and Alfred Conrad, born Dec. 20, 1915. The family are members of the Lutheran Church. Robert and Anna (Erickson) Robertson, the parents of Mrs. Jevne, were born in Gudbrandsdalen, Norway, and came to this country when young people. Anna first married Ole Shager, by whom she had one child, Ida. This daughter became the wife of Erick Skamser and had two children, Alma and Ida, but is now deceased. After the death of Ole Shager his widow married Robert Robertson and they began home making on an 80-acre tract of land that she had come into possession of through her first marriage, situated in Sections 13 and 14, town of Peru. Later Mr. Robertson bought 160 acres more in the same sections, and in time developed a fine farm, which he continuec to operate until his death on Aug. 17, 1912. His wife Anna died May Their children were Severina, Robert, Anna, Ellen, Ole, Laura, Sigvart, and Agnes. Of these, Agnes, Robert and Ole are deceased. Severina is now Mrs. Nels M. Olson of Plentywood, Mont., her husband being a farmer, and has three children, Ruth, Inez and Eunice. Anna is the wife of Martha J. Olson, a farmer of Gordon, Wis., and has two children, Anna and Robert. Ellen is Mrs. Alfred M. Jevne, as already mentioned. Laura is Mrs. Walter Benson of Plentywood, Mont., her husband being a farmer, and has two children, Robert and Charlotte. Sigvart is the present owner of the other part of the old Jevne farm, the part not purchased by Alfred M.; he married Mildred Hanson. Richard, now in Dallas, Texas, married Bonne Lasalle, and has one child, June.
