TABLE OF CONTENTS

INTRODUCTORY.

The publishers have pleasure in presenting to subscribers and patrons their initial number of the Appleton City Directory. In its preparation great care and diligence were constantly exercised, to secure value and accuracy in the object and purposes for which it was intended. Knowing that perfection is impossible, we ask your kind indulgence for any omissions and imperfections. The work contains a total of 4,711 names, this multiplied by three, (a ratio said to be used by most directory publishers for the purpose of obtaining the total population,) makes the present population of Appleton over 14,000.

We are sincerely grateful to the residents of the city who so cheerfully gave us the necessary information required to complete our work. And we also tender our thanks to those who have patronized our enterprise. We are very truly yours,

MORROW & GILLETT.

STREET DIRECTORY.

HOUSE NUMBERING.

A system of numbering was adopted by the Common Council, October 5th, 1887, at the request of the Post Office officials, for the purpose of free mail delivery. In this system all numbers are located by the use of rectangular co-ordinates, on a basis of 10 feet lineal measurement for each integer number. There being two sides to every street, only the odd numbers are used on the left and even numbers on the right, thus making the space for each number twenty (20) feet, (normal) along the street front. The general regularity with which so many of the streets and avenues have been laid, permits the use of this system admirably. Also distances in feet along any of the streets running due north, or due west, may be easily calculated by observing the difference between any two numbers and multiplying by (10) ten. Figures have been placed around the outside limits of the enclosed city map at intervals of 1000 feet, to indicate the numbering by hundreds. These will be found useful to locate approximately on the map any house number.

[As a general rule, the Streets and Avenues of Appleton have been laid out with regard to the principal cardinal points, and with rectangular uniformity. Some are long, some are short, while a few run diagonally or may be broken or curved. These latter, however, are generally along the River or near Ravines. Names have been given to nearly all the Streets and Avenues, but without regulation or form, except in the Grand Chute Plat, some of the Streets running east and west are named in order: Second, Third, Fourth, etc, as high as Eighth. The following is the general alphabetical list:]
